goat (gōt), n. [< A.S. gāt, goat], 1, any of several hollow-horned, cud-chewing mammals (especially of the genus Capra) related to, and slightly larger than, the sheep, bred as domestic animals, yielding milk, flesh, and hair; 2, an animal type of lechery or lewdness: Colloq., a butt of ridicule; a person who gets the worst of a bargain, who is forced to take the blame, or who in any way pays a penalty or a price that others should have paid; a scapegoat; an unlucky person: the Goat, Astron., the southern constellation Capricornus, the tenth sign of the zodiac, into which the sun enters at the time of the winter solstice, about December 21 (see constellation).—adj. goat'ish.

goat-ee (gō"tē'), n. a pointed beard, like that of a goat, on a man's chin or lower lip.

goat-herd (gōt'hûrd"), n. [goat+herd], one who tends goats; a herder of goats.

goat-suck-er (gōt'sŭk"ẽr), n. [goat+suck], any one of various medium-sized, long-winged, insect-eating birds, active at night, as the whip-poorwill and nighthawk: so named because formerly supposed, mistakenly, to suck the milk of goats.

[1]gob (gŏb), n. [< O.F. gobe, mouthful], Colloq., a clot or lump of slimy substance: Mining, the refuse at the mouth of a coal mine.

[2]gob (gŏb), n. [source uncertain], Colloq., a sailor: term used in the United States navy.

go-bang (gō-băng'), n. [< Jap. goban, chessboard], a Japanese game played on a checkerboard, the winner being he who first places counters on five vacant squares in a row.

gob-bet (gŏb'ĕt), n. [< O.F. gobet, dim. of gobe, mouthful], Obs. or Colloq., a lump or chunk, especially of raw flesh; a mouthful.

[1]gob-ble (gŏb'l), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. gobbled (-ld), p.pr. -bling], [source uncertain: perh. < [1]gob], to swallow hastily or greedily: Slang, to seize greedily:—v.i. to eat greedily:—n. a greedy manner of eating: Golf, a quick, straight putting stroke into the hole.

[2]gob-ble (gŏb'l), n. [imit.], the cry of a turkey cock:—v.i. [p.t. and p.p. -bled (-ld), p.pr. -bling], to utter this cry, or a sound like it.

gob-bler (gŏb'lẽr), n. a male turkey; a turkey cock.

Gob-e-lin (gŏb'ē-lĭn; gō"bē-lăN'), adj. [< founders' name], designating, or pertaining to, tapestry made in an institution in Paris, the Gobelin works, founded as a dye house by the Gobelin family, but now a state factory for tapestry, upholstery, etc.

go-be-tween (gō'=bē-twēn"), n. an intermediary; agent: generally uncomplimentary.

gob-let (gŏb'lĕt), n. [< O.F. gobelet < gobel, cup], a drinking vessel of glass or other material with a base and a stem and without a handle.

gob-lin (gŏb'lĭn), n. [< Fr. gobelin, perh. < Gk. kobalos, rogue], an evil, mischievous, misshapen sprite, fabled to live in groves and grottoes.

go-by (gō'bī), n. [pl. -bies (-bīz)], [< Gk. kōbios, gudgeon], Zoöl., any of a large family (Gobiidæ) of fishes, chiefly marine and usually very small.

go—by (gō'=bī"), n. a thrusting away: intentional neglect; as, to give him the go-by.

go-cart (gō'kärt"), n. [go+cart], 1, a contrivance on casters, used for teaching children to walk; 2, a child's carriage; 3, a light village cart.

god (gŏd), n. [A.S < O.Teut. source < Aryan root], 1, a being conceived of as possessing divine powers or attributes; 2, an idol; 3, a person or thing admired or honored to excess; 4, an intelligence controlling the forces of good and evil.

God (gŏd), n. the one Supreme and Absolute Being, the ultimate source of the universe: Theol., the creator, ruler, and preserver of the universe, all-powerful, all-knowing, and all-good.

Syn. Deity, Creator, Lord, Almighty, Jehovah, Providence, Heavenly Father.

god-child (gŏd'chīld"), n. [god+child], one for whom a person becomes sponsor at baptism, and who, in consequence, is regarded as holding a religious relationship to the sponsor.

god-daugh-ter (gŏd'dô"tẽr), n. [god+daughter], a female godchild.

god-dess (gŏd'ĕs), n. [fem. of god], a female deity; hence, a woman of superior charm.

god-fa-ther (gŏd'fä"thẽr), n. [god+father], a man who acts as sponsor for a child at baptism, and agrees to insure its Christian training:—v.t. to act as godfather to.

god-head (gŏd'hĕd), n. [god+-head], the state of being divine: Godhead, the Supreme Deity, or his essence, nature, or attributes.

god-hood (gŏd'hŏŏd), n. [god+-hood], the state or quality of divine being; godship.

god-less (gŏd'lĕs), adj. [god+-less], without religion; impious.—n. god'less-ness.

god-like (gŏd'līk"), adj. [god+[1]like], 1, like, or suitable for, a god or God; divine; 2, the noblest possible.—n. god'like"ness.

god-ly (gŏd'lĭ), adj. devout; pious; obedient to the commands of God.—n. god'li-ness.

Syn. righteous, holy, religious, pious.

god-moth-er (gŏd'mŭth"ẽr), n. [god+mother], a woman who acts as sponsor for a child at baptism.

[1]go-down (gō-doun′), n. [<Malay godong, warehouse], a warehouse in India, China, Japan, the Philippines, etc.

[2]go-down (gō′doun″), n. [go+down], in the western United States, a smooth approach to a stream cut through a steep bank, to enable cattle to reach the water to drink.

god-par-ent (gŏd′pâr″ĕnt), n. [god+parent], one acting as sponsor at baptism.

God's a-cre a churchyard; a consecrated burying ground.

god-send (gŏd′sĕnd″), n. [god+send], unexpected assistance or help, especially if badly needed; something so opportune as to seem sent by God; an unexpected piece of good fortune.

god-ship (gŏd′ship), n. [god+-ship], deity; the character or rank of a god.

god-son (gŏd′sŭn″), n. [god+son], a male godchild.

God-speed (gŏd′spēd″), n. [<God speed (you)], success: a wish for a prosperous journey.

god-wit (gŏd′wit), n. [source unknown], any of a genus (Limosa) of shore birds of the snipe family.

GODWIT

gof-fer (gŏf′ẽr), v.t. [<Fr. gaufre, honeycomb], to form pleats or flutes in; crimp; as, to goffer a flounce: —n. 1, an iron used for goffering; 2, plaiting used for frills. Also, gauf′fer (gŏf′ẽr).

gof-fer-ing (gŏf′ẽr-ĭng), n. 1, fluting for frills, etc.; 2, indented ornamentation on the edge of a book. Also, gauf′fer-ing (gŏf′-).

gog-gle (gŏg′l), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. goggled(-ld), p.pr. goggling], [source uncertain], to turn or roll (the eyes) sideways; stare:—v.i. 1, to roll the eyes; 2, to squint; roll: said of the eyes:—adj. staring; prominent:—n. a strained or affected rolling of the eyes: pl. a particular kind of spectacles for protecting the eyes from dust, excessive light, etc.

gog-gle-eyed (gŏg′l-īd″), adj. having staring, prominent, or bulging eyes.

go-ings (gō′ĭngz), n.pl. [see go], conduct or habit of life: goings on, Colloq., misconduct.

goi-ter (goi′tẽr), n. [<Fr. goître<goîtreux<Lat. guttur, throat], Pathol., an enlargement of the thyroid gland, causing a swelling in the front of the neck: found especially in Switzerland and the Savoy Alps, and said to be due to lack of iodine in the food or water. Also, goi′tre.—adj. goi′trous (-trŭs).

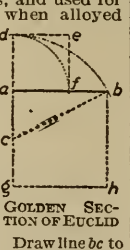
Gol-con-da (gŏl-kŏn′dȧ), n. [ancient name of Hyderabad], 1, a ruined city of India, formerly famed for diamond cutting; hence, 2, a mine of wealth.

gold (gōld), n. [A.S.], 1, a precious metal [symbol Au, <Lat. aurum, gold], remarkable for its beautiful yellow color, its density, its freedom from rust or tarnish when exposed to the air, and its malleability and ductility: found widely distributed in nature as free metal but always in small quantities, and used for jewelry, ornaments, gilding, etc., and, when alloyed with copper and silver, for coinage; 2, coins made of this metal; wealth; 3, the color of the metal; 4, beautiful or precious quality; as, a voice of gold: gold standard, a standard of value for a monetary system, based on gold alone as measuring the unit of value.



GOLDEN SECTION OF EUCLID

Draw line bc to the middle of the side ag of the square erected on ab, and swing it as a radius to position cad. Swing ad to position af. The golden section of the line ab is effected at f, since $\overline{af}^2 = \overline{ab} \times \overline{bf}$.

gold-beat-er (gōld′bēt″ẽr), n. [gold+beat], one who makes gold leaf for gilding.

gold brick a common brick covered with gold, sold as genuine solid gold by a swindler to his victim; hence, anything sold as valuable which proves to be spurious.

gold dust gold in a state of fine subdivision, or as dust.

gold-en (gōl′dn), adj. [see gold], 1, formed of, consisting of, like, or abounding in, gold; 2, shining; bright like gold; 3, most valuable; excellent: golden section of Euclid, Math., a problem solved in Euclid's Geometry, II:11; the division of a line into extreme and mean ratio.—adv. gold′en-ly.

gold-en age 1, Class. Myth., an imaginary age, long past, of perfect human happiness and innocence; 2, the period of greatest glory in the history, literature, etc., of any country.

gold-en club an American arum (Orontium aquaticum) whose roots, when cooked, were used as food by Virginian Indians; the tuckahoe.

gold-en-eye (gōl′dn-ī″), n. any of a genus (Clangula) of sea ducks of Eurasia and North America, noted for diving and swift flight.

Gold-en Fleece Gk. Myth., a fleece of gold from a ram which had rescued Phrixus and his sister Helle from their stepmother by carrying them away through the air: later hung up in a sacred grove at Colchis, guarded by a dragon, and taken, with the help of Medea, by Jason.

gold-en pheas-ant a large, long-tailed pheasant (Chrysolophus pictus) of China and Tibet, with exceptionally gorgeous plumage.

gold-en rob-in the Baltimore oriole: also called hang bird.

gold-en-rod (gōl′dn-rŏd″), n. [gold+rod], 1, any of a genus (Solidago) of plants of the composite family, with small heads of yellow flowers (white in one species), generally in showy panicles; 2, any of several plants in allied genera.

gold-en rule the principle of treating others as we wish them to treat us (Matt. 7:12): Math., the rule of proportion, or rule of three.

gold-en-seal (gōl′dn-sēl″), n. [gold+seal], an American perennial plant (Hydrastis canadensis) of the crowfoot family, having a large yellow rootstock used in making dye and as a tonic medicine.

gold-filled (gōld′-fĭld″), adj. having a heavy layer or thick plate of gold over a layer of base metal: applied to jewelry.

gold-finch (gōld′finch″), n. [gold+finch], 1, a European finch (Carduelis elegans), having a patch of brilliant yellow on the wings; 2, any of several American finches, especially one (Astragalinus tristis) having a lemon-yellow body and black cap, wings, and tail.

gold-fish (gōld′fĭsh″), n. [gold+fish], an orange-colored, fresh-water fish of the carp family, usually adaptable to aquariums and artificial ponds.

gold foil gold beaten into thin sheets, especially for the use of dentists: also called gold leaf.

gold-i-locks (gōl′dĭ-lŏks″), n. [gold+[1]lock], 1, any of various European plants with yellow flowers, as the buttercup; 2, a person with golden, or yellow, hair.

gold leaf gold beaten into sheets so thin that they will transmit light: used in gilding, etc.

gold mine 1, a place where gold is or may be mined; 2, anything yielding great wealth.

gold-smith (gōld′smith″), n. [gold+smith], a worker in gold, or dealer in gold plate.

golf (gŏlf; gŏf), n. [prob.<Du. kolf, a club used in a game; or<dial. Sc. gouff, to strike], a game, Scotch in origin, played with a small, white, resilient ball and long-handled clubs, on meadowland called links, on which at varying intervals are greens of smooth turf, each having a four-inch hole, into which the ball must be driven by each player in the smallest possible number of strokes from the starting point, or tee:—v.i. to play the game of golf.—n. golf′er.

golf club 1, a long, slender stick with any one of variously shaped heads, used in the game of golf; 2, a society organized for the playing of golf.

Gol-go-tha (gŏl′gō-thȧ), n. [Heb.=place of a skull], Bib., Calvary, the hill outside Jerusalem where Jesus was crucified (Matt. 27:33).

Go-li-ath (gō-lī′ăth), n. [Heb., perh.=shining], Bib., the Philistine giant killed by David with a stone from a sling (1 Sam. 17:4).

go-losh (gō-lŏsh′), n. [see galosh], an overshoe. Also, go-loshe′. See ga-losh′, Pfd. S.

gom-er-al (gŏm′ẽr-ăl), adj. [Sc.], stupid; foolish: —n. a simpleton. Also, gom′er-il.

Go-mor-rah 1, Bib., a wicked city in the Dead Sea region, destroyed with the neighboring Sodom by fire from heaven (Gen. 19:24); hence, 2, any exceedingly wicked city. Also, Go-mor′rha.

gon-do-la (gŏn′dō-lȧ), n. [It.], 1, a long, narrow, flat-bottomed boat with high, pointed ends, and a cabin in the middle, used for conveyance on the canals of Venice, and propelled by a single oar or pole at the stern; 2, in the United States, a flat-bottomed barge or railway car used for carrying merchandise: Aëro., an elongated car attached to the under side of a dirigible balloon.

VENETIAN GONDOLA

gon-do-lier (gŏn″dō-lēr′), n. the rower of a Venetian gondola.

gone (gŏn), [see go], past participle of the verb go:—p.adj. 1, ruined; lost; 2, faint or weak; 3, departed; dead: Colloq., in love; enamored: with on or upon.

gone-ness (gŏn′nĕs), n. a state of weakness, faintness, or exhaustion.

Gon-er-il (gŏn′ĕr-il), n. [M.E.], in Shakespeare's "King Lear," the king's oldest daughter, who, with her sister Regan, after professing great love for her father, drives him to madness by her cruelty.

gon-fa-lon (gŏn′fă-lŏn), n. [< It. gonfalone < O.H.G. gundfano < O.Teut. source], 1, in the Middle Ages, a standard or ensign, usually with streamers, hung from a crossbar; especially, the standard of certain Italian republics; 2, any flag which hangs from a crosspiece or frame instead of from the staff or the mast itself. Also, Obs., gon′fa-non.

gon-fa-lon-ier (gŏn″fă-lŏn-ēr′), n. 1, a standard bearer; 2, in medieval Italy, the chief magistrate in certain republics.

gong (gŏng), n. [imit.], 1, a disk or shallow bowl of metal with a turned rim, producing a resonant note when suspended and struck with a padded mallet; 2, any bell similar in shape or sound.

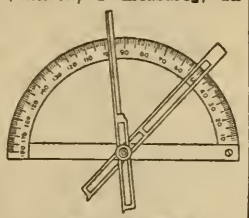
go-ni-om-e-ter (gō″nĭ-ŏm′ē-tĕr), n. [< Gk. gōnia, angle + metron, a measure], an instrument for measuring solid angles, as of the human head in craniometry, or between the faces of crystals in mineralogy.



HAND GONIOMETER

go-ni-om-e-try (gō″nĭ-ŏm′ē-trĭ), n. Math., the measurement of solid angles, or the angles formed by intersecting planes.—adj. go″ni-o-met′ri-cal.

gon-or-rhe-a (gŏn″ō-rē′ă), n. [< Gk. gonos, seed + rhoia, flux], a contagious and infectious inflammatory disease of the mucous membranes of the genital organs: communicated usually by sexual intercourse, but accompanied by discharges which may infect the mucous membranes elsewhere, especially of the eye, where blindness may result: vulgarly called clap. Also, gon″or-rhœ′a.

goo-ber (gōō′bĕr), n. [perh. < W.Ind. or Afr.], in the southern United States, the peanut.

good (gōōd), adj. [comp. better, superl. best], [< A.S. gōd < O.Teut. source], 1, adapted to the end in view; suited to its purpose; as, fish are good for food; competent; as, a good physician; 2, of satisfactory quality; giving pleasure; as, a good time; 3, sufficient; as, his credit is good; 4, full or complete; as, the task requires a good hour; 5, considerable; as, a good distance away; 6, reliable; honest; genuine; 7, virtuous; having excellent moral qualities; pure; 8, kind; merciful; as, be good to her; gracious; 9, well-behaved; as, a good child; 10, favorable; beneficial; as, good weather; 11, well-born; of high rank; as, to come of a good family; 12, undamaged; as, a good reputation; 13, fertile; as, good soil; 14, worthy; as, my good man; 15, ample; thorough; as, a good beating:—n. 1, that which is desirable; that which produces pleasure, satisfaction, or benefit; 2, prosperity; benefit; advantage; 3, that which is right; excellence: Econ., anything which people desire, and which can be furnished for a consideration; as, merchandise, services, amusement, etc., may be economic goods: goods, 1, portable possessions, such as household furniture; 2, textile fabric; 3, merchandise; as, a dealer in leather goods: —interj. an expression of assent or pleasure.

Syn., adj. virtuous, righteous, upright, just, benevolent, decorous, honorable, ample, considerable, agreeable, pleasant, valid, profitable, wholesome.—Ant., adj. bad, wicked, indecorous, unsound, insufficient.

good–by (gŏōd″-bī′), n. and interj. [contr. of God be with ye], a farewell. Also, good″–bye′.

good–den (gŏōd″-dĕn′), n. and interj. [contr. of good even], Obs., good evening; as, God give ye good-den, an Elizabethan salutation.

Good Fri-day the Friday before Easter Sunday, observed by churches in commemoration of Christ's death upon the cross.

good hu-mor a cheery mood; kindliness of temper as shown in social relations.—adj. good″–hu′mored.—adv. good″–hu′mored-ly.

good-ish (gŏōd′ĭsh), adj. [see good], rather good; not bad; indifferently agreeable.

good-ly (gŏōd′lĭ), adj. [comp. -lier, superl. -liest], [< A.S. gōdlic, goodly], 1, good-looking; handsome; 2, desirable; pleasant; 3, of considerable size:—adv. Obs. or Rare, excellently.—n. good′li-ness.

good-man (gŏōd′măn), n. [pl. -men (-mĕn)], [good + man], Archaic, 1, the head of a household: husband; 2, a title used for those not ranking as gentlemen: equivalent to Master.

good na-ture amiability; kindness of disposition.—adj. good″–na′tured (=nā′-tūrd).—adv. good″–na′tured-ly.

good-ness (gŏōd′nĕs), n. [see good], the state or quality of being good; benevolence: —interj. expressing surprise, emphasis, etc.

Syn., n. uprightness, benevolence, chastity, purity, integrity, probity, rectitude, virtue, worth, kindness.

Good Sa-mar-i-tan (să-măr′ĭ-tăn), Bib., the principal character in one of Christ's parables, the kindly rescuer of a victim of highway robbery whom a priest and a Levite had left bleeding by the roadside (Luke 10:30–37); hence, a genuinely compassionate or charitable person.

goods and chat-tels Law, any kind of property except real estate, including property in possession and in action.

Good Shep-herd Jesus Christ, as represented in the parable of the shepherd and the sheep (John 10:11–14).

good–tem-pered (gŏōd″-tĕm′pērd), adj. having a disposition not easily provoked or irritated.—adv. good″–tem′pered-ly.

good-wife (gŏōd′wĭf″), n. [pl. -wives (-wīvz″)], [good + wife], Archaic, 1, the mistress of a house; 2, a title used for the wife of a man not ranking as a gentleman: equivalent to Mistress.

good will 1, benevolence; kindly feeling; 2, hearty consent: Com., the value of an established business over and above its material property, consisting of such assets as reputation, patents, and trade-marks or trade secrets: usually represented in the capitalization of the business by its common stock.

[1]good-y (gŏōd′ĭ), n. [pl. -ies (-ĭz)], [see good], Colloq., 1, a sweetmeat or bonbon; 2, a person insincerely or weakly pious: often, goody-goody:—aaj. Colloq., affectedly or weakly pious; namby-pamby.

[2]good-y (gŏōd′ĭ), n. [pl.-ies (-ĭz)], [contr. of goodwife], Archaic, a woman of humble station: used formerly as a prefix to a surname; as, Goody Blake.

goos-an-der (gōōs-ăn′dĕr; gōōs′ăn″dĕr), n. [source uncertain], the American merganser, a bird akin to the ducks, but with a long, narrow bill.

goose (gōōs), n. [pl. geese (gēs)], [< A.S. gōs < Aryan source], 1, any of numerous species of wild or domesticated web-footed, flat-billed, large-bodied birds (subfamily Anserinæ), with powerful wings, akin to the swans and ducks, but differing from the swans in having a neck shorter than the body, and from the ducks in the absence of a cere; 2, a silly person; 3, [pl. gooses (-ĕz)], a tailor's heavy smoothing iron.

goose bar-na-cle a small marine shellfish found in great numbers attached to ship bottoms, etc. (for illus. see Crustacea).

goose-ber-ry (gōōz′bĕr-ĭ; gōōs′bĕr-ĭ), n. [pl. -ries (-ĭz)], [goose + berry], 1, any of several species (genus Ribes, which includes also the currants) of shrubs of the saxifrage family, bearing berries which, in the wild species, are often prickly: 2, its fruit, strongly acid when green: Colloq., an unobservant chaperon; a third person in the company of two lovers or near friends:—adj. made of gooseberries.

goose flesh a temporary roughness of the skin, like the skin of a plucked goose, produced by cold or fear: also called goose skin.

goose-foot (gōōs′fōōt″), n. [pl. -foots (-fōōts″)], [goose + foot], any of a genus (Chenopodium) or family (Chenopodiaceæ) of herbs, some of which have leaves shaped like a goose's foot; especially, the common pigweed, or lamb's-quarters (C. album), occasionally used as a potherb.

goose grass 1, any of several plants bearing a prickly seed which attaches itself readily to clothing; beggar-lice; 2, cleavers; any of several seashore plants (genus Galium, especially G. aparine) with hooklike bristles.

goose-herd (gōōs′hûrd″), n. [goose + [2]herd], one who tends geese.

goose-neck (gōōs′nĕk″), n. [goose + neck], a metal rod or pipe curved like the neck of a goose, used for various purposes, as a bent iron connecting a mast with a spar, or a small pipe connecting a tube with a gas lamp.

goose step 1, a marching step used by German soldiers on parade, in which the legs are held straight and the knees not bent: so called by English and Americans; 2, a balancing drill, somewhat like marking time, taught to army recruits.

goose-wing (gōōs'wing"), n. [goose+wing], Naut., 1, the position of a sail when one side is furled and the other set; 2, the position of a sail when both lower corners are set and the middle furled; 3, the position of the sails of a boat when the foresail and mainsail are set on opposite sides.

GOOSEWING (defs. 1, 2, 3)

goos-y (gōōs'ĭ), adj. [comp. -ier, superl. -iest], [see goose], like a goose; silly; slow-witted.

G. O. P. abbr. Grand Old Party: the present Republican party in the United States, which originated shortly before the Civil War.

go-pher (gō'fẽr), n. [< Fr. gaufre, honeycomb: so called because the animal honeycombs the earth by burrowing], 1, any of several species of ground squirrels (genus Citellus), burrowing rodents with large cheek pouches, found in western North America and northern Eurasia; 2, any of several thick-bodied, ratlike burrowing rodents (family Geomyidæ), with large, fur-lined cheek pouches opening beside the mouth, found in the southern United States and Central America; a pocket gopher; 3, a burrowing land tortoise (Xerobates polyphemus), common in the pine barrens of the southern United States; 4, a large but harmless burrowing snake (Compsosoma corais) of the southern United States: Gopher, Colloq., an inhabitant of Minnesota.

GOPHER (def. 2) ($\frac{1}{12}$)

go-pher wood (gō'fẽr), [< Heb. gōpher, an unknown wood], 1, the unidentified wood of which Noah's ark was made (Gen. 6:14); 2, a rare ornamental tree (Cladrastis lutea), with yellowish wood, found in North Carolina, Kentucky, and Tennessee: also called yellowwood.

Gor-di-an knot (gôr'dĭ-ăn), 1, Class. Myth., a knot tied by Gordius, king of Phrygia, so intricate that an oracle declared that he who loosed it should be master of Asia: cut through with a stroke of the sword by Alexander the Great; 2, hence, a problem requiring bold measures to solve it.

[1]gore (gōr), n. [< A.S. gor, dirt], blood; especially, thick or clotted blood.

[2]gore (gōr), n. [< A.S. gāra, triangular piece of land], 1, a three-cornered piece of land; also, locally, an odd piece of land between townships or counties, the irregular boundaries of which are the result of wrong surveys; 2, a three-cornered piece of cloth sewed into a dress, sail, etc.; 3, one of the wedge-shaped pieces needed to make a dome-shaped object, as an umbrella, balloon, etc.:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. gored (gōrd), p.pr. goring], to piece with gores or a gore.

[3]gore (gor), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. gored (gōrd), p.pr. goring], [perh. < A.S. gār, a spear], to pierce with, or as with, a horn; as, the bull gored him.

gorge (gôrj), n. [O.F. = throat], 1, Archaic, the throat; 2, that which is swallowed; 3, the act of swallowing greedily, or overeating; also, an overhearty meal; 4, an obstruction which chokes up a channel; as, an ice gorge in a river; 5, a narrow ravine between steep, rocky mountains or hills: Fortif., 1, the rear entrance to a fortification (see bastion, flèche, illus.); 2, the entrance to a bastion or other outwork (for illus. see bastion); Arch., 1, a band around the shaft of a column near the top; 2, the throat of a chimney; 3, a groove on the underside of a drip, to keep water from running down the wall (see drip, illus.); Mech., the groove in a pulley:—v.i. [p.t. and p.p. gorged (gôrjd), p.pr. gorging], 1, to swallow greedily or in large mouthfuls; surfeit; 2, to choke up:—v.t. to gormandize.

Syn., v. glut, stuff, cram, overeat, satiate, surfeit.

gor-geous (gôr'jŭs), adj. [< O.F. gorgias, finely dressed; perh. in reference to ruff at throat], 1, glittering in various colors; splendid; showy; 2, inclined to magnificence.—adv. gor'geous-ly.

gor-get (gôr'jĕt), n. [< O.F. gorgete, collar], 1, a piece of protective armor for the throat or neck (see arms, illus.); 2, formerly, a kind of close-fitting wimple: Ornith., a colored patch on the throat.

Gor-gon (gôr'gŏn), n. [< Gk. gorgos, terrible], Gk. Myth., one of three sisters, the most famous of whom was Medusa, whose appearance was so terrible that anyone who beheld them was turned to stone: gorgon, an ugly or terrible woman.

gor-gon-ize (gôr'gŏn-īz), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -ized (-īzd), p.pr. -izing], to petrify with a stare.

go-ril-la (gō-rĭl'ă), n. [< O.Afr. word for wild man, used by Hanno, ancient Carthaginian navigator], an African manlike ape (Gorilla gorilla), some five feet in height, with a massive body and powerful limbs: the largest ape known (see Primate, illus.).

gor-mand (gôr'mănd), n. [see gourmand], 1, a glutton; a voracious eater; 2, an epicure; a gourmet. See gour'mand, Pfd. S.

gor-mand-ize (gôr'măn-dīz), v.i. [p.t. and p.p. -ized (-dīzd), p.pr. -izing], to eat greedily or ravenously.—n. gor'mand-iz"er.

gorse (gôrs), n. [< A.S. gorst, gorse], any of a genus (Ulex) of low, densely branched shrubs of the pea family, with spinelike leaves, introduced into America from Europe; furze.

gor-y (gōr'ĭ), adj. [comp. -ier, superl. -iest], [see [1]gore], covered or stained with blood; bloody.

gosh (gŏsh), interj. [evasive corr. of God], used in mild expletives or curses.

gos-hawk (gŏs'hôk"), n. [< A.S. gōs, goose+hafoc, hawk], any of a genus (Astur) of swift, fierce, short-winged hawks of world-wide distribution.

Go-shen (gō'shĕn), n. [Heb.], Bib., 1, the part of Egypt allotted to the Hebrews (Gen. 45:10); 2, a district in southern Palestine (Josh. 10:41).

gos-ling (gŏz'lĭng), n. [dim. < A.S. gōs, goose], a young goose.

gos-pel (gŏs'pĕl), n. [< A.S. god spel, good tidings], 1, good news or tidings, especially the announcement of the salvation of mankind by Jesus Christ; 2, in general, the doctrines of the New Testament; 3, something received as absolutely true; 4, any doctrine earnestly advocated by its supporters: Gospel, 1, the history of the life and doctrines of Jesus Christ, contained in the first four books of the New Testament; 2, one of these books; 3, a selection from these appointed to be read on a given day as a part of the service in a liturgical church:—adj. relating to, or in accordance with, the gospel:—v.t. Obs., to instruct in the doctrines of Christ and the Apostles.

gos-pel-er (gŏs'pĕl-ẽr), n. 1, a zealous supporter of evangelical Protestantism; 2, the minister or priest who reads the appointed Gospel at a church service; 3, a missionary or evangelist: Obs., one of the writers of the four gospels. Also, gos'pel-ler.

gos-sa-mer (gŏs'ă-mẽr), n. [< M.E. gossomer, perh. = goose summer, or November, when geese were eaten because most frequent then], 1, a very fine spider's web which floats in the air or rests upon grass or bushes; 2, a soft, strong gauze used for veils; 3, any thin, filmy material; 4, a thin, waterproof cloak:—adj. very thin; filmsy; gauzy.

gos-sip (gŏs'ĭp), n. [< obs. gossip, sponsor < A.S. godsibb, person akin in God < sibb, akin], 1, familiar or idle talk; conversation dealing personally with other people's affairs; scandal; talebearing; 2, one who habitually talks of other people and their affairs; a talebearer: Obs. or Archaic, 1, a familiar acquaintance; 2, a godparent:—v.i. to tell idle tales about others; tattle: Obs., to act as a familiar friend:—v.t. Obs., to sponsor.—n. gos'sip-er.—adj. gos'sip-y.

Syn., v. babble, chat, prate, tattle, repeat, tell.

gos-soon (gŏs-sōōn'), n. [Ir. < Fr. garçon, boy], in Ireland, a boy; also, a boy servant.

got (gŏt), past tense and one form of the past participle of get.

Goth (gŏth), n. [< A.S. Gotan < Gk. Gothoi, Goths], 1, a member of an ancient Teutonic tribe that overran the Roman Empire in the third and fourth centuries A. D.; 2, a crude, inartistic, or savage person.

Go-tham-ite (gō'thăm-īt; gŏth'ăm-īt), n. [< Gotham in Nottinghamshire], 1, an inhabitant of an English village whose "three wise men" are famed in story for their foolishness; 2, humorously, an inhabitant of the city of New York.

Goth-ic (gŏth'ĭk), adj. [see Goth], pertaining to the Goths or their language: Arch., designating a style prevalent in western Europe from the 12th to the 16th century, with high, pointed arches, steep roofs, windows large in proportion to the wall space, and lavish use of lacelike ornamental carving (see illus. page 421): gothic, barbarous; rude:—Gothic, n. the language of the Goths; Print., in America, a face of type with strokes of uniform width (see App. I); in England, black letter or Old English: often, gothic.

Goth-i-cism (gŏth'ĭ-sĭzm), n. 1, rudeness; lack of polish or taste; 2, conformity to an idiom of the Gothic language; also, an instance of this; 3, inclination for, or conformity to, the Gothic style.

Goth-i-cize (gŏth'ĭ-sīz), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -cized (-sīzd), p.pr. -cizing], to transform to the Gothic type; make medieval:—v.i. Obs., to indulge one's taste for things that are Gothic.

got-ten (gŏt'n), past participle of the verb get: used especially in the United States.

Göt-ter-däm-mer-ung (gŭt"ẽr-dĕm'ẽr-ōōng), n. [Ger. = twilight of the gods], 1, Teut. Myth., the twilight of the gods, or the time when the gods engage in the last great battle with their enemies, all are killed on both sides, and the world sinks into the sea; 2, a music drama by Wagner.

gouge (gouj; gōōj), n. [< L.L. gubia, a chisel], a chisel with a concave blade for cutting grooves or holes: Colloq., 1, a groove or cavity made by scooping out with a gouge; 2, a trick, fraud, or imposition; also, one who defrauds or imposes, or gets or demands an unreasonable price:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. gouged (goujd; gōōjd), p.pr. gouging], to scoop out with a gouge; Colloq., to cheat; overcharge; overreach.—n. gouge'r.

GOUGES

A, military; B, carpenter's; C, surgeon's.

gou-lash (gōō'läsh), n. [< Hung. gulyās (hus), (meat) of a herdsman], a highly seasoned stew of beef or veal, vegetables, and flour: usually called Hungarian goulash.

gourd (gōrd; gōōrd), n. [< Fr. gourde < Lat. cucurbita, gourd], 1, any of a family (Cucurbitaceæ) of climbing plants bearing fleshy, many-seeded fruit of various kinds, as the melon; 2, the fruit of these plants, especially a nonedible variety, whose dried shell is sometimes used as a cup or dipper (see fruit, illus.).

gourde (gōōrd), n. [< Sp. gordo, large < Lat. gurdus, dull, heavy, or < Fr. gourde, fem. of gourd, heavy, hard < same source: cf. Eng. "hard cash"], 1, the momentary unit of Haiti, formerly equivalent to five francs, now to 20 cents: 2, in Cuba, a silver dollar.

gour-mand (gōōr'mänd; gōōr'män'), n. [Fr.], 1, a greedy eater; glutton; 2, a judge of viands; epicure; gourmet. Also, gor'mand.

gour-met (gōōr'mā'), n. [Fr.], an epicure; a person of trained or refined taste in viands.

goût (gōō), n. [Fr. < Lat. gustus, taste], taste; relish; inclination; liking; preference.

gout (gout), n. [< O.F. goute < Lat. gutta, drop], 1, a drop, especially of blood; 2, a splash of color; Pathol., a disease marked by an excess of uric acid in the blood, chalky deposits in and around the joints, and occasional attacks of acute inflammation and swelling of the tendons and ligaments about the small joints.—adj. gout'y.—adv. gout'i-ly.—n. gout'i-ness.

gov. abbr. government (also, govt.); governor (also, govr.):—Gov. Gen., Governor-General.

gov-ern (gŭv'ĕrn), v.t. [< O.F. governer < Lat. gubernare, to steer], 1, to control by authority, as a state or a subject; 2, to direct or manage, as a hospital; 3, to influence, restrain, or sway, as a person: Gram., to require to be in a particular grammatical mood, case, etc.; as, a preposition governs a noun in the objective case:—v.i. to exercise authority; administer or execute the law.—adj. gov'ern-a-ble.

Syn. rule, command, sway, manage, control, direct, regulate, curb, restrain, influence. To command is to exercise power or authority over one bound to obey. To govern is to secure obedience to such power or authority. To control is to have a dominating influence. A teacher who commands without exacting obedience neither governs nor controls her students. To manage a thing is to get into it and handle it to the last detail. To direct is to point out a course of action and order it followed. Those who direct issue the orders that define the policy of a company; those who manage the several departments carry out this policy in its details. To manage people or animals is to control them without arousing their antagonism. To regulate is to control by rule, to subject to restrictions, or to adapt to needs; we regulate traffic; public service commissions regulate rates for utility companies; villages regulate the speed of motor vehicles within their limits. (Cf. conduct.)

gov-ern-ance (gŭv'ĕr-nāns), n. the act, manner, or office of ruling; exercise of authority; direction; sway; management; control.

gov-ern-ess (gŭv'ĕr-nĕs), n. a woman who cares for or teaches children, especially in their own home: Obs., a woman governor.

gov-ern-ment (gŭv'ĕrn-mĕnt), n. 1, guidance, control, or regulation, as of conduct or of household affairs; 2, the act of administering the affairs of a state or community; rulership; 3, an established system of administering state affairs; a form of polity; as, a democratic government; a monarchic government; 4, the person or persons intrusted with the administration of the affairs of a state, as a prime minister and his cabinet; 5, in England and some other countries, the party upheld by popular vote and called by the king or president to form the ministry and to conduct affairs of state; 6, a politically organized community; state; 7, a country or portion of a country governed.—adj. gov'ern-men'tal.

Syn. rule, state, control, restraint, direction, sway.

gov-er-nor (gŭv'ĕr-nĕr), n. 1, a person or thing that controls, administers, exercises large authority, or governs; 2, in the United States, the highest executive official in any of the States, elected by the citizens of that State; 3, in the British Empire, an official representing the crown in a colony or dependency; 4, a person appointed to govern or administer affairs within a specified range, as a fortress, town, territory, etc.: Mech., any of several automatic mechanical devices for regulating the speed of an engine: Slang, anyone regarded as having authority: a term for a father: governor-general, a governor who has lieutenants or deputies under him, as in Canada, Australia, India, and the Philippine Islands.—n. gov'er-nor-ship'.

GOVERNOR

A, B, two centrifugal balls suspended on rods C and D; E, weight for making action of governor more sensitive; F, lever connected with control throttle valve.

gow-an (gou'ăn), n. [prob. < obs. golland, akin to A.S. golde, marigold], in Scotland, any of several yellow or white field flowers, but usually the common English daisy.

gowk (gōk; gouk), n. [< O.N. gaukr, cuckoo], Dial., 1, the cuckoo; 2, a simpleton; gawk.

gown (goun), n. [< O.F. goune < L.L. gunna, fur garment], 1, any loose, flowing outer garment; 2, a woman's outer garment or dress: used especially of a dress with pretensions to elegance; 3, a dressing gown or nightgown; 4, a long, loose robe, as worn officially by members of universities and of certain learned professions:—v.t. to attire in, or invest with, a gown.

gowns-man (gounz'măn), n. [pl. -men (-mĕn)], [gown + man], one who wears a gown as a mark of his profession or condition, as a member of the bar or of a university; a student.

G. P. abbr. 1, [Lat. Gloria Patri], Glory (be) to the Father; 2, Graduate in Pharmacy; 3, Grand Prelate:—G. P. O., general post office.

gr. abbr. 1, grain; 2, gram (usually, g.); 3, grand; 4, great; 5, gross:—Gr., Greece; Greek; Grecian.

graal (grāl), n. [see grail], a cup or chalice: obsolete except in Holy Graal. See grail, Pfd. S.

grab (grăb), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. grabbed (grăbd), p.pr. grabbing], [perh. var. of grip < A.S. grīpan, to grasp], to seize suddenly and forcibly: Colloq., to secure or get possession of by doubtful or dishonest methods, as franchises, concessions, public lands, etc.:—v.i. to make a sudden grasp:—n. a sudden and forcible seizure: Colloq., the act of securing by doubtful or dishonest means public property or concessions; also, the thing so secured; as, the franchise grab.

grace (grās), n. [< Fr. grâce < Lat. gratia, favor], 1, ease, elegance, or attractiveness in form, movement, manner, attitude, language, etc.; 2, kind treatment freely accorded; favorable attitude; good will; as, he is in the good graces of his employer; 3, excellence of character or disposition; any pleasing natural endowment; 4, virtue; sense of propriety; as, he had the grace to apologize; 5, a prayer before or after a meal, giving thanks and asking the divine blessing; 6, something granted as a favor, rather than as a right; an unmerited bestowal of something desirable; especially, a postponement, temporary relief from an obligation, or the like; as, three days' grace: Bib. and Theol., 1, God's unmerited mercy toward mankind; 2, the influence of God's spirit in the heart of a believer; 3, the condition of one who is accepted by God for salvation, enjoys God's special favor, and seeks to do God's will: mainly in the phrase state of grace; 4, any of several traits of special moral excellence, thought of as the Christian virtues, as meekness, love, humility, temperance, faith, peace, etc.; a spiritual gift or attainment; Com., 1, a period of delay, usually three days, allowed in some states for payment of a note or draft after the date of maturity; 2, in life insurance, a delay of payment of premium allowed for 30 days after due date; Law, a favor or indulgence granted by a court or legal officer; Mus., 1, a grace note; 2, an embellishment or ornamental note or passage, as a trill, turn, or appoggiatura, not essential to the harmony: grace note, Mus., a single, accented ornamental note immediately preceding and generally one degree above or below a harmony tone: usually printed in smaller type: sometimes loosely called appoggiatura (which see for illus.): Grace, a respectful title of address applied to a person of high rank, as an archbishop, duke, or duchess: preceded by your, his, or her: year of grace, year since Christ; A. D.:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. graced (grāst), p.pr. gracing], 1, to adorn or decorate; 2, to honor; dignify; favor: Mus., to add grace notes, cadenzas, etc., to.

grace-ful (grās'fo͝ol), adj. displaying beauty in form or action; elegant in manners or demeanor.—adv. grace'ful-ly.—n. grace'ful-ness.

Syn. comely, beautiful, felicitous, unconstrained.

grace-less (grās'lĕs), adj. lacking in good qualities; depraved; ill-mannered; awkward.—adv. grace'less-ly.—n. grace'less-ness.

Grac-es (grā'sēz), n.pl. Class. Myth., beautiful sister goddesses, usually three in number, intimates of the Muses, named Aglaia (Brilliance), Euphrosyne (Joy), and Thalia (Bloom): often represented as attendants of Eros (Cupid), Aphrodite (Venus), and Dionysus (Bacchus): regarded as the givers of charm, elegance, and joyousness to nature, art, wisdom, love, life, etc.

grac-ile (grās'Il), adj. [< Lat. gracilis, slender], slight; gracefully slender.

gra-cious (grā'shŭs), adj. [< Lat. gratiosus, gracious], 1, showing or bestowing goodness, kindness, or mercy; 2, affable; polite: Obs., lucky; happy:—interj. an expression of surprise: often preceded by my, goodness, or good, or followed by me, sakes, etc.—adv. gra'cious-ly.—n. gra'cious-ness.

Syn., adj. favorable, kindly, benevolent, courteous.

grack-le (grăk'l), n. [< Lat. graculus, jackdaw], 1, any of various Old World birds of the starling family (Sturnidæ); 2, in America, any of several blackbirds, especially the purple and bronze grackles.

gra-date (grā'dāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -dated, p.pr. -dating], [< Lat. gradus, a step], to arrange (parts) in a whole, as colors in painting, etc., so that there is a gradual passage by imperceptible degrees from one stage to another: Chem., to bring to a definite strength of concentration; as, to gradate a saline, or salt, solution:—v.i. to pass by imperceptible degrees from one grade or shade to another.

gra-da-tion (grā-dā'shŭn), n. 1, the act or process of arranging in order of rank, size, color, intensity, etc.; also, the state of being so arranged; 2, a series of degrees in rank, size, etc.: usually pl.; 3, any degree in such a series; 4, in painting, a gradual blending of one tint into another: Philol., variation of a vowel in different forms of a word root, sometimes seen in different forms of the same word, as drink, drank, drunk, sometimes in different, though related, words, as cordial, cardiac, or bear, bier, burden: also called vowel gradation and ablaut: Rare, a regular advance or progress, step by step.—adj. gra-da'tion-al.—adv. gra-da'tion-al-ly.

grade (grād), n. 1, a step or degree in rank, quality, order, etc.; 2, in the United States, one of the successive parts of the course in an elementary school, normally requiring a year's work for completion; 3, the pupils working in any such division; 4, in many schools and colleges, the mark or rating number given to a pupil for class work or an examination; 5, the measure of slope of a road, railroad, surface, etc.; ascent or descent per unit of distance traveled; as, an 8 per cent grade; gradient; 6, a stretch of a railway or highway which slopes; an incline or decline; 7, in stock raising, the result of crossing a common or native stock with some better breed: Philol., the phase of a vowel which may appear in different forms in related word roots by the process called vowel gradation or ablaut: grade crossing, or crossing at grade, in railroading, a point at which a railroad track is crossed by another railroad track or by a highway on the same level at the point of crossing: up to grade, of sufficiently high quality: to make the grade, in automobiling, to ascend a steep place; hence, figuratively, to succeed in spite of obstacles; come up to standard:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. graded, p.pr. grading], 1, to level and prepare, as a lawn, a road, or a railway roadbed; 2, to arrange in regular series; 3, in cattle breeding, to cross with a better breed: often with up:—v.i. to take (a specified) rank.

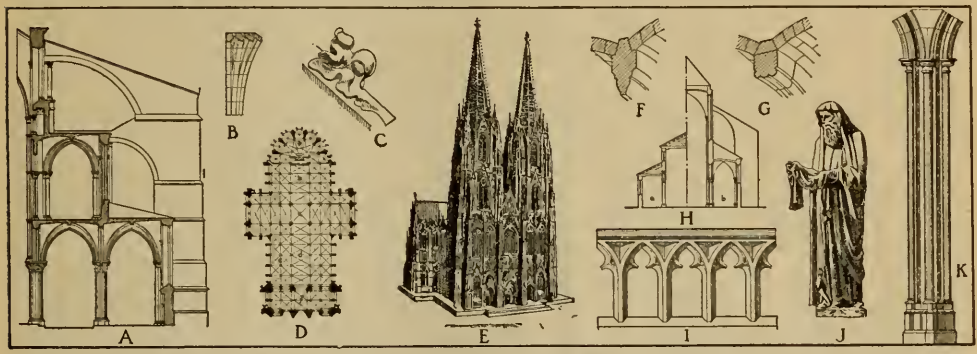
GRADE, ratio $\frac{b}{a}$

gra-di-ent (grā'dĭ-ĕnt), n. [< Lat. gradiens (-entis), stepping < gradi, to step], 1, the incline of a railway or road; grade (see illus. preceding column); 2, a stretch, as of a highway, which is not level; a slope: gradient, Phys., the rate of change from point to point of a physical quantity, such as pressure, temperature, electrical potential, etc., especially when measured in the direction in which the change is most rapid:—adj. 1, advancing by steps or degrees; 2, fitted for walking, as the feet of certain birds.



GOTHIC ARCHITECTURE.—A, section through aisle, Church of St. Remi, Reims, showing pointed arches, flying buttresses, and tall, straight pier supporting the arch over the nave; B, spring of ribs; C, typical crocket; D, plan of Cologne Cathedral (a, ambulatory; b, choir; c, crossing; d, nave; e, aisle; f, front vestibule); E, Cologne Cathedral, front view; F, G, construction of vaulting; H, early basilica (a) compared with Gothic church (b); I, parapet; J, typical sculpture; K, clustered pier.

grad-u-al (grăd'ū-ăl), adj. [< L.L. gradualis, by degrees < gradus, step], proceeding by degrees; step by step; regular and slow; as, he shows a gradual improvement:—n. R. C. Ch., 1, a response sung after the Epistle: so called because sung on the altar steps; 2, an ancient book of responses by the choir during Mass.—adv. grad'u-al-ly.—n. grad'u-al-ness.

Syn., adj. deliberate, moderate, progressive, continuous.—Anl., adj. sudden, jerky, quick, immediate.

grad-u-ate (grăd'ū-āt), n. [< L.L. graduare (-atus), to go step by step], 1, one who has received a professional or academic degree or diploma; 2, a measuring glass having its capacity at various depths accurately indicated by horizontal marks on the side:—v.t. (grăd'ū-āt), [p.t. and p.p. -ated, p.pr. -ating], 1, to mark with degrees; as, to graduate a glass tube; 2, to arrange according to degrees of quality, color, heat, etc.; 3, to confer a degree or diploma upon; as, the college graduated him with honors:—v.i. 1, to take or receive a college degree or diploma; 2, to change by degrees:—adj. (-ăt), having been given a degree; pertaining to those who have been given a degree; as, a graduate student; a graduate course of study.

GRADUATE

grad-u-a-tion (grăd"ū-ā'shŭn), n. 1, the act of conferring or receiving a college degree or the diploma of a school; 2, the occasion of graduation; 3, regular progression; 4, a marking into degrees or parts; 5, a process of hastening the evaporation of a liquid by exposing a large surface of it to the air.

grad-u-a-tor (grăd'ū-ā"tĕr), n. an instrument for dividing lines or surfaces into minute parts; also, the person using this device.

gra-dus (grā'dŭs), n. [abbr. < gradus ad Parnassum step to Parnassus], a dictionary of classical prosody: Mus., a collection of graded exercises.

Græ-æ (grē'ē), n.pl. [< Gk. Graiai], Gk. Myth., three sisters, hoary and misshapen, with but one eye and one tooth among them, who served as watchers for the Gorgons. Also, Gra'iæ (grā'yē; grī'ē).

graff (gråf), n. [< O.F. grafe < Gk. graphion, stylus: so called from likeness in shape], Archaic, in horticulture, a shoot, bud, or scion, inserted in a branch; graft:—v.t. Archaic, to insert (such a bud).

graft (gråft), n. [< earlier graff, a scion, q.v.], 1, a small bud, shoot, or scion of a tree or plant inserted into a slit in another stock, from which it draws sap and on which it continues to grow; 2, the process of grafting; 3, the place where a graft is inserted; 4, something united or mixed with a foreign stock; 5, in the United States, the getting of money or position by underhand or parasitic means; also, anything so acquired: Surg., a slip or piece of transplanted living skin or other tissue, such as bone, nerve, etc.:—v.t. to insert as a shoot in another tree; join to another thing so as to receive support: Surg., to transplant (tissue): Colloq., to accept or obtain (money) as a bribe, or through improper use of one's official position:—v.i. to practice grafting: grafting knife, a special knife used in grafting.—n. graft'er.

GRAFTING
1, splice grafting; 2, whip or tongue grafting; 3, saddle grafting; 4, cleft grafting; 5, whipping around a graft.

graft-age (gråf'tāj), n. the science, or the various methods, of grafting; also, the state of being grafted.

Gra-ham flour (grā'ăm), [< Sylvester Graham (1794–1851), Am. dietitian], 1, unsifted flour ground from the entire wheat kernel; 2, sometimes, whole-wheat flour, from which the coarser portions of the bran have been removed.

GRAFTING KNIVES

grail (grāl), n. [< O.F. graal < LL. gradalis, cup], Obs., a cup, dish, or chalice: Holy Grail, in medieval legend, the cup used by Jesus at the Last Supper, taken by Joseph of Arimathea to England, where, owing to the impurity of its keepers, it disappeared, and was revealed only to those who were pure in spirit: mentioned in Malory's "Morte d'Arthur," and the subject of one of Tennyson's "Idylls of the King" and of Wagner's music drama "Parsifal": also called Sangraal. Also, graal (grāl).

grain (grān), n. [< Lat. granum, grain], 1, any very small, hard particle; as, a grain of sand; a kernel; a small seed; 2, a single seed of, or, collectively, a quantity of the fruit of, certain grasses which furnish the chief food of man, as corn, wheat, rye, oats, etc.; 3, the plants themselves; 4, any small particle or amount; 5, a very small unit of weight, derived from the weight of a grain of wheat: $\frac{1}{7000}$ of a pound avoirdupois, and $\frac{1}{5760}$ of a pound troy; 6, a unit of weight for pearls; one fourth of a carat; 7, the arrangement of particles in a body; texture; as, the grain of marble or sandstone; 8, the arrangement of fibers in a piece of wood, or of layers in a piece of coal, stone, etc.; 9, the hair side of a piece of leather, or the markings thereon; 10, a slight roughness of surface: pl. the refuse or dregs of malted barley: Metal., 1, one of the individual crystals, which in sum total form the metallic structure; 2, the granular structure of a metal; as, coarse or fine in grain: Obs., kermes or cochineal, or a red dye made from either of these; any dye, especially a fast one:—v.t. 1, to form into small particles; 2, to paint in imitation of the grain of wood.—adj. grain'y.

grained (grānd), p.adj. 1, having a grainy or granular texture or surface; rough; 2, painted, stained, or marked with a grainlike design; especially, marked with a design imitating the grain of wood; 3, dyed in the grain; impregnated.

grain-er (grān'ẽr), n. a tool for imitating the grain or texture of wood, or one who uses it.

grain-ing (grān'ĭng), n. the process of finishing material in imitation of the grain or texture of wood, leather, marble, etc.

grain oil fusel oil, an oily, colorless, poisonous liquid, the chief constituent of the residue after distillation of alcohol: also called potato oil.

gral-la-to-ry (grăl'ă-tō-rĭ), adj. [< Lat. grallator, a walker on stilts], of or pertaining to the order of birds formerly called Grallatores, or wading birds, as herons. Also, gral'la-to'ri-al.

gram (grăm), n. [< Gk. gramma, a small weight], the unit of mass in the metric system, 15.43 troy grains: approximately the weight of a cubic centimeter of distilled water at maximum density. Also, gramme.—abbr. g.; gr.

gra-ma (grä'mä), n. [Sp.], any of various pasture grasses of the western United States, especially mesquite grass: also called grama grass.

gram-a-rye (grăm'ă-rī), n. [< O.F. gramaire: see grammar], Obs., learning; especially, grammar; Archaic, magic.

gra-mer-cy (grā-mûr'sĭ), interj. [< O.F. grant merci, great thanks], Archaic, thank you: an emphasized expression of gratitude.

gram-i-na-ceous (grăm'ĭ-nā'shŭs), adj. [< Lat. gramen, grass], Bot., pertaining to, or like, grass; grassy; of the order of grasses. Also, gra-min'e-ous (grā-mĭn'ē-ŭs).

gram-i-niv-o-rous (grăm'ĭ-nĭv'ō-rŭs), adj. [< Lat. gramen, grass + torare, to eat], Zoöl., feeding on grasses; grass-eating.

gram-ma-log (grăm'ă-lŏg), n. [< Gk. gramma, written + logos, word], in shorthand, a sign for a single word, as t for it. Also, gram'ma-logue.

gram-mar (grăm'ẽr), n. [< O.F. gramaire, knowledge < Gk. grammatikē (tekhnē), (art of) letters], 1, the science that treats of the principles that govern the words of a language in their relation to each other; 2, the manner of speaking or writing a language with reference to these principles; 3, a book on this science; 4, the characteristic forms and usages of a language, as its syntax and inflections; 5, the history of the growth of a language or of a group of languages: Rare, the elements or rudiments of any art or science; a textbook or treatise on them.

gram-ma-ri-an (grā-mā'rĭ-ăn), n. one who knows or teaches the science of language; a writer or compiler of grammars; a philologist.

gram-mar school 1, in the United States, a graded school between the primary school and the high school, including grades from the fifth to the eighth; or, in some cities, between the primary school and the junior high school, including the fifth and sixth grades; 2, in England, one of the large public schools, preparatory for college, in which the classics are taught.

gram-mat-i-cal (grā-măt'ĭ-kăl), adj. pertaining to, or in agreement with, grammar or its rules.—adv. gram-mat'i-cal-ly.

gramme (grăm), n. [see gram], the unit of mass in the metric system, equal to 15.43 grains troy weight. See gram, Pfd. S.

gram mo-lec-u-lar weight Chem., the weight of a substance in grams, equal numerically to the number expressing its molecular weight: also called gram molecule; gramme molecule; and mole.

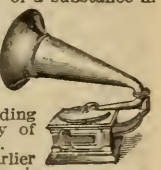
gram-o-phone (grăm'ō-fōn), n. [< Gk. gramma, something written + phōnē, a sound], an instrument for recording and reproducing sound; a variety of phonograph, invented by E. Berliner.



GRAMOPHONE

gram-pus (grăm'pŭs), n. [< earlier graundepose < O.F. grapois < Lat. crassus piscis, fat fish], 1, one of the smaller whales, a sea mammal akin to the dolphins and porpoises; 2, a person who breathes loudly; a corpulent or stout person.

gran-a-ry (grăn'ă-rĭ), n. [pl. -ries (-rĭz)], [< Lat. granum, grain], 1, a storehouse for grain; 2, figuratively, a region or country where grain is abundant.

GRAMPUS

grand (grănd), adj. [< Lat. grandis, full-grown], 1, large; imposing in size; majestic; 2, high in dignity, wealth, or power; illustrious; lofty or noble in character; 3, chief in importance; 4, characterized by magnificence or splendor; 5, complete; including everything; as, grand total; 6, in some compounds, belonging to the second generation of ascent or descent, as *grand*father; *grand*son; *grand*nephew: Mus., full; for full orchestra; in full classical form: Colloq., very good; very satisfactory; capital; as, a grand time; that is a grand idea: grand larceny, larceny, or theft, of personal property exceeding (in England) twelve pence in value: formerly distinguished from petit larceny: grand piano, a piano with a large horizontal, triangular or harp-shaped case: grand tour, a tour of Europe, formerly considered as a finishing touch to a young person's education: grand vizier, in Mohammedan countries, especially Turkey, the principal officer of the government under the actual head:—n. Slang, one thousand dollars.—adv. grand'ly.

gran-dam (grăn'dăm), n. [<A.F. graund dame, old lady], Archaic, a grandmother; an old woman. Also, gran'dame.

grand-aunt (grănd'ănt"), n. [grand+aunt], the sister of one's grandparent; the aunt of one's parent; a great-aunt.

grand-child (grănd'chīld"), n. [grand+child], the child of one's son or daughter.

grand-daugh-ter (grănd'dô"tĕr), n. [grand+daughter], the daughter of one's son or daughter.

grand duke 1, in Luxemburg and in certain states of the former German Empire, a duke ruling over a territory called a grand duchy; 2, in Russia before 1917, a son of the czar or a ruler of a principality.—fem. grand duch'ess.

gran-dee (grăn-dē"), n. [<Sp. and Port. grande, grand], 1, a Spanish or Portuguese nobleman of the first rank; 2, any man of high rank.

gran-deur (grăn'dûr), n. [see grand], 1, great power, rank, or eminence; 2, social distinction and display; 3, elevation of thought, sentiment, or demeanor; 4, splendor of surroundings; sublime or imposing beauty, as of scenery.

Syn. greatness, magnificence, splendor, sublimity. Greatness, figuratively applied, suggests importance, eminence, loftiness of character, or the like; as, the greatness of a nation depends upon the integrity of its people; the greatness of Lincoln was not apparent to all of his own generation. Grandeur names a quality that impresses both eye and mind; it is imposing, stately, inspiring; as, the grandeur of Mount Rainier; the grandeur of his sacrifice, his principles, his style of entertaining. Magnificence is full of beauty, color, sumptuousness, and is often grandeur on a warmer and more human plane; as, the magnificence of his generosity, of his dress, of his retinue, of the scenery. Splendor is dazzling magnificence. Sublimity is an exalted quality, awe-inspiring, noble, elevated; as, the sublimity of certain passages in the Bible.

grand-fa-ther (grănd'fä"thĕr), n. [grand+father], the father of either of one's parents; loosely, any male ancestor.—adj. grand'fa"ther-ly.

gran-dil-o-quent (grăn-dil'ō-kwĕnt), adj. [<Lat. grandis, great+loquens (-entis), speaking], characterized by pompousness of style; more lofty than the occasion requires; bombastic.—adv. gran-dil'o-quent-ly.—n. gran-dil'o-quence.

gran-di-ose (grăn'dĭ-ōs), adj. [<It. grandioso, splendid], 1, imposing; magnificent; having real grandeur; 2, intended to produce an artificial impression of greatness; pompous; showy.—adv. gran'di-ose-ly.—n. gran"di-os'i-ty.

gran-di-o-so (grän"dē-ō'sō), adj. [It.], Mus., in a grand, pompous style.

grand ju-ry Law, in England and the United States, a group of persons selected and summoned according to law, whose duty it is to inquire into crimes committed within its jurisdiction, and to indict (which see) for trial before a petit jury all persons against whom sufficient evidence is produced, and also, sometimes, to inquire into any public offense, as official corruption, nuisances, etc.

grand-ma (grănd'mä"; grăn'mä"), n. [familiar form of grandmother], Colloq., grandmother. Also, grand'mam-ma" (-mä-mä"; -mä"mə).

grand mal (grăh'mäl'), [Fr. = great sickness], the severe form of an epileptic attack characterized by convulsions and unconsciousness.

grand-moth-er (grănd'mŭth"ĕr), n. [grand+mother], the mother of either of one's parents; loosely, any distant female ancestor or, familiarly, any old lady.—adj. grand'moth"er-ly.

grand-neph-ew (grănd'nĕf"ū; -nĕv"ū), n. [grand+nephew], the son of one's niece or nephew; the grandson of one's sister or brother.

grand-niece (grand'nēs"), n. [grand+niece], the daughter of one's niece or nephew; the granddaughter of one's sister or brother.

grand op-er-a Mus., an elaborate and dignified drama, in which the text is set to music, with orchestral accompaniment: properly, opera.

grand-pa (grănd'pä"; grăn'pä"), n. [familiar form of grandfather], the father of either of one's parents. Also, grand'pa-pa" (-pə-pä"; -pä"pə).

grand-par-ent (grănd'pâr"ĕnt), n. [grand+parent], the father or mother of either of one's parents: pl. loosely, one's forbears.

grand-sire (grănd'sīr"), n. [grand+sire], a grandfather or more remote male ancestor.

grand slam in bridge, the taking by a player, or partners, of every trick in a deal.

grand-son (grănd'sŭn"), n. [grand+son], the son of one's son or daughter.

grand stand the principal range of tiered seats at any outdoor entertainment.

grand-un-cle (grănd'ŭng"kl), n. [grand+uncle], the uncle of one's parent; the brother of one's grandparent; a great-uncle.

grange (grānj), n. [<A.F. graunge<L.L. granea, a barn<Lat. granum, grain], 1, a country house with a farm attached to it; 2, a farm with its buildings; 3, in the United States, a local lodge or branch of a national secret organization founded in the interests of the farmers, called Patrons of Husbandry: Archaic, a granary: Grange, the order of the Patrons of Husbandry.

grang-er (grān'jĕr), n. 1, a member of a farmers' grange; 2, a countryman.

gra-nif-er-ous (grə-nĭf'ĕr-ŭs), adj. [<Lat. granum, grain+ferre, to bear], bearing grain, or seeds like grain.

gran-ite (grăn'ĭt), n. [<It. granito, grained], a hard, crystalline rock, composed of quartz, feldspar, and, usually, mica.—adj. gra-nit'ic.

gran-ite ware 1, a kind of ironware coated with hard, gray, speckled enamel imitating granite; 2, pottery with a gray, speckled appearance, resembling granite.

gra-niv-o-rous (grə-nĭv'ō-rŭs), adj. [<Lat. granum, grain+vorare, to eat], Zoöl., feeding or living on seeds or grain.

gran-ny (grăn'ĭ), n. [pl. -nies (-ĭz)], [colloq. abbr. of grandmother], 1, a grandmother; an old woman: familiar or contemptuous; 2, a fussy, over-particular person. Also, gran'nie.

grant (grănt), v.t. [<O.F. greanter<creanter, to guarantee<L.L.<Lat. credere, to intrust], 1, to give or confer, especially in response to a request; 2, to admit as true; concede; 3, to transfer the title of:—n. 1, the act of conferring or bestowing; 2, the thing conferred: especially applied to territory or rights conferred by a government: Law, a transfer of any property not capable of being passed by livery; transfer of real property; conferring of a right to do a certain act.

Syn., v. (see give); n. (see boon).

gran-tee (grăn-tē"), n. Law, the person to whom property is transferred by law.

grant-or (grăn'tôr; grăn-tôr'), n. Law, one who transfers property by law.

gran-u-lar (grăn'ū-lĕr), adj. [see granule], composed of, or like, grains or granules.

gran-u-late (grăn'ū-lāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -lated, p.pr. -lating], 1, to form into, or cover with, grains or crystals; as, granulated sugar; 2, to roughen the surface of; as, granulated eyelids:—v.i. to become grainlike or form into crystals, as molasses: granulated sugar, sugar which through refining has been whitened and made into small, separate grains; ordinary table sugar: distinguished from confectioners' sugar and brown sugar.

gran-u-la-tion (grăn"ū-lā'shŭn), n. 1, the process of forming or collecting into grains; 2, one or more of the grains so formed; 3, a roughening of a surface: Pathol., 1, the formation in wounds of new tissue in the shape of grainlike protuberances and small, rounded masses; 2, one of the small grainlike masses so formed.

gran-ule (grăn'ūl), n. [<dim. of Lat. granus, a grain], a small grain or particle.

gran-u-lose (grăn'ū-lōs), n. Chem., one of the essential constituents of the starch grain, converted into sugar by the action of ferments.

grape (grāp), n. [O.F. = bunch of grapes; orig., vine hook<O.Teut. source; cf. O.H.G. krapfo, a hook], 1, a smooth green or purple berry, the fruit of the grapevine, growing in clusters and used as fresh fruit, for making wine, and, when dried, for raisins; 2, the grapevine (which see): Mil., a grapeshot (which see).

grape-fruit (grāp'froōt"), n. [grape+fruit], a pale yellow, subtropical, citrous fruit, larger than the orange, having a characteristic acid pulp and bitter-tasting rind.

grape hy-a-cinth Bot., any of a genus (Muscari) of bulbous plants growing wild in the eastern United States, escaped from cultivation, bearing a spike of blue spherical flowers on a stalk a few inches high: also called bluebell and bluebottle.

grap-er-y (grāp'ĕr-ĭ), n. [pl. -ies (-ĭz)], [see grape], an inclosure for cultivating grapes.

grape-shot (grāp′shŏt″), n. [grape+²*shot*], collectively, small iron balls, shot as a spreading charge from a cannon.

grape sug-ar glucose; dextrose; a simple sugar formed in all green plants, but especially abundant in grapes, whence the name.

grape-vine (grāp′vīn″), n. [grape+vine], 1, any of a widely distributed genus (Vitis) of the vine family (Vitaceæ), many species being cultivated for their clusters of smooth, sweet or sour, edible berries; 2, a secret or private system of conveying objects or information, as to inmates of a prison.

graph (grăf), n. [<Gk. graphein, to write, draw], a diagram or curve representing the successive values of a changing quantity; as, a graph showing the average monthly rainfall for a locality during a year, or showing the temperature hour by hour through a day: Math., a diagram expressing a mathematical relation; as, the graph of an equation.

graph-ic (grăf′ĭk), adj. 1, pertaining to the art of writing or delineating; 2, illustrating by diagrams, curves, or pictures; conveying statistical information by diagrams or charts; 3, vividly described; well-delineated; lifelike; 4, in minerals, exhibiting marks like writing on a surface: Math., showing a mathematical relation or condition by means of points referred to fixed lines or axes: graphic arts, drawing, painting, and other fine arts which represent objects on a flat surface: graphics, n. pl. used as sing. the art or science of drawing, especially mechanical drawing, or of calculating from graphs. Also, adj. graph′i-cal.—adv. graph′i-cal-ly.

Syn. forcible, lifelike, picturesque, striking, pictorial. —Ant. dull, ordinary, flat, colorless, prosy.

graph-ite (grăf′īt), n. a dark gray natural form of carbon, used as lead in pencils, as a lubricant, for the carbons in arc lights, etc.: also called plumbago, or black lead.—adj. gra-phit′ic (grə-fĭt′ĭk).

graph-ol-o-gy (grăf-ŏl′ŏ-jĭ), n. [<Gk. graphē, a writing+-logia, study], the science of handwriting, especially as an index of character.—n. graph-ol′o-gist.

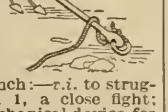
graph-o-phone (grăf′ō-fōn), n. [<Gk. graphein, to write+phōnē, a sound: a trade name], a kind of phonograph.

grap-nel (grăp′nĕl), n. [<A.F. dim. of grapon, grapnel], 1, a small anchor with flukes, or claws, used on boats and balloons; 2, an iron-clawed device for clutching.



GRAPNEL

grap-ple (grăp′l), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. grappled (grăp′ld), p.pr. grappling], [<O.F. dim. of grape, hook], to lay fast hold of; clinch:—v.i. to struggle or contend in a close fight:—n. 1, a close fight; a close hold, as in wrestling; 2, a mechanical device for taking hold of anything.

grap-pling (grăp′lĭng), n. a device with claws or hooks for clutching: grappling hook or iron, an iron hook for seizing and holding a vessel or other object. Also, grap′lin.

grasp (grăsp), v.t. [<earlier grapsen<A.S. grāpian, to grasp], 1, to seize or catch at; hold by clasping or contracting; as, grasp the rope quickly; 2, to take and hold in possession; as, he grasped the adjoining land; 3, to understand; as, to grasp an idea:—v.i. to endeavor to seize: with at:—n. 1, a seizure of the hand; 2, power of seizure; hold; 3, mental capacity; as, his grasp of things is quick for one so young.

Syn., v. clasp, clutch, grab, grip, embrace, hug, reach. —Ant., v. repel, lose, miss, let go, relinquish.

grasp-ing (grăsp′ĭng), p.adj. avaricious; greedy of gain; close.—adv. grasp′ing-ly.

grass (grăs), n. [<A.S. græs, grass <O.Teut. source], 1, green herbage, on the leaves and stalks of which cattle feed; 2, any plant of a very large family having hollow, jointed stalks, narrow leaves called blades, and seeds similar to those of grain; 3, pasture: grass widow, a woman separated from her husband by divorce or otherwise:—v.t. 1, to cover with turf; 2, to bleach, by exposure on grass; 3, to pasture:—v.i. to graze.

grass cloth 1, a heavy cloth made in the Canary Islands from a vegetable fiber; 2, a fine fabric made from the bast fibers of an east Asiatic plant, the ramie: used in fine Chinese embroidery.

grass-hop-per (grăs′hŏp″ĕr), n. [grass+²*hop*], any of many species of leaping and flying insects (families Acrididæ and Locustidæ), very destructive to green vegetation, having narrow forewings and broad hind wings, folded when not in flight: also called locust.

grass-y (grăs′ĭ), adj. [comp. -ier, superl. -iest], [see grass], of or pertaining to grass; covered with, or like, grass.—n. grass′i-ness.

¹grate (grāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. grated, p.pr. grating], [<O.F. grater, to scratch<O.Teut. source], 1, to rub or wear into small particles by the friction of a rough body; grind down; 2, to rub so as to produce a rasping sound; as, to grate metal on stone:—v.i. 1, to produce a harsh noise by rubbing roughly; 2, to produce mental irritation; sound discordantly; as, her manner grates on me; his voice grates:—n. the act or sound of harsh scraping or rasping.

²grate (grāt), n. [<It. grata<Lat. cratis, hurdle], 1, a framework of horizontal iron bars to hold burning fuel, especially coal; 2, a partition made of bars, as in a window:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. grated, p.pr. grating], to furnish with iron bars.

grate-ful (grāt′fo͝ol), adj. [<Lat. gratus, pleasing +-ful], 1, thankful; feeling gratitude; 2, pleasurable; refreshing; as, a grateful rain after a hot day.—adv. grate′ful-ly.—n. grate′ful-ness.

grat-er (grāt′ĕr), n. [see ¹grate], one who or that which grates; a rasping or grating implement; as, a nutmeg grater. grat-i-fi-ca-tion (grăt″ĭ-fĭ-kā′shŭn), n. [see gratify], 1, the act of pleasing; the state of being pleased; 2, satisfaction; pleasure; 3, reward or recompense; a gratuity.

grat-i-fy (grăt′ĭ-fī), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -fied (-fīd), p.pr. -fying], [<Lat. gratificari<gratus, pleasing+facere, to make], to afford pleasure to; indulge; delight; humor: Obs., to reward or recompense.

Syn. indulge, humor, please, satisfy. We gratify our desires, feelings, impulses, or curiosity for the pleasure we shall get out of it. We indulge our appetites or desires because we are too weak-willed to resist their influence. Any normal person likes occasionally to gratify a whim, or indulge in an extravagance. Humor is almost always used unfavorably; we humor invalids, fretful children, or, most unwisely, ourselves.

¹grat-ing (grāt′ĭng), p.adj. [see ¹grate], harsh; irritating to the ear.

²grat-ing (grāt′ĭng), n. [see ²grate], an open framework or lattice of parallel or crossed bars of wood or metal, used to prevent passage but admitting light and air: Optics, a set of very fine parallel lines ruled on a polished surface, used for diffracting light in spectroscopic work.

gra-tis (grā′tĭs), adv. [Lat.<gratia, a favor], without charge; out of favor or kindness.

grat-i-tude (grăt′ĭ-tūd), n. [<Lat. gratus, thankful], the state of being thankful; appreciation of favors received; response to kindness.

gra-tu-i-tous (grə-tū′ĭ-tŭs), adj. [<Lat. gratuitus, spontaneous], 1, without cost; freely bestowed; 2, without cause or provocation; unwarranted; without sufficient excuse; as, a gratuitous insult; 3, granted without merit or claim.—adv. gra-tu′i-tous-ly.—n. gra-tu′i-tous-ness.

gra-tu-i-ty (grə-tū′ĭ-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], [<L.L. gratuitas, gift], 1, a free gift; 2, a sum presented in recognition of a minor service; tip.

Syn. present, donation, bounty, gift, tip. (See boon.)

grat-u-late (grăt′ū-lāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -lated, p.pr. -lating], [<Lat. gratulari (-atus), to congratulate], Obs., to wish joy to; congratulate.—n. grat″u-la′tion.—adj. grat′u-la-to-ry (-lā-tō-rĭ).

grau-pel (grou′pĕl), n. [<Ger. graupeln, to sleet], Meteor., snowlike hail; soft sleet.

gra-va-men (grə-vā′mĕn), n. [pl. -vamina (-văm′ĭ-nə); -vamens (-vā′mĕnz)], [L.L. = inconvenience<Lat. gravare, to load], Law, the substantial cause of an action at law.

¹grave (grāv), v.t. [p.t. graved (grāvd), p.p. graved or graven (grāv′n), p.pr. graving], [<A.S. grafan, to dig], 1, to engrave; sculpture; 2, to impress indelibly on, as the mind: Archaic, 1, to bury; 2, to dig:—n. 1, an excavation for the reception of a dead body; a place of burial; 2, a place of great slaughter or mortality; 3, figuratively, a place or occasion which proves the end or destruction of anything; as, the grave of his hopes.

²grave (grāv), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. graved (grāvd), p.pr. graving], [perh.<O.F. grave, gravel, shore], Naut., to clean (a ship's bottom) by scraping or burning off accretions and covering with tar.

³grave (grāv), adj. [comp. graver, superl. gravest], [<Lat. gravis, heavy], 1, important; needing serious consideration; 2, solemn; dull in color; sedate; thoughtful; sober; 3, low-pitched: used of an accent or its sign [`], especially in French: Mus., 1, slow in movement; 2, low in pitch:—n. a grave accent: Mus., a passage in slow tempo.—adv. grave′ly.

Syn., adj. serious, solemn, earnest, sober, weighty, pressing, staid, momentous, melancholy, sad. A serious person is thoughtful and reflective; a serious matter is important; a serious symptom calls for diagnosis. Serious is opposed to what is jocose or mirth-ful; grave is opposed to what is light, lively, or colorful. Grave people are slow-moving, not gay; their demeanor is that of people who bear responsibilities. Clergymen, judges, surgeons, are apt to be grave. Though chiefly a characteristic of people, grave is also applied to weighty matters or affairs, gatherings of aged statesmen, momentous conferences, and the like. A solemn person is grave, and full of a sense of the importance of the moment, for solemnity is the product of an extraordinary occasion. A solemn warning is impressive; a solemn silence is mysterious; a solemn promise is sacred. Earnest is opposed to trifling; an earnest seeker is zealous, sincere, and intent. Sober, applied to people, describes those who are well-balanced, sane, and sedate, as opposed to those who perhaps are just as serious but more vivacious; applied to colors, sober means quiet, not showy; sober garb is often mournful or drab. (See serious.) —Ant. light-hearted, giddy, insignificant, unimportant.

grav-el (grăv'ĕl), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -eled or -elled (-ĕld), p.pr. -eling or -elling], [<O.F. gravelle, dim. of grave, gravel], 1, to cover with gravel, or small fragments of rock; 2, to run aground on a beach, as a vessel; 3, to embarrass; 4, to lame, as a horse, by a stone under the shoe:—n. Geol., rounded fragments of rock coarser than sand: often mixed with sand; Pathol., solid matter in small pieces in the bladder or kidneys: distinguished from stone only by the smaller size.—adj. grav'el-ly.

grav-el-blind (grăv'ĕl-blīnd"), adj. nearly stone-blind; more than sand-blind.

grav-en (grāv'n), p.adj. [see 1grave], cut; carved: graven image, an idol.

grav-er (grāv'ĕr), n. 1, any of various cutting tools used by engravers and sculptors, as a burin or chisel; 2, an engraver or carver in stone.

grave-stone (grāv'stōn"), n. [1grave*+stone], a stone, usually bearing an inscription, placed to mark a grave; a tombstone.

grave-yard (grāv'yärd"), n. [1grave*+2yard*], a burial place; a cemetery.

grav-id (grăv'ĭd), adj. [< Lat. graridus < graris, heavy], pregnant.—n. gra-vid'i-ty.

grav-i-met-ric (grăv"ĭ-mĕt'rĭk), adj. [< Lat. gravis, heavy + Gk. metron, a measure], Phys., of or pertaining to measurement by weight, as in determining density: distinguished from volumetric.

grav-ing (grāv'ĭng), n. 1, [see 1grave], the act of engraving or carving; 2, [see 2grave], the clearing of the bottom of a ship by burning or scraping: graving dock, a dry dock for holding a ship while the bottom is being cleaned or repaired.

grav-i-tate (grăv'ĭ-tāt), v.i. [p.t. and p.p. -tated, p.pr. -tating], [< Lat. gravitas (-tatis), heaviness < graris, heavy], 1, to be attracted by gravitation, a force which draws bodies toward each other; 2, to be naturally attracted; as, office seekers gravitate toward those in authority; 3, to tend to a low or lower level.

grav-i-ta-tion (grăv"ĭ-tā'shŭn), n. 1, Phys., the force which draws all bodies in the universe toward one another; 2, any attraction toward a center of influence.—adj. grav'i-ta'tion-al.

grav-i-ty (grăv'ĭ-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], 1, the state of being serious, sedate, or staid; 2, weight; solemnity; importance: Phys., terrestrial gravitation; the force tending to draw all bodies toward the center of the earth; Mus., the lowness of a tone or note: specific gravity, Phys., the relative weight of a given volume of any kind of matter as compared with the weight of an equal volume of a standard substance, as water or air.

gra-vy (grā'vĭ), n. [pl. -vies (-vĭz)], [source uncertain], juice that drips from meat in cooking; also, this juice made into a dressing for food: Slang, something acquired with little or no effort; also, graft.

gray (grā), adj. [<A.S. grǣg, gray], 1, of a color composed of white mixed with black; of the color of hair whitened by age; 2, old; mature:—n. 1, a color resulting from mixing white and black; 2, any animal of this color; as, I'll bet on the gray: gray matter, Anat., gray nerve tissue in the brain and spinal cord composed of nerve cells and fibers: Colloq., hence, brains; power of thought; intelligence: gray squirrel, Zoöl., a large, common squirrel with gray, sometimes black, coat, widely distributed over North America:—v.t. to cause to whiten:—v.i. to become whitened, as with age. Also, grey.—adv. gray'ly.—n. gray'ness.

gray-beard (grā'bērd"), n. [gray+beard], an old man. Also, grey'beard".

gray-ish (grā'ĭsh), adj. [see gray], somewhat gray. Also, grey'ish.

gray-lag (grā'lăg"), n. [<gray lag goose: because this lagged behind when the other geese migrated], a species (Anser cinereus) of wild gray goose of Europe and Asia. Also, grey'lag".

gray-ling (grā'lĭng), n. [dim. <gray], any of several species of a genus (Thymallus) of edible fresh-water fishes of America and Europe, allied to the trout. Also, grey'ling.

Gray's Inn 1, one of the four legal guilds of England, which have the power of admitting to practice at the English bar; 2, the buildings in London, collectively, belonging to this guild.

1graze (grāz), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. grazed (grāzd), p.pr. grazing], [<A.S. grasian <græs, grass], 1, to provide growing grass, etc., for; as, to graze cattle; 2, to eat grass or herbage from, as a pasture: Rare, to tend, as cattle, while pasturing:—v.i. to eat grass; move along while eating grass.—n. graz'er.

2graze (grāz), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. grazed (grāzd), p.pr. grazing], [source uncertain], 1, to touch or rub lightly; 2, to scratch or scrape slightly, as the skin, in passing:—v.i. to rub something in passing:—n. a slight rub; a rubbed place on a surface.

gra-zier (grā'zhĕr), n. [see 1graze], one who pastures or breeds cattle for market.

Gr. Br. abbr. Great Britain; as, Gr. Br. and Ire. (also, Gr. Brit.; Gt. Br.; Gt. Brit.).

grease (grēs), n. [< O.F. graisse < Lat. crassus, fat], 1, soft animal fat; 2, any kind of fat with a buttery consistency; hence, oily matter, as from petroleum; 3, a disease or inflammation of a horse's fetlocks: wool in the grease, wool from which the natural grease and dirt have not been washed:—v.t. (grēs; grēz), [p.t. and p.p. greased (grēst; grēzd), p.pr. greasing], 1, to smear or rub with fat or oil; 2, to lubricate with grease: Colloq., to bribe: grease the palm of, to bribe; influence by gifts.

grease cup Mech., a small cup screwed to a bearing, containing an opening which allows grease for lubrication to be forced into the bearing: also called grease cock.

GREASE CUP
1, grease cup; 2, section showing same: A, grease; B, cup; C, tube leading to bearing greas-er (grēs'ĕr; grēz'ĕr), n. one who or that which oils or lubricates: Slang, a Mexican, especially one of mixed blood.

grease-wood (grēs'-wŏod"), n. [grease+wood], a stiff, prickly shrub of some alkaline, arid plains in the western United States: also called greasebush.

greas-y (grēs'ĭ; grēz'ĭ), adj. [comp. -ier, superl. -iest], [see grease], resembling, or spotted with, fat; oily.—adv. greas'i-ly.—n. greas'i-ness.

great (grāt), adj. [<A.S. grēat, large], 1, large in size, number, quantity, extent, etc.; vast: opposite of small, little; 2, of long duration; as, a great while after; 3, extreme; as, great ignorance; 4, of moment; weighty; important; as, great questions of state; 5, illustrious; prominent; eminent; as, a great leader; 6, high-minded; noble; as, a truly great character; 7, sublime; magnificent; marvelous; as, a great painting; 8, active; intimate; as, a great friend; 9, more remote in relationship by one generation; as, great-aunt; great-grandchild: Obs., 1, haughty; 2, pregnant:—n. noble or influential people collectively: with the.—adv. great'ly.—n. great'ness.

Syn., adj. big, huge, majestic, vast, grand, august, important, numerous, abundant, immense, eminent.

great al-ba-core a large salt-water food fish; the tunny (which see).

great–aunt (grāt'-ănt"), n. the sister of one's grandparent.

Great Bear a northern constellation, Ursa Major (which see for illus.).

great cir-cle Math., a circle made by the intersection of the surface of a sphere with a plane passing through the center of the sphere; a circle on a sphere which divides the surface into two equal parts, as the equator or any meridian on the earth: great-circle sailing, the laying of a course, especially in long ocean voyages, along the great circle of the earth determined by the port of departure and the destination, such being the shortest possible course.

great-coat (grāt'kōt"), n. [great+coat], an overcoat; especially, a large, heavy overcoat.

great Dane one of a breed of very large, powerful, short-haired dogs.

Great Dip-per a group of seven stars, arranged so as to form the outline of a dipper, in the constellation Ursa Major (which see for illus.): also called Charles's Wain.

great-en (grāt'n), v.t. and v.i. Archaic, to make or become larger, more illustrious, etc.

great–grand-child (grāt"-grănd'child"), n. the child of one's grandchild.

great–grand-daugh-ter (grāt″-grănd′dô″tĕr), n. the daughter of one's grandson or granddaughter.

great–grand-fa-ther (grāt″-grănd′fä″*th*ĕr), n. the father of one's grandfather or grandmother.

great–grand-moth-er (grāt″-grănd′mŭ*th*″ĕr), n. the mother of one's grandfather or grandmother.

great–grand-son (grāt″-grănd′sŭn″), n. the son of one's grandchild.

great–heart-ed (grāt′-härt″ĕd), adj. magnanimous; generous; noble.

great horned owl (Bubo virginianus) with conspicuous ear tufts like horns.

great lau-rel the most common of the North American rhododendrons (Rhododendron maximum): so called because of its resemblance to the mountain laurel (Kalmia latifolia), with which it is often found.

Great Spir-it the Supreme Being: name used by the Indians of North America.

great–un-cle (grāt′-ŭng″kl), n. the brother of one's grandparent.

GREAT HORNED OWL (1/5)

Great White Way the theater section of Broadway, New York City: so called from the brightness of its lights at night.

great wil-low-herb Bot., a tall, slender plant (Epilobium angustifolium) of the evening primrose family, bearing a long raceme, or flower cluster, of brilliant pink flowers.

[1]greaves (grēvz), n.pl. armor to protect the legs from the knee to the ankle (for illus. see arms). [< O.F. greve, shin]

[2]greaves (grēvz), n.pl. tallow], the sediment of melted tallow. [< L.G. greven, refuse grebe (grēb), n. four-toed, ducklike, expert diving birds (family Podicipedidæ), allied to the loon but smaller. [source uncertain], any of several Gre-cian (grē′shăn), adj. pertaining to Greece:—n. 1, a Greek; 2, one versed in Greek language or literature. [< Lat. Græcia, Greece], Gre-cism (grē′sĭzm), n. 1, an idiom of the Greek language, or imitation of it; 2, Greek spirit or manner, or imitation of it. Also, Græ′cism.

greed (grēd), n. 2, unnatural desire for something; avidity. [< greedy], 1, excessive hunger;

Syn. cupidity, avarice, covetousness. Greed, cupidity, and avarice agree in expressing an insatiate longing for wealth. Greed, however, has a use extended beyond the passion for money; people entertain greed for food, drink, recognition, fame, and the like. Cupidity and avarice are confined to the desire for money and possessions; cupidity stresses the eagerness to get, avarice the tendency to hoard one's gains.

greed-y (grēd′ĭ), adj. [comp. -ier, superl. -iest], [< A.S. grǣdig, greedy], 1, too eager for food and drink; gluttonous; voracious; 2, covetous; eagerly desirous.—adv. greed′i-ly.—n. greed′i-ness.

Syn. rapacious, ravenous, insatiable. (Cf. avaricious.)

Greek (grēk), n. [< A.S. pl. Crēcas, Grēcas < Lat. Græcus, a Greek], 1, a native or citizen of Greece; 2, the language of Greece, especially of ancient Greece; 3, something impossible to understand:—adj. pertaining to, or like, Greece or the Greeks: Greek Church, the church dominant in countries formerly composing the Eastern Roman Empire, as Yugoslavia, Rumania, and Bulgaria: until 1917, the established church of Russia: also called the Eastern or the Orthodox Church: Greek cross, a plain cross like a plus sign [+], with upright equal in length to transverse (for illus. see cross): Greek fire, a substance that burns on or under water: used in ancient and medieval warfare.

green (grēn), n. Teut. root as grōwan, to grow], 1, the color of growing grass or of the leaves of most plants; a color between, or composed of, blue and yellow; 2, a grassplot or common; 3, a golf course, especially the closely cut square of turf around any one of the holes: pl. 1, fresh or evergreen foliage, cut for decoration; as, Christmas greens; 2, spinach or similar green vegetables:—v.t. to make of the color of plants and grass:—v.i. to become the color of plants and grass:—adj. 1, having the color of grass; of a color between, or composed of, blue and yellow; 2, covered with fresh grass or foliage; verdant; 3, fresh; flourishing; as, a green old age; 4, unripe; immature; as, green fruit; 5, new; untrained; inexperienced; as, a green farm hand; 6, wan or pale; as, green with envy; 7, not seasoned, dried, cured, or the like; as, green firewood. —adv. green′ly.—n. green′ness.—adj. green′ish. [< A.S. grēne, green], 1, a color between, or composed of, blue and yellow; 2, a grassplot or common; 3, a golf course, especially the closely cut square of turf around any one of the holes: pl. 1, fresh or evergreen foliage, cut for decoration; as, Christmas greens; 2, spinach or similar green vegetables:—v.t. to make of the color of plants and grass:—v.i. to become the color of plants and grass: —adj. 1, having the color of grass; of a color between, or composed of, blue and yellow; 2, covered with fresh grass or foliage; verdant; 3, fresh; flourishing; as, a green old age; 4, unripe; immature; as, green fruit; 5, new; untrained; inexperienced; as, a green farm hand; 6, wan or pale; as, green with envy; 7, not seasoned, dried, cured, or the like; as, green firewood. —adv. green′ly.—n. green′ness.—adj. green′ish.

green-back (grēn′băk″), n. United States legal tender note having its back printed in green ink. [green + [1]back], any Green-back-ism (grēn′băk″ĭzm), n. Pol. Sci., the theories of a political party in the United States, popularly called the Greenback party, officially known as the Independent party, which flourished about 1875, advocating the issuance of irredeemable paper money.

green-bri-er (grēn′brī″ĕr), n. of several prickly climbing plants (genus Smilax) of the lily family, with glossy leaves: common in the United States and Canada. [green + brier], any green-er-y (grēn′ĕr-ĭ), n. [pl. -eries (-ĕr-ĭz)], [see green], 1, verdure; a verdant mass of plants; 2, a place where green things are grown.

green–eyed (grēn′-īd″), adj. eyes; 2, jealous; envious. 1, having green green-finch (grēn′fĭnch″), n. very common finch (Ligurinus chloris) of Europe, having olive-green and yellow feathers. [green + finch], a green-gage (grēn′gāj″), n. green-fleshed plum of excellent flavor. [green + [2]gage], a green-gro-cer (grēn′grō″sĕr), n. a retailer of fresh vegetables and fruit.—n. green′gro″cer-y. [green + grocer], green-horn (grēn′hôrn″), n. inexperienced person; a simpleton. [green + horn], green-house (grēn′hous″), n. conservatory or glass house for the protection or cultivation of tender flowers and plants. [green + house], a green-ing (grēn′ĭng), n. of turning or becoming green; 2, an apple of any of several varieties with green skins. [see green], 1, the process green plov-er any of several Old World plovers, as the English pewit, or lapwing.

green-room (grēn′rōōm″), n. actors' waiting room in a theater. [green + room], an green-stone (grēn′stōn″), n. of several dark green igneous rocks; sometimes, erroneously, dolerite. [green + stone], any green-sward (grēn′swôrd″), n. turf well covered with grass. [green + sward], green-wood (grēn′wo͝od″), n. forest in full leaf. [green + wood], a

[1]greet (grēt), v.t. [< A.S. grētan, grœtan, to greet < O.Teut. source], 1, to address written or verbal salutations to; accost; welcome; receive in friendly fashion; 2, to appear or be presented to: as, a sight greeted our eyes:—v.i. to exchange salutations.

[2]greet (grēt), v.i. [Sc. < A.S. grētan, grātan, to weep], Eng. Dial. or Sc., to weep; mourn:—n. weeping.

greet-ing (grēt′ĭng), n. [see [1]greet], a salutation; welcome; expression of friendliness.

gre-ga-ri-ous (grē-gā′rĭ-ŭs), adj. [< Lat. grex (gregis), a flock], associating or going together in herds or companies.—adv. gre-ga′ri-ous-ly.—n. gre-ga′ri-ous-ness.

Gre-go-ri-an (grē-gō′rĭ-ăn), adj. [< Gk. Grēgorios], pertaining to one named Gregory: Gregorian calendar, the system of reckoning time introduced by Pope Gregory XIII in 1582, in which corrections are made for errors in the earlier Julian calendar: now in use in all Christian countries, including Russia since 1918: Gregorian chant, one of a collection of psalm tones compiled by Pope Gregory I (the Great), about 590; a plain song: an important part of the Roman Catholic ritual: also called Gregorian tone.

gre-nade (grē-nād′), n. [Fr. < Sp. granada, a pomegranate: because filled with missiles as the fruit is with seeds], 1, an explosive shell fired by a fuse and usually thrown by hand; 2, a flask or bottle, containing chemicals, to be thrown and burst, for putting out fires, scattering fumes, etc.: rifle grenade, a grenade fired from a rifle.

GRENADIER

gren-a-dier (grĕn″ă-dēr′), n. 1, originally, a foot soldier of England who threw grenades; 2, later, in France, England, Austria, etc., a soldier of a company selected for height and strength: 3, now, a member of the British infantry regiment called Grenadier Guards; 4, a South African weaver bird of brillant red and black plumage; 5, any of a family (Macrouridæ), of deep-water fishes.

[1]gren-a-dine (grĕn′ă-dēn), n. [Fr., perh. < Granada, city in Spain], 1, a thin, gauzelike dress fabric of silk or silk and wool; 2, a coal-tar dye, a by-product from the manufacture of magnesia.

²gren-a-dine (grĕn′ȧ-dēn′), n. [< Fr. grenadin, a slice of stewed meat, perh. < O.F. grain, a thing used in cookery], Cookery, a dish of fillets of veal or poultry, trimmed and larded.

gre-na-dine (grē-nȧ′dēn′), n. [Fr. < grenade, a pomegranate], pomegranate sirup.

gres-so-ri-al (grē-sō′ri-ȧl), adj. [< Lat. gradi (gressus), to walk], Zoöl., 1, adapted for walking, as the feet of a chicken; 2, having the habit of walking, as certain birds. Also, gres-so′ri-ous.

Gret-na Green (grĕt′nȧ), a village in Scotland just across the border where, formerly, English runaway couples could be married.

grew (grōō), the past tense of the irregular verb grow, which see.

grew-some (grōō′sŭm), adj. [see gruesome], repulsive; frightful. See grue′some, Pfd. S.

grey (grā), adj. [see gray], 1, of a color intermediate between white and black; ashen; of the color of hair whitened by age; 2, old:—n. 1, the color obtained by mixing white with black; 2, anything of this color, especially an animal:—v.t. to cause to whiten:—v.i. to become whitened, as hair with age. Also, gray, Pfd. S.—adv. grey′ly.—n. grey′ness.

grey-beard (grā′bērd″), n. [grey+beard], an old man. See gray′beard″, Pfd. S.

grey-hound (grā′hound″), n. [< A.S. grīghund, a greyhound], a slender-bodied, long-legged, very swift dog: sometimes, incorrectly, grayhound.

grid (grĭd), n. [< griddle or gridiron], 1, a grating composed of parallel bars; 2, a gridiron, or grated iron utensil used for broiling: Elec., 1, a lead plate provided with perforations or other irregularities of surface, and employed in storage cells for the support of the active material; 2, an electrode, or electric pole, placed between the filament and the plate of an electron tube and controlling the current between plate and filament: grid leak, Rad., a resistance connected to the grid of an electron tube, usually in parallel with a blocking condenser, to lead off the grid charge.

grid-dle (grĭd′l), n. [prob. < O.F. gredil, gridiron < Lat. craticula, griddle < cratis, hurdle], a metal plate used for cooking hot cakes or griddle-cakes: Rare, a miner's wire-bottomed sieve or screen.

grid-dle-cake (grĭd′l-kāk″), n. [griddle+cake], a thin batter cake, baked on a griddle, or metal plate; a flapjack.

gride (grīd), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. grided, p.pr. griding], [< ²*gird*, perh. influenced by grid or grind], 1, to pierce; cut; 2, to grind harshly; jar; grate:—v.i. to make a grinding sound; grate:—n. a grating sound.

grid-i-ron (grĭd′ĭ″ŭrn), n. [< M.E. gredire < O.F. gredil, gridiron: see griddle], 1, a grated iron utensil for broiling meat or fish; 2, a football field: Naut., a framework of parallel beams for supporting a ship under repairs:—v.t. to furnish with parallel bars or lines so as to form a network.

grief (grēf), n. [< O.F. grever, to grieve], 1, sorrow on account of present or past trouble; 2, that which causes sorrow or sadness; affliction; 3, a mishap or accident; as, to come to grief: Obs., physical pain.

Syn. sorrow, woe, affliction, tribulation, sadness, melancholy, trial, suffering. These words agree in expressing distress of mind or soul. Sorrow is occasioned by the ordinary disappointments, losses, regrets, or misfortunes which are the lot of people in general. Grief is deep sorrow, caused by an unusual loss, injury, or the like. Grief is more acute and more transitory than sorrow, and is apt to be marked by passionate demonstrations of feeling. Affliction is deep, keen, bitter suffering, occasioned by calamity or loss; affliction may name, also, the calamity or loss causing the distress. Affliction strikes more deeply into the soul than either grief or sorrow. Tribulation names a severe or grievous affliction extending through a long and trying period; it frequently refers to suffering regarded as discipline for the soul. Woe is like grief in that it is violent, and like affliction in that it is inconsolable. It is now used chiefly in poetry, though it has acquired also a facetious sense. Sadness is mental depression, either from a sorrowful event, or from a low condition of health or spirits; it may name a deep despondency, but it is often fleeting. Melancholy sometimes designates a not displeasing, pensive sadness; usually it is a habitual or constitutional tendency to despondency and depression, sometimes amounting to actual mental disease.—Ant. elation, joy, exultation.

griev-ance (grēv′ȧns), n. 1, a sense of wrong or oppression; 2, a just or supposed ground of complaint; a cause of annoyance: Obs., 1, suffering; grief; 2, anger; displeasure.

Syn. injustice, injury, wrong; prejudice.

grieve (grēv), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. grieved (grēvd), p.pr. grieving], to cause to experience sorrow or distress; wound the feelings of; trouble:—v.i. to be in sorrow; lament; feel distress; mourn.

griev-ous (grēv′ŭs), adj. 1, causing sadness or sorrow; 2, hard to be borne; as, a grievous burden; painful; oppressive; 3, atrocious; flagrant, as a sin.—adv. griev′ous-ly.—n. griev′ous-ness.

Syn. mournful, sorrowful, distressing, severe.

griffe (grĭf), n. [Fr. = claw], Arch., an ornament like a claw, projecting from the foot of a round column toward a corner of the block on which it stands.

grif-fin (grĭf′ĭn), n. [< O.F. grifoun < Lat. gryphus < Gk. grups, a griffin < grupos, hook-nosed], 1, a fabled animal with the body and legs of a lion, the wings and beak of an eagle, and with pricked ears: portrayed in heraldic designs; 2, a strict chaperon. Also, grif′fon; gryf′fon; gryph′on (grĭf′ŭn).

GRIFFIN

grig (grĭg), n. [source uncertain], a merry or lively person: Obs. or Dial., 1, a grasshopper; cricket; 2, a small eel.

grill (grĭl), n. [< Fr. griller, to broil], 1, a gridiron; also, a compact, portable, flat-topped apparatus for small-scale or quick cooking on the table: as, an electric grill; 2, that which is broiled on a gridiron, as meat; 3, a room, as in a hotel or restaurant, where broiled meats, promptly served, are a specialty:—v.t. 1, to cook on a gridiron or grill; broil, as, especially, meat or fish; 2, to subject to scathing examination, as a criminal:—v.i. to undergo broiling; broil.

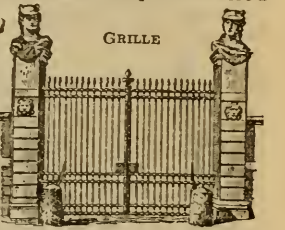
grille (grĭl), n. [< O.F. grēdil, griddle: see griddle] a grating or screen of metal bars placed before a window or in a doorway, or used as a gate or rail.



GRILLE

grill-room (grĭl′-rōōm″), n. [grill+room], a room in a hotel or restaurant where meats and poultry are broiled and food is cooked to order and served promptly: also called grill.

grilse (grĭls), n. [source uncertain], a young salmon on its first return from the sea.

grim (grĭm), adj. [comp. grimmer, superl. grimmest], [A.S. = fierce < O.Teut. source], 1, of a forbidding aspect; stern and surly; 2, hideous; frightful; 3, cruel; unyielding.—adv. grim′ly.—n. grim′ness.

Syn. ferocious, fierce, grisly, stern, relentless, terrible. (See sullen.)—Ant. benign, merciful, kind.

gri-mace (grĭ-mās′), n. [source uncertain], a twisting of the countenance into a wry face; also, a smirk or look of affectation:—v.i. [p.t. and p.p. -maced (-māst′), p.pr. -macing], to make faces.

gri-mal-kin (grĭ-mal′kĭn; -môl′kĭn), n. [prob. < gray+Malkin, dim. of Matilda], an old she-cat; also, a malicious old woman.

grime (grīm), n. [< L.G.: cf. Flem. grijm, soot], dirt deeply ingrained, or rubbed in; soot:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. grimed (grīmd), p.pr. griming], to soil or make dirty; besmear.

Grimm's law (grĭmz), [< Jacob Grimm (1785–1863), Ger. philologist], Philol., a statement of a set of observed sound changes, in accordance with which a given consonant in the Indo-European form of a word appears in the Teutonic form of the same word, if such exist, shifted in a fairly regular way, as shown in the following table:

Indo-European	k	t	p		g	d	b	gh dh bh
Teutonic	h	th	f		k	t	p	g d b

In German, these sounds appear with a further shift:

High German	h	d	f		ch	z	pf	k	p k	sz	f	g	t b
						ss

NOTE.—The Indo-European consonants are generally preserved in Sanskrit, and in many words in Latin and Greek. The Teutonic consonants are often preserved in English. The operation of Grimm's law is illustrated by the following examples: Gk. kardia, Eng. heart.—Lat. tres, Eng. three (Ger. drei).—Lat. pater, Eng. father.—Lat. ager, Eng. acre.—Lat. decem, Eng. ten (Ger. zehn).—Gk. bursē, Eng. purse.—Lat. hostis (< Indo-European ghost-), Eng. guest.—Sans.

ūdhar, Gk. outhar, Eng. udder.—Sans. bhratr, Lat. frater, Eng. brother.

grim-y (grīm'ī), adj. [comp. -ier, superl. -iest], [see grime], much soiled; with dirt ground in.—adv. grim'i-ly.—n. grim'i-ness.

grin (grin), n. [< A.S. grennian, to show the teeth], the act of showing the teeth in laughter, scorn, pain, etc.; a broad smile:—v.i. [p.t. and p.p. grinned (grind), p.pr. grinning], to show the teeth in laughter, scorn, or pain:—v.t. to express by smiling in such a way as to show the teeth; as, he grinned his pleasure.

grind (grīnd), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. ground (ground), Archaic and Rare, grinded, p.pr. grinding], [< A.S. grindan, to grind], 1, to reduce to powder by crushing or friction; as, to grind wheat into flour; 2, to wear away by friction so as to sharpen or smooth; as, to grind an ax; 3, to grate or rub together, as the teeth; 4, to oppress; harass; crush by imposing hard conditions, especially of a military, political, or economic power or authority; 5, to turn the crank of, as a coffee mill or hand organ:—v.i. 1, to sharpen, pulverize, or polish by crushing or abrasion; 2, to be grated or rubbed together: Colloq. or Slang, to study hard:—n. 1, the act of sharpening, polishing, or making into powder; 2, a grating or rubbing together; 3, the turning of a crank; 4, hard study, as for an examination; laborious and tedious work; 5, wearisome routine; as, the daily grind: Slang, a laborious student.—n. grind'er-y.

grind-er (grīn'dẽr), n. 1, that which sharpens or makes into powder, as an emery wheel or a millstone; 2, a molar tooth; 3, a person who turns the crank of a machine, wheel, etc.; as, an organ grinder: Colloq., a laborious student; a grind.

grind-stone (grīnd'stōn"), n. [grind+stone], a flat, circular stone mounted so that it can be rotated, as for sharpening tools: Obs., a millstone.

grin-go (gring'gō), n. [pl. -gos (-gōz)], [Amer.Sp.: source uncertain], a foreigner: a term of contempt used by Mexicans and South Americans, particularly of natives of the United States.

grip (grip), n. [< A.S. gripe, grasp+gripa, a handful], 1, a firm grasp with the hand; the act of holding fast; 2, that by which anything is held firmly, as the handle of a tool; 3, a mechanical device for holding something; 4, a particular mode of grasping the hand: used as a secret means of recognition, as among Freemasons; 5, mental or physical mastery; as, he has a good grip on the situation: Pathol. (originally, in French slang, la grippe), an infectious, epidemic disease characterized by fever, muscular pains, acute inflammation of the nose, larynx, and bronchi; influenza: also written grippe: Colloq., a gripsack; valise:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. gripped (gript), p.pr. gripping], 1, to grasp or seize; 2, to hold the attention of:—v.i. to take fast hold.—n. grip'per.

gripe (grīp), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. griped (grīpt), p.pr. griping], [< A.S. grīpan, to seize < O.Teut. source], 1, to hold with closed fingers; grasp; clutch; hold tightly; 2, to cause pain in the bowels of; 3, to afflict; distress; cause anguish to; oppress; pinch: Colloq., to vex; irritate:—v.i. to cause colic pains: Archaic, to grasp; take hold:—n. 1, a clasping with the hand or arms; a twisting squeeze; 2, a sharp intestinal pain; 3, figuratively, distress; oppression; 4, something to be gripped; a handle, as of a bicycle: pl. colic.

grippe (grip), n. [< Fr. la grippe < gripper, to seize], influenza; a feverish cold. See grip, Pfd. S.

grip-sack (grip'sāk"), n. [grip+[1]sack], Colloq., in the United States, a traveler's valise, or large handbag: also called grip.

Gri-sel-da (grī-zĕl'dȧ; -sĕl'dȧ), n. [It.], in medieval romance, a heroine whose wifely virtue and patience stood the merciless tests of her husband: the subject of one of the tales in Boccaccio's "Decameron," and of Chaucer's "Clerk's Tale."

gri-sette (grī-zĕt'), n. [< Fr. gris, gray], 1, originally, in France, a gray woolen fabric much used by working-class women for dress material; 2, hence, a French working-class girl, especially one with free and easy manners or morals.

[1]gris-ly (griz'lī) adj. [comp. -lier, superl. -liest], [< A.S. grislīc, horrible < grīsan, to shudder], terrible; wild; hideous.—n. gris'li-ness.

Syn. grim, hideous, gruesome, ghastly, horrible.

[2]gris-ly (griz'lī), adj. [see grizzle], somewhat gray; mixed with gray. See griz'zly, Pfd. S.

grist (grist), n. [< A.S. grīst < grindan, to grind], 1, grain for grinding; also, ground grain: 2, the amount of grain ground at one time: 3, supply: U. S. Colloq., a quantity or number; a lot.

gris-tle (gris'l), n. [source uncertain], Anat., cartilage.—adj. gris'tly (gris'lī).

grist-mill (grist'mil"), n. [grist+[2]mill], a mill for grinding grain for individual customers.

grit (grit), n. [< A.S. grēot, sand], 1, rough, hard particles, as sand, etc.; 2, a hard, coarse-grained sandstone suitable for grindstones; 3, firmness of character; endurance; courage:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. gritted, p.pr. gritting], to grind or grate; as, to grit the teeth:—v.i. to give forth a grating sound.

grits (grits), n.pl. sometimes, especially in the South, used as sing. [< A.S. grytt(e), wheat grits], grain, as oats, wheat, or corn, hulled, and sometimes ground to a coarse meal: used as a breakfast food.

grit-ty (grit'ī), adj. [comp. -tier, superl. -tiest], [see grit], 1, containing, or like, sand; granular; 2, plucky; having courage.—n. grit'ti-ness.

griz-zle (griz'l), n. [< O.F. dim. of gris, gray], a mixture of white and black; gray color:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. grizzled (-ld), p.pr. grizzling], to cause to become gray:—v.i. to turn gray.—p.adj. griz'zled.

griz-zly (griz'lī), n. [pl. -zlies (-līz)], a large, fierce bear (Ursus horribilis) of the western mountains of North America: also called grizzly bear:—adj. [comp. -zlier, superl. -zliest], grayish; streaked with gray. Also, gris'ly.

groan (grōn), n. [< A.S. grānian, to lament], 1, a low, deep sound uttered in pain or sorrow; 2, a deep, rumbling sound expressive of disapprobation or ridicule; as, his speech was received with groans and hisses; 3, a low, dismal sound, as of the wind:—v.i. 1, to utter a deep sound of, or as of, pain or sorrow; lament; as, the very winds seem to groan; 2, to creak; as, the door groaned on its hinges; 3, to be oppressed, as by weight, injustice, etc.: with under or beneath:—v.t. to express in or by groans; as, he groaned out his wish.

groat (grōt; grôt), n. [< M.Du. groot, a great (coin)], 1, formerly, an English silver coin, in value four pence, or eight cents; 2, any trifling sum.

groats (grōts; grôts), n.pl. [< M.E. grotes < A.S. grot, atom], oats or wheat hulled and crushed.

gro-cer (grō'sẽr), n. [< O.Fr. grossier, one who sells in the gross < L.L. grossarius, wholesale dealer], one who sells groceries, as tea, flour, sugar, etc.

gro-cer-y (grō'sẽr-ī), n. [pl. -ies (-īz)], in the United States, a grocer's shop: pl. food supplies such as tea, coffee, sugar, spices, etc.

gro-ce-te-ri-a (grō'sē-tē'rī-ȧ), n. [groce(ry)+(cafe)teria], in the United States, a grocery store where the customers pick out what they want from the shelves and pay as they leave: a trade name.

grog (grŏg), n. [< grograne, cloak material of Admiral Vernon, who first had the rum served to his sailors diluted], an unsweetened mixture of spirits and water; spirituous liquor.

grog-ger-y (grŏg'ẽr-ī), n. [pl. -ies (-īz)], a drinking place of low character.

grog-gy (grŏg'ī), adj. [comp. -gier, superl. -giest], 1, tipsy; 2, moving with an unsteady gait; staggering as if dazed.—n. grog'gi-ness.

grog-ram (grŏg'rȧm), n. [< Fr. gros grain, large grain], a coarse fabric of silk or mohair, or of silk and mohair, often stiffened with gum: formerly called grogran.

grog-shop (grŏg'shŏp"), n. [grog+shop], a saloon; drinking place: dramshop.

groin (groin), n. [source uncertain], Anat., the lowest part of the abdominal wall near its junction with the thigh; Arch., the curved ridge made by the intersection of two arched ceilings or vaults:—v.t. to build so as to form such ridges; as, to groin a roof.

GROINS
a, a, groins

grom-met (grŏm'ĕt), n. [< O.F. gromette, a curb], 1, a kind of metal eyelet in cloth or leather; 2, a wad of rope, formerly used to hold a cannon ball in place: Naut., a ring formed of rope. Also, grum'met; grom'et.

[1]groom (grōōm), n. [perh. < O.Fr. gromet, servant], 1, a man or boy who has charge of horses; 2, any of several officers of a royal household: Archaic, a man of inferior station:—v.t. 1, to feed, curry, and brush, as a horse; 2, figuratively, to equip, prepare, or dress, especially in a smart or tidy way.

GROMMET

[2]groom (grōōm), n. [abbr. of bridegroom, q. v.], a man recently married, or about to be married.

grooms-man (grōōmz'mȧn), n. [pl. -men (-mĕn)] [[2]groom+man], one who attends a bridegroom; a best man.

groove (grōōv), n. [< Du. groeve, furrow], 1, a channel or furrow, especially as cut by a tool; 2, settled habit or routine:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. grooved (grōōvd), p.pr. grooving], to put a furrow in.

grope (grōp), v.i. [p.t. and p.p. groped (grōpt), p.pr. groping], [< A.S. grāpian, to grasp], to feel one's way with the hands, as in the dark; feel about blindly: often with for or after.—n. grop'er.

gros-beak (grōs'bēk"), n. [gross + beak], any of various large-beaked song birds, of different genera, related to the finches, as the cardinal grosbeak and the rose-breasted grosbeak.

gros-grain (grō'grān"), adj. [see grogram], having heavy cords, as certain silk fabrics:—n. a stout, durable, double-corded silk with little luster.

gross (grōs), adj. [comp. -er, superl. -est], [< Fr. gros, large], 1, bulky; thick; not transparent; 2, rude; indelicate; coarse; as, gross humor; 3, flagrant, shameful; as, gross errors; 4, heavy; sensual; corpulent; fat; repulsive; 5, dull; dense; witless: Com., including the total value, amount, or weight before any deductions are made; whole; total: opposite of net; as, gross income; gross profits: gross ton, a long ton, or 2,240 pounds: gross weight, total weight of goods as shipped or packed, with no deduction for tare (the weight of the container), waste, etc:—n. 1, twelve dozen; 2, entire amount: often with in; as, in the gross.—adv. gross'ly.—n. gross'ness.

Syn., glaring, sensual, vulgar, shameful, rough.

grot (grōt), n. [< Fr. grotte, grotto], Poet., a grotto or cavern; cave.

gro-tesque (grō-tēsk'), adj. [< Fr. crotesque < It. grottesca, antique work < grotta, an excavated chamber with mural paintings: see grotto], originally, of the antique style of grotto decoration; hence, fantastically formed; extravagant; whimsical; ridiculous:—n. whimsical ornamentation, figures, or scenery; something fantastic; the incongruous in art: with the.—adv. gro-tesque'ly.—n. gro-tesque'ness.

Syn., adj. bizarre, comical, absurd. (See fanciful.)

gro-tes-quer-y (grō-tēs'kēr-ĭ), n. [pl. -queries (-kēr-ĭz)], a whimsical or incongruous object, speech, or action; a fantastic performance or group of objects. Also, gro-tes'quer-ie.

grot-to (grŏt'ō), n. [pl. -toes; -tos (-ōz)], [< It. grotta, cave < Gk. kruptē, vault], a picturesque natural cave; an artificial cave, built as a shady retreat and ornamented in imitation of a natural cave.

grot-to-work (grŏt'ō-wûrk"), n. [grotto + work], ornamental rockwork decorating an artificial grotto or cave, or any similar decoration.

grouch (grouch), n. [source uncertain], Slang, 1, a fit of ill temper; as, he has a grouch on; 2, one who indulges in moods of ill temper:—v.i. to complain; feel surly.—adj. grouch'y.—n. grouch'i-ness.

1ground (ground), past tense and past participle of the verb grind: ground glass, glass the surface of which has been roughened by a sand blast, grinding, or the like, to destroy its transparency.

2ground (ground), n. [< A.S. grund, earth < O.Teut. source], 1, the earth or soil; 2, the surface of a floor or pavement; 3, land put to special use; as, hunting ground; territory; 4, distance or area on a surface; as, to gain ground; 5, foundation; cause or reason; original principle; as, the ground for a belief; 6, fundamental or preparatory part of an undertaking; as, to prepare the ground; 7, in painting, a first surface coat of neutral color; also, a neutral background or undecorated part: pl. 1, a country estate; lawns and gardens about a house; 2, dregs or sediment, as of coffee: Elec., in general, the earth when employed as a return conductor; also, the contact of a conductor with the earth; Mus., Obs., the plain song, or simple chant melody; the melody varied in different movements: ground bass, Mus., a phrase or theme in the bass staff constantly repeated to a varied melody:

GROUND WATER

a, porous layer; b, solid rock, which water cannot penetrate; c, d, wells; e, spring.

ground water, water in the ground; especially, water near the surface, which may flow into a well or spring:—v.t. 1, to fix firmly; establish; as, to ground a government on proper principles; 2, to place or run in or on the earth; as, to ground a vessel on the beach; 3, to teach the first principles to; as, to ground a pupil in Latin; 4, to base; cover with paint or plaster: Elec., to connect (part of a circuit) to the earth or other conductor completing the circuit; Sports, to touch (the ball) to the ground:—v.i. 1, to run upon land, or the bottom: said of vessels; 2, to alight; come to earth:—adj. 1, fundamental; 2, on or near the earth: as, ground floor.

ground cher-ry any of many plants of two genera (Physalis and Quincula) of the nightshade family (Solanaceæ), having rough or smooth much-branched stems, and bearing, inside a thin membranous calyx, a small, round, tomatolike fruit, edible in some species and poisonous in others.

ground-er (groun'dĕr), n. Baseball, a low-batted ball that bounds or rolls along the ground; Football, an uncompleted forward pass.

ground hack-ee a chipmunk: also called hackee; hacky; ground hacky.

ground hem-lock the yew, an evergreen shrub of the eastern United States.

ground hog the woodchuck (which see for illus.), a burrowing rodent akin to the beaver: Humorous, sausage: ground-hog day, Candlemas, or February 2: the day on which the ground hog is said to come out from his burrow, and, if he casts a shadow, to return, in the expectation of more cold weather.

ground-ing (ground'ĭng), n. thorough instruction in the elements of a study or art.

ground i-vy a creeping plant (Nepeta hederacea) of the mint family, with clusters of pale blue flowers in the axils of the roundish leaves.

ground-less (ground'lĕs), adj. without foundation; without reason.

ground-ling (ground'lĭng), n. 1, one who or that which lives on the earth or ground; 2, a fish that keeps at the bottom of the water; 3, formerly, a spectator who stood in the pit, or lowest part of the auditorium, of a theater; hence, one of the crowd; a person of inferior or unrefined tastes.

ground-nut (ground'nŭt"), n. [2*ground* + nut], 1, any of various plants having rootstocks with tuberous enlargements or seeds borne underground, as the peanut, the American wild bean, or the dwarf ginseng; 2, the edible tuber of such a plant.

ground pine a low, creeping, evergreen plant (genus Lycopodium), one of the club mosses, used in Christmas wreaths and decorations.

ground plan the floor plan of a building: opposite of elevation (see plan, illus.).

1ground-sel (ground'sĕl), n. [2*ground* + sill], a timber or beam used in a foundation; a doorsill. Also, ground'sill (-sĭl).

2ground-sel (ground'sĕl; Colloq. groun'sl), n. [< A.S. grundeswylige, groundsel, earlier gundæswelgiæ, perh. < gund, pus + swelgan, to swallow: from use of leaves for poultices], any of several weeds of the composite family, having yellow flowers.

ground swell a heavy rolling of the sea, caused by a storm or earthquake.

ground-work (ground'wûrk"), n. [2*ground* + work], foundation; basis; fundamentals.

group (grōōp), n. [< Fr. groupe < It. gruppo, knot; group], 1, a small crowd or assemblage; a cluster; as, a group of houses; 2, a collection of figures or objects forming an artistic whole; 3, a division of organisms with certain characteristics; 4, the chief division of a geological system; 5, an aggregation, or a unit, holding common views; as, in politics, a radical group: group psychology, Psych., the science which deals with the behavior of racial, political, or other groups:—v.t. and v.i. to form into a collection or class.

group-er (grōōp'ĕr), n. [< Port. garupa, a kind of fish], any of several fishes of warm seas.

1grouse (grous), n. [pl. grouse], [source uncertain], any of several rather large-bodied, dull colored, gallinaceous game birds of the northern hemisphere, generally having feathered legs, including the spruce partridge or Canada grouse, the ruffed and dusky grouse, the prairie and sage hens, the ptarmigan, and others: allied to the partridges and pheasants, and in certain species, as the ruffed grouse, locally called partridge or pheasant (see partridge, illus.).

2grouse (grous; grōōs), v.i. [p.t. and p.p. groused (groust; grōōst), p.pr. grousing], [source uncertain], Slang, to grumble in a good-natured way.

grout (grout), n. [< A.S. grūt, coarse meal], 1, thin mortar or cement mixed with gravel, used for foundations and joints of masonry; 2, a fine plaster for ceilings: pl. dregs; lees: Obs., coarse meal:—v.t. to surround or fill in with cement and gravel.

grout-y (grout'ĭ), adj. [slang origin], U. S. Colloq., cross; sulky; as, a grouty disposition.

grove (grōv), n. [< A.S. grāf, grove], a small wood; a group of trees without undergrowth.

grov-el (grŏv'l), v.i. [p.t. and p.p. -eled or -elled (grŏv'ld), p.pr. -eling or -elling], [< obs. adv. groveling < M.E. grofling, with the face downward < O.N. á grūfu, on the face], 1, to lie prone; be abject; move with the body flat on the ground; 2, to be mean or debased.—n. grov'el-er; grov'el-ler.

Syn. crawl, creep, cringe, fawn, sneak, wallow.

grow (grō), v.t. [p.t. grew (grōō), p.p. grown (grōn), p.pr. growing], [<A.S. growan, to grow <O.Teut. source], to produce by cultivation:—v.i. 1, to increase in size, strength, or maturity by natural organic development; as, some children grow rapidly; 2, to arise naturally; be produced by vegetation; as, moss grows in damp places; 3, to flourish; thrive; become larger; as, a well-tended business grows; 4, to become; change by degrees; as, grow quiet; grow up; 5, to gain in favor: with upon: as, the book grows upon one; 6, to adhere; as, to graw fast to the wall.—n. grow'er.

Syn. develop, expand, wax, enlarge, augment.

growl (groul), n. [prob. imit.], 1, a deep, angry snarl or guttural noise, such as is made by a dog or other animal; 2, an angry, inarticulate complaint:—v.i. 1, to snarl like a dog; 2, to find fault in a surly tone:—v.t. to mutter in an angry manner.

growl-er (groul'ẽr), n. one who or that which growls: U. S. Slang, formerly, a can used to carry beer bought at retail.

grown (grōn), past participle of the irregular verb grow: grown up, of adult years; mature: grown-ups, n.pl. adults.

growth (grōth), n. [see grow], 1, the progressive increase of animal or vegetable bodies; 2, advancement; increase; 3, that which is produced; result: Pathol., a formation of unhealthy tissue, as a tumor.

grub (grŭb), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. grubbed (grŭbd), p.pr. grubbing], [<M.E. grubben, to dig <O.Teut. source], to dig up, as earth; root out of the ground, as stumps: Slang, to provide with food:—v.i. 1, to dig in the earth, especially with a grubbing hoe, or mattock; rummage; 2, to drudge or toil; perform laborious research: Slang, to eat; as, we grubbed in a certain tent;—n. 1, the larva or egg of an insect; 2, a slovenly or dirty person; 3, a drudge: Slang, food.

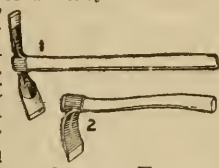
grub-ber (grŭb'ẽr), n. one who or that which digs; especially, a machine or tool that works like an ax in digging up roots, stumps, etc.

grub-bing hoe a mattock, an implement consisting of a heavy metal head with a blade for digging into the ground, attached to a strong wooden handle.



GRUBBING HOES
1, garden mattock; 2, half mattock.

grub-by (grŭb'i), adj. 1, infested, as cattle, with the larvæ of certain insects, especially of the botfly or warble fly; 2, dirty; untidy.

grub-stake (grŭb'stāk"), v.t. [grub + stake], Slang, in the United States, to furnish (a prospector) with supplies, usually on condition of sharing in his discoveries:—n. such supplies.

Grub-street (grŭb'strēt"), n. [<Grub Street in London, formerly the home of struggling authors: now Milton Street], 1, the class of needy or inferior authors; literary hacks; 2, a district where they live: grubstreet, adj. pertaining to struggling writers or inferior literary work. Also, Grub Street.

grudge (grŭj), n. [<obs. grutch <O.F. groucier, to murmur], secret malice or ill will based on past offense or grievance:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. grudged (grŭjd), p.pr. grudging], to envy the ownership of; grant reluctantly; begrudge.—adv. grudg'ing-ly.

Syn., n. aversion, hatred, resentment. (See malice.)

gru-el (grōō'ẽl), n. [O.F. <L.L. grutellum, dim. of grutum, meal <O.L.G. grūt, meal], thin porridge; a semiliquid food for invalids, made by boiling meal or flour in water or milk; used also as a breakfast food:—v.t. Slang, to exhaust: usually in present participle; as, a grueling contest.

grue-some (grōō'sŭm), adj. [<obs. grue, to shudder <Da. gru, horror], horrible of aspect; inspiring gloom or horror; frightful. Also, grew'some.—adv. grue'some-ly.—n. grue'some-ness.

Syn. ghastly, hideous, repulsive, dismal, frightful.

gruff (grŭf), adj. [<Du. grof, coarse], rough or surly; harsh; hoarse.—adv. gruff'ly.—n. gruff'ness.

Syn. rugged, bluff, harsh, rude, disagreeable.

grum-ble (grŭm'bl), n. [<Fr. grommeler, to grumble <O.Teut. source], 1, a surly speech; a faint growl; a rumble; 2, a complaint:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. grumbled (grŭm'bld), p.pr. grumbling], to utter complainingly:—v.i. to find fault; murmur discontentedly; growl.—n. grum'bler.—adv. grum'bling-ly.

grum-met (grŭm'ẽt), n. [see grommet], a metal eyelet: Naut., a ring of rope. Also, grom'et. See grom'met, Pfd. S.

grump-y (grŭm'pi), adj. [comp. -ier, superl. -iest], [<obs. grump, offense], surly; cross; dissatisfied.—adv. grump'i-ly.—n. grump'i-ness.

Grun-dy, Mrs. (grŭn'di), n. a prudish character continually referred to in an old comedy, Morton's "Speed the Plough" (1798), now symbolical of those who insist upon the strict proprieties.

Grun-dy-ism (grŭn'di-izm), n. [<Mrs. Grundy], prudery; narrow and unintelligent conventionality, based on a fear of what people will say.

grunt (grunt), v.t. [<A.S. grunettan <grunian, to grunt], to utter with a guttural sound:—v.i. to make a gruff, guttural sound like that of a hog:—n. 1, the guttural noise of a hog; any similar sound; 2, any of various edible American marine fishes.—n. grunt'er.

gryf-fon (grif'ŭn), n. [see griffin], Obs., a fabulous monster. See grif'fin, Pfd. S.

G. S. abbr. 1, General Secretary; 2, Grand Scribe; 3, Grand Secretary; 4, General Service; 5, General Staff:—gt. [pl. gtt.], [Lat. gutta], drop.

guai-a-cum (gwī'a-kŭm; gwä'ä-kŭm), n. [<Sp. guayaco, Haitian name of tree], 1, Bot., any of a genus (Guaiacum) of tropical American trees and shrubs with very hard brownish green wood, especially the lignum-vitæ (G. officinale); 2, the resin of such a tree, used in medicine; 3, the wood of the lignum-vitæ. Also, gui'a-cum; gui'ac.

gua-na (gwä'nä), n. [corr. of iguana, q.v.], any of various large lizards found in tropical America, Australia, New Zealand, etc.

gua-na-co (gwä-nä'kō), n. [pl. -cos (-kōz)], [<nat. huanaco, llama], a large South American ruminant (Lama huanacos) of the camel family, with reddish brown wool.

GUANACO

gua-no (gwä'nō), n. [pl. -nos (-nōz)], [Sp. <Peruv. huanu], 1, the solidified excrement of sea fowls, found in large deposits at nesting places on certain African and Peruvian islands, and valued as a fertilizer; 2, any similar manure.

guar-an-tee (gär"ăn-tē'), n. [see guaranty], 1, anything that insures or assures the occurrence of a given event, the performance of an act, the maintenance of a condition, etc.; 2, a solemn statement that something is as represented, will turn out in a stated way, or the like; as, he gave his guarantee that the stuff was all wool: Law, 1, an agreement, made by a person called the guarantor, to a person called the guarantee, to answer for the debt, default, or miscarriage of a third person: also spelled guaranty; 2, property pledged as security for the performance of such an agreement: also spelled guaranty; 3, [<Sp. garante, a warrant], one who agrees to insure the performance of another's promises; the guarantor; 4, one who accepts a promise or pledge from a guarantor that a third person will fulfil a given agreement:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -teed (-tēd'), p.pr. -teeing], to make sure of, as a result; aver; undertake to bring about: with that and a clause: Law, 1, to undertake (that another shall perform a certain stipulation or agreement); warrant; 2, to be responsible for; secure against loss or damage.

guar-an-tor (gär'ăn-tôr"), n. Law, one who contracts to be answerable for the performance of another's obligations or promises.

guar-an-ty (gär'ăn-tī), n. [pl. -ties (-tiz)], [<A.F. guarantie <guarant, a warrant], Law, 1, an assumption of responsibility for the payment of another's debt, or for the performance of some obligation by another; 2, property pledged as security for the performance of an agreement; surety; 3, an agreement by which one person, nation, etc., undertakes to make another secure in some possession, privilege, or the like:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -tied (-tid), p.pr. -tying], 1, to warrant; insure; 2, to be responsible for (another's performance of an obligation). Also, guar'an-tee'.

guard (gärd), v.t. [<O.F. garder, to keep <O.L.G. wardōn, to watch], 1, to watch over or protect; preserve by caution; shield or defend; 2, to prevent from escaping; 3, to protect or cover, as parts of machinery that may be broken or do injury to persons touching them:—v.i. to watch; be cautious: with against:—n. 1, security or defense against injury or attack; 2, a state of watchfulness or caution: as, be on guard; 3, a position or attitude of defense, as in fencing; 4, any contrivance or device for security; as, a mud guard; a guard on a sword hilt; 5, a man or body of men, as soldiers, employed for defense; as, the Coldstream Guards; 6, in England, an official in charge of a train; a conductor; 7, in football, one of two players in the line, stationed one on each side of the center.

Syn., v. protect, shelter, shield. (See defend.)

guard-ant (gär'dănt), adj. Her., looking toward the observer. See gar'dant, Pfd. S.

guard-ed (gärd'ĕd), p.adj. 1, defended; 2, careful; cautious; circumspect: Obs., ornamented.—adv. guard'ed-ly.—n. guard'ed-ness.

guard-house (gärd'hous"), n. [guard+house], 1, a house occupied by guards, as police or soldiers; 2, a jail for military prisoners.

guard-i-an (gär'dĭ-ăn), n. [see guard], 1, one who legally has the care of the person or property of another; 2, one who or that which sustains or protects anything, as against hostile attack:—adj. protecting; as, a guardian angel.—n. guard'i-an-ship".

guard rail 1, a handrail or bar placed where there is danger of falling, as on a boat; 2, a safety rail or beam laid parallel to railway tracks to help keep the wheels in position at dangerous points.

guard-room (gärd'rōōm"), n. [guard+room], 1, the room occupied by a military guard while on duty; 2, a place of imprisonment.

guard ship 1, a warship stationed at a port or harbor for the latter's protection; 2, a ship of a squadron doing guard duty.

guards-man (gärdz'măn), n. [pl. -men (-mĕn)], [guard+man], 1, a man employed as a guard; 2, an officer or soldier of any military body employed for defense; 3, an officer or soldier of any one of the British regiments known as the Guards.

gua-va (gwä'vä), n. [<Sp. guayaba<nat. name], a tree (Psidium guayaba) of South America, bearing a pear-shaped fruit used for jelly; also, the fruit.

gu-ber-na-to-ri-al (gū"bĕr-nā-tō'rĭ-ăl), adj. [<Lat. gubernator, governor], pertaining to a governor or to his office.

[1]gud-geon (gŭj'ŭn), n. [<Fr. goujon<Lat. gobio<Gr. kōbios, a gudgeon (fish)], 1, a small, European fresh-water carp (Gobio gobio), easily caught and used as bait; 2, a person who is easily imposed upon; a simpleton; 3, anything easily secured.

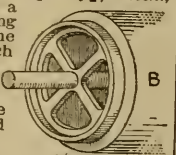
[2]gud-geon (gŭj'ŭn), n. [<M.E. gojone<O.F. gousjon, gudgeon, pin of a pulley], Mech., 1, an iron pin or shaft on which a wheel revolves; 2, a socket or ring receiving a pin that turns, as the ring or eye of a hinge, into which the pin fits; a ring on the stern-post of a boat, forming a socket on which the rudder works, etc.; 3, a metal piece fitted into the end of a wooden shaft or roller and turning in a bearing.



GUDGEON
A, gudgeon; B, shaft.

Gud-run (gōōd'rōōn), n. [M.H.G.], Norse Myth., 1, a self-sacrificing Valkyrie, wife of Helgi the Volsung; 2, in the Volsunga Saga, daughter of the king of the Nibelungs and wife of Sigurd, whom she took away from her rival Brunhild by a magic drink: later, wife of the Hun king, Atli (Attila): nearly identified with Kriemhild in the Nibelungenlied; Teut. Myth., the heroine of a Middle High German epic, who is carried off to Normandy, and rescued after many years by her lover and her brother.

Guelph (gwĕlf), n. [<It. Guelfo<M.H.G. Welf, name of founder of family], 1, in medieval Italy, a member of the popular, papal party, one of the two great political factions: opposed to the aristocratic, imperial party of the Ghibellines; 2, a member of a German princely family from which the present reigning house (Windsor) of England is descended; identified, through joint opposition to the Hohenstaufen emperors, with the papal party in Italy. Also, Guelf.—adj. Guelph'ic; Guelf'ic.

guer-don (gûr'dŭn), n. [O.F.<L.L. widerdonum<O.H.G. wider, against+Lat. donum, gift: adapted<O.H.G. widarlōn, a recompense], a reward given for deeds of courage or high merit.

Guern-sey (gûrn'zĭ), adj. [<name of island], designating a breed of dairy cattle from Guernsey, one of the Channel Islands:—n. an animal of this breed: guernsey, a thick, knitted woolen shirt.

guer-ril-la (gĕ-rĭl'ä), n. [Sp., dim. of guerra, war], one of an irregular force engaged in harassing an enemy in small bands:—adj. 1, consisting of men engaged in irregular warfare; 2, carrying on irregular warfare. Also, gue-ril'la.

guess (gĕs), v.t. [<M.E. gessen<Scand. source], 1, to conjecture; judge of at random; as, to guess the height of a building; 2, to solve by conjecture; as, to guess a riddle: Colloq., to believe or think; as, I guess that you are right:—v.i. to form an opinion without sound reason for it:—n. 1, a hasty or chance conclusion; a surmise: an opinion formed at random, or without real evidence; 2, the act of forming such an opinion.

guess-work (gĕs'wûrk"), n. [guess+work], 1, work performed by a random method; 2, the practice of conjecturing; guesses collectively.

guest (gĕst), n. [<A.S. giest, guest<Aryan source], 1, one who is entertained at the house or table of another; a visitor; 2, a lodger or boarder at a hotel, inn, etc.: Biol., an animal, especially an insect, inhabiting or breeding in the nest of some other animal; Law, a traveler who lodges temporarily at a hotel or gets refreshments there: distinguished from boarder.

guf-faw (gŭ-fô'), n. [Sc.; imit.], a rude or loud burst of laughter.

gui-a-cum (gwĭ'ä-kŭm), n. [see guaiacum], 1, any of a genus (Guaiacum) of trees; 2, resin or wood from a guaiacum. See guai'a-cum, Pfd. S.

guid-ance (gīd'ăns), n. [see guide], the act of directing; direction; supervision.

guide (gīd), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. guided, p.pr. guiding], [<Fr. guider<O.F. guier, to guide], 1, to lead or direct in a path or course; 2, to influence; govern by counsel:—n. 1, one who leads or directs; a conductor; director; 2, that by which one directs his course; a guidebook; 3, a standard; means toward right action; as, conscience is a good guide: Mech., a means of controlling a tool or other device; Mil., a soldier who sets the pace and indicates route and position for his detail.—adj. guid'a-ble.—n. guid'er.

Syn., v. rule, conduct, manage, pilot, train, control.

guide-board (gīd'bōrd"), n. [guide+board], a board, usually placed where roads meet or cross, with directions for travelers; a guidepost.

guide-book (gīd'bŏŏk"), n. [guide+book], a book of information for travelers.

guide-post (gīd'pōst"), n. [guide+'post], a post which bears a guideboard.

guide rope a rope leading sidewise from another rope to direct its motion in lifting or pulling: Aëro, a rope hung from a balloon, which, by dragging on the ground, helps to control the altitude.

gui-don (gĭ'dŭn), n. [Fr.<It. guidone, perh.<guida, guide], Mil., a small standard for a single company of troops; also, the one who carries it.

guild (gĭld), n. [<A.S. gild, guild, payment (of fee)<gildan, to pay], an association for mutual aid in a common trade or pursuit; loosely, a society for a useful or charitable purpose. Also, gild.

guil-der (gĭl'dĕr), n. [see gulden], 1, formerly, a gold coin of the Netherlands; 2, a Dutch silver coin, worth 40 cents, adopted as the monetary unit; a florin: a gulden (which see).

guild-hall (gĭld'hôl"), n. [guild+hall], the meeting place of a medieval guild or association.

guile (gī), n. [O.F., prob.<O.Teut. source], deceit; cunning; duplicity; fraud; craftiness.

Syn. treachery, artfulness, trickery. (See deception.)

guile-ful (gīl'fŏŏl), adj. of a disposition to deceive; full of cunning or treachery; deceitful; treacherous.—adv. guile'ful-ly.—n. guile'ful-ness.

guile-less (gīl'lĕs), adj. free from guile; artless; innocent; frank; incapable of deceit.—adv. guile'less-ly.—n. guile'less-ness.

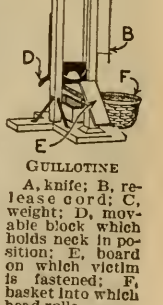
Syn. open, straightforward, honest, unsophisticated.

guil-le-mot (gĭl'ĕ-mŏt), n. [Fr.: prob.<Guillaume, Uria and Cepphus), expert swimming and diving sea birds, found in northern seas.

guil-lo-tine (gĭl'ō-tēn), n. [<Dr. Guillotin, who advocated it in 1789 in France as a humane method of execution], 1, an apparatus for beheading a person by means of the fall of a heavy knife sliding in two upright guides; 2, a paper-cutting machine: Surg., an instrument for cutting off the tonsils or the soft palate:—v.t. (gĭl'ō-tēn'), [p.t. and p.p. -tined (-tēnd'), p.pr. -tining], to behead with the guillotine.



GUILLOTINE
A, knife; B, release cord; C, weight; D, movable block which holds neck in position; E, board on which victim is fastened; F, basket into which head rolls.

guilt (gĭlt), n. [<A.S. gylt, guilt], the state of one who has committed a crime, or who is liable to a penalty; culpability; wrongdoing; the fact of violation of law.

guilt-less (gĭlt'lĕs), adj. 1, free from guilt; innocent; 2, without knowledge or experience: with of; as, guiltless of manners.—adv. guilt'less-ly.—n. guilt'less-ness.

guilt-y (gĭl'tĭ), adj. [comp. -ier, superl. -iest], 1, legally chargeable with, or responsible for, a crime; wicked; criminal; 2, conscious of, evincing, or burdened with, guilt; not innocent; as, a guilty conscience: Law, judged an offender against the law.—adv. guilt'i-ly.—n. guilt'i-ness.

Syn. culpable, blameworthy, sinful, delinquent, criminal, wicked.

guimpe (gămp; găngp), n. [Fr.], a light undergarment for the neck and shoulders.

guin-ea (gĭn'ĭ), n. [<Port. Guiné, Guinea], formerly, a British gold coin, of the value of 21 shillings, or about $5: first made for the African trade; now, a British monetary unit equal to 21 shillings: guinea fowl, a domesticated barnyard fowl (Numida meleagris), grayish blue with white spots, originally from Guinea: also called guinea and guinea hen: guinea pig, [perh. corr. of cony pig], a small, domesticated, tailless rodent, probably derived from a South American species (Caria porcellus) of cavy.

Guin-e-vere (gwĭn'ē-vēr), n. [M.E.], in the medieval Arthurian romances, the queen of King Arthur, whose guilty love for Lancelot brought destruction to the Round Table: told of especially in Malory's "Morte d'Arthur," and in Tennyson's "Idylls of the King." Also, Guin'e-ver (-vēr).

gui-pure (gē-pūr'; gē'pūr'), n. [Fr.], 1, an old-fashioned lace in which the corded pattern was held in place by connecting threads; 2, modern lace of large pattern made in imitation of the original; 3, a coarse thread for lace making.

guise (gīz), n. [Fr. < O.H.G. wīsa, a way], 1, external appearance; manner; garb; 2, semblance; false appearance; as, in the guise of friend.

guis-er (gīz'ẽr), n. Eng. Dial., a mummer; a person in disguise; a masquerader in odd costume.

gui-tar (gĭ-tär'), n. [<Sp. guitarra < Gk. kithara, zither], a six-stringed instrument, of the lute class, played with the thumb and fingers (for range see music).

GUITAR

gu-lar (gū'lẽr), adj. [<Lat. gula, throat], of, pertaining to, or situated upon, the throat; as, a bright gular spot.

gulch (gŭlch), n. [perh. < obs. gulch, to swallow], a narrow rocky valley; gully; gorge; ravine.

gul-den (gōōl'dĕn), n. [Du. and Ger. = golden], 1, the Dutch monetary unit, value 40.2 cents; also, a silver coin of this value; a guilder; 2, the Austrian florin: Obs., any of various Dutch and German coins. Also, guil'der.

gules (gūlz), n. [<O.F. goules, ermine dyed red], Her., red: indicated in black and white by parallel vertical lines (see heraldry, illus.).

gulf (gŭlf), n. [<Fr. golfe < late Gk. kolphos, a hollow], 1, an arm of the sea extending into the land, larger in size than a bay; 2, a deep place in the earth; an abyss; 3, a whirlpool; 4, an impassable chasm or separation.

Gulf Stream an important warm oceanic current flowing out from the Gulf of Mexico northeastward along the American coast and across the Atlantic, skirting the coast of Europe.

gulf-weed (gŭlf'wēd'), n. [gulf+weed], any of several coarse, floating seaweeds (genus Sargassum), with round air sacs, found in the Gulf Stream and among the West Indies.

[1]gull (gŭl), n. [perh. < W. gwylan, a gull], any of a large subfamily (Larinæ) of web-footed sea birds, white, gray, or marked with black, as the herring gull (Larus argentatus) (see colored illus. of birds, facing page 92); also, any of various allied sea birds, as the terns, skuas, and jaegers.

[2]gull (gŭl), v.t. [<obs. gull, to gorge], to cheat; impose upon; outwit:—n. 1, one easily deceived, as by a tale; a dupe; 2, a trick; a cheat.

gul-let (gŭl'ĕt), n. [<O.F. dim. of gole, throat], 1, the esophagus, or tube by which food and drink are carried from the mouth to the stomach (for illus. see mouth); loosely, the throat or neck; 2, any channel similarly shaped or serving a similar use.

gul-li-ble (gŭl'ĭ-bl), adj. [see [2]gull], capable of being easily deceived.—n. gul'li-bil'i-ty.

Gul-li-ver, Lem-u-el (gŭl'ĭ-vẽr), [source uncertain], the hero of four fantastical voyages, in "Gulliver's Travels," a satirical romance by Jonathan Swift (1667–1745).

gul-ly (gŭl'ĭ), n. [pl. -lies (-lz)], [prob. < O.F. gole, throat], a channel worn by water; narrow ravine:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -lied (-ĭd), p.pr. -lying], to make a channel or channels in by the action of water.

gulp (gŭlp), v.t. [imit.], 1, to swallow in large drafts, eagerly or hastily; 2, to suppress, as if by swallowing:—v.i. to catch the breath convulsively:—n. the act of swallowing in large drafts; also, as much as can be swallowed at once.—n. gulp'er.

[1]gum (gŭm), n. [<A.S. gōma, palate], the soft, fibrous tissue covering that part of the jawbones in which the teeth are embedded.

[2]gum (gŭm), n. [<O.F. gomme < Lat. gummi < Gk. kommi, gum], 1, a semitransparent vegetable substance, soluble in water, that exudes from certain trees and shrubs and hardens on the surface; as, gum arabic; 2, India rubber; 3, hardened oil; any viscid substance that has become sticky and tough; 4, in the United States, a preparation of some cohesive substance used for chewing; 5, a gum tree: pl. Colloq., overshoes:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. gummed (gŭmd), p.pr. gumming], to smear or fasten with mucilage:—v.i. to become stiff or sticky.—n. gum'mer.

gum am-mo-ni-ac a resinous aromatic gum produced from a certain Persian shrub, and used medicinally: also called ammoniac.

gum ar-a-bic either of two species of acacia, used as an adhesive, in medicine, and in candy making.

gum-bo (gŭm'bō), n. [Amer. Ind. or Negro origin], 1, a southern plant (Abelmoschus esculentus) of the mallow family, bearing edible pods; okra; 2, a soup containing okra; 3, in the western United States, a kind of prairie mud which becomes extremely sticky when wet; 4, a patois, or illiterate dialect, spoken by negroes and Creoles in the French West Indies.

gum-boil (gŭm'boil'), n. [[1]gum+[2]boil], a small abscess on the gums of the mouth.

gum-drop (gŭm'drŏp'), n. [[2]gum+drop], a candy made of vegetable gum or gelatin.

gum-my (gŭm'ĭ), adj. [comp. -mier, superl. -miest], [see [2]gum], like gum; covered or filled with a sticky substance; sticky.—n. gum'mi-ness.

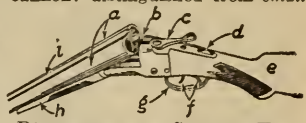
gump-tion (gŭmp'shŭn), n. [Sc.: source uncertain], Colloq., 1, common sense; quickness of perception; resourcefulness; 2, energy; zest.

gum res-in a dried mixture of gum and resin, from the sap of various trees and plants.

gum trag-a-canth a gum obtained from certain Asiatic or European trees (genus Astragalus): used as a stiffening agent in textiles and as a substitute for gum arabic in the manufacture of medicines, mucilage, etc.: also called tragacanth.

gum tree 1, the black gum tree (Nyssa sylratica), of the dogwood family, with fine-grained wood, gray bark, and oval leaves which turn deep red very early in the fall: also called sour gum and tupelo; 2, the sweet gum (Liquidambar styraciflua), a smaller tree of the witch-hazel family, having star-shaped leaves, winged projections of cork along the branches, globose, soft, spiny fruit, and weak spines.

gun (gŭn), n. [perh. < O.N. Gunna, pet name for Gunnhildr, name used for cannon], 1, a weapon consisting primarily of a tube through which missiles are discharged by an explosive, as a shotgun, rifle, pistol, or revolver; 2, any device resembling a gun; 3, the discharge of a gun as a salute or signal: Mil., a piece of ordnance; cannon: distinguished from small arms: Aëro., in an airplane, the throttle: gun carriage, a wheeled mount or support for a cannon:—v.i. [p.t. and p.p. gunned (gŭnd), p.pr., gunning], to shoot or hunt with a gun.



DOUBLE-BARRELED SHOTGUN, HAMMERLESS TYPE

a, barrels; b, breech; c, top lever, or locking device for fastening breech; d, safety lock; e, stock; f, triggers, one for each barrel; g, trigger guard; h, fore end; i, sight.

gun-boat (gŭn'bōt'), n. [gun+boat], an armed warship of small size.

gun-cot-ton (gŭn'kŏt'n), n. [gun+cotton], a substance highly explosive by percussion, made by treating cotton or similar vegetable fiber with nitric and sulphuric acids: forming, when dissolved in ether and alcohol, the collodion of commerce.

gun-fire (gŭn'fīr'), n. [gun+fire], the discharge of a gun or of guns.

gun-lock (gŭn'lŏk'), n. [gun+[2]lock], the mechanism of a gun by which a hammer is released and the charge exploded.

gun-man (gŭn'măn), n. [pl. -men (-mĕn)], [gun+man], a man armed with a gun; especially, one who uses a firearm unlawfully, as for assault.

gun met-al a variety of bronze, formerly used in making cannon, etc., but now supplanted by steel: gun-metal, adj. made of, or of the color of, this bronze; as, gun-metal silk stockings.

gun-nel (gŭn'ĕl), n. [see gunwale], the upper edge of the side of a vessel. Also, gun'wale. Pfd. S.

gun-ner (gŭn'ẽr), n. [see gun], 1, one who operates a gun; an artilleryman; an officer in the navy who has charge of the ordnance or military supplies; 2, one who hunts game with a gun.

gun-ner-y (gŭn'ĕr-ĭ), n. the science of artillery, or of the making and using of weapons.

gun-ning (gŭn'ĭng), n. the hunting of game, especially small game, with a gun.

gun-ny (gŭn'ĭ), n. [pl. -nies (-ĭz)], [< Hind. < Sans. gōnī, sack], 1, a strong, coarse sackcloth made of jute or hemp fiber, used in wrapping bales; 2, a bag made of gunny: also called gunny sack.

gun pit an excavation in which artillery is placed for concealment from enemy observation.

gun-pow-der (gŭn'pou″dĕr), n. [gun + powder], 1, an explosive substance composed of sulphur, charcoal, and saltpeter, ground together and granulated; 2, a kind of fine green tea.

gun room a room in a war vessel for junior officers, or used as a junior officers' mess room.

gun-shot (gŭn'shŏt″), n. [gun + ²*shot*], the range of a gun:—adj. made by a gun, as a wound.

gun-smith (gŭn'smĭth″), n. [gun + smith], an armorer; one who repairs firearms.

gun-stock (gŭn'stŏk″), n. [gun + stock], the wooden part of a firearm, mounting the barrel.

Gun-ter's chain (gŭn'tĕrz), [< proper name], a surveyor's chain, invented by E. G. Gunter (1581–1626), British astronomer, 66 feet long, and divided into 100 links, each 7.92 inches long.

Gun-ther (gōōn'tĕr), n. [M.H.G.], in the "Nibelungenlied," a king of Burgundy, the husband of Brunhild and brother of Kriemhild.

gun-wale (gŭn'ĕl; formally, -wāl), n. [gun + ¹*wale*: guns originally were supported on it], the upper edge of the side of a ship. Also, gun'nel.

gup-py (gŭp'ĭ), n. [pl. -pies -ĭz], [< Lechmere Guppy], a fresh-water fish (Lebistes reticulatus) about 1½ inches long, remarkable for the varied and brilliant coloration of the males.

gur-gle (gûr'gl), n. [imit.], a broken, bubbling sound, as of water flowing among pebbles:—v.i. [p.t. and p.p. gurgled (-gld), p.pr. gurgling], to make a murmuring, bubbling sound.

gur-nard (gûr'nărd), n. [prob. < Fr. grognard, grumbler], any of various marine fishes (family Triglidæ) with bony plates on an angular head.

gush (gŭsh), v.i. [< M.E. gosshe: perh. imit.], to issue forth voluminously and with violence; flow abundantly: Colloq., to display affection and enthusiasm in a silly, demonstrative manner:—v.t. to send forth, as a stream, suddenly and copiously:—n. 1, a sudden and violent flow of a liquid from an inclosed space; 2, an outburst, as of feelings: Colloq., a very great display of sentiment; affectation.

Syn., v. flow, pour, issue, emit, send forth, eject.

gush-er (gŭsh'ĕr), n. 1, one who makes a display of scntiment; 2, that which pours forth violently; 3, an oil well that has a large natural flow.

gush-ing (gŭsh'ĭng), p.adj. 1, flowing copiously; 2, sentimental; effusive.—adv. gush'ing-ly.

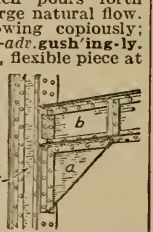
gus-set (gŭs'ĕt), n. [< O.F. gousset, flexible piece at joint in coat of mail < gousse, nut shell], 1, a small three-cornered piece inserted, as in a garment, to strengthen or enlarge a part; 2, Mech., a metal bracket for strengthening an angle of a construction.



GUSSET (def. 2)
a, gusset, as used to reënforce an angle; b, floor girder; c, column.

¹gust (gŭst), n. [< O.N. gustr, a gust], 1, a sudden rush of wind, often accompanied by rain or snow; 2, an outburst of passion.

²gust (gŭst), n. [< Lat. gustus, taste], Archaic, taste; relish.

gust-a-ble (gŭs'tȧ-bl), adj. 1, capable of being tasted; also, savory; appetizing; 2, gustatory:—n. a thing that can be tasted or eaten; an article of food.

gus-ta-to-ry (gŭs'tȧ-tō-rĭ), adj. pertaining to the sense of taste: gustatory nerve, Anat., one of the branches of the fifth pair of cranial nerves, carrying nervous impulses from the tongue.

gus-to (gŭs'tō), n. [It. < Lat. gustus, taste], zest; relish; fancy; enthusiasm: Archaic, flavor.

Syn. appetite, taste, liking, fondness, enjoyment.

gust-y ¹(gŭs'tĭ), adj. [comp. -ier, superl. -iest], [see ¹gust], characterized by sudden blasts of wind; stormy.—adv. gust'i-ly.

gut (gŭt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. gutted, p.pr. gutting], [< A.S. guttas, entrails], 1, to extract the entrails from; 2, to plunder; empty entirely; destroy the inside of; as, fire gutted the building:—n. 1, the intestinal canal; 2, catgut; intestines of animals prepared for violin strings, etc.; 3, the silken fiber taken from a silkworm about to spin, and drawn into a thread: used like catgut, especially in fishing tackle; 4, a narrow channel or strait: pl. 1, Vulgar, entrails; 2, Colloq., courage; spirit.

¹gut-ta (gŭt'ȧ), n. [pl. -tæ (-ē)], [Lat. = drop], Arch., a small, droplike or peglike ornamentation on a Doric entablature (see mutule, illus.).

²gut-ta (gŭt'ȧ), n., [< Malay getah, gum], a gum which forms the chief constituent of gutta-percha, extracted as a white amorphous compound.

gut-ta-per-cha (gŭt″ȧ-pûr'chȧ), n. [< Malay getah, gum + percha, name of tree], a grayish or yellowish substance, the dried juice of any of certain evergreen trees (family Sapodilla) of the Malay Archipelago and other tropical regions, extensively used in commerce; also, the tree.

gut-ter (gŭt'ĕr), n. [< O.F. gutiere < goutte < Lat. gutta, a drop], 1, a trough under the eaves of a building to carry off rain water; 2, a depression or channel at the roadside to carry off surface water; 3, any shallow trough or trench:—v.t. to cut into, or furnish with, narrow channels:—v.i. 1, to become channeled, as a flickering candle; 2, to stream or drop.

gut-ter-ing (gŭt'ĕr-ĭng), n. 1, a making into channels; 2, the act of running in streams or of falling in drops; 3, material for making narrow channels to carry off water; 4, gutters collectively.

gut-tur-al (gŭt'ûr-ăl), adj. [< Lat. guttur, throat], pertaining to, or formed in, the throat:—n. a sound formed or modified in the throat, as g in guttural.—v.t. gut'tur-al-ize.—adv. gut'tur-al-ly.

¹guy (gī), n. [< O.F. guis < guier, to guide], a rope, wire, etc., to hold steady a pole or the like:—v.t. to hold in place or keep steady with a guy, as a tent pole.

²guy (gī), n. [< Guy Fawkes], 1, in England, an effigy of Guy Fawkes, formerly burned on the anniversary of the Gunpowder Plot (November 5, 1605); 2, a person of queer looks or dress: Slang, in the United States, a fellow:—v.t. Colloq., to ridicule.

guz-zle (gŭz'l), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. guzzled (-ld), p.pr. guzzling], [perh. < O.F. gosiller, to vomit], to eat or drink greedily and to excess:—v.i. to drink or eat too much or too often.—n. guz'zler.

gybe (jīb), v.i. [p.t. and p.p. gybed (jībd), p.pr. gybing], [prob. < Du. gijben, to shift], 1, to shift or swing from one side of a vessel to the other, as a sail or boom, when the vessel is running before the wind; 2, to change course, as a vessel, so that the sail gybes:—v.t. to cause (a sail or boom) to gybe. Also, jibe.

Gy-ges (jī'jēz; gī'-), n. [Lat. < Gk. Gugēs], a king of Lydia (716–678 B.C.), fabled possessor of a ring able to produce invisibility.

gym-kha-na (jĭm-kä'nȧ), n. [prob. < Urdu gend-khāna, court for the game of rackets, literally a ball house: an Anglo-Indian word in imit. of gymnastic], a gathering for athletic games and races; also, a place with facilities for athletic sports.

gym-na-si-um (jĭm-nā'zĭ-ŭm), n. [pl. -ums (-ŭmz); -sia (-zĭ-ȧ)], [< Gk. gumnazein, to exercise < gumnos, naked], 1, a building for athletic exercises; 2, (Ger. gĭm-nä'zĭ-ōōm), in continental Europe, a preparatory school with courses about up to the end of the sophomore grade in an American college; 3, in ancient Greece, a place for athletic exercises, with baths, etc., and also with rooms for learned discussions.

gym-nast (jĭm'năst), n. one who practices, or is expert in, physical exercises.

gym-nas-tics (jĭm-năs'tĭks), n.pl. athletic exercises; the art of developing the physique by athletic exercises.—adj. gym-nas'tic.

gym-no-sperm (jĭm'nō-spûrm), n. [< Gk. gumnos, naked + sperma, seed], Bot., a plant having seeds naked, or not inclosed in an ovary, as in the conifers.—adj. gym″no-sper'mous.

gyn-æ-ce-um (jĭn″ĕ-sē'ŭm; jī″nē-), n. [pl. -cea (-sē'ȧ)], [Lat. < Gk. gunaikeion, gynæceum < gunē (gunaikos), woman + oikion, house], the women's part of an ancient Greek or Roman house: also, gynæcium: Bot., the female reproductive organs of a flower; the pistils collectively: preferably, gynœcium.

gyn-e-col-o-gy (jĭn″ĕ-kŏl'ŏ-jĭ; jī-nē″-kŏl'ŏjĭ), n. [< Gk. gunē (gunaikos), woman + -logia, a study], that branch of medical science which treats of the diseases of women. Also, gyn″æ-col'o-gy.

gy-nœ-ci-um (jĭ-nē'sĭ-ŭm; jī-), n. [pl. -cia (-sĭ-ȧ)], [see gynæceum], Bot., the female reproductive organs of a flower; the pistils collectively. Also, gyn″æ-ce'um; gy-ne'ci-um.

gyp (jĭp), n. [source uncertain], in England, at Cambridge and Durham universities, a college servant: U. S. Slang, a swindler:—v.t. and v.i. [p.t. and p.p. gypped (jĭpt), p.pr. gypping], Slang, to swindle; cheat.

gyp-sum (jĭp'sŭm), n. [Lat. < Gk. gupsos, chalk], hydrous calcium sulphate: found in a compact state as alabaster, crystallizing as selenite, and as a fine powder called plaster of Paris.

gyp-sy (jĭp'sĭ), n. [pl. -sies (-sĭz)], [< 16th-cent. gipcyan, for Egyptian, in allusion to supposed place of origin], 1, a member of a wandering, dark-skinned, and dark-eyed race, of Eastern, probably Hindu, origin; 2, the language of the gypsies; Romany; 3, a person of dark complexion; 4, an unconventional, adventurous girl: gypsy moth, a European moth (Porthetria dispar), introduced into eastern New England about 1869, and very destructive to tree foliage (for illus. see insect). Also, gip'sy.

gy-ral (jī'răl), adj. [see gyrate], rotary; moving in a whirling path or way.

gy-rate (jī'rāt'), v.i. [p.t. and p.p. gyrated, p.pr. gyrating], [< Lat. gyrare (-atus), to rotate < Gk. guros, a ring], to revolve about a point or axis; rotate:—adj. (jī'rāt), circular, spiral, or helical; gyral.—n. gy-ra'tion.—adj. gy'ra-to-ry.

gyre (jīr), n. [< Gk. guros, a ring], 1, a rotating motion; gyration; 2, a circular or spiral form; vortex.

gyr-fal-con (jûr'fô'kn; -fōl'kn), n. [see gerfalcon], any of various species of falcon inhabiting northern latitudes. Also, ger'fal'con.

gy-ro-com-pass (jī'rō-kŭm'păs), n. [< Gk. guros, a circle + compassi], a compass keeping its direction by using the principle of the gyroscope: also called gyrostatic compass.

gy-ron (jī'rŏn), n. [Fr. giron < O.H.G. gēr, a spear], Her., a triangular inferior bearing, having its apex at the fess point, or center of the shield, and its base at the edge (see heraldry, illus.).

gy-ro-scope (jī'rō-skōp), n. [< Gk. guros, a circle + skopein, to look], an instrument consisting of a flywheel capable of rotating about an axis which is arranged to move freely in one or more directions: used to illustrate the laws of rotation, and, practically, to stabilize cars, ships, airplanes, torpedoes, etc.—adj. gy'ro-scop'ic (-skŏp'ĭk).

GYROSCOPE

gy-ro-stat (jī'rō-stăt), n. [< Gk. guros, circle + statikos, steadying], an adaptation of the gyroscope, used to demonstrate the dynamics of rotating bodies.—adj. gy'ro-stat'ic.

gy-rus (jī'rŭs), n. [pl. -ri (-rī)], [Lat. < Gk. guros, a circle], Anat., a convolution, as of the brain.

gyve (jīv), n. [< M.E. gives, fetters; source uncertain], Poet., a fetter for the leg:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. gyved (jīvd), p.pr. gyving], to fetter or shackle.

H

H, h (āch), n. [pl. H's; Hs; h's; hs (āch'ĕz)], 1, the eighth letter of the English alphabet, or its sound (for certain uses, see alphabet, NOTE); 2, as a medieval Roman numeral, 200: Mus., a symbol used, especially in Germany, for the note B: H, Chem., the symbol [H] for the element hydrogen; Phys., a symbol for the intensity of a magnetic field.

h. abbr. 1, harbor; 2, hard; hardness; 3, height; high; 4, hour; 5, hundred; 6, husband:—ha., nectare:—h. a., horse artillery.

[1]ha (hä), interj. [source uncertain], exclamation expressing wonder, suspicion, mirth, joy, doubt, etc.

[2]ha (hä), n. [Arab. ha, hā], either the 6th or the 26th letter of the Arabic alphabet (see App. I), sounded as a rough aspirate, or a light aspirate (English h initial or final) respectively, as a numerical symbol, 8 or 5.

Ha-bak-kuk (hȧ-băk'ŭk; hăb'ȧ-kŭk), n. [< Heb.], Bib., 1, one of the Hebrew prophets; 2, a book recording his prophecies (see Bible, NOTE). Also, in the Douay Bible, Hab'a-euc.—abbr. Hab.

ha-be-as cor-pus (hā'bē-ăs kôr'pŭs), [Lat. = (that) you have the body], Law, a writ or order to produce a prisoner at a stated time, to determine the justice of his detention.

hab-er-dash-er (hăb'ĕr-dăsh'ĕr), n. [< obs. haberdash, small wares, prob. < A.F. hapertas, hat material], 1, one who deals in ribbons, laces, tapes, needles, etc.; 2, in the United States, one who deals in men's furnishings, as neckwear, hats, etc.

hab-er-dash-er-y (hăb'ĕr-dăsh'ĕr-ĭ), n. 1, small supplies, such as laces, ribbons, needles, etc.; 2, men's furnishings; 3, a shop where such goods are sold.

hab-er-geon (hăb'ĕr-jŭn; hȧ-bûr'jŭn), n. [< Fr. haubergeon < O.F. hauberc, hauberk: see hauberk], a piece of armor for the neck and shoulders; later, a hauberk.

HABERGEON ON MOUNTED KNIGHT

A, A, A, habergeon of chain mail; B, detail showing construction of chain armor; C, leather jacket worn over habergeon; D, helmet.

ha-bil-i-ment (hȧ-bĭl'ĭ-mĕnt), n. [< O.F. habillement < habiller, to fit out], an article of clothing: pl. dress in general.

hab-it (hăb'ĭt), n. [< Lat. habitus, condition, dress < habēre, to have], 1, Archaic, dress or clothing; 2, a woman's riding costume; 3, the distinctive dress worn by members of a religious order; 4, usual physical or mental condition; 5, an action so often repeated as to become a fixed characteristic or tendency; the characteristic or tendency so developed; 6, a pathological or physiological addiction; as, the drug habit:—v.t. to dress; clothe; attire: Archaic, to live in; inhabit.

Syn., n. custom, routine, practice, fashion, use, wont. Custom has its origin in the continued choice to keep on doing what has been done before. Habit is custom become so regular that it is automatic; so ingrained that it is spontaneous. Custom applies to groups of persons; habit, to the individual. It is an American custom to eat fruit for breakfast. We speak of the habit of smoking. Routine consists of the unvarying, mechanical performance of certain acts. Practice, like custom, stresses the actual repetition of an act rather than, like habit, the inclination to repeat it; but practice presents the act itself more vividly than custom; as, the practice of early morning exercising.

hab-it-a-ble (hăb'ĭt-ȧ-bl), adj. [< Lat. habitare, to dwell], fit to live in comfortably.

hab-it-an-cy (hăb'ĭt-ăn-sĭ), n. 1, residence; inhabitancy; 2, population; inhabitants.

hab-it-ant (hăb'ĭ-tănt), n. 1, a dweller; a permanent resident; 2, (ȧ"bē"tăN'), in Canada or Louisiana, a farmer of French descent.

hab-i-tat (hăb'ĭ-tăt), n. [Lat. = it dwells], 1, the natural abode of an animal or plant; 2, the place where a person or thing is usually found.

hab-i-ta-tion (hăb"ĭ-tā'shŭn), n. [see habitable], 1, a dwelling; 2, the act of inhabiting.

ha-bit-u-al (hȧ-bĭt'ū-ăl), adj. [see habit], 1, resulting from, or acquired by, frequent use or custom; 2, customary; usual; regular; 3, given to a (specified) practice; as, a habitual coffee drinker.—adv. ha-bit'u-al-ly.—n. ha-bit'u-al-ness.

ha-bit-u-ate (hȧ-bĭt'ū-āt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -ated, p.pr. -ating], [< Lat. habituare (-atus) < habitus, condition], to familiarize by use or repetition; accustom.—n. ha-bit"u-a'tion.

hab-i-tude (hăb'ĭ-tūd), n. [< Lat. habitudo, form < habēre, to have], 1, customary manner or mode of procedure; 2, native character; usual relation; 3, habitual association or familiarity.

ha-bit-u-é (hȧ-bĭt'ū-ā'; ä"bē"tü-ā'), n. [Fr. = accustomed], one who frequently visits a place, as a club, race course, or theater.

ha-cien-da (ä-syĕn'dä; hä"sĭ-ĕn'dä), n. [Sp., orig. = employment < Lat. facienda, things to be done < facere, to do], in Spanish America, a landed estate, as a ranch or plantation, on which the owner lives; also, an establishment in the country for farming, mining, or stock raising.

[1]hack (hăk), v.t. [< A.S. haccian, to hack < O.Teut. source], 1, to cut in notches; cut unevenly in pieces; 2, to disfigure or mutilate by cutting, crushing, or the like; injure by cutting: Football, to kick on the shins:—v.i. to give a short, dry cough:—n. 1, a tool for cutting or notching, as a mattock; 2, a gash made by a sharp instrument: Colloq., a dry, broken cough: Football, a kick in the shins.

[2]hack (hăk), n. [abbr. of hackney, q.v.], 1, a horse that may be hired for all sorts of labor; also, a saddle or carriage horse; 2, a carriage which may be hired; 3, one who hires out his services for pay, especially in literary work; a drudge:—v.t. 1, to hire out, as a horse; 2, to wear out by frequent use; make trite or stale:—v.i. 1, to be offered for hire, as a horse or cab; 2, to hire oneself out as a literary drudge; 3, to ride or drive at an ordinary pace, keeping to the roads.

[3]hack (hăk), n. [<A.S. hæc, gate; grating], 1, a frame with slats or bars: variously used, as for drying fish or cheese, for holding food for cattle, etc.; 2, a row of bricks set out to dry after being molded; 3, a board from which hawks are fed.

hack-a-more (hăk'ă-mōr), n. [source uncertain], in the western United States, a rawhide halter: used chiefly for breaking horses.

hack-ber-ry (hăk'bĕr-ĭ), n. [pl. -berries (-ĭz)]. [prob. <Scand. <Da. hæggebær, hagberry], Bot., any of a genus (Celtis) of plants of the nettle family, especially an American tree (C. occidentalis) which bears small, sweet, red or dark purple berries: also called nettle tree and sugarberry.

hack-but (hăk'bŭt), n. [<O.F. haquebute, prob. <Du. haak, hook+bus, gun], an ancient type of hand firearm; harquebus. Also, Archaic, hag'but.

hack-ee (hăk'ē), n. [imit. of animal's cry], the chipmunk, or ground squirrel: also called ground hackee.

hack-ing (hăk'ĭng), adj. [see [1]hack], 1, cutting unevenly; 2, irritating and wearing: said of a cough:—n. 1, a system of grooves in a revolving disk, or lap, for holding abrasive powder used in cutting or polishing precious stones; 2, [see [3]hack], the stacking of bricks for drying.

GROUND HACKEE, OR CHIPMUNK

hack-le (hăk'l), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. hackled (-ld), p.pr. hackling], [<M.E. hechele, hackle<O. Teut. source], 1, to dress or comb, as flax or hemp; heckle or hatchel; 2, to tear; mangle in cutting:—n. 1, an implement with sharp spikes for cleansing flax or hemp: also called hatchel or heckle; 2, the raw flax or silk; 3, the neck plumage of a domestic fowl (see fowl, illus.); 4, one of the long feathers in the neck of a cock, used for making artificial flies; 5, an artificial feather fly made without wings, for angling.

hack-man (hăk'măn), n. [pl. -men (-mĕn)], [[2]hack+man], the driver of a public carriage.

hack-ma-tack (hăk'mă-tăk"), n. [<Amer. Ind.], Bot., the tamarack, or American larch (Larix laricina), a large deciduous, cone-bearing tree of the pine family, or its wood.

hack-ney (hăk'nĭ), v.t. [<O.F. haquenée, ambling horse], to wear out by constant use; hence, to make commonplace or trite:—adj. 1, let out for hire; 2, common or trite:—n. [pl. -neys (-nĭz)], 1, a breed of horses used chiefly for riding or driving; 2, a coach or hack for hire: Obs., 1, a horse or pony kept for hire; 2, a hired drudge; hence, a prostitute.

hack-ney coach in England, a licensed public vehicle kept for hire.

hack-neyed (hăk'nĭd), p.adj. 1, trite; worn out; vapid; 2, practiced; familiarized.

hack saw a close-toothed saw, having a narrow blade: used for cutting metal (see saw, illus.). Also, n. hack'saw".

had (hăd), past tense of the verb have: also used as an auxiliary in the past perfect tense.

had-dock (hăd'ŭk), n. [source uncertain], a North Atlantic sea fish (Melanogrammus æglefinus) of the cod family, valued as food.

Ha-des (hā'dēz), n. [<Gk. Haidēs, Pluto], Gk. Myth., 1, the abode or state of the dead; 2, the god of the underworld, a brother of Zeus and Poseidon: also called Pluto, and identical with the Roman Dis.

hadj (hăj), n. [<Arab. hajj, a pilgrimage], the journey to Mecca, required of every free Mohammedan at least once in his life, and taking place the twelfth month of the year.

hadj-i (hăj'ē), n. 1, a Mohammedan who has completed the journey to Mecca; 2, a title used before the name of a pilgrim returned from Mecca.

hæ-mal (hē'măl), adj. [<Gk. haima, blood], Anat., of or pertaining to the blood. Also, he'mal.

hæm-a-tite (hĕm'ă-tīt; hē'mă-), n. [see hematite], an important variety of iron ore: also called bloodstone. See hem'a-tite, Pfd. S.

hæ-mo-glo-bin (hē"mō-glō'bĭn), n. [<Gk. haima, blood+Lat. globulus, small globe], Anat. and Zoöl., the red coloring matter of the red blood corpuscles in vertebrates, having the property of combining with oxygen and carrying it in the circulation. Also, he"mo-glo'bin.

hæ-mo-phil-i-a (hē"mō-fĭl'ĭ-ă; hĕm"ō-), n. [hemo- (<Gk. haima, blood)+-philia (<Gk. philos, love)], Med., a tendency to prolonged bleeding from even a trifling wound, inherited by males through the mother. Also, he"mo-phil'i-a.

hæm-or-rhage (hĕm'ō-rĭj), n. [see hemorrhage], Pathol., any copious discharge of blood from a blood vessel. See hem'or-rhage, Pfd. S.

hæm-or-rhoids (hĕm'ō-roidz), n. pl. [see hemorrhoids], Pathol., painful swellings of the mucous membranes at the anus, or outer opening of the rectum, due to a varicose condition of the veins of that part: popularly called piles. Also, Archaic, em'er-ods. See hem'or-rhoids, Pfd. S.

haf-ni-um (hăf'nĭ-ŭm), n. [<Hafnia, Lat. name of Copenhagen], Chem., a rare element [symbol Hf], with properties similar to those of zirconium.

haft (hăft), n. [<A.S. hæft, handle<O.Teut. source], 1, a handle or hilt of a tool or knife; 2, a sword hilt:—v.t. 1, to furnish with a handle or hilt; 2, in Scotland, to fix firmly; settle.

[1]hag (hăg), n. [source uncertain], 1, a witch; 2, a crone; an ugly old woman; 3, a hagfish.

[2]hag (hăg), n. [Sc. = to cut: related to O.N. högg, a stroke], Sc. and Eng. Dial., 1, a hack; notch; 2, wood, cut or marked for cutting.

[3]hag (hăg), n. [related to O.N. högg, a ravine], Sc. and Eng. Dial., 1, a bog; 2, an especially firm spot in a bog; also, a spot that is especially soft.

Ha-gar (hā'gär), n. [Heb. = flight], Bib., the maid of Abraham's wife, Sarah, whom he took as concubine and who bore Ishmael (Gen. 16).

Ha-gen (hä'gĕn), n. [Ger.], in the "Nibelungenlied," the uncle and vassal of King Gunther, and the murderer of Siegfried.

hag-fish (hăg'fĭsh"), n. [[1]hag+fish], any of an order (Hyperotreta) of eel-like, jawless fishes, which destroy fish by boring into their bodies.

Hag-ga-i (hăg'ă-ī), n. [Heb.], 1, a Hebrew prophet who lived about 520 B. C.; 2, a book of the Old Testament in which his words are recorded. Also, in the Douay Bible, Ag-ge'us (ă-gē'ŭs).

hag-gard (hăg'ärd), adj. [source uncertain], 1, worn and anxious in appearance; gaunt; 2, untamed; specifically, a hawk caught in its adult plumage:—n. 1, a wild hawk; hence, 2, any untamed creature.—adv. hag'gard-ly.—n. hag'gard-ness.

Syn., adj. wasted, wan, wild-looking, gaunt, pale.

hag-gis (hăg'ĭs), n. [source uncertain], in Scotland and England, a dish made of the heart, liver, lungs, etc., of a sheep or calf, highly seasoned, mixed with oatmeal, and boiled in a sheep's stomach.

hag-gle (hăg'l), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. haggled (-ld), p.pr. haggling], [see [2]hag], to hack or cut unevenly; mangle; cut into small pieces; notch or cut in a rough way:—v.i. to dispute about trifles; higgle:—n. 1, the act of hacking; 2, a dispute about a trifle.

hag-i-ar-chy (hăg'ĭ-är"kĭ; hā'jĭ-), n. [pl. -chies (-kĭz)], [<Gk. hagios, sacred+arkhē, rule], a government by priests; a sacerdotal government.

Hag-i-og-ra-pha (hăg"ĭ-ŏg'rā-fă; hā"jĭ-), n. pl. [<Gk. hagios, sacred+graphein, to write], the last of the three great Jewish divisions of the Old Testament, containing books not in the Law or the Prophets; also, the books therein.

hag-i-og-ra-phy (hăg"ĭ-ŏg'rā-fĭ; hā"jĭ-), n. [pl. -phies (-fĭz)], a collection of biographies or lives of saints; also, the writing of the lives of saints: Obs., the Hagiographa.—adj. hag"i-o-graph'ic; hag"i-o-graph'i-cal.—n. hag"i-og'ra-pher.

hag-i-ol-o-gy (hăg"ĭ-ŏl'ō-jĭ; hā"jĭ-), n. [pl. -gies (-jĭz)], [<Gk. hagios, sacred+-logia, a study], 1, a catalog of saints; 2, a history of saints or of sacred literature; also, a work on the lives and legends of saints.—adj. hag"i-o-log'i-cal.—n. hag"i-ol'o-gist.

hag-rid-den (hăg'rĭd"n), adj. [[1]hag+ride], 1, ridden by a hag; hence, 2, harassed by illusions or nightmare; oppressed in mind.

Hague Tri-bu-nal (hāg), a permanent international court of arbitration, established at the Hague in 1899: now superseded by the Permanent Court of International Justice.

hah (hä), interj. [source uncertain], an exclamation expressing surprise, suspicion, wonder, etc. Also, ha.

ha-ha (hä'hä'), n. [Fr., perh. imit. of laughter], a hedge, fence, or wall, as of a garden, sunk in a ditch, so that it may not obstruct the view.

haik (hīk; hăk), n. [<Arab. hayk<hāk, to weave], an Arabian outer garment made of striped wool or cotton cloth. Also, haick.

hai-kwan (hī'kwän"), n. [Chin. = sea gate], in China, maritime duties upon imports.

[1]hail (hāl), n. [<A.S. hagol, hail<O.Teut. source], 1, small pellets of ice precipitated from the sky; 2, figuratively, anything falling abundantly and with great force; as, a hail of shrapnel:—v.t. to pour down forcibly; as, to hail bullets:—v.i. to pour down hail.

[2]hail (hāl), n. [<obs. adj. hail<O.N. heill, sound in health], a salutation; a hearty greeting:—v.t. chiefly Naut., to greet; salute; accost:—v.i. to call out greetings or the like; also, to be; come: with from; as, he hails from the East:—interj. an exclamation of greeting.

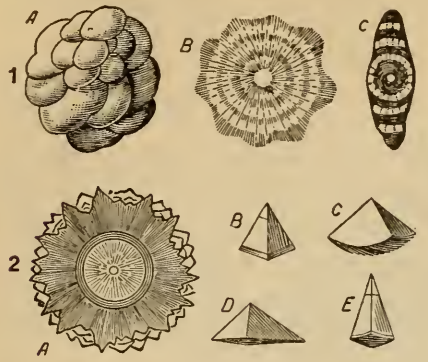
hail-stone (hāl′stōn″), n. [hail+stone], a small, roundish pellet of hail, or frozen rain, precipitated from the sky.



HAILSTONES

1: A, large hailstone, weighing over half an ounce; B, C, sections of hailstones. 2: A, section of hailstone with pyramids on surface; B, C, D, E, fragments of this hailstone, enlarged.

hair (hâr), n. [<A.S. hǣr<O.Teut. source], 1, one of the small filaments growing out of the skin of many animals; 2, a mass of such threadlike growths, or any part of it; 3, any outgrowth of a plant that is very tiny, delicate, or like a hair in character; also, minute fibers on the surface of plants; 4, the breadth of a hair.

hair-breadth (hâr′bredth″), n. [hair+breadth], the width of a hair; also, a minute distance: also, hair's breadth:—adj. very narrow.

hair-cloth (hâr′klôth″), n. [hair+cloth], a fabric made of camel's hair or horsehair with a cotton or linen warp: used to cover furniture.

hair-dress-er (hâr′drĕs″ẽr), n. [hair+dress], one, as a barber, who cuts or dresses hair.

hair line a very slender line: Print., a thin or narrow line on a type face (see type, illus.).

hair-pin (hâr′pĭn″), n. [hair+pin], a two-pronged pin of wire, celluloid, or the like, used to hold the hair or headdress in place.

hair-split-ting (hâr′split″ĭng), adj. [hair+split], making trivial or meticulous distinctions:—n. the act of making such distinctions.

hair-spring (hâr′spring″), n. [hair+spring], a very delicate spring used to regulate the balance wheel of a timepiece.

hair trig-ger a trigger of a gun so adjusted that a very slight pull discharges the gun.

hair-y (hâr′ĭ), adj. [comp. -ier, superl. -iest], [see hair], of, or like, hair; hirsute.—n. hair′i-ness.

Hai-ti-an (hā′tĭ-ăn), adj. [<Haiti, place name], pertaining to Haiti:—n. a native of Haiti.

hake (hāk), n. [source uncertain], any of a genus (Urophycis) of fishes of the cod family, especially the white hake (U. tenuis), preserved as boneless cod; also, any of various other fishes of the cod family.

ha-keem (hā-kēm′), n. [<Arab. hakīm, wise one], in India and Mohammedan countries, a sage or physician. Also, ha-kim′.

ha-ken-kreuz (hä′kĕn-kroits), n. [Ger.=hook cross], the swastika.

ha-kim (hä′kĭm), n. [<Arab. hākim], in India and Mohammedan countries, a ruler, governor, or judge.

ha-la-tion (hā-lā′shŭn), n. [see halo], Photog., in a negative, a spreading of the light beyond its proper limits, due to reflection from the back of the plate: in appearance somewhat like a halo.

hal-berd (hăl′bẽrd), n. [<O.F. halebarde <M.H.G. helmbarde <helm, helmet or handle+barta, broadax <O.Teut. source], an ancient weapon consisting of a battle-ax with a sharp edge or edges, attached to a long staff with a spearlike point. Also, hal′bert.

hal-berd-ier (hăl″bẽr-dēr′), n. a foot soldier armed with a halberd; later, a royal guard so equipped.

hal-cy-on (hăl′sĭ-ŭn), n. [<Gk. (h)alkuōn, kingfisher], a fabled bird, identified with the kingfisher, supposed to nest on a floating island at sea at the time of the winter solstice, and to bring calm weather; hence, the kingfisher: Zoöl., any of a genus (Halcyon) of Old World kingfishers, of Australia, Africa, parts of Asia, etc.:—adj. 1, pertaining to the kingfishers; 2, peaceful; happy; calm: halcyon days, the fourteen days around the winter solstice, when the halcyon, or kingfisher, was nesting at sea: so called because of the tradition that calm and peaceful weather always prevailed at that time; hence, a time of tranquillity.

HALBERDIER

Hal-cy-o-ne (hăl-sī′ō-nē), n. Gk. Myth., a daughter of Æolus who threw herself into the sea in grief for her drowned husband, both being changed by the gods into kingfishers.

[1]hale (hāl), adj. [<A.S. hāl, whole], sound in body; robust; hearty.

[2]hale (hāl), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. haled (hāld), p.pr. haling], [<O.F. haler<O.H.G. halōn, to fetch], to drag by violence; move (a person) by force.

half (hăf), n. [pl. halves (hăvz)], [<A.S. healf, half <O.Teut. source], one of two equal parts:—adj. 1, consisting of, or forming, a half; 2, partial; incomplete:—adv. 1, to the extent of a half; 2, partially: not half, Colloq., not at all; as, not half bad.

half-and-half (hăf′=ănd=hăf′), n. any of various mixtures of two substances combined in equal parts, as two malt liquors, usually ale and porter, for a beverage. Also, half and half.

half back in football, either of two of the players back of the scrimmage line.

half bind-ing a style of bookbinding, in which only the back and the corners are bound in leather (see three-quarter binding, illus.).

half blood 1, one whose parents are of different races; a half-breed: also, half-blood; 2, relationship between persons who have only one parent in common.—adj. half′-blood″ed.

half-boot (hăf′=bo͝ot″), n. a boot high enough to reach somewhat above the ankle.

half-bred (hăf′=brĕd″), adj. 1, having but one parent of a certain blood; not pure-blooded; 2, ill-bred; rude; uncivil.

half-breed (hăf′=brēd″), n. one whose parents are of different races; a half blood.

half broth-er a brother related through one common parent only.

half-caste (hăf′=kăst″), n. 1, a person of an East Indian parent on one side and of a European on the other; 2, a half-breed:—adj. 1, of mixed European and Asiatic blood; 2, half-blooded.

half cock the halfway position of a gun hammer, in which the trigger cannot be released.

half crown an English silver coin, worth 2½ shillings, or about 60 cents.

half-heart-ed (hăf′=härt″ĕd), adj. 1, lacking in interest or sincerity; 2, irresolute.—adv. half″-heart′ed-ly.—n. half″-heart′ed-ness.

half hitch a special kind of knot, used for a temporary fastening (see knot, illus.).

half-ling (hăf′lĭng; hăf′lin; hôf′-), adv. [half+-ling], Sc. Dial., by half; partly:—adj. partly grown:—n. 1, a lad; stripling; 2, a half-wit; 3, a silver halfpenny. Also, adv., half′lings.

half-mast (hăf′=măst″), n. the position of a flag hung below the top of the staff, as emblematic of mourning or as a signal of distress.

half-moon (hăf′=mo͞on″), n. the moon at the first or third quarter, when half its disk is seen; also, something shaped like a half-moon.

half note Mus., a note half as long as a whole note: also called minim (see App. I).

half-pen-ny (hā′pĕn-ĭ; hăf′pĕn″ĭ), n. [pl. half-pence (hā′pĕns; hăf′pĕns″), or -pennies (-pĕn-ĭz; -pĕn″ĭz), [half+penny], an English coin valued at half a penny: equivalent to a cent in U. S. money.

half sis-ter a sister related through only one common parent.

half step Mus., a semitone; Mil., in the U. S. army, a marching step of 15 inches.

half tone 1, in photo-engraving, a photographic process of making plates for illustrations, by which the lights and shadows are reproduced by fine dots or lines; 2, a picture so made; 3, an intermediate tone in painting or engraving: Mus., a semitone; half step: also, half-tone: half-tone, adj. designating, or pertaining to, the process of making half tones.

half-way (hăf′wā″; hăf″wā′), adj. [half+way], midway between two points or places; situated in the middle:—adv. 1, at half the distance; midway; 2, not entirely; partly; incompletely.

half-wit-ted (hăf′=wĭt″ĕd), adj. feeble-minded; idiotic; imbecile.—n. half′-wit″.

hal-i-but (hăl′ĭ-bŭt; hŏl′ĭ-bŭt), n. [prob.<M.E. hali, holy+butte, flatfish: so called because eaten on holy days], any of a subfamily (Hippoglassinæ) of flounders, especially the common halibut (Hippoglossus hippoglossus), of the North Atlantic, the largest of the flatfishes, and among the most highly valued of the larger food fishes.

hal-ide (hăl'īd; hăl'id; hā'līd; hā'lid), n. [< Gk. hals, salt], Chem., a compound formed by one of the halogens with any other element. Also, hal'id.

hal-i-dom (hăl'i-dŭm), n. [< A.S. hāligdōm, holiness], Archaic, 1, holiness; 2, anything holy or sacred, as an oath, a relic, a place, or the like.

hal-ite (hā'līt; hā'lit), n. [< Gk. hals, salt], Mineral., native sodium chloride; rock salt.

hal-i-to-sis (hăl"i-tō'sis), n. [see halitus], foul or unpleasant breath.

hal-i-tus (hăl'i-tŭs), n. [Lat. = breath < halare, to breathe], breath; vapor.

hall (hôl), n. [< A.S. heall, hall < O.Teut. source], 1, in early times, the main living room of a castle; 2, a large building or room for entertainments or the like; 3, a court of justice; 4, a university building, used for residence, instruction, or the like; 5, the passageway into a house; in a modern house, a vestibule; 6, in England, the public residence of a landed proprietor; a manor house; 7, an English college dining room or the dinner served there; 8, a lesser college, often unendowed, in an English university.

hal-lan (hăl'ăn; hŏl'-), n. [Sc., perh. < hall], Sc., a partition, especially between the door and the fireplace, to protect the occupants against drafts; also, the space between the door and the partition.

hal-le-lu-jah (hăl"ē-lōō'yà), n. [Heb. = praise ye Jehovah], 1, an exclamation or song of praise to God; 2, a musical composition with similar words of praise for its theme:—interj. an exclamation of praise to God:—adj. containing such praises. Also, al"le-lu'ia; al"le-lu'iah; hal"le-lu'iah.

hal-liard (hăl'yĕrd), n. [see halyard], a tackle for hoisting a sail, etc. See hal'yard, Pfd. S.

hall mark 1, the stamp used by Goldsmiths' Hall in London, and other assay offices, attesting the quality of gold and silver articles; 2, hence, any mark or proof of genuineness.

hal-lo (hă-lō'), interj. [see hollo], used in greeting a friend or in attracting his attention:—n. a greeting:—v.t. to shout loudly; pursue with shouts:—v.i. to call loudly. Also, hal-loa'. See hol'lo, Pfd. S.

hal-loo (hă-lōō'), interj. and n. a call to incite animals, or to attract the attention of persons:—v.t. to incite by shouting; shout to:—v.i. to shout a halloo. See hol'lo, Pfd. S.

hal-low (hăl"ō), v.t. [< A.S. hālgian, to make holy < hālig, holy < O.Teut. source], 1, to consecrate; sanctify; 2, to set apart, dedicate, or devote to the service or worship of God.

Syn. dedicate, consecrate, inscribe, address.

Hal-low-een (hăl"ō-ēn'), n. [hallow + even], the evening before All Saints' Day, or Allhallows; evening of October 31. Also, Hal"low-e'en'.

Hal-low-mas (hăl'ō-màs), n. [< A.S. (ealra) hālgena mæsse (dæg), (All) Saints' Mass (Day)], the church festival celebrated in honor of all saints and martyrs on November 1; Allhallows.

hal-lu-ci-na-tion (hă-lū"sĭ-nā'shŭn), n. [< Lat. hallucinari (-atus), to wander in mind], popularly, a false impression or a belief in something imaginary; a delusion; Psych., a perception of things, sounds, or other objects of sense, seemingly vivid and real, but not aroused by immediate sensory experience: usually pathological.—adj. hal-lu'ci-na-to-ry.

Syn. illusion, perception, impression. (See delusion.)

hall-way (hôl'wā"), n. [hall + way], an entrance hall or corridor in a building.

halm (hŏm), n. [see haulm], stalks or stems of grains, beans, peas, etc., collectively; also, the dry stalks of straw and hay. See haulm, Pfd. S.

hal-ma (hăl'mà), n. [Gk. = a leap], a game for two or four persons, each with nineteen or thirteen men, played on a checkered board of 256 squares: Gk. Antiq., a long jump, made with the help of weights.

ha-lo (hā'lō), n. [pl. -los; -loes (-lōz)], [< Gk. halōs, disk of sun or moon], 1, a luminous ring appearing to surround ice crystals or small drops of water floating in the atmosphere; 2, the ideal glory lent by the imagination to a person or object highly prized: Art, the bright ring represented in pictures as surrounding the heads of saints and other holy persons; nimbus:—v.t. to surround with a halo:—v.i. to form a halo.

hal-o-gen (hăl'ō-jĕn), n. [< Gk. hals, salt + -genēs producing], Chem., any of a group of elements, chlorine, bromine, iodine, and fluorine, which combine with hydrogen to form respectively hydrochloric, hydrobromic, hydriodic, and hydrofluoric acid.—adj. ha-log'e-nous.

hal-oid (hăl'oid; hā'loid), adj. [< Gk. hals, salt], Chem., resembling salt: said of a compound formed by the combination of a halogen with hydrogen or a base:—n. a haloid compound; a halide.

[1]halt (hôlt), n. [< A.S. healt, lame < O.Teut. source], a limp; lameness:—adj. crippled or lame:—v.i. 1, to limp; 2, to hesitate, as between two opinions; 3, to be illogical or defective, as in arguing.

[2]halt (hôlt), n. [< Ger. halt (machen), (to make) a stop], a stop in marching or progress:—v.i. to come to a stop; stand still:—v.t. to stop; bring to a stop.

hal-ter (hôl'tĕr), n. [A.S. hælfter, a thing to hold by], 1, a rope, usually with a headstall, for leading or holding an animal; 2, a rope or noose for hanging criminals; 3, hence, death by hanging:—v.t. 1, to secure with a halter; 2, to hang.

halve (hàv), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. halved (hàvd), p.pr. halving], [see half], 1, to divide into two equal parts; lessen to half; 2, to be or to form a half of; 3, to fasten together by notching and lapping, as timbers: Golf, to do (a hole) in the same number of strokes as one's opponent.

halves (hàvz), n. plural of the irregular noun half; as, the halves of an apple.

hal-yard (hăl'yĕrd), n. [< earlier hallyer < [2]hale, to draw], a tackle for hoisting and lowering a sail, yard, or flag. Also, hal'liard; haul'yard.

[1]ham (hăm), n. [< A.S. hamm, ham; inner part of knee], 1, the hinder part of the thigh; the thigh and buttock; 2, the thigh of an animal, especially a pig; 3, the region back of the knee joint.

[2]ham (hăm), n. [< A.S. hām, home], in Anglo-Saxon times, a home, house, or village; also, an estate or manor together with its dependents: still used as a suffix in compounds; as, Buck*ingham*.

[3]ham (hăm), n. [source uncertain], Slang, a poor actor; in telegraphy or broadcasting, an amateur.

Ham (hăm), n. [< Heb. = black], Bib., the second son of Noah (Gen. 10): according to tradition, the ancestor of the Hamitic races.

ham-a-dry-ad (hăm'à-drī"ăd), n. [pl. -ads (-ădz); -ades (-à-dēz)], [< Gk. hamadruas < hama, together with + drus, tree], Class. Myth., a wood nymph who lived and died in one particular tree.

ha-mal (hà-màl'; -môl'), n. [< Arab. hammāl, porter < hamala, to carry], a porter; especially, in India, a manservant. Also, ham-mal'; ha-maul'.

ham-a-me-lis (hăm"à-mē'lĭs), n. [Gk. = a medlar < hama, together with + mēlon, apple], 1, Bot., any of a genus (Hamamelis) of shrubs including the witch-hazel; 2, witch-hazel; an alcoholic extract of the shrub witch-hazel, used as a liniment.

Ha-man (hā'măn), n. [O.Pers. = magnificent], Bib., a minister to King Ahasuerus of Persia, and an enemy of the Jews, who plotted to hang his Jewish rival, Mordecai, but was himself hanged on the gallows he had constructed (Esther 3–7).

Ham-burg (hăm'bûrg; hăm'bōōrkh), n. [< Hamburg, Germany], 1, a variety of European black grape; 2, a breed of domestic fowl of various colors: Hamburg steak, finely ground beef seasoned and broiled or fried in small cakes.

hame (hām), n. [related to Du. haam, collar bar], one of two curved bars on a horse's collar, to which the traces are fastened (see harness, illus.).

Ham-ite (hăm'īt), n. [see Ham], 1, a real or supposed descendant of Ham, the second son of Noah (Gen. 10); 2, a member of the chief native race of northern Africa, as an Egyptian or Berber.

Ham-it-ic (hăm-ĭt'ĭk), adj. pertaining to Ham or any of his supposed descendants, or to the languages of these peoples, especially the ancient Egyptians.

ham-let (hăm'lĕt), n. [< O.F. hamelet, dim. of hamel, village < O. Teut. source], a village of only a few houses.

Ham-let (hăm'-lĕt), n. [< Scand.], in Shakespeare's tragedy "Hamlet," a prince of Denmark, who, at the bidding of his father's ghost, avenges his father's murder by slaying his uncle Claudius, the murderer.

ham-mer (hăm'-ĕr), n. [< A.S. hamer < O. or scutch; 6, light tack hammer.

HAMMERS

1, bell-faced nail hammer, with claw; 2, machinist's hammer; 3, blacksmith's hammer; 4, cobbler's hammer; 5, bricklayer's hammer.

Teut. source], 1, an instrument with a handle and an iron head, used for driving nails, beating metals, etc. (see tool, illus.); 2, anything like this tool in use or shape, as the hammer of a gunlock, a padded mallet in a piano action used for striking the wires, an auctioneer's gavel, etc.: Anat., one of the bones in the middle ear; the malleus (see ear, illus.); Field Athletics, a weight, usually of twelve or sixteen pounds, attached to a flexible handle, hurled for distance from a mark or ring; Metal., a heavy mass of metal which falls or is driven against a piece of metal to forge or shape it into specific form: steam hammer, a large hammer for forging, driven by steam:—v.t. 1, to pound or beat with a heavy implement; 2, to drive, as a nail, into place by pounding; 3, to work at assiduously; 4, figuratively, to drive or force, as an idea, into a person's head:—v.i. 1, to strike heavy blows; 2, to work hard: used with at, on, or upon; 3, to make a sound resembling that of blows, as water in a pipe.—n. ham'mer-er.

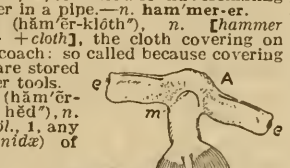
ham-mer-cloth (hăm'ĕr-klôth"), n. [hammer + cloth], the cloth covering on the driver's seat in a coach: so called because covering the pocket in which are stored the hammer and other tools.

ham-mer-head (hăm'ĕr-hĕd"), n. [hammer + head, Zoöl., 1, any of a family (Sphyrnidæ) of sharks with hammer-shaped heads: also called hammer-headed shark; 2, a kind of fruit-eating bat found in Africa; 3, a small fish of the sucker family; Ornith., the shadow bird, or umbrette, a dusky, tropical wading bird with a long crest on the back of the head.



HAMMER-HEADED SHARK (1/70)
A, head end, from below; B, side view: e, e, e, eyes; m, mouth.

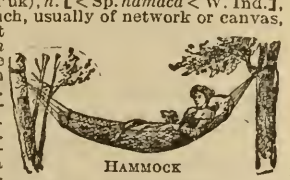
ham-mock (hăm'ŭk), n. [< Sp. hamaca < W. Ind.], a couch, usually of network or canvas, suspended by ropes at the ends: Southern U. S. Colloq., a fertile tract abounding in hardwood vegetation.



HAMMOCK

1ham-per (hăm'pĕr), n. [< obs. hanaper < O.F. hanapier, case for goblet < hanap, goblet], a large wickerwork basket for carrying or containing food, clothes, etc.:—v.t. 1, to put into a hamper; 2, to load with hampers.

2ham-per (hăm'pĕr), v.t. [source uncertain], 1, to obstruct; impede; 2, to embarrass; perplex; 3, to put out of order; derange:—n. anything that hinders or impedes: Naut., the rigging or other necessary and cumbrous equipment of a ship.

ham-shack-le (hăm'shăk"l), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -shackled (-ld), p.pr. -shackling], [source uncertain], to fetter, as a horse, by binding the head to one of the forelegs with a rope or strap.

ham-ster (hăm'stĕr), n. [Ger. < O.H.G. haniastro, weevil], Zoöl., a burrowing, ratlike rodent found in parts of Europe and Asia, having large check pouches used for carrying grain, etc.

ham-string (hăm'string"), n. [1*ham* + string], 1, in man, one of the strong sinews at the back of the knee; 2, in quadrupeds, the large tendon above and behind the hock in the hind leg, corresponding to the large tendon above the heel in man:—v.t. 1, to cripple by cutting these tendons; hock; hence, 2, to disable; get the better of.

han-ap (hăn'ăp), n. [O.F. < O.H.G. hnapf, cup, bowl], Archaic, an ornamented goblet.

hand (hănd), n. [A.S. < O.Teut. source], 1, Anat., technically, the terminal part of the fore limb of any vertebrate above the fishes; specifically, the divided lower part of the human arm, connected at the wrist and adapted for grasping; also, a similar formation on any of the limbs of the apes, or on the forelegs of certain other quadrupeds that grasp, as the opossum; 2, something resembling this member in appearance or use; an index or pointer; as, the hands of a clock; 3, a measure of four inches: used chiefly in measuring the height of horses; 4, ability or skill; dexterity; knack; as, to try one's hand at something; 5, direction; right or left side; 6, possession; control; authority; as, to keep the mob in hand; 7, agency in acting or promoting; as, lend a hand; 8, style of writing; penmanship; also, signature; 9, an employee who labors with his hands; a member of a ship's crew; hence, a person considered as doing a specific thing; as, a good hand at figuring; also, a person: usually in pl.; as, all hands joined in; 10, a player in a game of cards; also, the cards held by a player at any deal, or a single round in a game; 11, a pledge, especially as given in betrothal or marriage; 12, a source from which a thing comes; as, at first hand: Colloq., applause; as, give him a hand: Print., a sign [☞] used to draw attention; a fist: hand gallop, an easy gallop, with the horse well under control:—v.t. 1, to give or transmit with, or as with, the hand; 2, to lead or assist, as with the hand: Naut., to roll up and secure, as a sail; furl:—adj. belonging to, or used by, the hand.

BONES OF RIGHT HAND
A, wrist, or carpus; B, palm, or metacarpus; C, fingers, or phalanges: Tzm., trapezium; Tzd., trapezoid; Sc., scaphoid; Ma., magnum; L., semilunar; C., cuneiform; Pi., pisiform; U., unciform; M., the five metacarpals; P^1, P^2, P^3, the fourteen bones of the phalanges.

hand-ball (hănd'bôl"), n. [hand + 1*ball*], a game, similar to the English game of fives, in which a ball is struck with the hands and kept bounding against a wall: usually played by two or more persons.

hand-bar-row (hănd'băr'ō), n. [hand + 1*barrow*], 1, a frame or stretcher, with handles, for carrying heavy articles; 2, a wheelbarrow.

hand-bill (hănd'bil"), n. [hand + 1*bill*], a printed advertisement, distributed by hand.

hand-book (hănd'book"), n. [hand + book], 1, a small guidebook; a manual, or concise outline of some subject; 2, a betting book.

hand-breadth (hănd'brĕdth"), n. [hand + breadth], a linear measure equal to the breadth of the hand, or about four inches.

hand-cart (hănd'kärt"), n. [hand + cart], a light cart to be pushed by hand: a pushcart.

hand-cuff (hănd'kŭf"), n. [hand + 2*cuff*], a manacle, or fetter, confining the wrists; a ring, usually connected with another by a chain, and used to fasten the wrists together: usually pl.:—v.t. to manacle; put fetters on.

HANDCUFFS AND KEY

hand-fast (hănd'făst"), n. [hand + 1*fast*], Archaic, 1, a contract, usually of betrothal or marriage; 2, restraint; custody:—adj. Archaic, 1, close-fisted; 2, bound by contract; betrothed:—v.t. Archaic, 1, to hold or grasp with the hand; bind; hence, 2, to betroth; 3, in Scotland, to marry temporarily.—n. hand'fast"ing.

hand-ful (hănd'fo͝ol), n. [pl. -fuls (-fo͝olz)], [hand + -ful], 1, as much as a hand can hold; 2, a small number or quantity; 3, all that can be managed; hence, 4, a troublesome person or thing.

hand glass 1, a small mirror to be held in the hand; 2, a magnifying glass for reading: Naut., a sandglass used in timing the log line.

hand gre-nade 1, a glass bottle containing chemicals for putting out a fire; 2, an explosive shell to be thrown by hand in battle.

hand-i-cap (hăn'dĭ-kăp), n. [perh. orig. hand in cap, prob. in ref. to drawing of lots], 1, a hindrance; impediment; disadvantage: specifically, an extra weight or distance imposed on a superior contestant in a race to make the contest more even; 2, a corresponding advantage allowed to a supposedly inferior contestant; 3, a contest with a handicap:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -capped (-kăpt), p.pr. -capping], 1, to hinder or retard; 2, to impose a disadvantage upon, as contestants in a race.

hand-i-craft (hăn'dĭ-kräft), n. [hand + craft], 1, the work or skill of a craftsman or mechanic; 2, a trade requiring great manual skill.

hand-i-ly (hăn'dĭ-lĭ), adv. [see handy], in a handy or deft manner; skilfully.

hand-i-ness (hăn'dĭ-nĕs), n. the state or quality of being skilful with the hands.

hand-i-work (hăn'dĭ-wûrk"), n. [hand + work], 1, work done or produced by the hands; handwork; 2, any work done by personal effort.

hand-ker-chief (hăng'kĕr-chĭf), n. [hand + kerchief], 1, a piece of cloth, usually square, for wiping the face or nose; 2, a neckerchief.

han-dle (hăn'dl), n. [< A.S. handlian, to touch, feel < hand, hand], 1, that part of a tool, vessel, etc., intended to be grasped by the hand; 2, that which may be used to bring influence to bear upon a situation, or otherwise to gain an end; a pretext;

Colloq., a professional or other title:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -dled (-dld), p.pr. -dling], 1, to touch, hold, feel, examine, move, with the hand; 2, to manage; manipulate; 3, to control; train; direct; 4, to treat of; discourse on; 5, to deal with; act toward; treat; 6, to buy, sell, or invest in habitually or as a business; 7, to equip with handles:—v.i. 1, to use or work with the hands; 2, to behave in a certain way when handled.

hand-made (hănd'mād"), adj. [hand+make], fashioned or made by hand.

hand-maid (hănd'mād"), n. [hand+maid], a female servant or personal attendant. Also, Archaic, hand'maid"en.

hand or-gan Mus., a portable reed organ operated by a hand crank, played by street musicians; a barrel organ; a hurdy-gurdy.

hand-rail (hănd'rāl"), n. [hand+rail], a railing used by the hand as a guide or support.

[1]hand-saw (hănd'sô"), n. [hand+[1]saw], a carpenter's saw for use in one hand.

[2]hand-saw (hănd'sô"), n. [prob. corr. <hernshaw, q.v.], Obs., a heron; as, I know a hawk from a handsaw (Hamlet, II:2).

hand screw 1, a mechanical device for lifting heavy articles; a lifting jack (see [1]jack, illus.); 2, a wooden hand clamp used by carpenters.

hand-sel (hănd'sĕl; hăn'sĕl), n. [<O.N. handsal, giving of the hand, as in a promise or bargain], 1, a token given or received as an indication of good will or to secure good luck, especially in a new business or enterprise; hence, a foretaste; 2, pledge money; 3, in Scotland, a gift to children and servants, formerly given on the first Monday of the year:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -seled or -selled (-sĕld), p.pr. -seling or -selling], 1, to give a token of luck to; 2, to try for the first time; 3, to inaugurate; celebrate. Also, han'sel.

hand-some (hăn'sŭm), adj. [comp. -somer, superl. -somest], [<M.E. handsum, convenient <hand+-some], 1, pleasing to look upon; well formed; 2, generous; gracious; 3, ample: Obs., dexterous; fitting.—adv. hand'some-ly.—n. hand'some-ness.

Syn. impressive, comely; liberal. (See beautiful.)

hand-spike (hănd'spīk"), n. [hand+spike], a lever for moving heavy weights.

hand-work (hănd'wûrk"), n. [hand+work], anything made by hand.

hand-writ-ing (hănd'rīt"ĭng), n. [hand+write], 1, the style of penmanship peculiar to a certain individual; 2, matter written by hand.

hand-y (hăn'dĭ), adj. [comp. -ier, superl. -iest], [see hand], 1, dexterous; skilful; 2, convenient; close at hand: Naut., manageable; as, a handy skiff.

hang (hăng), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. hung (hŭng), or, Archaic, hanged (hăngd), p.pr. hanging], [<three sources; 1, <A.S. hōn, to hang, v.t.; 2, <A.S. hangian, to hang, v.i.; 3, <O.N. hengjan, to cause to hang], 1, to attach to something above suspend; 2, to fasten to something so as to be movable, as a door; 3, [p.t. and p.p. hanged (hăngd)], to suspend by the neck until dead; put to death on the gallows; 4, to cause to droop; bow; 5, to attach or fasten, as the head, or effective part, of an implement to its handle; 6, to furnish with ornaments or drapery suspended or fastened to the walls; 7, to adjust to the correct length; as, to hang a skirt; 8, in the United States, to cause to come to a deadlock, as a jury: hang up, Colloq., 1, to postpone; 2, to extend credit to:—v.i. [p.t. and p.p. hung], 1, to dangle; be suspended; 2, to depend or swing on supports; 3, to be dependent; cling; 4, to hover threateningly: with over; 5, to be in a deadlock; 6, to rest; depend: with on; 7, [p.t. and p.p. hanged], to die by hanging:—n. the manner in which a thing hangs or balances; as, the hang of a garment; the hang of an ax: Colloq., 1, the manner of doing or using; knack; 2, the general idea; as, the hang of a story.

han-gar (hăng'ĕr; hăng'gär"), n. [Fr. = shed], a shed for storing vehicles, especially aircraft.

hang-bird (hăng'bûrd"), n. [hang+bird], a bird that builds a hanging nest, as the oriole.

hang-dog (hăng'dôg"), adj. [hang+dog], of degraded, ashamed, or sneaking appearance:—n. a sneak; a base and worthless fellow.

HANGER

hang-er (hăng'ĕr), n. [see hang], 1, one who or that which hangs; 2, that by which something is hung or suspended; specifically, a frame by which a bearing, as for a shaft, is suspended from a ceiling; 3, a kind of cutlass, or short, curved sword, formerly suspended from the belt.

hang-er-on (hăng'ĕr-ŏn"), n. [pl. hangers-on], an unwelcome follower; a parasite.

hang-ing (hăng'ĭng), p.adj. 1, pending; imminent; 2, suggesting or involving death as a penalty; 3, jutting over; as, hanging gardens:—n. 1, execution on the gallows; 2, the drapery for the walls, windows, or doors in a room: usually pl.

hang-man (hăng'măn), n. [pl. -men (-mĕn)], [hang+man], a public officer who executes convicted criminals; a public executioner.

hang-nail (hăng'nāl"), n. [<earlier agnail<A.S. angnægl, a corn<ang-, painful+nægl, nail (of iron), incorrectly developed as meaning finger nail], a small piece of loose cuticle around the finger nail.

hank (hăngk), n. [<M.E. hanken, to fetter, related to O.N. hönk, coil or skein], 1, two or more skeins, as of thread, silk, or wool, fastened together; also, a rope, as of wire or hair; 2, a withy or rope loop for fastening a gate: Naut., a ring on the edge of a sail, running on a rope:—v.t. to form into hanks.

han-ker (hăng'kĕr), v.i. [source uncertain], to have an eager longing or craving: with for, after, or an infinitive.—n. han'ker-ing.

han-ky–pan-ky (hăng'kĭ-păng'kĭ), n. [perh. <hocus-pocus], 1, jugglery; tricky dealing; 2, the chatter of jugglers to divert attention from their tricks:—adj. tricky; cheating.

Han-o-ve-ri-an (hăn"ō-vē'rĭ-ăn), adj. [<Hanover in Germany], 1, pertaining to Hanover in Germany; 2, pertaining to the German ducal house of Hanover founded about 1125; 3, designating, or pertaining to, the dynasty of the British Empire founded by George, Elector of Hanover, who became George I of England in 1714:—n. a member of the house of Hanover.

hanse (hăns), n. [O.F.<O.H.G. hansa, company], Hist., 1, a guild of merchants; 2, the entrance fee to such a guild; also, the fee extracted from non-members of such a guild: Hanse, a league of merchants of various free cities of northern Germany called Hanse towns, formed about the middle of the 13th century to advance and protect their commerce.

Han-se-at-ic (hăn"sē-ăt'ĭk), adj. pertaining to the Hanse towns or to the league formed by them: Hanseatic League, the league of Hanse towns.

han-sel (hăn'sĕl), n. [see handsel], 1, a good-will gift or token, given or received at the beginning of a new status or enterprise; 2, a pledge; 3, in Scotland, a New Year's gift to children:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -seled or -selled (-sĕld), p.pr. -seling or -selling], 1, to present with a handsel; 2, to try for the first time; 3, to celebrate. See hand'sel, Pfd. S.

han-som (hăn'sŭm), n. [<Hansom, patentee of cab, 1834], a two-wheeled, one-horse cab, with an outside, driver's seat behind: also called hansom cab.

HANSOM

[1]hap (hăp), n.i. [p.t. and p.p. happed (hăpt), p.pr. happing], [<M.E.<O.N. happ, chance], to happen; befall casually:—n. 1, happening; chance; a casual event; 2, good luck.

[2]hap (hăp), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. happed (hăpt), p.pr. happing], [perh. Sc.], Sc. Dial., to cover or wrap:—n. a cloak or wrapper.

hap-haz-ard (hăp'hăz"ărd), n. [[1]hap+hazard], mere luck; accident; random:—adv. by chance; at random:—adj. accidental; random.

Syn., adj. promiscuous, random, accidental, casual.

hap-less (hăp'lĕs), adj. [see [1]hap], unfortunate; without hap or luck; unhappy; forlorn.—adv. hap'less-ly.—n. hap'less-ness.

hap-ly (hăp'lĭ), adv. by chance, luck, or accident; perhaps; perchance.

hap-pen (hăp'n), v.i. 1, to chance; come or occur by chance; 2, to occur; take place; come to pass: happen upon, to come upon by chance:—adv. Colloq., perhaps; by chance; perchance.

Syn., v. befall, chance, occur, betide, come about.

hap-pen-ing (hăp'n-ĭng), n. that which happens; a chance event; an occurrence.

hap-pi-ly (hăp'ĭ-lĭ), adv. 1, successfully; 2, fortunately; luckily; 3, in a happy, joyous, or contented manner or state; 4, aptly; felicitously.

hap-pi-ness (hăp'ĭ-nĕs), n. 1, the state or quality of being glad or contented; contentment; 2, good fortune; good luck; prosperity; 3, natural elegance of address; felicity, as of language.

Syn. joy, joyfulness, felicity, bliss, enjoyment, pleasure, satisfaction, gladness, delight, contentment

Pleasure, the opposite of pain, is an agreeable emotion covering all degrees of the feeling. Enjoyment is the taking or experiencing of pleasure. Happiness is a state of glowing pleasure, of being radiantly contented with one's lot. Joy is vivid, profound, demonstrative, and, because of its intensity, often transient. Gladness, though as strong as joy, is more serene, and is experienced over worthy causes; we speak of unholy joy over an enemy's downfall, not of unholy gladness. Delight is a high degree of pleasure, often bubbling and rapturous. Felicity, a word in rather elevated use, is intense happiness. Bliss is perfect joy. Contentment is a state of calm pleasure over what one has or is; satisfaction leaves nothing to be desired.—Ant. unhappiness, wretchedness, misery, discontent, bitterness.

hap-py (hăp'ĭ), adj. [comp. happier, superl. happiest], 1, enjoying pleasure or good; enjoying peace of any kind; contented; satisfied; 2, successful; prosperous; favored by luck or fortune; lucky; fortunate; 3, giving or causing joy or happiness; 4, apt; felicitous; gracious, as language: happy hunting grounds, the North American Indian hereafter, where the souls of warriors pass after death.

Syn. blissful, blithe, merry, gay, jolly, joyous, contented, cheerful, glad, sunny, fortunate, lucky, auspicious. Happy, as compared with lucky and auspicious, means coming by good chance or fortune; as, a happy outcome; a happy solution of difficulties; a happy accident. Happy emphasizes the favorable aspect of the chance; lucky, a familiar word, emphasizes the chance itself. A lucky man reaps benefits and success from what is apparently no labor of his own; a lucky circumstance brings fortune which might as easily have been turned away. Fortunate is a more dignified word than lucky; the fortunate man's status or good fortune is less striking, more in proportion to his labor, than that of the lucky man. Auspicious is not used of persons, but describes those casual and incidental circumstances that are of favorable omen for a journey, a new undertaking, etc.; as, an auspicious moment; an auspicious occasion.—Ant. unhappy, unfortunate.

hap-py-go-luck-y (hăp'ĭ-gō-lŭk'ĭ), adj. 1, lighthearted; easy-going; 2, trusting to chance; unreliable; slapdash.

Haps-burg (häps'bûrg; häps'bo͝orkh), n. [Ger. < Habichtsburg, hawk's castle], a German princely family, from the 13th to the 18th century the ruling house of Austria, to which have belonged rulers of Austria and Spain, and many emperors of the Holy Roman Empire: Hapsburger, a member of the imperial family of Austria: Hapsburg-Lorraine, the Austrian imperial family from 1740 to 1918.

ha-ra-ki-ri (hä'rä-kē'rē), n. [Jap. < hara, belly + kiri, to cut], in Japan, a method of suicide by disembowelment, practiced by, and sometimes required of, disgraced nobles and military officers; also, sometimes employed as a solemn protest against supposed slights upon the national honor: formerly common, still occasional. Also, incorrectly, ha'ri-ka'ri.

ha-ram (hä'răm), n. [see harem], the apartments of the women and children in a Mohammedan house. See ha'rem, Pfd. S.

ha-rangue (hȧ-răng'), n. [Fr. < O.F. arenge < L.L. harenga, a public address], a noisy, ranting, public oration, usually delivered extemporaneously:—v.i. [p.t. and p.p. harangued (-răngd'), p.pr. haranguing], to deliver a noisy speech:—v.t. to address in a noisy oration.—n. ha-rangu'er (hȧ-răng'ẽr).

Syn., n. address, oration, declamation. (See speech.)

har-ass (hăr'ăs), v.t. [< Fr. harasser, perh. < O.F. harer, to set a dog on], 1, to annoy or vex; fatigue or weary with labor or importunity; 2, to tire out and annoy (an enemy) by incessant petty attacks; 3, to worry; tease; disturb; torment.—n. har'ass-er.—n. har'ass-ment.—adj. har'ass-a-ble.

Syn. besiege, fret, bother, pester, worry. (See annoy.)

har-bin-ger (hăr'bĭn-jẽr), n. [< O.F. herbergere < herberge, lodging < O.H.G. heriberga < hari, army + -berga, shelter], 1, originally, the messenger who was sent ahead to prepare lodgings and entertainment for a royal party; 2, a messenger; forerunner:—v.t. to announce; foretell; usher in.

har-bor (hăr'bẽr), n. [< M.E. hereberge < here, army + beorg, shelter], 1, formerly, an inn or lodging; 2, a port or place of shelter for ships; a protected waterway or arm of a sea or lake equipped with docking facilities; 3, hence, any place of refuge or safety:—v.t. 1, to shelter or protect; 2, to cherish; entertain, as evil thoughts or designs:—v.i. to find or to take shelter, as in a harbor. Also, har'bour.

Syn., n. shelter, security, haven, refuge, port.

har-bor-age (hăr'bẽr-ăj), n. 1, a port or anchorage for ships; 2, protection; shelter; lodging; accommodations. Also, har'bour-age.

har-bor mas-ter a government officer charged with the duty of carrying out the regulations governing the use of a harbor.

hard (härd), adj. [< A.S. heard, hard < O.Teut. source], 1, compact and solid; firm; not easily pierced or broken: opposite of soft; 2, unsympathetic; stern; austere; unfeeling; unyielding; 3, difficult of accomplishment; laborious; strenuous; fatiguing; 4, cruel; oppressive; severe; 5, exacting; not easily complied with; 6, rough; coarse; wicked; hardened; as, a hard man; 7, containing certain dissolved substances which interfere with the cleansing power of soap: used of water; 8, thoroughgoing; strenuous; as, a hard rider: Com., of prices or the market, high and firm; Phon., 1, explosive, or pronounced by releasing the breath with explosive force, as p, d, k, or, especially, c in cat and g in goat: opposite of soft; 2, voiceless or pronounced without vibration of the vocal cords, as p, t, s: hard cash, 1, actual money; 2, specifically, coin: hard coal, anthracite:—adv. 1, forcibly; laboriously; 2, earnestly; diligently; 3, tempestuously; vehemently; 4, closely; near: mainly in the phrase hard by; 5, roughly; 6, to the utmost extent; 7, so as to become firm and unyielding; as, the candy was hard set: often in compounds, as hard-boiled; 8, with vexation, trouble, or sorrow; as, it has gone hard with us; 9, securely; fast; firmly:—n. 1, a roadway of solid material by the sea; 2, a pier or landing place.

Syn., adj. difficult, arduous, harsh, laborious, severe, rigorous, exacting, trying, exhausting, obdurate, unfeeling, insensible, solid, firm, oppressive, unrelenting, callous. Hard, difficult, and arduous describe that which cannot be accomplished without labor or strain; hard describes a task that may require either physical or mental effort; difficult is used of tasks that require skill, cleverness, diplomacy, rather than physical exertion. Prisoners are condemned to hard rather than difficult labor; a problem that baffles the understanding may be termed either hard or difficult. Arduous describes that which is highly difficult; that is arduous which is high in aim, and attainable only through persevering toil of both body and mind; as, an arduous enterprise. Hard, obdurate, unfeeling, and insensible designate an unyielding quality; as, hard candy; a hard heart; an obdurate will or disposition; an unfeeling nature; insensible to pity.—Ant., adj. soft, yielding, gentle, easy, sympathetic, lenient, submissive.

hard-boiled (härd'-boild'), adj. of an egg, boiled until both white and yolk have solidified: Slang, impervious to argument or appeal.

hard-en (här'dn), v.t. 1, to make firm or solid; 2, to confirm in impudence or wickedness; 3, to make hardy or robust; toughen; 4, to accustom: Metal., to bring into condition, as metals, either by heating and cooling or by rolling and hammering, so as to resist deformation as much as possible:—v.i. 1, to become firm or solid; 2, to become hardy or robust; 3, to become impudent or indifferent.—p.adj. hard'ened.

hard-hack (härd'hăk'), n. [hard + (perh.) hack], Bot., an American flowering shrub (Spiræa tomentosa) of the rose family, with dense terminal panicles of pink or purple, rarely white, flowers, and hairy leaves: used in medicine: also called steeplebush.

hard-head (härd'hĕd'), n. [hard + head], 1, a shrewd person; 2, a salmon trout (Salmo giardneri), a large and important food fish of the northern Pacific rivers; 3, the menhaden; 4, locally, an important food fish of Atlantic tidal rivers, resembling the menhaden; 5, in England, any of several sculpins.

hard-head-ed (härd'-hĕd'ĕd), adj. 1, having shrewd judgment; sharp-witted; keen; 2, practical; not sentimental or theoretical; 3, obstinate; persistent; stubborn.

hard-heart-ed (härd'-härt'ĕd), adj. 1, unfeeling; unsympathetic; 2, cruel; merciless.—adv. hard'-heart'ed-ly.—n. hard'-heart'ed-ness.

har-die (här'dĭ), n. [see hardy], a kind of chisel to be attached to an anvil. See har'dy, Pfd. S.

har-di-hood (här'dĭ-ho͝od), n. [see hardy], 1, physical endurance; robustness; 2, bravery; pluck; resolution; also, 3, foolhardy daring; boldness; 4, impudence; effrontery; audacity.

hard la-bor work imposed on some criminals in addition to a term of imprisonment, as part of the punishment.

hard-ly (härd'lĭ), adv. [see hard], 1, with difficulty; laboriously; 2, scarcely; by a narrow margin; not fully or completely; as, the statement is hardly true; hence, improbably; 3, severely; vigorously.

hard-ness (härd'nĕs), n. the state or quality of being firm and unyielding, literally or figuratively; as, hardness of rock; hardness of heart; Chem., a quality imparted to water by certain mineral salts, usually lime, in solution; Art, harshness or lack of sympathy in tone or treatment.

hard-pan (härd'pan"), n. [hard+pan], Mining, a bed or layer of earth, not so solid as rock but difficult to excavate, and covered over with softer soil: U. S. Colloq., a solid foundation; firm basis.

hard-set (härd'=sĕt"), adj. 1, in a difficult position; 2, firm; determined; obdurate.

hard-shell (härd'=shĕl"), adj. having a hard shell, as a crab before molting: U. S. Colloq., strict; conservative; rigidly orthodox.

hard-ship (härd'ship), n. [hard+-ship], 1, severe labor; privation; 2, injustice; oppression.

Syn. exposure, suffering, misfortune, adversity.

hard-tack (härd'=tăk"), n. a large, unsalted, solid biscuit used in the army and navy.

hard-ware (härd'wâr"), n. [hard+[1]ware], manufactured articles of metal, as cutlery, utensils, tools, nails, machine parts, etc.

hard-wood (härd'wo͝od"), n. [hard+wood], 1, the wood from broad-leaved trees, as opposed to that from the conifers, or softwoods; also, a tree producing such wood: also, hard wood; 2, (properly, hard wood), any heavy, close-grained wood: opposite of soft wood:—adj. of or pertaining to hardwood.

har-dy (här'di), adj. [comp. -dier, superl. -diest], [<O.F. hardi, hardy<O.H.G. hartjan, to harden], 1, robust; capable of bearing hardship; 2, bold; resolute; 3, able to survive the winter: used of plants: —n. [perh.<hard], Mech., a blacksmith's chisel, having a square shank for insertion into a square hole in an anvil: also, hardie: hardy hole, the hole in the anvil into which a hardy is set.—adv. har'di-ly.—n. har'di-ness.

hare (hâr), n. [<A.S. hara<O.Teut. source], any of several timid, swift-running herbivorous rodents (chiefly of the genus Lepus), having a divided upper lip, long ears, a short fluffy tail, and hind legs well developed for jumping, many American species being called rabbits, as the cottontail and jack rabbits (see mammalia, illus.): Belgian hare, a reddish variety of domestic rabbit, bred to imitate the wild English hare.

hare-bell (hâr'bĕl"), n. [hare+[1]bell], Bot., a small, delicate, slender, perennial herb (Campanula rotundifolia), having blue, bell-shaped flowers: in some places called bluebell.

hare-brained (hâr'brānd"), adj. [hare+brain], wild; giddy; heedless; rash.

hare-foot (hâr'fo͝ot"), n. [hare+foot], 1, one who runs like a hare; a fast runner; 2, (also, hare's-foot), a kind of clover (Trifolium arvense) with soft, silky heads, native to Europe, but naturalized in the United States: also called rabbit-foot clover.

hare-lip (hâr'lip"), n. [hare+lip], a congenital malformation in man, whereby the upper lip is cleft in the middle, like a hare's lip, or on one side.

ha-rem (hâ'rĕm), n. [<Arab. haram, closed to promiscuous access<harama, to prohibit], 1, the apartments of the women and children in a Mohammedan house; 2, the wives and female relatives of a Mohammedan; 3, sacred circuit around the mosque at Mecca. Also, ha-reem'; ha'ram.

hare's-foot (hârz'=fo͝ot"), n. a foot of a hare or rabbit, used by actors in making up: Bot., 1, a fern (Davallia canariensis) of the Canary and Madeira islands and the adjacent continents; 2, in England, a kind of clover; harefoot.

hare's-tail (hârz'=tāl"), n. Bot., a kind of sedge with bristles resembling a hare's tail.

har-i-cot (hăr'i-kō; hăr'i-kōt), n. [Fr.: source uncertain], 1, a highly seasoned stew of meat and vegetables; 2, the seed or unripe pod of the kidney bean (Phaseolus vulgaris), a climbing string bean.

HARICOT
a, flower; b, pod.

ha-ri-ka-ri (hä'rē=kä'rē), n. [see hara-kiri], among Japanese, suicide by slashing the abdomen horizontally. See ha'ra-ki'ri, Pfd. S.

hark (härk), v.i. [<M.E. herkien, to listen], to listen: generally used in the imperative, with exclamatory force: hark back, 1, to retrace a course so as to get a fresh start; 2, to return or revert, as to a subject:—n. shout or cry of encouragement to hounds.

hark-en (här'kn), v.t. [see hearken], to hear by listening; give heed to:—v.i. to listen; attend; pay attention by listening. Also, heark'en, Pfd. S.

har-le-quin (här'lē-kwĭn; -kĭn), n. [Fr.<It. arlecchino, harlequin], a buffoon: Harlequin, the performer in a comedy or pantomime who wears party-colored, spangled garments, carries a mock sword or a wand, and amuses the audience with droll tricks:—adj. 1, fantastic or full of trickery; 2, party-colored:—v.i. to amuse by playing tricks.

har-le-quin-ade (här"lē-kwĭn-ād'), n. 1, a part of a pantomime in which the lead is taken by the harlequin and the clown; 2, buffoonery.

har-lot (här'lŏt), n. [<O.F. arlot, lad, knave, vagabond], a woman of bad character; a prostitute: Obs., 1, a menial; 2, a low-bred person; a knave:—adj. wanton.—n. har'lot-ry.

harm (härm), n. [<A.S. hearm, injury<O.Teut. source], 1, injury; damage; misfortune; 2, moral evil or wrongdoing:—v.t. to hurt, damage, or injure. —adj. harm'ful.—adv. harm'ful-ly.—adj. harm'less.—adv. harm'less-ly.—n. harm'less-ness.

Syn., n. mischief, hurt, loss, offense. (See injury.)

Har-ma-chis (här'mä-kĭs), n. [<Egypt. Hormtakh, Horus of two horizons], Egypt. Myth., the beneficent god Horus: a name applying to one of his many aspects.

Har-mo-ni-a (här-mō'nĭ-ä), n. [<Gk. harmonia, music<harmein, to join], Gk. Myth., the goddess of music, daughter of Ares and Aphrodite, given by Zeus in marriage to Cadmus.

har-mon-ic (här-mŏn'ĭk), adj. 1, pertaining to, or producing, a right or pleasing concord of sound; 2, pertaining to harmony, as distinct from rhythm or melody; 3, musical; pleasing to the ear; 4, having a frequency, or rate of vibration, which is an exact multiple of one regarded as fundamental; 5, pertaining to harmonics: Mus., designating, or pertaining to, one of the minor scales (see minor, and illus. under scale): harmonic mean, Math., the reciprocal of the arithmetic mean of the reciprocals of two given quantities: harmonic motion, the vibratory motion of the projection, upon a straight line, of a point moving uniformly along a circumference in the same plane: —n. Phys., 1, a wave or vibration, as of sound or electricity, having a frequency which is an exact multiple of a fundamental frequency; especially, a partial tone, or overtone, having such frequency; a harmonic overtone; 2, loosely, any overtone; Mus., such a tone produced separately, as by laying a finger lightly, at a proper place, on a vibrating string: harmonics, n. pl. used as sing. the science dealing with musical sounds. Also, har-mon'i-cal.—adv. har-mon'i-cal-ly.

har-mon-i-ca (här-mŏn'ĭ-kä), n. 1, a musical instrument, the tones of which are produced by friction from a number of musical glasses filled to various heights with water; 2, an oblong musical instrument consisting of a number of metal strips which are struck by a mallet; 3, an instrument provided with metal reeds played by the mouth; a mouth organ: also called harmonicon [pl. -ca (-kä)].

har-mo-ni-ous (här-mō'nĭ-ŭs), adj. 1, concordant; musical; 2, symmetrical; 3, adapted to each other; agreeing in action and feeling; 4, living in friendship; peaceable; 5, in accord in such a manner as to be pleasing to the ear and eye.—adv. har-mo'ni-ous-ly.—n. har-mo'ni-ous-ness.

Syn. congruous, peaceable, sweet, musical.

har-mo-nist (här'mō-nĭst), n. 1, Mus., a musician; one who is expert in musical science; 2, one who points out parallel passages from different writings, as the Gospels; 3, a harmonizer.

har-mo-ni-um (här-mō'nĭ-ŭm), n. a small reed organ; melodeon; cabinet organ.

HARMONIUM

har-mo-nize (här'mō-nīz), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -nized (-nīzd), p.pr. -nizing], 1, to arrange in musical harmony; 2, to bring into agreement, as different colors; 3, to cause to agree; reconcile: —v.i. 1, to agree; correspond; be in harmony; 2, to be in peace and friendship.—n. har'mo-niz"er.—n. har"mo-ni-za'tion.

Syn. accord, adjust, agree.

har-mo-ny (här'mō-nĭ), n. [pl. -nies (-nĭz)], 1, nice adjustment of parts to one another so as to form a connected whole; 2, agreement in action, feeling, sentiment, or the like; 3, a literary work showing parallel or similar histories or passages; as, a harmony of the Gospels: Mus., 1, an agreeable combination of tones simultaneously heard; 2, the composition of a piece of music with reference to its chords; 3, the science treating of the composition of chords; 4, the simultaneous rendering, by the voice parts, of different tones agreeably combined; opposite of unison: harmony tone, any tone considered as part of a chord.

Syn. agreement, accordance, unison, conformity, consonance, melody, concord, tunefulness.

har-ness (här'nĕs), n. [pl. -ness (-nĕs); -nesses (-ĕz)], [<O.F. harneis, armor], 1, originally, the dress and armor of a knight or of his horse; 2, the working equipment of a horse or any draft animal, used to attach it to a wagon, plow, or the like; 3, any arrangement,

HARNESS

1-12, parts of the bridle (1, brow band; 2, blinder; 3, cheek piece; 4, noseband; 5, bit; 6, curb; 7, curb strap; 8, throatlatch; 9, checkrein; 10, crownpiece; 11, cockade; 12, guide ring for checkrein); 13, collar; 14, collar pad; 15, martingale; 16, shaft; 17, trace; 18, girth, or bellyband; 19, shaft ring; 20, saddle; 21, ring on hame for rein; 22, hook for checkrein; 23, hip strap; 24, reins; 25, fork; 26, crupper; 27, breeching, attached to shaft by holdback; 28, trace buckle; 29, terret.

as of straps, for performing some mechanical operation:—v.t. to put harness upon; attach, as with a harness: Archaic, to arm or equip, as a knight.

harp (härp), n. [<A.S. hearpe, harp < O.Teut. source], 1, Mus., one of the oldest stringed instruments, triangular in shape and played with the fingers (for range see music); 2, any of several objects resembling a harp; 3, any of several coins bearing the figure of a harp, formerly used in Ireland: Harp, Astron., the constellation Lyra:—v.i. 1, to play on a harp; 2, to revert to, or dwell unduly, tediously, or persistently upon some particular subject: with on or upon:—v.t. to give voice to; express.

harp-er (här'pẽr), n. 1, a player on the harp; formerly, often, a minstrel; 2, an old Irish coin.

harp-ings (här'pĭngz), n.pl. [perh. <harp], Naut., the fore parts of the wales, thickened around the bow of a ship to withstand shocks due to plunging. Also, harp'ins (-pĭnz).

harp-ist (härp'ĭst), n. [see harp], one who plays the harp: especially used of a harper in an orchestra or of a soloist at concerts.

har-poon (här-pōōn'), n. [<Fr. harpon < harpe, clamp], a long, barbed spear, with a line attached to the staff, for striking and killing whales or large fish: harpoon gun, a gun used for projecting the harpoon:—v.t. to strike, catch, or kill with a harpoon.—n. har-poon'er.

HARPOON GUN

harp-si-chord (härp'sĭ-kôrd), n. [<obs. Fr. harpechorde <Lat. harpa, harp+chorda, string], Mus., an obsolete keyboard instrument, the wires being strung upon a harp-shaped frame, similar in shape to a modern grand piano, but smaller in size: one of the forerunners of the piano, in general use from the 16th to the first half of the 18th century.

Har-py (här'pĭ), n. [pl. -pies (-pĭz)], [<Gk. harpuiai, harpies <harpazein, to snatch], Class. Myth., any of three evil, filthy, winged monsters, each with a woman's face and body, and the wings, tail, and claws of a vulture: harpy, 1, a grasping or rapacious person; extortioner; 2, a large, crested, tropical American eagle (Thrasaëtus harpyia); also called harpy eagle.

har-que-bus (här'kwē-bŭs), n. [<Fr. harquebuse <It. arcobugio, corr. of M.H.G. hakenbühse <haken, hook+bühse, gun], 1, an ancient portable gun having a matchlock, in use before the musket; 2, a soldier or company of soldiers armed with the harquebus. Also, har'que-buse; ar'que-bus.

har-que-bus-ier (här'kwē-bŭs-ēr'), n. a soldier armed with a harquebus as part of his equipment. Also, ar'que-bus-ier'.

har-ri-dan (har'ĭ-dăn), n. [perh. <Fr. haridelle, old jade], 1, a worn-out harlot; 2, an ugly, shrewish old woman; a vixen; a hag.

[1]har-ri-er (har'ĭ-ẽr), n. [<earlier harier, perh. <hare, q.v., or <harry], one of a breed of small dogs, similar to the hound, used for hunting hares.

[2]har-ri-er (har'ĭ-ẽr), n. [see harry], 1, one who or that which lays waste, ravages, or harries; 2, specifically, any of various hawks or falcons.

har-row (har'ō), n. [<M.E. harwe, a harrow], a farming instrument having sharp iron or wooden teeth, for breaking up clods or covering sown seed with earth:—v.t. 1, to drive a harrow over, as plowed land, so as to pulverize the soil; 2, to lacerate or torment; vex; distress.—n. har'row-er.

har-row-ing (har'ō-ĭng), p.adj. agonizing; vexing; tormenting.—adv. har'row-ing-ly.

har-ry (har'ĭ), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -ried (-ĭd), p.pr. -rying], [<A.S. hergian, to lay waste <O. Teut. source], 1, to plunder; lay waste; 2, to annoy; vex; tease; harass. Also, Archaic, har'row.

harsh (härsh), adj. [<M.E. harsk, perh. <Scand. source], 1, discordant; jarring to the mind; offensive to feelings or judgment; 2, rough to the hearing, taste, touch, or sight; 3, austere; severe; stern; unyielding.—adv. harsh'ly.—n. harsh'ness.

Syn. rigorous, severe, gruff, relentless, austere.

hars-let (härs'lĕt), n. [see haslet], the liver, heart, lungs, etc., of an animal, especially the hog, used for food. Also, has'let, Pfd. S.

hart (härt), n. [<A.S. heort, hart < O.Teut. source], the adult male of the red deer; a stag.

har-tal (hŭr-täl'), n. [Hind.], in India, a concerted cessation of work and business, as an expression of mourning or protest, or in celebration of an event.

harte-beest (härt'bēst"; härt'tē-bēst"), n. [S. Afr. Du. < Du. hert, hart+beest, beast], a large South African antelope (Bubalis caama) with doubly curved horns, now nearly extinct. Also, hart'beest".

harts-horn (härts'hôrn"), n. [hart + horn], 1, a stag's horn or antler; 2, the aqueous solution of ammonia: formerly distilled from the horns of stags: also called spirits of hartshorn; 3, ammonium carbonate; sal volatile: the principal constituent of smelling salts: formerly obtained from stags' horns.

hart's-tongue (härts'-tŭng"), n. any of various ferns, with straight or curved fronds, found in Eurasia, Mexico, and, rarely, in the United States. Also, harts'tongue".

har-um-scar-um (hâr'ŭm-skâr'ŭm), adj. [prob. 'em+scare 'em], Colloq., wild; thoughtless; rash; giddy; reckless; also, untidy:—adv. in a giddy, haphazard, or thoughtless manner:—n. a person so characterized.

ha-rus-pex (hă-rŭs'pĕks), n. [pl. -pices (-pĭ-sēz)], [Lat. = inspector of entrails], Rom. Antiq., a Roman diviner or soothsayer, not an official priest of the state religion, who interpreted natural phenomena and read the entrails of sacrificial victims.

har-vest (här'vĕst), v.t. [<A.S. hærfest, autumn < O.Teut. source], 1, to gather in or reap, as corn; 2, to receive as a reward, or as the fruit of any effort or exertion:—v.i. to gather in a crop:—n. 1, the season of reaping a crop of any kind; early autumn; 2, the gathering of a crop; 3, that which is reaped and gathered in; result of effort: harvest home, 1, the gathering and bringing home of the harvest; 2, an autumn festival after the harvest has been brought home; 3, a church service of thanksgiving held during the season of the ingathering of crops; 4, a song sung by the reapers at this season, or at the harvest feast: harvest moon, the full moon which occurs nearest the autumnal equinox: harvest mouse, any of several very small field mice, especially a European species (Mus minutus) which builds a globular nest on stalks of growing grain.

har-vest-er (här'vĕs-tẽr), n. 1, a reaping machine; 2, one who reaps; a reaper.

har-vest-man (här'vĕst-măn), n. [pl. -men (-mĕn)], [harvest+man], one who reaps; a harvester: Zoöl., an arachnid with small body and long, slender legs: commonly called daddy longlegs.

has (hăz), third person singular present indicative of the verb have.

has-been (hăz'-bĭn'), n. Colloq., something once useful but no longer so; especially, a person whose ideas or methods are no longer acceptable.

hash (hăsh), v.t. [< Fr. hacher, to cut], 1, to cut into small pieces; chop or mince, as meat; 2, to jumble; botch:—n. 1, something chopped in small pieces; especially, a dish of meat or vegetables chopped small: 2, any mixture; a jumble; 3, a botch.

hash-ish (hăsh'ēsh; hă-shēsh'), n. [Arab. = dry herb], an Oriental narcotic drug prepared from Indian hemp (Cannabis indica) and chewed or smoked for its intoxicating effect. Also, hash'eesh.

has-let (hăz'lĕt), n. [< O.F. hastelet, dim. of haste, a spit < Lat. hasta, a spear], the liver, heart, lungs, etc., of an animal, especially the hog, used for food. Also, hars'let.

hasp (hăsp), n. [< A.S. hæpse, a clasp], 1, a clasp passing over a staple and secured with a pin or padlock; 2, a hank of yarn:—v.t. to secure with a clasp and staple.

HASPS

1, protection hinge hasp; 2, common hinge hasp and lock.

has-sock (hăs'ŭk), n. [< A.S. hassuc, coarse grass], 1, a tuft of coarse grass; a tussock; 2, a mat or cushion for kneeling upon; a cushioned footstool.

hast (hăst), Archaic or Poet., second person singular present indicative of the verb hare.

has-tate (hăs'tāt), adj. [< Lat. hasta, spear], shaped like a spear: Bot., triangular, with a spreading, pointed lobe at each side of the base: said of a leaf (for illus. see leaf).

haste (hāst), n. [O.F. < O.Teut. source akin to A.S. hæst, fury, O.H.G. heisti, violent], 1, quickness of movement; celerity; speed; swiftness; 2, inconsiderate or rash hurry; 3, urgency; need of hurry or speed:—v.t. and v.i. [p.t. and p.p. hasted, p.pr. hasting], Rare, to hurry; hasten; dispatch.

Syn., n. nimbleness, dispatch, alacrity, hurry, expedition, bustle, flurry, rapidity, precipitancy.

has-ten (hās'n), v.t. 1, to cause to hurry; drive or urge on; 2, to dispatch; execute quickly:—v.i. to move or act with speed; be quick.—n. has'ten-er.

Syn. accelerate, quicken, expedite, speed.

hast-y (hās'tĭ), adj. [comp. -ier, superl. -iest], 1, precipitate; rash; 2, hurried; quick; speedy; 3, cursory; careless; superficial; impatient; 4, quick-tempered: Obs., impatient.—adv. hast'i-ly.—n. hast'i-ness.

Syn. quick, speedy, swift, fleet, impetuous, eager, hurried, lively. Hasty emphasizes the hurried quality of a motion or act, and has thus gathered the bad meaning of ill-considered. Speedy emphasizes rapidity; as, a speedy gait. Quick describes that which is prompt to respond, alert, lively in motion, sensitively intelligent; she was quick on her feet; quick at repartee.

hast-y pud-ding 1, in England, a pudding made by stirring flour or oatmeal into boiling water or milk; 2, in the United States, a batter or mush similarly made from corn meal.

hat (hăt), n. [< A.S. hæt, hat < O.Teut. source], a covering for the head, usually with a crown and brim, as distinguished from a cap, bonnet, or the like: R. C. Ch., a cardinal's red hat; hence, a cardinal's rank.—adj. hat'ted.

hat-band (hăt'bănd"), n. [hat+band], a fabric band around the crown of a hat; sometimes, a black band worn as a sign of mourning.

[1]hatch (hăch), n. [< A.S. hæc, gate, rail], 1, an opening in a deck, roof, floor, etc., usually with a removable cover; hatchway; 2, the cover for such an opening; 3, the lower half of a divided door, gate, etc.; 4, a sluice gate; 5, a weir set in a stream to catch fish.

[2]hatch (hăch), v.t. [< M.E. hacchen], 1, to produce young from; as, to hatch eggs; 2, to produce (young) from eggs; as, to hatch chickens; 3, to plot or contrive:—v.i. 1, to yield young, as eggs; 2, to come forth from the egg, as a young chick:—n. 1, the brood of young produced at one time; 2, the act of producing young from eggs; 3, result; outcome.—n. hatch'er.

[3]hatch (hăch), n. [< Fr. hacher, to cut], one of the system of fine crossed or parallel lines used in a drawing or engraving, as for shading:—v.t. to mark, engrave, or decorate with such lines; crosshatch.

hatch-el (hăch'ĕl), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -eled or -elled (-ĕld), p.pr. -eling or -elling], [see hackle], 1, to dress or comb, as flax or hemp; hackle or heckle; 2, to tease or vex:—n. a comb for cleansing flax or hemp: also called hackle or heckle.

hatch-er-y (hăch'ĕr-ĭ), n. [pl. -eries (-ĭz)], [see [2]hatch], a place where eggs, especially the eggs, or spawn, of fish, are artificially incubated.

hatch-et (hăch'ĕt), n. [< Fr. hachette, dim. of hache, ax], a tool for chopping, resembling a light, short-handled ax, used with one hand: to bury the hatchet, to put an end to hostilities or unfriendliness: hatchet face, a sharp, angular face.

HATCHETS

1, hatchet with claw; 2, hall hatchet; 3, lathing hatchet.

hatch-ing (hăch'ĭng), n. [see [3]hatch], in a drawing or engraving, the fine parallel or crossed lines used to give an effect of shading.

hatch-ment (hăch'mĕnt), n. [corr. of achievement], Her., in England, a lozenge-shaped panel, bearing the coat of arms of a deceased person, temporarily displayed, as on a tomb, or in a church.

hatch-way (hăch'wā"), n. [hatch+way], an opening for a passage through the deck of a vessel, a floor, roof, or the like.

hate (hāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. hated, p.pr. hating], [< A.S. hatian < O.Teut. source], 1, to abhor; abominate; detest; 2, to dislike; regard with displeasure; as, I hate to ride:—v.i. to feel hatred:—n. detestation; thorough dislike; hatred.—n. hat'er.

hate-ful (hāt'fo͝ol), adj. 1, exercising or exhibiting hatred; malignant; as, a hateful spirit; 2, deserving or causing hatred; abominable; odious; as, hateful vices.—adv. hate'ful-ly.—n. hate'ful-ness.

Syn. odious, detestable, loathsome, abhorrent, offensive, obnoxious, repulsive. That is hateful which awakens intense dislike or aversion; that is odious which not only excites aversion, but is disagreeable or repugnant besides; as, hateful faults, vices, talebearing; odious remarks, legislation, behavior. That is detestable which awakens indignation or revulsion spiced with contempt; as, detestable standards, cant, dissimulation. That is loathsome which is regarded with disgust, physical or moral; as, a loathsome reptile, habit. Abhorrent describes that so repugnant as to cause a mental shrinking or recoil, as from fear, horror, or disgust. Unsightly or disgusting things are offensive to the senses; officious or ill-mannered people are offensive to others. Obnorious adds to offensive the sense of extremely objectionable, and, as here compared, is applied only to people.—Ant. pleasing, lovable.

hath (hăth), third person singular present indicative, grave form, of the verb have.

Ha-thor (hä'thôr), n. [Gk. < Egypt.], Egypt. Myth., the goddess of love: usually represented as having a cow's head or ears: Hathor capital, Egypt. Arch., a square capital with a sculptured face of Hathor on each side (see Egyptian architecture, illus.).

ha-tred (hā'trĕd), n. [see hate], bitter aversion: active hostility; repugnance; malevolence.

Syn. detestation, animosity, enmity. (See antipathy.)

hat-ter (hăt'ẽr), n. a manufacturer of, or a dealer in, headgear; especially, a dealer in men's hats.

hau-berk (hô'bẽrk), n. [< O.F. hauberc < O.H.G. halsberg < hals, neck+-bergan, to cover], a coat of mail formed of interwoven steel rings.

haugh-ty (hô'tĭ), adj. [comp. -tier, superl. -tiest], [< earlier haught < Fr. haut, high < Lat. altus, high], 1, proud; disdainful; 2, overbearing; contemptuous.—adv. haugh'ti-ly.—n. haugh'ti-ness.

Syn. supercilious, insolent, reserved. (See arrogant.)

haul (hôl), v.t. [see [2]hale], 1, to pull or draw forcibly; 2, to transfer by drawing; 3, to turn the course of (a ship), especially closer to the wind:—v.i. 1, to change the course of a ship; 2, to shift, as the wind; hence, to change one's mind: with around; 3, to tug; pull; 4, to transport goods by wagon or truck as a business:—n. 1, a strong pull; 2, a single draft, as of a net, or the quantity obtained by it; 3, the distance over which anything is drawn.—n. haul'er.—n. haul'ing.

haul-age (hô'lăj), n. act or process of hauling; also, effort used in, or charge for, hauling.

haulm (hôm), n. [< A.S. healm, stem], 1, collectively, stalks or stems of grains, beans, peas, etc.; also, the dry stalks of straw and hay, used for bedding for animals, or for thatching roofs; 2, the jointed stem of grass or grain; culm. Also, halm (hôm).

haunch (hänch; hônch), n. [< O.F. hanche, hip < O.Teut. source], 1, of man, the hip and buttock; the hind part; 2, of meats, the leg and the loin taken together; a joint of venison or mutton: Arch., a curved section of an arch, about midway between the crown and the piers.

HAUNCHES (a, a) of an arch haunt (hänt; hônt), v.t. [<Fr. hanter, to haunt], 1, to visit frequently or habitually: 2, to trouble by frequent appearances or recurrences:—v.i. to remain or visit (in a given place) persistently and habitually:—n. a place of accustomed resort; a place of frequent or habitual refuge, as, the haunt of outlaws: Colloq., a ghost.—p.adj. haunt'ing.—n. haunt'er.

haus-to-ri-um (hôs-tō'ri-ûm), n. [pl. -ria (-ȧ)], [<Lat. haustor<haurire (haustus), to draw], Bot., in molds, mushrooms, and similar plants, a rootlike branch which absorbs food from the host or from decaying organic matter.

haut-boy (hō'boi), n. [<Fr. haut, high+bois, wood], Mus., 1, a high-pitched orchestral instrument of the wood-wind group, similar in shape to the clarinet, but with a double-reed mouthpiece: the oboe (for range see music); 2, the oboe stop in an organ; Bot., a European species of strawberry.

hau-teur (hō-tûr'), n. [Fr. = loftiness], an arrogant bearing or spirit; disdainful pride.

Ha-van-a (hȧ-văn'ȧ), n. [<Sp. Habana], a cigar made in Habana; also, any cigar made of Cuban tobacco. Also, Ha-van'na; Ha-van'nah.

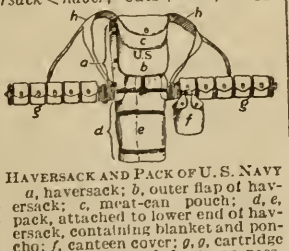
have (hăv), v.t. [present, I have, thou hast, he has, we, you, they have; p.t. and p.p. had (hăd), p.pr. having], [<A.S. habban, to have<O.Teut. source], 1, to hold; possess; 2, to contain; include; 3, to get; obtain; 4, to have knowledge of; understand; as, he has no Greek; 5, to be obliged; be under necessity: with to; 6, to harbor in mind; as, he has no ill will; 7, to show or express, as a feeling or opinion; as, he had the kindness to come; 8, to affirm; declare, as, rumor has it that, etc.; 9, in a general sense, to engage in; experience; suffer; enjoy; do with; as, to have a good time, a headache; 10, to give birth to (a child); 11, to bear a given relation to; as, we had the shore on our lee; 12, to be in control of; hold as or where desired; as, I have you on the hip; I have you where I want you; 13, to cause to be (done or the like); as, I will have the damage repaired: used also when the effect of the action is involuntarily received; as, he had his leg broken:—v.i. Archaic, to go or get (at, after, with, etc.): often in imperative, especially of first person, as, hare at thee; have after them:—v.aux. used with the past participle of a verb to form the present perfect, past perfect, and future perfect tenses (see perfect); as, I have gone, I had gone, I shall have gone. I had rather, I prefer to: I had better (go), it would be better for me (to go).

have-lock (hăv'lŏk), n. [<Henry Harelock, Br. general in India in 19th cent.], a white cloth cover for a military cap, with a flap hanging down over the neck as a protection against the sun.

ha-ven (hā'vn), n. [<A.S. hæfen<O.N. höfn, haven], 1, a harbor; a sheltered anchorage for ships; 2, any place of shelter and safety; a refuge.

hav-er-sack (hăv'ĕr-săk), n. [<Fr. harresac<Ger. habersack<haber, oats+sack, bag], a strong canvas bag for carrying rations.



HAVERSACK AND PACK OF U. S. NAVY

a, haversack; b, outer flap of haversack; c, meat-can pouch; d, e, pack, attached to lower end of haversack, containing blanket and poncho; f, canteen cover; g, g, cartridge belt about waist; h, h, straps passing over shoulders.

hav-ing (hăv'ing), n. [see have], 1, the act or state of possession; 2, that which one possesses; goods: usually pl.: Sc. (hăv'ing; -in), good manners, or behavior; breeding: usually pl.

hav-oc (hăv'ŏk), n. [<A.F. havok<O.F. harot, plunder], wide and general devastation; waste:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -ocked (-ŏkt). p.pr. -ocking], to ravage; lay waste.—v.i. to devastate: destroy.

1haw (hô), n. [<A.S. haga, yard, hedge], Bot., 1, any of several hawthorns, small, more or less thorny trees; 2, the fruit or the flower of any of these trees.

2haw (hô), n. [source uncertain], 1, a third eyelid found in many animals; also called nictitating membrane (which see for illus.); 2, a disease of the haw.

3haw (hô), n. [<ha, sound of hesitation], 1, a hesitation or faltering in speech; 2, the sound produced by this faltering:—v.i. to speak with interruption and hesitation: as, don't hem and haw so much.

4haw (hô), interj. [source uncertain], a sound made by a driver to direct his team to the left opposite of gee:—v.t. and v.i. to turn toward the left.

Ha-wai-ian (hä-wī'yăn), adj. [<nat. name], pertaining to the island of Hawaii:—n. 1, a native of Hawaii: 2, the Hawaiian language.

haw-finch (hô'finch"), n. [haw+finch], a kind of finch, the European grosbeak.

1hawk (hôk), n. [<A.S. habuc, hawk], 1, any of several strong, swift-flying birds of prey (family Buteonidæ), related to the kites, eagles, and buzzards, as the red-tailed hawk, the sparrow hawks (genus Accipiter), and others: 2, any of several falcons (family Falconidæ), as the pigeon hawk and others: 3, one who preys on others: a swindler; sharper:—v.t. to attack and strike in the air like a hawk:—v.i. 1, to hunt wild birds or game with the assistance of hawks; 2, to attack another bird while on the wing; attack as does a hawk.—p.adj. and n. hawk'ing.

2hawk (hôk), v.t. [prob.<2hawker], to peddle; cry out (wares) for sale from place to place.

3hawk (hôk), v.i. [prob. imit.], to force phlegm from the throat by coughing; clear the throat with a grating noise:—v.t. to bring up noisily, as phlegm:—n. a noisy and forcible attempt to clear the throat.

4hawk (hôk), n. [source uncertain], a plasterer's square board for holding mortar, held by means of a short handle underneath.

1hawk-er (hôk'ĕr), n. [see 1hawk], one who breeds, trains, or hunts with, hawks.

2hawk-er (hôk'ĕr), n. [prob.<M.L.G. hoker<hocken, to carry on the back], one who cries and sells goods in the streets; a peddler.

hawk-eyed (hôk'=īd"), adj. with sharp, piercing eyes; sharp-sighted like a hawk.

hawk moth any of several large, stout-bodied, swift-flying moths (family Sphingidæ), having hooked antennæ and a long proboscis for sucking the juice of flowers: a sphinx moth.

hawk's-bill (hôks'=bil"), n. a sea turtle from which tortoise shell is obtained: so named from its curved upper jaw: also called hawksbill turtle; hawk's-bill turtle. Also, hawks'bill".

hawk-weed (hôk'wēd"), n. [hawk+weed], Bot., any of a genus (Hieracium) of plants of the composite family, with heads of yellow flowers: formerly thought to give birds of prey keener vision.

hawse (hôz; hôs), n. [<16th cent. haulse, prob. <O.N. hals, neck], Naut., 1, that part of a ship's bow where the hawse holes are: 2, a hawse hole; 3, the distance on the surface of the water between a ship's bows and her anchor; 4, the situation of the cables of a ship moored by port and starboard anchors.

hawse hole Naut., one of the holes in a ship's bow through which a hawser passes. Also, n. hawse'hole".

HAWSE HOLE

A, hawse holes; B, anchor in place at one of the hawse holes; C, hawse holes.

haw-ser (hô'zĕr, hô'sĕr), n. [prob.<O.F. haucier, to hoist], Naut., a thick rope or cable used in towing or mooring a vessel.

haw-thorn (hô'thôrn), n. [haw+thorn], Bot., any of a genus (Cratægus) of small, thorny trees bearing fragrant flowers, and small red berries often called haws (see inflorescence, illus.).

1hay (hā), n. [<A.S. hīeg, hay<O.Teut. source], grass, clover, etc., cut and dried for fodder:—v.i. to harvest grass for fodder; make hay.

2hay (hā), n. [<A.F. haie, a net], 1, a net or snare set to catch an animal in its own haunts, 2, a lively, round country dance.

3hay (hā), n. [<A.S. haga, hedge], Obs., a hedge; also, a place inclosed by a hedge.

hay-cock (hā'kŏk"), n. [1hay+3cock], a cone-shaped pile of hay heaped up in the field.

hay fever Pathol., an acute nasal catarrh, accompanied by conjunctivitis, severe sneezing, slight fever, and pains in the head and eyes: usually appearing annually in the spring or late summer, and caused by plant pollen to which the individual is sensitized: also called hay asthma; rose cold.

hay-loft (hā'lôft"), n. [hay+loft], a loft, or upper story, for the storage of hay.

hay-mow (hā'mou"), n. [hay+2mow], 1, a mass of hay laid up in a barn; 2, the place in which the hay is stored; a hayloft.

hay-rick (hā'rik"), n. [1hay+rick], a large pile of hay stacked in the open air, a haystack.

hay-seed (hā'sēd"), n. [hay+seed], grass seed; also, chaff U. S. Colloq., a rustic.

hay-stack (hā'stăk"), n. [1hay+stack], a stack or pile of hay in the open air a hayrick.

hay-ward (hā'wôrd), n. [1hay+ward], 1, in England a parish officer who guards hedges and fences from damage by cattle grazing in a common herd; 2, in the United States, an officer who impounds stray animals.

hay-wire (hā'wīr"), n. [hay + wire], wire for binding bales of hay or straw: to go haywire, to go crazy; act in a wild, erratic, or irresponsible way.

haz-ard (hăz'ərd), n. [< O.F. hasard, game of dice, prob. < castle Hasart in Palestine (during siege of which game was invented) < Arab. 'Ain Zarba], 1, an old game of chance from which craps is derived; 2, the uncertainty of result in throwing dice; hence, chance; 3, risk; danger; 4, something risked, as the stakes in a bet: Court Tennis, any of three openings in the inclosure surrounding the court, called winning openings because a player who strikes a ball through any of them from the opposite side of the court scores a point; Billiards, in England, a stroke from which a ball rolls into a pocket after striking another ball; Golf, a bunker or other place in the course where the ball is difficult to play: hazard side, in court tennis, the side of the court into which the ball is served:—v.t. 1, to subject to risk or danger; take the risk of; 2, to put forth, as an opinion, as if risky or uncertain.

Syn., n. accident, casualty, peril. (See danger.)

haz-ard-ous (hăz'ər-dŭs), adj. dangerous; perilous; accompanied by, or involving, risk.

[1]haze (hāz), n. [source uncertain], 1, a slight fog or mist; 2, confusion, vagueness, or dimness of sight or mind:—v.i. and v.t. [p.t. and p.p. hazed (hāzd), p.pr. hazing], to be or make hazy or indistinct.

[2]haze (hāz), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. hazed (hāzd), p.pr. hazing], [< O.F. haser, to worry], 1, to subject to overwork or unpleasant tasks: applied especially to sailors; 2, to play practical jokes upon; bully: used in United States colleges of so-called disciplinary measures practiced upon freshmen by sophomores.—n. haz'er.

ha-zel (hā'zl), n. [< A.S. hæsel, hazel], 1, any shrub or tree of a genus (Corylus) of the birch family, bearing a small, rounded, edible nut in a coarse husk; 2, the nut of this tree; filbert; 3, the wood of this tree; 4, a soft, reddish brown color:—adj. 1, light reddish brown; 2, made of hazel wood.—adj. ha'zel-ly.

ha-zel-nut (hā'zl-nŭt"), n. [hazel + nut], the edible fruit of the hazel tree; the filbert.

ha-zy (hā'zi), adj. [comp. hazier, superl. haziest], [see [1]haze], misty; obscure; not clear; vague; uncertain.—adv. ha'zi-ly.—n. ha'zi-ness.

H. B. C. abbr. Hudson's Bay Company:—H. B. M., His (or Her) Britannic Majesty.

H bone the aitchbone, or bone of the rump in a beef; also, a cut of meat containing it.

H. C. abbr. 1, Heralds' College; 2, House of Commons:—h. c. f., highest common factor:—H. C. L., High Cost of Living:—H. D., 1, Headquarters Detachment; 2, Hawaiian Department:—hdkf., handkerchief:—He, Chem., the symbol [He] for the element helium:—H. E., 1, His Eminence; 2, His (or Her) Excellency; 3, Hydraulic Engineer; 4, Horizontal Equivalent:—h. e., 1, [Lat. hoc est], that is; 2, [Lat. hic est], this is.

[1]he (hē), masc. pron. of third person [possessive his (hĭz), objective him (hĭm); pl., nominative they (thā), possessive their (thâr), theirs (thârz), objective them (thĕm)], [< A.S. hē, he], standing for: 1, a previously designated male, or object thought of as a male; 2, following a noun of common gender, a male or female person or thing; 3, anyone; as, he who runs may read:—n. [pl. often hes (hēz)], a man or male; as, I am that unfortunate he: he-, prefix, male: as, a he-goat.

[2]he (hā), n. [Heb. = window], the fifth letter of the Hebrew alphabet (ה‎ (see App. I)), approximately equivalent to the English h: as a numerical symbol, 5.

head (hĕd), n. [< A.S. hēafod < O.Teut. source], 1, Anat., the uppermost part of the body in man, the fore part in most animals, attached to the neck, comprising the face, brain, ears, etc.; 2, the top part of a plant, especially when compact; as, a head of cabbage; specifically, Bot., a rounded, compact form of inflorescence, as that of clover (for illus. see inflorescence); 3, the seat of the understanding or intellect; hence, intelligence; wits; 4, a person; as, the crowned heads of Europe; 5, the front or foremost part of anything, as of a procession; 6, a leader or commander; 7, a place of honor or authority; pre-eminent position; 8, the fore part, as of a vessel (see sail, illus.); 9, the upper end of anything, as of a barrel, bed, drum; also, a head-shaped upper end, as of a cane; 10, a separate topic or subject; a title to a division of a discussion; 11, origin or source, as of a river; 12, an individual: often used as a pl.: as, ten head of cattle; 13, crisis or height; 14, latent or reserve force; pressure, as of a stream; pressure as measured by the distance in feet between the level of the surface of a liquid and the level of any specified point; 15, liberty; as, to give a horse his head; 16, froth on liquor: Golf, the part of a club with which the ball is struck; Mus., 1, that part of a violin in which the pegs are inserted; 2, the oval mark, attached to the stem of a note, which indicates the pitch (see note, illus.); Geog., a promontory: heads, the side of a coin showing a head head voice, voice made by vocal cords adjusted for the higher notes:—adj. 1, principal; chief; 2, acting against, or meeting, the front; as, a head wind; 3, placed at the front or top:—v.t. 1, to lead; direct; 2, to take the first place in; 3, to get in front of; intercept; oppose: often with off; 4, to direct the course of; 5, to supply with, or deprive of, a head; 6, in soccer, to strike (the ball) with the head:—v.i. 1, to move in a given direction: 2, to come to a climax: often with up; 3, to form into a head; 4, to rise, as a stream.—n. head'ship.

HEAD (def. 14)

A, level of water in tank; distances ab, ac, ad represent the head at B, C, D, respectively.

-head suffix, [< M.E. -hede < O.Teut. suffix, akin to -hood, Ger. -heit], used to form nouns of condition from nouns and adjectives; as, god*head.*

head-ache (hĕd'āk"), n. [head + ache], pain in the head.—adj. head'ach"y.

head-cheese (hĕd'chēz"), n. [head + cheese], chopped up portions of the head and feet of a pig or calf, seasoned and pressed into a loaf.

head-dress (hĕd'drĕs"), n. [head + dress], 1, a covering or ornament for the head; 2, manner of wearing the hair; a coiffure.

head-ed (hĕd'ĕd), adj. [see head], 1, having a head (of a specified kind); as, flat-headed; 2, formed into a compact mass, as cabbage.

head-er (hĕd'ĕr), n. 1, one who takes a leading part; 2, a plunge or fall headforemost; 3, one who affixes heads, as in pin making; 4, a machine for making or removing heads; specifically, a machine that cuts off the heads of wheat stalks in the field; 5, a single horse placed in front of a team to help it uphill: Carp. or Building, 1, in framing, a cross timber between two parallel timbers, as floor joists, called trimmers, to support the ends of intervening timbers, called tailpieces; 2, in masonry, a brick or stone laid with its head end, or smaller face, toward the surface of the wall: opposite of stretcher.

HEADERS

1, in carpentry: a, header; b, b, trimmers; c, tailpieces; 2, in bricklaying: a, a, a, a, headers; b, b, stretchers; c, three-quarter brick used to effect the desired bond.

head-first (hĕd"fûrst'), adv. [head + first], 1, with the head first; headlong; 2, in rash haste.

head-fore-most (hĕd"fôr'mōst), adv. [head + fore-most], 1, with the head first; headlong; 2, hastily; impetuously; rashly.

head gate 1, an upper canal-lock gate; 2, a gate for admitting water to a sluice, race, etc.

head-gear (hĕd'gēr"), n. [head + gear], 1, anything worn upon the head; a headdress; 2, the part of the harness of a horse that goes over the head: Naut., the rigging on the forward sails; Mining, hoisting gear at the mouth of a shaft.

head-ing (hĕd'ĭng), n. [see head], 1, that which serves as a head or source; 2, a title; a stated topic at the head of a paragraph or section; 3, formation into a compact mass, as in certain plants; 4, material for heads of casks or barrels; 5, a narrow edge of lace or embroidery used for trimming; also, an edge or fold of goods above a line of stitching or gathering; 6, progress; tendency in a given direction: Mining, 1, a horizontal passage; drift; 2, a vein over a drift.

head-land (hĕd'lănd), n. [head + land], 1, a promontory; cape; 2, a strip of unplowed land at the ends of furrows or along a fence.

head-light (hĕd'līt"), n. [head + light], a bright lamp, as at the front of a locomotive or automobile: Naut., a white masthead light.

head-line (hĕd'līn"), n. [head + line], 1, a line of type at the top of a page, containing page number, title, etc.; 2, a heading, often in large type, at the top of a newspaper column or at the beginning of an article, with the title and subtitles; 3, a rope attached to an animal's head.

head-long (hĕd'lông), adv. [< M.E. headling, headforemost], 1, headforemost; 2, rashly; impetuously; precipitously:—adj. 1, rash; thoughtless; impetuous; abrupt; reckless; 2, plunging headfirst.

head-man (hĕd'măn), n. [head + man], 1, a chief or leading man; in Russia, a Cossack chief, or hetman; 2, an executioner. Also, heads'man.

head-most (hĕd′mōst), adj. [head+-most], 1, first in time or place; most advanced; 2, chief in rank or dignity.

head-piece (hĕd′pēs″), n. [head+piece], 1, a covering or piece of armor for the head; 2, an ornamental design at the beginning of a chapter: Colloq., 1, the head; 2, mental ability.

head-quar-ters (hĕd′kwôr′tẽrz), n.sing. and pl. [head+quarters], 1, the office or residence of a commanding officer; 2, the office from which orders are issued; the center of authority; 3, the personnel of such an office.

head-race (hĕd′rās″), n. [head+race], a race, channel, or flume for carrying water to a water wheel: opposite of tailrace, which carries the water away.

heads-man (hĕdz′măn), n. [pl. -men (-mĕn)], [head+man], 1, a public executioner; 2, a leader; a chief. Also, head′man.

head-stall (hĕd′stôl″), n. [head+stall], 1, a harness, the part of the bridle or halter that fits over the horse's head.

head-stock (hĕd′stŏk″), n. [head+stock], Mech., a bearing or support for a rotating part; especially, in a lathe, the pedestal or support of the chuck or live center that turns the work (see lathe, illus.).

head-stone (hĕd′stōn″), n. [head+stone], 1, a corner stone; 2, a tombstone.

head-strong (hĕd′strông), adj. [head+strong], ungovernable; self-willed; stubborn.

Syn. obstinate, stubborn, wilful, wayward, perverse, intractable, determined. Obstinate describes one who holds to his own opinion or course in spite of reason, appeal, persuasion, or attack. Obstinacy lies in the will. A stubborn man, like the obstinate one, refuses to change, but stubbornness is more apt to be innate and hence habitual than obstinacy, and applies to an unyielding quality, inherent in facts as well as in persons. Headstrong describes a violently impetuous person. Wilful people are more deliberate than the headstrong, and more stubborn than the wayward, who yield to caprice or whim. The perverse person is always different from what he should be, as in action, purpose, or desire.

head-wa-ters (hĕd′wô″tẽrz), n.pl. [head+water], the upper waters of a stream.

head-way (hĕd′wā″), n. [head+way], 1, forward motion, as of a vessel; momentum; 2, progress or success of any kind; 3, the time intervening between two trains, trolleys, or the like, running in the same direction over the same route; 4, clear space under a bridge, arch, or beam; clearance.

head-y (hĕd′ĭ), adj. [comp. -ier, superl. -iest], [see head], 1, precipitate; wilful; rash; ungovernable; 2, intoxicating, as liquor.—n. head′i-ness.

heal (hēl), v.t. [< A.S. hælan, to heal < O.Teut. source], 1, to restore to health; cure; make sound; 2, to reconcile; settle, as differences:—v.i. to become well or sound.—n. heal′er.

health (hĕlth), n. [< A.S. hælth, wholeness < hāl, whole], 1, soundness of physical, mental, or moral condition; especially, freedom from bodily pain or disease; 2, a toast to a person's health and happiness.

health-ful (hĕlth′fo͝ol), adj. 1, promoting bodily welfare; wholesome; 2, beneficial; advantageous; favorable; 3, of sound health; healthy. —adv. health′ful-ly.—n. health′ful-ness.

Syn. hygienic, sanitary, wholesome. (See healthy.)

health-y (hĕl′thĭ), adj. [comp. -ier, superl. -iest], 1, in a sound or wholesome condition; sound; well; 2, contributing to bodily welfare; healthful.—adv. health′i-ly.—n. health′i-ness.

Syn. healthful, wholesome, vigorous, hale, hearty, salutary, sanitary, salubrious, nutritious, bracing. Healthy is most properly applied to that which has good health or is in a vigorous, thriving condition; as, a healthy man or tree. Healthy also means conducive to health, and is applied to fresh air, exercise, climate, or other agents contributing to health, except food, to which wholesome is applied; as, a healthy method of life; a wholesome diet. Healthy and healthful are to a degree interchangeable; but healthful is more commonly used of conditions that are health-giving, as air, climate, exercise. We do not say healthy food, but healthful food; we say a healthy, not a healthful, man. Salubrious, which carries a definite sense of improving the health, is applied chiefly to climate or air, rarely to food or exercise. Salutary measures produce good effects; salutary conditions are positively beneficial; unlike salubrious, salutary is now used chiefly in the moral sense.

heap (hēp), n. [< A.S. hēap, crowd], 1, a pile or collection of things thrown together; 2, a large quantity; lot:—v.t. 1, to form into a pile or mass; pile up; 2, to bestow generously; 3, to fill to overflowing.

hear (hēr), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. heard (hûrd), p.pr. hearing], [< A.S. hīeran < O.Teut. source], 1, to perceive by the ear; 2, to attend or listen to; give heed to; take notice of; 3, to receive information of by hearing; 4, to obey; accede to the wishes of; 5, to listen to regularly in some manner, as a preacher or a university lecturer: Law, to carry on an examination of (a case): —v.i. 1, to have the sense of hearing; 2, to listen; attend; 3, to be told; gain information:—interj. used occasionally by persons in an audience to indicate approval of the speaker's words.—n. hear′er.

Syn., v. apprehend, learn, perceive, grant. (See listen.)

hear-ing (hēr′ĭng), n. 1, the act or capacity of perceiving sounds; 2, the sense by which sound is perceived; 3, privilege or opportunity of being heard; audience; 4, the distance over which sounds may be heard; earshot; 5, a formal examination and discussion of facts and evidence conducted in the presence of some official person, as a judge or commissioner.

hark-en (här′kn), v.i. [< A.S. hercnian, to listen], to listen; heed:—v.t. to listen to attentively; hear: Obs., to wait. Also, hark′en.

hear-say (hēr′sā″), n. [hear+say], rumor; gossip; common report:—adj. secondhand; derived from rumor: hearsay evidence, Law, testimony by a person concerning matters of which he knows only what has been told him by a second person.

hearse (hûrs), n. [< Fr. herse, a bier or rack for carrying the dead < Lat. hirpex, a harrow], 1, formerly, a frame on which a corpse was carried; a bier; also, a coffin; 2, now, a wagon or other vehicle for carrying the dead:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. hearsed (hûrst), p.pr. hearsing], 1, to place in a hearse; 2, to bury; 3, to cover with a pall.

heart (härt), n. [< A.S. heorte < O.Teut. source], 1, Anat. and Zoöl., a hollow, muscular organ in the thorax (see thorax, illus.), which maintains the circulation of the blood through the blood vessels; 2, this organ considered as the seat of the affections, passions, and emotions, as distinguished from the intellect and will; 3, hence, tenderness; sympathy; affection; 4, also, courage; spirit; energy; 5, sweetheart; beloved: used as a term of endearment; 6, a bold or brave man: used in affectionate commendation; 7, one's secret thoughts; innermost soul; conscience; 8, one's personality as a vital or active force; as, to love with one's whole heart; 9, the vital, inner, or chief part; center; core; 10, a conventional design representing a heart; 11, one of a suit of cards marked with such a conventional design in red: pl. a game at cards, in which the object is to avoid taking heart tricks: by heart, by memory; hence, exactly or intimately; as, to know by heart: —v.t. to construct with a solid center: Obs., to encourage:—v.i. to develop a compact center.

HUMAN HEART
Showing right side with auricle and ventricle laid open. R.a., right auricle; R.v., right ventricle; L.a., left auricle; L.v., left ventricle; Ao., aorta; P.a., pulmonary artery; S.v., semilunar valves; T.v., tricuspid valves.

HEART

heart-ache (härt′āk″), n. [heart+ache], sorrow; grief; distress.

heart-break (härt′brāk″), n. [heart+break], 1, overpowering sorrow or grief; 2, a cause of grief or sorrow.—adj. heart′break″ing.

heart-bro-ken (härt′brō″kn), adj. inconsolable; in despair; overwhelmed by sorrow.

heart-burn (härt′bûrn″), n. [heart+burn], Pathol., 1, a burning sensation in the region of the stomach, usually caused by indigestion; 2, jealousy; discontent; enmity:—n. and adj. heart′burn″ing.

heart-ed (härt′ĕd), adj. [see heart], 1, seated in the heart; 2, having a (specified kind of) heart: used in compounds, usually with reference to feelings or qualities of character; as, good-hearted.

heart-en (här′tn), v.t. to give courage to; inspire; animate: Obs., to restore fertility to (land).

heart-felt (härt′fĕlt″), adj. [heart+feel], earnest; sincere; with deep emotion.

hearth (härth), n. [< A.S. heordh, fireplace], 1, the paved floor of a fireplace, often continued outside the fireplace proper into the room; the part of a stove, furnace, or the like, on which the fire is built (see forestick, illus.); 2, that part of a room where the fire is made; the fireside; 3, hence, the home itself: Metal., 1, the floor of a forge or furnace where ore is exposed to the action of heat; 2, the lowest part of a blast furnace, which contains the molten metal.

hearth-stone (härth′stōn″), n. [hearth+stone], 1, the flat stone of a hearth, on which the fire is built; also, 2, the fireside or the home itself; 3, a kind of soft stone, used for scouring hearths.

heart-less (härtlĕs), adj. [heart+-less], 1, without affection; 2, cruel; 3, lacking in courage.—adv. heart'less-ly.—n. heart'less-ness.

heart–rend-ing (härt'=rĕn"dĭng), adj. causing extreme anguish or grief.

hearts-ease (härts'ēz"), n. [heart + ease], tranquillity of mind or feeling: Bot., any of several flowering plants, as the wild pansy and the wallflower. Also, heart's'–ease".

heart-sick (härt'sĭk"), adj. [heart + sick], distressed in mind; despondent.

heart-sore (härt'sōr"), adj. [heart + sore], heart-sick; despondent; grief-stricken.

heart-string (härt'string"), n. [heart + string], 1, a tendon formerly believed to sustain the heart; 2, the seat of the profoundest emotions or affections: usually pl.

heart–whole (härt'=hōl"), adj. 1, having the heart's affections free; not in love; 2, sincere; genuine: 3, undaunted; fearless.

heart-wood (härt'wo͝od"), n. [heart+wood], Bot., the hard, tough, inner wood in a tree trunk; duramen (for illus. see alburnum).

heart-y (härt'ĭ), adj. [comp. -ier, superl. -iest], [see heart], 1, coming from the heart; kind; cordial; sincere; warm; 2, strong; vigorous; 3, healthy; keen in appetite; abundant; 4, fertile, as land:—n. [pl. -ies (-tĭz)], good fellow; pal: used especially of sailors.—adv. heart'i-ly.—n. heart'i-ness.

Syn., adj. sincere, cordial, earnest, ardent. A sincere person is free from pretense; a sincere statement, feeling, or the like, is honest. Hearty adds to sincere a genial vigor of feeling, usually simple, even blunt in expression, appealing through its unvarnished genuineness; as, a hearty welcome. Cordial adds to sincere a warmth of feeling; as, cordial greetings.

heat (hēt), n. [<A.S. hǣtu, heat], 1, Phys., a form of energy possessed by bodies, made manifest by their temperature, change of state, as from solid to liquid, etc.; 2, the state of being hot; also, the degree to which a thing is heated; 3, the sensation produced by a hot body; 4, highness of temperature: opposite of cold; 5, appearance or color as indicative of temperature; redness or flush of the face; 6, fermentation; effervescence or bubbling; 7, agitation of sudden or violent passion; ardor; vehemence; animation: Metal., a heating, as of a mass of metal or ore to be melted in a furnace; Sports, 1, a single course at a race or contest; 2, one of several preliminary races run off when there are too many contestants to run in one race, by means of which the poorer contestants are gradually eliminated; Zoöl., in animals, sexual appetite, especially of the female, during the breeding season: heat of combustion, Phys., the amount of heat produced when a unit weight of a substance burns: heat of formation, Chem., the amount of heat liberated or absorbed when a chemical compound is formed or decomposed: heat of fusion, Phys., the heat absorbed by a substance in passing from the solid to the liquid state: heat of vaporization, Phys., the heat absorbed by a substance in passing from the solid or liquid state to that of a vapor or gas: heat of solution, Chem., the amount of heat liberated or absorbed when a substance goes into solution: heat treatment, a process for improving the physical properties of metals, as steel, by heating to a specified temperature and cooling slowly or rapidly as required, and then tempering: latent heat, Phys., the heat energy absorbed in bringing about melting or vaporization, as of ice at 0° centigrade into water at 0°; or, conversely, the quantity of heat released by the reverse process: specific heat, Phys., the amount of heat required to raise the temperature of a unit weight of a substance one degree: heat lightning, distant lightning, without thunder, near the horizon, especially at the close of a hot day: heat prostration, a condition of temporary exhaustion caused by exposure to heat: heat stroke, a serious condition of profound prostration, caused by exposure to excessive heat:—v.t. 1, to make hot; 2, to excite with passion or desire; make feverish; animate:—v.i. 1, to grow hot or warm; 2, to become feverish or excited.

heat-er (hēt'ẽr), n. 1, one who or that which gives warmth; 2, specifically, a stove, furnace, or other appliance used to make a place warm.

heath (hēth), n. [<A.S. hǣdh, heath], a tract of waste or level land, covered with heather or other coarse vegetation, especially in Great Britain: Bot., 1, any of various plants of a large family (Ericaceæ) of evergreen shrubs including the common heather of Great Britain, the blueberry, huckleberry, rhododendron, etc.; 2, any of various similar plants.—adj. heath'y.

heath bird Ornith., the black grouse (Lyrurus tetrix) of British heaths, the male being called heath cock and the female, heath hen.

hea-then (hē'*th*n), n. [pl. heathen; sometimes, individually considered, heathens], [<A.S. hǣdhen, a dweller on a heath: because one who lived in remote regions was deprived of religion], 1, one who does not acknowledge Jehovah as God; one who is neither Jewish, Christian, nor Mohammedan; a pagan; idolater; 2, a rude, irreligious, uncultured person:—adj. 1, pagan; 2, irreligious; uncultured.

hea-then-dom (hē'*th*n-dŭm), n. 1, the state or condition of being a pagan; 2, heathen peoples or regions collectively.

hea-then-ish (hē'*th*n-ĭsh), adj. 1, pertaining to, or like, a pagan; 2, rude; ignorant; uncultured; irreligious.—adv. hea'then-ish-ly.

hea-then-ism (hē'*th*n-ĭzm), n. 1, ignorance of the true God; 2, the rites and practices of pagans; paganism; idolatry; 3, barbarous manners or morals: crudeness.

hea-then-ize (hē'*th*n-īz), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -ized (-īzd), p.pr. -izing], to make like a pagan or irreligious person:—v.i. to practice paganism.

heath-er (hĕth'ẽr), n. [source uncertain], a much-branched evergreen shrub (Calluna vulgaris), of the heath family, native in Asia Minor and Europe, and occurring in many varieties: blooming profusely in late summer with white, pink, or carmine single or double flowers: also called heath.—adj. heath'er-y.

heave (hēv), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. heaved (hēvd) or hove (hōv), p.pr. heaving], [<A.S. hebban, to heave<O.Teut. source], 1, to hoist or lift up with effort; 2, to force from the breast, as a sigh; 3, to cause to rise or to swell; 4, to throw: Naut., to draw or haul into a certain position, as an anchor:—v.i. 1, to be lifted up; 2, to swell; 3, to rise and fall alternately; 4, to strain; pant; 5, to vomit: Naut., 1, to haul, pull, or push: used with at; 2, to move, as does a ship; rise and fall alternately:—n. 1, an effort or exertion upward; 2, the act of throwing; 3, swell or rising; 4, struggle; 5, effort to vomit: Geol., the horizontal displacement of a rock mass caused by movements along the incline of a fault plane.

heav-en (hĕv'n), n. [<A.S. heofone, heaven], 1, Theol., the abode of God, and of the blessed after death; 2, a state or condition of bliss; a sublime and exalted condition; 3, any place of supreme happiness or comfort: the heavens, the firmament or sky: Heaven, the Deity: the supreme sovereign of the universe.—adj. and adv. heav'en-ward.—adv. heav'en-wards.

heav-en-ly (hĕv'n-lĭ), adj. 1, of, pertaining to, or like the sky or visible heavens; 2, of or pertaining to the abode of God and the blessed; celestial; divine; 3, supremely excellent:—adv. in a manner appropriate to heaven.—n. heav'en-li-ness.

Syn., adj. divine, sacred, blessed. (See celestial.)

heav-er (hēv'ẽr), n. [see heave], one who or that which lifts; especially, one who loads or unloads goods from boats: as, coal hearer: Naut., a short wooden crowbar, or lever.

heaves (hēvz), n. an asthmatic disease of horses, characterized by difficult breathing, wheezing, a peculiar cough, and heaving of the flanks.

Heav-i-side lay-er (hĕv'ĭ-sīd), [<O. Heaviside (1850–1925), Br. physicist], Rad., a region of ionized air, favorable to the propagation of radio waves, beginning about 65 miles above the earth: also called ionosphere.

heav-y (hĕv'ĭ), adj. [comp. -ier, superl. -iest], [<A.S. hefig < hefe, weight], 1, weighty; ponderous; 2, large in quantity, extent, or effects; as, a heavy fall of snow; 3, operating on a large scale; as, a heavy buyer; 4, oppressive; hard; burdensome; 5, grave; serious; 6, dejected; depressed; burdened; 7, dull; stupid; 8, powerful; deep; loud; 9, indigestible; not raised light; as, heavy cake; 10, thick; coarse; as, heavy linen; 11, rough; filled with mud clogs, as a road; impeded by such clogs; as, heavy going; 12, strong; as, heavy wines; 13, pregnant: heavy hydrogen, deuterium (which see): heavy water, water in which the hydrogen content is in the form of atoms of deuterium, or heavy hydrogen.

Syn. ponderous, massive. (See onerous.)

heav-y spar Chem., barium sulphate: the commercial name: also called barite; barytes.

heav-y-weight (hĕv'ĭ-wāt"), n. [heavy+weight], 1, a very heavy person; 2, especially, a wrestler or boxer weighing over 175 pounds.

heb-dom-a-dal (hĕb-dŏm'ă-dăl), adj. [<Gk. hebdomas, week < hepta, seven], weekly; occurring every seven days.

He-be (hē'bē), n. [<Gk. = youth], Gk. Myth., the goddess of youth, daughter of Hera and Zeus, and cupbearer to the gods before Ganymede.

heb-e-tate (hĕb'ē-tāt), v.t. and v.i. [p.t. and p.p. -tated, p.pr. -tating], [<Lat. hebetare (-atus) < hebes, blunt], to make, or to become, dull or stupid:—adj. obtuse; stupid.—n. heb"e-ta'tion.

he-bet-ic (hē-bĕt′ĭk), adj. [< Gk. hēbētikos, pertaining to puberty < hēbē, youth, puberty], Physiol., pertaining to adolescence or puberty.

heb-e-tude (hĕb′ē-tūd), n. [< Lat. hebetudo, dullness], obtuseness; stupidity; dulness.

He-bra-ic (hē-brā′ĭk), adj. [< Gk. Hebraikos < Aram. hebrai: see Hebrew], pertaining to the Hebrews, their language, or their literature.

He-bra-ism (hē′brā-ĭzm), n. [< Fr. hébraïsme < Gk. Hebraismos < Aram. 'ebrai: see Hebrew], 1, a Hebrew phrase, custom, or trait; 2, the spirit characteristic of the Hebrews; 3, the Hebrew religion; Judaism.

He-bra-ist (hē′brā-ĭst), n. 1, one who is learned in the Hebrew language and literature; 2, a follower or adherent of Judaism; 3, in ancient Palestine, one who retained Hebrew as his native language in opposition to the Greek influence.—adj. He-bra-is′tic.

He-brew (hē′brōō), n. [< Aram. hebrai < Heb. 'ibrī, one from the other side < 'abar, to cross over], 1, a member of one of the Semitic tribes: an Israelite; a Jew; 2, the ancient language of the Hebrews, exemplified in the Old Testament: pl. a book of the New Testament, the Epistle to the Hebrews:—adj. of or pertaining to the Hebrews.—abbr. Heb.; Hebr.

NOTE.—For the ancient Hebrew calendar, see App. II.

Hec-a-te (hĕk′a-tē; formerly often hĕk′āt), n. [< Gk.], Gk. Myth., 1, a goddess with threefold power, over the moon, earth, and the underworld; 2, later, the goddess of witchcraft. Also, Hek′a-te.

hec-a-tomb (hĕk′a-tōm; -tōōm), n. [< Gk. hekatombē < hekaton, hundred + bous, ox], 1, in ancient times, a great public sacrifice of a hundred oxen; hence, 2, any large sacrifice or slaughter.

heck-le (hĕk′l), n. [see hackle], an instrument for cleaning flax or hemp: also called hackle; hatchel:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. heckled (-ld), p.pr. heckling], 1, to comb or dress, as flax or hemp; hackle or hatchel; 2, to question sharply; interrupt (a public speaker) with intent to annoy and confuse.—n. heck′ler.

hec-tare (hĕk′târ), n. [Fr. < Gk. hekaton, a hundred + Lat. area, space], in the metric system, a land measure equal to 100 ares, or 10,000 square meters, or 2.471 acres. Also, hek′tare.—abbr. ha.

hec-tic (hĕk′tĭk), adj. [< Gk. hektikos, habitual < hexis, physical habit < ekhein, to have], 1, constitutional: slow, but of long continuance: pertaining to gradual wasting away, as of animal tissue; 2, consumptive; hence, 3, pertaining to the fever that accompanies tuberculosis: Colloq., exciting; feverish; distracting; as, we passed a hectic hour:—n. 1, a fever accompanying tuberculosis, or some similar organic disease, characterized by a bright pink spot or flush on the cheeks; 2, the vivid flush accompanying a hectic fever; 3, a consumptive person.

hec-to-gram (hĕk′tō-grăm), n. [Gk. hekaton, hundred + gramma, a weight], 100 grams, or 3.527 ounces avoirdupois. Also, hek′to-gram; hec′to-gramme; hek′to-gramme.—abbr. hg.

hec-to-graph (hĕk′tō-grăf), n. [< Gk. hekaton, hundred + graphein, to write], an apparatus having a surface of gelatin treated with glycerin, for reproducing copies of a letter or drawing.

hec-to-li-ter (hĕk′tō-lē″tĕr), n. [< Gk. hekaton, hundred + litra, a pound], a liquid measure equal to 100 liters, or 26.42 gallons; one tenth of a cubic meter. Also, hec′to-li″tre; hek′to-li″ter; hek′to-li″tre.—abbr. hectol.; hl.

hec-to-me-ter (hĕk′tō-mē″tĕr), n. [Gk. hekaton, hundred + metron, a measure], a measure of length equal to 100 meters, or 328 feet, 1 inch. Also, hec′to-me″tre; hek′to-me″ter; hek′to-me″tre.—abbr. hectom.; hm.

Hec-tor (hĕk′tĕr), n. [< Gk.], in Homer's "Iliad," the eldest son of Priam and Hecuba of Troy, husband of Andromache, and the greatest of the Trojan warriors killed, with Athena's help, by Achilles, in vengeance for the death of Patroclus.

hec-tor (hĕk′tĕr), v.t. [< Gk. Hektōr, Trojan hero < hektōr, holding fast < ekhein, to have], 1, to bully; domineer; intimidate by threats; 2, to tease; irritate or provoke:—v.i. to bluster; be boisterous: swagger:—n. a blustering fellow; a bully.

hec-to-stere (hĕk′tō-stēr), n. [Fr. < Gk. hekaton, hundred + stereos, solid], in the metric system, a cubic measure equal to 100 cubic meters, or 3,531.44 cubic feet. Also, hek′to-stere.

Hec-u-ba (hĕk′ū-bà), n. [Lat. < Gk. Hekabē], in Homer's "Iliad," the wife of Priam, king of Troy, and mother of Hector, who suffered many woes after the fall of Troy and finally was changed into a dog.

hed-dle (hĕd′l), n. [source uncertain], one of a series of cords or wires in the harness of a loom to regulate the warp threads:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. heddled (-ld), p.pr. heddling], to draw (the thread) through the eye of the needle.

hedge (hĕj), n. [< A.S. hecg, hedge < O.Teut. source], 1, a fence of bushes or shrubs, often used as a boundary; 2, a line of objects or persons used as a barrier:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. hedged (hĕjd), p.pr. hedging], 1, to inclose with a border of bushes or shrubs; encircle; 2, to hinder; limit; obstruct; 3, to hem in; barricade; protect:—v.i. 1, Obs., to build a hedge; 2, in betting, to bet on both sides, so that the possibility of loss will be diminished; 3, to avoid committing oneself; evade; skulk: Com., in speculations on the grain or produce market, to deal in futures so as to reduce the risk of loss due to price change:—adj. 1, pertaining to a hedge; 2, of the lowest class: because vagabonds meet under hedges; as, hedge lawyers.

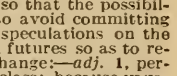
hedge-hog (hĕj′hŏg″), n. [hedge + hog], 1, any of a genus (Erinaceus) of small, insect-eating mammals of the Old World, related to the mole, about twelve inches long, having spines or quills similar to those of the porcupine; 2, any of various animals of similar appearance, as the American porcupine.



HEDGEHOG

hedge priest formerly, in England, a wandering clergyman with little scholastic training.

hedg-er (hĕj′ẽr), n. [see hedge], 1, one who builds or trims hedges; 2, one who protects himself against losses by betting on both sides, or by dealing in futures on the stock exchange.

hedge-row (hĕj′rō″), n. [hedge + row], a fence of small trees or shrubs.

hedge spar-row a small sparrowlike European warbler (Accentor modularis), inhabiting hedges and shrubbery, whence the name.

he-don-ic (hē-dŏn′ĭk), adj. [< Gk. hēdonē, pleasure], of or pertaining to pleasure, or to the philosophy which makes pleasure the goal of life.

he-don-ism (hē′dŏn-ĭzm; hēd′ŏn-ĭzm), n. 1, Ethics., a doctrine of certain ancient Greek philosophers, which taught that the ethical goal and chief good of life is the enjoyment of personal pleasure in the gratification of desires; also, a doctrine of some modern philosophers, sometimes called utilitarianism, that the ethical goal of life is to bring about the maximum pleasure for mankind; 2, hence, self-indulgence. living for pleasure.—n. he′don-ist.—adj. he″do-nis′tic.

heed (hēd), v.t. [< A.S. hēdan, to take care], to notice carefully; take notice of; mind; attend; observe; regard:—v.i. to give attention; take care; be on the alert:—n. careful attention; regard; caution.

Syn., n. consideration, watchfulness. (See care.)

heed-ful (hēd′fo͝ol), adj. 1, observing; watchful; attentive; 2, cautious; discreet; mindful; guarded.—adv. heed′ful-ly.—n. heed′ful-ness.

heed-less (hēd′lĕs), adj. inattentive; neglectful.—adv. heed′less-ly.—n. heed′less-ness.

Syn. inconsiderate, careless, unobserving, inattentive, neglectful, rash.—Ant. cautious, thoughtful, prudent.

[1]heel (hēl), v.t. [corr. of obs. heeld < A.S. hieldan < heald, sloping], to cause (a ship) to lean to one side:—v.i. to list: said of a ship.—n. heel′ing.

[2]heel (hēl), n. [< A.S. hēla, heel], 1, the hinder part of the foot; 2, the hinder part of a boot, shoe, or stocking; 3, anything shaped like a heel; 4, anything, or part of a thing, resembling the human heel in position; as, the heel of a scythe or golf club:—v.t. 1, to furnish with a heel; 2, to strike, as a ball, with the heel end of a club or instrument; 3, to follow closely, as a dog; 4, to seize the heel of; 5, to equip (a fighting cock) with steel spurs: Colloq., to equip (oneself) with a gun: heel in, Hort., to cover (the roots of plants or trees) temporarily with earth until permanently planted:—v.i. 1, to tap with the heel, as in dancing; 2, to follow at the heels, as does a dog.—n. heel′ing.

heel-er (hēl′ẽr), n. 1, one who puts heels on shoes; 2, one who follows close after another, as a disreputable political hanger-on; 3, a fast runner.

heel-tap (hēl′tăp″), n. 1, [heel + tap], a thickness or layer of leather for a shoe heel: 2, [heel + tap], a small quantity of liquor left in a glass.

[1]heft (hĕft), n. [dial. < heave, q.v.], Colloq., 1, heaviness; weight; 2, the greater part or bulk; the gist of a thing:—v.t. Colloq., 1 to try the weight of, as by lifting; 2, to lift:—v.i. Colloq., to weigh.

[2]heft (hĕft), n. [see haft], a haft or handle; the hilt of a sword, dagger, or the like.

he-gem-o-ny (hē-jĕm′ō-nĭ; hĕj′ē-mō-nĭ; hē′jē-mō-nĭ), n. [pl. -nies (-nĭz)], [< Gk. hēgemōn, leader], 1, leadership; 2, powerful or predominating influence; authority: usually said of the influence of one government over another.

heg-i-ra (hĕj'ĭ-rȧ; hē-jī'rȧ), n. [< Arab. hijrah, departure from one's country], 1, the flight of Mohammed from Mecca to Medina, A. D. 622, regarded as the beginning of the Mohammedan era; 2, a flight. Also, hej'i-ra.

heif-er (hĕf'ẽr), n. [< A.S. heahfore, heifer], a young cow that has not yet calved.

heigh (hī; hā), interj. [natural cry], calling attention, or expressing jubilation, surprise, interrogation, or encouragement.

heigh–ho (hī'=hō"; hā'=hō"), interj. [heigh + ho], expressing languor, mild surprise, joy, etc.

height (hīt), n. [< A.S. hīehtho < hēah, high < O.Teut. source], 1, extent from the base to the top; altitude; especially, of man, stature; 2, the distance of an object above a fixed point; elevation; 3, an eminence or hill; 4, the highest point; summit; hence, 5, the highest state or position; highest rank; distinction; 6, the highest degree; extreme; top.

height-en (hīt'n), v.t. 1, to raise; lift; elevate; 2, to intensify; enhance; increase; aggravate:—v.i. 1, to rise in height: 2, to increase.

Syn. intensify, inflate, augment, increase, aggravate.

Heim-dall (hām'dăl), n. [< O.N.], Norse Myth., the vigilant watchman of Asgard, with power to see a hundred leagues by day or night and to hear the grass grow. Also, Heim'dallr; Heim'dal.

hei-nous (hā'nŭs), adj. [< Fr. haineux < haine, hatred < haïr, to hate], hateful; odious; atrocious.—adv. hei'nous-ly.—n. hei'nous-ness.

Syn. odious, nefarious, villainous, flagrant, atrocious, outrageous, monstrous. Heinous, said of a crime or a criminal, connotes extreme wickedness; heinous sins or crimes are repulsively grievous. Flagrant, said of an offense or offender, means, literally, burning, and this meaning has been carried over into a figurative sense of glaring, or openly scandalous; as, a flagrant breach of moral law. Atrocious means blackly, violently wicked or brutal. Outrageous carries the sense of exceeding the bounds of right, decency, or morality; as, outrageous conduct; an outrageous affront.

heir (ār), n. [O.F. < Lat. heres, heir], 1, Law, one who succeeds, or is entitled to succeed, another in the possession of an estate or title immediately after the death of the other; 2, loosely, anyone who receives a part of the property of a deceased person; 3, one who inherits any qualities or advantages, as mental gifts, reputation, or virtues, from another: heir apparent, Law, one whose right to inherit property cannot be annulled if he outlives his ancestor: heir presumptive, Law, one who will succeed as heir if his right is not voided by the birth of one nearer in succession.

heir-ess (ār'ĕs), n. a woman or girl who inherits, or is heir to, property or title.

heir-loom (ār'lōōm"), n. [heir + loom], 1, any movable or personal property, which by connection with an estate descends to posterity; 2, any bit of personal property handed down in a family for generations; also, 3, any personal quality, mental gift, or characteristic, handed down to posterity.

heir-ship (ār'shĭp), n. [heir + -ship], 1, state, condition, or rights of one who inherits; 2, possession by inheritance.

hej-i-ra (hĕj'ĭ-rȧ; hē-jī'rȧ), n. [see hegira], 1, the flight of Mohammed from Mecca; 2, any flight. See heg'i-ra, Pfd. S.

Hek-a-te (hĕk'ȧ-tē), n. [< Gk.], 1, a Greek goddess with authority in heaven, earth, and the underworld; later, 2, the patroness of witchcraft. See Hec'a-te, Pfd. S.

hek-tare (hĕk'tār), n. [see hectare], one hundred ares of land. See hec'tare, Pfd. S.

hek-to-gram (hĕk'tō-grăm), n. [see hectogram], one hundred grams, or 3.527 ounces avoirdupois. Also, hec'to-gram, Pfd. S.

hek-to-li-ter (hĕk'tō-lē"tẽr), n. [see hectoliter], one hundred liters, or 26.42 gallons liquid measure. See hec'to-li"ter, Pfd. S.

hek-to-me-ter (hĕk'tō-mē"tẽr), n. [see hectometer], one hundred meters, or 328 feet, 1 inch. See hec'to-me"ter, Pfd. S.

hek-to-stere (hĕk'tō-stēr), n. [see hectostere], one hundred cubic meters, or 3531.44 cubic feet. Also, hec'to-stere, Pfd. S.

Hel (hĕl), n. [< O.N.], Norse Myth., 1, goddess of the dead, and queen of the lower world: similar to the Roman goddess Proserpina; 2, the lower world itself; the home of the dead. Also, Hel'a.

held (hĕld), past tense and past participle of the irregular verb hold.

Hel-en (hĕl'ĕn), n. [< Gk. Helenē], Gk. Myth., the beautiful daughter of Zeus and Leda, who was married to Menelaus, king of Sparta, and whose elopement with Paris caused the Trojan war.

Hel-e-nus (hĕl'ĕ-nŭs), n. [< Gk.], Gk. Myth., a Trojan, son of Priam, gifted with prophecy, who deserted Troy and joined the Greeks.

he-li-a-cal (hē-lī'ȧ-kăl), adj. [< Gk. hēliakos, of the sun < helios, sun], pertaining to the sun: Astron., designating the rising of a star which has just overtaken the sun the first time it is far enough from the sun to be visible before sunrise, or the setting of a star just before it overtakes the sun the last time it is far enough from the sun to be visible after sunset.

hel-i-cal (hĕl'ĭ-kăl), adj. [see helix], pertaining to, or of the form of, the thread on a screw, or helix, or of an advancing spiral.—adv. hel'i-cal-ly.

hel-i-coid (hĕl'ĭ-koid), adj. [< Gk. helix, spiral + eidos, form], coiled spirally: Zoöl., shaped like a snail shell:—n. Geom., any of various warped or twisted surfaces resembling a screw.

Hel-i-con (hĕl'ĭ-kŏn), n. [< Gk.], 1, Gk. Myth., a mountain range in Bœotia, Greece, believed by the Greeks to be frequented by Apollo and the Muses; hence, 2, source of inspiration to poets: helicon, Mus., a brass wind instrument, similar in range and quality to the bass tuba and often used in its place on marches.—adj. Hel"i-co'ni-an (-kō'nĭ-ăn).

hel-i-cop-ter (hĕl"ĭ-kŏp'tẽr), n. [< Gk. helix, spiral + pteron, wing], Aëro., a flying machine that is lifted and held up by horizontal propellers (for illus. see aviation). Also, hel"i-cop'tre.

he-li-o-cen-tric (hē"lĭ-ō-sĕn'trĭk), adj. [< Gk. hēlios, sun + kentron, center], Astron., 1, as if seen from the center of the sun: used of the position of a celestial object; 2, pertaining to, or having, the sun as a center; as, the heliocentric theory of the solar system considers the sun its center: opposite of geocentric. Also, he"li-o-cen'tri-cal.

he-li-o-chrome (hē"lĭ-ō-krōm"), n. [< Gk. hēlios. sun + khrōma, color], a photograph in natural colors.

he-li-o-gram (hē"lĭ-ō-grăm"), n. [< Gk. hēlios, sun + gramma, a weight], a message transmitted by heliographic methods.

he-li-o-graph (hē"lĭ-ō-grâf"), n. [< Gk. hēlios, sun + graphein, to write], 1, a photo-engraving; 2, an instrument for photographing the sun; 3, an apparatus, using a mirror, for signaling by reflecting flashes of sunlight: used chiefly in military and surveying operations:—v.t. 1, to signal by means of a heliograph; 2, to photograph by using an astronomical camera:—v.i. to signal.—adj. he"li-o-graph'ic.—n. he"li-og'ra-pher.—n. he"li-og'ra-phy.

HELIOGRAPH

a, direction of sun's rays, before and after incidence; b, back of mirror; c, sighting device; d, operating key; e, stand.

he-li-o-lith-ic (hē"lĭ-ō-lĭth'ĭk), adj. [< Gk. hēlios, sun + lithos, stone: in allusion to practices named below], designating an ancient type of culture, existent in the neolithic age in coastal regions of the Mediterranean, of India, Borneo, China, Mexico, and Peru, characterized by worship of the sun and the serpent together, circumcision, couvade, massage, the making of mummies, deformation of the head by bandaging, tattooing, use of the swastika, and megalithic monuments.

he-li-om-e-ter (hē"lĭ-ŏm'ĕ-tẽr), n. [< Gk. hēlios, sun + metron, a measure: because orig. designed to measure the diameter of the sun], Astron., an instrument consisting of a telescope of which the object glass is cut in halves, so that by the relative movement of the two parts it is possible to measure moderately small angular distances in the sky.

He-li-os (hē'lĭ-ŏs), n. [Gk. = the sun], Gk. Myth., the sun god who drove his four-horse chariot across the sky: sometimes identified with Apollo, with Phaëthon, properly his son, and with Hyperion, properly his father.

he-li-o-scope (hē'lĭ-ō-skōp"), n. [< Gk. hēlios, sun + skopein, to look], Astron., a telescope or other instrument devised to protect the eyes during observations of the sun.—adj. he"li-o-scop'ic.—n. he"li-os'co-py.

he-li-o-stat (hē"lĭ-ō-stăt"), n. [< Gk. hēlios, sun + statos, fixed], Astron., 1, an instrument consisting of a mirror mounted on a polar axis and moved by clockwork, so as to reflect the sun's rays to a fixed point; 2, a form of this instrument, provided with a shutter and used for signaling.

he-li-o-ther-a-py (hē"lĭ-ō-thĕr'ȧ-pĭ), n. [< Gk. hēlios, sun + therapeuein, to heal], the treatment of disease by sun baths.

he-li-o-trope (hē'lĭ-ō-trōp), n. [< Gk. hēlios, sun + -tropos < trepein, to turn], Bot.,

1, any of a genus (Heliotropium) of plants of the borage family, especially the sweet-scented cultivated species (H. peruvianum), bearing purple or violet flowers; 2, a light purple color; 3, a heliograph (which see, def. 3): Archaic, any of several plants, as the sunflower, marigold, etc., whose flowers turn so as to face the sun as it moves: Mineral., a green variety of silica with small red spots of jasper; bloodstone: garden heliotrope, a tall, slender, garden plant (Valeriana officinalis), bearing clusters of small, white, very sweet flowers.

he-li-o-trop-ic (hē″lĭ-ō-trŏp′ĭk), adj. Biol., reacting to the stimulus of light: positively heliotropic, turning toward light: negatively heliotropic, turning away from light.

he-li-ot-ro-pism (hē″lĭ-ŏt′rō-pĭzm), n. Biol., the tendency of plants or animals to be heliotropic, or to react to light, especially sunlight.

he-li-o-type (hē″lĭ-ō-tīp″), n. [< Gk. hēlios, sun + tupos, impression], 1, a photo-engraving made on a gelatin plate which is afterward hardened for printing; 2, an impression taken from such a plate.—adj. he″li-o-typ′ic (-tĭp′ĭk).

he-li-o-typ-y (hē″lĭ-ō-tīp″ĭ), n. a method of printing a picture by transferring it from an ordinary negative to a sensitive gelatin film, which is hardened to form a printing surface and inked and printed like any other engraving.

he-li-um (hē″lĭ-ŭm), n. [< Gk. hēlios, sun], Chem., a very light, colorless, gaseous element [symbol He], first known as a constituent of the sun's atmosphere, but later found in mineral compounds of uranium, thorium, etc., and as a constituent of natural gases, used, because of its lightness and noninflammability, for inflating balloons, dirigibles, etc.

he-lix (hē′lĭks; hēl′ĭks), n. [pl. helices (hĕl′ĭ-sēz); helixes (hē′lĭk-sĕz; hēl′ĭk-sĕz)], [Gk. = a spiral], anything in the shape of the thread of a screw, or of a coiled spring: Arch., a spiral line ornament or scroll; Math., the path of a point traced on the curved surface of a right cylinder as the cylinder revolves at a uniform speed about its axis and the point moves at a uniform speed along a line parallel to that axis, as the common screw thread; Anat., the hollowed margin of the external ear; Zoöl., 1, any of a genus (Helix) of air-breathing cephalopod mollusks, as land snails, 2, a spirally coiled shell hell (hĕl), n. [< A.S. hel, place of the dead], 1, the place of the dead or of departed souls, corresponding to the Greek Hades or the Hebrew Sheol; 2, the place of punishment for the wicked after death corresponding to Tartarus or Gehenna; 3, the evil spirits inhabiting hell; 4, any place or condition of extreme misery or evil; 5, a place where evildoers gather, as a gambling house:—interj. used as an imprecation.

hell-bend-er (hĕl′bĕn″dẽr), n. [hell+bend], a large aquatic salamander, about eighteen inches long and very tenacious of life, found commonly in the streams of the Ohio valley: Slang, 1, a drunken carouser; 2, a debauch.

hell-bent (hĕl′bĕnt″), p.adj. Slang, reckless of consequences; determined to do or have.

hell-broth (hĕl′brŏth″), n. [hell+broth], a magic concoction brewed for evil purposes.

Hel-le (hĕl′ē), n. [< Gk.], Gk. Myth., sister of Phrixus, with whom she was fleeing through the air on the ram with the golden fleece when she fell into the strait thereafter called the Hellespont.

hel-le-bore (hĕl′ē-bōr), n. [< Lat. < Gk. helleboros, name of plant], 1, any of several perennial herbs (genus Helleborus) of the crowfoot family; especially, in Europe, the black hellebore (H. niger), cultivated for its handsome flowers, produced in winter; 2, the powdered root of the plant, used for medicinal purposes; 3, any of several similar plants having poisonous rootstocks; 4, the powdered root of these plants, used as an insecticide.

Hel-lene (hĕl′ēn), n. [pl. -lenes (-ēnz)], [< Gk. proper name], 1, Gk. Myth., a member of a Thessalian tribe led by Hellen, legendary ancestor of the true Greeks; 2, later, a person of the pure Greek race of the classical period; 3, a modern Greek.

Hel-len-ic (hĕ-lĕn′ĭk; -lē′nĭk), adj. 1, strictly, pertaining to, or characteristic of, classic Greece; especially, pertaining to the social and cultural aspects of classical Greek civilization, or to classic Greek art and literature; 2, pertaining to the Greeks in general; 3, pertaining to the literary Greek language as distinguished from Romaic, the modern vernacular.

Hel-len-ism (hĕl′ĕn-ĭzm), n. 1, a Greek manner of speech; 2, admiration or imitation of the Greeks; 3, the Greek national spirit; 4, the spirit characteristic of the classic Greek period.

Hel-len-ist (hĕl′ĕn-ĭst), n. 1, a Jew who spoke Greek in preference to Hebrew; 2, one learned in Greek; 3, a scholar who spread Greek culture during the Renaissance; 4, one who believes that the primary basis for personal culture is to be found in the spirit of the ancient Greeks.

Hel-len-is-tic (hĕl″ĕn-ĭs′tĭk), adj. 1, aiming at, or tending toward, the Greek spirit; 2, possessing, or partaking of, Hellenic characteristics, with foreign or decadent admixture: used especially of Greek art, literature, and culture after the time of Alexander the Great.

Hel-len-ize (hĕl′ĕn-īz), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -ized (-īzd), p.pr. -izing], to cause to conform to Greek standards or usages:—v.i. to imitate the Greeks in language and custom.

hell-gra-mite (hĕl′grə-mīt), n. [source uncertain], the aquatic larva of an insect (Corydalis cornuta), the dobson, or crawler, resembling a dragon fly, HELLGRAMITE often used by anglers as fish bait.

hell-hound (hĕl′hound″), n. [hell+hound], 1, a dog of hell; hence, 2, a malicious person; a demon; a diabolically evil person; a fiendish pursuer.

hell-ish (hĕl′ĭsh), aaj. [see hell], 1, having to do with, or like, hell; 2, diabolical; infernal.

hell-kite (hĕl′kīt″), n. [hell+kite], one who exhibits diabolical cruelty.

hel-lo (hĕ-lō″), interj. [see hollo], used to attract attention:—n. a salutation much used in the United States in telephoning:—v.i. [p.t. and p.p. -loed (-lōd″), p.pr. -loing], to call out.

[1]helm (hĕlm), n. [< A.S. helma, rudder], 1, the mechanism for steering a ship, comprising rudder and tiller or wheel for moving it; often, the wheel or tiller alone; 2, a post of command, guidance, or government:—v.t. to steer or guide.

[2]helm —v.t. to cover or equip with a helmet.

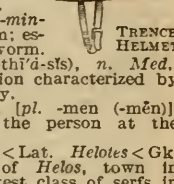
hel-met (hĕl′mĕt), n. [obs. Fr., dim. of helme, protection], 1, metal or leather armor for the head (for illus. see arms, habergeon, reredos); 2, anything resembling such a head protection in shape or use: Bot., the hooded upper lip of some flowers, as the snapdragon.



TRENCH HELMET

hel-minth (hĕl′mĭnth), n. [< Gk. helmins (-minthos), helminth], Zoöl., a worm; especially, an intestinal parasitic worm.

hel-min-thi-a-sis (hĕl″mĭn-thī′ə-sĭs), n. Med., a condition characterized by the presence of worms in the body.

helms-man (hĕlmz′măn), n. [pl. -men (-mĕn)], [helm+man], the person at the helm, who steers a ship or boat.

Hel-ot (hĕl′ŏt; hē′lŏt), n. [< Lat. Helotes < Gk. Heilōtes, inhabitants of Helos, town in Sparta], a bondsman of the lowest class of serfs in ancient Sparta: helot, any slave or serf.

hel-ot-ism (hĕl′ŏt-ĭzm; hē′lŏt-ĭzm), n. a state like that of the Helots; slavery; serfdom.

hel-ot-ry (hĕl′ŏt-rĭ; hē′lŏt-rĭ), n. 1, Helots as a class; 2, slaves; serfs; 3, serfdom; slavery.

help (hĕlp), v.t. [< A.S. helpan, to help < O.Teut. source], 1, to give assistance to; aid; support; sustain; succor; relieve; 2, to prevent; as, I cannot help his going; 3, to distribute, as food, at table; also, to distribute food to, at table; 4, to cure:—v.i. 1, to lend aid; assist; be available or useful; 2, to distribute food at table:—n. 1, assistance; aid; support; succor; 2, remedy; cure; 3, that which forwards or promotes; 4, a portion of food; 5, in the United States, a servant, also used collectively, with a plural verb, to denote a corps of hired servants.—n. help′er.

Syn., v. befriend, encourage, uphold, accommodate, coöperate, aid, assist, relieve, succor. Help, aid, and assist are to a degree interchangeable. Help is the strongest and most inclusive term, emphasizing the positiveness of the support rendered and the actual need for it. To aid is to further, often by coöperation, the work, struggles, or aim of another. To assist is to afford slight, casual, or subordinate service to another. We help the poor; we aid a reformed sinner to get a fresh start; we assist a feeble person to get off a street car. To reliere is to remove pain, or to free from anxiety; to succor is to render quick aid to one fallen into difficulty; we reliere suffering by medicine, the wants of the poor by contributions; we succor one found dying in the desert by giving him water.—Ant., v. hinder, discourage, block, impede, balk, thwart.

help-ful (hĕlp′fo͝ol), adj. giving aid or inspiration: beneficial; wholesome; useful; serviceable.—adv. help′ful-ly.—n. help′ful-ness.

help-ing (hĕl′pĭng), n. a portion of food served at a meal; a help; as, a helping of meat.

help-less (hĕlp'lĕs), adj. unable to do for oneself: Rare, beyond remedy; also, giving no help.—adv. help'less-ly.—n. help'less-ness.

help-mate (hĕlp'māt"), n. [corr. of help meet: see Gen. 2:18], 1, an assistant; a coworker; a partner; 2, companion; spouse, especially a wife. Also, help'meet".

hel-ter-skel-ter (hĕl'tĕr-skĕl'tĕr), adj. and adv. [Imit.], in hurried confusion; tumultuous(ly):—n. disorder; confused and hasty action.

helve (hĕlv), n. [<A.S. hielfe, handle], the handle of a tool, as an ax:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. helved (hĕlvd), p.pr. helving], to equip with a handle.

Hel-ve-tian (hĕl-vē'shăn), adj. [see Helvetii], pertaining to the Helvetii or to Switzerland:—n. one of the Helvetii; also, a Swiss.

Hel-vet-ic (hĕl-vĕt'ĭk), adj. relating to Helvetia, or Switzerland:—n. a follower of the reformer Zwingli (1484–1531); a Swiss Protestant.

Hel-ve-ti-i (hĕl-vē'shĭ-ī), n.pl. [Lat., pl. of Helvetius, a Swiss], the ancient Gallic inhabitants of Switzerland and the Alpine regions.

[1]hem (hĕm), n. [<A.S. hemm, an inclosure], 1, the edge or margin of a cloth or garment turned back and sewed down to prevent fraying; also, the edge of sheet metal similarly bent back; 2, an edging or a border on a fabric:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. hemmed (hĕmd), p.pr. hemming], 1, to fold over and sew down the edge of (a cloth or garment); bend back the edge of (sheet metal); 2, to shut in; surround.

[2]hem (hĕm), interj. [natural sound], expressing hesitation or doubt, or used to attract attention: often pronounced as a half cough or clearing of the throat:—n. the utterance or sound of hem:—v.i. [p.t. and p.p. hemmed (hĕmd), p.pr. hemming], 1, to utter the sound of hem; 2, to stammer or hesitate in speaking.

he-mal (hē'măl), adj. [see hæmal], of or pertaining to the blood. See hæ'mal, Pfd. S.

hem-a-tite (hĕm'ă-tīt; hē'mă-tīt), n. [Gk. haimatitēs (lithos), bloodlike (stone)], Mineral., a red to black mineral, native anhydrous ferric oxide, occurring massively or in crystals: one of the most important ores of iron; bloodstone. Also, hæm'a-tite.

hem-i-cy-cle (hĕm'ĭ-sī"kl), n. [<Gk. hēmi-, half +kuklos, a circle], 1, a half circle; semicircle; 2, a semicircular structure.

hem-i-ple-gi-a (hĕm"ĭ-plē'jĭ-ă), n. [<Gk. hēmi-, half+plēgē, a stroke], Pathol., a paralysis of one side of the body.—adj. hem"i-pleg'ic.

He-mip-ter-a (hē-mĭp'tĕr-ă), n.pl. [<Gk. hēmi-, half+pteron, wing], Entom., the true bugs, a large order of insects usually having four wings, the outer pair of which are thickened at the base, and having piercing suctorial mouth parts: including squash bugs, bedbugs, giant water bugs, and others.—adj. he-mip'ter-al.—adj. he-mip'ter-ous.

REPRESENTATIVE HEMIPTERA

1, giant water bug; 2, bedbug; 3, lace bug; 4, squash bug; 5, stinkbug.

hem-i-sphere (hĕm'ĭ-sfēr), n. [<Gk. hēmi-, half+sphaira, sphere], 1, either of the two half spheres formed by a plane passing through the center of a sphere; 2, half the terrestrial or celestial globe; as, the Eastern Hemisphere, including the continents of Europe, Asia, Africa, and Australia, and the Western Hemisphere, including North America and South America; also, 3, a map of a hemisphere of the earth or heavens; 4, the people of a hemisphere: Anat., either of the two divisions of the cerebrum.—adj. hem"i-spher'ic; hem"i-spher'i-cal.

hem-i-sphe-roid (hĕm"ĭ-sfē'roid), n. [<Gk. hēmi-, half+sphaira, sphere +eidos, shape], one of the halves into which a figure resembling a sphere, but not exactly spherical, may be cut by a plane.—adj. hem"i-sphe-roi'dal.

hem-i-stich (hĕm'ĭ-stĭk), n. [<Gk. hēmi-, half +stikhos, verse], Pros., 1, half a verse of poetry, especially as divided by a cæsura, or pause; also, 2, an incomplete line.

hem-lock (hĕm'lŏk), n. [<A.S. hymlice, hemlock], 1, any tree of a genus (Tsuga) of large evergreens of the pine family: also called hemlock spruce; also, the lumber from such a tree; 2, any of several poisonous plants of the parsley family, with finely divided leaves and white flowers, as poison hemlock.

hem-mer (hĕm'ĕr), n. [see [1]hem], 1, one who turns back the edge of cloth and sews it down to prevent fraying; 2, an attachment to a sewing machine for doing this kind of work; 3, a device for turning back the edges of sheet metal.

he-mo-glo-bin (hē"mō-glō'bĭn), n. [see hæmoglobin], Anat. and Zoöl., the red coloring matter of the red blood corpuscles of vertebrates. See hæ"mo-glo'bin, Pfd. S.

he-mo-phil-i-a (hē"mō-fĭl'ĭ-ă; hĕm"ō-), n. [see hæmophilia], Med., a tendency to prolonged bleeding from even a trifling wound. See hæ"mo-phil'i-a, Pfd. S.

hem-or-rhage (hĕm'ō-rāj), n. [<O.F. emorogie <Gk. haimorrhagia <haima, blood +rhēgnunai, to break], Pathol., escape of blood from a blood vessel: any bleeding. Also, hæm'or-rhage.

hem-or-rhoids (hĕm'ō-roidz), n.pl. [<O.F. emoroyde <Gk. haimorrhoïdes (phlebes), bleeding (veins) <haima, blood+-rhoos, flowing], Pathol., painful swellings of the veins of the mucous membrane in the rectum, often accompanied by escape of blood: commonly called piles. Also, hæm'or-rhoids; Archaic, em'er-ods.—adj. hem"or-rhoi'dal.

hemp (hĕmp), n. [<A.S. henep, hemp], an annual Asiatic herb (Cannabis sativa), three to ten feet high, or its tough fiber, used for making cordage and various kinds of coarse fabrics; also, a related species (C. indica), the source of a drug and intoxicant called hashish: Colloq., a rope for hanging.—adj. hemp'en.

hem-stitch (hĕm'stĭch"), n. [hem+stitch], 1, a particular kind of ornamental stitching made by pulling out several parallel threads and drawing the cross threads together in small groups; 2, a piece of fancywork done with this stitch:—v.t. to finish by using this style of needlework.

hen (hĕn), n. [<A.S. henn, fem. of hana, cock], the female of the domestic or barnyard fowl, or chicken, of which the male is called cock, or of various other birds: pl. chickens.

hen-bane (hĕn'bān"), n. [hen+bane], Bot., a coarse, fetid herb of the nightshade family (Hyoscyamus niger), with sticky, hairy leaves and yellowish brown flowers, poisonous to most animals.

hence (hĕns), adv. [<M.E. hennes, hence], 1, from this place, time, source, point of view, or the like; 2, for this reason:—interj. begone!

hence-forth (hĕns"fôrth'; hĕns'fôrth"), adv. [hence +forth], from this time on.

hence-for-ward (hĕns"fôr'wĕrd), adv. [hence +forward], from now on; from this time forward; henceforth.

hench-man (hĕnch'măn), n. [pl. -men (-mĕn)], [hench (<A.S. hengest, a horse) +man], a political assistant or supporter; a trusted follower: Obs., a groom; a page of honor; squire.

hen-dec-a-gon (hĕn-dĕk'ă-gŏn), n. [<Gk. hendeka, eleven+gōnia, angle], Geom., a polygon having eleven sides and eleven angles.

hen-dec-a-syl-la-ble (hĕn-dĕk"ă-sĭl'ă-bl), n. [<Gk. hendeka, eleven +syllabē, syllable], Pros., a line of verse, especially in Latin, of eleven syllables.—adj. hen-dec"a-syl-lab'ic.

hen-di-a-dys (hĕn-dī'ă-dĭs), n. [<Gk. hen dia duoin, one thing by two], Gram., the expression of a thought by two nouns joined by and, rather than by a noun and a qualifier; as, "goblets and gold," for "golden goblets."

hen-e-quen (hĕn'ē-kĕn), n. [<Sp. jenīquén <nat. name], sisal hemp. Also, hen'e-quin.

hen-na (hĕn'ă), n. [Arab.], 1, an Asiatic tree or shrub with fragrant white flowers, used as a hedge in India; 2, a reddish brown cosmetic or dye made from its leaves; 3, a reddish brown color.

hen-ner-y (hĕn'ĕr-ĭ), n. [pl. -ies (-ĭz)], [see hen], 1, a hen farm; 2, a hen house or hen yard.

hen-pecked (hĕn'pĕkt"), adj. [hen+[2]peck], governed by one's wife; domineered over; harassed by trivial annoyances.—v.t. hen'peck".

hen-ry (hĕn'rĭ), n. [pl. -rys; -ries (-rĭz)], [< Joseph Henry (1799–1878), Am. physicist], Elec., the practical unit of inductance; the inductance of a circuit in which an electromotive force of one volt is induced by a current varying at the rate of one ampere per second.

hent (hĕnt), v.t. [p.t. hente, p.p. hent, p.pr. henting], [< A.S. gehentan, to seize], Archaic, 1, to lay hold of; grasp; 2, to affect; 3, to carry off; 4, to experience:—n. Archaic, that which is grasped.

he-pat-ic (hē-păt'ĭk), adj. [< Gk. hēpar (hēpatos), the liver], of or pertaining to the liver.

he-pat-i-ca (hē-păt'ĭ-kä), n. [pl. -cæ (-sē); -cas (-käz)], Bot., 1, any of several herbs (genus Hepatica) of the crowfoot family, bearing pink, purplish, or white flowers; 2, any of a class (Hepaticæ) of simple, leaflike plants, including the liverworts; one of the lower mosses (see Bryophyta, illus.).

He-phæs-tus (hē-fĕs'tŭs), n. [< Gk. Hēphaistos], Gk. Myth., the god of the forge: identified with Vulcan. Also, He-phais'tos (-fīs'tŏs).

Hep-pel-white (hĕp'ĕl-hwīt), adj. [< proper name], designating, or pertaining to, a style of furniture of the 18th century developed by A. Heppelwhite and Company (see furniture, illus.).

hep-ta-chord (hĕp'tä-kôrd), n. [< Gk. hepta, seven + khordē, string], Mus., 1, a series of seven notes; 2, a seven-stringed musical instrument; 3, the interval of the major seventh.

hep-ta-gon (hĕp'tä-gŏn), n. [< Gk. hepta, seven + gōnia, angle], Geom., a polygon having seven sides and seven angles.—adj. hep-tag'o-nal.

REGULAR HEPTAGON

hep-ta-he-dron (hĕp'tä-hē'drŏn), n. [< Gk. hepta, seven + hedra, base], Geom., a solid with seven plane faces.—adj. hep'ta-he'dral.

hep-tam-e-ter (hĕp-tăm'ē-tẽr), n. [< Gk. hepta, seven + metron, a measure], Pros., a line of verse containing seven metrical feet.

hep-tan-gu-lar (hĕp-tăng'gū-lär), adj. [< Gk. hepta, seven + Lat. angulus, a corner], having seven angles.

hep-tarch-y (hĕp'tär-kĭ), n. [pl. -tarchies (-kĭz)], [< Gk. hepta, seven + -arkhia, rule], 1, a government by seven rulers; 2, a country governed by seven rulers; also, a group of seven kingdoms or governments, as the seven Saxon kingdoms in England.

her (hûr), pron. and adj. [< A.S. hire, her], the singular objective and possessive case of the feminine personal pronoun she.

her. abbr. 1, heraldry; heraldic; 2, [Lat. heres], heir: used especially in legal documents.

He-ra (hē'rä), n. [Gk.], Gk. Myth., wife and sister of Zeus, and goddess of marriage and maternity: identified with Juno. Also, He're (hē'rē).

Her-a-cles (hĕr'ä-klēz), n. [< Gk.], the most famous hero of classical antiquity: generally called by the Roman name Hercules, which see. Also, Her'a-kles.—adj. Her'a-cle'an.

her-ald (hĕr'ăld), n. [< O.F. heraut, herald], 1, formerly, an official who announced peace and war, bore messages from a sovereign to a commander, and superintended coronations and other public ceremonial functions; 2, more recently, in England, an official who grants, records, and blazons arms, traces pedigrees, etc.; 3, one who announces important news; a messenger; 4, a forerunner; harbinger:—v.t. to introduce; proclaim publicly; usher in.

he-ral-dic (hē-răl'dĭk), adj. of or pertaining to heralds or heraldry.

her-ald-ry (hĕr'ăld-rĭ), n. [pl. -ries (-rĭz)], the art of performing the functions of a herald; specifically, the science that treats of armorial bearings or coats of arms, and of determining pedigrees, etc.: Poet., 1, a coat of arms, or a symbol or device marked on one; 2, pomp; ceremony. (See color plate page 460).

herb (ûrb; hûrb), n. [< O.F. erbe < Lat. herba, grass], 1, a seed plant with a small amount of wood in its stem, which, after forming seed, completely dies or withers away to the ground; 2, a herbaceous plant used for medicine, food, flavor, scent, or the like; 3, grass or other green fodder; herbage.—adj. herb'y.

her-ba-ceous (hẽr-bā'shŭs), adj. 1, pertaining to, or of the nature of, herbs; herblike; 2, Rare, herbivorous; feeding upon plant food.

herb-age (ûr'bĭj; hûr'bĭj), n. 1, herbs or green grasses collectively; 2, pasturage for cattle: Law, the right of pasture on the lands of another.

herb-al (hûr'băl), adj. concerning plants and grasses:—n. Archaic, a book descriptive of plants; Obs., a herbarium.

herb-al-ist (hûr'băl-ĭst), n. 1, originally, a botanist; later, 2, a collector of herbs; 3, a dealer in medicinal plants and dried herbs.

her-ba-ri-um (hẽr-bā'rĭ-ŭm), n. [pl. -riums (-ŭmz); -ria (-ä)], [L.L. = pertaining to herbs], 1, a collection of dried plants, usually scientifically classified, for study; 2, a book, room, or building where such a collection is kept: Obs., a herbal.

herb Chris-to-pher locally, any of several widely different plants, as baneberry, the royal fern, meadowsweet, and others.

her-bif-er-ous (hẽr-bĭf'ẽr-ŭs), adj. [< Lat. herba, grass + ferre, to bear], producing grasses and various small plants, called herbs: said of soil or a locality.

Her-biv-o-ra (hẽr-bĭv'ŏ-rä), n.pl. [< Lat. herba, grass + vorare, to eat], Zoöl., in a former classification, a group of animals that feed on grasses, small plants, or vegetables, as distinct from the Carnivora.—n. her'bi-vore.

her-biv-o-rous (hẽr-blv'ŏ-rŭs), adj. feeding on plants: opposite of carnivorous.

Her-cu-le-an (hẽr-kū'lē-ăn), adj. [see Hercules], pertaining to Hercules, a hero of Grecian and Roman mythology possessed of superhuman strength: herculean, 1, of very great strength and power; 2, huge, as with strength; vast; 3, very difficult or dangerous, as a task.

Her-cu-les (hûr'kŭ-lēz), n. [Lat. < Gk. Hēraklēs], Class. Myth., the most famous hero of classical antiquity, son of Jupiter and Alcmene, and known for his great strength and for the twelve tasks, or labors, imposed upon him because of Juno's hatred for him: unwittingly slain by a poisoned shirt given him by his wife, Deianira; Astron., a large northern constellation: hercules, a man of great size and prodigious strength. Also, Her'a-cles; Her'a-kles.

HERALDRY (See also plate page 460)

Showing the method of representing the metals, colors, and furs in black and white, and illustrating some common terms.

Her-cu-les'-club (hûr'kû-lēz-klŭb″), n. Bot., 1, the angelica tree, an ornamental prickly tree (Aralia spinosa) of the southern United States; 2, a variety of gourd (Lagenaria vulgaris) with a long, melonlike fruit.

[1]herd (hûrd), n. [<A.S. heord, flock<O.Teut. source], 1, a collection of beasts or cattle feeding or traveling together; 2, a rabble or crowd; mob; 3, hence, the ignorant and uncultured:—v.i. 1, to flock together, as beasts; 2, to crowd together; assemble:—v.t. to form, or crowd into, a flock or herd.

Syn., n. flock, drove, pack, bevy, covey, shoal, school, gam, swarm. A herd is a group of the larger animals, especially cattle, feeding or traveling together. A pack is a company of hounds, kept together, as for hunting, or of beasts, especially wolves, naturally keeping together, as in search of food. A flock is a number of birds or animals of a kind, feeding or flying together. Bery is applied to a collection of birds, especially quail or larks, or of some small animals, as roes, and, properly also, to an animated band of women or children. Covey, also applicable to birds, is commonly confined to a brood of partridges. Shoal and school name large numbers of fish swimming in company. A gam is a school of whales. Drore names a herd or flock, driven or traveling together. Swarm is applied to a large number of small animals, especially insects in motion.

[2]herd (hûrd), n. [<A.S. hirde, herdsman<O.Teut. source], Archaic, a keeper of a flock of animals; a herdsman: now, except in Scotland, usually in composition, as cow*herd*, swine*herd*, shep*herd:* also called herder:—v.t. to drive or tend, as cattle.

her-dic (hûr'dĭk), n. [<Peter Herdic, inventor], a low-swung carriage, usually with two wheels and a back entrance, with seats along the sides.

herd's grass either of two grasses, timothy and redtop, used for hay.

herds-man (hûrdz'măn), n. [pl. -men (-mĕn)], [herd+man], one who owns, or tends, cattle: Herdsman, Astron., a northern constellation, Boötes, the brightest star of which is Arcturus.

here (hēr), adv. [<A.S. hēr, here<O.Teut. source], 1, in or at this place: opposite of there; 2, to this place; in this direction; hither; 3, on this occasion; at the present time; now; 4, in the present life.

here-a-bout (hēr'ă-bout'), adv. [here+about], in this locality. Also, here'a-bouts'.

here-aft-er (hēr-ăf'tẽr), adv. [here+after], 1, after this; from this time forth; at a later time; 2, in the life to come:—n. 1, a time or state yet to come; the future; 2, the life after death.

here-at (hēr-ăt'), adv. [here+at], 1, at this point; 2, for this reason.

here-by (hēr-bī'), adv. [here+by], by virtue of this; by means of this: Obs., very near; near by.

he-red-i-ta-ble (hē-rĕd'ĭ-tă-bl), adj. [<obs. Fr. hérédítable<Lat. hereditare<heres (-edis), heir], heritable; capable of being handed down from parent to child, left to someone by will, or received from another through death: Obs., capable of receiving by inheritance.—adv. he-red'i-ta-bly.

her-e-dit-a-ment (hĕr″ē-dĭt'ă-mĕnt , n. [<L.L. hereditamentum<Lat. hereditare, to inherit], Law, inheritable property.

he-red-i-ta-ry (hē-rĕd'ĭ-tă-rĭ), adj. [<Lat. hereditare, to inherit], 1, passing, or capable of passing, legally, from an ancestor to a descendant; inheritable; 2, holding title or possession by inheritance; 3, transmitted naturally from parent to child; 4, transmitted as a characteristic from generation to generation, as early baldness or a special facial feature; 5, pertaining to an inheritance.—adv. he-red'i-ta-ri-ly.

he-red-i-ty (hē-rĕd'ĭ-tĭ), n. [<Fr. hérédité<Lat. hereditas, heirship<heres, heir], Biol., 1, the transmission of physical or mental characteristics or qualities to descendants; 2, the tendency of an organism to pass on its characteristics to its offspring.

Her-e-ford (hĕr'ē-fẽrd), n. [<Herefordshire, England, place of origin], one of a breed of beef cattle, usually red and white:—adj. of this breed.

here-in (hēr-ĭn'), adv. [here+in], in this; in this book, place, box, circumstance, or the like.

here-in-aft-er (hēr″ĭn-ăf'tẽr), adv. [here+in+after], below; later in the same document, address, or the like; chiefly legal.

here-in-be-fore (hēr″ĭn-bē-fōr'), adv. [here+in+before], Law, above; earlier in the same document, address, or the like.

here-of (hēr-ŏv'), adv. [here+of], 1, of this; about this; 2, from this; hence; therefore.

here-on (hēr-ŏn'), adv. [here+on], on this; hereupon; as, hereon he produced his proofs.

her-e-sy (hĕr'ē-sĭ), n. [pl. -sies (-sĭz)], [<O.F. eresie <Gk. hairesis, sect<haireisthai, to choose], 1, an opinion or doctrine in opposition to the orthodox belief of the Christian church; especially, an opinion tending to provoke schism; 2, in other fields, as in politics, literature, philosophy, etc., an opinion or doctrine in opposition to the commonly accepted views.

her-e-tic (hĕr'ē-tĭk), n. [<Fr. hérétique<Gk. hairetikos, able to choose <haireisthai, to choose], 1, one who differs in doctrine from his church; a schismatic; 2, one who holds opinions contrary to customary views, as in literature, politics, etc.

he-ret-i-cal (hē-rĕt'ĭ-kăl), adj. pertaining to, or of the nature of, heresy; contrary to generally accepted beliefs or opinions, especially as regards theology, morality, literature, etc.—adv. he-ret'i-cal-ly.

here-to (hēr-tōō'), adv. [here+prep. to], to this; to this point, end, place, time, or the like.

here-to-fore (hēr″tōō-fōr'), adv. [here+prep. to +fore], formerly; hitherto.

here-un-to (hēr″ŭn-tōō'), adv. [here+unto], to this; up to the present; hereto.

here-up-on (hēr″ŭ-pŏn'), adv. [here+upon], on this; hereon; by reason of this.

here-with (hēr-wĭth', hēr-wĭth'), adv. [here+with], with this; as, I send herewith my check.

her-i-ot (hĕr'ĭ-ŏt), n. [<A.S. heregeatwa < here, army+geatwa, trappings: because the tax orig. consisted of arms and horses used by a tenant in his lord's wars], Feudal Law, a feudal tax paid to the lord of the manor on the death of a tenant.

her-it-a-ble (hĕr'ĭt-ă-bl), adj. [<Fr. hériter<Lat. heritare, to inherit], 1, capable of being handed down by will; inheritable; 2, transmissible from one generation to another, as eye color; 3, capable of receiving from another by inheritance. Also, he-red'i-ta-ble.—n. her″it-a-bil'i-ty.

her-it-age (hĕr'ĭ-tăj), n. 1, an estate that passes by descent; 2, an inherited quality or characteristic: Bib., 1, Israel, regarded as the chosen people of God; 2, the Christian church.

her-ma (hûr'mă), n. [pl. -mæ (-mē); -mai (-mī)], [Lat. <Gk. Hermēs, Hermes], Archæol., a stone pillar surmounted by a head of Hermes. Also, herm.

her-maph-ro-dite (hẽr-măf'rō-dīt), n. [<Gk. Hermaphroditos, name of youth who became one with the nymph Salmacis], a person combining the qualities of both sexes: Biol., any organism producing both eggs and sperm, as a plant whose flowers have both stamens and pistils; Naut., a two-masted vessel with foremast square-rigged and mainmast fore-and-aft rigged: also called hermaphrodite brig; in Great Britain called brigantine (see ship, illus.):—adj. 1, having both male and female sex organs: applied figuratively to objects combining opposite qualities; 2, bisexual: Naut., equipped with a square-rigged mast forward and a fore-and-aft-rigged mast aft.—adj. her-maph″ro-dit'ic.

Her-mes (hûr'mēz), n. [<Gk.], Gk. Myth., the god of eloquence, science, and good luck, son of Zeus and Maia, messenger of the gods, guardian of commerce, travelers, herds, and boundaries, and also of thieves, and conductor of the dead to Hades: identified with the Roman Mercury.

her-met-ic (hẽr-mĕt'ĭk), adj. [<L.L. hermeticus <Hermēs (Trismegistus), Gk. name of Egypt. god Thoth, who presided over secrets of science and philosophy], 1, perfectly closed and air-tight, as by soldering; 2, of or pertaining to alchemy; magical. Also, her-met'i-cal.—adv. her-met'i-cal-ly.

Her-mi-o-ne (hẽr-mī'ō-nē), n. [<Gk.], 1, Gk. Myth., daughter of Menelaus and Helen, promised to Orestes, but married to Neoptolemus (Pyrrhus) and, later, to Orestes; 2, in Shakespeare's "Winter's Tale," wife of the jealous Leontes.

her-mit (hûr'mĭt), n. [<O.F. ermite<Gk. erēmitēs <erēmia, desert], 1, one who retires from society and lives alone; a recluse; 2, a spiced cooky made with nuts and raisins: Ornith., a kind of humming bird found in the tropics: Obs., one paid to pray for his benefactors.—adj. her-mit'ic; her-mit'i-cal.

her-mit-age (hûr'mĭ-tăj), n. the retreat of a recluse; the abode of one who lives alone; Hermitage, a variety of red, white, or straw-colored French wine: from a hill near Valence, upon the top of which is the ruined abode of a hermit.

her-mit crab Zoöl., any of several crabs, chiefly marine (families Paguridæ and Parapaguridæ), which live in empty shells, as of snails.

hern (hûrn), n. [corr. of heron, q.v.], Archaic, the heron. See her'on, Pfd. S.

her-ni-a (hûr'nĭ-ă), n. [pl. -nias (-nĭ-ăz); -niæ (-nĭ-ē)], [Lat.=rupture], Pathol., the protrusion of a loop, as of the intestine, or of some part of an internal organ, through an abnormal opening in the wall of its containing cavity: a rupture.—adj. her'ni-al.

hern-shaw (hûrn'shô), n. [< O.F. heronceau, dim. of hairon, heron]. Dial., a heron; hern: Her., the model of a heron or similar wading bird.

he-ro (hē'rō), n. [pl. heroes (-rōz)], [< Gk. hērōs, hero], 1, a man of distinguished courage, moral or physical; 2, the chief character in a play, story, or poem; 3, the chief personage in any great event; 4, in myth and legend, a man, usually a warrior, possessing superhuman qualities and aided by certain deities: often regarded as a demigod.

He-ro (hē'rō), n. [< Gk.], Gk. Myth., a beautiful Thracian priestess of Aphrodite, whose lover, Leander, swam the Hellespont nightly to visit her, but was finally drowned and his corpse washed ashore, whereupon Hero cast herself into the sea.

He-ro-di-an (hē-rō'dĭ-ăn), n. [< Gk. Hērōdē], Bib., a member of the Jewish political party devoted to the interests of Herod of Galilee: —adj. pertaining to Herod, king of Judea.

He-ro-di-as (hē-rō'dĭ-ăs), n. Bib., the second wife of Herod Antipas, who, with the assistance of her daughter Salome, caused Herod to put John the Baptist to death (Mark 6:17–23).

he-ro-ic (hē-rō'ĭk), adj. [see hero], 1, pertaining to, or like, a hero; marked by valiant courage; brave; noble; fearless; 2, producing men of great courage and noble deeds; as, the heroic age of Greece; 3, drastic; extreme; violent; as, we must use heroic measures; 4, grand; lofty; high-flown, as language: Art, larger than life-size: Poet., 1, dealing with heroes; epic; 2, of lofty and noble sentiment:—n. 1, a poem dealing with heroes; 2, a poem of lofty and noble sentiment: pl. extravagant or bombastic language.

he-ro-ic age the period in the far past when the legendary great men and women of any nation, but especially of Greece and Rome, are said to have lived; the age of heroes and demigods.

he-ro-ic verse verse suited to, or used for, heroic poetry: Pros., 1, in English, iambic pentameter; especially, iambic pentameter in rimming couplets, often called heroic couplets: the characteristic form of Chaucer and of the eighteenth-century poets; 2, in French, the twelve-syllabled iambic verse, or Alexandrine; 3, in Greek and Latin, dactylic hexameter.

he-ro-in (hĕr'ō-ĭn), n. [Ger. trade name], Med., a white crystalline powder derived from morphine: a habit-forming drug, used to relieve pain or quiet the nerves, as in treating coughs and colds.

her-o-ine (hĕr'ō-ĭn), n. [see hero], 1, originally, a demigoddess; 2, a woman of distinguished courage, moral or physical; 3, the leading female character in a play, novel, or the like.

her-o-ism (hĕr'ō-ĭzm), n. 1, those qualities attributed to a hero or heroine; high and noble courage; fortitude; fearlessness; intrepidity; 2, the exhibition of valor and courage; a heroic act. Syn. gallantry, prowess, courage. (See bravery.)

her-on (hĕr'ŭn), n. [< O.F. hairon < O.H.G. heiger, heron], any of a family (Ardeidæ) of wading birds with a long neck and long legs, frequenting marshy banks, and feeding on fish, frogs, and insects (for colored illus. see bird). Also, hern.

HERON

her-on-ry (hĕr'ŭn-rĭ), n. [pl. -ries (-rĭz)], a place where herons congregate and breed, often in very large numbers.

her-pes (hûr'pēz), n. [< Gk. herpēs, shingles], Pathol., an acute, inflammatory disease of the skin, characterized by patches of small, clustered blisters, tending to spread: herpes zoster, Pathol., a form of herpes, accompanied by severe pain or intense itching and tingling, in which the blisters follow the line of a cutaneous nerve: commonly called shingles.—adj. her-pet'ic (hĕr-pĕt'ĭk).—n. her'pe-tism.

her-pe-tol-o-gy (hûr"pē-tŏl'ō-jĭ), n. [< Gk. herpeton, reptile + -logia, study], Zoöl., the study of reptiles.—n. her"pe-tol'o-gist.

her-ring (hĕr'ĭng), n. [< A.S. hǣring, herring], a small, edible fish (Clupea harengus) found in great schools in shallow North Atlantic waters: herring gull, a common, web-footed sea bird (Larus argentatus) of the Atlantic coasts (see bird, colored illus.).

her-ring-bone (her'ĭng-bōn"), adj. [herring + bone], composed of rows of short parallel lines slanting in opposite directions from a central rib, like the spine of a herring:—n. 1, a kind of cross-stitch; 2, a zigzag pattern of stones or tiles:—v.t. and v.i. 1, to sew with the herringbone stitch; 2, to work with the herringbone pattern.

hers (hûrz), [see her], a possessive form of she, used: 1, as adj.: as, whose hat is it? it is hers; 2, as pron.; as, which hat have you? I have hers.

Her-schel (hûr'shĕl), n. [< Sir William Herschel (1738–1822), discoverer of planet], Astron., Uranus, the outermost, except Neptune and Pluto, of the planets of the solar system: a former name.

herse (hûrs), n. [< Lat. hirpex, a rake], 1, a lattice or screen made of crossed bars; 2, a frame for drying skins: Fortif., 1, a portcullis; also, 2, a frame set with many spikes pointing upward, for obstructing the path of an advancing enemy.

her-self (hĕr-sĕlf'), pron. [her + self], 1, a reflexive form of her, or a form of she used as predicate nominative: as, she cut herself; she is herself again; 2, an emphatic form of she; as, she did it herself.

her-ship (hûr'shĭp), n. [< A.S. here, army + suffix -scipe], Sc. Dial., 1, a cattle raid; cattle stolen in a raid; 2, pillage; waste; ruin.

Hertz-i-an (hĕrt'sĭ-ăn), adj. [< Hertz, proper name], pertaining to the German physicist, Heinrich Hertz (1857–94): Hertzian telegraphy, communication by means of electric waves; wireless telegraphy: Hertzian waves, electromagnetic waves, first systematically studied by Hertz.

He-si-o-ne (hē-sī'ō-nē), n. [< Gk.], Gk. Myth., a daughter of Laomedon, king of Troy, who was offered to a sea monster to appease Poseidon, but rescued by Hercules and taken to Greece.

hes-i-tan-cy (hĕz'ĭ-tăn-sĭ), n. [see hesitate], 1, the act of hesitating; vacillation; indecision; 2, a slowness in speech; stammering.

hes-i-tant (hĕz'ĭ-tănt), adj. slow in acting; irresolute; vacillating.—adv. hes'i-tant-ly.

hes-i-tate (hĕz'ĭ-tāt), v.i. [p.t. and p.p. -tated, p.pr. -tating], [< Lat. haesitare < haerēre, to stick fast], 1, to be in suspense or uncertainty; waver; vacillate; 2, to pause; delay; 3, to stutter; stammer:—v.t. to do or utter with delay or difficulty. Syn. falter, waver, stutter, trifle, delay, demur.

hes-i-ta-tion (hĕz"ĭ-tā'shŭn), n. 1, a pause, due to uncertainty; vacillation; doubt; indecision; 2, a faltering in speech; stuttering; 3, a halting movement in a dance; also, a dance characterized by such halted movements.

Hes-per (hĕs'pĕr), n. [see Hesperus], Poet., the evening star; Vesper. See Hes'per-us.

Hes-pe-ri-an (hĕs-pē'rĭ-ăn), adj. Poet., 1, of or pertaining to Hesperia, the name given by Greek poets to the unknown lands bordering the western end of the Mediterranean; 2, western; occidental; 3, pertaining to the Hesperides:—n. Rare, an inhabitant of the West; an Occidental.

Hes-per-i-des (hĕs-pĕr'ĭ-dēz), n.pl. Class. Myth., 1, the nymphs, four or five in number, who, helped by a dragon, guarded the golden apples given by Gæa to Hera on her marriage to Zeus; 2, the garden where these apples were kept.

Hes-per-us (hĕs'pĕr-ŭs), n. [< Gk. hesperos, western (star)], Poet., the evening star; especially, in ancient times, the planet Venus when appearing as evening star. Also, Poet., Hes'per.

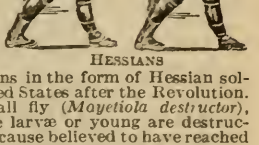
Hes-sian (hĕsh'ăn), adj. [< Ger. Hesse], of or pertaining to the grand duchy of Hesse in Germany, or its inhabitants: Hessian boots, top-boots with tassels in front, worn by the Hessian troops and very popular in England in the early 19th century:—n. 1, a native of Hesse; 2, specifically, one of the mercenary soldiers employed by Great Britain against the colonies in the American Revolution; 3, any mercenary or purchasable person; a hireling: Colloq., a rough or violent person: pl. andirons in the form of Hessian soldiers, popular in the United States after the Revolution.



HESSIANS

Hes-sian fly a small fly (Mayetiola destructor), whose larvæ or young are destructive to wheat: so called because believed to have reached America in straw imported for the Hessian troops.

hest (hĕst), n. [< A.S. hǣs < hātan, to command], Archaic, a command; behest; Obs., a pledge.

Hes-ti-a (hĕs'tĭ-ă), n. [Gk.], Gk. Myth., 1, the daughter of Cronus and Rhea, and goddess of the hearth and home: identified with the Roman Vesta; 2, in ancient writings, one of the nymphs who guarded the golden apples of Hesperides.

he-tæ-ra (hē-tē'rä), n. [pl. hetæræ (-rē)], [< Gk. hetaira, female companion], Gk. Antiq., an accomplished and attractive woman, not a lawful wife but above a common harlot, who associated with and entertained men: often a slave singer or dancer. Also, he-tai'ra (hē-tī'rä), [pl. -rai (-rī)].

het-er-o-dox (hĕt′ĕr-ō-dŏks), adj. [< Gk. heteros, other + doxa, opinion], contrary to, or deviating from, an accepted doctrine or standard of faith, opinion, etc.; heretical: opposite of orthodox.

het-er-o-dox-y (hĕt′ĕr-ō-dŏk′sĭ), n. [pl. -doxies (-sĭz)], 1, the act or quality of deviating from established opinion; 2, an unorthodox or unapproved doctrine or opinion; heresy.

het-er-o-dyne (hĕt′ĕr-ō-dīn), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -dyned (-dīnd), p.pr. -dyning], [< Gk. heteros, other + dunamis, power], Elec., to superpose upon (a series of waves of a given frequency) a series of waves of slightly different frequency, producing beats; Rad., in signal reception, to produce beats with (an incoming wave signal) by generating local wave signals of slightly different frequency:—adj. Rad., designating, or pertaining to, such a method of receiving signals; as, heterodyne reception.

het-er-œ-cious (hĕt′ĕr-ē′shŭs), adj. [< Gk. heteros, other + oikia, house], Bot., living successively on different hosts, as the wheat rust, which passes one stage on wheat and another on barberry or some other plant.—n. het″er-œ′cism.

het-er-o-ge-ne-i-ty (hĕt″ĕr-ō-jē-nē′ĭ-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], [see heterogeneous], 1, the quality of being different; 2, difference in kind; dissimilarity: opposite of homogeneity.

het-er-o-ge-ne-ous (hĕt″ĕr-ō-jē′nē-ŭs), adj. [< Gk. heteros, other + genos, kind], 1, opposite or unlike in character, quality, or structure (to something else); opposite of homogeneous; 2, composed of parts of different kinds; as, a heterogeneous mixture.

het-er-o-gen-e-sis (hĕt″ĕr-ō-jĕn′ē-sĭs), n. [< Gk. heteros, other + genesis, beginning], Biol., 1, the production of organic from inorganic matter; spontaneous generation; 2, metagenesis, or the production of sexual and asexual forms in alternate generations of a complete life history, as in certain jellyfishes, producing sexually fertilized eggs which develop into an asexual, polyp form, which in turn buds off the sexual, or medusa, generation.

het-er-og-y-nous (hĕt″ĕr-ŏj′ĭ-nŭs), adj. [< Gk. heteros, other + gunē, female], Zoöl., having the females divided into reproductive and neuter classes, as ants and bees.

het-er-o-mor-phic (hĕt″ĕr-ō-mōr′fĭk), adj. [< Gk. heteros, other + morphē, form], 1, differing from the standard type or form; 2, undergoing complete change, as when a tadpole changes into a frog, or a larva into an adult insect.

het-er-o-nym (hĕt′ĕr-ō-nĭm″), n. [< Gk. heteros, other + onoma, name], 1, a word spelled like another, but differing in pronunciation and meaning; as, lead, a metal, and lead, to conduct: opposite of homonym; 2, an exact synonym; one of two or more words in the same language having the same meaning; as, yearly, annual; 3, a word that has the same meaning as a word in another language; as, English flower and French fleur.—adj. het″er-on′y-mous.

het-er-o-plas-ty (hĕt′ĕr-ō-plăs″tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], [< Gk. heteros, other + plastikos, plastic], Surg., a grafting of tissue from another animal or person: opposite of autoplasty.

Het-er-op-ter-a heteros, other + pteron, wing], Entom., a suborder, in a former system of classification, of the old order Hemiptera (which see): considered to include those insects which have the outer wings, when present, thickened at the base, as the squash bugs, giant water bugs, etc.—adj. het″er-op′ter-ous.

het-er-os-po-rous (hĕt″ĕr-ŏs′pō-rŭs; hĕt″ĕr-ō-spō′rŭs), adj. [< Gk. heteros, other + sporos, seed], Bot., bearing both large and small asexual spores: opposite of homosporous.

het-er-o-zy-gote (hĕt″ĕr-ō-zī′gōt; -zĭg′ōt), n. [< Gk. heteros, other + zygon, yoke], a hybrid plant or animal; in the Mendelian theory of heredity, an organism the parents of which were unlike with respect to a given transmissible character, or gene, so that the individual does not always breed true with respect to this character.—adj. het″er-o-zy′gous.

het-man (hĕt′măn), n. [pl. -mans (-mănz)], [see ataman], 1, in Russia, the chief of a Cossack community, elected to that rank annually; 2, the commander of a Polish army. Also, at′a-man.

heugh (hūkh), n. [Sc. < M.E. hōgh, a hill], Sc. Dial. or Obs., 1, a glen with crags and rocky walls; 2, a shaft in a coal mine: a coal pit. Also, heuch.

hew (hū), v.t. [p.t. hewed (hūd), p.p. hewn (hūn) or hewed, p.pr. hewing], [< A.S. hēawan, to cut], 1, to cut or shape, as with an ax or other sharp-edged tool; hack; chop to pieces; 2, to cut down, as trees; 3, to cut into shape; form or shape with care: often with out:—v.i. to strike, as with an ax.—n. hew′er.

hex (hĕks), n. [< Ger. hexe, witch, ult. < Lat. < Gk. Hekate, Hecate, goddess of lower world, later thought of as goddess of sorcery], Dial., one who practices sorcery:—v.i. and v.t to practice sorcery (upon).

hex-a-chord (nĕk′sə-kord), n. [< Gk. hex, six + khordē, string], 1, in medieval music, a series of six notes forming four whole tones and a semitone, the latter being the third in the series; 2, an ancient musical instrument with six strings.

hex-ad (hĕk′săd), n. [< Gk. hex, six], a group of six: Chem., an element or radical which has a valence of six:—adj. Chem., having a valence of six.

hex-a-gon (hĕk′sə-gŏn), n. [< Gk. hex, six + gōnia, angle], Geom., a polygon having six angles and six sides.—adj. hex-ag′o-nal.—adv. hex-ag′o-nal-ly.

REGULAR HEXAGON inscribed in circle. Each side is equal to radius, a, of the circle.

hex-a-gram (hĕk′sə-grăm), n. [< Gk. hex, six + gramma, a line], Geom., 1, a plane figure formed by producing the sides of a regular hexagon until a six-pointed, star-shaped figure results; 2, a figure composed of six lines.

hex-a-he-dron (hĕk″sə-hē′drŏn), n. [pl. -drons (-drŏnz); -dra (-drə)], [< Gk. hex, six + hedra, base], Geom., a solid having six plane faces: regular hexahedron, a cube.—adj. hex″a-he′dral.

hex-am-e-ter (hĕk-săm′ĕ-tĕr), n. [< Gk. hex, six + metron, a measure], Pros., a line or verse of six metrical feet (for illus. see prosody):—adj. having six metrical measures.

hex-an-gu-lar (hĕks″ăng′gū-lär), adj. [< Gk. hex, six + Lat. angulus, a corner], having six angles, as does a hexagon.

hex-a-pod (hĕk′sə-pŏd), adj. [< Gk. hex, six + pous (podos), foot], having six feet:—n. Zoöl., any of a class (Hexapoda) of invertebrate animals comprising the true, or six-legged, insects.

hex-ose (hĕk′sōs), n. [< Gk. hex, six], Chem., a subdivision of the carbohydrate group, including those sugars the molecules of which contain six atoms of carbon, as glucose, dextrose, etc.

hey (hā), interj. [< M.E. hei, hey], used to express surprise, joy, etc., or to attract attention.

¹hey-day (hā′dā″), interj. [source uncertain], expressing joy, surprise, exultation, etc.

²hey-day (hā′dā″), n. [source uncertain], 1, the period of greatest vigor, vitality, or prosperity; 2, hence, happiness; youthful ardor.

hf. abbr. half:—Hf, Chem., the symbol [Hf] for the element hafnium:—H. F. A., Heavy Field Artillery:—H. F. C., Elec., High-Frequency Current:—hf. cf., half calf:—hg., 1, hectogram; 2, heliogram:—Hg, Chem., the symbol [Hg, < Lat. hydrargyrum] for the element mercury:—H. G., 1, His (or Her) Grace: title of archbishop, duke, or duchess; 2, High German; 3, Horse Guards:—H. H., 1, His (or Her) Highness: title of a prince or princess; 2, His Holiness: title of the Pope:—hhd., hogshead:—H. I., Hawaiian Islands.

hi-a-tus (hī-ā′tŭs), n. [pl. -tuses (-tŭs-ēz); hiatus], [Lat. < hiare, to gape], 1, a space where something is wanting, as in a series; 2, a break; vacancy; gap: Logic, a step lacking in a chain of proof; Gram. and Pros., the coming together of two vowels without an intervening consonant: called external hiatus if in two words, as Eta enters, or internal hiatus if in two syllables of one word, as coördinate; also, the slight break in sound between such vowels.

Hi-a-wa-tha (hī″ə-wō′thə), n. [Amer. Ind.], the hero of a poem by Longfellow, recounting the life and teachings of a legendary leader among the American Indians: so called for an early chief among the Mohawks, who confederated the neighboring Indian tribes into the Five Nations hi-ber-nal (hī-bûr′năl), adj. [< Lat. hibernus, wintry], referring to winter; wintry.

hi-ber-nate (hī′bĕr-nāt), v.i. [p.t. and p.p. -nated, p.pr. -nating], [< Lat. hibernare (-atus), to winter], to winter; pass the winter: Biol., to pass the winter in a dormant, apathetic, or torpid state, as the buds of deciduous trees, or the bears, snakes, and other animals.—n. hi″ber-na′tion.

Hi-ber-ni-an (hī-bûr′nĭ-ăn), adj. [< Lat. Hibernia, Ireland, corr. of Iverna < Gk. Iernē < supposed O.Celt. root (Iveriu) of Erin], Poet., pertaining to, or characteristic of, Hibernia, or Ireland, or its people:—n. a native of Hibernia, or Ireland.

Hi-ber-ni-an-ism (hī-bûr′nĭ-ăn-ĭzm), n. an idiom or phrase peculiar to the Irish; especially, an Irish bull. Also, Hi-ber′ni-cism.

hi-bis-cus (hī-bĭs′kŭs; hĭ-), n. [< Gk. hibiskos, mallow], Bot., any of a genus (Hibiscus) of plants of the mallow family; especially, in America, the shrubby althæa, or rose of Sharon, a garden shrub bearing large, showy flowers of varied colors.

hic-cup (hĭk′ŭp), n. [< earlier hicket: imit.], Pathol., a sharp, gasping sound, made by a quick, spasmodic inhalation of breath, due to contraction of the diaphragm and glottis:—v.i. to utter a short convulsive cough with indrawn breath:—v.t. to say, or utter, with hiccups. Also, hic′cough (-ŭp).

hic ja-cet (hĭk jā′sĕt), [Lat. = here (he) lies], a Latin inscription used on tombstones, meaning "here lies"; hence, an epitaph.

hick-o-ry (hĭk′ō-rĭ), n. [pl. -ries (-rĭz)], [< nat. Virginian name, pohickery], 1, any of a genus (Carya) of nut trees of the walnut family; 2, the edible nut of this tree; 3, the hard, tough, heavy wood obtained from this tree and valued as timber; 4, something made of this wood, as a walking stick.

hid (hĭd), past tense and past participle of ²*hide:*—p.adj. 1, concealed; 2, latent. Also, hid′den.

hi-dal-go (hĭ-dăl′gō), n. [pl. -gos (-gōz)], [Sp. < hijo dalgo, son of something], in Spain, a nobleman of the lower class.—n.fem. hi-dal′ga.

hid-den (hĭd′n), past tense and past participle of the verb ²*hide:*—p.adj. 1, concealed; occult; mysterious; not known; 2, latent; dormant.

Syn., adj. invisible, latent, clandestine. (See obscure.)

hid-den-ite (hĭd′n-īt), n. [< W. E. Hidden (1853–)], a yellow-green or emerald-green variety of the mineral spodumene: used as a gem.

¹hide (hīd), n. [< A.S. hȳd, skin], the skin of an animal, either raw or tanned:—v.t. [p.p. hided, p.pr. hiding], 1, to skin, as an animal; 2, to cover with hide; 3, to whip with a leather lash.

HIDE OF A COW

1, 1, head, or pate; 2, 2, fore shanks; 3, 3, hind shanks; 4, 4, belly; 5, tail; A, top grain split; B, flesh split.

²hide (hīd), v.t. [p.t. hid (hĭd′n) or hid, p.pr. hiding], [< A.S. hȳdan, to hide], 1, to conceal; put out of sight; 2, to remove from danger; shelter; 3, to keep hidden; secrete; disguise; 4, to obstruct, as a view:—v.i. to conceal oneself; also, to be concealed; keep oneself out of sight.

Syn. veil, cover. (See conceal.)—Ant. disclose, divulge, uncover, reveal.

³hide (hīd), n. [< A.S. hīg < hīgid, land enough for a household], in old English law, a measure of land varying in area from 80 to 120 acres.

hide-bound (hīd′-bound″), adj. [¹*hide*+³*bound*], 1, having the skin close or tight as a result of poor feeding: said of cattle; 2, having very tight bark, as trees; 3, narrow-minded; bigoted.

hid-e-ous (hĭd′ē-ŭs), adj. [< O.F. hidos < hisde, fear], 1, offensive to the sight, ear, or taste; ugly; horrible; 2, shocking; revolting; repulsive.—adv. hid′e-ous-ly.—n. hid′e-ous-ness.

Syn. grim, ghastly, grisly, revolting, ugly, frightful.

hi-dro-sis (hĭ-drō′sĭs), n. [< Gk. hidrōsis, perspiration], Pathol., excessive sweating.

hie (hī), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. hied (hīd), p.pr. hying or hieing], [< A.S. hīgian, to strive], 1, to cause to hasten; 2, to incite; urge:—v.i. to make haste; hurry.

hi-e-mal (hī′ē-măl), n. [< Lat. hiems, winter], pertaining to winter; wintry.

hi-er-arch (hī′ēr-ärk), n. [< Gk. hieros, sacred +-arkhēs, ruler], 1, the chief of a religious body; 2, the leader of an angelic host; 3, in ancient Greece, the officer in charge of offerings given in fulfilment of a religious vow.—adj. hī″er-ar′chic (-kĭk); hī″er-ar′chal (-kăl); hī″er-ar′chi-cal (-kĭ-kăl).

hi-er-arch-y (hī′ēr-ärk″ĭ), n. [pl. -archies (-ĭz)], 1, the body of clergy of a church, arranged in successive groups according to rank; the priesthood; 2, government by such a body; 3, any group of officials arranged in groups according to rank; 4, a rank, or order, of holy beings, as angels· Biol., a series of groups arranged by rank, as, in zoölogy, phylum, subphylum, class, order, family, genus, species, variety.—n. hi′er-ar″chism.—n. hi′er-arch″ist.

hi-er-at-ic (hī″ēr-ăt′ĭk), adj. [< Gk. hiereus, priest], 1, pertaining to priests; sacerdotal; 2, consecrated to sacred uses; 3, designating a form of hieroglyphic writing used by the ancient Egyptian priests: distinguished from demotic. Also, hi″er-at′i-cal.

hi-er-o-glyph (hī′ēr-ō-glĭf″), n. [< Gk. hieros, sacred+gluphē, carving], 1, originally, a sacred character or symbol as used in the picture writing of the ancient Egyptians; 2, a character in any pictorial system of writing; 3, a character whose meaning is difficult to decipher.

hi-er-o-glyph-ic (hī″ēr-ō-glĭf′ĭk), n. 1, a sacred character, mark, or symbol; 2, a figure or picture denoting a certain sound or idea; 3, a secret symbol: pl. 1, the figures or symbols used in picture writing by the ancient Egyptians, Mexicans, etc.; 2, this method of writing; hence, 3, any illegible writing:—adj. 1, of or pertaining to hieroglyphics; 2, symbolic; written in code or symbols; emblematic; 3, illegible; hard to read.—adv. hī″er-o-glyph′i-cal-ly.

HIEROGLYPHICS

hi-er-o-phant (hī′ēr-ō-fănt″, hī-ĕr′-), n. [< Gk hieros, sacred+phainein, to show], 1, in ancient Greece, a priest who gave instruction in the sacred rites; especially, the chief priest of the Eleusinian mysteries; hence, 2, one who interprets sacred mysteries.—adj. hī″er-o-phan′tic.

hig-gle (hĭg′l), v.i. [p.t. and p.p. higgled (-ld), p.pr. higgling], [corr. of haggle], 1, to peddle; carry articles about for sale; 2, to chaffer; dispute about trifles; haggle over terms.—n. hig′gler.

hig-gle-dy–pig-gle-dy (hĭg′l-dĭ-pĭg′l-dĭ), adv. [source uncertain], in a confused manner; in disorder:—adj. jumbled together; topsy-turvy:—n. confusion; disarray.

high (hī), adj. [< A.S. hēah, high < O.Teut. source], 1, elevated in location, as a tree top; 2, extending far upward, as a building or tree; 3, having (a specified) elevation or extent; as, a foot high; 4, exalted; noble; lofty in character; superior; as, high art; 5, extreme; as, high favor; 6, containing a relatively large amount; as, wine high in alcohol; 7, chief; head; as, high priest; 8, well advanced toward fulness or completion; as, high noon; high tide; 9, strong; violent; tempestuous; as, high winds; high passions; 10, elated; lively; as, high spirits; 11, of crime, grave; serious; 12, haughty; boastful; as, high looks; 13, of game, strongly scented; slightly tainted; 14, expensive; costly; of prices, great; 15, of voices, shrill; sharp: Mus., of tones or pitch, made by relatively rapid vibrations: opposite of low or deep: applied also to a voice or instrument that produces such tones; Phon., produced with the tongue in a raised position, as ē; Biol., with complex development: usually in the comparative; as, the higher animals: high life, 1, luxurious living; 2, the manner of life of rich or aristocratic society: High Mass, R. C. Ch., a celebration of the Eucharist, usually at the high altar, accompanied by music: high seas, 1, the open sea or ocean; 2, that part of the ocean more than three miles from the coast line, not within the territorial jurisdiction of any nation: high treason, a grave crime against the sovereign or state, considered as the highest civil offense: in the United States, limited to making war against that country, adhering to a national enemy, or giving aid and comfort to such enemy:—adv. 1, to a great altitude; 2, to a great degree; 3, at a great rate; 4, luxuriously; 5, in a shrill or loud pitch.—adv. high′ly.

high ball a drink of whisky diluted with soda water or the like, and served in a high glass.

high-bind-er (hī′bīn″dẽr), n. [high+bind], U. S. Colloq., 1, a rowdy; gangster; 2, one of a gang of Chinese ruffians in an American city.

high-born (hī′bôrn″), adj. [high+born], of noble birth or descent.

high-boy (hī′boi″), n. [high+boy (perh. < Fr. bois, wood)], a high, spacious chest of drawers, mounted on long legs: distinguished from lowboy, which is usually of table height, with two long drawers.

high-bred (hī′-brĕd″), adj. 1, descended from a fine or pedigreed stock or race; 2, having gentle manners and high ideals; cultivated.

high-brow (hī′brou″), n. [high+brow], Slang, 1, a person so highly educated as to lack interest in the commonplace: 2, an intellectual snob:—adj. Slang, intellectual; cultured.

High Church Eccl., a party in the Anglican Church which emphasizes the importance of the doctrines of the historic episcopate, the apostolic succession in the priesthood, the efficacy of the sacraments, and the maintenance of the ancient ritual: High-Church, adj. designating this party, its doctrines, or its members.—n. High″-Church′man.

high-col-ored (hī′=kŭl″ērd), adj. 1, bright in color; 2, vivid; 3, exaggerated.

high-fa-lu-ting (hī″fă-lū′tĭng), adj. [source uncertain], Colloq., high-sounding; bombastic:—n. bombastic speech. Also, high″fa-lu′tin.

high-flown (hī′=flōn″), adj. 1, elevated; proud; 2, bombastic; inflated.

high-fly-er (hī″flī′ēr; hī″flī′ĕr), n. [high+fly], 1, a bird that flies high; 2, a person who is too ambitious; one who is extreme in his opinions, or ostentatious in his mode of living. Also, high″fī′er.

High Ger-man the literary and official language of Germany: so called because developed mainly from the dialects of the highlands.

high-hand-ed (hī′=hăn″dĕd), adj. arbitrary; oppressive; overbearing.

high-hole (hī″=hōl″), n. Ornith., the flicker (Colaptes auratus), or golden-winged woodpecker: also called yellow-hammer and, locally, high-holder.

high-land (hī′lănd), n. [high+land], elevated or mountainous land: Highlands, mountainous districts, especially of Scotland: Highland fling, a Scottish dance resembling the hornpipe.

high-land-er (hī′lăn-dĕr), n. an inhabitant of a mountainous country: Highlander, a native of the Scotch Highlands.

HIGHLANDER

high-lows (hī′=lōz″), n.pl. laced shoes reaching to the ankle.

high-mind-ed (hī′=mīn″dĕd), adj. 1, honorable; having high principles; 2, haughty; arrogant.—n. high″-mind′ed-ness.

high-ness (hī′nĕs), n. [see high], the state or quality of being high: Highness, a title applied, with a possessive pronoun, to kings, queens, princes, etc.; as, His Royal Highness.

high-pres-sure (hī′=prĕsh″ûr), adj. 1, having, operated by, or suitable for, a relatively high pressure, as of steam in an engine or water in pipes; 2, figuratively, strenuous; enthusiastic.

high priest a chief priest: Bib., the chief priest of the Jewish religion.

high-road (hī′rōd″), n. [high+road], 1, a chief or much traveled road; 2, an easy method.

high school in the United States, 1, that department in the free public school system, next above the grammar school, which offers a course of instruction, usually lasting four years, in the subjects necessary for entrance into a college or other advanced institution, or into business; 2, an institution for the provision of such instruction, or a building occupied by it; also, the students in such a school: junior high school, in some cities, a school intermediate between the sixth grade of the elementary school, and the second year of the high school, including grades seven, eight, and nine: like the high school in departmental organization and attention to individual needs.

high-speed steel a steel of great hardness and toughness, containing a high percentage of tungsten and retaining its hardness even at red heat, as in tools which cut metal at high speed.

high-spir-it-ed (hī″=spĭr″ĭt-ĕd), adj. 1, having a lofty bearing; courageous; 2, mettlesome; animated; fiery, as a horse.

high-strung (hī′=strŭng″), adj. 1, sensitive; nervous; 2, spirited; mettlesome.

hight (hīt), p.adj. [<p.p. of A.S. hātan, to call], Obs. or Poet., called; named: as, a maid hight Joan.

high-toned (hī′=tōnd″), adj. 1, high-principled; honorable; 2, dignified; aristocratic: used sarcastically or humorously: Mus., pitched in the upper range of musical or vocal sounds; high-pitched.

high-way (hī′wā″), n. [high+way], 1, a main thoroughfare; a course or path through which much traffic passes; 2, any public road.

Syn. thoroughfare, road, course, path. (See way.)

high-way-man (hī′wā″măn), n. [pl. -men (-mĕn)], [highway+man], a robber, usually mounted, who holds up his victims on a public road.

H. I. H. abbr. His (or Her) Imperial Highness: a title of respect given to royalty.

hi-jack-er (hī′jăk″ĕr), n. [slang origin], U. S. Slang, a robber; a bandit; especially, one who preys upon those engaged in bootlegging.

hike (hīk), v.i. [p.t. and p.p. hiked (hīkt), p.pr. hiking], [slang origin], Colloq., to tramp; take a long walk; march:—v.t. Colloq., to jerk; move with a sharp pull:—n. Colloq., a long walk or march.

hi-la-ri-ous (hī-lā′rĭ-ŭs; hī-lā′-), adj. [<Lat. hilaris, cheerful], merry; happy; exhilarated; noisy; mirthful.—adv. hi-la′ri-ous-ly.

Syn. jolly, boisterous, romping. (See cheerful.)

hi-lar-i-ty (hī-lăr′ĭ-tĭ; hĭ-), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], noisy merriment; exhilaration; joyousness; boisterous pleasure.

hil-ding (hĭl′dĭng), n. [perh.<hield<A.S. hieldan, to bend], Obs., a base wretch; a jade:—adj. Obs., base; disreputable; paltry; mean.

hill (hĭl), n. [<A.S. hyll, hĭl], 1, a natural elevation lower than a mountain; 2, a small mound or heap of earth; as, an ant hill; 3, a plant or group of plants rooted in a hill of dirt; as, a hill of beans:—v.t. 1, to heap earth about, as plants, in a mound; 2, to form into a mound:—v.i. to become formed into a mound.

hil-lo (hĭl′ō; hĭ-lō′), interj. and n. [see hollo], a call to attract attention. Also, hil′loa; hal-lo′; hal-loa′. See hol′lo, Pfd. S.

hill-ock (hĭl′ŭk), n. [dim. of hill], a small hill or elevation; a mound; hummock.

hill-side (hĭl′sīd″), n. [hill+side], the slope of a hill; an incline or rise of land.

hill-top (hĭl′tŏp″), n. [hill+top], the summit, or top, of a hill.

hill-weed (hĭl′wēd″), n. [hill+weed], Bot., a common European plant of the composite family, naturalized in the United States: also called bullweed; buttonweed; knapweed.

hill-y (hĭl′ĭ), adj. [comp. -ier, superl. -iest], [see hill], abounding with, or characterized by, hills; rugged; steep.—n. hill′i-ness.

hilt (hĭlt), n. [A.S. = that by which held], a handle, especially of a sword or dagger.

hi-lum (hī′lŭm), n. [pl. hila (-lă)], [Lat. = a little thing], Bot., 1, the scar on a seed marking the point of attachment to the parent plant (see germination, illus.); 2, the nucleus of a grain of starch; 3, the eye of a bean; Anat., the point where ducts, nerves, and blood vessels enter and leave a gland or other organ.

him (hĭm), pron. [A.S., dative of he], the objective case of he: as, they brought him home.

H. I. M. abbr. His (or Her) Imperial Majesty: a title given to reigning royalty.

Hi-ma-la-yan (hĭ-mä′lă-yăn″; sometimes hĭm″ă-lā′yăn), adj. [<Sans. hima, snow +ālaya, abode], pertaining to the Himalayas, a very lofty range of mountains between Tibet and India.

him-self (hĭm-sĕlf′), pron. [him+self], 1, a reflexive form of he; as, he cut himself; 2, an emphatic form of he; as, he did it himself; 3, his normal or true self; as, he is not himself.

[1]hind (hīnd), n. [A.S. = deer], 1, the female of the red deer, especially in and after the third year: opposite of stag; 2, any of several kinds of fishes.

[2]hind (hīnd), n. [<M.E. hine, a servant<A.S. hīgan, servants], 1, in England and Scotland, a farm servant or steward; 2, a peasant; boor; rustic.

[3]hind (hīnd), adj. [comp. hinder, superl. hindmost or hindermost], [<A.S. hinder, behind], of, or belonging or pertaining to, the rear; found in the rear; as, the hind legs of an animal.

Hind. abbr. 1, Hindu; 2, Hinduism; 3, Hindustan; 4, Hindustani; 5, Hindi.

[1]hind-er (hīn′dĕr), adj. [comp. of [3]hind], pertaining to, or constituting, the back or rear.

[2]hin-der (hĭn′dĕr), v.t. [<A.S. hindrian, to hinder], to obstruct; impede; thwart; frustrate:—v.i. to impose obstructions; raise obstacles.

Syn. clog, bar, block, check, embarrass, retard, impede. (See prevent.)—Ant. further, help, push, promote.

hin-der-ance (hĭn′dĕr-ăns), n. an impediment; obstruction. See hin′drance, Pfd. S.

hind-er-most (hīn′dĕr-mōst), adj. [[3]hinder +most], farthest back; hindmost.

Hin-di (hĭn′dē), n. [<Hind. Hind, India], the principal vernacular spoken in northern India.

hind-most (hīnd′mōst), adj. [[3]hind+most], farthest from the front; in the extreme rear; last. Also, hind′er-most.

hin-drance (hĭn′drăns), n. [see [2]hinder], 1, the act of hindering or state of being hindered; restraint; 2, an obstruction; an impediment; obstacle; a check. Also, hin′der-ance.

Syn. impediment, obstacle, obstruction, difficulty, encumbrance. Difficulty, the general term, connotes that which is hard to do or overcome: a difficulty may be conquered usually by perseverance or effort, unless it lies within oneself, and is caused by a lack of nervous control; as, she had difficulty in restraining her tears. A hindrance is that which pulls one back and prevents accomplishment; it puts a stop to progress. Rain may be a hindrance; bashfulness may be a hindrance. That which bears down on one, burdens one, hampers one, is an encumbrance; heavy baggage is an encumbrance. An impediment literally is a stumblingblock; stones in the road are impediments; anything, however, that slows us down or holds us back may be called an impediment; certain conditions are impediments to marriage; certain physical defects form impediments in one's speech. Obstacles and obstructions lie in our way; obstacles are difficulties, usually surmountable, of either a physical or a moral nature; an obstacle race is one in which physical barriers or hindrances must be passed; the path of success presents many obstacles. Obstructions are usually physical, and may be insurmountable. Torn-up roads form an obstruction to motorists.

hind-sight (hīnd'sīt″), n. [³*hind* + sight], 1, the rear sight on a rifle; 2, ability to look back and see what should have been done.

Hin-du (hĭn'dōō, hĭn-dōō'), n. [< Hind. Hind, India], 1, a native of Hindustan belonging to the Aryan race; 2, any native of India who believes in Hinduism:—adj. of or belonging to Hindus or Hinduism; Indian. Also, Hin'doo.—v.t. Hin'du-ize.

Hin-du-ism (hĭn'dōō-ĭzm), n. the Hindu social and religious system, founded on the worship of Brahma. Also, Hin'doo-ism.

Hin-du-sta-ni (hĭn″dōō-stä'nē), n. [< Pers. Hindūstān, country of the Hindus], the chief language of the Mohammedans in India, a dialect of Western Hindi mixed with Arabic and Persian: used as the common medium between Mohammedans and Hindus, also between Europeans and natives generally: often loosely called Urdu:—adj. of or pertaining to the Hindus, their country, or their language. Also, Hin″doo-sta'ni.

hinge (hĭnj), n. [< M.E. henge, hinge, hook], 1, the joints or hooks on which a door, gate, lid, or the like, turns or swings; 2, a natural joint, as of an oyster shell; 3, the fundamental or cardinal point on which anything depends or turns for its course or result:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. hinged (hĭnjd), p.pr. hinging (hĭn'jĭng)], to hang by, or furnish with, a hinge:—v.i. 1, to turn or hang, as a door on a hinge; 2, to depend for result; be contingent: generally with on or upon.

HINGES
1, hook-and-eye hinge; 2, strap hinge; 3, T hinge; 4, butt hinge; 5, blind hinge.

¹hin-ny (hĭn'ĭ), n. [pl. -nies (-ĭz)], [< Lat. hinnus, a hinny], the offspring of a stallion and a she-ass: distinguished from mule.

²hin-ny (hĭn'ĭ), n. [Sc. dial. var. of honey], Sc. Dial., honey: a term of endearment.

hint (hĭnt), n. [< A.S. hentan, to seize upon], an indirect suggestion; distant allusion; intimation:—v.t. to suggest; mention casually:—v.i. to intimate vaguely; make a covert or indirect suggestion.

Syn., v. indicate, mention, intimate, insinuate, imply, allude, point, advert, refer, signify, relate.

hin-ter-land (hĭn'tẽr-lănd″), n. [Ger. = hinder (more remote) land], territory back of a river or seacoast region; an inland region.

¹hip (hĭp), interj. [imit.], a signal used to organize a group into united action, as for a series of heaves on a rope, or, especially, for a cheer; as, hip, hip, hurrah!

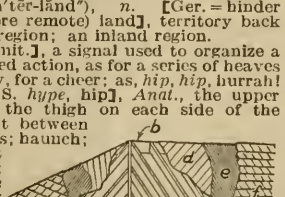
²hip (hĭp), n. [< A.S. hype, hip], Anat., the upper fleshy part of the thigh on each side of the pelvis; the thigh joint between the thigh and hip bones; haunch; Entom., Rare, the first joint of an insect's leg; Arch., the angle at the junction of two sloping sections of a roof: hip bone, Anat., a large irregular bone, part of the pelvis, forming the chief projection of the hip: hip joint, Anat., the joint connecting the hip bone and the thigh bone: hip roof, Arch., a roof without gables, in which the sloping ends and sides meet in a sharp angle, or hip: also called hipped roof: hip strap, a strap which passes over a horse's hip, supporting the breeching (see harness, illus.):—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. hipped (hĭpt), p.pr. hipping], 1, to injure the thigh joint of (an animal); 2, to build with a hip, as a roof; 3, in wrestling, to throw (one's adversary) over one's hip.



HIP ROOF
a, hip rafter; b, ridge board; c, c, rafters; d, sheathing; e, building paper; f, shingles.

³hip (hĭp), n. [< A.S. hēope, fruit of rose], Bot., the ripe fruit of the rose, especially the wild rose.

hipped (hĭpt), p.adj. 1, [< ²hip], having a (specified type of) hip; 2, [< ²hip], injured in the hips; hipshot; 3, [< hyp], afflicted with imaginary diseases; melancholy: also, hypped: Arch., [< ²hip], having a hip roof, or one with both ends and sides sloping to a central lengthwise ridge: Slang, [< hyp], obsessed; unreasonably enthusiastic: with on; as, hipped on the subject of prohibition: also, hypped.

hip-po-cam-pus (hĭp″ō-kăm'pŭs), n. [pl. -pi (-pī)], [< Gk. hippos, horse + kampos, sea monster], Zoöl., a small, salt-water fish with a head like that of a horse; a sea horse (which see for illus.); Anat., an elevation on the floor of certain cavities, or ventricles, of the brain; Gk. Myth., a fabulous sea monster with head and fore quarters similar to a horse, and a tail like a fish.

Hip-po-crat-ic (hĭp″ō-krăt'ĭk), adj. [< Gk. Hippokratēs], concerning or derived from Hippocrates, a Greek physician, living about 460–376 B. C., called the "Father of Medicine": Hippocratic oath, a solemn pledge, formerly taken by those about to practice medicine or nursing and embodying a standard of medical ethics.

Hip-po-crene (hĭp'ō-krēn; hĭp″ō-krē'nē), n. [< Gk. hippos, horse + krēnē, a spring], Gk. Myth., a fountain on Mount Helicon in Bœotia, believed to have sprung up where Pegasus, the winged horse, struck his hoof, and considered a fount of poetic inspiration from the Muses.

Hip-po-da-mi-a (hĭp″ō-dā-mī'ȧ), n. [< Gk. hippodamos, a horse tamer], Gk. Myth., a Grecian princess, offered by her father as a prize to the man who could defeat him in a chariot race, and won by her lover Pelops, through a bribe which he offered to her father's charioteer.

hip-po-drome (hĭp'ō-drōm), n. [< Gk. hippos, horse + dromos, a race course], 1, an ancient Greek or Roman oval course for chariot races, surrounded by tiers of seats; 2, a modern arena with seats around it for spectators; a circus.

hip-po-griff (hĭp'ō-grĭf), n. [< It. ippogrifo < Gk. hippos, horse + L.L. gryphus, griffin], a mythical creature having the body of a horse, the wings and head of an eagle, and the forelegs of a lion. Also, hip'po-gryph.

Hip-pol-y-te (hĭ-pŏl'ĭ-tē), n. [Gk.], Gk. Myth., a queen of the Amazons, who, according to one tradition, was slain by Hercules when he came to get a girdle which she wore, but, according to another, was conquered and wedded by Theseus: a character (written Hippolyta) in Shakespeare's "Midsummer Night's Dream," Chaucer's "Knight's Tale," Dryden's "Palamon and Arcite," and the Elizabethan play "The Two Noble Kinsmen."

Hip-pol-y-tus (hĭ-pŏl'ĭ-tŭs), n. [Gk.], Gk. Myth., the noble son of Theseus, falsely accused by his stepmother, Phædra, because he would not return her love, cursed by his father, and killed by Poseidon at the request of Theseus, but restored to life by Æsculapius through Diana's instigation: the subject of a tragedy, "Phædra," by Euripides.

Hip-pom-e-nes (hĭ-pŏm'ē-nēz), n. [Gk.], Gk. Myth., in the Bœotian version of the story of Atalanta, a hero who, having defeated the maiden in a foot race by following the advice of Aphrodite and dropping three golden apples which Atalanta could not resist stopping to pick up, secured her as his bride: sometimes identified with Milanion, the hero of the Arcadian version of the story.

hip-poph-a-gous (hĭ-pŏf'ȧ-gŭs), adj. [< Gk. hippos, horse + phagein, to eat], eating horseflesh as food.—n. hip-poph'a-gy (-jĭ).

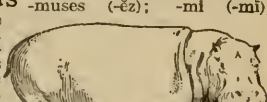
hip-po-pot-a-mus (hĭp″ō-pŏt'ȧ-mŭs), n. [pl. -muses (-ĕz); -mi (-mī)], [< Gk. hippos, horse + potamos, river], a very large, thick-skinned, amphibious mammal allied to the hogs, with short legs and a massive body, commonly found in the rivers of Africa.



HIPPOPOTAMUS
1/80

hip-shot (hĭp'-shŏt″), adj. [²hip + shoot], 1, having a dislocated hip joint; 2, with one hip higher than the other; lame; 3, hence, ungainly.

hir-cine (hûr'sĭn; -sīn), adj. [< Lat. hircus, goat], like a goat, especially in odor; goatish.

hire (hīr), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. hired (hīrd), p.pr. hiring], [< A.S. hȳr, wage], 1, to employ, as a servant, for wages; engage for temporary service at a certain price; 2, to contract for the use of; lease, as property, for temporary use; 3, to grant temporary use of for pay: often with out; as, to hire out a horse by the hour;

4, to bribe, as a mercenary:—n. 1, the act of hiring; 2, wages paid for personal service or labor; 3, recompense or consideration paid for the use of anything; price; rent; 4, a bribe.

Syn., n. (see salary); v. (see employ).

hire-ling (hīr'lĭng), n. 1, one who serves for wages; 2, one who is willing to sell honor or principle for personal gain:—adj. mercenary; venal.

hir-sute (hûr'sūt; hĕr-sūt'), adj. [<Lat. hirsutus, shaggy], hairy; covered with bristles or hair; shaggy.—n. hir'sute-ness.

his (hĭz), [A.S., genitive of hē], the possessive case of he: used: 1, as poss.adj.; as, his merit is great the credit is his; 2, as poss.pron.; as, which hat have you? I have his: Obs., the possessive case of it.

His-pan-ic (hĭs-păn'ĭk), adj. [<Lat. Hispania, Spain], Poet., pertaining to Hispania, or Spain, its people, or language.

his-pid (hĭs'pĭd), adj. [<Lat. hispidus, rough], prickly; bristly, as a porcupine or a cactus.

hiss (hĭs), n. [imit.], 1, a sibilant noise, like the voiceless sound of s, made by forcing the breath between the tongue and base of the upper teeth, and resembling the sounds made by a serpent or goose; 2, a sharp, sibilant sound, expressive of hatred, derision, or disapproval:—v.i. to utter a sound like that of an angry goose or serpent, especially as a sign of disapprobation or contempt; as, they hissed at what he said:—v.t. to express, or to express contempt for, by such a sound; as, the audience hissed her.—n. hiss'ing.

hist (hĭst), interj. [ejaculatory sound], hush! listen! —v.t. to urge on, or incite, as a dog.

hist. abbr. 1, historian; 2, historic; historical; 3, history; 4, histology.

his-tol-o-gy (hĭs-tŏl'ō-jĭ), n. [<Gk. histos, tissue +-logia, study], Biol., the science treating of the microscopical structure of animal and plant tissues.—adj. his"to-log'i-cal.—n. his-tol'o-gist.

his-to-ri-an (hĭs-tō'rĭ-ăn), n. [see history], 1, a writer about the events of the past; a chronicler; annalist; 2, a student of the past.

his-tor-ic (hĭs-tŏr'ĭk), adj. 1, of or pertaining to history: usually, historical; 2, based upon, or true to, the facts of history; 3, celebrated in history; famous: Gram., designating a tense employed in telling of past events: usually, historical; as, the historical present is used for the past tense in vivid narrative.—adj. his-tor'i-cal.—adv. his-tor'i-cal-ly.

his-tor-i-fy (hĭs-tŏr'ĭ-fī), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -fied (-fīd), p.pr. -fying], to keep records of, for historical purposes; chronicle.

his-to-ri-og-ra-pher (hĭs-tō"rĭ-ŏg'rȧ-fẽr), n. [<Gk. historia, an inquiry +graphein, to write], a writer especially appointed to study and write of past events, usually in a particular country.—n. his-to"ri-og'ra-phy.

his-to-ry (hĭs'tō-rĭ), n. [pl. -ries (-rĭz)], [<Gk. historia, inquiry], 1, a complete story; a narrative or tale of events; 2, an account of past facts and events affecting one or more nations or peoples, arranged in due order, usually with comments and explanations: distinguished from annals and chronicles; 3, the branch of learning that studies, records, and explains past facts and events; 4, past facts or events in general, concerning some person, thing, nation, etc.: Med., the story obtained from a patient concerning his health, past and present, his parentage, surroundings, and work, and the symptoms of his disease.

Syn. annals, story, record, account, recital, chronicle. A record may be a brief note set down for remembrance or reference; it may be a piece of evidence or information preserved in writing, or in some other legible form, as in the traces of former geological periods found in rocks; or, a record may be a connected account of facts, preserved in a document, or on a monument or tablet. Annals and chronicles are kinds of record; annals narrate events year by year; chronicles set events down continuously over a certain period, long or short. History is a continuous, systematic record of public events. Annals and chronicles observe merely the order of time in presenting their material; history selects, emphasizes, and, usually, explains or interprets the events. Annals and chronicles set down that which happens, often regardless of subject, and always without perspective; history groups events, especially as they concern a certain nation, institution, or any center of interest, with regard to relative importance.

his-tri-on-ic (hĭs"trĭ-ŏn'ĭk), adj. [<Lat. histrio (-onis), actor], 1, pertaining to acting, actors, or the stage; 2, designed for show or effect; stagy; affected:—n.pl. 1, the art of theatrical representation; dramatics; 2, staginess; theatrical affectation.

hit (hĭt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. hit, p.pr. hitting], [<A.S. hyttan, to strike], 1, to strike; give a blow to; 2, to wound the feelings of; affect; 3, to touch (a mark); attain to; reach; 4, to coincide with; suit; 5, to meet with; find:—v.i. 1, to clash or collide; 2, to strike out; deliver a blow; 3, to reach one's aim; succeed; reach: often with upon; 4, to get into accord; agree; suit: Colloq., to fire or explode, as a gasoline engine; as, to hit on all four cylinders:—n. 1, a stroke or blow; 2, success; as, the song was a great hit; 3, repartee; appropriate remark; as, his answer was a clever hit: Baseball, a ball so driven by the batter as to enable him to reach first base without error by the opposing side and without forcing a base runner out: also called base hit.—n. hit'ter.

hitch (hĭch), v.t. [source uncertain], 1, to fasten or tie; unite; 2, to lift or move with a jerk:—v.i. 1, to become entangled or caught; catch; 2, to move by jerks; walk haltingly; limp; 3, to strike the feet together, as horses: Colloq., 1, to get along together; 2, to agree; be consistent, as two stories or reports:—n. 1, a pulling or jerking upward; 2, a sudden stop; an obstacle; impediment; 3, a limp; 4, an inconsistency, as in a story: Naut., a special kind of noose or knot, especially for temporary fastening (see knot, illus.).

hitch-hike (hĭch'=hīk"), n. a walk, or hike, during which one receives one or more free rides, as from passing automobiles.

hith-er (hĭth'ẽr), adv. [<A.S. hider, hither], 1, to this place; 2, to this point or conclusion:—adj. on the side near or toward the speaker; nearer.

hith-er-to (hĭth"ẽr-tōō'; hĭth'ẽr-tōō"), adv. [hither +prep. to], up to this time; till now; heretofore; in time past.

hith-er-ward (hĭth'ẽr-wẽrd), adv. [hither+-ward], to this place; in this direction; hither. Also, hith'er-wards.

Hit-tite (hĭt'īt), n. [<Heb. Khittīm, the Hittites], Bib., a member of an ancient people scattered through Asia Minor and Palestine.

hive (hīv), n. [<A.S. hȳf <O.Teut. source], 1, a box or house for bees: a beehive; 2, a swarm of bees living in such a box: hence, 3, any place teeming with activity:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. hived (hīvd), p.pr. hiving], 1, to gather or put into a hive; 2, to harbor; store, as honey:—v.i. 1, to enter a hive, as bees; 2, to live together in swarms.

BEEHIVE

A, alighting board; B, bee entrance; C, hive body, or brood chamber; D, comb honey super; E, hive cover; F, inner cover; G, comb honey sections, held in section holder; H, comb foundation in frames; J, frame ends, showing bee spaces; K, bottom board; L, hive stand.

hives (hīvz), n.pl. [source uncertain], Pathol., urticaria; nettle rash; a skin disease characterized by the sudden appearance of smooth, whitish elevations, accompanied with intense itching, generally due to disturbance of the stomach and intestinal tract by certain foods, such as shellfish, strawberries, etc.

H. J. abbr. [Lat. hic jacet], here lies:—H. L., House of Lords:—hl., hectoliter:—H. M., 1, His (or Her) Majesty; 2, Home Mission; Home Missionary:—hm., hectometer:—H. M. C., His (or Her) Majesty's Customs:—H. M. S., 1, His (or Her) Majesty's Service; 2, His (or Her) Majesty's Ship (or Steamship):—ho., house:—Ho, Chem., the symbol [Ho] for the element holmium.

ho (hō), interj. [ejaculatory], 1, stop! hold! also, whoa; 2, expressing delight, surprise, etc., or, when repeated, mockery; 3, hallo! attend! Also, hoa.

hoar (hōr), adj. [<A.S. hār, hoary], 1, gray; ish white in color; white; 2, gray with age; old; venerable; 3, ancient: Archaic, white with mold; stale; musty:—n. 1, white frost; 2, great age; antiquity.

hoard (hōrd), n. [<A.S. hordian, to treasure], a store or treasure laid up secretly; a collection of things kept in hiding or in reserve: Obs., a place for storing away treasures:—v.i. and v.t. to lay up and store, as money; store away.—n. hoard'er.

hoard-ing (hōr'dĭng), n. [<obs. hoard, a hurdle <O.F. hurt <O.H.G. hurt, a hurdle], in England, a temporary board fence, inclosing a building site and materials while construction is going on, often used as a billboard.

hoar-frost (hōr'frôst"), n. [hoar+frost], rime; tiny ice particles from the moisture in the air.

hoar-hound (hōr'hound"), n. [see horehound], 1, any of various plants of the mint family, especially one (Marrubium vulgare) used as a remedy for coughs, colds, etc.; 2, an extract or confection flavored with this plant. Also, hore'hound", Pfd. S.

hoarse (hôrs), adj. [comp. hoarser, superl. hoarsest], [<A.S. hās, hārs, hoarse], 1, discordant, as the sound of a foghorn; 2, husky, as the voice when affected by a cold.—adv. hoarse'ly.—n. hoarse'ness.

hoars-en (hôr'sn), v.t. to make rough or harsh in sound:—v.i. to become husky.

hoar-y (hôr'ĭ), adj. [comp. hoarier, superl. hoariest], [see hoar], 1, white or gray with age, as hair: 2, ancient: Obs., stale; musty.—n. hoar'i-ness.

hoar-y plan-tain an herb (Plantago media) of the English plantain, but with shorter, densely hairy leaves and a spike of sweet-scented flowers.

hoax (hōks), n. [18th cent.; perh. corr. of hocus], a humorous or mischievous trick; a fraud played off as a jest:—v.t. to take in, or delude, by a trick.

Syn., v. deceive, take in, trick, bamboozle, cheat.

[1]hob (hŏb), n. [source uncertain], 1, a projection in a fireplace on which things are placed to be kept warm (see forestick, illus.); 2, the peg used as a target in some games, as quoits; 3, a threaded and fluted steel worm, used in a lathe for cutting worm wheels, etc.

[2]hob (hŏb), n. [colloq. for Robin, Robert], an elf: Eng. Dial., a lout: to play hob, to work mischief.

hob-ble (hŏb'l), v.i. [p.t. and p.p. hobbled (-ld), p.pr. hobbling], [<M.E. hobelen, to limp], 1, to move or proceed haltingly; 2, to walk with a limp or awkward step:—v.t. 1, to make lame; 2, to hamper, as by tying the legs of a horse; shackle:—n. 1, a limping or awkward step; 2, a clog or fetter: Colloq., an awkward or embarrassing situation: hobble skirt, a skirt made so tight below the knees as to prevent long steps.

hob-ble-de-hoy (hŏb'l-dē-hoi'), n. [16th cent.: source uncertain], 1, a lad between boyhood and manhood; 2, hence, an inexperienced, awkward youth; a stupid lout; gawk.

[1]hob-by (hŏb'ĭ), n. [pl. -bies (-iz)], [<M.E. hobin, hoby, farmer's name for horse: var. of Robin], 1, Archaic, a small, ambling horse; a nag; 2, a hobbyhorse; 3, a favorite pursuit, plaything, or topic of conversation, aside from one's chief occupation or business; one's particular, favorite pastime.

[2]hob-by (hŏb'ĭ), n. [pl. -bies (-iz)], [<M.E. hoby <O.F. hobé, falcon], a small falcon formerly used for hunting larks and other small birds.

hob-by-horse (hŏb'ĭ-hôrs'), n. [hobby+horse], 1, a stick with a horse's head, on which children ride; 2, a wooden rocking-horse; 3, an imitation horse on a merry-go-round; 4, a wicker horse used in the old morris dances.

hob-gob-lin (hŏb'gŏb"lĭn), n. [hob+goblin], 1, an impish elf; 2, an evil sprite of frightful appearance; 3, hence, any alarming apparition; bogy; bugbear: Hobgoblin, Robin Goodfellow, or Puck.

hob-nail (hŏb'nāl"), n. [hob+nail], 1, a short thick nail with a large head, used for protecting the soles of heavy boots, and to prevent slipping; 2, a clown; a lout.—adj. hob'nailed".

hob-nob (hŏb'nŏb"), v.i. [p.t. and p.p. -nobbed (-nŏbd"), p.pr. -nobbing], [<hob or nob, take or leave, perh. <A.S. habban, to have, ne habban, not to have], to drink, talk, or associate familiarly:—n. 1, a friendly chat; 2, a friendly drinking together.

ho-bo (hō'bō), n. [pl. hobos, hoboes (-bōz)], [U.S. slang], a tramp; vagrant.—n. ho'bo-ism.

[1]hock (hŏk), n. [<Hochheim, place of manufacture], 1, a German white or yellow wine: also called Hochheimer; 2, hence, any white Rhine wine.

[2]hock (hŏk), n. [<earlier hough <A.S. hōh, human heel], 1, the joint in the hind leg of some animals, corresponding to the ankle in man; as, in the horse, the joint between the stifle and the fetlock (see horse, dog, fowl, illus.); 2, the back part of the human knee joint:—v.t. to lame by cutting the tendons of the hamstring. Also, hough (hŏk).

[3]hock (hŏk), v.t. [perh. akin to [2]hawk], Slang, to pawn; pledge as security for a loan.

hock-ey (hŏk'ĭ), n. [source uncertain], 1, a winter game played between goals on a field of ice, with a rubber disk, called a puck, and with clubs curved at one end; 2, a similar game played on turf with a ball instead of a puck: 3, the curved stick for driving the puck: also called hockey stick.

HOCKEY STICKS
1, ice hockey stick; 2, English field hockey stick.

ho-cus (hō'kŭs), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. hocused or -cussed (-kŭst), p.pr. hocusing or -cussing], [abbr. of hocus-pocus], 1, to cheat or trick; 2, to render insensible by means of drugged liquor in order to cheat or rob; 3, to adulterate; also, to mix with drugs, as liquor;—n. drugged liquor: Obs., 1, an impostor, 2, trickery.

ho-cus-po-cus (hō'kŭs-pō'kŭs), n. [17th-cent. mock Latin], 1, an incantation used by jugglers as a set formula; 2, a juggler's trick; 3, a juggler or magician; impostor; cheat; 4, nonsense.

hod (hŏd), n. [prob. <obs. hot <O.F. hotte, pannier <Ger. hotte, a tub], 1, a wooden trough, fastened to a long handle and balanced across the shoulder, for carrying mortar or bricks; 2, a coal scuttle.

hod-car-ri-er (hŏd'kăr"ĭ-ēr), n. [hod+carry], 1, a workman who carries mortar and bricks; a hodman; 2, figuratively, any common drudge.

hod-den (hŏd'n), n. [source uncertain], Sc. Dial., hodden gray (which see):—adj. dressed in hodden gray; rustic; countrified.

hod-den gray Sc. Dial., a coarse, woolen cloth manufactured in Scotland from undyed fleece, and formerly worn only by peasants.

Ho-der (hō'dĕr), n. [<O.N.], Norse Myth., the blind god who, through Loki's trickery, unwittingly slew Balder with a sprig of mistletoe.

hodge-podge (hŏj'pŏj"), n. [corr. of hotchpotch, q.v.], a dish made of meat and vegetables stewed together; hence, any confused mixture; medley; jumble: also, hotchpotch: Eng. Law, a throwing together of properties so as to facilitate an equal division of the whole: commonly, hotchpot.

hod-man (hŏd'măn), n. [pl. -men (-mĕn)], [hod+man], a bricklayer's helper; a hodcarrier.

ho-dom-e-ter (hō-dŏm'ē-tēr), n. [<Gk. hodos, a way+metron, a measure], an instrument attached to the wheel of a vehicle for measuring the distance traversed. Also, o-dom'e-ter.

hoe (hō), n. [<Fr. houe <O.H.G. houwa <houwan, to hew], a flat-bladed, long-handled implement for weeding, loosening soil, etc.:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. hoed (hōd), p.pr. hoeing], 1, to cut, till, or dig up with a hoe; 2, to weed: —v.i. to work with a hoe.

HOES
1, rake and hoe combination; 2, weeding hoe; 3, common garden hoe; 4, warren hoe; 5, 6, Dutch hoes.

hoe-cake (hō'kāk"), n. [hoe+cake], in the southern United States, a kind of thin corn-meal bread originally baked on the blade of a hoe.

Hœ-nir (hū'nĕr), n. [<O. N.], Norse Myth., one of the three gods who created the first two mortals.

hog (hŏg), n. [source uncertain], 1, a full-grown, domestic swine; an adult of the domesticated variety of the wild pig; 2, any of various animals resembling this, as the peccary, water hog, etc.; 3, a grasping, gluttonous person: a coarse, unclean, and disgusting person; 4, a kind of rough, broomlike frame used for scrubbing a ship's bottom under water:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. hogged (hŏgd), p.pr. hogging], 1, to take more than one's fair share of; 2, to render (horse's hair) bristly by cutting short; 3, to scrub (a ship's bottom) under water:—v.i. Naut., to be bent in the middle so as to curve up like a hog's back, as the bottom of the hull of a ship when broken or strained.

hog-back (hŏg'băk"), n [hog+[1]back], 1, an animal with back curved like a hog's; 2, anything resembling a hog's back in form: Geol., a sharply crested, rocky or sandy ridge formed by the outcropping of tilted strata of rock; any sharp, steep ridge.

hog-gish (hŏg'ĭsh), adj. [see hog], 1, gluttonous; coarsely selfish; 2, disgusting; filthy.

hogs-head (hŏgz'hĕd), n. [<M.E. hogges hed: source uncertain], 1, a liquid measure of capacity equal to 52½ imperial gallons or 63 wine gallons; 2, a large cask holding from 100 to 140 gallons.

Hoh-en-zol-lern (hō'ĕn-tsŏl"ĕrn), n. [<Ger. hoch, hoh-, high+soller, söller, watch tower], the name of the princely family, founded in the 11th century, from which came the kings of Prussia from 1701 to 1918, and the German emperors from 1871 to 1918.

hoi-den (hoi'dn), n. [see hoyden], a tomboy; romp: —adj. rude; ill-mannered:—v.i. to romp roughly or indelicately. See hoy'den, Pfd. S.

hoi pol-loi (hoi" pō-loi'), [Gk. = the many], the crowd: the masses.

hoise (hoiz), v.t. [<M.E. hissa, a sailors' cry in lifting], Obs., to hoist; raise with tackle.

hoist (hoist), v.t. [<hoise], 1 to lift or raise with tackle; heave; 2, to raise aloft, as a flag:—n. 1, the act of lifting or heaving up; 2, an apparatus for lifting goods from a lower to a higher floor, etc.; a tackle; 3, an elevator or lift; 4, the perpendicular

COATS OF ARMS AND SYMBOLS OF HERALDRY

1–6, complete coats of arms: 1, United States of America; 2, Washington; 3, Roosevelt; 4, Philippine Islands; 5, Great Britain; 6, France under the Bourbon reign.—7–18, some of the elements used in coats of arms: 7, shield, or escutcheon; 8, helmet; 9, mantling; 10, wreath, supporting crest composed of hand and branch; 11, wreath, plain; 12, supporters; 13, crown; 14, coronet; 15, scroll, bearing motto; 16, crosses (a, botonee; b, crosslet, fitchée; c, Greek; d, saltire; e, pattée); 17 eagle, displayed; 18, lion, rampant.

(See other side; see also illus. page 452.)

THE USES AND USAGES OF HERALDRY

HERALDRY, in the fullest sense of the word, is the business or occupation of a herald, but as used today it applies to but one of the many concerns of the medieval herald, namely, to the science of armorial bearings.

In the days of chivalry, the herald was an official of much importance and many functions. He issued proclamations in the name of his lord; bore messages between persons of high estate; supervised tournaments and trials by combat; was the recorder of deeds of chivalry and the court of last resort in all matters pertaining to genealogy and precedence. Naturally, it was the herald who became the arbiter, and eventually the dictator, in all matters relating to armorial bearings.

Just when the custom of bearing a distinguishing mark upon the shield originated, it is difficult to say, but with the development of body armor and the closed helmet the need of a distinctive emblem became imperative.

At first a knight was free to choose whatever mark or device pleased his fancy. This he placed upon his shield, and, in slightly later times, upon the surcoat which he wore over his armor; whence the name coat of arms. But as time went on, armorial bearings increased and multiplied, and frequent duplications of individual bearings arose. By the fourteenth century the need for systemization and conventionalization had made itself felt, and the whole subject had been reduced to something closely approaching an exact science.

The starting point in heraldry is, naturally, the escutcheon, or shield, viewed always as though borne by a person facing the observer. Hence the terms dexter, or right, and sinister, or left, designate sides of the shield exactly the opposite of those to which we should naturally apply them: dexter is the bearer's right, sinister, the bearer's left. (See escutcheon, illus.)

The colors applied to the shield are called tinctures, and are of two classes: the metals, or (gold) and argent (silver), and the colors proper, as gules (red), azure (blue), etc. This distinction between metals and colors must be carefully observed, as one of the important principles of heraldry is that color must never touch color, nor metal, metal. In place of the tinctures, certain conventional allover patterns, known as furs, were frequently substituted. Originally the furs were but two in number, ermine and vair; but these were later modified into various others, as erminois, pean, potent, etc.

The charges, or bearings, placed upon the shield, fall into two distinct divisions, the one comprising the ordinaries and subordinaries usually showing geometrical patterns, and the other, the common charges, being of a more or less pictorial, or representative, character.

The ordinaries have always been rated as very ancient and highly honorable charges, being in reality nothing more nor less than simple embellishments of some structural or strengthening part of the shield, such as doubtless were produced in very early times by coloring this part differently from the shield. Greater refinement and variety were obtainable by using any one of a number of ornamental partition lines to form the edge of the charge. The subordinaries are charges of the same general character as the ordinaries; indeed, authorities differ as to just where the division line between the two classes should be drawn.

Among the common charges may be mentioned the lion, the eagle, the stag, the griffin, the sun, moon, star, mullet, cockle, and a host of other objects drawn from the world of nature or of myth and fable. Most notable of all is the lion, or leopard, which appears again and again in the arms of monarchs and nobles of high estate, as in the royal arms of England and of Scotland. Second only to the lion is the eagle, which sometimes appears single-headed, sometimes double-headed, and usually displayed, that is, with wings widespread.

A coat of arms may bear a single charge, or it may present a great array of charges to represent the union in one person of many houses. To the proper assembling of such charges on a single shield, the name marshaling is applied. The simplest form of marshaling is quartering, as in the arms of Great Britain, but each quarter of a shield may itself be quartered, and the process of marshaling may be continued, as in the great arms of Maria Theresa, or those of certain European nations, until the coat of arms becomes an intricate design composed of seemingly innumerable constituents.

Outside of the escutcheon, we usually find certain heraldic embellishments which are not strictly essential to the arms proper. The helmet is a usual accompaniment, placed over the escutcheon, together with an ornamental scrollwork, called mantling, which droops down on either side, and which originally represented the scarf worn round the body beneath the coat of mail. The crest, originally a special mark of honor, is now commonly placed above the helmet, rising from a wreath, or narrow band, formed of the two chief colors of the arms. The motto, in early times the battle cry of its owner, is usually placed, within a scroll, above the crest or beneath the escutcheon. Supporters, that is figures of men, beasts, angels, or the like, placed on either side of the escutcheon in attitudes of support or protection, are usually to be found only in the arms of monarchs and very powerful nobles. This is also true of the coronet, while the crown is reserved exclusively for kings and emperors.

dimension of a flag: opposite of fly:—p.adj. [p.p. of hoise: see etymology], Obs., lifted: hoist with his own petard, destroyed by his own plots against others.

hoi-ty-toi-ty (hoi'tĭ-toi'tĭ), interj. [prob. < obs. hoit, to be riotously mirthful], an exclamation of surprise, rebuke, contempt, etc.: —adj. 1, flighty; giddy; 2, arrogant; haughty.

ho-key-po-key (hō'kĭ-pō'kĭ), n. [prob. < hocus-pocus], Colloq., 1, hocus-pocus; trickery; 2, cheap ice cream sold in the streets.

ho-kum (hō'kŭm), n. [perh. < hocus, in sense of a stage trick], Slang, a phrase, gesture, or stage property, used by an actor to catch attention and win a laugh; hence, empty talk; claptrap.

H.O.L.C. abbr. Home Owners' Loan Corporation: a former Federal home-financing agency.

[1]hold (hōld), n. [corr. of hole], the interior of a ship below decks, where the cargo is stored.

[2]hold (hōld), v.t. [p.t. held (hĕld), p.p. held or, Archaic, holden (hōl'dn), p.pr. holding], [< A.S. haldan, to hold < O.Teut. source], 1, to grasp and keep in the hand; clutch; 2, to keep possession of; retain; keep; 3, to possess; occupy, as an office; 4, to keep (oneself) in a particular state; 5, to restrain; hold in check; as, hold your tongue; 6, to join together; combine; connect; 7, to judge; consider; as, I hold him a model of culture; 8, to entertain, believe, or accept, as an opinion; 9, to have room or space for; contain; 10, to observe; celebrate, as a festival; 11, to call and conduct, as a meeting; 12, to uphold; sustain; support:—v.i. 1, to keep a grasp on something; 2, to cling; adhere; 3, to stand good; remain firm and unbroken; be valid; as, this rule always holds; 4, to endure; continue; proceed; as, to hold to a given course of action; 5, to hesitate; restrain oneself; refrain; 6, to maintain an opinion:—n. 1, the act of grasping or keeping; seizure; grasp; 2, an embrace; 3, support; 4, a claim; ground or authority on which a thing is taken or kept; 5, a jail; place of confinement; 6, a fortified place: Law, a tenure or manner of holding property: usually in compounds, as free*hold*, copy*hold*, etc.; Mus., a character placed over [𝄐] or under [𝄐] a note or rest to show that it is to be prolonged: also called pause or fermata.

Syn., v. possess, comprehend, clasp, cherish, embrace, keep, restrain, contain, support, uphold, maintain.

hold-back (hōld'băk'), n. [[2]hold+[2]back], 1, a check or hindrance; 2, a strap used in holding back, or in backing, a carriage (see harness, illus.).

hold-er (hōl'dĕr), n. [see [2]hold], 1, a container; 2, a device in which something may be held in position; as, a cigar holder; 3, a handle; 4, a heavy cloth pad by which to grasp the handle of a pressing iron, hot cooking pan, etc., to protect the hand from the heat; 5, a possessor; as, a holder of bonds; 6, an occupant; tenant: Law, the one who holds, and is legally entitled to the payment of, a check, note, or bill.

hold-fast (hōld'făst'), n. [[2]hold+[1]fast], 1, a nail, catch, clamp, hook, etc., used to fasten an object in place; 2, something to hold on to; support.

hold-ing (hōl'dĭng), n. [see [2]hold], 1, property owned, as bonds, stocks, etc.; 2, a farm or other real estate rented from another: Obs., a refrain of a song: Football, the act of seizing and thereby hindering an opponent in a manner forbidden by the rules: holding company, 1, a company that owns stock in a number of other companies and derives its income from the return on these holdings; 2, a company that owns a controlling interest in subsidiary companies, and operates their properties.

hold-up (hōld'ŭp'), n. [[2]hold+up], 1, an attack, with intent to rob; 2, one who attacks and robs; highwayman: Slang, an excessive charge, especially when the person charged cannot avoid paying.

hole (hōl), n. [< A.S. hol, hollow], 1, an opening in or through something; a cavity; 2, a depression; hollow place; pit; 3, a perforation; 4, the burrow of an animal; 5, hence, a dirty and disgusting habitation; 6, a hiding place: Colloq., a difficulty or dilemma: Golf, 1, a cavity in the putting green into which is sunk a metal cup and into which the ball must be played; 2, the distance, or section of a golf course, from a tee to the next such cup on the green.

Syn. cavity, aperture, orifice, hollow, perforation, gap.

hol-i-but (hŏl'ĭ-bŭt), n. [see halibut], a large flatfish valued as food. See hal'i-but, Pfd. S.

hol-i-day (hŏl'ĭ-dā), n. [holy+day], 1, a day of a religious festival; a day consecrated to religious celebration: usually, holyday or holy day; 2, a day of gaiety and joy in celebration of some national or religious event; 3, a day of freedom from labor; 4, a day legally set aside by the government for suspension of business, often in celebration of a great event:—adj. pertaining to a festival; joyous; gay; as, in holiday dress.

ho-li-ness (hō'lĭ-nĕs), n. [see holy], 1, the state or quality of being free from sin; 2, moral and spiritual purity; 3, sacredness; divineness: Holiness, a title of the Pope: used with his or your.

Syn. sanctity, piety, sacredness, righteousness, godliness.—Ant. impurity, impiety, unrighteousness.

hol-land (hŏl'ănd), n. [< Du. Holland < holt, wood +-land, land], fine, unbleached linen, glazed or unglazed, first manufactured in Holland: used for window shades, children's garments, upholstery, etc.

Hol-land-er (hŏl'ăn-dĕr), n. a native of Holland; a Dutchman.—abbr. Holl.

Hol-lands (hŏl'ăndz), n. a strong gin made in Holland from grain and juniper berries.

hol-lo (hŏl'ō; hŏ-lō'), v.t. [< Fr. hola, ho, there!], to shout to at a distance; to incite, as hounds:—v.i. to shout out:—n. a shout to attract attention; a call of greeting; hello:—interj. (hŏ-lō'), a cry to attract attention. Also, hal-loa'; hal-loo'; hel-lo'; hil'lo; hil'loa; hol'la; hul-lo'.

hol-low (hŏl'ō), adj. [< A.S. holh, hole], 1, having an empty space within: opposite of solid; 2, concave; sunken; 3, superficial; unreal; insincere; 4, reverberating; muffled; deep or low, as if from a hollow body: used of sound:—adv. Colloq., completely; thoroughly: usually in the phrase to beat all hollow:—n. 1, a cavity or pit; an unfilled space; as, the hollow of a tree; 2, a depression between elevations; a basin; valley; 3, a groove in moldings:—v.t. to excavate; scoop out; make empty:—v.i. to become empty.—adv. hol'low-ly.—n. hol'low-ness.

Syn., adj. sunken, depressed, empty, worthless.

hol-low-heart-ed (hŏl'ō-härt'ĕd), adj. insincere; dishonest; deceitful.

hol-ly (hŏl'ĭ), n. [pl. -lies (-lz)], [< A.S. holegn, holly], 1, an evergreen shrub or tree (genus Ilex) with glossy, prickly leaves and red berries, used as a decoration at Christmas; 2, the leaves and berries of this shrub: holly oak, the holm oak (which see).

hol-ly-hock (hŏl'ĭ-hŏk), n. [< holy + obs. hock < A.S. hoc, a mallow], a tall, perennial, cultivated mallow (Althæa rosea) with large, decorative, varicolored flowers.

GARDEN HOLLYHOCK

holm (hōm), n. [< O.N. holmr, an islet in a river], 1, low, flat land by the side of a river; 2, a small island in a river; an islet.

hol-mi-um (hŏl'mĭ-ŭm), n. [< Holmia, Latinized form of Stockholm], Chem., an element [symbol Ho] of the rare earth group.

holm oak [holm = corr. of A.S. holegn, holly], an evergreen oak (Quercus ilex) with tough, hard wood and glossy, hollylike leaves which are quite variable in shape, found in southern Europe; the holly oak.

hol-o-caust (hŏl'ō-kôst), n. [< Gk. holos, whole + kauston, burnt], 1, a sacrifice completely consumed by fire; a burnt offering; 2, complete or wholesale destruction, as by fire.

hol-o-graph (hŏl'ō-gräf), adj. [< Gk. holos, whole +graphein, to write], designating a document written entirely in the handwriting of the person whose signature it bears; as, a holograph will or deed:—n. a holograph document.—adj. hol'o-graph'ic.

hol-o-thu-ri-an (hŏl'ō-thū'rĭ-ăn), n. [< Gk. holothourion, zoöphyte], Zoöl., any of a class (Holothurioidea) of marine animals with elongated, cylindrical body, often spiny, related to the starfishes and sea urchins and including the trepangs; a sea cucumber (for illus. see Echinodermata):—adj. pertaining to a holothurian.

holp (hōlp), Archaic, past tense of the verb help.—p.p. Archaic, holp'en.

Hol-stein (hōl'stīn), adj. [name of duchy in Prussia], designating a breed of large cattle, originally from Schleswig-Holstein, raised for milk and beef:—n. one of this breed of cattle. Also called Holstein-Friesian.

HOLSTER

An automatic-pistol holster and belt.

hol-ster (hōl'stĕr), n. [17th-cent. Du. = a case for a pistol], a leather pistol case, usually worn at the belt or attached to the front of a saddle.

holt (hōlt), n. [A.S. = wood], Poet., a wooded hill; thicket; grove; copse.

ho-ly (hō'lĭ), adj. [comp. holier, superl. holiest], [< A.S. hālig < hāl, whole], 1, dedicated to the service of God; consecrated; 2, pure; morally and spiritually perfect; sinless: Holy Alliance, a compact made by Russia, Austria, and Prussia, in 1815, nominally in support of religion and peace, but really for the suppression of revolutionary tendencies: Holy Family, Joseph, Mary, and Jesus, as portrayed in paintings: Holy Roman Empire, the Western Roman Empire from Charlemagne (A. D. 800), or, in a narrower sense, from Otto I (962), until 1806: Holy See, the seat of the papacy; the papal throne: holy writ, the Bible:—n. [pl. holies (-liz)], a sacred thing: holy of holies, 1, the innermost shrine of the Jewish tabernacle and temple, where the people's most sacred religious relics were kept; hence, 2, any place held particularly sacred.—adv. ho'li-ly.

Syn., adj. devout, religious, blessed, hallowed, sacred. That is holy which by its own innate character is set above all else as spiritually or morally perfect. Hence, holy is a stronger term than sacred, for sacred describes that set apart by man for religious use, that which is hallowed by association or deserving in some way of special reverence. Holy applied to God indicates his utter perfection; the Holy Bible is his Word. Sacred songs, vessels, edifices, are those consecrated to the worship of God. That is sacred, too, which is to be kept free from profanation, violation, or harm. Sacred is opposed to secular and profane; as, sacred history.

ho-ly day a day set aside as sacred, as the Sabbath, or to be observed with religious ceremonies in memory of some person or event held sacred: Obs., a holiday. Also, ho'ly-day (hō'li-dā″).

Ho-ly Ghost Theol., the third person of the Trinity: also called Holy Spirit.

Ho-ly Grail in medieval legend, the cup used by Christ at the Last Supper, for a time miraculously preserved, but eventually lost because of the impurity of its keepers: the subject of Wagner's "Parsifal," of one of Tennyson's "Idylls of the King," and of Lowell's "Vision of Sir Launfal." See also grail.

Ho-ly Land Palestine, in southwestern Syria, the ancient home of the Jews, and the birthplace of Christianity.

ho-ly rood the cross of the Crucifixion: R. C. and Angl. Chs., a cross or crucifix, especially one surmounting the center of the rood screen, at the entrance to the choir or chancel.

Ho-ly Spir-it Theol., the third person of the Trinity: also called Holy Ghost.

ho-ly-stone (hō'li-stōn″), n. [source uncertain], 1, Naut., a large, flat sandstone used for scouring a ship's decks; 2, a stone with a natural hole in it: sometimes used as a charm:—v.t. to scrub (a deck) with a holystone:—v.i. to use a holystone.

Ho-ly Thurs-day R.C. Ch., the day before Good Friday, when the Last Supper is commemorated: also called Maundy Thursday; Angl.Ch., Ascension Day, or the 40th day after Easter, when Christ's ascension is commemorated.

Ho-ly Week Eccl., the week between Palm Sunday and Easter.

hom-age (hŏm'āj), n. [<O.F. ommage<L.L. hominaticum, service of a vassal<homo (hominis), man], 1, in feudal times, the formal, public ceremony by which a tenant or vassal promised loyalty and service to his sovereign or overlord; 2, the relationship thus established; 3, respect shown by some external action; respectful deference; reverence; honor.

Syn. allegiance, loyalty, obeisance, respect.

hom-bre (hŏm'bĕr), n. [see omber], a certain Spanish game of cards. See om'ber, Pfd. S.

home (hōm), n. [<A.S. hām, home<O.Teut. source], 1, one's abode or residence; fixed dwelling place of a man and his family; 2, a happy, congenial place of abode; 3, one's own country; one's native land; fatherland; 4, a locality where a plant or animal abounds; natural habitat; 5, a benevolent or charitable institution; 6, in various games, a goal; a base to which players must return to score, or at which they are safe:—adj. 1, pertaining to one's abode or country; 2, carried on, or produced in, one's own country; 3, domestic; 4, close; to the point designed; as, a home thrust; intimate: home plate, Baseball, the base at which the batsman stands to bat:—adv. 1, to, or at, home; 2, intimately; to the innermost part; closely; as, the blow struck home:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. homed (hōmd), p.pr. homing], to equip with a home:—v.i. 1, to fly home, as pigeons; 2, to dwell.

home-born (hōm'-bōrn″), adj. 1, native; natural; 2, domestic; produced in the home.

home-bred (hōm'-brĕd″), adj. 1, raised at home; 2, uncouth; unpolished; crude.

home-brew (hōm'-brōō″), n. an alcoholic beverage, especially beer, made at home.

home-less (hōm'lĕs), adj. [home+-less], without a home or refuge; as, homeless wanderers.—adv. home'less-ly.—n. home'less-ness.

home-like (hōm'līk″), adj. [home+-like], resembling a home; comfortable; cheerful; cozy; hospitable.—n. home'like″ness.

home-ly (hōm'lī), adj. [comp. -lier, superl. -liest], [see home], 1, homelike; domestic; cozy; 2, simple; plain; as, homely food; 3, uncultured; crude; 4, plain-featured; unattractive: Obs. or Rare, benevolent; kindly.—n. home'li-ness.

home-made (hōm'mād″), adj. [home+make], 1, made in, or for, the home; as, homemade bread; 2, of domestic, rather than foreign, manufacture; 3, plain; unpretentious; crude in workmanship; as, a homemade piece of furniture.

ho-me-o-path (hō'mē-ō-păth; hŏm'ē-), n. [<Gk. homoios, like+pathein, to suffer], one who believes in, or practices, homeopathy. Also, ho'mœ-o-path.—n. ho″me-op'a-thist.

ho-me-o-path-ic (hō″mē-ō-păth'ĭk), adj. 1, pertaining to homeopathy (which see): opposite of allopathic; 2, of very small quantity; as, a homeopathic dose. Also, ho″mœ-o-path'ic.

ho-me-op-a-thy (hō″mē-ŏp'a-thī), n. Med., the system of practical medicine introduced by Hahnemann (1755–1843), which seeks to cure disease by giving, in very small quantities, drugs which will produce effects on a healthy person similar to the symptoms of the disease treated, on the theory that these symptoms are not the disease as such but the evidences of nature's effort to combat it, and that hence the artificial production of the symptoms in a patient is equivalent to helping nature produce the means of cure. Also, ho″mœ-op'a-thy.

ho-mer (hō'mĕr), n. [<Heb. khōmer, heap], an ancient Hebrew measure of capacity containing about 75 gallons, or 11 bushels.

Ho-mer-ic (hō-mĕr'ĭk), adj. [<Gk. Homēros, Homer], of or pertaining to the Greek epic poet Homer, his style, poems, or time.

home rule local self-government of a dependent country or province: Home Rule, in Ireland, self-government by the Irish: long the goal of Irish patriots, and the important political issue dividing southern Ireland from conservative England and northern Ireland: home ruler, one who favors home rule; especially, one who, prior to 1920, advocated the policy of Home Rule for Ireland.

home run 1, a run back to a home or starting point; 2, in baseball, a run scored on a hit which enables the batter to make a circuit of the bases before the ball can be returned to the plate; also, the hit.

home-sick (hōm'sĭk″), adj. [home+sick], longing for home; depressed because of absence from home or family.—n. home'sick″ness.

home-spun (hōm'spŭn″), n. [home+spin], 1, cloth woven at home or made of yarn spun there; 2, fabric woven to resemble that made on a home loom; 3, anything coarse and homely: Obs., an unpolished rustic or countrified person:—adj. 1, woven at home; of domestic make; 2, coarse; plain; homely.

home-stead (hōm'stĕd), n. [<A.S. hāmstede <hām, home+stede, place], a home, especially an ancestral home, with the adjoining lands and buildings: Law, land and buildings occupied by the head of a family as his permanent home: homestead law, 1, a law giving certain privileges, such as the exemption of the homestead from forced sale to satisfy creditors, to the owner of a homestead; 2, a law authorizing the sale of parcels of public land to settlers:—v.t. to acquire or occupy (land or buildings) as a homestead.

home-stead-er (hōm'stĕd-ēr), n. Law, one who occupies or acquires his holdings of land under the homestead laws.

home-ward (hōm'wĕrd), adj. [home+-ward], leading toward home:—adv. toward home or one's native land. Also, adv., home'wards.

hom-i-cide (hŏm'ĭ-sīd), n. [<Lat. homo, man +caedere, to kill], the killing of one human being by another in any way: including manslaughter, or the slaying of a person unlawfully, but without malice; murder, or slaying with malice aforethought; and justifiable or excusable homicide, as in the performance of a duty, in self-defense, etc.: Rare, one who slays another.—adj. hom'i-cid″al.

hom-i-let-ic (hŏm″ĭ-lĕt'ĭk), adj. [<Gk. homilein, to hold converse], 1, pertaining to the composition of sermons; 2, like a sermon; 3, tediously didactic:—n.pl. used as sing. Theol., the science or art of composing or delivering sermons.

hom-i-list (hŏm'ĭ-lĭst), n. [see homily], 1, one who writes or preaches sermons or homilies; 2, one who delivers lectures on theological subjects.

hom-i-ly (hŏm'ĭ-lī), n. [pl. -lies (-līz)], [<Fr. omelie <Gk. homilia, a discourse], 1, a religious discourse or sermon delivered in public; 2, a tedious moral dissertation delivered in private.

hom-ing (hōm'ĭng), p.adj. [see home], easily finding the way home: homing pigeon, a breed of pigeon, often with remarkable endurance and speed, able to find its way home from great distances.

hom-i-ny (hŏm'ĭ-nĭ), n. [<Amer. Ind. rockahomonie, parched corn], hulled Indian corn, coarsely ground or broken, used as a cereal food.

ho-mo-dyne (hō'mō-dīn), adj. [<Gk. homos same+dunamis, power], Elec., relating to the same frequency:—n. Elec., in communication systems, a method of receiving waves by superposing upon them waves of the same frequency.

ho-mœ-op-a-thy (hō″mē-ŏp′ă-thĭ), n. [see homeopath], Med., a system of curing disease by giving, in minute doses, drugs which would produce in a healthy person the symptoms of the disease to be treated. See ho″me-op′a-thy, Pfd. S.—n. ho′mœ-o-path (-ō-păth); ho″mœ-op′a-thist.—adj. ho″mœ-o-path′ic.

ho-mo-ge-ne-i-ty (hō″mō-jĕ-nē′ĭ-tĭ), n. [see homogeneous], likeness; similarity; identity; homogeneous quality.

ho-mo-ge-ne-ous (hō″mō-jē′nē-ŭs; hŏm″ō-), adj. [<Gk. homos, same+genos, a kind], uniform; of the same kind or nature; composed of similar parts: opposite of heterogeneous: Alg., having all terms of the same degree.

hom-o-graph (hŏm′ō-grăf; hō′mō-), n. [<Gk. homos, same+graphein, to write], one of two or more words identical in spelling but derived from different roots, as, lie, to prevaricate, and lie, to recline, or lead, to conduct, and lead, the metal.

ho-moi-ou-si-an (hō″moi-ōō′sĭ-ăn), adj. [<Gk. homoios, like+ousia, substance, essence], pertaining to similarity of nature or substance: Eccl. Hist., holding to the belief that God the Son and God the Father are similar in nature and substance but not identical: distinguished from homoousian: Homoiousian, a fourth-century Christian who held this belief.

ho-mol-o-gate (hō-mŏl′ō-gāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -gated, p.pr. -gating], [<L.L. homologare (-atus) <Gk. homos, same+logos, word], Law, to acknowledge; assent to; express approval of, as does a court in confirming an award:—v.i. to agree; assent.

ho-mol-o-gize (hō-mŏl′ō-jīz), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -gized (-jīzd), p.pr. -gizing], [see homologous], to cause to correspond in value, proportion, structure, or the like:—v.i. to correspond.

ho-mol-o-gous (hō-mŏl′ō-gŭs), adj. [<Gk. homos, same+logos, ratio], corresponding; similar or alike; alike in structure, position, proportion, value, or the like: Geom., having the same relative position in corresponding figures.

hom-o-lo-graph-ic (hŏm″ō-lō-grăf′ĭk), adj. [<Gk. homologos, agreeing +graphē, a drawing], pertaining to the drawing or representation of equal areas: homolographic projection, a drawing or map of the surface of the earth, made in any of several ways by which equal areas of the surface drawn are represented by equal areas on the drawing, so that different continents or parts of them are given in proper areal proportion: also called homolograph.

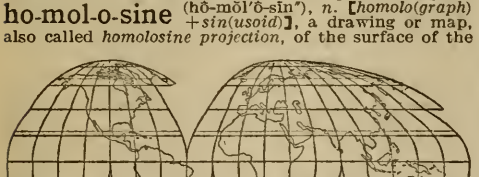
hom-o-logue (hŏm′ō-lŏg), n. [see homologous], that which exactly corresponds in position, proportion, or structure, to something else: Chem., one member of a series of compounds of the same chemical type, called a homologous series, as any member of the series of olefines or of alcohols.

ho-mol-o-gy (hō-mŏl′ō-jĭ), n. [pl. -gies (-jĭz)], likeness in position, value, structure, etc.: Zoöl., likeness in general type of structure in corresponding parts, which are of the same evolutionary origin, as in a bird's wing and a quadruped's foreleg.

ho-mol-o-sine (hō-mŏl′ō-sīn″), n. [homolo(graph) +sin(usoid)], a drawing or map, also called homolosine projection, of the surface of the earth, made by combining two specific, different homographic projections, showing the continents with the minimum of distortion.



HOMOLOSINE

hom-o-nym (hŏm′ō-nĭm; hō′mō-), n. [<Gk. homos, same+onoma, name], 1, any of two or more words, identical in sound, but differing in spelling and meaning, as pair, pare, pear, or to, too, two, or spelled alike but differing in meaning, as bear (the animal) and bear (to carry); 2, one of two or more things or persons having the same name.—adj. ho-mon′y-mous (hō-mŏn′ĭ-mŭs).—adj. hom″o-nym′ic (hŏm″ō-nĭm′ĭk).—n. ho-mon′y-my (hō-mŏn′ĭ-mĭ).

ho-mo-ou-si-an (hō″mō-ōō′sĭ-ăn; -ou′sĭ-ăn; hŏm″ō-), adj. [<Gk. homos, same + ousia, substance, essence], of the same nature or substance: Eccl. Hist., pertaining to, or holding, the belief, expressed in the Nicene Creed, that God the Father and God the Son are of one and the same nature and substance: distinguished from homoiousian: Homoousian, any of a group of Christians of the fourth century who professed belief in this dogma.

hom-o-phone (hŏm′ō-fōn; hō′mō-), n. [<Gk. homos, same+phonē, a sound], 1, a letter or character representing the same sound as another; 2, one of two or more words identical in sound but differing in meaning and, usually, in spelling; a homonym.—adj. ho-moph′o-nous (hō-mŏf′ō-nŭs).

ho-moph-o-ny (hō-mŏf′ō-nĭ), n. sameness of sound with a difference in meaning, as in the words reed, rede, and read: Mus., 1, in ancient times, unison singing as opposed to antiphonal singing; 2, in modern times, music written for a single voice with or without accompaniment; monody, or monophony: opposite of polyphony.—adj. ho″mo-phon′ic.

Ho-mop-ter-a (hō-mŏp′tĕr-ă), n.pl. [<Gk. homos, same+pteron, a wing], Zoöl., 1, a large order of insects, with piercing suctorial mouth parts and generally four wings, which when present are of the same thickness throughout, including the scale insects, plant lice, cicadas, and others; 2, in older classifications, a suborder of the old order Hemiptera.—adj. and n. ho-mop′ter-an.—adj. ho-mop′ter-ous.

REPRESENTATIVE HOMOPTERA

1, male green pea plant louse; 2-4, grapevine plant louse (2, male; 3, female, leaf form; 4, female, root form); 5, 6, female oyster shell bark lice; 7, cicada.

ho-mo-sex-u-al (hō″mō-sĕk′shū-ăl), adj. [<Gk. homos, same + sexual], 1, feeling sexual attraction to a person of the same sex; 2, pertaining to such attraction.—n. ho″mo-sex″u-al′i-ty.

ho-mos-po-rous (hō-mŏs′pō-rŭs; hō″mō-spō′-rŭs), adj. [<Gk. homos, same +sporos, a seed], Bot., producing or having one kind of asexual spores or cells only: opposite of heterosporous.

ho-mo-zy-gote (hō″mō-zī′gōt; -zĭg′ōt), n. [<Gk. homos, like+zugōtos, yoked <zugon, yoke], Biol., a plant or animal of pure breed; in the Mendelian theory of heredity, an organism the parents of which were alike with respect to a given transmissible character, or gene, so that the individual breeds true with respect to that character: opposite of heterozygote.—adj. ho″mo-zy′gous.

ho-mun-cu-lus (hō-mŭng′kū-lŭs), n. [pl. -li (-lī)], [Lat., dim. of homo, man], 1, a small or stunted man; a dwarf; manikin; 2, in medieval magic, a tiny man, produced in a laboratory, and possessing magical insight.

Hon. abbr. Honorable; Honorary:—Honble., Honorable:—Hond., 1, Honduras; 2, Honored.

hone (hōn), n. [<A.S. hān, a whetstone], a fine whetstone for sharpening razors and other keen-edged tools:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. honed (hōnd), p.pr. honing], to sharpen on such a whetstone.

hon-est (ŏn′ĕst), adj. [<Lat. honestus, honest], 1, straightforward; trustworthy; upright; just; 2, genuine; unadulterated; without fraud; according to requirements; as, honest weight; 3, frank; open, as a countenance: Archaic, virtuous: said of a woman.—adv. hon′est-ly.

hon-es-ty (ŏn′ĕs-tĭ), n. 1, freedom from deceit; 2, straightforwardness; fairness; veracity; 3, uprightness: Obs., 1, becoming deportment; 2, chastity.
Syn. sincerity, fairness, honor, integrity, probity, uprightness, rectitude. Honesty is that quality of man that shows him fair and truthful in speech, above cheating, stealing, misrepresentation, or any other fraudulent action. Honor adds to honesty a sturdy and splendid devotion to such standards of right, fidelity, courage, and conduct as society has crystallized throughout the centuries; as, the honesty of the employees; the honor of a gentleman; his honor was at stake. Uprightness is that quality in man that carries him along a straight path of honesty and duty; as, the uprightness of the judge was never questioned. Integrity emphasizes the wholeness of a man's moral nature; he is sound, incorruptible, and particularly strict about fulfilling the trusts reposed in him by others. Probity is virtue which has been put to the test and never found wanting; a man of probity is honest beyond mere care for the property of others; he regards their good name, their every advantage, with the same conscience as he would his own. Probity, integrity, uprightness, and honor are qualities of people; honesty may apply also to a thing; as, an honest reply.

hon-ey (hŭn′ĭ), n. [<A.S. hunig, honey], 1, a sweet, sticky, sirupy substance, produced by bees from the nectar which they collect from flowers, and stored by them in wax cells; 2, sweetness; 3, darling; sweet one: a term of endearment:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -eyed or -ied (-ĭd), p.pr. -eying], 1, to make sweet as with honey; 2, to address endearingly or flatteringly; wheedle; cajole:—adj. 1, very sweet; 2, beloved.

hon-ey-bee (hŭn′ĭ-bē″), n. [honey+bee], the common hive bee (Apis mellifera) which gathers nectar from flowers to make honey.

hon-ey-comb (hŭn′ĭ-kōm″), n. [honey+comb], 1, the wax structure made by many bees, in the cells of which honey is stored, or the young are housed and fed during the larval period; 2, anything similarly constructed:—v.t. and v.i. to fill, or become filled, with holes, passages, or cells like those of a honeycomb: honeycomb coil, Elec., in radio communication, a form of concentrated inductance made by winding a coil of wire in lattice form.

HONEYCOMB

hon-ey-dew (hŭn′ĭ-dū″), n. [honey+dew], 1, the sweet liquid excreted by most aphids, or plant lice, upon which ants, bees, and other insects feed: often found on leaves and erroneously thought to be a vegetable product; 2, a variety of tobacco treated with molasses; 3, a kind of muskmelon with smooth rind and sweet, greenish pulp.

hon-eyed (hŭn′ĭd), adj. [see honey], 1, covered, or filled, with honey; 2, sweet; coaxing; flattering; as, honeyed words. Also, hon′ied.
Syn. sweet, sugary, flattering, agreeable, fawning.

hon-ey lo-cust Bot., a large, thorny American tree (Gleditsia triacanthos) of the pea family, having flowers in small narrow racemes, which produce long flat pods: also called sweet locust.

hon-ey-moon (hŭn′ĭ-mōōn″), n. [honey+moon], the period spent together, often on a trip or tour, as a sort of holiday by a newly married couple before settling down to routine life; a wedding trip:—v.i. to take such a holiday or trip.

hon-ey-suck-le (hŭn′ĭ-sŭk″l), n. [<M.E. hunisuccle<hunisuce<A.S. hunigsūge<hunig, honey+sūgan, sūcan, to suck], any of a genus (Lonicera), typifying a large family (Caprifoliaceæ) of plants; especially, the common woodbine (L. caprifolium), a twining vine with sweet, tubular flowers.

honk (hŏngk), n. [imit.], 1, the call of a wild goose; 2, any sound resembling this, as that of an automobile horn:—v.i. to make such a sound:—v.t. Slang, to sound; blow, as the horn of an automobile.

hon-or (ŏn′ẽr), n. [Lat.=renown, repute], 1, respectful regard accorded to, or deserved by, high worth; high esteem; worship; fame; reputation; 2, distinction; exalted rank; 3, a delicate sense of what is just and right; scorn of meanness, deceit, or unfairness; 4, chastity or purity, especially of women; 5, an outward mark of high esteem; a token of respect; recognition of merit; as, to win first honors in a contest or exhibition; 6, a title used in addressing certain officials; 7, an adornment; glory; credit; as, he is an honor to his family; 8, in whist, one of the four highest trump cards; in bridge, one of the five highest trump cards, or, in "no trumps," an ace: pl. 1, the courtesies rendered to guests; 2, distinguished standing in school or college:—v.t. 1, to treat with respect, deference, or civility; 2, to revere or worship, as God; 3, to bestow marks of esteem upon: followed by with: Com., to accept and pay when due; as, to honor a check. Also, hon′our.—n. hon′or-er.
Syn., n. (see honesty, fame); v. reverence, esteem, admire.—Ant., v. defame, despise, dishonor, revile.

hon-or-a-ble (ŏn′ẽr-ȧ-bl), adj. [<Lat. honorabilis, illustrious; 2, in accord with honor; as, honorable words, deeds; honorable defeat; 3, distinguished in rank; characterized by marks of honor; 4, high-minded; upright; noble; 5, a title of distinction given to judges and other officials of rank. Also, hon′our-a-ble.—adv. hon′or-a-bly.—n. hon′or-a-ble-ness.
Syn. creditable, illustrious, just, genuine, honest.

hon-o-ra-ri-um (ŏn″ō-rā′rĭ-ŭm), n. [pl. -ria (-rĭ-ȧ)], [<Lat. honorarium (donum), honorary (gift)], an honorary fee paid to a professional man as a courtesy, in recognition of some service on which propriety forbids that a price be set; hence, a fee.

hon-or-a-ry (ŏn′ẽr-ȧ-rĭ), adj. [<Lat. honorarius, of honor], 1, done or conferred as a sign of high esteem; as, an honorary degree; 2, possessing a title or position by courtesy, without giving service or receiving the appropriate pay or privileges.

hon-or-if-ic (ŏn″ẽr-ĭf′ĭk), adj. [<Lat. honorificus, honoring<honor, glory+facere, to make], implying respect: used especially of terms used in Oriental countries in addressing a person of importance, and meaning highborn, venerable, august, etc.

hooch (hōōch), n. [<Alaskan Ind. hoochinoo, liquor of yeast, flour, and molasses], U. S. Slang, intoxicating liquor. Also, hootch.

hood (hŏŏd), n. [<A.S. hōd, a hood], 1, a soft wrapper or covering for the head and neck; 2, a head covering attached to a monk's cloak; a cowl; 3, something resembling such a head covering, as a folding cover for a carriage, automobile, or automobile engine; 4, a projecting cover above a hearth or range to carry off smoke, etc.; 5, a fold hanging down the back of an academic gown, indicating by its color the wearer's degree: Zoöl., 1, a bird's topknot; 2, a distensible fold of skin on the neck of some snakes; Bot., 1, a floral part shaped like a hood, as the spathe in a jack-in-the-pulpit; 2, the cap covering the spore case of the higher mosses:—v.t. 1, to cover or furnish with, or as with, a hood; 2, to hide; conceal.—p.adj. hood′ed.

HOOD
Academic costume, showing hood (a).

-hood suffix, [<A.S. suffix -hād], forming nouns from nouns and adjectives, meaning: 1, state, quality, condition, or character of being; as, childhood; likelihood; 2, collective group or body; as, priesthood; brotherhood; 3, an instance or example; as, falsehood.

hood-lum (hōōd′lŭm), n. [U. S. slang], Colloq., a rowdy; street tough.

hood-man (hŏŏd′măn), n. [hood+man], in blindman's buff, the blindfolded player.

hood-man-blind (hŏŏd′măn-blīnd″), n. a game in which a blindfolded player tries to catch and identify the others; blindman's buff.

hoo-doo (hōō′dōō), n. [see voodoo], Colloq., a person or thing that causes ill luck:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -dooed (-dōōd), p.pr. -dooing], to bring ill luck upon; bewitch.

hood-wink (hŏŏd′wĭngk), v.t. [hood+wink], 1, to blindfold or cover the eyes of; 2, to hide; conceal, as by dissimulation; 3, to deceive.

hoof (hōōf), n. [pl. hoofs; rarely, hooves (hōōvz)], [<A.S. hōf, hoof<O.Teut. source], 1, the horny covering of the fore part of the feet of certain animals, as the horse, ox, hippopotamus, etc., of the order Ungulata; 2, an animal with hoofs: Geom., a section of a cone or cylinder of revolution, with the top cut off by a plane oblique to the base; an ungula:—v.t. to strike with the hoof: hoof it, Slang, to go on foot.—adj. hoofed (hōōft).

HOOF (a)

hoof-bound (hōōf′bound″), adj. [hoof+bound], affected with a disease in which the hoof dries and contracts, causing tenderness and lameness.

hook (hŏŏk), n. [<A.S. hōc, a corner, angle], 1, a curved piece of metal, bone, or the like, with which to hold or catch something; as, a crochet hook; 2, a hook-shaped implement for lopping or cutting, as a sickle; 3, a cape or headland that turns inland at its extremity; as, the Hook of Holland; 4, a sharp bend in a river; 5, that which catches; a snare; trap; 6, the fixed part of a hinge, as for a gate, containing the upright pin about which the other part swings: Mus., one of the small diagonal strokes from the stem of a note which shows it to be an eighth, sixteenth, etc. (see note, illus.):

by hook or by crook, by fair means or foul:—v.t. 1, to catch with, or as with, a hook; 2, hence, to trap; ensnare; 3, to gore or attack with the horns, as does a bull or other horned animal: Golf, to hit (the ball) so that it curves to the left: opposite of slice: Slang, to steal:—v.i. 1, to bend into the shape of a hook; 2, to become fastened with a hook; 3, to attack with the horns.

hook-ah (hŏŏk'ə), n. [<Arab. huqqah, casket; pipe for smoking], a pipe with a long tube for drawing tobacco smoke through water. Also, hook'a.

hooked (hŏŏkt; hŏŏk'ĕd), p.adj. [see hook], made with a hook; as, a hooked rug; curved like a hook; furnished with hooks or claws: Slang, trapped.

hook-er (hŏŏk'ĕr), n. [<Du. hoeker, a fishing boat], 1, a fishing smack; 2, a type of two-masted, small Dutch vessel; 3, any clumsy, ill-fitted old craft.

hook-up (hŏŏk'-ŭp), n. [hook + up], an arrangement of parts, circuits, etc., as in a radio or in a system of stations which simultaneously broadcast a program received from a single station.

hook-worm (hŏŏk'wûrm"), n. [hook+worm], any of several roundworms (especially of the genus Uncinaria), parasitic in the small intestine, most common in warm climates: hookworm disease, Pathol., an anæmic disease due to hookworms, and marked by progressive weakness, pallor, and emaciation.

hook-y (hŏŏk'ĭ), n. [<slang phrase hook it, run away], probably, a truant: used only in the expression to play hooky, Slang, to play truant.

hoo-li-gan (hōō'lĭ-găn), n. [<name of typical rowdy], Slang, a rowdy; a gangster.

1hoop (hōōp), n. [<A.S. hōp, a hoop<O.Teut. source], 1, a circular metal or wooden band to hold together the staves of a cask, tub, or the like; 2, a band or ring for the finger; 3, a large ring of metal or wood rolled along the ground by children at play; 4, anything curved like such a ring, as the iron arch used in the game of croquet: pl. a hoop skirt (which see):—v.t. to bind or secure with a curved band; encircle.

2hoop (hōōp), n. [imit.], the cry made in whooping cough:—v.i. to utter this cry. Pfd. S., whoop.

hoop-er (hōōp'ĕr), n. [see 1hoop], one who puts the hoops on casks and barrels; a cooper.

hoo-poe (hōō'pōō; -pō), n. [<Fr. huppe, tuft, crest <Lat. upupa, hoopoe], any of several Old World birds (family Upupidæ) with long slender bill and erectile tuft of feathers on the head.

hoop skirt 1, a framework of flexible material, upon which crinoline is stretched: formerly used to expand the skirt of a dress; 2, a skirt over such a frame.

HOOP SKIRT OF 1860

hoo-ray (hōō-rā'), interj. [see hurrah], expressing joy, triumph, etc.:—n. a cheer:—v.i. to utter such a cheer:—v.t. to cheer on; salute with exulting cheers; huzza; applaud or encourage with hurrahs. See hur-rah', Pfd. S.

hoose-gow (hōōs'gou; -gō), n. [<Sp. juzgado, a court], U. S. Slang, a jail; a prison. Also, hoos'gow.

Hoo-sier (hōō'zhĕr), n. [<local usage], a citizen of the State of Indiana.

hoot (hōōt), v.i. [imit.], 1, to utter a cry resembling the sound hoot: said of an owl; 2, to make a loud sound or whistle, as a steam boiler; 3, to imitate the cry of the owl; especially, to utter shouts of derision or contempt:—v.t. 1, to jeer at; 2, to assail or greet with exclamations of contempt and derision:—n. 1, the cry of an owl; 2, a sound like an owl's cry; 3, a jibe; a shout of contempt.

hootch (hōōch), n. [see hooch], U. S. Slang, intoxicating liquor. Also, hooch, Pfd. S.

1hop (hŏp), n. [<M.Du. hoppe, hop: source uncertain], Bot., a perennial vine (Humulus lupulus) whose ripened cones give a bitter flavor to malt liquors: pl. the dried, ripened cones of this plant, used in flavoring malt liquors, in medicine, etc.: hop clover, 1, any of several low-growing clovers, especially one with yellow flowers (Trifolium agrarium) which, when dried, somewhat resemble hops: 2, black medic, or nonesuch (see shamrock, illus.):—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. hopped (hŏpt), p.pr. hopping], to flavor with these ripened cones:—v.i. to pick hops.

2hop (hŏp), v.i. [p.t. and p.p. hopped (hŏpt), p.pr. hopping], [<A.S. hoppian, to leap<O.Teut. source], 1, to leap over on one leg; 2, to make to jump:—v.i. 1, to proceed by short leaps, using one leg only; 2, to jump with both or all feet at once, as do frogs: hop off, Slang, to begin an airplane flight:—n. a short, brisk jump, especially on one leg: Colloq., 1, an informal dance; 2, a single airplane flight.

hope (hōp), n. [<A.S. hopa, hope], 1, the desire of good, accompanied by expectation; anticipation; 2, the source of hope; that upon which one relies or counts; 3, the object of desire:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. hoped (hōpt), p.pr. hoping], 1, to expect with confidence; 2, to desire; covet:—v.i. 1, to cherish a desire with anticipation: usually with for; 2, to trust confidently: usually with in; as, "hope thou in God."

Syn., n. promise, reliance, trust, desire, expectation.

hope-ful (hōp'fo͝ol), adj. 1, full of agreeable expectation; 2, inspiring hope; promising success; as, hopeful prospects:—n. a promising young person: used humorously or ironically.—adv. hope'ful-ly.—n. hope'ful-ness.

Syn., adj. assured, confident, optimistic. (See sanguine.)—Ant., adj. depressed, pessimistic, despairing.

hope-less (hōp'lĕs), adj. 1, without promise of good results or a happy outcome; as, a hopeless situation; 2, despairing; without hope.—adv. hope'less-ly.—n. hope'less-ness.

Syn. despondent, desperate, forlorn, cheerless.

Ho-pi (hō'pē), n. [<nat. Hópitu, "peaceful ones"], a member of a certain tribe of Pueblo Indians of Arizona and near-by regions, expert as farmers, weavers, and dyers, and noted for their religious ceremonies.

hop-lite (hŏp'lĭt), n. [<Gk. hoplitēs<hoplon, weapon], Gk. Antiq., a heavy-armed foot soldier bearing a shield, sword, and one or more spears.

hop-o'-my-thumb (hŏp'ō-mĭ-thŭm'), n. a pygmy: Hop-o'-my-Thumb, the diminutive hero of English fairy tales.

hop-per (hŏp'ĕr), n. [see 2hop], 1, one who or that which makes short leaps or skips; 2, specifically, any of various leaping insects, as the grasshopper, flea, maggot of the cheese fly, etc.; 3, a wooden trough or funnel through which grain passes into a mill, or any of various devices resembling it in appearance or action; 4, the mechanism in a piano for lifting the hammers; 5, a barge with an opening in the bottom for dumping the contents, as garbage, into the sea: also called hopper barge; 6, a railroad freight car which can be unloaded through the bottom: also called hopper car; 7, a receptacle for water for a special use, as for flushing a water-closet: Obs. or Dial., a basket used in sowing grain.

HOPPER CAR

hop-ple (hŏp'l), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. hopped (-ld), p.pr. hoppling], [source uncertain: akin to hobble], 1, to shackle or fetter the feet of, as a horse; hobble; 2, hence, to hamper:—n. a fetter or manacle.

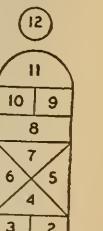
hop-scotch (hŏp'skŏch"), n. [<2hop + 1scotch], a child's game in which each player tosses a small flat stone into successive compartments of a design drawn, or scotched, upon the pavement or road, hops on one foot into this compartment and kicks the stone with the hopping foot back to the base line.



HOP-SCOTCH

hor. abbr. 1, horizon; 2, horology (also, Hor.; Horol.):—Hor., Horace.

Ho-ræ (hō'rē), n.pl. [Lat.<Gk. hōrai, hours], Class. Myth., goddesses of the seasons, and of order and justice.

ho-ral (hō'răl), adj. [<Lat. horalis<hora, hour], of, relating to, or pertaining to, an hour or hours; horary; hourly.

ho-ra-ry (hō'ra-rĭ), adj. 1, pertaining to, or showing, the hours; 2, taking place every hour; hourly; 3, lasting throughout an hour.

Ho-ra-tian (hō-rā'shăn), adj. [<Lat. Horatius], of or pertaining to the Roman poet, Horace, or his poetry.

Ho-ra-ti-i (hō-rā'shĭ-ī), n.pl. in Roman legend, three brothers famous for their conquest of the three Curiatii from Alba Longa.

Ho-ra-ti-o (hō-rā'shĭ-ō; hō-rā'shō), n. in Shakespeare's tragedy, "Hamlet," the staunch, sane, and sensible friend of Hamlet.

Ho-ra-ti-us Co-cles (hō-rā'shĭ-ŭs kō'klēz; hō-rā'shŭs), in Roman legend, a famous hero who, with two comrades, guarded the bridge over the Tiber against the invading Etruscans.

horde (hôrd), n. [<Turk. ordā, a camp], 1, a wandering tribe or clan dwelling in tents or wagons; 2, a vast multitude; gang; 3, a swarm or pack of animals or insects:—v.i. [p.t. and p.p. horded, p.pr. hording], to live or act together in large groups.

hore-hound (hôr'hound"), n. [<A.S. hār, hoary +hūne, a plant], 1, any of various plants of the mint family, especially a species (Marrubium vulgare) brought to America from Europe and used as a remedy for colds and coughs; 2, a flavoring extract or confection made from this plant. Also, hoar'hound'.

ho-ri-zon (hō-rī'zŭn; hŏ-rī'zn), n. [<O.F. orizonte <Gk. horizōn (kuklos), a limiting (circle) <horizein, to bound or limit], 1, the line where the sky and earth or sea appear to meet: called apparent or visible horizon; 2, the limit or range of one's mental vision, experience, or interest: Astron., the great circle of the celestial sphere: formed by the intersection of the celestial sphere and a plane passing through the observer's eye and at right angles to the direction of gravity: called rational or celestial horizon; Geol., a rock deposit or formation definitely fixed as to time of origin.

hor-i-zon-tal (hŏr"i-zŏn'tăl), adj. 1, of or pertaining to the horizon; 2, parallel to the plane of the horizon; level; not tilted: opposite of vertical: horizontal union, a craft union; a trade-union whose members are in the same craft, in whatever industry they work:—n. that which is parallel to the horizon, as a plane or line.—adv. hor"i-zon'tal-ly.

hor-mone (hôr'mōn), n. [<Gk. hormōn, p.pr. of hormaein, to set in motion, excite], a chemical substance carried by the blood from one organ of the body to another, and capable of exciting the latter to increased functional activity.

horn (hôrn), n. [A.S.<O.Teut. source], 1, a hard, thick, and usually pointed projection growing upon the head of various hoofed animals; 2, any similar projection, as the antler of a deer, tentacle of a snail, antenna of an insect, etc.; 3, the thickened form of tissue of which animals' horns are made; 4, anything resembling the horns of an animal, as the pointed end of an anvil, the high pommel of a saddle, the ends of a crescent moon, etc.; 5, a vessel made of horn, as a container for powder, or, formerly, a drinking cup: Bib., a symbol of strength, pride, or glory; Aëro., a projection on a control surface of an airplane, offering a leverage for the wire from the control lever (see airplane and empennage, illus.); Mus., 1, originally, the simplest form of wind instrument, made of the horn of an animal; as, a hunting horn; 2, in general, any horn-shaped metal wind instrument; 3, in orchestras and bands, any of several wind instruments somewhat resembling a horn, including the French horn, a brass tube with valves, giving a clear, mellow tone, and the f horn, which is often substituted for it; the bass horn, a large brass instrument, also called bass tuba or tuba; the English horn, a wood-wind instrument equivalent to an alto oboe, with a reedy, piercing tone; the basset horn, now seldom used (for ranges, see music): horn of plenty, 1, Class. Myth., a magic horn which became filled with whatever its possessor wished; 2, hence, abundance; a horn used as a symbol of abundance; a cornucopia:—v.t. 1, to furnish with horns; shape like a horn; 2, to attack or wound with a horn.

horn-beam (hôrn'bēm"), n. [horn+beam], Bot., any of several trees (genera Carpinus and Ostrya) of the birch family; especially, the blue beech, or water beech, a small, smooth-barked tree common in eastern North America: locally also called ironwood.

horn-bill (hôrn'bĭl"), n. [horn+bill], Zoöl., any of several large Old World birds (family Bucerotidæ), with large bills which in many species bear hollow, bony casques or flat, hornlike protuberances.

horn-blende (hôrn'blĕnd"), n. [<Ger. horn, horn +blende, zinc sulphide], Mineral., a common hard mineral, generally black, composed of a light to dark green silicate of iron, magnesium, and calcium with aluminum.—adj. horn-blen'dic.

horn-book (hôrn'bŏŏk"), n. [horn+book], 1, an old form of child's primer consisting of a single printed page, covered with transparent horn, set in a frame with a handle; 2, hence, any primer.

horned (hôrnd; Poet., hôr'nĕd), adj. [see horn], 1, having horns; as, the horned moon; 2, shaped like a horn: horned lark, a small American song bird, akin to the English skylark: horned pout, a bullhead: horned toad, any of several small, harmless, insect-eating lizards (genera Anota and Phrynosoma) with scales and hornlike spines (for illus. see Reptilia).

hor-net (hôr'nĕt; -nĭt), n. [<A.S. hyrnet, hornet], Entom., any of several large, fierce wasps, especially the yellow jacket (Vespa maculata).

horn-pipe (hôrn'pīp"), n. [horn+pipe], 1, a lively dance, especially popular with sailors, or music for it; 2, an obsolete Welsh wind instrument.

horn-y (hôr'nĭ), adj. [comp. -ier, superl. -iest], [see horn], 1, made of horn or of a similar substance; 2, having horns; 3, hard, like horn; callous.

horn-y-hand-ed (hôr'nĭ-hănd"ĕd), adj. having hands calloused by labor.

hor-o-loge (hŏr'ō-lōj; -lŏj), n. [<Gk. hōra, time +logos, a telling], 1, a timepiece, as a clock, watch, dial, or the like; 2, a clock tower.

ho-rol-o-gy (hō-rŏl'ō-jĭ), n. [<Gk. hōra, time +-logia, science], the science of measuring time or of making timepieces.—adj. hor"o-log'ic; hor"o-log'i-cal.—n. ho-rol'o-gist.—n. ho-rol'o-ger.

hor-o-scope (hŏr'ō-skōp), n. [<Gk. hōra, time +skopein, to look], Astrol., the aspect of the heavens, especially the position of the planets at any instant, from which astrologers profess to foretell the future of a person born at that instant; also, the diagram, representing the twelve divisions of the heavens, used by astrologers.

ho-ros-co-py (hō-rŏs'kō-pĭ), n. Astrol., 1, the art of reading the position of heavenly bodies with a view to foretelling future events; 2, the aspect of the heavens at the time of a person's birth.

hor-ren-dous (hō-rĕn'dŭs), adj. [<Lat. horrendus, frightful <horrēre, to bristle; shudder], fearful; frightful; fitted to excite horror.

hor-rent (hŏr'ĕnt), adj. [<Lat. horrens (-entis), bristling, shuddering <horrēre, to bristle, shudder], 1, standing out like spines; bristling; 2, horrifying; causing terror or disgust.

hor-ri-ble (hŏr'ĭ-bl), adj. [<Lat. horribilis <horrēre, to bristle; shudder], terrible; dreadful; shocking; hideous: Colloq., severe; excessive; disagreeable; as, horrible weather.—adv. hor'ri-bly.

Syn. awful, terrific, fearful, frightful, abominable.

hor-rid (hŏr'ĭd), adj. [<Lat. horridus, frightful <horrēre, to shudder], dreadful; terrible; hideous; obnoxious: Archaic, bristling; Colloq., gloomy; disagreeable.—adv. hor'rid-ly.—n. hor'rid-ness.

hor-ri-fy (hŏr'ĭ-fī), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -fied (-fīd), p.pr. -fying], [<Lat. horrificare <horror, fear +facere, to make], to fill or strike with great fear, dread, or terror.—n. hor"ri-fi-ca'tion.—adj. hor-rif'ic.

hor-ror (hŏr'ẽr), n. [Lat. = great fear], 1, excessive fear or abhorrence; extreme dread; 2, great aversion, antipathy, or disgust; 3, that which fills with dread or terror; as, Poe tells of many horrors: the horrors, Colloq., 1, the blues; 2, delirium tremens.

Syn. fright, fear, dread, terror, alarm, dismay, panic, apprehension, consternation, disquietude, affright. Fear is the general term, and names a painful emotion springing from threatened danger or evil, accompanied by a desire to flee from it. Fright and terror are extreme fear; fright is sudden, shocking, but usually not lasting; terror is stark, violent, overwhelming. Dread is very great fear, aroused by an overpowering distrust of the future. Apprehension, akin to dread, is a more nervous and agitated, though really less serious, fear. Disquietude also is experienced over the future; it is a condition of worry, lack of peace, unrest. Alarm is an excited anticipation of danger. Dismay and consternation name violent states of fear in which the mind is confused, the heart discouraged, the future faced with helpless terror. Panic is excessive, frantic fear, often experienced by large numbers over a trifling cause or no cause at all. Horror is a terrified fear tinged by a shuddering abhorrence and repulsion.

hors de com-bat (ôr" dē kôṅ"bä'), [Fr. = outside the combat], put out of the fighting; incapacitated; disabled.

hors d'œu-vre (ôr" dûvr"), [Fr. = outside the work], a dish or course served as a relish, usually at the beginning of a meal.

horse (hôrs), n. [<A.S. hors, horse <O.Teut. source], 1, a large, solid-hoofed quadruped with long mane and tail of coarse hair, used for riding or drawing burdens; 2, an adult male of this animal, especially a castrated male; 3, in zoölogy, any of other members of the horse family (Equidæ), as an ass or zebra; 4, cavalry; 5, a framework or machine for the support of anything, as a sawhorse for supporting wood; 6, in gymnastics, a wooden block on four legs, padded and covered with leather, used for vaulting, etc.: Mining and Geol., a mass of rock or slate projecting into a vein of ore or a coal bed: Slang, jocularly, a fellow; chap: horse latitudes, two belts or zones, about 30° north and 30° south of the equator, shifting with the seasons, especially noticeable on the oceans, and marked by baffling winds and generally clear weather: horse mackerel, the tunny, or tuna fish: horse sense, practical common sense: dark horse, Colloq., 1, a horse whose racing chances have not been considered by the public; 2, hence, in politics, a little-known or unforeseen competitor:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. horsed (hôrst), p.pr. horsing], 1, to mount on, or furnish with, a horse; 2, to place astride the back of another, as for flogging; hence, to flog; 3, to overwork; drive; Slang, to make the object of horseplay:—v.i. to get, or ride, on horseback: —adj. coarse; large of its kind: in compounds, as *horse*laugh, horse-chestnut.—adj. horse'less.

TOPOGRAPHY OF THE HORSE

horse-back (hôrs'bak″), n. [horse+¹*back*], the back of a horse:—adv. on horseback.

horse car 1, in the United States, a horse-drawn car; 2, a car for transporting horses.

horse–chest-nut (hôrs'=chĕs'nŭt), n. a tree (Æsculus hippocastanum) with large clusters of white or pink blossoms and large, nut-like seeds growing in burs; also, its bitter seed.

horse-flesh (hôrs'flĕsh″) n. [horse+flesh], 1, the meat obtained from a horse; 2, horses collectively; 3, a species of mahogany found in Cuba.

horse-fly (hôrs'flī″), n. [pl. -flies (-flīz″)], [horse+¹*fly*], Entom., 1, any of several large flies (family Tabanidæ), the females of which sting and suck blood from animals: also called gadfly; breeze fly; 2, any of various other annoying flies.

horse gen-tian any of a genus (Triosteum) of herbs of the honeysuckle family, with purplish-red flowers; especially, the feverroot.

Horse Guards 1, the brigade of English cavalry appointed to guard the sovereign or his residence; 2, the headquarters of this brigade in London; 3, the British military authorities.

horse-hair (hôrs'hâr″), n. [horse+hair], 1, the hair of a horse, especially from the mane or tail; 2, a fabric woven of these hairs: haircloth.

horse-hide (hôrs'hīd″), n. [horse+hide], the hide of a horse, or the leather made from it.

horse-laugh (hôrs'lâf″), n. [horse+laugh], a loud, coarse burst of laughter; a guffaw.

horse-leech (hôrs'lēch″), n. [horse+leech], 1, a large bloodsucking leech, said to attach itself to the noses of drinking horses; 2, a person who makes excessive demands: Obs., a veterinary.

horse-man (hôrs'măn), n. [pl. -men (-mĕn)], [horse+man], 1, a rider upon a horse; 2, one clever at managing horses.—n. horse'man-ship.

horse ma-rine 1, a member of a fictitious corps of sailors doing shore duty as cavalry, or of cavalrymen on ship duty; 2, hence, any person out of his natural sphere.

horse-play (hôrs'plā″), n. [horse+play], coarse, rough, boisterous fun.

horse pow-er Mech., a unit of power, equal to that required to raise 33,000 pounds at the rate of one foot per minute: equivalent to 746 watts. Also, n. horse'pow″er.—abbr. H. P.; h. p.

horse–rad-ish (hôrs'=răd″ĭsh), n. a large-leaved plant (Radicula armoracia) of the mustard family, whose root is used as a relish.

horse-shoe (hôrs'shōō″), n. [horse+shoe], 1, a U-shaped metal shoe to protect the hoof of a horse; 2, anything roughly U-shaped.

horse-shoe crab Zoöl., any of various marine invertebrate animals with a horseshoe-shaped shell and a long, spiny tail (for illus. see Arachnida); a king crab (which see).

horse-tail (hôrs'tāl″), n. [horse+tail], 1, the tail of a horse; 2, a distinction or emblem denoting a pasha's rank among the Turks: Bot., any of a family (Equisetaceæ) of low-growing, rushlike simple plants, which link the simpler ferns with the seed-bearing plants (see Pteridophyta, illus.); Anat., an elongated, brushlike formation in the lower end of the spinal canal, comprising the lower pairs of spinal nerves.

horse-weed (hôrs'wēd″), n. [horse+weed], Bot., a troublesome American weed (Leptilon canadense) of the composite family, locally called fireweed; also, the ragweed.

horse-whip (hôrs'hwĭp″), n. [horse+whip], a long leather whip with a lash for controlling a horse:—v.t. to flog with a heavy whip.

horse-wom-an (hôrs'wōōm″ăn), n. [pl. -women (-wĭm″ĕn)], [horse+woman], a woman who rides on horseback.

hors-y (hôr'sĭ), adj. [comp. -ier, superl. -iest], [see horse], pertaining to, or characteristic of, horses, horsemen, or horse racing: Slang, in bad taste. —n. hors'i-ness.—adv. hors'i-ly.

hort. abbr. horticultural; horticulture; horticulturist (also, hortic.).

hor-ta-to-ry (hôr'tă-tō-rĭ), adj. [<Lat. hortari, to exhort], 1, serving to incite to good deeds; 2, giving, or tending to give, advice: Gram., serving to express exhortation; as, the hortatory subjunctive in Latin.—adj. hor'ta-tive.

hor-ti-cul-ture (hôr'tĭ-kŭl″tûr), n. [<Lat. hortus, garden+cultura, culture], the art or science of cultivating gardens or orchards.—n. hor″ti-cul'tur-ist.—adj. hor″ti-cul'tur-al.

Ho-rus (hō'rŭs), n. [<Gk. Hōros<Egypt. Hor], Egypt. Myth., the god of the rising sun, represented with the head of a hawk.

ho-san-na (hō-zăn'ä), n. [<Heb. hoshana<hoshi'ahnna, save, (we) pray!], 1, a chant of praise and glory to God; 2, an entreaty for blessings: —interj. used to ascribe praise to God.

hose (hōz), n. [pl. hose; Archaic, hosen], [<A.S. hosa, stockings], 1, formerly, a tight-fitting covering for the leg and hip, worn by men; 2, now, a covering for he leg; stocking; 3, [pl. sometimes hoses], a flexible tube for conveying water, etc., as from a faucet.

Ho-se-a (hō-zē'ä), n. [<Heb. =deliverance], 1, a minor Hebrew prophet who lived about the eighth century B. C.; 2, the book of the Old Testament that contains his teachings (see Bible, NOTE). Also, in the Douay Bible, O'see (ō'zē; ō'sē).—abbr. Hos.

ho-sier (hō'zhẽr), n. [see hose], one who deals in stockings and other kinds of knit goods.

ho-sier-y (hō'zhẽr-ĭ), n. 1, stockings in general; also, other goods similarly knitted or woven; 2, a manufactory for such goods.

hos-pice (hŏs'pĭs; -pēs), n. [Fr.<Lat. hospitium, an inn<hospes, guest], 1, a place of shelter for travelers or wayfarers; especially, a refuge for the destitute or sick; 2, a monastery, especially in the Alps, that also serves as an inn.

hos-pi-ta-ble (hŏs'pĭ-tă-bl), adj. [<L.L. hospitare, to entertain<Lat. hospes, guest], 1, generous in receiving and entertaining friends or strangers; kind and attentive to guests or strangers; 2, marked by, or indicating, kindness and thoughtfulness to guests or strangers; as, a hospitable act; 3, figuratively, very receptive.—adv. hos'pi-ta-bly.

hos-pi-tal (hŏs'pĭ-tăl), n. [<L.L. hospitale, place for guests<Lat. hospes, guest], an institution for the medical and surgical treatment of the sick or wounded: Obs. or Hist., 1, a place of shelter for strangers; 2, a charitable institution; as, a foundling hospital.—n. hos'pi-tal-er; hos'pi-tal-ler.

hos-pi tal-i-ty (hŏs″pĭ-tăl'ĭ-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], [<Lat. hospitalitas, hospitality<hospes, guest], the practice of entertaining friends or strangers with kindness and liberality.

hos-pi-ti-um (hŏs-pĭsh'ĭ-ŭm), n. [pl. -tia (-ä)], [Lat. =an inn], Archaic, a hospice; inn.

hos-po-dar (hŏs'pō-där), n. [Rumanian<Slav. gospodi, lord], 1, a title bestowed by the Sultan of Turkey, in feudal times, on the vassal princes or governors of Moldavia and Wallachia; 2, a title at one time borne by the Russian emperors.

¹host (hōst), n. [<Lat. hostis, enemy], 1, originally, a large army; 2, a great number; throng.

²host (hōst), n. [<O.F. oste<Lat. hospes (-itis), host], 1, one who entertains another; 2, the keeper or proprietor of a hotel or inn: Biol., an organism that gives nourishment to a parasite.

Host (hōst), n. [<O.F. oiste<Lat. hostia, victim], Eccl., 1, Obs., a sacrifice; 2, the consecrated bread or wafer of the Eucharist, regarded as the body of Christ: sometimes extended to include both elements of the sacrament, or the bread before consecration.

hos-tage (hŏs'tăj), n. [O.F.<Lat. obses (-idis), a hostage], 1, a person who remains in the hands of another as a pledge for the fulfilment o certain conditions; 2, any pledge or security.

hos-tel (hŏs'tĕl), n. [O.F.<L.L. hospitale, place for guests], Archaic, an inn or hotel; hostelry.

hos-tel-ry (hŏs'tĕl-rĭ), n. [pl. -ries (-rĭz)], [<O.F. ostelerie<ostelier, innkeeper<hospitalier <L.L. hospitalarius, one who entertains guests], Archaic, an inn or lodging house.

host-ess (hōs'tĕs), n. [fem. of ²*host*], 1, a woman who receives and entertains guests at a private or public function; 2, the mistress of an inn.

hos-tile (hŏs'tĭl; Br. hŏs'tīl), adj. [<Lat. hostilis<hostis, enemy], 1, belonging to, or characteristic of, an enemy; showing ill will or animosity; 2, adverse; unfriendly; antagonistic:—n.

1, an enemy; adversary; especially, 2, an American Indian at war against the whites.—adv. hos'tile-ly.

hos-til-i-ty (hŏs-tĭl'ĭ-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], 1, the state of being antagonistic or unfriendly; 2, opposition; antagonism: pl. acts of warfare.

Syn. bitterness, vindictiveness, animosity. (See enmity.)

host-ing (hōs'tĭng), n. [<obs. host, to move as an army<O.F. host, army], a muster; the assembling of troops: Obs., a battle; combat.

hos-tler (hŏs'lẽr; ŏs'lẽr), n. [<earlier hosteler <O.F. ostelier, an innkeeper; see hostelry], 1, Obs., an innkeeper; 2, one who takes care of horses at an inn or stable; a groom: also, ostler; 3, one who cares for a railroad locomotive after a run.

hot (hŏt), adj. [comp. hotter, superl. hottest], [<A.S. hāt<O.Teut. source], 1, having much heat; far above a normal temperature: opposite of cold; 2, fiery, passionate; violent; ardent; furious; 3, lustful; sensual; 4, pungent; acrid; 5, fresh; strong; as, a hot scent; 6, unendurable; as, to make a situation too hot for a person; 7, near to the object sought for: used in games.—adv. hot'ly.—n. hot'ness.

hot-bed (hŏt'bĕd"), n. [hot+bed], 1, Hort., a bed of very rich earth covered with a glass frame, and heated by fermenting manure to force the growth of plants; 2, any place or condition that promotes growth or activity; as, a hotbed of treason.

hotch-pot (hŏch'pŏt"), n. [see hotchpotch], Eng. Law, a throwing together of properties so as to facilitate an equal division of the whole. Also, hotch'potch"; hodge'podge".

hotch-potch (hŏch'pŏch"), n. [<Fr. hochepot <hocher, to shake+pot, a pot], 1, a thick broth or stew, of meat and vegetables: commonly, hodgepodge; 2, a mixture; medley: commonly, hodgepodge: Eng. Law, a hotchpot.

hot cross-bun a kind of bun, marked with a cross, eaten on Good Friday: so called whether hot or cold: also called cross-bun.

ho-tel (hō-tĕl'), n. [Fr.<hostel, q.v.], a house for entertaining travelers or strangers; a large inn or lodging house: hôtel (ō"tĕl'), [Fr.], a public building; as, the hôtel de ville, a town hall; also, the mansion or town residence of a person of wealth or rank.

hot-foot (hŏt'fo͝ot"), adv. [hot+foot], Colloq., in great haste:—v.i. Colloq., to go in haste.

hot–head (hŏt'-hĕd"), n. an impetuous or fiery-tempered person.—adj. hot'-head"ed.

hot-house (hŏt'hous"), n. [hot+house], a house with a glass roof, heated for raising or forcing tender plants and for ripening fruits.

hot-spur (hŏt'spûr"), n. [hot+spur], a rash, hasty, or violent man:—adj. hot-headed; reckless.

Hot-ten-tot (hŏt'n-tŏt), n. [Du., perh. = stammerer], 1, one of a savage, degraded South African race, native to Cape Colony; 2, the language spoken by this people; figuratively, 3, any uneducated and unrefined person.

hou-dah (hou'dä), n. [see howdah], a covered seat or tent on the back of an elephant or camel. See how'dah, Pfd. S.

hough (hŏk), n. [see ²hoek], 1, the joint in the hind leg of certain quadrupeds, corresponding to the ankle in man; 2, the back of the knee joint in man: —v.t. to hamstring. See ²hock, Pfd. S.

¹hound (hound), n. [<A.S. hund, dog<O.Teut. source], 1, a kind of domestic dog, with large, drooping ears, which hunts, usually by scent, deer, rabbits, foxes, etc.; 2, a despicable, mean fellow: —v.t. 1, to chase with, or as with, hunting dogs; 2, to pursue unpityingly; nag; persecute; drive.

²hound (hound), n. [<O.N. hūnn, knob], Naut., one of two projections at the masthead for supporting the trestletrees or the rigging; Carriage building, one of two diagonal braces on the tongue or running gear of a vehicle.

hour (our), n. [<O.F. ure<Gk. hōra, hour], 1, the 24th part of a day; 60 minutes; 2, the time of day as marked by a clock or dial; 3, a particular or appointed time; as, the hour for adjournment: pl. the fixed or stated times for daily work, school, etc.; as, school hours are from 9 to 3: pl. Eccl., 1, the seven stated periods of the day set aside for prayers; 2, the prayers repeated at these times: Hours, R. C. Ch., a book containing the prayers for certain times of day: Class. Myth., [Lat. Horae], goddesses of the seasons and of order and justice.

hour an-gle Astron., the angle at the pole, or the arc on the celestial equator, between the meridian of a given place and the meridian through a given celestial body used as a basis of reference.

hour cir-cle Astron., one of twelve equidistant great circles through the poles of the celestial sphere, perpendicular to the equator.

hour-glass (our'glȧs"), n. [hour+glass], a device consisting of two glass bulbs, one above the other, connected by a narrow neck: used for measuring time, as the period of an hour, by running sand or mercury from one bulb to the other; a sandglass that measures an hour.

HOURGLASS

hou-ri (hoo͞'rĭ; hou'rĭ), n. [pl. -ris (-rĭz)], [Fr.<Pers. hūrī<Arab. haurā, black-eyed], 1, one of the dark-eyed maidens of the Mohammedan paradise; 2, any sensuously beautiful woman.

hour-ly (our'lĭ), adv. [see hour], every hour; often:—adj. occurring every hour.

house (hous), n. [pl. houses (houz'ĕz)], [<A.S. hūs <O.Teut. source], 1, a building for residence; place of abode; 2, a building for some particular purpose: often used in compounds; as, courthouse, almshouse, etc.; 3, a shelter for an animal; as, a dog house; 4, a household, family, or race; especially, a noble family; as, the House of Hapsburg; 5, one of the divisions of a legislative or governing body; 6, a quorum of the members of such a body, or enough to transact business; 7, a business firm or place of business; 8, a theater or its audience: Obs., a square on a chessboard: Astrol., one of the twelve zodiacal signs into which the circuit of the heavens is divided for use in astrology: House of Commons, the lower house of the British Parliament, consisting of elected representatives of the counties and boroughs: House of Lords, the upper house of the British Parliament, consisting of archbishops, bishops, and peers of the realm: House of Representatives, the lower and larger branch of the United States Congress, consisting of members elected in proportion to population: often called the House:—v.t. (houz), [p.t. and p.p. housed (houzd), p.pr. housing], 1, to shelter; 2, to store, as goods: Naut., to secure, or put in a safe place; as, to house a yacht:—v.i. to hide; take shelter.

house boat a barge or other vessel fitted up as a floating residence.

house-break-er (hous'brāk"ẽr), n. [house +break], one who breaks open and enters the dwelling of another with intent to commit a felony.—n. house'break"ing.

house fly the common domestic fly, a two-winged insect (Musca domestica, of the order Diptera), with sucking mouth parts, breeding chiefly in manure and garbage: the larvæ being called maggots.

house-hold (hous'hōld), n. [house+²hold], a group of persons living together; a family: —adj. pertaining to a family or home; domestic.

house-hold-er (hous'hōl"dẽr), n. 1, the head of a family group; 2, one who occupies a house as his own dwelling.

house-keep-er (hous'kēp"ẽr), n. [house+keep], 1, a woman who superintends the running of a household; 2, a woman who does the work or takes care of a house.

house-keep-ing (hous'kēp"ĭng), n. the management of a house and family;—adj. capable of being used in the management of a household; domestic.

hou-sel (hou'zẽl), n. [<A.S. hūsel, a sacrifice], Archaic, 1, the Lord's Supper, or Eucharist; 2, the act of administering or receiving the Eucharist: —v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -seled or -selled (-zẽld), p.pr. -seling or -selling], Archaic, to administer the Eucharist to.

house-leek (hous'lēk"), n. [house+leek], Bot., any of a genus (Sempervivum) of herbs related to the sedums, native in Europe and Asia, having dense rosettes of thick, fleshy leaves and clusters of yellow or purple flowers; especially, the common houseleek (S. tectorum) cultivated in American gardens.

house-maid (hous'mād"), n. [house+maid], a girl hired to do housework, especially chamber work: housemaid's knee, a swollen condition of the knee joint, caused by continued kneeling.

house-room (hous'ro͞om"), n. [house+room], 1, space or accommodation in a building or house; lodging; hence, 2, space; consideration; as, don't give such an idea houseroom.

house-top (hous'tŏp"), n. [house+top], the highest part of a house; the roof; hence, a public place; as, to shout from the housetop.

house-warm-ing (hous'wôr"mĭng), n. [house +warm], a feast celebrating entrance into a new house.

house-wife (hous'wĭf"), n. [house+wife], 1, the mistress of a home; one who manages the domestic affairs of a household; 2, (hŭz'ĭf), a small case for sewing materials, particularly in the army.

house-work (hous'wûrk"), n. [house+work], the work connected with housekeeping.

1hous-ing (houz'ing), n. [see house], 1, the act of giving shelter; 2, that which gives shelter; living conditions generally as determined by one's abode; as, the housing of the workmen in the city: Mech., a cavity or recess designed to receive or contain some corresponding part; specifically, a journal box, a mortise in a beam, a casing for gears or bearings, or the like; Arch., a niche for a statue.

2hous-ing (houz'ing), n. [<O.F. huche, housing], a horse's saddlecloth: pl. the decorative trappings on a horse.

Hou-yhn-hnm (hōō-in'm; hwin'm), n. [coined by Swift in imit. of neigh of horse], one of the inhabitants of a land, described in Swift's "Gulliver's Travels," in which the dominant race is composed of horses, gifted with reason and remarkable virtue, and a subordinate race is composed of degraded human beings, called Yahoos.

hove (hōv), past tense and past participle of the irregular verb heave.

hov-el (hov'el), n. [source uncertain], 1, an open shed for cattle; 2, a wretched little cottage, hut, or cabin:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. hoveled or -elled (-eld), p.pr. hoveling or -elling], 1, to shelter in a hut or cabin; 2, to construct in the shape of a shed or hovel.

hov-er (huv'er), v.i. [perh.<obs. v. hove, to hover; source uncertain], 1, to flutter over or about; 2, to move or loiter about uncertainly and anxiously; 3, to stand in suspense or expectation:—v.t. to settle protectingly over, as does a hen over her chicks: —n. a device for keeping incubator chicks warm.

how (hou), adv. [<A.S. hū, how], 1, in what manner; 2, to what degree or extent; 3, for what reason; 4, in what condition; 5, by what name; 6, with what meaning; 7, at what price:—n. the manner; the means.

how-be-it (hou-bē'it), adv. and conj. [how+be+it], nevertheless; but; although; yet.

how-dah (hou'dä), n. [<Pers. haudah<Arab. haudaj, a litter], a canopied seat for riding on an elephant or camel, often richly decorated. Also, hou'dah.

how-ev-er (hou-ev'er), adv. [how+ever], in whatever manner; to whatever degree or extent; howsoever:—conj. notwithstanding; yet; still.—Also, Poet., how-e'er (hou-ār').

how-itz-er (hou'it-sēr), n. [<Ger. haubitze<Bohem. houfnice, catapult], a short cannon, throwing shells, generally at a higher angle of elevation than ordinary cannon.

HOWDAH

howl (houl), v.i. [<M.E. houlen, to howl: prob. imit.], 1, to utter a loud, wailing cry, like a dog or wolf; 2, to utter a prolonged cry of pain or distress; 3, to roar, like the wind:—v.t. to utter in a loud wailing tone: howl down, to suppress by a howling cry or clamor:—n. 1, the long, wailing cry of a dog or wolf; 2, a cry of distress or anguish; 3, a loud shout of derision; as, the howl of a mob.

howl-er (houl'ēr), n. 1, one who wails or cries loudly; 2, in telephony, a device for producing a startling noise in a telephone receiver to draw attention to some negligence: Zoöl., any of several South American monkeys whose cry is audible for miles: Slang, anything excessive, as a bad blunder.

howl-et (hou'lēt; hōōl'ēt), n. [see owlet], Archaic or Sc. Dial., an owl; also, a young or small owl. See owl'et, Pfd. S.

how-so-ev-er (hou'sō-ev'er), adv. and conj. [how+so+ever], in whatsoever manner; however; in whatever degree; to whatever extent.

1hoy (hoi), n. [prob.<M.Du. hoei, a sloop], 1, formerly, a small, one-masted, heavy coasting vessel; now, 2, a heavy barge.

2hoy (hoi), interj. [nat. cry], 1, ho! halloo! 2, a shout:—n. Naut., a call or shout used in hailing.

hoy-den (hoi'dn), n. [source uncertain], a rude, boisterous girl; a romp; a tomboy: —adj. rough; bold; ill-mannered:—v.i. to act in a rude, boisterous way. Also, hoi'den.

Hoyle (hoil), n. [<proper name], a book of rules for card games, originally edited by Edmund Hoyle (1672–1769) of England: according to Hoyle, 1, adhering to the rules in any game; 2, strictly formal.

H. P. abbr. 1, half pay; 2, high pressure (also, HP): 3, horse power (also, h. p.):—hr., [pl. hrs.], hour:—H. R., 1, Home Rule; 2, House of Representatives:—H.R.E., Holy Roman Emperor (or Empire):—H. R. H., His (or Her) Royal Highness:—H. S., 1, [Lat. hic sepultus], here is buried; 2, [Lat. hic situs], here lies; 3, High School:—H. S. H., His (or Her) Serene Highness:—ht., height:—H.T., Hawaii Territory (also, T.H.).

hub (hub), n. [source uncertain], 1, the nave, or central part, of a wheel (see illus.); 2, any central part; 3, the peg at which quoits are thrown; 4, a steel punch; 5, the hilt of a weapon: the Hub, humorously, the city of Boston.

hub-bub (hub'ub), n. [<Celt.: prob. imit.], a loud confusion of voices; uproar; tumult.
Syn. (see noise).

huck-a-back (huk'a-bak), n. [source uncertain], a rough-surfaced kind of linen or cotton cloth, generally used for toweling. Also, huck.

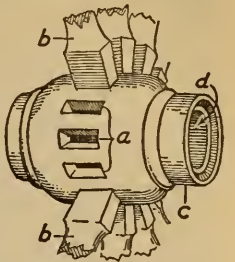
huck-le-ber-ry (huk'l-ber'i), n. [pl. -berries (-iz)], [prob. Am. corr. of hurtleberry, a var. of whortleberry, q. v.], Bot., 1, any of a genus (Gaylussacia) of low-growing shrubs of the heath family, bearing a berrylike fruit, edible in some species (as G. frondosa), containing ten nutlets; 2, in the Central States, a species (Vaccinium corymbosum) of blueberry, usually called swamp blueberry, growing five to twelve feet tall, bearing a sweet edible berry having many small seeds; 3, locally, any of several shrubs related to these; also, the fruit of any huckleberry.



HUB
a, spokesockets; b, b, spokes; c, band; d, box.

huck-le (huk'l), n. [dim. of obs. huck, hip, akin to hock], the hip: huckle bone, 1, the hip bone; 2, the ankle bone.

huck-ster (huk'stēr), n. [<obs. huck, to haggle: source uncertain], 1, a peddler; one who retails small articles; 2, a mean, tricky fellow:—v.i. 1, to make petty bargains; 2, to haggle; wrangle over:—v.t. 1, to peddle; 2, to carry on petty dealings in.

hud-dle (hud'l), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. huddled (hud'ld), p.pr. huddling], [<O.Teut. source], 1, to crowd or draw together, as from confusion, fear, or cold; 2, to place or perform in haste or disorder; hence, 3, to botch:—v.i. 1, to come in a crowd; flock with on, up, or over; 2, to nestle together; 3, to draw oneself up into a heap:—n. confusion; crowd.

hue (hū), n. [<A.S. hiw, color], 1, color; tint; 2, a variety of a specified color; as, red of a dark hue: Obs., 1, figure; aspect; 2, an apparition.
Syn. tint, shade, dye. (See color.)

hue and cry [<O.F. hu et cri<L.L. huesium et clamor, noise and outcry], 1, a general outcry of alarm or pursuit; 2, an official gazette in England advertising crimes and criminals formerly, an outcry and pursuit of a criminal, which was started by the aggrieved person, and which every man hearing it was required to take up.

huff (huf), v.t. [imit.], 1, to puff or blow up; 2, to treat with insolence; bully; 3, to make angry; 4, in checkers, to remove (a piece which has failed to jump):—v.i. 1, to puff up; 2, to become angry or offended:—n. a fit of ill humor or petulance.—adj. huff'ish.

huff-y (huf'i), adj. [comp. -ier, superl. -iest], 1, arrogant; insolent; 2, angry; petulant; touchy; ill-tempered.—adv. huff'i-ly.—n. huff'i-ness.

hug (hug), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. hugged (hugd), p.pr. hugging], [source uncertain], 1, to embrace closely; fondle affectionately; 2, to hold fast to; cling to; 3, to keep close to; as, to hug the shore:—n. 1, a close embrace; 2, a body grip in wrestling.

huge (hūj), adj. [comp. huger, superl. hugest], [<O.F. ahuge, vast], 1, of great bulk; vast; 2, great; as, the party was a huge success. Also, Humorous, huge'ous (hūj'ŭs).—adv. huge'ly.—n. huge'ness.
Syn. bulky, vast, colossal, immense. (See enormous.)

hug-ger-mug-ger (hug'ēr-mug'ēr), n. [source uncertain], 1, confusion; 2, secrecy:—adj. 1, disordered; 2, clandestine:—adv. 1, secretly; 2, in confusion:—v.t. to conceal; hush up: —v.i. to proceed in a secret or in a muddled fashion.

Hu-gue not (hū'gē-nōt), n. [Fr., perh. dim. of Hugues, Hugh], a French Protestant of the 16th or 17th century.—adj. Hu'gue-not'ic.

hulk (hulk), n. [<A.S. hulc<L.L. hulka, heavy merchant ship, perh.<Gk. holkas, a trading vessel], 1, the body of a ship, especially if old or unseaworthy; 2, an old clumsy vessel; 3, any unwieldy object or person: the hulks, old ships formerly used as convict prisons or for other than seafaring purposes.

hulk-ing (hulk'ing), adj. unwieldy; clumsy; loutish; as, a hulking fellow.

1hull (hul), n. [<A.S. hulu, husk<helan, to cover], the outer covering, as of various fruits, vegetables, and grains; the husk:—v.t. to shell, husk, stem, as peas, corn, and berries.—n. hull'er.

²hull (hŭl), n. [prob. < ¹hull], the body or frame of a vessel:—v.t. to strike the hull of (a vessel) with a shot:—v.i. to drift to and fro upon the sea, as a ship without sails.

hul-la-ba-loo (hŭl″ə-bə-lōō″), n. [18th cent. < doubling of hullo], clamor; uproar; noisy contention; tumult.

hul-lo (hŭ-lō″), n. and interj. [see hollo], 1, a call to attract attention; 2, an informal salutation; hollo:—v.i. to call out or exclaim:—v.t. to call to; shout aloud. See hol'lo, Pfd. S.

¹hum (hŭm), v.i. [p.t. and p.p. hummed (hŭmd), p.pr. humming], [imit.], 1, to make a sound without opening the lips, suggesting the sound of a prolonged m; 2, to make a buzzing noise, as a bee in flight; drone; 3, to sing with lips closed; 4, to be in energetic motion or action; as, he made things hum: —v.t. 1, to sing in a low undertone; 2, to sing with the lips closed:—n. 1, the noise made by bees and insects in flying; 2, the act of making a low sound; 3, a distant sound, as of machinery, people, or of airplanes in flight.

²hum (hŭm), interj. and n. a sound, followed by a pause, implying hesitation, surprise, doubt, etc.

hu-man (hū′mən), adj. [< Lat. humanus < homo, man], 1, of or pertaining to man or mankind; 2, characteristic of man; having the qualities of man as distinguished, by his failings, from the spiritual and, by his intelligence, from the brutes:—n. a human being; a person.—n. hu'man-ness.

Syn., adj. (see humane).

hu-mane (hū-mān′), adj. 1, having the feelings proper to man; benevolent; kind; sympathetic; compassionate; 2, refining or elevating, as certain studies.—adv. hu-mane'ly.—n. hu-mane'ness.

Syn. human. That is human which characterizes man as such; that is humane which is actively benevolent. All persons are human; kindly persons are humane.

hu-man-ism (hū′mən-izm), n. 1, the state of belonging to mankind, or of being human; 2, humanity; devotion to the interests of mankind; 3, liberal education; the study of art and letters, especially of the Greek and Roman classics; 4, a recent intellectual or philosophical conception of religion, which, not satisfied with skepticism or dogma, regards man as the highest entity so far attained, and emphasizes the significance of the spiritually cultivated ethical will.—n. hu'man-ist.—adj. hu"man-is'tic.

hu-man-i-ta-ri-an (hū-mān″ĭ-tā″rĭ-ən), n. [see humanity], a philanthropist, or charitably inclined person: Theol. or Philos., one who bases religion on love to mankind rather than on faith in a supernatural revelation; specifically, one who emphasizes the human nature of Jesus:—adj. 1, philanthropic; benevolent; having broad human sympathies; 2, holding, or believing in, the philosophy of love to mankind.—n. hu-man"i-ta'ri-an-ism.

hu-man-i-ty (hū-mān′ĭ-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], [< Lat. humanitas < humanus < homo, man], 1, mankind as a whole; 2, the state or quality of belonging to mankind; 3, the nature which distinguishes man from other creatures; 4, philanthropy, or charity toward others; kindness; benevolence; good will; pl. classical learning and polite literature, especially the Latin and Greek classics; education.

Syn. kindness, sympathy. (See benevolence.)

hu-man-ize (hū′mən-īz), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -ized (-īzd), p.pr. -izing], [see human], 1, to make like mankind; 2, to enlighten; 3, to make humane; refine or civilize:—v.i. to become human.

hu-man-kind (hū′mən-kīnd″), n. [human + kind], mankind collectively; humanity.

hu-man-ly (hū′mən-lĭ), adv. [see human], 1, from a human viewpoint; 2, in a human manner; 3, within human power or knowledge.

hum-ble (hŭm′bl), adj. [comp. -bler, superl. -blest], [< Lat. humilis, lowly < humus, ground], 1, lowly in feeling; having a low estimate of oneself; modest; meek; submissive; subservient; 2, lowly in condition; mean; obscure; unassuming; as, a humble cottage:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -bled (-bld), p.pr. -bling], to abase; make submissive; subdue; mortify; humiliate.—n. hum'ble-ness.—adv. hum'bly.—n. hum'bler.

Syn., adj. unassuming, subservient, self-depreciatory, modest, poor, plain, lowly, unpretending, obscure, meek. (See lowly.)—Ant., adj. haughty, proud, assertive.

hum-ble-bee (hŭm′bl-bē″), n. [< M.E. humbylbee < hummelen, to hum + A.S. bēo, bee], any of various species of large, hairy bee. See bum'ble-bee", U. S. Pfd. S.

hum-ble pie [< earlier (an) umble pie, by wrong division of (a) numble pie < numbles < O.F. nombles, entrails < Lat. lumbulus, dim. of lumbus, loin], Obs., originally, a pie made of the heart, liver, etc., of a deer, and intended for the servants' table: to eat humble pie, to make apologies, humiliate oneself, or withdraw one's words.

hum-ble plant Bot., a tropical and greenhouse plant of the pea family, whose pinnate leaves fold their leaflets together at night or when touched; the sensitive plant.

hum-bug (hŭm′bŭg″), n. [18th-cent. slang], 1, a fraud or imposition; sham; 2, a plausible deceiver; an impostor; 3, a spirit of trickery or deception: —v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -bugged (-bŭgd″), p.pr. -bugging], to impose upon; deceive; swindle.—n. hum'bug"ger.

hum-bug-ger-y (hŭm′bŭg″ər-ĭ), n. [pl. -ies (-ĭz)], fraud; deception; quackery.

hum-drum (hŭm′drŭm″), adj. [16th cent., by doubling of ¹hum], dull; monotonous: —n. 1, a stupid person; 2, monotony.

hu-mer-al (hū′mər-əl), adj. [see humerus], Anat., pertaining to the humerus (which see).

hu-mer-us (hū′mər-ŭs), n. [pl. humeri (-ī)], [Lat. = shoulder], Anat., the bone of the upper arm, from the shoulder to the elbow; Zoöl., a corresponding bone in the fore limb of other vertebrates.

hu-mid (hū′mĭd), adj. [< Lat. humidus < humēre, to be moist], damp; moist; somewhat wet or watery; specifically, containing a relatively large amount of water vapor; as, humid air or atmosphere.

hu-mid-i-fy (hū-mĭd′ĭ-fī), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -fied (-fīd), p.pr. -fying], [humid + -fy], to increase the moisture or vapor in.—n. hu-mid'i-fi"er.

hu-mid-i-ty (hū-mĭd′ĭ-tĭ), n. dampness; moisture: Phys., the condition of the atmosphere with reference to its content of water vapor.

hu-mi-dor (hū′mĭ-dôr), n. a device for keeping the air in a chamber from becoming dry, as a small case containing dampened sponges; also, a box, containing such a device, for storing cigars.

hu-mil-i-ate (hū-mĭl′ĭ-āt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -ated, p.pr. -ating], [< Lat. humilis, low], to humble the self-respect of; mortify; put to shame.

Syn. humble, mortify, abase, disgrace, degrade.

hu-mil-i-a-tion (hū-mĭl″ĭ-ā′shŭn), n. 1, the act of putting to shame; 2, the state of being put to shame; mortification; abasement; chagrin.

Syn. embarrassment, chagrin, disappointment.

hu-mil-i-ty (hū-mĭl′ĭ-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], [< Lat. humilitas, humility], 1, the state or quality of being lowly in mind; modesty; meekness; 2, subservience; submission; modest courtesy.

hum-mer (hŭm′ər), n. [see ¹hum], 1, one who or that which makes a droning or buzzing noise; 2, a humming bird: Slang, a person or thing exhibiting energy, quick efficiency, or high spirits.

hum-ming bird any of about 500 tiny, brilliantly colored birds (family Trochilidæ), with long, slender bills, whose rapidly moving wings make a humming sound in flight (for colored illus. see bird).

HUMMING BIRD (¼) AT A FLOWER hum-mock (hŭm′ŭk), n. [prob. naut.: source uncertain], 1, a small hill or rounded mound; 2, a similar ridge on an ice field.

hu-mor (hū′mər; ū′mər), n. [Lat. = fluid, moisture], 1, state or temper of mind; mood; caprice; 2, the mental capacity for perceiving or expressing absurdities; 3, any element in a situation or event that appeals to a sense of the incongruous: Physiol., originally, any of the four bodily fluids (blood, phlegm, choler, or yellow bile, and melancholy, or black bile) supposed to determine one's health and disposition; hence, any fluid of the body, as of the eye:—v.t. 1, to yield to the mood of; indulge; gratify; 2, to adapt oneself to. Also, hu'mour.

Syn., n. mood, disposition, wit. Wit is a flashing perception that darts swiftly and unexpectedly among ideas, situations, or expressions, finding amusing incongruities, contrasts, or comical aspects which were not foreseen. Wit is keen, laughter-provoking, sometimes cutting in its deadly faculty for hitting upon a hidden truth. Humor is neither darting nor occasional, for it is more a turn of one's nature, a specific tendency of the disposition. Wit is intellectual; humor is sympathetic. Hence, humor is kindly; its mirth is of a generously human sort.

hu-mor-ist (hū′mər-ĭst), n. 1, one who shows readily, in words or meaning, a facetious or droll fancy; a wag; 2, a whimsical or eccentric person.

hu-mor-ous (hū′mər-ŭs), adj. 1, full of, or characterized by, mirth and fun; diverting; witty; 2, whimsical; capricious: Rare, irritable; peevish.—adv. hu'mor-ous-ly.—n. hu'mor-ous-ness.

Syn. amusing, facetious, funny, jocose, whimsical, witty, sportive.—Ant., mournful, serious, sad, sober.

hu-mor-some (hū'mĕr-sŭm), adj. 1, peevish; full of moods; petulant; 2, capricious; witty; droll. Also, hu'mour-some.

hump (hŭmp), n. [17th cent.: source uncertain], a rounded protuberance, especially that on the back of a camel, or that formed by a crooked spine in man:—v.t. to make in such a shape; to bend or curve as the back: Slang, used reflexively, to gather (oneself) together for great or strenuous effort; Slang, Archaic, to vex or annoy.—adj. humped.

hump-back (hŭmp'băk"), n. [hump + †back], 1, a hunchback; 2, a crooked back; 3, a kind of whale.—adj. hump'backed" (-băkt").

humph (h'm: pronounced without opening the lips, and with a very quick termination of the m sound), interj. [natural ejac.], expressing doubt, dissatisfaction, surprise, or disgust:—v.i. (hŭmf), to utter such an exclamation:—n. (hŭmf), this exclamation.

Hump-ty Dump-ty [< humpy-dumpy < hump + dumpy], 1, the short, dumpy hero of a popular nursery rime, symbolizing an egg; hence, 2, a short, dumpy person: humpty-dumpty, adj. having short limbs and a round body.

hu-mus (hū'mŭs), n. [Lat. = ground], a black or dark brown substance in soils, formed by the decay of organic matter, chiefly vegetable.

Hun (hŭn), n. [< A.S. Hūne < L.L. Hunni, the Huns], 1, one of a warlike, wandering people of northern Asia, who, in the fifth century, overran and devastated Europe; 2, any savage invader; 3, a marauding, destructive person; a vandal.

hunch (hŭnch), v.t. [source uncertain], 1, to punch with the fist or elbow; jostle; 2, to bend or round (the back):—n. 1, Dial. or Obs., a thrust with the fist or elbow; 2, a hump; 3, a lump; a chunk: Slang, an instinctive feeling or conviction.

hunch-back (hŭnch'băk"), n. [hunch + †back], 1, a person with a crooked back; a hump-back; 2, a hunched back.—adj. hunch'backed" (-băkt").

hun-dred (hŭn'drĕd), n. [A.S.], 1, the number consisting of ten times ten; 2, a sign or symbol used to represent one hundred units, as 100 or C; 3, a division of a county: so used in England and in the state of Delaware:—adj. numbering ten times ten; five score.—adj. and n. hun'dredth.

hun-dred-fold (hŭn'drĕd-fōld"), adj. [hundred + -fold], 100 times as much; in the proportion of 100 to 1:—n. 100 times as much: a hundredfold, 100 times as much as a given unit.

hun-dred-weight (hŭn'drĕd-wāt"), n. [hundred + weight], the 20th part of a ton; 100 or 112 pounds avoirdupois.

hung (hŭng), past tense and past participle of the irregular verb hang.

Hun-ga-ri-an (hŭng-gā'rĭ-ăn), adj. [< L.L. Hungari, Ungari, name given to Magyars], pertaining to Hungary, its language, or its people:—n. 1, a native or citizen of Hungary; 2, the language of Hungary; Magyar.—abbr. Hung.; Hun.

hun-ger (hŭng'gĕr), n. [< A.S. hungor < O.Teut. source], 1, appetite or desire for food; 2, any strong desire:—v.i. 1, to feel the desire for food; 2, to have a longing or earnest desire for something:—v.t. to make hungry; force by starvation.

hun-ger strike continued refusal to accept food, practiced to obtain a certain end, as release from prison, or publicity for a cause.

hun-gry (hŭng'grĭ), adj. [comp. -grier, superl. -griest], 1, having a keen appetite; feeling uneasiness for want of food; 2, emaciated or thin; 3, eagerly desirous; 4, unfertile; barren: said of land.—adv. hun'gri-ly.—n. hun'gri-ness.

hunk (hŭngk), n. [source uncertain], Colloq., a lump or large piece; a chunk, as of bread or meat.

Hun-ker (hŭng'kĕr), n. [source uncertain], Pol. Slang, a conservative; old fogy: originally, a conservative New York Democrat of about 1845: opposed by the Barnburners.

hunks (hŭngks), n. [source uncertain], a niggardly or mean fellow; a covetous person; miser.

hunt (hŭnt), v.t. [< A.S. huntian < hunta, hunter], 1, to pursue, or strive to catch or kill, as game or wild animals; 2, to go through in search of something; 3, to use in the chase, as hounds; 4, to persecute; hound; follow closely; 5, to search after:—v.i. 1, to follow the chase; 2, to seek: with for or after: Mech., to change erratically: said of a steam-engine governor whose motion should be steady:—n. 1, the act of pursuing game, or wild animals; 2, a pack of hounds; 3, an association of huntsmen; 4, the district over which hounds pursue game; 5, a search; as, a hunt for a house.—n. hunt'ing.
Syn., v. seek, track, pursue, search, scour, follow.

hunt-er (hŭn'tĕr), n. 1, one who pursues game; a huntsman; 2, a horse or hound trained for use in hunting; 3, one who searches diligently for anything; 4, a watch having a hunting case: also called hunting watch.—n. fem. hunt'ress.

hunt-ing box a temporary residence for use during the hunting season.

hunt-ing case a watch case with a hinged metal cover to protect the crystal.

hunts-man (hŭnts'măn), n. [pl. -men (-mĕn)], [hunt + man], 1, a hunter; 2, one who has charge of the pack of hounds in a hunt.

hunt's-up (hŭnts'=ŭp"), n. Archaic, formerly, a tune played or sung to awaken huntsmen.

hur-dle (hûr'dl), n. [< A.S. hyrdel, a wicket < O.Teut. source], 1, a movable fence of interwoven twigs, branches, or steel; 2, a fence or barrier to be leaped over in steeplechasing or in racing; 3, a rude frame on which criminals were formerly dragged to execution: the hurdles, either of two races, also called hurdle races, of 120 and 220 yards, in which ten barriers, three feet six inches high and two feet six inches high respectively, must be leaped:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -dled (-dld), p.pr. -dling], 1, to hedge in, or inclose, with a barrier; 2, to leap over, as the barriers in a hurdle race:—v.i. to make a leap or jump over an obstacle while running.—n. hur'dler.

HURDLE

hur-dy-gur-dy (hûr'dĭ=gûr'dĭ), n. [pl. -dies (-dĭz)], [prob. imit.], 1, formerly, a lute-shaped musical instrument with strings, the tones of which were produced by turning a crank; 2, any musical instrument played by turning a crank, as the familiar mechanical piano mounted on wheels.

hurl (hûrl), v.t. [prob. imit.], 1, to throw with violence; drive forcibly; 2, to cast down; overthrow; 3, to utter with vehemence:—v.i. 1, to rush; fling oneself; 2, to take part in the game of hurling:—n. 1, the act of throwing violently; 2, a cast; a violent throw; a fling; a pitch.—n. hurl'er.
Syn., v. throw, drive, impel. (See cast.)

hurl-ing (hûrl'ĭng), n. either of two games, the one, formerly played in England, resembling Rugby, the other, played in Ireland, resembling hockey.

hurl-y (hûr'lĭ), n. [pl. hurlies (-lĭz)], [< hurl], Obs. or Archaic, confusion; turmoil; hurly-burly.

hurl-y–burl-y (hûr'lĭ=bûr'lĭ), n. [pl. =burlies (-lĭz)], [< hurly, by reduplication], tumult; confusion; bustle; uproar; hubbub; racket.

Hu-ron (hū'rŏn), n. [Fr. < Amer. Ind.], a member of an Iroquois tribe of Indians, formerly living near Lakes Huron and Ontario.

Hu-ro-ni-an (hū-rō'nĭ-ăn), adj. Geol., designating, or pertaining to, the earlier period of the Algonkian, or Proterozoic, era (see geology, chart):—n. Geol., the Huronian period or strata.

hur-rah (hŏo-rä'; hŭ-rä'), interj. [< Ger. hurra, imit. cry], expressing joy, encouragement, triumph, applause, etc.:—n. a triumphant shout; a cheer:—v.i. to utter such a shout in applause, etc.; cheer:—v.t. to cheer; salute with cries of approval, welcome, etc. Also, Colloq., hoo-ray'; hur-ra'.

hur-ri-cane (hûr'ĭ-kān), n. [< Sp. huracán < Carib. hurakan, a whirlwind], a violent whirlwind; a gale of extreme violence, sometimes violently cyclonic, especially common in tropical regions, and usually accompanied by thunder, lightning, and rain; hence, a violent shower of anything, as missiles, protests, gifts, or the like.

hur-ri-cane deck Naut., the light, topmost deck on a passenger steamship, used for observation by the ship's officers.

hur-ried (hûr'ĭd), p.adj. [see hurry], characterized by haste; hasty.—adv. hur'ried-ly.

hur-ry (hûr'ĭ), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. hurried (-ĭd), p.pr. hurrying], [16th cent.: Obs., bustle], to press on; impel to greater speed, as a person; expedite, as a process:—v.i. to act or move with haste:—n. [pl. -ries (-ĭz)], 1, haste; urgency; precipitation; 2, in England, a chute for loading vessels with coal: Obs., bustle; confusion.
Syn., v. dispatch, rush, expedite, quicken.

hur-ry–scur-ry (hûr'ĭ=skûr'ĭ), n. confusion; disordered haste; pell-mell:—adj. disorderly; confused; hasty. Also, hur'ry-skur'ry.

hurt (hûrt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. hurt, p.pr. hurting], [prob. < O.F. hurter, to bruise], 1, to inflict pain upon; wound; 2, to injure; impair; 3, to grieve; cause to suffer mentally:—v.i. 1, to be painful, as a sore; 2, to cause physical or mental pain, as a blow or insult:—n. 1, a wound; injury; 2, damage; loss; 3, detriment; impairment of value.

Syn., n. wound, pain, bruise, loss, detriment, damage, slight, stain, wrong. (See injury.)

hurt-ful (hûrt'fo͝ol), adj. injurious; physically or mentally harmful; unwholesome; detrimental.—adv. hurt'ful-ly.—n. hurt'ful-ness.
Syn. noxious, pernicious, baneful, mischievous.

hur-tle (hûr'tl), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -tled (-tld), p.pr. -tling], [<obs. hurt, to strike], to fling or impel forcibly; collide with:—v.i. 1, to clash; 2, to rush headlong; 3, to move with a clashing sound; clatter.

hur-tle-ber-ry (hûr'tl-bĕr'ĭ), n. [see whortleberry], 1, the whortleberry, or huckleberry; 2, in Europe, the bilberry, any of various species of blueberry. See whor'tle-ber'ry. Pfd. S.

hurt-less (hûrt'lĕs), adj. [see hurt], 1, harmless; innocent; 2, not harmed.

hus-band (hŭz'bănd), n. [<A.S. hūsbonda, master of house <hūs, house + bōnda <O.N. bōndi, freeholder], a man who has a wife: correlative of wife: Archaic, 1, a husbandman; 2, a manager or steward:—v.t. 1, to manage with economy; 2, to espouse; marry (a wife): Archaic, 1, to till (the ground); 2, to provide with a husband.

hus-band-man (hŭz'bănd-măn), n. [pl. -men (-mĕn)], [<archaic, husband, to till the ground + man], a tiller of the soil; a farmer.

hus-band-ry (hŭz'bănd-rĭ), n. [<husband, to till the ground], 1, agriculture; farming; 2, economical management; frugality; thrift.

hush (hŭsh), interj. [<obs. adj. husht, quiet], be still! silence!—v.t. 1, to make quiet or silent; 2, to soothe; comfort; 3, to conceal; prevent publication or revelation of: usually with up; as, to hush up the scandal:—v.i. to keep, or be, silent or quiet:—n. silence; stillness; peace: hush money, a bribe, usually money, given to insure silence or secrecy.

husk (hŭsk), n. [<M.E. huske: source uncertain], 1, the dry outer covering of certain fruits or seeds; in the United States, the covering of an ear of maize, or Indian corn; 2, Bib., in the parable of the prodigal son, the pulpy pod of the carob tree, used for fattening swine and eaten by the poorer classes (Luke 15:16); 3, any rough and worthless outside covering:—v.t. to strip the outer covering from, as corn.—n. husk'er.

HUSK
a, surrounding ear of maize.

husk-ing bee a rural social gathering to assist in husking corn preparatory to storing it for the winter.

[1]husk-y (hŭs'kĭ), adj. [comp. -ier, superl. -iest], 1, consisting of, or like, husks, or dry hulls; worthless; 2, dry and harsh; rough or hoarse in quality: said of the voice; as, his tones are husky.—adv. husk'i-ly.—n. husk'i-ness.

[2]hus-ky (hŭs'kĭ), adj. [mod. colloq.], U. S. Slang, strong; well-developed; powerful:—n. [pl. -kies (-kĭz)], a stalwart, well-developed man.

Hus-ky (hŭs'kĭ), n. [pl. -kies (-kĭz)], [perh. corr. of Eskimo], 1, an Eskimo; 2, the language of the Eskimos: husky, a powerful Eskimo sledge dog.

hus-sar (hŏŏ-zär'), n. [<Hung. huszar <O.Serv. husar <It. corsaro, corsair], 1, originally, a light-armed cavalryman in the Hungarian or Croatian armies; 2, now, one of a class of light-armed cavalry of European armies, usually wearing vivid uniforms.

hus-sy (hŭz'ĭ), n. [pl. -sies (-ĭz)], [<housewife], 1, a worthless woman; 2, a saucy girl; a romp; 3, (properly, housewife (hŭz'ĭf), which see), a small traveling case containing sewing materials. Also, huz'zy.

hus-tings (hŭs'tĭngz), n.pl. usually used as sing. [<A.S. hūsting <O.N. hūsthing <hūs, house + thing, assembly], 1, a court held in the Guildhall in London before the lord mayor, recorder, and sheriffs; 2, the stand from which parliamentary candidates were formerly nominated, and addressed the electors; 3, any place where campaign speeches are made; also, the general proceedings at an election.

hus-tle (hŭs'l), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -tled (-ld), n.pr. -tling], [<Du. husselen, to shake], 1, to shake together in confusion; 2, to jostle; mob; 3, to push forward roughly; shove along: Colloq., to cause to be done or completed quickly:—v.i. to jostle; push; crowd: Colloq., to show energy and alacrity; work busily; make haste; hurry.—n. hus'tler.

hut (hŭt), n. [<Fr. hutte <Ger. hütte, cottage], 1, a small house or cabin; hovel; shanty; 2, a temporary building for lodging troops; 3, during the World War, a canteen station in or near an army camp or cantonment:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. hutted, p.pr. hutting], to house in a hut:—v.i. to lodge, or live, in a hut.

FORMS OF HUT

hutch (hŭch), n. [<Fr. huche <L.L. hutica, a chest], 1, a bin for storing grain, etc.; 2, a coop or pen for animals; 3, a hut; hovel; 4, a trough for washing ore; 5, a car for hauling ore up out of a mine:—v.t. 1, to store; hoard; 2, to wash (ore) in a trough.

huz-za (hŭ-zä'; hŏŏ-zä'), interj. [imit.], expressing joy, triumph, approbation, etc.:—n. a shout of joy or triumph; a hurrah:—v.i. to utter such a shout. Also, huz-zah'.

hy-a-cinth (hī'ə-sĭnth), n. [<earlier jacynth <Gk. huakinthos, flower or gem], Mineral., 1, a violet-blue mineral resembling a sapphire, used as a jewel in ancient times; 2, a transparent red or brownish zircon, used as a gem: less commonly applied to certain garnets: Bot., 1, any of a genus (Hyacinthus) of well known bulbous plants of the lily family, with racemes of bell-shaped flowers, most of which are sweet-scented; 2, the bulb or fragrant flower of this plant; 3, an unidentified plant, fabled in mythology to have sprung from the blood of Hyacinthus.

hy-a-cin-thine (hī'ə-sĭn'thĭn), adj. 1, pertaining to the reddish or brownish mineral, zircon; 2, pertaining to the hyacinth; hence, 3, sweet-scented; also, 4, purplish blue; 5, like Hyacinthus (which see): hence, 6, handsome; beautiful.

Hy-a-cin-thus (hī'ə-sĭn'thŭs), n. [<Gk.], Gk. Myth., a beautiful Greek youth beloved by Apollo, who unwittingly killed him and in remorse caused the hyacinth to grow from his blood.

Hy-a-des (hī'ə-dēz), n.pl. [<Gk. Huades, perh. <huein, to rain], Gk. Myth., five nymphs, guardians of Bacchus and daughters of Atlas, who were placed in the heavens by Zeus, in pity for their continual weeping for their brother's death; Astron., a small group of stars in the head of the constellation Taurus, their rising at sunset having been regarded by the ancients as marking the beginning of the rainy season. Also, Hy'ads (-ădz).

hy-æ-na (hī-ē'nə), n. [see hyena], any of a family of carnivorous mammals, in appearance and habits intermediate between the cat and the dog, native to Africa and Asia. See hy-e'na, Pfd. S.

hy-a-line (hī'ə-lĭn), adj. [<Gk. hualos, glass], crystalline; transparent; like glass:—n. Poet., 1, a smooth, clear sea or sky; 2, anything resembling glass in transparency.

hy-a-lite (hī'ə-līt), n. a clear or translucent, colorless, glassy variety of opal.

hy-a-loid (hī'ə-loid), adj. [<Gk. hualos, glass + eidos, form], clear; glassy; transparent: hyaloid membrane, Anat., the thin transparent membrane inclosing the vitreous humor of the eye:—n. the hyaloid membrane.

hy-brid (hī'brĭd), n. [<Lat. hybrida, offspring of tame sow and wild boar], 1, Biol., an animal or plant derived from the crossing of two distinct varieties or species; an individual of mixed parentage; 2, anything formed of heterogeneous elements; specifically, a word whose elements are from different languages, as cablegram:—adj. 1, produced from two classes or species; crossbred; 2, composed of incongruous elements, as a word.—n. hy-brid'i-ty.

hy-brid-ism (hī'brĭd-ĭzm), n. 1, the state of being produced by the interbreeding or crossing of two species; 2, interbreeding; crossing.

hy-brid-ize (hī'brĭd-īz), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -ized (-īzd), p.pr. -izing], 1, to subject (a species, race, etc.) to crossbreeding; interbreed; 2, to cross-fertilize:—v.i. 1, to produce hybrids; 2, to be capable of cross-fertilization.—n. hy'brid-i-za'tion.

Hy-dra (hī'drə), n. [pl. -dras (-drəz); -dræ (-drē)], [Gk., = water snake], Gk. Myth., a huge sea serpent with nine heads, each of which when cut off was replaced by two unless the wound was immediately cauterized: finally slain by Hercules; Astron., a large southern constellation, supposed to represent this monster: hydra, any evil with many sources or causes, or one which, when grappled with, appears to become greater; any evil hard to overcome: Zoöl., any of a genus (Hydra) of very small fresh-water coelenterate polyps, reproducing by buds and by eggs and sperm, the body a simple cylindrical sac having at one end a mouth surrounded by six to ten tentacles, and at the other end a basal disk by which the animal may attach itself (see Cœlenterata, illus., figures 1 and 2).

hy-dran-ge-a (hī-drān'jē-ə), n. [<Gk. hudōr, water + aggos, vessel], Bot., 1, any of a large genus (Hydrangea) of shrubs or small trees of the saxifrage family, with large showy clusters of flowers of many delicate colors; also, its blossom.

hy-drant (hī′drănt), n. [< Gk. hudōr, water], a standpipe with a valve and spout through which water may be drawn from a water main; a fire plug or similar apparatus.

hy-dranth (hī′drănth), n. [< Gk. hudōr, water + anthos, flower], Zoöl., one of the feeding branches, or polyps, of a hydroid colony, resembling a hydra in structure but having many more tentacles (see hydroid; see Cœlenterata, illus., figure 4).

hy-drate (hī′drāt), n. [< Gk. hudōr, water], Chem., a compound containing water:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -drated, p.pr. -drating], Chem., 1, to combine or impregnate with water; 2, to convert into a hydrate:—v.i. to combine with water.—n. hy-dra′tion.

hy-dri-od-ic (hī″drĭ-ŏd′ĭk), adj. [hydr(ogen) + iod(ine)], Chem., produced by the combination of hydrogen and iodine: hydriodic acid, a pungent, colorless gas, soluble in water, forming salts known as iodides.

hy-dro-air-plane (hī″drō-âr′plān″), n. an airplane so constructed that it can rise from, alight upon, or travel upon, the surface of water (see aviation, illus.): distinguished from hydroplane (which see). Also, hy″dro-a′ër-o-plane″.

hy-dro-bro-mic (hī″drō-brō′mĭk), adj. [hydro(gen) + brom(ine)], Chem., produced by the combination of hydrogen and bromine: hydrobromic acid, a suffocating, colorless gas, very soluble in water, forming salts known as bromides.

hy-dro-car-bon (hī″drō-kär′bŏn), n. [hydro(gen) + carbon], Chem., a compound HYDRAULIC DEVICES.—1, undershot wheel; 2, breast wheel; 3, overshot wheel; 4A, vertical section, 4B, horizontal section, of low-speed turbine (a, central section with fixed vanes; b, rotating section); 5, high-speed turbine; 6, hydraulic press (when small plunger a is forced down, ram b is forced up); 7, hydraulic crane; 8, detail of hydraulic cylinder which operates crane (valve V in position 1, or straddling port P, controls flow of water to raise load by means of ram r and cable C, or to hold it stationary; valve in position 2 opens outlet O for water and allows load to descend); 9A, side view, 9B, end view, of hydraulic lift canal lock (a, b, tanks, large enough to float a canal boat, mounted on hydraulic rams, c; as a decends, b rises); 10, passenger elevator (a, cage; b, ram; c, cylinder, beneath building; d, hydraulic balance, compensating for weight of car).

hy-drau-lic (hī-drô′lĭk), adj. [< Gk. hudōr, water + aulos, pipe], Phys., 1, of or pertaining to the science dealing with water or other liquids in motion; 2, operated by water power; as, a hydraulic lift; 3, hardening when submerged in water; as, hydraulic cement or lime: hydraulic mining, a process involving washing ore from its bed by a strong jet of water: hydraulic press, a powerful piece of machinery for compressing or lifting, in which a large plunger is moved by water forced into its cylinder by a small pump: also called hydrostatic press: hydraulic ram, a pumping device in which a column of water, running by gravity through a straight pipe, attains such speed that when the end of the pipe is suddenly closed, some of the water is forced through a valve and up to a higher level:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -licked (-lĭkt), p.pr. -licking], to excavate by means of, or subject to the action of, strong jets or streams of water.—adv. hy-drau′li-cal-ly.

hy-drau-lics (hī-drô′lĭks), n.pl. used as sing. Phys., the science that deals with the action of water or other liquids in motion.

hy-dric (hī′drĭk), adj. [< hydr(ogen) + -ic], Chem., pertaining to, or combined with, hydrogen.

hy-dride (hī′drīd; hī′drĭd), n. Chem., 1, formerly, a hydroxide; 2, a compound of hydrogen with an element or radical. Also, hy′drid.

of carbon and hydrogen, one of a large and important group of compounds including the paraffins, olefines, benzenes, anthracenes, etc.: Dietetics, a fat: distinguished from carbohydrate, a sugar, starch, or the like.

hy-dro-ceph-a-lus (hī″drō-sĕf′a-lŭs), n. [< Gk. hudōr, water + kephalē, head], Pathol., an excess of fluid in the brain, often causing an enlarged head and mental weakness; cerebral dropsy.—adj. hy″dro-ceph′a-lous.—adj. hy″dro-ce-phal′ic.

hy-dro-chlo-ric (hī″drō-klō′rĭk), adj. [hydro(gen) + chlor(ine)], Chem., pertaining to, or composed of, hydrogen and chlorine: hydrochloric acid, 1, a colorless, suffocating gas, soluble in water, the salts of which are called chlorides, or muriates; 2, muriatic acid, a solution of this gaseous acid in water.

hy-dro-cy-an-ic (hī″drō-sī-ăn′ĭk), adj. [hydro(gen) + cyan(ogen)], Chem., pertaining to, or composed of, hydrogen in combination with cyanogen: hydrocyanic acid, a colorless liquid, one of the most violent poisons known: also called prussic acid, the salts being called prussiates or cyanides.

hy-dro-dy-nam-ic (hī″drō-dī-năm′ĭk), adj. [hydro- (< Gk. hudōr, water) + dynamic], Phys., pertaining to, or derived from, the pressure of water or other fluid; pertaining to water power or to hydrodynamics (which see).

hy-dro-dy-nam-ics (hī″drō-dī-năm′ĭks), n.pl. used as sing. Phys., the science that deals with the action and motion of fluids.

hy-dro-e-lec-tric (hī″drō-ē-lĕk′trĭk), adj. [hydro- (< Gk. hudōr, water) + electric], pertaining to electric energy generated by water power or by the friction of steam.

hy-dro-flu-or-ic (hī″drō-flōō-ŏr′ĭk), adj. [hydro- (gen) + fluor(ine)], Chem., pertaining to, or composed of, hydrogen combined with fluorine: hydrofluoric acid, a colorless, volatile, irritant, very corrosive liquid destructive of most organic matter: used chiefly in etching glass.

hy-dro-gen (hī′drō-jĕn), n. [< Gk. hudōr, water + -genēs, producing], Chem., a colorless, tasteless, odorless, gaseous element [symbol H], the lightest substance known: a constituent of all acids, of water, and of most organic compounds; that element which in combination with oxygen produces water [H_2O].—adj. hy-drog′e-nous (hī-drŏj′ē-nŭs).

hy-dro-gen-ize (hī′drō-jĕn-īz), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -ized (-īzd), p.pr. -izing], Chem., 1, to combine with hydrogen; 2, to effect chemical action in by means of hydrogen: opposite of oxidize.

hy-dro-gen per-ox-ide Chem., a viscid, colorless liquid used in dilute solution as a disinfectant, for bleaching hair, and for other purposes: also called dioxide.

hy-drog-ra-phy (hī-drŏg′rə-fĭ), n. [< Gk. hudōr, water + graphein, to write], the art of describing and mapping the surface waters of the earth, as oceans, lakes, rivers, etc., with reference to their depth, tides, coast lines, etc.—adj. hy″dro-graph′ic.—n. hy-drog′ra-pher.

hy-droid (hī′droid), adj. [see hydra], Zoöl., resembling a hydra (which see):—n. Zoöl., any of many hydrozoans, cœlenterates in the form of a hydra or of a much-branched, hydralike colony: the latter consisting of a central stem, in some forms bearing feeding bodies, or hydranths, at the tips of the branches, in other forms bearing hydranths and, in addition, reproductive branches from which are budded off small hydromedusæ, or jellyfishes: from the resemblance to plants, also called zoöphyte (see Cœlenterata, illus., figure 4).

hy-drol-o-gy (hī-drŏl′ō-jĭ), n. [< Gk. hudōr, water + -logia, a study], that branch of physical geography which treats of the water of the earth, with special reference to its properties, phenomena, and distribution.

hy-drol-y-sis (hī-drŏl′ĭ-sĭs), n. [< Gk. hudōr, water + luein, to break up], Chem., a chemical reaction produced by decomposition of a compound, its elements taking up those of water.—v.t. hy′dro-lyze.

hy-dro-lyte (hī′drō-līt), n. any substance affected by hydrolysis.

hy-dro-me-chan-ics (hī″drō-mē-kăn′-ĭks), n. pl. used as sing. [hydro- (< Gk. hudōr, water) + mechanics], Phys., the science which deals with fluids in action; hydrodynamics.

hy-dro-me-du-sa [hydro- (< Gk. hudōr, water) + medusa], Zoöl., a medusa, or jellyfish, which buds off from a hydroid colony (see hydroid; see also Cœlenterata, illus., 3 and 4).

hy-dro-met-al-lur-gy (hī″drō-mĕt′ăl-ûr″jĭ), n. [hydro- (< Gk. hudōr, water) + metallurgy], the method or practice of working ores by wet processes.

hy-drom-e-ter (hī-drŏm′ē-tĕr), n. [< Gk. hudōr, water + metron, a measure], Phys., an apparatus for determining specific gravity, consisting of a closed, graduated tube, loaded so as to float upright in a liquid (see illus. above).—adj. hy″dro-met′ric.—n. hy-drom′e-try.

STORAGE BATTERY HYDROMETER

A, float or true hydrometer; B, reading on gauge; C, rubber bulb; D, glass tube which contains the hydrometer.

hy-dro-path-ic (hī″drō-păth′ĭk), adj. [see hydropathy], Med., pertaining to hydropathy (which see).

hy-drop-a-thy (hī-drŏp′ə-thĭ), n. [< Gk. hudōr, water + -patheia, suffering], Med., the water cure: the treatment of disease by frequent and copious use of water.—n. hy-drop′a-thist.

hy-dro-pho-bi-a (hī″drō-fō′bĭ-ə), n. [< Gk. hudōr, water + phobos, fear], Pathol., rabies; an infectious disease of carnivorous animals, especially the dog and the wolf, accompanied by convulsions, inability to swallow, difficulty in breathing, and abnormal dread of water.—adj. hy″dro-pho′bic (-fō′bĭk; -fŏb′ĭk).

hy-dro-phone (hī′drō-fōn), n. [< Gk. hudōr, water + phonē, a sound], an instrument for the analysis of sound transmitted through water, with reference to direction and distance.

hy-dro-phyte (hī′drō-fīt), n. [< Gk. hudōr, water + phuton, a plant], Bot., any plant which thrives only in water or in very wet soils, as the water lilies: distinguished from mesophyte and xerophyte.

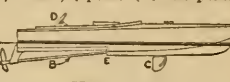
hy-dro-plane (hī′drō-plān), n. [hydro- (< Gk. hudōr, water) + plane (< Lat. planus, flat)], 1, a motor boat, especially one with a nearly flat bottom ascending with one or more steps toward the stern, the bow of which rises partly out of the water when driven at high speed; 2, erroneously a hydro-airplane.



HYDROPLANE

A, propeller; B, propeller shaft; C, rudder; D, steering wheel; E, step; F-F, water line.

hy-dro-sol (hī′drō-sŏl; -sōl), n. [hydro(gen) + sol(ution)], water containing colloidal particles in suspension: also called colloidal solution.

hy-dro-sphere (hī′drō-sfēr), n. [Gk. hudōr, water + sphaira, sphere], 1, that part of the earth's surface consisting of water: distinguished from lithosphere and atmosphere; 2, the moisture in the air surrounding the earth.

hy-dro-stat (hī′drō-stăt), n. [< Gk. hudōr, water + statos, standing], Mech., 1, an apparatus for the prevention of boiler explosions; 2, an electrical contrivance for indicating or controlling the height of water in a reservoir or other receptacle.

hy-dro-stat-ic (hī″drō-stăt′ĭk), adj. Phys., pertaining to the pressure and equilibrium of fluids: hydrostatic press, a powerful machine for compressing or lifting, in which a liquid from a small pump effects slow motion of the plunger of a larger cylinder; a hydraulic press.

hy-dro-stat-ics (hī″drō-stăt′ĭks), n. Phys., that branch of physics treating of the pressure and equilibrium of liquids at rest.

hy-dro-ther-a-peu-tics (hī″drō-thĕr″ə-pū′tĭks), n. pl. used as sing. [< Gk. hudōr, water + therapeucin, to cure], Med., a method of treating disease by baths, wet packs, mineral waters, etc.—adj. hy″dro-ther″a-peu′tic.

hy-dro-ther-a-py (hī″drō-thĕr′ə-pĭ), n. Med., the water cure; hydropathy.

hy-dro-ther-mal (hī″drō-thûr′măl), adj. [< Gk. hudōr, water + thermos, heat], pertaining to hot water and its action: Geol., pertaining to, or resulting from, the action of heated water in the dissolution, transportation, and redepositing of mineral matter and ores.

hy-drous (hī′drŭs), adj. [< Gk. hudōr, water], watery: Chem., 1, containing water in combination; 2, containing hydrogen.

hy-drox-ide (hī-drŏk′sīd; -sĭd), n. [< hydro(gen) + oxide], Chem., a compound containing the hydroxyl radical [OH]. Also, hy-drox′id.

hy-drox-yl (hī-drŏk′sĭl), n. [hydro(gen) + ox(ygen) + (eth)yl], Chem., a compound monad radical [OH], existing in bases, oxygen acids, and many organic compounds, such as alcohols.

hy-dro-zo-an (hī″drō-zō′ăn), n. [< Gk. hudōr, water + zō(i)on, animal], Zoöl., any of a class (Hydrozoa) of chiefly marine cœlenterates, including the fresh-water hydras, the marine hydroids, the staghorn corals, or millepores, most of the smaller jellyfishes, etc., having a saclike body without internal partitious, but appearing in a great variety of forms: some hydroid, in the form of a simple, cylindrical, unbranched hydra, or resembling a much-branched hydra and called a hydroid colony; some medusoid, or in the form of a jellyfish; some exhibiting alternation of generations, being hydroid in the asexual stage of their life history and medusoid in the sexual stage (see Cœlenterata, illus., figures 1–5):—adj. resembling, or pertaining to, a hydrozoan.

hy-e-na (hī-ē′nə), n. [< Gk. huaina, hyena, fem. of hus, hog], any of a family (Hyænidæ) of carnivorous mammals, in appearance and habits intermediate between the cat and the dog, native to Africa and Asia (see Mammalia, illus.). Also, hy-æ′na.

Hy-ge-ia (hī-jē′yə), n. [Gk. = health], 1, Gk. Myth., the daughter of Æsculapius, and goddess of health; hence, 2, health: Astron., a planetoid, whose orbit lies between those of Mars and Jupiter. Also, Hy-ge′a (-jē′ə); Hy-gi′a (-jī′ə).—adj. Hy-ge′ian.

hy-ge-ian (hī-jē′yăn), adj. pertaining to health and its preservation.

hy-gi-ene (hī′jĭ-ēn; hī′jēn), n. [< Gk. hugieinē (tekhnē), (art) of health], Med., the science which treats of the preservation of health and the prevention of disease.—n. hy′gi-en-ist.

hy-gi-en-ic (hī″jĭ-ĕn′ĭk), adj. 1, pertaining to health or the science of health; 2, sanitary.

hy-grom-e-ter (hī-grŏm′ē-tēr), n. [< Gk. hugros, wet + metron, a measure], Phys., an instrument for measuring atmospheric moisture.—n. hy-grom′e-try.—adj. hy″gro-met′ric.

hy-gro-scope (hī′grō-skōp), n. [< Gk. hugros, wet + skopein, to see], an instrument showing variations in atmospheric moisture.

hy-gro-scop-ic (hī″grō-skŏp′ĭk), adj. 1, having the property of absorbing and condensing moisture from the atmosphere; 2, pertaining to the hygroscope: Bot., sensitive to moisture.

Hyk-sos (hĭk′sōs; -sŏs), n.pl. [< Egypt. Hik-shasu, chiefs of the Bedouins], the so-called Shepherd Kings, a dynasty of foreign usurpers who ruled Egypt at Memphis about 1800 B. C.

Hy-las (hī′lăs), n. [< Gk.], Gk. Myth., a beautiful Greek boy, beloved by Hercules, who, while getting water, was drawn down into the spring by amorous nymphs.

hy-men (hī′mĕn), n. [< Gk. humēn, membrane], Anat., the maidenhead, a thin membrane partly closing the external orifice of the vagina, lack or rupture of which is popularly but erroneously considered proof of loss of virginity.

Hy-men (hī′mĕn), n. [< Gk.], Class. Myth., the Grecian god of marriage: hymen, 1, the state of marriage; 2, a wedding song.

hy-me-ne-al (hī″mē-nē′ăl), adj. of or pertaining to marriage:—n. a marriage song.

Hy-men-op-ter-a (hī″mĕn-ŏp′tĕr-ă), n.pl. [< Gk. humēn, membrane + pteron, wing], Zoöl., a large, highly specialized order of insects having four membranous wings and generally worm-like larvæ, including the bees, wasps, and ants.—adj. hy″men-op′ter-ous.—adj. and n. hy″men-op′ter-an.

Hy-mir (hü′mĕr), n. [O.N.], Norse Myth., a great giant who personified the winter sea, and whose cattle were the icebergs. Also, Hy′mer.

hymn (hĭm), n. [< Gk. humnos, a song of praise], 1, a sacred song expressing praise or adoration, as of God; 2, a sacred lyric, patriotic ode, or the like:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. hymned (hĭmd), p.pr. hymning (hĭm′ĭng; hĭm′nĭng)], to sing praises to; praise:—v.i. to sing in praise or adoration.—n. hym′nist (hĭm′nĭst).

hym-nal (hĭm′năl), n. a collection of sacred songs for public worship; a hymn book.

hym-no-dy (hĭm′nō-dĭ), n. [pl. -dies (-dĭz)], [< Gk. humnos, hymn + ō(i)dē, song], 1, the art of singing hymns; 2, the composition or study of hymns; 3, hymns collectively.—n. hym′no-dist.

hym-nol-o-gy (hĭm-nŏl′ō-jĭ), n. [< Gk. humnos, hymn + -logia, a study], 1, the study of sacred songs, their origin, composition, use, etc.; 2, hymns collectively.—n. hym-nol′o-gist.

hy-oid (hī′oid), adj. [< Gk. huoeidēs], U-shaped: hyoid bone, Anat., the U-shaped bone at the base of the tongue and above the larynx, to which are attached some of the muscles used in swallowing.

hyp (hĭp), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. hypped (hĭpt), p.pr. hypping], [< hyp(ochondria)], Colloq., 1, to affect with melancholy or depression of spirits; 2, to make unduly enthusiastic:—n. melancholy: usually pl.—p.adj. hypped.—adj. hyp′pish.

hyp- abbr. 1, hyperbole; 2, hypotenuse; 3, hypothesis; hypothetical.

Hy-pa-ti-a (hī-pā′shĭ-ă), n. [< Gk.], a beautiful Greek woman of Alexandria, philosopher and teacher, killed by a mob in A.D. 415; the heroine of "Hypatia," a novel by Charles Kingsley.

hy-per- prefix, [< Gk. huper, over, above, exceeding], 1, over; beyond; 2, abnormally great, excessive, etc.; as, *hyper*acidity: Chem., indicating the highest in a series of oxygen compounds: generally abbreviated to per-: opposite of hypo-.

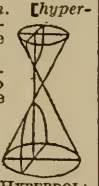
hy-per-a-cid-i-ty (hī″pĕr-ă-sĭd′ĭ-tĭ), n. [hyper- + acidity], a condition marked by too much acid, as in the secretions of the stomach or mouth.



HYPERBOLA

hy-per-bo-la (hī-pûr′bō-lă), n. [< Gk. huper, above + ballein, to throw], Geom., a plane curve, such that the difference of the distances from any point thereon to two fixed points, or foci, is a constant; the curve formed by the intersection of a plane with two equal cones placed vertex to vertex, their axes being a straight line.

hy-per-bo-le (hī-pûr′bō-lē), n. Rhet., a figure of speech in which the statement clearly expresses more than the truth; poetic exaggeration.

hy-per-bol-ic (hī″pĕr-bŏl′ĭk), adj. Rhet., pertaining to, or containing, overstatements or untruths; exaggerated; Math., belonging to, or of the nature of, a hyperbola: hyperbolic logarithm, a Napierian logarithm. Also, hy″per-bol′i-cal.

hy-per-bo-re-an (hī″pĕr-bō″rē-ăn), adj. [< Gk. huper, above + Boreas, north wind], 1, northern; arctic; 2, very cold; frigid; Hyperborean, Gk. Myth., designating a fabled race of people living beyond the north wind, in a land of sunshine and eternal bliss:—n. a person living in the far north, as an Eskimo: Hyperborean, Gk. Myth., a member of the Hyperborean race.

hy-per-crit-ic (hī″pĕr-krĭt′ĭk), n. [< Gk. huper, exceeding + kritikos, critical], one who finds fault to excess; a censorious critic.

hy-per-crit-i-cal (hī″pĕr-krĭt′ĭ-kăl), adj. 1, severe in comment or judgment; too quick to find fault; captious; 2, fastidious; excessively nice or exact.—adv. hy″per-crit′i-cal-ly.

Hy-pe-ri-on (hī-pē′rĭ-ŏn; hī″pĕr-ī′ŏn), n. [< Gk.], Gk. Myth., 1, a Titan, father of Helios, or the sun, Selene, or the moon, and Eos, or the dawn; 2, also, in Homer, Helios himself, the sun god: identified in later mythology with Apollo.

hy-per-me-tro-pi-a (hī″pĕr-mē-trō′pĭ-ă), n. [< Gk. huper, over + metron, a measure + ōps, eye], an abnormal condition of the eye, in which rays from a distant object converge to a focus behind the retina; farsightedness: opposite of myopia.—adj. hy″per-me-trop′ic (-trŏp′ĭk).

Hy-perm-nes-tra (hī″pĕrm-nĕs′trȧ), n. [< Gk.], Gk. Myth., the only one of the Danaïdes, the 50 daughters of King Danaüs, who, disobeying her father, did not murder her husband.

hy-per-pi-e-si-a (hī″pĕr-pī-ē′zhĭ-ă; -sĭ-ă), n. [< Gk. huper, over + piesis, pressure], high blood pressure. Also, hy″per-pi-e′sis.

hy-per-tro-phy (hī-pûr′trō-fĭ), n. [< Gk. huper, over + -trophia, nourishment], Pathol. and Biol., an excessive development or enlargement of any organ or part of the body, as from overexercise, overnutrition, etc: opposite of atrophy:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -phied (-fĭd), p.pr. -phying], to become excessively developed or enlarged, as an organ.

hy-phen (hī′fĕn), n. [< Gk. huphen, together < hupo, under + hen, one], a mark [-] to join the parts of compound words or to separate syllables:—v.t. to join with, or separate by, such a mark.

hy-phen-ate (hī′fĕn-āt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -ated, p.pr. -ating], to insert a hyphen between the parts or syllables of (a word).

Hyp-nos (hĭp′nŏs), n. [< Gk. Hupnos: see hypnosis], Gk. Myth., the god of sleep: identified with the Roman Somnus. Also, Hyp′nus (-nŭs).

hyp-no-sis (hĭp-nō′sĭs), n. 1, a state resembling that of sleep, often artificially induced, in which the mind readily responds to external suggestion; a hypnotic state; 2, artificial sleep; a hypnotic trance: Med., 1, the mental condition of a person in a hypnotic state; 2, the artificial inducement of hypnosis, or a hypnotic sleep.

hyp-not-ic (hĭp-nŏt′ĭk), adj. pertaining to, or producing, a state of artificial sleep, or hypnosis:—n. 1, a person who can be hypnotized; 2, a person in a state of hypnosis; 3, anything that produces sleep, as a drug.—adv. hyp-not′i-cal-ly.

hyp-no-tism (hĭp′nō-tĭzm), n. Med., a method of inducing artificially a state resembling sleep, in which the mind readily responds to external suggestion: formerly called mesmerism, which see.—n. hyp′no-tist.

hyp-no-tize (hĭp′nō-tīz), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -tized (-tīzd), p.pr. -tizing], Med., to put into a state of hypnosis, or artificial sleep, in which the mind readily responds to external suggestion or direction: Slang, to dazzle; to fascinate, as by oratory.—n. hyp′no-tiz″er.—adj. hyp′no-tiz″a-ble.

hy-po (hī′pō), n. [abbr. of hyposulphite], sodium hyposulphite, or, more properly, sodium thiosulphate, a white, coarsely crystalline material used in photography as a fixing agent: also called hyposulphite.

hy-po- prefix, [< Gk. hupo, under], under; below; less than: Physiol. and Pathol., used to signify deficiency in functions of growth or development; Chem., indicating a compound lower in a series than another: opposite of hyper-.

hy-o-chon-dri-a (hīp″ō-kŏn′drĭ-ă; hī″pō-), n. [< Gk. (ta) hypokhondria, the soft parts of the body under the cartilage of the ribs < hupo, below + khondros, cartilage: because depression was supposed to center in upper part of abdomen], 1, Pathol., a mental disorder attended with extreme melancholy and with a morbid anxiety respecting one's state of health; 2, hence, low spirits; the blues: Anat., plural of hypochondrium, which see.

hyp-o-chon-dri-ac (hĭp″ō-kŏn′drĭ-ăk; hī″pō-), n. Pathol., one who is affected with hypochondria, or melancholy:—adj. pertaining to, or affected with, melancholy: hypochondriac region, the region of either hypochondrium (which see).

hyp-o-chon-dri-a-sis (hĭp″ō-kŏn-drī′ə-sĭs; hī″pō-), n. Pathol., a condition of extreme melancholy; hypochondria (which see).

hyp-o-chon-dri-um (hĭp″ō-kŏn′drĭ-ŭm; hī″pō-), n. (pl. -dria (-drĭ-ə)), [Lat.], the soft region of either side of the abdomen, immediately below the short ribs.

hy-po-cot-yl (hī″pō-kŏt′ĭl; hĭp″ō-), n. [hypo- (< Gk. hupo, under) + cotyl(edon)], Bot., in a germinating seed plant, that part of the axis, or stem, below the cotyledons (see germination, illus.).

hy-poc-ri-sy (hĭ-pŏk′rĭ-sĭ), n. [pl. -sies (-sĭz)], [< O.F. ypocrisie < Eccl. Lat. < Gk. hupokrisis, the acting of a part], a pretending to be what one is not; especially, the assumption of an appearance of virtue which one does not possess.
Syn. affectation, cant, sham, dissimulation.

hyp-o-crite (hĭp′ō-krĭt), n. [< O.F. ypocrite < Gk. hupokritēs, actor], 1, one who practices deception to gain his own ends; 2, a pharisee.
Syn. dissembler, impostor, cheat, liar, pretender.

hyp-o-crit-i-cal (hĭp″ō-krĭt′ĭ-kăl), adj. pertaining to deceit or to a deceiver; deceitful; dissembling; feigning.—adv. hyp″o-crit′i-cal-ly.

hy-po-cy-cloid (hī″pō-sī′kloid; hĭp′ō-), n. [< Gk. hupo, under + kuklos, circle + eidos, shape], Geom., the path traced by a point on the circumference of a circle which rolls without slipping upon the inside of a fixed circle (see epicycloid, illus.).

hy-po-der-mic (hī″pō-dûr′mĭk; hĭp″ō-), adj. [< Gk. hupo, under + derma, skin], pertaining to the tissues under the skin; as, a hypodermic injection: hypodermic syringe, a small syringe fitted with a hollow needle as nozzle, for making hypodermic injections:—n. a hypodermic injection.

HYPODERMIC SYRINGE

hy-po-gas-tric (hī″pō-găs′trĭk; hĭp″ō-), adj. [< Gk. hupo, under + gastēr, belly], Anat., pertaining to the lower middle part of the abdomen.

hy-pog-y-nous (hī-pŏj′ĭ-nŭs; hī-), adj. [< Gk. hupo, under + gunē, female], Bot., growing attached below the ovary, or apparently so, as certain stamens and pistils: opposite of epigynous.

hy-po-phos-phite (hī″pō-fŏs′fīt; hĭp″ō-), n. [see hypophosphorous], Chem., a salt of hypophosphorous acid; Med., such a salt used as a tonic in nervous debility, anæmia, etc.

hy-po-phos-phor-ous (hī″pō-fŏs′fôr-ŭs; hĭp″ō-), adj. [< Gk. hupo, under + phōsphoros < phōs, light + pherein, to bring], Chem., designating a monobasic acid of phosphorus.

hy-pos-ta-sis (hī-pŏs′tə-sĭs; hī-), n. [pl. -tases (-sēz)], [< Gk. hupostasis, substance < hupo, under + stasis, standing], Philos., the essence, or underlying substance, as distinct from attributes; Theol., the personality of Christ, or of any of the parts of the Trinity.—adj. hy″po-stat′ic.

hyp-o-style (hĭp′ō-stīl; hī′pō-), adj. [< Gk. hupostulos < hupo, under + stulos, pillar], Arch., having a roof supported by rows of columns.

hy-po-sul-phite (hī″pō-sŭl′fīt; hĭp″ō-), n. [hypo- (< Gk. hupo, under) + sulph(ur)], Chem., 1, a salt of hyposulphurous acid; 2, commonly but incorrectly, sodium thiosulphate, or hypo, a white, coarsely crystalline compound, used in photography as a fixing agent, and in bleaching, tanning, etc.

hy-po-sul-phur-ous (hī″pō-sŭl′fûr-ŭs; -sŭl-fū′rŭs), adj. designating, or pertaining to, certain acids containing a smaller proportion of oxygen than sulphurous acid.

hy-pot-e-nuse (hī-pŏt′ē-nūs; hī-), n. [< Gk. hupo, under + teinein, to stretch], Geom., that side of a right-angled triangle which is opposite to the right angle. Also, hy-poth′e-nuse (-pŏth′-).

HYPOTENUSE (a)

hy-poth-e-cate (hī-pŏth′ē-kāt; hĭ-), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -cated, p.pr. -cating], [< Gk. hupo, under + tithenai, to place], Law, to pledge (property) as security for a debt; mortgage.—n. hy-poth″e-ca′tion.—n. hy-poth′e-ca″tor.

hy-poth-e-sis (hī-pŏth′ē-sĭs; hĭ-), n. [pl. -ses (-sēz)], [< Gk. hupothesis, foundation < hupo, under + tithenai, to place], a proposition, principle, or theory, assumed or taken for granted as a basis for reasoning, argument, or investigation, or to explain certain phenomena; supposition; conjecture.

hy-po-thet-ic (hī″pō-thĕt′ĭk; hĭp″ō-), adj. based on supposition; conjectural. Also, hy″po-thet′i-cal.—adv. hy″po-thet′i-cal-ly.

hy-rax (hī′răks), n. [< Gk. hurax, a mouse], Zoöl., any of a genus (Hyrax) of small Old World mammals resembling the rodents in body form, but in certain other respects more closely akin to the ungulates, or hoofed animals: also called cony, daman, and rock rabbit.

HYRAX

hy-son (hī′sŭn), n. [< Chin. hsi-ch'un, bright spring], a variety of green tea.

hys-sop (hĭs′ŭp), n. [< Gk. hussōpos < Heb. ēzōb, aromatic plant], Bot., 1, a fragrant medicinal herb of the mint family, growing about two feet high and bearing blue flowers; 2, the flowers of this plant; Bib., an unidentified plant, the twigs of which were used for sprinkling in the Mosaic rites of purification, sacrifice, etc. (Ps. 51:7; John 19:29).

hys-ter-e-sis (hĭs″tĕr-ē′sĭs), n. [< Gk. husterein, to be behind time], Phys., 1, a lag, or retardation of the effect, of a varying force behind the variations of the force; 2, especially, the lag in the changes of magnetization of a ferromagnetic substance behind the variations of the magnetizing field.—adj. hys″ter-et′ic (hĭs″tĕr-ĕt′ĭk).

hys-te-ri-a (hĭs-tē′rĭ-ə), n. [< Gk. hustera, the womb; because formerly supposed due to disturbance of womb], a nervous affection, especially of women, characterized chiefly by excessive emotional excitement with lack of control, as in fits of alternate laughing and weeping; Pathol., a mental disorder characterized by peculiar types of behavior, as anæsthesia or convulsions, which do not appear to be based upon any organic disease.

hys-ter-i-cal (hĭs-tĕr′ĭ-kăl), adj. 1, pertaining to, or affected by, hysteria; 2, violently emotional; uncontrolled.—adv. hys-ter′i-cal-ly.

hys-ter-ics (hĭs-tĕr′ĭks), n.pl. used as sing. 1, a fit of nervous, uncontrollable laughing and crying; 2, any uncontrollable emotional outbreak.

I

1I, i (ī), n. [pl. I's; i's (īz)], the ninth letter of the English alphabet, or its sound (for certain uses, see alphabet, NOTE); as a Roman numeral, 1: I, Chem., the symbol [I] for the element iodine: i, Alg., the symbol commonly used for the imaginary quantity, $\sqrt{-1}$.

2I (ī), personal pron. [possessive my or mine, objective me; pl., nominative we, possessive our or ours, objective us], [< A.S. ic, I < Aryan source], the pronoun of the first person; the pronoun, used as subject, by which a speaker or writer denotes himself.

I. abbr. 1, Idaho; 2, [Lat. Imperator], Emperor:—Ia., official abbreviation for the state of Iowa:—I. A., 1, Incorporated Accountant; 2, Indian Army.

I-a-go (ē-ä′gō), n. [It.], in Shakespeare's "Othello," a friend whose treachery caused Othello, in a jealous rage, to murder his wife, Desdemona.

i-am-bic (ī-ăm′bĭk), adj. [see iambus], Pros., 1, designating, or pertaining to, a metrical foot consisting of a short or an unaccented syllable followed by a long or an accented one, represented by ⏑ – (see prosody, NOTE):—n. Pros., 1, an iambic metrical foot; an iambus; 2, a line or stanza composed in such meter; 3, a type of poetry, chiefly satirical or invective; also, a lampoon. Also, n. i′amb.

i-am-bus (ī-ăm′bŭs), n. [pl. -bi (-bī); -buses (-bŭsĕz; -ĭz)], [Lat. < Gk. iambos, iambus; lampoon < iaptein, to assail], Pros., a metrical foot [marked ⏑ –] consisting of a short or an unaccented syllable followed by a long or an accented one; an iambic.

-i-an suffix, a variant of -an with euphonic -i-: ·i-a-na, a similar variant of -ana.

ib. abbr. [Lat. ibidem], in the same place: used to avoid repeating specific references (also, ibid.).

I-be-ri-an (ī-bē′rĭ-ən), adj. [< Lat. Iberia < Gk. Ibēres, Spaniards], 1, of or pertaining to ancient Iberia in Asia, corresponding to modern Transcaucasian Georgia; 2, of or pertaining to the Spanish-Portuguese peninsula, anciently called Iberia:—n. 1, a native or inhabitant of ancient Iberia in Asia; 2, a member of the ancient race existing in the Iberian, or Spanish-Portuguese, peninsula; also, their language.

i-bex (ī'bĕks), n. [pl. ibexes (ī'bĕk-sĕz; -sĭz); ibices (ib'ĭ-sēz; ī'bī-)], [Lat = chamois], any of several species of wild goat, especially of the Alps and the Apennines, having large, backward-curving horns.

i-bi-dem (ĭ-bī'dĕm), adv. [Lat. = in the same place], in the same place, as in a book, chapter, passage, etc.—abbr. ib.; ibid.

i-bis (ī'bĭs), n. [Lat. < Gk. < Egypt.], any of several large, storklike, carnivorous wading birds (subfamily Ibidinæ), related to the herons, having a long, curved beak: widely distributed in warm regions.

-i-ble adj. suffix, [< Lat. -ibilis, that can be], be; capable of being; as, reduc*ible.* See -a-ble.

Ib-sen-ism (ib'sĕn-ĭzm), n. [< proper name], the dramatic style and aims of Henrik Ibsen (1828–1906), a Norwegian dramatist.

I. C. abbr. [< Lat. Jesus Christus < Gk. Iēsous khristos, Jesus anointed], Jesus Christ.

-ic adj. suffix, [< Lat. -icus and Gk. -ikos], 1, made up of; as, trochai*c;* 2, like in nature or kind; as, seraphi*c;* angeli*c;* hypnoti*c;* 3, of, pertaining to, or belonging to; as, Celti*c;* Nordi*c;* rusti*c;* Stoi*c;* tragi*c;* 4, patterning after or resembling; as, classi*c;* Byroni*c;* 5, having to do with; as, publi*c;* poeti*c;* domesti*c;* aquati*c;* economi*c: Chem.,* indicating that the element in a specified compound is in combination at its highest valence, or at a valence higher than in compounds designated by an adjective ending in -ous; as, ferri*c,* nitri*c:* —n. suffix, used: 1, in nouns derived from the substantive use of adjectives in -ic; as, magi*c;* publi*c;* 2, in nouns adopted in English from certain Greek or Latin adjectives; as, mechani*c;* logi*c;* arithmeti*c.*

-i-cal adj. suffix, [-ic+-al], forming a variation of many adjectives in -ic; as, classi*cal;* poeti*cal:* often differing in meaning from the form in -ic by being somewhat vaguer and more remote in its connection with the original root; as, a histori*c* monument is one actually associated with, or famous in, history; a histori*cal* romance is one based upon history.

I-ca-ri-an (ī-kā'rĭ-ăn), adj. [see Icarus], 1, pertaining to Icarus, the son of Dædalus, or to the island of Icaria in the Ægean Sea; 2, pertaining to an ideal country, Icaria, or to any of several communities patterned after the description of it by the French communist, Étienne Cabet, published in 1840.

Ic-a-rus (ĭk'ă-rŭs), n. [< Gk. Ikaros], Class. Myth., the young son of Dædalus, who, when escaping from Crete with his father, flew so high that the sun melted the wax by which his wings were attached, so that he fell into the sea and was drowned.

I. C. C. abbr. Interstate Commerce Commission (established February 4, 1887).

ice (īs), n. [< A.S. īs, ice < O.Teut. source], 1, a brittle, transparent solid: the form taken by water when frozen; 2, any substance resembling ice; as, menthol ice; 3, [pl. ices (ī'sĕz)], a frozen confection; as, water ice; 4, the coating of melted sugar, white of egg, flavoring, etc., placed on a cake; frosting; icing:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. iced (īst), p.pr. icing], 1, to change into a frozen state; freeze; 2, to supply with ice; 3, to preserve or cool by ice; 4, to cover, as cake, with frosting.

Ice. abbr. Iceland; Icelandic (also, Icel.):—I. C. E., Institute of Civil Engineers.

-ice n. suffix, [< Lat. -itia], quality or state of: added usually to Latin or French roots; as, servi*ce;* justi*ce;* avari*ce;* coward*ice.*

ice age Geol., the Pleistocene period, preceding the Recent, or present, era, during which ice covered large portions of the world (see geology, chart).

ice-berg (īs'bûrg″), n. [prob. < Du. ijs, ice + berg, hill], a huge mass of ice detached from the base of a glacier and floating in the sea.

ICEBERG of moderate size compared with ocean liner: AA, water line; AB, part above water; AC, part below water, about nine times that which is above.

ice-blink (īs'blĭngk″), n. [ice+blink], a peculiar luminosity on the horizon, in northern regions, caused by the reflection of light from distant ice.

ice boat 1, a strongly built and specially equipped steamboat for breaking a channel in a frozen river, lake, etc.; 2, a boat mounted on runners and propelled by sails over ice: used for sport (see illus. next column).

ice-bound (īs'bound″), adj. [ice+bind], 1, so shut in or surrounded by ice as to be incapable of getting out or moving forward, as a boat; 2, inaccessible because of ice, as a coast.

ice box a chest holding ice, for the preservation or cooling of food: a kind of refrigerator.

ice cream flavored cream or custard, sweetened and frozen.

iced (īst), p.adj. [see ice], 1, covered with ice or sleet; made cold with ice; as, iced tea; 2, covered with icing; frosted; as, iced cake.

ICE BOAT

ice field a vast sheet or expanse of floating ice: also called ice floe; ice float.

ice house a building in which ice is packed and stored for future use.

Ice-land-er (īs'lăn-dẽr), n. [< O.N. Island, land of ice], an inhabitant of Iceland.

Ice-lan-dic (īs-lăn'dĭk), adj. pertaining to Iceland, or to the Icelanders, or their language: —n. the language of the Icelanders, including, in its older stages, the language of the continental Scandinavians: Old Icelandic, Old Norse.—abbr. Icel.; Ice.

Ice-land moss an edible lichen growing in the northern regions.

Ice-land spar Mineral., a colorless, transparent variety of native calcium carbonate, or calcite, found at its best in Iceland: used in the manufacture of optical instruments because of its double refractive power.

ice-man (īs'măn), n. [pl. -men (-mĕn)], [ice+man], 1, one skilled in traveling on ice; 2, one who cuts, manufactures, retails, or delivers, ice.

ice pack 1, a field of broken and drifting ice, consisting of great masses packed together; 2, a bag of cracked ice: used to reduce swellings, inflammation, or fever.

ice plant a plant of southern California, Africa, and Mediterranean regions, having its leaves covered with small, glistening droplets.

ice wa-ter melted ice, or water made cold by ice placed around or in it.

Ich-a-bod (ĭk'ă-bŏd), n. [Heb. = no glory], Bib., a grandson of Eli (1 Sam. 4:21): Ichabod Crane, in Washington Irving's "Legend of Sleepy Hollow," an awkward, ridiculous schoolmaster who is frightened out of the vicinity by his rustic rival in love disguised as a headless horseman.

ich-neu-mon (ĭk-nū'mŏn), n. [< Gk. ikhneumōn, the tracker < ikhneuein, to track < ikhnos, a track, footstep], 1, an Old World mongoose, a small, brave, dexterous mammal, weasel-like in form, which feeds on mice, rats, snakes, and other small animals, the Egyptian species being specially venerated for its supposed destruction of the eggs and young of crocodiles; 2, an ichneumon fly.

ich-neu-mon fly any of a large group of insects (chiefly in family Ichneumonidæ, order Hymenoptera) which for the most part lay their eggs in or upon the larvæ of other insects.

ICHNEUMON FLY

ich-nog-ra-phy (ĭk-nŏg'rā-fĭ), n. [< Gk. ikhnos, track, trace + graphē, a writing], 1, a ground, or floor, plan; a horizontal section drawn to scale; a map; 2, the art of making or drawing such a plan.

ich-no-lite (ĭk'nō-līt), n. [< Gk. ikhnos, track + lithos, stone], the fossilized footprint of a prehistoric animal: also called ichnite.

ich-nol-o-gy (ĭk-nŏl'ŏ-jĭ), n. [< Gk. ikhnos, track + -logia, a study], Geol., the scientific study of fossil footprints.—adj. ich″no-log'i-cal.

i-chor (ī'kôr), n. [< Gk. ikhōr, fluid in the veins of the gods], 1, Class. Myth., the fluid which was supposed to flow, instead of blood, in the veins of the gods; 2, a thin, watery, acrid serum, or discharge, as from an ulcer or wound.—adj. i'chor-ous.

ich-thin (ĭk'thĭn), n. [< Gk. ikhthus (-uos), fish], the nitrogenous constituent of the eggs of fishes, closely allied to albumen.

ich-thy-ic (ĭk'thĭ-ĭk), adj. Zoöl., pertaining to, or characteristic of, fishes.

ich-thy-o-col (ĭk'thĭ-ō-kŏl), n. [< Gk. ikhthus (-uos), fish + kolla, glue], isinglass, a very pure gelatin made from the air bladders of certain fresh-water fishes. Also, ich'thy-o-col'la.

ich-thy-og-ra-phy (ĭk'thĭ-ŏg'rȧ-fĭ), n. [< Gk. ikhthus (-uos), fish + -graphia, a writing], a treatise on, or a description of, fishes.

ich-thy-ol (ĭk'thĭ-ōl; -ŏl), n. [< Gk. ikhthus, fish + Lat. oleum, oil]. Chem., a brownish, tarry liquid obtained by distillation of certain bituminous shales containing fossil fishes: valuable as an antiphlogistic and antiseptic.

ich-thy-o-lite (ĭk'thĭ-ō-līt') n. [< Gk. ikhthus (-uos), fish + lithos, stone], a fossil of a fish or of part of a fish.

ich-thy-ol-o-gy (ĭk'thĭ-ŏl'ō-jĭ), n. [< Gk. ikhthus (-uos), fish + -logia, a study], that branch of zoölogy which treats of fishes; a natural history of fishes.—n. ich'thy-ol'o-gist.

ich-thy-oph-a-gous (ĭk'thĭ-ŏf'ȧ-gŭs), adj. [< Gk. ikhthus (-uos), fish + phagein, to eat], living on fish; fish-eating.

ich-thy-o-sau-rus (ĭk'thĭ-ō-sō'rŭs), n. [pl. -ri (-rī)], [< Gk. ikhthus (-uos), fish + sauros, lizard], any of a genus (Ichthyosaurus, order Ichthyosauria) of extinct marine reptiles with long jaws and porpoiselike body (see Reptilia, illus.).

ich-thy-o-sis (ĭk'thĭ-ō'sĭs), n. [< Gk. ikhthus (-uos), fish], Med., a disease characterized by thick, dry, rough, and scaly skin; fishskin.

i-ci-cle (ī'sĭ-kl), n. [< A.S. ĩses gicel < ĩs, ice + gical, icicle], a tapering piece of ice formed when dripping water freezes.—adj. i'ci-cled.

i-ci-ly (ī'sĭ-lĭ), adv. [see ice], in a frigid and repelling manner; coldly.

i-ci-ness (ī'sĭ-nĕs), n. 1, the state of being very cold, or of abounding in ice, or of being covered with ice; 2, coldness or unresponsiveness, as of manner.

ic-ing (ĭs'ĭng), n. a coating or covering put on cake, made of sugar, white of egg, etc.; frosting.

i-con (ī'kŏn), n. [pl. icons (ī'kŏnz); icones (ī'kō-nēz)], [L.L. < Gk. eikōn, image], 1, an image; a likeness; 2, in the Greek Church, a sacred image or picture, as of the Virgin Mary or a saint. Also, ei'kon; i'kon.

i-con-o-clast (ī-kŏn'ō-klăst), n. [< L.L. < Gk. eikōn, image + klastēs, a breaker < klan, to break], 1, one hostile to the practice of image worship; 2, an image breaker; especially, one of a party of reformers in the Greek Church during the eighth and ninth centuries, or in the Netherlands during the 16th century; 3, one who attacks cherished traditions.—n. i-con'o-clasm.—adj. i-con'o-clas'tic.

i-co-sa-he-dron (ī'kō-sȧ-hē'drŏn), n. [pl. -dra (-drȧ)], [< Gk. eikosi, twenty + hedra, base, seat], Math., a solid bounded by 20 plane faces.—adj. i'co-sa-he'dral.

ICOSAHEDRON

-ics n. suffix, [see -ic], employed to form a plural noun naming: 1, a science: as, dynamics; mechanics; acoustics: treated grammatically as singular; 2, a system, or a group of practical matters or methods: as, tactics; politics; statistics; athletics: usually construed as plural.

ic-ter-ic (ĭk-tĕr'ĭk), adj. [< Gk. ikterikos < ikteros, jaundice], pertaining to, affected with, or tending to alleviate, jaundice:—n. a remedy for jaundice.

ic-ter-us (ĭk'tĕr-ŭs), n. [< Gk. ikteros, jaundice], Pathol., jaundice; Bot., a diseased condition of vegetation, as of grain, in which the plant turns abnormally yellow.—adj. ic'ter-oid.

ic-tus (ĭk'tŭs), n. [pl. ictuses (-ĕz)], [Lat. = a blow < icere (ictus), to strike], Med., a blow, stroke, or sudden attack, as a stroke of paralysis; a pulsation; Pros., the rhythmical or metrical accent placed upon a certain syllable of a word.

i-cy (ī'sĭ), adj. [comp. icier, superl. iciest], [see ice], 1, pertaining to, resembling, or covered with, ice; 2, chilling or frigid in manner; indifferent.

id. abbr. [Lat idem], the same:—Id., Idaho (also, I.; contraction for 1, I would; 2, I had:—Ida., Idaho.

-id adj. suffix, [< Lat. -idus], forming descriptive words from Latin roots: as, acid; fluid; morbid: Zoöl., [< Lat. names of families in -idæ, pl. of -ides < Gk. -idēs, son of], belonging to a (specified) biological family or class; as, arachnid:—n. suffix, [< Lat. -is, pl. -ides], used in the names of epic poems; as, Æneid: Zoöl., [< Lat. names of classes in -ida, taken as neuter pl. of -ides < Gk. -idēs, son of], a member of a (designated) class or family; as, arachnid: Chem., [< Lat. -idus], (also, -ide), used in names of compounds; as, chlorid: chiefly in the United States.

I-dæ-an (ī-dē'ăn), adj. [< Lat. Idaeus < Gk. Idaios < Idē, (Mount) Ida], Gk. Myth., pertaining to either of the sacred mountains called Ida, the one in Crete and the other in Asia Minor.

-ide (-īd; -ĭd), suffix, [< Lat. -idus: see -id], Chem., used with names of elements to form the names of compounds of these elements; as, sulphide: oxide. Also, chiefly in the United States, -id (-ĭd).

i-de-a (ī-dē'ȧ), n. [L.L. < Gk. = look, appearance, kind < idein, to see], 1, a mental picture or image; 2, a mental pattern; something conceived as perfect, without reference to its actual existence in perfection; hence, a standard of excellence; an ideal; 3, a purpose, plan, or aim to be carried out; an intention; 4, a general notion; a mental impression; 5, a vague thought; an indefinite opinion; as, I have an idea she will come; 6, a belief; an opinion or supposition: Philos., 1, according to Plato, an immaterial pattern existing in the mind, of which individual objects are imperfect copies; 2, according to Descartes, Locke, and others, an immediate object of thought; 3, according to Kant, Hegel, and others, pure reason; absolute truth beyond experience.

i-de-al (ī-dē'ăl), adj. [< Fr. < L.L. idealis, existing in idea: see idea], 1, of, pertaining to, or answering to, a conception of perfection; expressing or embodying the perfect example or type; as, the ideal character or state; 2, existing in imagination only; hence, visionary; impractical; 3, pertaining to, existing in, or expressed by, ideas; embodying an idea; 4, based on a mental image; imaginative; 5, of or pertaining to idealism; idealistic: Philos., considering ideas as the only realities:—n. 1, that which exists only as an idea; a mental conception beyond or apart from reality; 2, a mental image representing the perfect type, regarded as the standard for imitation; 3, the highest standard of excellence or beauty; also, a person or thing embodying such a standard.—adv. i-de'al-ly.

i-de-al-ism (ī-dē'ăl-ĭzm), n. 1, the tendency to see, or the faculty of seeing, things as they should be instead of as they are; 2, practical aspiration toward a mentally conceived standard of perfection; a seeking after beauty or excellence; 3, in art and literature, purely imaginative treatment of subjects; the attempt to depict perfection as the mind conceives it, rather than fact as observed: opposite of realism: Philos., any of several systems of thought which hold that the objects we see with our eyes are in reality the embodiments of ideas, and, hence, that ideas are the only realities and that reality is essentially mental.

i-de-al-ist (ī-dē'ăl-ĭst), n. 1, an adherent of the philosophic doctrine of idealism; 2, one who, as an artist or an author, views and treats a subject imaginatively rather than literally: opposite of realist; 3, one who seeks perfection; one who governs his life by standards of perfection rather than by practical considerations; a visionary.—adj. i-de'al-is'tic.

i-de-al-i-ty (ī'dē-ăl'ĭ-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], 1, the quality or state of existing in idea only; also, a thing so existing; 2, the capacity or tendency to conceive mental images or ideals.

i-de-al-ize (ī-dē'ăl-īz), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -ized (-īzd), p.pr. -izing], 1, to look upon as beautiful or perfect, regardless of fact; as, she idealizes her son; 2, to see (a situation, condition, or the like) as it should be, not as it is; 3, to treat imaginatively, without regard for the limitations of real life or nature, as a subject in art or literature:—v.i. to see, or be able to see, things, qualities, relationships, subjects of art, etc., in the light of perfection.—n. i-de'al-i-za'tion.

i-de-a-tion (ī'dē-ā'shŭn), n. [see idea], Psych., the formation and relation of ideas; thought.—adj. i'de-a'tion-al. i-dem (ī'dĕm), n. [Lat. = the same], the same:—adv. in the same as above or before; used to avoid repetition.—abbr. id.

i-den-tic (ī-dĕn'tĭk), adj. [< L.L. identicus < Lat. idem, same], identical: used especially in diplomacy for messages of precisely similar wording sent by two or more powers acting in concert but not jointly; as, identic notes; identic protests.

i-den-ti-cal (ī-dĕn'tĭ-kăl), adj. 1, the very same; no other; not different; as, the identical spot; 2, of different things, exactly alike, as in kind, quality, etc.; as, no two faces are identical.

Syn. uniform, interchangeable, selfsame. (See alike.)

i-den-ti-fy (ī-dĕn'tĭ-fī), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -fied (-fīd), p.pr. -fying], [< L.L. identificare (-atus) < Lat. identitas, sameness + facere, to make], 1, to make, consider, or treat as the same; join or associate inseparably, as interests; 2, to prove the same; prove one's own, as stolen property; 3, to aid in proof or recognition of, as a mark, accredited testimony, or the like: Biol., to note or determine the species of; classify.—adj. i-den'ti-fi"a-ble.—n. i-den"ti-fi-ca'tion.

i-den-ti-ty (ī-dĕn'tĭ-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], [< L.L. identitas, sameness < Lat. idem, the same], 1, the state of absolute resemblance between two or more things in the aspects considered; sameness; 2, distinctive individuality or personality; 3, the condition of being what was declared or asserted; 4, oneness.

i-de-o-gram (ĭ'dē-ō-grăm"; ĭd'ē-), n. [< Gk. idea, form + graphein, to write], 1, a symbol, as in primitive picture writing, in which each object, action, or thought is expressed by a picture; 2, any symbol standing for a word or idea, as 1, 2, +, −, ×, &, ¶, <, $, etc. Also, i'de-o-graph".

i-de-og-ra-phy (ĭ"dē-ŏg'rā-fĭ; ĭd"ē-), n. the use or study of figures or symbols by which the idea of a thing is expressed but not named.

i-de-ol-o-gy (ĭ"dē-ŏl'ō-jĭ; ĭd"ē-), n. [pl. -gies (-jĭz)], [< Gk. idea, form + -logia, study], 1, the science of ideas; specifically, the theory that ideas originate exclusively from certain sensations; 2, unpractical or visionary speculation; vain theorizing; 3, the set of ideas, prejudices, etc., which determine the individual's general point of view or philosophy of life.

i-de-o-mo-tor (ĭ"dē-ō-mō'tĕr; ĭd"ē-), adj. [idea + motor], Psych., designating, or pertaining to, unconscious bodily movement initiated by an idea.

ides (īdz), n.pl. [< Lat. idus, the ides], in the ancient Roman calendar, the eighth day after the nones (see nones), falling on the 15th of March, May, July, and October, and the 13th of the other months.

id est (ĭd ĕst), [Lat. = that is], that is: usually abbreviated to i.e.

id-i-oc-ra-sy (ĭd"ĭ-ŏk'rā-sĭ), n. [pl. -sies (-sĭz)], [< Gk. idios, one's own + krasis, a mixing; tempering], idiosyncrasy (which see).

id-i-o-cy (ĭd'ĭ-ō-sĭ), n. [see idiot], 1, a permanent condition of extreme mental incapacity, either congenital, or due to arrested development resulting from disease or injury in infancy; feeble-mindedness; 2, the lowest classification of feeble-mindedness. Syn. imbecility, stupidity, senselessness, foolishness, folly.—Ant. intelligence, sense, wisdom, brilliancy.

id-i-o-graph (ĭd'ĭ-ō-grăf"), n. [< Gk. idios, one's own + graphein, to write], a characteristic mark, symbol, or signature; a trade-mark.

id-i-om (ĭd'ĭ-ŭm), n. [< Gk. idiōma, a peculiarity; property < idioesthai, to make one's own < idios, one's own], 1, the language or tongue of a people or country; also, a dialect, expression, or construction peculiar to a group or section; 2, the specific and peculiar genius or spirit of a language, as evidenced in its structure, syntax, and characteristic method of expressing thought; 3, an expression which, understood as a whole, has a meaning different from that of the joined meanings of its component parts; as, hard put to it; 4, a method of expression peculiar to an individual; as, Meredith's idiom.

Syn. dialect, tongue, peculiarity. (See language.)

id-i-o-mat-ic (ĭd"ĭ-ō-măt'ĭk), adj. 1, peculiar to a language; vernacular; colloquial; 2, given to, or marked by, a mode of expression characteristic of a language; as, an idiomatic phrase. Also, id"i-o-mat'i-cal.—adv. id"i-o-mat'i-cal-ly.

id-i-o-syn-cra-sy (ĭd"ĭ-ō-sĭng'krā-sĭ), n. [pl. -sies (-sĭz)], [< Gk. idios, one's own + sun, together + krasis, a mixture], a constitutional peculiarity of temperament; also, a specific instance of such peculiarity shown in some mental or physical eccentricity, oddity, aversion, or the like; idiocrasy.—adj. id"i-o-syn-crat'ic.

id-i-ot (ĭd'ĭ-ŏt), n. [< Gk. idiōtēs, a plebeian; an ignorant man < idios, one's own], any person who is seriously feeble-minded or defective mentally; especially, a person in the lowest class of feeble-minded persons; a foolish person; blockhead.

id-i-ot-ic (ĭd"ĭ-ŏt'ĭk), adj. 1, pertaining to, or like, an idiot; 2, senseless; foolish. Also, id"i-ot'i-cal.—adv. id"i-ot'i-cal-ly.

i-dle (ī'dl), adj. [comp. idler, superl. idlest], [< A.S. īdel, empty; useless], 1, useless; futile; vain; groundless; as, an idle tale; idle rumor; idle remonstrance; 2, unoccupied; not used or employed; not put to use; as, idle servants; idle houses, money, time; 3, prone to rest; lazy; indolent:—v.i. [p.t. and p.p. idled (-dld), p.pr. idling], 1, to waste or lose time; act or move indolently; while away time; 2, to run slowly in neutral gear, as an automobile engine:—v.t. to pass (time) in doing nothing; as, to idle away one's hours.

Syn., adj. inactive, slothful, torpid, sluggish, trifling, lazy, indolent, unoccupied, vain, futile, frivolous. An idle person may be inactive in the general sense of doing nothing, or he may be frittering away time in useless or ineffective action. An idle tramp simply loafs; an idle clerk may be intensely occupied with something apart from his work. Idle may or may not carry the tone of reproach, but lazy is always disparaging. A lazy person is one who has an aversion to work, though sometimes physical laziness is accompanied by a surprising mental alertness. The indolent man is reluctant to think or even to move. Slothful describes one who has an intensified indolence.—Ant., adj. active, diligent.

i-dle-ness (ī'dl-nĕs), n. the state of being inactive; indolence; laziness; slothfulness

i-dler (ī'dlĕr), n. one who wastes time in doing nothing; a lazy person; a lounger: Mech., in a system of gearing, a wheel serving merely to transfer rotary motion from one axle to another without change of direction or velocity.

i-dly (ī'dlĭ), adv. in an aimless manner; lazily; ineffectually; uselessly.

I-do (ē'dō), n. [Ido = offspring], an artificial international language, made public in 1907: based mainly on the principles of Esperanto.

i-dol (ī'dŏl), n. [< Lat. idolum < Gk. eidōlon, image < eidos, form], 1, an image of a divinity or a god used as an object or medium of worship; 2, a person or thing too greatly loved or adored; 3, a form having no substance; an apparition, as an image in a mirror; a phantom: Logic, a fallacy; a false conception.—n. i'dol-ism.

EGYPTIAN IDOL

i-dol-a-ter (ī-dŏl'ā-tĕr), n. [< O.F. idolatre < Gk. eidōlolatrēs, idol worshiper], 1, one who worships idols; a pagan; one who pays divine honors to images, talismans, etc.; 2, one who loves a person or thing to excess; a devotee; great admirer.—n.fem. i-dol'a-tress.

i-dol-a-trous (ī-dŏl'ā-trŭs), adj. 1, pertaining to, or practicing, the worship of images; 2, marked by undue reverence or excessive affection.

i-dol-a-try (ī-dŏl'ā-trĭ), n. [pl. -tries (-trĭz)], 1, the worship of images, or any created object; 2, very great admiration, veneration, or love, of any person or thing; excessive adoration.

i-dol-ize (ī'dŏl-īz), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -ized (-īzd), p.pr. -izing], [see idol], to worship, as an image regarded as a god; also, to love or admire to excess, as a hero:—v.i. to practice habitually the worship of images regarded as gods. Also, i'dol-ise.

I-dom-e-neus (ī-dŏm'ĕ-nūs), n. [Gk.], Gk. Myth., a king of Crete who led the Cretans against the Trojans.

I-dun (ē'dōōn), n. [< N.O.], Norse Myth., the keeper of the apples of youth. See I'thunn, Pfd. S.

i-dyl (ī'dĭl), n. [< Lat. idyllium < Gk. eidullion, a little image; a descriptive poem < eidos, form], 1, a short, pastoral poem; also, a description in verse or prose of a picturesque rural scene, a rustic episode, etc.; 2, an episode forming a suitable subject for an idyl; 3, sometimes, a descriptive or narrative poem of greater length, presenting pastoral scenes: Mus., a short, romantic piece in simple, unaffected style. Also, i'dyll.

i-dyl-ist (ī'dĭl-ĭst), n. a writer, in either poetry or prose, of short descriptions of pastoral scenes, incidents of rustic life, etc. Also, i'dyll-ist.

i-dyl-lic (ī-dĭl'ĭk), adj. 1, pertaining to, or of the nature of, a short description, in either poetry or prose, of rustic life or pastoral scenes; pertaining to the scene or episode which is a fit subject for such a writing; 2, pastoral; hence, pleasingly simple.

-ie n. dim. suffix, [see -y], implying affection: used especially with Scotch words; as, lassie. See -y.

i. e. abbr. [Lat. id est], that is:—I. E., 1, Indian Empire; 2, Indo-European.

-ier n. suffix, [unaccented, usually < M.E. -er < O.F. -ier: see -er; accented, usually < Fr. -ier: see -eer], denoting an agent, profession, or one concerned with; as, collier; financier; gondolier.

if (ĭf), conj. [< A.S. gif, if], 1, on the condition that; as, if he stole the money, he must bear the consequences; on the supposition that; as, if you meet him, send him to me; 2, although; expressing concession; as, even if the examinations were hard, they were fair; 3, whenever; as, if I have any question, I will come to you; 4, whether; as, ask if he knows:—n. the word if; hence, a supposition or condition.

Ig-dra-sil (ĭg'drā-sĭl), n. [see Ygdrasill], Norse Myth., the great tree of the universe, having three roots. See Yg'dra-sill, Pfd. S.

ig-loo (ĭg′lo͞o), n. [< Eskimo iglū, house], an Eskimo dome-shaped hut, made of snow and blocks of ice. Also, ig′lu.

IGLOO

ig-ne-ous (ĭg′nē-ŭs), adj. [< Lat. igneus, fiery < ignis, fire], pertaining to fire: Geol., formed under intense heat; formed by volcanic action; as, igneous rocks.

ig-nes-cent (ĭg-nĕs′ĕnt). adj. [< Lat. ignescens (-entis), taking fire < ignescere, to take fire < ignis, fire], sending out sparks when struck with steel; scintillating; figuratively, inflammatory.

ig-nis fat-u-us (ĭg′nĭs făt′ū-ŭs), [pl. ignes fatui (ĭg′nēz făt′ū-ī)], [Lat. = foolish fire], 1, a phosphorescent light seen above the ground in marshy places, supposed to be caused by spontaneous combustion of gas from decaying animal or vegetable matter: popularly known as will-o'-the-wisp and jack-o'-lantern; 2, an aim, thing, hope, etc., that misleads.

ig-nite (ĭg-nīt′), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. ignited, p.pr. igniting], [< Lat. ignire (-itus), to set on fire < ignis, fire], 1, to set on fire; 2, to make luminous by heat; subject to intense heat:—v.i. 1, to take fire; 2, to glow with heat.—adj. ig-nit′i-ble; ig-nit′a-ble.

ig-nit-er (ĭg-nīt′ẽr), n. one who or that which sets fire to or kindles; especially, any of certain devices, fuses, etc., used to explode charges.

ig-ni-tion (ĭg-nĭsh′ŭn), n. 1, the act of setting on fire; 2, the state of being set on fire; 3, the means of setting on fire: Mech., the device for exploding the charge in an internal-combustion engine; Chem., the process of roasting, or intensely heating, a substance, to remove carbon, oxygen, etc.: ignition point, the temperature at which a substance takes fire.

ig-no-ble (ĭg-nō′bl), adj. [Fr. < Lat. ignobilis < in-, not + nobilis, noble], 1, of low birth or station; of no reputation; not illustrious; 2, of mean quality; base.—n. ig-no′ble-ness.—adv. ig-no′bly.

ig-no-min-i-ous (ĭg″nō-mĭn′ĭ-ŭs), adj. [see ignominy], 1, full of, carrying, or incurring, public disgrace and dishonor; shameful; 2, deserving disgrace; infamous; 3, humiliating; as, ignominious punishment.—adv. ig″no-min′i-ous-ly.

Syn. infamous, degrading, disgraceful, humiliating.

ig-no-min-y (ĭg′nō-mĭn-ĭ), n. [pl. -ies (-iz)], [< Lat. ignominia, disgrace], 1, dishonor; public disgrace; 2, conduct meriting public disgrace.

ig-no-ra-mus (ĭg″nō-rā′mŭs), n. [pl. -muses (-ĕz)], [Lat. = we do not know < ignorare: see ignore], one lacking education or knowledge; a blockhead: Law, formerly, 1, the indorsement made by a grand jury upon a bill of indictment when there is not sufficient evidence upon which to find a true bill; hence, 2, a bill returned with this indorsement.

ig-no-rance (ĭg′nō-rāns), n. [see ignore], the state of being uneducated, uninformed, or unacquainted; lack or want of knowledge in general.

ig-no-rant (ĭg′nō-rānt), adj. 1, lacking knowledge; uninstructed; uneducated; 2, unaware: with of; as, he was ignorant of the fact; uninformed: with in; as, I am ignorant in that subject; 3, displaying, or marked by, lack of knowledge; resulting from want of knowledge.—adv. ig′no-rant-ly.

Syn. illiterate, unlettered, uneducated, uninformed, untutored, unlearned. One is ignorant who lacks knowledge. If he lacks that common knowledge which anyone might be reasonably expected to possess, he is ignorant in the general sense; if he is merely uninformed of a certain thing, he is ignorant in the particular sense. Ignorant is, therefore, far from an absolute term, for the best-informed man in the world is necessarily ignorant of many things, and the savage, deemed ignorant by the civilized man, is nevertheless wise in the ways of his environment. Illiterate means without letters, hence without the knowledge available through books and reading. Illiterate, especially in the census reports, or in regard to immigrants, means, specifically, unable to read or write. Unlettered is milder than illiterate. An uneducated person is one who has not had the advantage of systematic instruction or mind training. Though an uneducated person may be brilliant as far as the quality of his mind is concerned, he often lacks the ordered knowledge which is the basis of dependable judgments.

ig-nore (ĭg-nōr′), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. ignored (-nōrd′), p.pr. ignoring], [< Lat. ignorare < in-, not + (g)noscere, to know], to treat as unknown; disregard intentionally; fail to recognize; refuse to notice: Law, to throw out, as a bill of indictment by a grand jury, as false or unsupported by sufficient evidence.

I-go-rot (ē″gō-rōt′), n. [pl. -rot (-rōt′); -rots (-rōts′)], [< Sp. igorrote < nat. name], a member of one of the savage, head-hunting tribes inhabiting Luzon in the Philippines. Also, I″gor-ro′te (ē″gōr-rō′tā).

I-graine (ē-grān′; ē-grā′nē), n. [< O.F. Igerne], in the Arthurian legends, the mother of King Arthur: also called, by Tennyson, Ygerne.

i-gua-na (ĭ-gwä′nȧ), n. [Sp. < Carib. igoana, iwana, iguana], Zoöl., any of several tropical American lizards (genera Iguana and Metopoceros), one large, inoffensive, herbivorous species being used as food.

IGUANA (1/8)

I. H. N. abbr. In His Name: motto of the Order of King's Daughters and Sons:—i. h. n., indicated horse power:—I H S, Eccl., a monogram representing the Greek ΙΗΣ, for ΙΗΣΟΥΣ, Jesus: often confused with the following:—I. H. S., 1, [Lat. Jesus Hominum Salvator], Jesus, Savior of Men; 2, [Lat. In Hoc Signo (Vinces)], in this sign (thou shalt conquer); 3, [Lat. In Hoc (Cruce) Salus], in this (Cross) salvation.

i-kon (ī′kŏn), n. [see icon], an image; a statue or mosaic of a sacred subject. See i′con, Pfd. S.

Il Chem., the symbol [Il] for the rare element illinium, discovered in 1926.

il- prefix, [see ¹in-, ²in-], a form of ¹*in-* or ²*in-*, which see, meaning in or not, used before l.

i-lang–i-lang (ē-läng′-ē-läng′), n. [see ylang-ylang], 1, an East Indian tree bearing fragrant flowers; 2, the essential oil distilled from these: used in perfumery. See y′lang–y′lang, Pfd. S.

-ile adj. suffix, [< Lat. -ilis], of, like, or pertaining to; as, juvenile: sometimes written -il, as in civil, sometimes -ble, as in humble.

il-e-um (ĭl′ē-ŭm), n. [L.L. < Lat. ilia, entrails], Anat., the lowest part of the small intestine, between the jejunum and the large intestine (see intestine, illus.).—adj. il′e-ac.

i-lex (ī′lĕks), n. [Lat. = holm oak], Bot., 1, any of a genus (Ilex) of the holly family, including trees and shrubs, some of which, as the common American holly, are evergreen; 2, the holm oak, or holly oak.

il-i-ac (ĭl′ĭ-ăk), adj. [< L.L. iliacus, pertaining to the ileum: see ileum], Anat., pertaining to, or situated near, the ilium, or upper portion of the hip bone.

Il-i-ad (ĭl′ĭ-ăd), n. [< Gk. Ilias (-ados) < Ilion, Ilium, or Troy, city of Ilos, son of Tros], a Greek epic poem narrating some of the events of the siege of Troy (Ilium): supposed to have been written by Homer.

il-i-um (ĭl′ĭ-ŭm), n. [pl. ilia (-ȧ)], [see ileum], Anat., the upper of the three fused bones forming each side of the pelvis (see pelvis, innominate, illus.).

Il-i-um (ĭl′ĭ-ŭm), n. [Lat. < Gk. Ilion: see Iliad], a poetical name for ancient Troy.

ilk (ĭlk), adj. [< A.S. ilca, ilce, same], Obs., same:—pron. Obs., the same: of that ilk, 1, in Scotland, of the same name, surname, estate, or place; as, Balfour of that ilk means Balfour of Balfour; 2, by extension, of the same set, kind, family, breed, or the like:—n. family; kind; class; set: an incorrect usage arising from a misunderstanding of the phrase of that ilk.

ill (ĭl), adj. [comp. worse (wûrs), superl. worst (wûrst)], [< O.N. illr, ill; bad, wicked], 1, sick; diseased; physically unwell; 2, morally bad; as, ill fame; 3, harmful; malevolent; as, an ill fate; 4, faulty; unskilful; as, ill management; 5, improper: said of manners or behavior; 6, unpropitious; unfavorable; as, ill fortune; an ill wind; 7, harsh; threatening; of evil meaning or aspect; as, ill news; 8, cross; unpleasant; as, ill temper; ill feeling; 9, imperfect; as, ill success:—n. 1, evil; the opposite of good; that which impairs happiness, or mars or hinders success; 2, something unfavorable or injurious; as, to work ill to one's neighbor: pl. misfortunes:—adv. 1, badly; unfavorably; 2, imperfectly; as, ill furnished; 3, scarcely; hardly.

Syn., adj. sick, indisposed, unwell; harsh, unkind. Ill and sick in general English usage have been interchangeable, but there is now a tendency in Great Britain to use sick of one suffering from nausea, while ill is employed in the wider sense to designate any disordered state of the body. In the United States, the words are still used with little distinction.

Ill. abbr. Illinois; official abbreviation (also, Ills.) —ill., illustrated; illustration (also, illus.; illust.): —I'll, a contraction for: 1, I will; 2, I shall.

ill–bred (Il'=brĕd'), adj. lacking good breeding; badly trained; rude; impolite.

il-le-gal (I-lē'găl), adj. [in- + legal], contrary to law.—n. il"le-gal'i-ty.—adv. il-le'gal-ly.

il-leg-i-ble (I-lĕj'I-bl), adj. [in- + legible], not capable of being read; so badly written or obscured, as by time, as to be undecipherable.—n. il-leg"i-bil'i-ty.—adv. il-leg'i-bly.—n. il-leg'i-ble-ness.

il-le-git-i-ma-cy (Il"ē-jIt'I-mă-sI), n. [pl. -cies (-sIz)], [see illegitimate], 1, the condition or quality of being unlawful, illogical, or irregular; especially, 2, the condition of being born out of wedlock; bastardy.

il-le-git-i-mate (Il"ē-jIt'I-mât), adj. [in- + legitimate], 1, unlawful; illegal; 2, born out of wedlock; 3, illogical; wrongly deduced; 4, contrary to good usage; not genuine, as a word or expression.—adv. il"le-git'i-mate-ly.—n. il"le-git'i-ma'tion.

ill–fa-vored (Il'=fā'vĕrd), adj. 1, not comely; ugly; 2, offensive. Also, ill'–fa'voured.

il-lib-er-al (I-lIb'ĕr-ăl), adj. [in- + liberal], 1, not befitting a free man; without culture or education; hence, 2, not broad-minded; bigoted; 3, stingy; ungenerous; niggardly.—n. il-lib"er-al'i-ty.

il-lic-it (I-lIs'It), adj. [< Fr. illicite < Lat. in-, not + licēre (licitus), to be allowed], 1, not authorized; forbidden; unlicensed; unlawful; as, illicit trade; an illicit still; 2, not conforming to law; as, an illicit dealer.—adv. il-lic'it-ly.—n. il-lic'it-ness.

il-lim-it-a-ble (I-lIm'It-ă-bl), adj. [in- + limit], immeasurable; vast; infinite.—adv. il-lim'it-a-bly.—n. il-lim'it-a-ble-ness.

il-lin-i-um (I-lIn'I-ŭm), n. [< state of Illinois], Chem., a very rare metallic element [symbol Il], probably similar to those of the rare earth group: notable as the first element to be discovered (in 1926) by an American scientist.

Il-li-nois (Il"I-noi'; -noiz'), n. [Fr. < Amer.Ind. illinuk, the men], a member of the Illinois Confederacy, a union of western Algonquian Indians, formerly occupying the district lying between the Wabash and Mississippi rivers.

il-lit-er-a-cy (I-lit'ĕr-ă-sI), n. [pl. -cies (-sIz)], [see illiterate], ignorance of letters; want of learning; especially, inability to read or write.

il-lit-er-ate (I-lit'ĕr-ât), adj. [in- + literate], 1, ignorant of letters; unlearned; uneducated; specifically, unable to read or write; 2, showing want of learning or culture; marked by such errors as betray ignorance; as, an illiterate letter:—n. one who is uneducated; specifically, one unable to read or write.—adv. il-lit'er-ate-ly.—n. il-lit'er-ate-ness.

Syn., adj. unlettered, uninstructed. (See ignorant.)

ill–na-tured (Il'=nā'tŭrd), adj. ill-tempered; spiteful; cross.—adv. ill"–na'tured-ly.

ill-ness (Il'nĕs), n. [see ill], 1, the condition of being sick; 2, a malady; a disease; a sickness; disorder of health: Obs., vice; wickedness; evil.

Syn. ailment, indisposition, complaint. (See disease.)

il-log-i-cal (I-lŏj'I-kăl), adj. [in- + logical], failing to observe, or ignorant of, the rules of sound reasoning; contrary to sound reasoning, or to logic, the science of sound reasoning; inconsistent; incongruent.—adv. il-log'i-cal-ly.—n. il-log'i-cal-ness.

ill–starred (Il'=stärd'), adj. born under an unlucky star; unfortunate; ill-fated.

ill–tem-pered (Il'=tĕm'pĕrd), adj. hasty; irascible; quarrelsome; peevish.

ill-treat (Il"trēt'), v.t. [ill + treat], to abuse; maltreat; treat cruelly; misuse.

il-lume (I-lūm'), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. illumed (-lūmd'), p.pr. illuming], [< O.F. illumer, contr. of illuminer < Lat. illuminare, to light up], Poet., to illuminate; make bright or light up.

il-lu-mi-nant (I-lū'mI-nănt), adj. [see illuminate], lending or shedding light:—n. a substance which gives or produces light, as oil or gas.

il-lu-mi-nate (I-lū'mI-nāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -nated, p.pr. -nating], [< Lat. illuminare (-atus), to light up < lumen (-inis), light], 1, to light up; enlighten, especially spiritually or mentally; 2, to make clear: throw light on, as a difficulty or subject; 3, to decorate with artificial lights; 4, to adorn, as the initial letter of a manuscript or the border of its pages, with designs in bright colors, silver, or gold, as was done in medieval times (for illus. see the frontispiece); 5, to make illustrious or renowned:—v.i. to make a display of lights.—adj. il-lu'mi-na-tive.

il-lu-mi-na-tion (I-lū"mI-nā'shŭn), n. 1, the act of giving light or the state of being lighted; especially, the decoration of houses or cities with lights; 2, the amount of light shed or supplied by a source of light; 3, the art of adorning books or manuscripts with gold, silver, or brilliantly colored designs; also, such a design; 4, intellectual or spiritual enlightenment; inspiration.

Syn. enlightenment, embellishment. (See light.)

il-lu-mi-na-tor (I-lū'mI-nā"tĕr), n. 1, one who or that which gives light; especially, any device or instrument for throwing or focusing light; 2, one who adorns books, manuscripts, etc., with gold, silver, or brilliantly colored designs, especially with decorative letters and borders.

il-lu-mine (I-lū'mIn), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -mined (-mInd), p.pr. -mining], [see illume, illuminate], to light up; enlighten:—v.i. to be lighted.

illus. abbr. illustrated; illustration (also, ill.; illust.).

ill–use (Il"=ūz'), v.t., to treat badly; abuse; misuse; subject to ill use.

il-lu-sion (I-lū'zhŭn), n. [< Lat. illusio (-onis), deception < illudere (-lusus), to deceive], 1, a perception of an appearance, sound, or other object of sense, which does not correspond with reality; mistaken perception, as an optical illusion; hence, 2, a belief or idea based on faulty reasoning; inaccurately used for delusion; 3, in psychology, perception in which sensory experiences are misinterpreted, as when objects in a series of still pictures on a screen seem to be "moving pictures," or when small, dense objects seem to be heavier than similar large ones of equal weight; 4, the state of being deceived or mistaken; 5, a transparent tulle; a delicate net lace used for veils, scarfs, etc.

Syn. fallacy, unreality, hallucination. (See delusion.)

il-lu-sion-ist (I-lū'zhŭn-Ist), n. 1, one given to being deceived by false impressions; a dreamer or visionary; 2, a producer of false or deceptive appearances, either to deceive or to entertain, as a sleight-of-hand performer; conjurer.

il-lu-so-ry (I-lū'sō-rI), adj. 1, causing deception; misleading; fallacious; 2, of the nature of a misconception.—adj. il-lu'sive.—adv. il-lu'sive-ly.

Syn. imaginary, deceiving, misleading, chimerical, unreal, fanciful.—Ant. actual, real, true.

il-lus-trate (I-lŭs'trāt; Il'ŭs-trāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -trated, p.pr. -trating], [< Lat. illustrare (-atus), to light up < in, upon + lustrare, to enlighten], 1, to make clear or intelligible by concrete examples; explain by comparisons or examples; 2, to make plain by means of pictures; ornament with pictures or designs.—p.adj. il'lus-trat-ed (Il'ŭs-trāt-ĕd; I-lŭs'trāt-ĕd).

il-lus-tra-tion (Il"ŭs-trā'shŭn), n. 1, the art of making plain by the use of examples, analogies, or explanatory figures; the act of elucidating; 2, the state of being made clear by means of examples, analogies, or explanatory figures; 3, the act or the art of adorning books, magazines, etc., with pictorial decorations; 4, that which makes clear, as a comparison, explanatory sketch, or example; 5, that which adorns or decorates a text; a picture; a cut.

Syn. picture, cut, print, drawing, example.

il-lus-tra-tive (I-lŭs'trā-tIv; Il'ŭs-trā-tIv), adj. tending to make clear; serving as an example.—adv. il-lus'tra-tive-ly.

il-lus-tra-tor (Il'ŭs-trā"tĕr; I-lŭs'trā-tĕr), n. one who explains, or makes explanatory figures or sketches; especially, one whose business it is to provide pictures or drawings for decorating magazines, books, or newspapers.

il-lus-tri-ous (I-lŭs'trI-ŭs), adj. [< Fr. illustre or < Lat. illustris, bright], distinguished by greatness; renowned; famous; eminent; celebrated; as, the nation's illustrious men.—adv. il-lus'tri-ous-ly.—n. il-lus'tri-ous-ness.

Syn. noted, glorious, noble. (See distinguished.)

Il-lyr-i-an (I-lIr'I-ăn), adj. [< name of country], pertaining to ancient Illyria, a country north of Greece, or to its people or their language.—n. 1, an inhabitant of Illyria; 2, the language of the people of Illyria, classified in the Albanian subfamily of the Indo-European family of languages (see chart, page 499.)

il-men-ite (Il'mĕn-It), n. [< Ilmen mountains in Ural range], a black, lustrous iron-titanium oxide: important as an ore of iron.

il pen-se-ro-so (ēl pĕn"sĕ-rō'sō), [It. = the pensive (man)], the pensive (man): opposite of l'allegro, the cheerful (man): Il Penseroso, the title of one of Milton's minor poems.

im- prefix, a variant of in-, used, for euphony, before b, m, and p. See in-; 2in-.

I. M. abbr. Isle of Man:—I'm, the contraction for I am.

im-age (im′ăj), n. [< Lat. imago (-inis), a copy, likeness], 1, an imitation of the external form of a person or thing; a picture; a statue; especially, a statue used as an idol, or as an object of veneration; 2, a counterpart; an exact resemblance; hence, an embodiment or type; as, she is the image of purity; 3, a figure of speech; a simile or metaphor: Psych., a mental picture, as that of a past experience reproduced by memory; an idea; a conception: Phys., an optical counterpart of an object formed by rays of light reflected from a mirror or refracted through a lens: real image, Phys., an image, capable of being received on a screen, formed by the actual convergence of rays, as the image formed on the film in a camera: virtual image, Phys., an image which cannot be received upon a screen, but which appears to the eye to exist at the point whence rays of light appear to come, as the image seen in an ordinary plane mirror or through a magnifying glass:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. imaged (-ăjd), p.pr. imaging], 1, to form a likeness of; portray; mirror; reflect; 2, to represent to the mental vision; picture in one's own mind; 3, to describe or picture effectively by means of language; 4, to represent by a symbol; typify.

AB, object; ab, image; F, principal focus. 1, object outside F; image real, inverted, reduced; 2, object inside F; image virtual, upright, magnified; 3, object outside F; image virtual, upright, reduced.

im-age-ry (im′ăj-rĭ), n. [pl. -ries (-rĭz)], 1, the work of one who makes likenesses; 2, such artificial imitations taken collectively; pictures; statuary; 3, mental images considered collectively; especially, the type of image naturally occurring to a certain mind; as, the imagery of an artist; 4, fanciful imagination; ability to make mental pictures; 5, figurative decoration in writing or speaking; also, the forms called forth in the mind in response to rhetorical figures.

im-ag-i-na-ble (ĭ-măj′ĭ-nȧ-bl), adj. [see imagine], capable of being conceived or pictured by the mind.—adv. im-ag′i-na-bly.

im-ag-i-na-ry (ĭ-măj′ĭ-nȧ-rĭ), adj. existing only in the fancy; unreal: Math., unreal; containing the factor $\sqrt{-1}$, represented by i; as, $\sqrt{-4} = \sqrt{4} \times (-1) = \pm 2i$: applied to an indicated even root of a negative quantity: opposite of real.

Syn. ideal, fanciful, chimerical, illusory.

im-ag-i-na-tion (ĭ-măj″ĭ-nā′shŭn), n. 1, the picture-forming power of the mind; the ability to create ideas or images independent of the external world; especially, the higher forms of this power as exercised in art; the creative faculty; 2, any product of this creative power of the mind; a creation of the mind; a fancy; a notion; 3, the ability to perceive and appreciate a mental image created by another; especially, the faculty of appreciating such images seen in art and literature.

Syn. fancy, fantasy. The two words, fancy and imagination, name two aspects of that great power of the mind which creates, associates, combines, or alters mental images. Of the two, fancy is the lesser power; it may operate independently of the external world, but more often plays upon the objects or experiences of common life, to fill an idle moment or create a pleasing daydream. Imagination is more independent of the external world, and in a far deeper sense than fancy is truly creative. It presents images characterized by grandeur of conception, exaltation of mood, and that piercing vision which detects truth. The scientist, the poet, the wise parent, the great teacher, alike exercise it.

im-ag-i-na-tive (ĭ-măj′ĭ-nă-tĭv), adj. proceeding from, exhibiting, or endowed with, the faculty of creating mental images; as, imaginative literature; constructive; inventive; fanciful.—adv. im-ag′i-na-tive-ly.—n. im-ag′i-na-tive-ness.

im-ag-ine (ĭ-măj′ĭn), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -ined (-ĭnd), p.pr. -ining], [< Fr. imaginer < Lat. imaginari (-atus) to imagine < imago (-inis), a copy; an image], 1, to form a mental picture or an idea of; produce by the imagination; conceive; 2, to conjecture; guess; think; suppose; 3, to scheme; contrive:—v.i. 1, to form a mental picture; 2, to suppose; surmise.

Syn. deem, surmise, guess, conjecture, think, believe, picture, conceive, opine.—Ant. know, prove.

im-ag-ist (ĭm′ăj-ĭst), n. [< image, influenced by Fr. imagiste, imagist], one of a group of modern poets who advocate freedom from conventions in theme and in verse form, and seek to produce their poetic effects primarily through a series of clear, direct, and vivid images.—n. im′ag-ism.

i-ma-go (ĭ-mā′gō), n. [pl. -goes (-gōz); -magines (-măj′ĭ-nēz)], [Lat. = image], an image: Zoöl., the last, or adult, stage of an insect's development.

i-mam (ĭ-mäm′), n. [< Arab. imām, leader], a Mohammedan priest or dignitary.

im-be-cile (ĭm′bē-sĭl, Br. ĭm′bē-sēl), adj. [< Fr. imbécille < Lat. imbecillus, weak, feeble], 1, Rare, without strength, whether physical or mental; 2, mentally weak; feeble-minded; idiotic; 3, marked by fatuousness or stupidity: Psych., feeble-minded, but of a grade between that of an idiot and a moron:—n. one of feeble mind; a fool: Psych., an imbecile person.

im-be-cil-i-ty (ĭm″bē-sĭl′ĭ-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], 1, Rare, the condition of being mentally or physically weak; 2, especially, mental impotency; also, an instance of mental weakness; 3, silly folly or absurdity; an instance of such foolishness: Psych., a medium grade in the classification of feeble-minded persons, between that of idiots and that of morons, designating those who can develop a considerable degree of self-help and a fair degree of social conformity.

Syn. stupidity, foolishness, incapacity, idiocy.

im-bed (ĭm-bĕd′), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. imbedded, p.pr. imbedding], [see embed], to inclose in surrounding matter, as in a bed. Also, em-bed′, Pfd. S.

im-bibe (ĭm-bīb′), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. imbibed (-bībd′), p.pr. imbibing], [< Lat. imbibere < in, in + bibere, to drink], 1, to drink in; inhale; absorb, as if by drinking; 2, to receive or absorb into the mind; assimilate.—n. im-bib′er.—n im″bi-bi′tion (-bĭ-bĭsh′ŭn).

im-bit-ter (ĭm-bĭt′ĕr), v.t. [see embitter], to make resentful or bitter. Pfd. S., em-bit′ter.

im-bod-y (ĭm-bŏd′ĭ), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. imbodied (-ĭd), p.pr. imbodying], [see embody], 1, to give a body to; incarnate; give concrete form to, as ideas by means of words; 2, to form into a body; include. See em-bod′y, Pfd. S.

im-bos-om (ĭm-bŏŏz′ŭm), v.t. [see embosom], 1, to embrace; cherish; 2, to shelter; surround. See em-bos′om, Pfd. S.

im-bow-er (ĭm-bou′ĕr), v.t. [see embower], to shelter, hide, or place in an arbor:—v.i. to rest in an arbor. Also, em-bow′er, Pfd. S.

im-bri-cate (ĭm′brĭ-kāt), adj. [< Lat. imbricare < imber, shower], 1, having the edges lapped over each other, in regular order, as scales, shingles, or leaves in a bud; 2, decorated with regularly overlapping scales, or with an arrangement having the effect of such overlapping. Also, im′bri-cat″ed (-kāt″ĕd).

IMBRICATION

1, section of primrose bud, showing imbricate arrangement of petals; 2, imbricate scales of the cone of the hemlock spruce; 3, imbricate tiles on a roof.

im-bri-ca-tion (ĭm″brĭ-kā′shŭn), n. a regular overlapping of edges, as of shingles, petals or leaves in a bud, or the like.

im-bro-glio (ĭm-brō′lyō), n. [pl. -glios (-yōz)], [It. = confusion < imbrogliare, to confuse, embroil], an intricate and perplexing state of affairs: especially, a complicated political or dramatic situation: a complicated plot: Rare, a disordered pile.

im-brown (ĭm-broun′), v.t. [see embrown], to tan; render brown. Also, em-brown′.

im-brue (ĭm-brōō′), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. imbrued (-brōōd′), p.pr. imbruing], [< O.F. embreurer, to moisten < Lat. in, in + bibere, to drink], to wet or moisten; stain; drench: now used only of slaughter, gore, blood, or the like. Also, em-brue′.

im-brute (ĭm-brōōt′), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. imbruted, p.pr. imbruting], [in- + brute], to reduce to the condition of a brute; brutalize:—v.i. to become like a brute. Also, em-brute′.

im-bue (ĭm-bū′), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. imbued (-būd′), p.pr. imbuing], [< Lat. imbuere, to wet, imbrue], 1, to cause to absorb; saturate; tinge deeply; dye; 2, to cause to become permeated; as, to imbue the mind with certain principles or ideas.

im-i-ta-ble (ĭm′ĭ-tȧ-bl), adj. [see imitate], capable of being patterned after or copied.

im-i-tate (ĭm′ĭ-tāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -tated, p.pr. -tating], [< Lat. imitari (-atus), to copy], 1, to follow, or try to follow, the example of; mimic, as manners, gestures, or the like; use as a model; copy;

2, to reproduce or duplicate in form, color, qualities, or the like; make a semblance of; 3, to look like; as, paper doilies are made to imitate lace ones: Biol., to simulate the appearance of, as for protection; mimic.

Syn. mimic, mock, ape, impersonate, counterfeit, resemble, duplicate, simulate. To imitate is to pattern after another, either consciously or unconsciously. The things which imitation seeks to follow may or may not be praiseworthy, but its object is merely to make those things its own. To mimic, mock, and ape are all modes of imitating; they differ from it in their object, for the object of mimicking is to afford entertainment for others at the expense of the victim, the object of mocking is to affront or deride, and the object of aping is to improve oneself. One author may imitate the style of another in order to better his own, or because he lacks originality; admirers of great men strive to imitate them. People mimic the imperfect speech of a foreigner to excite laughter. A vulgar, ignorant person may ape his superiors. We mock a speech, showing up its hypocrisy, or bringing contempt upon it, sometimes unfairly and always insultingly. (See follow.)

im-i-ta-tion (ĭm″ĭ-tā′shŭn), n. 1, the act of following an example; the act of mimicking; 2, that which is made or done to resemble something else; a counterfeit: Mus., in polyphonic music, the repetition by one voice of a theme previously set forth by another:—adj. made to resemble something superior or of better material; as, imitation lace.

Syn., n. impersonation, copy, likeness. (See duplicate.)

im-i-ta-tive (ĭm′ĭ-tā-tĭv), adj. 1, following a model or example; formed after a model; reproducing or otherwise showing the qualities of the original; 2, given to copying others; not gifted with originality; 3, not genuine; counterfeit; 4, having the faculty of copying others; as, a child is an imitative creature.—adv. im′i-ta-tive-ly.—abbr. imit.

im-i-ta-tor (ĭm′ĭ-tā″tẽr), n. one given to copying, or with a gift for mimicking, others; also, a counterfeiter; copier; plagiarist.

im-mac-u-late (ĭ-măk′ū-lāt), adj. [< Lat. immaculatus < in-, not + maculatus, spotted], 1, without blemish; unspotted; undefiled; pure; also, absolutely clean; 2, without fault; errorless: Biol., not spotted; without colored spots: Immaculate Conception, R. C. Ch., the dogma, officially proclaimed in 1854, that the Virgin Mary, though naturally begotten, was, through divine favor, preserved from all stain of original sin, from the moment when she was conceived in her mother's womb.—adv. im′mac′u-late-ly.—n. im-mac′u-late-ness.

Syn. unblemished, spotless, unsullied, stainless, pure.

im-ma-nent (ĭm′ā-nĕnt), adj. [< Lat. immanens (-entis), remaining in < in, in + manēre, to remain], indwelling; inherent; intrinsic.—n. im′ma-nence; im′ma-nen-cy.

Im-man-u-el (ĭ-măn′ū-ĕl), n. [< Heb. 'immānūēl < 'im, with + ānū, us + ēl, God], Bib., God with us: a name of Jesus (Isa. 7:14).

im-ma-te-ri-al (ĭm″ā-tē′rĭ-āl), adj. [²*in-* + material], 1, not consisting of matter; spiritual; incorporeal; 2, unimportant; having no weight; making no difference.—adv. im″ma-te′ri-al-ly.

Syn. inconsequential, trifling, insignificant.

im-ma-ture (ĭm″ā-tūr′), adj. [²*in-* + mature], 1, not ripe; not fully grown or developed; 2, not finished or perfected; crude.—adv. im″ma-ture′ly.—n. im′ma-tu′ri-ty (-tū′rĭ-tĭ).

im-meas-ur-a-ble (ĭ-mĕzh′ŭr-ā-bl; ĭm-mĕzh′-), adj. [²*in-* + measure], not capable of being reckoned in terms of length, breadth, etc.; immense; illimitable; vast.—adv. im-meas′ur-a-bly.—n. im-meas″ur-a-bil′i-ty.—n. im-meas′ur-a-ble-ness.

im-me-di-a-cy (ĭ-mē′dĭ-ā-sĭ), n. [see immediate], 1, the fact, quality, or condition of being free from any intervening medium; direct relationship; closeness; 2, the pressing or urgent quality of the present; present necessity.

im-me-di-ate (ĭ-mē′dĭ-āt), adj. [< L.L. immediatus < Lat. in-, not + L.L. mediare (-atus), to go between < Lat. medius, middle], 1, not separated (in relation to some other person or thing) by any intervening medium; next; succeeding; as, immediate inheritors; close; not remote; as, one's immediate family; 2, direct; acting without intervening agency or object; as, the immediate causes of the war; 3, not separated in time; instant; pertaining to the present; urgent; as, immediate needs; 4, not separated in space; adjoining; in contact; 5, perceived directly; intuitive; as, an immediate inference: Colloq., near at hand; as, in the immediate neighborhood.—adv. im-me′di-ate-ly —n. im-me′di-ate-ness.

Syn., adv. directly, instantly, instantaneously, presently, straightway, forthwith, promptly, soon, now. Immediately expresses the idea that no time elapses between two events or actions; it means at once. Directly also, in its primary signification, means at once, but it has acquired now the secondary meaning of presently, in no long time, by and by; colloquially speaking, directly means pretty soon. Immediately, though far less than directly, is also gathering a looser application, and sometimes now indicates soon instead of at once, as the time of the action. Instantly and instantaneously signify at this very moment, now, with no lapse of time, however brief. These words have kept the precision of their meaning. A slight difference in application is observable, indicating, in the case of instantaneously, that a slight but imperceptible period of time has elapsed, as in the examples: he died instantly: the medicine affected the sick man instantaneously.

im-med-i-ca-ble (ĭ-mĕd′ĭ-kā-bl), adj. [< Lat. in-, not + medicabilis, curable], not curable; not to be healed.

im-me-mo-ri-al (ĭm″ē-mō′rĭ-āl), adj. [< Lat. in-, not + memoria, memory], extending beyond the reach of memory, record, or tradition; ancient.—adv. im″me-mo′ri-al-ly.

im-mense (ĭ-mĕns′), adj. [< Lat. in-, not + metiri (mensus), to measure], immeasurable; boundless; vast; very great or large: Slang, fine; excellent.—adv. im-mense′ly.—n. im-mense′ness.

Syn. huge, colossal, gigantic. (See enormous.)

im-men-si-ty (ĭ-mĕn′sĭ-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], 1, the state or fact of being very large; 2, immeasurableness; hugeness; boundlessness.

im-men-su-ra-ble (ĭ-mĕn′shōō-rā-bl), adj. immense; limitless; of indefinite extent; immeasurable.—n. im-men″su-ra-bil′i-ty.

im-merge (ĭ-mûrj′), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. immerged (-mûrjd′), p.pr. immerging], [< Lat. immergere (-mersus) < in, in + mergere, to dip], to plunge into or under anything, especially into a liquid; immerse:—v.i. Rare, to disappear behind another, or to enter the shadow of another: said of celestial bodies.

im-merse (ĭ-mûrs′), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. immersed (-mûrst′), p.pr. immersing], 1, to plunge into or under anything, especially into a fluid: dip; 2, to occupy or absorb (a person), as in an occupation; involve deeply; as, difficulties immersed him: 3, to baptize by submerging the entire person in water.

im-mer-sion (ĭ-mûr′shŭn), n. 1, the act of immersing or state of being immersed, especially in a fluid; absorption, as in a task; 2, the act of submerging a person for the purpose of Christian baptism; baptism by submerging the whole person in water: Astron., the disappearance of a heavenly body by its passage behind, or into the shadow of, another.

im-mesh (ĭ-mĕsh′), v.t. [see enmesh], to entangle in, or as in, a net. Also, en-mesh′, Pfd. S.

im-me-thod-i-cal (ĭm″ē-thŏd′ĭ-kăl; ĭm″mē-), adj. [²*in-* + methodical], without method; unsystematic; irregular; confused.

im-mi-grant (ĭm′ĭ-grănt), adj. [see immigrate], passing or coming into a country as a settler:—n. one who comes into a country to settle.

Syn., n. emigrant. An immigrant is a person who is entering a land or country for the purpose of permanent residence. This same person, from the point of view of the country which he is leaving, is an emigrant, or one who is going out.

im-mi-grate (ĭm′ĭ-grāt), v.i. [p.t. and p.p. -grated, p.pr. -grating], [< Lat. immigrare (-atus) < in, into + migrare, to migrate], to come into a country as a permanent resident.—n. im″mi-gra′tion.

im-mi-nence (ĭm′ĭ-nĕns), n. [see imminent], 1, the condition or quality of being about to happen: said of events, especially dangers; immediate probability; 2, that which impends, as evil or danger.—n. im′mi-nen-cy.

im-mi-nent (ĭm′ĭ-nĕnt), adj. [< Lat. imminens (-entis), overhanging < in, into + minēre, to project], threatening; likely to occur immediately: said of events, especially misfortunes or perils.—adv. im′mi-nent-ly.

Syn. impending, threatening. Imminent refers to an evil, danger, or disaster which is perilous and close at hand. Impending describes an evil as hanging over one; the time of its coming is more uncertain, but its arrival none the less sure than that described by imminent. Threatening describes that which has a menacing aspect, an ominous or evil-portending semblance; an evil threatening to happen may befall in the near future, in the distant future, or, sometimes, not at all.

im-mis-ci-ble (ĭ-mĭs′ĭ-bl), adj. [< Lat. in-, not + miscēre, to mix], not capable of being blended or mingled.—n. im-mis″ci-bil′i-ty.

im-mo-bile (ĭ-mō′bĭl), adj. [²*in-* + mobile], not movable; stable; motionless.

im-mo-bil-i-ty (ĭm″ō-bĭl′ĭ-tĭ), n. the condition of being immovable; fixedness.

im-mod-er-ate (ĭ-mŏd′ẽr-āt), adj. [in- + moderate], extreme; excessive; intemperate.—adv. im-mod′er-ate-ly.—n. im-mod″er-a′tion.

Syn. inordinate, intemperate, excessive, unreasonable, extreme.—Ant. restrained, reasonable, just.

im-mod-est (ĭ-mŏd′ĕst), adj. [in- + modest], 1, wanting in decent restraint; 2, sensual; not chaste; impure; 3, forward; brazen; impudent.—adv. im-mod′est-ly.

Syn. shameless, lewd, obscene, unchaste, indecent, sensual, impudent.—Ant. modest, chaste, decent, pure.

im-mod-es-ty (ĭ-mŏd′ĕs-tĭ), n. 1, want of decent restraint; want of delicacy; sensuality; lewdness; 2, impudence; forwardness.

im-mo-late (ĭm′ō-lāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -lated, p.pr. -lating], [< Lat. immolare (-atus), to sprinkle with grain; sacrifice < in, in + mola, grain], to offer, as a victim, in sacrifice; make a sacrifice of; as, to immolate ambition on the altar of duty.—n. im″mo-la′tion.—n. im′mo-la″tor (-tẽr).

im-mor-al (ĭ-mŏr′ăl), adj. [in- + moral], 1, contrary to conscience or the law of right as conceived by any given community or group; wicked; vicious; unprincipled; distinguished from unmoral; 2, specifically, loose sexually.—adv. im-mor′al-ly.

Syn. bad, corrupt, depraved, loose, profligate, licentious, sinful, vicious, unprincipled, unrighteous.—Ant. moral, good, sinless, pure, virtuous, chaste.

im-mo-ral-i-ty (ĭm″ō-răl′ĭ-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], 1, the state or quality of being wicked, depraved, or contrary to right; specifically, lewdness; 2, a lewd act; an evil practice; a vice.

im-mor-tal (ĭ-môr′tăl), adj. [in- + mortal], 1, freed from the fate of death; divine; eternal; 2, destined or fitted to live through the ages, or indefinitely; imperishable; famous for all time to come; 3, pertaining to, or marked by, loftiness; divine; heavenly; as, immortal yearnings:—n. 1, one freed from the fate of death; that which has unending existence; 2, one who or that which never falls into oblivion: pl. Class. Myth., the gods.—adv. im-mor′tal-ly.

Syn., adj. deathless, everlasting. (Sec eternal.)

im-mor-tal-i-ty (ĭm″ôr-tăl′ĭ-tĭ), n. 1, exemption from death; the maintenance of eternal life in the body or, more commonly, as a soul or spirit; 2, exemption from oblivion: everlasting fame: Theol., an everlasting existence with God.

im-mor-tal-ize (ĭ-môr′tăl-īz), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -ized (-īzd), p.pr. -izing], 1, to confer everlasting fame upon; cause to be remembered; 2, to give endless life to; perpetuate.

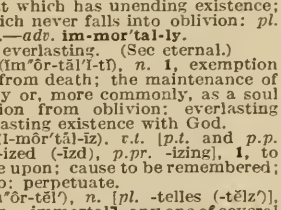
im-mor-telle (ĭm″ôr-tĕl′), n. [pl. -telles (-tĕlz′)], [Fr. = immortal], any one of several flowers of the composite family, commonly called everlasting, including asterlike and other forms of flower head: so named because they retain their form and color when dried; also, a wreath of such flowers.



IMMORTELLES
1, Helichrysum; 2, Gomphrena.

im-mov-a-ble (ĭ-mōōv′ă-bl), adj. [in- + movable], 1, not to be moved; fixed; stationary; motionless; not to be changed; 2, steadfast; unchanging; unyielding, as in an attitude; 3, not emotionally sensitive; unfeeling; impassive: Law, not subject to removal; permanent: said of land or things fixed thereto:—n. that which cannot be moved: pl. Law, land, or things fixed to land, as trees or buildings.—adv. im-mov′a-bly.—n. im-mov″a-bil′i-ty.

im-mune (ĭ-mūn′), adj. [< Lat. immunis, exempt from public service < in-, not + munus, public burden], exempt, as from a tax or duty; especially, exempt from the contagion of a given disease, either naturally or by inoculation: with to or from:—n. one who is not susceptible to a disease either by nature, or through inoculation against it, or because of a previous attack.

im-mu-ni-ty (ĭ-mū′nĭ-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], 1, freedom from obligation; exemption from natural, ordinary liabilities, evils, or misfortunes; as, immunity from duty; 2, a special privilege; as, the immunities of the rich; 3, the condition of not being susceptible to a given disease, either naturally or by inoculation against it: Law, exemption from a service, obligation, tax, or the like.

Syn. privilege, exemption, prerogative, advantage.

im-mun-ize (ĭ-mūn′īz; ĭm′ū-nīz), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -ized (-īzd; -īzd; -nīzd), p.pr. -izing], 1, to protect from the infection or contagion of a disease, as by inoculation; 2, to render exempt, as from taxation.

im-mure (ĭ-mūr′), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. immured (-mūrd′), p.pr. immuring], [< L.L. immurare < Lat. in, in + murus, wall], to confine within walls; shut up in, or as in, prison; confine; hence, to shut up or seclude (oneself); as, he immured himself in solitude: Obs., to fortify by walling in.

im-mu-ta-ble (ĭ-mū′tă-bl), adj. [< Lat. in-, not + mutare, to change], not subject to change; unalterable; invariable: Zoöl., not subject to variation, as markings in all the individuals of a species.—adv. im-mu′ta-bly.—n. im-mu″ta-bil′i-ty.

Im-o-gen (ĭm′ō-jĕn), n. in Shakespeare's "Cymbeline," the daughter of King Cymbeline, and wife of Posthumus, who, in spite of a plot against her honor, justifies her husband's boasts of her purity.

imp (ĭmp), n. [< A.S. impa, a scion, a graft], 1, a young or small devil; a little, mischievous demon; a hobgoblin; 2, a rogue: a pert or mischievous child: often used humorously:—v.t. Obs., in falconry, to repair (a wing or feather) with a feather or feathers to improve the powers of flight; Archaic, to equip with wings; hence, figuratively, to repair or strengthen.

Imp. abbr. [Lat. Imperator, Imperatrix], Emperor; Empress:—imp., 1, imperial; 2, imperative; 3, imported; importer; 4, imperfect; 5, [Lat. imprimatur], let it be printed.

im-pact (ĭm-păkt′), v.t. [< Lat. impingere (-pactus) < in, upon + pangere, to fix, strike], to pack firmly; wedge closely; drive together:—n. (ĭm′-păkt), a striking together of two objects; a collision; the force of the collision, or the force communicated by such striking: Mech., the act of striking, as in the momentary contact of a moving object against another.

im-pac-tion (ĭm-păk′shŭn), n. the act of becoming, or state of being, wedged in: Med., a lodgment of something in an organ or passage of the body: dental impaction, the condition of a tooth which is so deeply embedded in the jawbone that it will not come through the gum.

im-pair (ĭm-pâr′), v.t. [< O.F. empeirer, to make worse < Lat. in, into + pejor, worse], to lessen in quantity, excellence, value, or strength; damage, as health, reputation, or fortune.

Syn. injure, diminish, mar, spoil, harm, blemish.

im-pair-ment (ĭm-pâr′mĕnt), n. the act of damaging or injuring; also, the state of being damaged or injured; the lessening in value, excellence, or strength; deterioration or damage; injury.

im-pale (ĭm-pāl′), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. impaled (-pāld′), p.pr. impaling], [< Fr. empaler < L.L. impalare, to put a stake in < in, in + palus, stake], 1, to transfix with anything sharp; put to death or torture by thrusting through and fixing with a sharp stake; hence, 2, to render helpless, as if fixed on a stake; torment thus: as, to impale a criminal on his own evidence: Her., to place side by side on a shield; hence, to place on an equality: Rare, to surround with, or as with, pales or stakes. Also, em-pale′.—n. im-pale′ment.

IMPALED BEARINGS

im-pal-pa-ble (ĭm-păl′pă-bl), adj. [in- + palpable], 1, not perceivable by touch; intangible: said of gas, shadows, immaterial things; too fine to be felt: said of a powder ground extremely fine; 2, incapable of being readily taken in by the mind; as, impalpable distinctions.—n. im-pal″pa-bil′i-ty.

im-pan-el (ĭm-păn′ĕl), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -eled or -elled (-ĕld), p.pr. -eling or -elling], [in- + panel], Law, 1, to enter on a list for jury duty; enroll; 2, sometimes, to draw from a jury list and swear in as jurors to try a particular case. Also, em-pan′el.

im-par-a-dise (ĭm-păr′ă-dīs), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -dised (-dīst), p.pr. -dising], [in- + paradise], 1, to put in a place of heavenly happiness; hence, bring to a state of ecstatic bliss or rapture; 2, to make into a heavenly place or state.

im-par-i-ty (ĭm-păr′ĭ-tĭ), n. [in- + parity], the condition of being unequal; inequality; disproportion; difference of quantity, degree, or the like.

im-part (ĭm-pärt′), v.t. [< O.F. empartir < Lat. impartire < in, to + pars (partis), a part], 1, to bestow a share or portion of, as of enjoyment, one's thoughts, or the like; give; as, autumn imparts rich colors to the trees; 2, to give knowledge of; tell; make known:—v.i. to give a share; give.

Syn. reveal, disclose, divulge, yield, confer.

im-par-tial (ĭm-pär′shăl), adj. [in- + partial], not favoring one more than another; fair; just; unprejudiced; unbiased.—adv. im-par′tial-ly.

im-par-ti-al-i-ty (Im-pär″shĭ-ăl′ĭ-tĭ; Im″pär-shăl′ĭ-tĭ), n. the quality or character of being free from bias or prejudice; freedom from favoritism of judgment or treatment.
Syn. equity, disinterestedness, fairness. (See justice.)

im-pass-a-ble (Im-pàs′ă-bl), adj. [²*in-* + passable], not to be gone through or by; not admitting transit or travel; as, an impassable barrier.—adv. im-pass′a-bly.—n. im-pass′a-bil′i-ty.

im-passe (ăN″päs′; im-pàs′), n. [pl. -passes (-päs′; -pàs′ĕz)], [Fr.], an impassable way; hence, a positlon or situation from which there is no logical way out; a deadlock.

im-pas-si-ble (Im-pàs′ĭ-bl), adj. [< Lat. in-, not + passibilis, capable of feeling < pati (passus), to feel], 1, not able to suffer; insensible to pain; not subject to pain or harm; 2, not to be moved to passion, or any sign of emotion; apathetic.—adv. im-pas′si-bly.—n. im-pas″si-bil′i-ty.

im-pas-sioned (Im-pàsh′ŭnd), adj. [¹*in-* + passion], moved to strong feeling; ardent; showing deep feeling; as, an impassioned appeal.
Syn. glowing, burning, fiery, intense, vehement.

im-pas-sive (Im-pàs′ĭv), adj. [²*in-* + passive], 1, not feeling, not susceptible to, or not showing, pain or suffering; impassible; 2, incapable of being injured; inanimate; invulnerable; hence, unconscious; insensible; 3, incapable or devoid of emotion; apathetic; unimpressionable; not to be roused to passion; serene.—adv. im-pas′sive-ly.—n. im-pas′sive-ness.—n. im″pas-siv′i-ty (Im″pă-sĭv′ĭ-tĭ).
Syn. apathetic, insensible, invulnerable. (See stoic.)

im-paste (Im-pāst′), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. impasted, p.pr. impasting], [¹*in-* + paste], to form into, or inclose in, or as in, a paste: Painting, to paint by putting the colors on thickly.

im-pa-tience (Im-pā′shĕns), n. [see impatient], 1, failure to stand discomfort or suffering calmly; 2, a feverish desire for quick results; unwillingness to wait; restless irritability because of delay, suspense, opposition, anxiety, etc.

im-pa-tient (Im-pā′shĕnt), adj. [²*in-* + patient], 1, not bearing what there is to bear with composure or patience; desirous of quick results; restless because of pain, delay, opposition, control, or circumstances; intolerant; 2, showing or expressing restlessness, irritability, or intolerance, arising from a state of fretfulness or eagerness.—adv. im-pa′tient-ly.
Syn. peevish, fretful, hasty, choleric, testy, irritable.

im-peach (Im-pēch′), v.t. [< O.F. empechier < L.L. impedicare, to entangle < Lat. in, in + pedica, fetter], 1, to call in question; attack disparagingly; discredit, as one's name, honor, motives, or the like; 2, to accuse of a crime; especially, in regard to a public official, to arraign for misconduct in office: Obs., to hinder.—n. im-peach′er.
Syn. accuse, charge, arraign, censure, discredit.

im-peach-a-ble (Im-pēch′ă-bl), adj. 1, of a public officer, liable to trial before a competent tribunal for misconduct in office; also, of an act, tending to make one thus liable; 2, of statements, motives, or the like, liable to criticism or censure.

im-peach-ment (Im-pēch′mĕnt), n. 1, a discrediting; a calling to account; disparagement, as of the truth of testimony, honesty of motive, or the like; 2, the accusation and prosecution of a public official for crime or misconduct in office.

im-pearl (Im-pûrl′), v.t. [¹*in-* + pearl], Poetic, 1, to make into, or like, pearls; 2, to decorate with, or as with, pearls; as, to impearl with tears, dew, etc.

im-pec-ca-ble (Im-pĕk′ă-bl), adj. [< L.L. impeccabilis < Lat. in-, not + peccare, to sin], 1, of persons, not liable to sin or error; 2, of things, blameless; faultless.—n. im-pec″ca-bil′i-ty.

im-pe-cu-ni-ous (Im″pē-kū′nĭ-ŭs), adj. [< Lat. in-, not + pecuniosus < pecunia, money < pecu, cattle], usually without money enough for necessities; always poor; penniless.—n. im″pe-cu″ni-os′i-ty.—adv. im″pe-cu′ni-ous-ly.

im-ped-ance (Im-pēd′ăns), n. [see impede], Elec., the apparent resistance of a circuit to the flow of an alternating current.

im-pede (Im-pēd′), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. impeded, p.pr. impeding], [< Lat. impedire, to entangle the feet < in, in + pes (pedis), foot], to obstruct; hinder; make slower; as, to impede progress.

im-ped-i-ment (Im-pĕd′ĭ-mĕnt), n. 1, the state of being hindered; 2, that which hinders or obstructs; a hindrance; obstruction; obstacle; 3, an organic obstruction to distinct or easy speech; 4, baggage: usually pl.: Law, 1, that which hinders the contraction of a valid marriage; 2, a legal hindrance to the making of a contract.
Syn. obstacle, encumbrance, bar. (See hindrance.)

im-ped-i-men-ta (Im-pĕd″ĭ-mĕn′tă), n.pl. [Lat. = encumbrances: see impede], things which hinder progress; baggage: Mil., objects other than natural barriers which delay troops.

im-pel (Im-pĕl′), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. impelled (-pĕld′), p.pr. impelling], [< Lat. impellere < in, on + pellere (pulsus), to drive], to drive forward; urge on; force or influence to motion or action; constrain; as, necessity impelled him to confide in us; also, to propel; push on.—n. im-pel′ler.—adj. im-pel′lent.
Syn. actuate, instigate, induce, move, excite, incite, embolden.—Ant. retard, deter, discourage.

im-pend (Im-pĕnd′), v.i. [< Lat. impendēre < in, upon + pendēre, to hang], to hang aloft; be ready to fall; hence, figuratively, of evil or danger, hover about; threaten immediately; be about to happen.

im-pend-ent (Im-pĕn′dĕnt), adj. Rare, close at hand; imminent.—n. im-pend′ence.

im-pend-ing (Im-pĕn′dĭng), p.adj. 1, literally, overhanging; suspended, so as to seem about to fall; 2, figuratively, of danger, evil, or the like, close at hand; imminent; threatening.
Syn. menacing, threatening, near. (See imminent.)

im-pen-e-tra-bil-i-ty (Im-pĕn″ĕ-trā-bĭl′ĭ-tĭ), n. [see impenetrable], 1, the incapability of being pierced or entered; imperviousness; 2, inscrutability; 3, obtuseness: Phys., that property of matter which prevents two bodies from occupying the same space at the same time.

im-pen-e-tra-ble (Im-pĕn′ĕ-trā-bl), adj. [²*in-* + penetrate], 1, not to be entered or pierced; not admitting entrance or passage through; 2, not capable of being comprehended; inscrutable; as, an impenetrable mystery; 3, not susceptible to influences, ideas, or impressions; untouched by sympathy; as, an impenetrable mind or heart: Phys., having the property by virtue of which two bodies cannot occupy the same space at the same time.—n. im-pen′e-tra-ble-ness.—adv. im-pen′e-tra-bly.

im-pen-i-tence (Im-pĕn′ĭ-tĕns), n. [see impenitent], want of penitence or repentance; the condition of being unrepentant; hardness of heart.—n. im-pen′i-ten-cy (-tĕn-sĭ).

im-pen-i-tent (Im-pĕn′ĭ-tĕnt), adj. [²*in-* + penitent], not sorry for one's sin; unrepentant; obdurate; hardened in sin:—n. one who is not repentant; a hardened sinner.—adv. im-pen′i-tent-ly.

im-per-a-tive (Im-pĕr′ă-tĭv), adj. [< Lat. imperativus < imperare (-atus), to command], 1, expressing positive command; authoritative; peremptory; 2, not to be avoided or shirked; urgent; compulsory; as, imperative necessity: Gram., designating, or pertaining to, that mood of the verb which expresses command, advice, entreaty, or exhortation:—n. a command, or an action or word that involves or expresses a command: Gram., that mood of the verb which expresses command, advice, entreaty, or exhortation; also, a verb in this mood.—adv. im-per′a-tive-ly.—n. im-per′a-tive-ness.
Syn., adj. peremptory, commanding, authoritative, arbitrary, dictatorial, imperious, obligatory, urgent.—Ant., adj. gentle, submissive, docile, avoidable.

im-pe-ra-tor (Im″pĕ-rā′tôr), n. [Lat. = general, leader], commander in chief: originally a title of special honor; later, an emperor.

im-per-cep-ti-ble (Im″pĕr-sĕp′tĭ-bl), adj. [²*in-* + perceive], beyond the range of the senses or of a particular sense; beyond appreciation by the mind, as fine discriminations or differences; hence, brief, gradual, or subtle; as, imperceptible growth or change.—n. im″per-cep′ti-ble-ness.—adv. im″per-cep′ti-bly.—n. im″per-cep″ti-bil′i-ty.

im-per-fect (Im-pûr′fĕkt), adj. [²*in-* + perfect], not fully formed; incomplete; defective; not done; incorrect; faulty; falling short of a desired, adequate, or ideal condition: Mus., so arranged that the third or fifth of the final chord is the melody chord; Gram., designating, or pertaining to, a tense which indicates past action going on but not completed, or, less accurately, action in the past time; as, he was walking, he walked:—n. the imperfect tense.—adv. im-per′fect-ly.—n. im-per′fect-ness.

im-per-fec-tion (Im″pĕr-fĕk′shŭn), n. 1, a falling short of a desired, adequate, or ideal condition; incompleteness; faultiness; 2, a defect; blemish; failing; fault.
Syn. weakness, fault, vice, flaw, deficiency, blemish.

im-per-fo-rate (Im-pûr′fō-rāt), adj. [²*in-* + perforate], not pierced; having no holes: Anat., having no opening: said of parts that normally have openings. Also, im-per′fo-rat″ed (-rāt″ĕd).—adj. im-per′fo-ra-ble.

im-pe-ri-al (Im-pē′rĭ-ăl), adj. [< Lat. imperialis, pertaining to empire < imperium, command], 1, pertaining to an empire, emperor, or empress; 2, of or pertaining to a sovereign state as governing colonies or dependencies: in the British Empire, applied to affairs affecting the combined home and colonial interests; formerly used to designate the government, parliament, or policy of the United Kingdom as distinct from that of her colonies; 3, of or pertaining to sovereignty or august power, or to one who possesses it; commanding; supreme; domineering; imperious; 4, fit for an emperor; hence, magnificent; imposing; superior in size or quality; 5, designating the system of weights and measures legally established in the United Kingdom:—n. 1, anything of unusual size or excellence, as a certain size of paper or slate, a large decanter, or the like; 2, the top or roof of a coach; also, Rare, a luggage case made to fit such a top; 3, a tuft of hair beneath the lower lip: so called because the emperor Napoleon III wore his beard in this way; 4, a Russian gold coin: Imperial, a soldier or an adherent of the emperor of the Holy Roman Empire; an Imperialist.—adv. im-pe'ri-al-ly.

IMPERIAL
Napoleon III wearing an imperial.

Syn., adj. kingly, queenly, majestic, royal, sovereign.

im-pe-ri-al-ism (ĭm-pē'rĭ-ăl-ĭzm), n. 1, the power or system of government of an emperor; 2, the belief in the value of colonies: in British and American politics, the policy of the extension of national power, either by the acquisition of new territory or by a closer union of territory already possessed.

im-pe-ri-al-ist (ĭm-pē'rĭ-ăl-ĭst), n. 1, a believer in the principle of empire; especially, in British and American politics, one who favors the policy of extending the national power by the acquisition of new territory or by a closer union of territory already possessed; 2, the follower of an emperor: Imperialist, an adherent or a soldier of the emperor of the Holy Roman Empire.—adj. im-pe'ri-al-is'tic.

im-per-il (ĭm-pĕr'ĭl), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -iled or -illed (-ĭld), p.pr. -iling or -illing], [¹*in-* + peril], to put in danger or jeopardy; endanger.

im-pe-ri-ous (ĭm-pē'rĭ-ŭs), adj. [< Lat. imperiosus < imperium, command], 1, dictatorial; commanding; overbearing; 2, overmastering; urgent.—adv. im-pe'ri-ous-ly.—n. im-pe'ri-ous-ness.

Syn. arrogant, domineering, lordly, overbearing, arbitrary, dictatorial, imperative, compelling, despotic.

im-per-ish-a-ble (ĭm-pĕr'ĭsh-ă-bl), adj. [²*in-* + perish], not subject to decay or destruction; permanently enduring; immortal.—adv. im-per'ish-a-bly.—n. im-per'ish-a-bil'i-ty.

im-pe-ri-um (ĭm-pē'rĭ-ŭm), n. [pl. -ria (-ă)], [Lat. = command, absolute power], unrestrained power; supreme command: Law, the right of jurisdiction, which includes the authority to use the power of the state to enforce its laws.

im-per-ma-nent (ĭm-pûr'mă-nĕnt).adj.[²*in-* + permanent], not lasting; temporary.

im-per-me-a-ble (ĭm-pûr'mē-ă-bl), adj. [²*in-* + permeate], not permitting passage, as of a fluid through a substance; impervious; as, an impermeable rock.—n. im-per'me-a-bil'i-ty.

im-per-son-al (ĭm-pûr'sŭn-ăl), adj. [²*in-* + personal], 1, not having personality; not existing as a separate individuality; as, an impersonal power called Luck; 2, not having reference to a particular person; not relating to a person: Gram., designating verbs used either with no subject or with an indefinite one, always in the third person singular; as, it snows; it seems:—n. Gram., an impersonal verb.—n. im-per'son-al'i-ty.—adv. im-per'son-al-ly.

im-per-son-ate (ĭm-pûr'sŭn-āt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -ated, p.pr. -ating], [²*in-* + person], 1, to give the qualities of a person to; represent as a person; personify; 2, to act the character of; play the part of.—n. im-per'son-a'tion.—n. im-per'son-a-tor.

im-per-ti-nence (ĭm-pûr'tĭ-nĕns), n. [see impertinent], 1, irrelevancy; unfitness; also, a case of this; 2, incivility; rudeness; insolence; also, an instance of intrusive sauciness or offensive behavior.—n. im-per'ti-nen-cy.

im-per-ti-nent (ĭm-pûr'tĭ-nĕnt), adj. [²*in-* + pertinent], 1, of no relation to the matter in hand; out of place; not to the point; 2, saucy; intrusive; insolent; rude; uncivil or offensive in behavior.—adv. im-per'ti-nent-ly.

Syn. impudent, presumptuous, disrespectful, saucy.

im-per-turb-a-ble (ĭm"pĕr-tûr'bă-bl), adj. [²*in-* + perturb], not capable of being mentally excited or agitated; self-contained.—adv. im"per-turb'a-bly.—n. im"per-turb'a-bil'i-ty.

im-per-vi-ous (ĭm-pûr'vĭ-ŭs), adj. [< Lat. in-, not + pervius, allowing passage], not affording passage: with to; impermeable; impenetrable; as, cement should be impervious to water; minds should not be impervious to argument.—adv. im-per'vi-ous-ly.—n. im-per'vi-ous-ness.

im-pe-trate (ĭm'pē-trāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -trated, p.pr. -trating], [< Lat. impetrare (-atus), to obtain < in, in + patrare, to bring about], Theol., to secure by earnest request or prayer: Rare, to beseech; implore.—n. im"pe-tra'tion.

im-pet-u-os-i-ty (ĭm-pĕt"ū-ŏs'ĭ-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], [see impetuous], of physical things, sudden, violent energy of movement or action; of people or feelings, the quality or character which leads to action without thought; impulsiveness; also, an instance of headlong action or rash impulse.

im-pet-u-ous (ĭm-pĕt'ū-ŭs), adj. [< Fr. impétueux < Lat. impetuosus < impetere, to assail], 1, of physical things, rushing with force and violence; as, an impetuous current; 2, of people or feelings, acting with, or marked by, sudden energy; hasty and rash; ardent; passionate; vehement; violent.—adv. im-pet'u-ous-ly.—n. im-pet'u-ous-ness.

Syn. excitable, violent, furious, headlong, vehement, impulsive, rash, ardent.—Ant. calm, deliberate, steady.

im-pe-tus (ĭm'pē-tŭs), n. [Lat. = force], 1, the property of a moving body which enables it to overcome resistance because of its mass and velocity; momentum; 2, figuratively, any impulse; moving force; stimulus; incentive.

im-pi-e-ty (ĭm-pī'ē-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], [²*in-* + piety], 1, want of reverence for the Supreme Being; irreligion; ungodliness; 2, an act of irreverence or wickedness; 3, a want of reverence or respect in general, as for a parent; undutifulness.

im-pinge (ĭm-pinj'), v.i. [p.t. and p.p. impinged (-pinjd'), p.pr. impinging], [< Lat. impingere, to drive at < in, into + pangere, to fix, drive], 1, to strike or dash; collide: with on, upon, or against; as, sound waves impinge on the tympanum of the ear; 2, to encroach; infringe: with upon.—n. im-pinge'ment.

im-pi-ous (ĭm'pī-ŭs), adj. [²*in-* + pious], wanting in reverence for God; irreligious; wicked; profane; irreverent; as, impious language: Rare, wanting in dutifulness, especially toward parents.—adv. im'pi-ous-ly.—n. im'pi-ous-ness.

Syn. irreverent, ungodly, wicked, profane, blasphemous.—Ant. devout, holy, reverent, godly.

imp-ish (ĭm'pĭsh), adj. [see imp], having the character of a mischievous little devil or urchin.—adv. imp'ish-ly.—n. imp'ish-ness.

im-pla-ca-ble (ĭm-plā'kă-bl), adj. [²*in-* + placate], not to be pacified or appeased; stubbornly irreconcilable; relentless.—n. im-pla'ca-ble-ness.—adv. im-pla'ca-bly.—n. im-pla"ca-bil'i-ty.

Syn. unrelenting, inexorable, merciless, unappeasable, pitiless.—Ant. forgiving, placable, mild, gentle.

im-plant (ĭm-plănt'), v.t. [²*in-* + plant], 1, to set in deeply; cause to take root; 2, hence, to inculcate, as a principle; instil.—n. im"plan-ta'tion.

im-ple-ment (ĭm'plē-mĕnt), n. [< L.L. implementum, accomplishment < Lat. implēre (-pletus), to fill up, finish < in, in + plēre, to fill], that which supplies a want, or is a necessity to an end; especially, an instrument, tool, or utensil: pl. the equipment necessary to carry out a given operation or work:—v.t. to perform; fulfill, as a pledge; execute, as a policy.

im-pli-cate (ĭm'plĭ-kāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -cated, p.pr. -cating], [< Lat. implicare (-atus), to involve < in, in + plicare, to fold], 1, to fold; entwine; entangle; 2, to involve deeply, especially unfavorably, as a person in a crime; 3, to imply as a natural accompaniment, consequence, or the like; as, the fact of government implicates people to be governed.

im-pli-ca-tion (ĭm"plĭ-kā'shŭn), n. 1, an entanglement; 2, the act of implying, or the state of being implied; also, the meaning implied, or consequence involved; an inference.

im-plic-it (ĭm-plĭs'ĭt), adj. [< Lat. implicitus < implicare (-atus), to involve: see implicate], 1, to be understood, though not directly expressed; implied; 2, essentially contained in, though not expressed or displayed; virtual; potential; 3, trusting in the word or authority of another without question: as, implicit faith; unreserved; as, implicit confidence.—adv. im-plic'it-ly.—n. im-plic'it-ness.

Syn. tacit, implied, virtual, blind, absolute.

im-plied (ĭm-plīd'), p.adj. [see imply], involved or included by fair or reasonable inference, though not expressed in words or actions; expressed indirectly; tacitly included.—adv. im-pli'ed-ly (-plī'ĕd-lĭ).

im-plore (ĭm-plōr'), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. implored (-plōrd'), p.pr. imploring], [< Lat. im- plorare, to entreat < in, unto + plorare, to cry], to entreat earnestly and humbly; supplicate; as, to implore God to have mercy; beg for; pray; as, to implore mercy from God:—v.i. to supplicate.—adv. im-plor'ing-ly.

Syn. supplicate, beseech, entreat, plead. (See pray.)

im-ply (im-plī'), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. implied (-plīd'), p.pr. implying], [< O.F. emplier < Lat. implicare, to involve: see implicate], 1, to contain, signify, or involve by reasonable inference (a fact, truth, or meaning not directly expressed); carry as a consequence; as, wealth implies responsibility; 2, to hint; intimate; insinuate: Obs., to enfold; entangle.

Syn. include, impart, denote, mean, intimate, signify.—Ant. express, set forth, make explicit.

im-pol-i-cy (im-pŏl'ĭ-sĭ), n. [in- + policy], unsuitableness, as of a course of action to the result desired; inadvisability; inexpediency.

im-po-lite (im"pō-līt'), adj. [in- + polite], uncivil; rude; boorish; discourteous; ill-mannered.—adv. im"po-lite'ly.—n. im"po-lite'ness.

im-pol-i-tic (im-pŏl'ĭ-tĭk), adj. [in- + politic], 1, unwise; not prudent or sagacious: said of persons; 2, not judicious; inexpedient; apt to imperil the result desired: said of actions, measures, or the like.—adv. im-pol'i-tic-ly.

im-pon-der-a-ble (im-pŏn'dĕr-ă-bl), adj. [in- + ponderable], without weight; very light.—n. im-pon"der-a-bil'i-ty.

¹im-port (im-pōrt'), v.t. [< L.L. importare (-atus), to bring in < in, in + portare, to bear], 1, to bring from without or from abroad, especially for commercial purposes: opposite of export; 2, to introduce, as bitterness into a debate:—n. (im'pōrt), an article brought from a foreign country; especially, merchandise intended for sale: usually pl.—n. im-port'er.

²im-port (im-pōrt'), v.t. [< L.L. importare, to be of consequence, to mean < Lat. importare, to bring in], 1, to signify or imply; 2, to be of consequence or concern to; affect seriously or significantly:—v.i. to have consequence; be of moment:—n. (im'pōrt), 1, meaning; that which is implied; signification, especially as affected by context; 2, consequence; moment; importance; significance.

Syn., n. sense, purport, weight. (See signification.)

im-por-tance (im-pōr'tăns), n. 1, the quality or state of being significant, weighty, or momentous; 2, social consequence; high position; 3, pretentiousness; pompousness.

Syn. significance, weight, moment, value, consequence.

im-por-tant (im-pōr'tănt), adj. 1, of serious consequence; bearing weight or significance; momentous; 2, of high position; of social consequence; 3, pretentious; pompous.—adv. im-por'tant-ly.

Syn. grave, weighty, momentous, significant, valuable, influential, prominent, consequential, pompous. (See serious.)—Ant. insignificant, unimportant, trifling.

im-por-ta-tion (im"pōr-tā'shŭn), n. [see ¹import], 1, the act or practice of bringing merchandise into a country from abroad: opposite of exportation; 2, that which is brought into a country from abroad, as merchandise, wares, labor (workmen), fashions, etc.

im-por-tu-nate (im-pōr'tū-nāt), adj. [see importune], vexatiously persistent in demand; pressing; urgent.—adv. im-por'tu-nate-ly.

im-por-tune (im"pōr-tūn'; im-pōr'tūn), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -tuned (-tūnd'), p.pr. -tuning], [< Fr. importuner, to annoy, beg < L.L. importunari (-atus) < Lat. importunus, troublesome], to beset with continual petitions:—v.i. to beg urgently.

Syn. beg, beseech, crave, entreat, implore, solicit.

im-por-tu-ni-ty (im"pōr-tū'nĭ-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], persistent demand; insistence; pressing solicitation.—n. im-por'tu-na-cy.

im-pose (im-pōz'), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. imposed (-pōzd'), p.pr. imposing], [< Lat. in, on + pausare, to cease (confused with ponere (positus), to place)], 1, to lay or inflict upon, as a burden, tax, or punishment; force upon, as by authority or influence; 2, to obtrude; as, to impose one's company or opinions upon others; 3, to palm off deceivingly or fraudulently; with upon: Eccl., to lay on (hands), as in confirmation or ordination; Print., to lay out and lock up (pages of type), usually in multiples of four, so that the pages printed from them will be accurately placed and in consecutive order:—v.i. 1, to create a striking impression; exert influence through appearance or prestige; 2, to take advantage; presume: with upon; as, to impose upon one's good nature; 3, to take advantage through deception: with upon.

im-pos-ing (im-pōz'ĭng), p.adj. strikingly impressive; commanding; stately; grand.

Syn. striking, majestic, noble, dignified.—Ant. featureless, unimpressive, commonplace, forceless.

im-po-si-tion (im"pŏ-zĭsh'ŭn), n. [< Lat. impositio (-onis), imposition < imponere (-positus), to impose], 1, the act of imposing, as a burden, or of imposing upon; also, that which is imposed; 2, in England, additional work required, as of a student, for punishment; 3, a trick, fraud, or deception: Eccl., a laying on of hands, as in ordination: Print., the arrangement of type into groups of pages for printing.

im-pos-si-bil-i-ty (im-pŏs"ĭ-bĭl'ĭ-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], [see impossible], 1, the state or fact of not being able to exist, be done, or happen; 2, that which cannot exist or be done; that which cannot be imagined; utter improbability: Colloq., an objectionable thing or person; an intolerable situation.

im-pos-si-ble (im-pŏs'ĭ-bl), adj. [in- + possible], 1, not capable of occurring or being; 2, hopeless; not feasible; not to be done conveniently; as, it is impossible to meet you: Colloq., utterly objectionable, as a person; unsuitable; outrageous; as, an impossible situation.—adv. im-pos'si-bly.

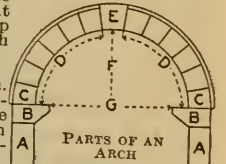
im-post (im'pōst), n. [O.F. < L.L. imponere (-positus), to place on], a tax, tribute, or duty; especially, a duty levied by the government on goods brought into a country: Arch., the top member of a pillar on which an arch rests.



PARTS OF AN ARCH

A, A, piers; B, B, imposts; C, C, springers; D, D, voussoirs; E, keystone; F, rise; G, span.

Syn. toll, tax, duty.

im-pos-tor (im-pŏs'tĕr), n. [< impose, influenced by imposture], one who deceives others by an assumed character or false pretensions; a swindler.

im-pos-ture (im-pŏs'tūr), n. [< L.L. impostura, imposition: see imposition], deception by means of false pretensions; fraud.

im-po-tence (im'pō-tĕns), n. [see impotent], 1, the state of being weak in body or mind; feebleness; 2, utter inability to accomplish a purpose: Law and Med., absence of procreative sexual power.—n. im'po-ten-cy.

Syn. weakness, infirmity, frailty, incapacity.

im-po-tent (im'pō-tĕnt), adj. [in- + potent], 1, wanting in physical, mental, or moral power; weak; without vigor; 2, lacking sexual power: Obs., wanting in self-control.—adv. im'po-tent-ly.

im-pound (im-pound'), v.t. [in- + ²*pound*], to shut up in a pen; as, to impound stray cattle; confine: Law, to seize and hold.

im-pov-er-ish (im-pŏv'ĕr-ĭsh), v.t. [< O.F. empoverir < Lat. in, in + pauper, poor], 1, to make poor; 2, to use up the strength, richness, or fertility of, as land.—n. im-pov'er-ish-ment.

im-pow-er (im-pou'ĕr), v.t. [see empower], 1, to give authority to; authorize; 2, to enable. Also, em-pow'er, Pfd. S.

im-prac-ti-ca-ble (im-prăk'tĭ-kă-bl), adj. [in- + practicable], 1, not to be effected by the means employed or at command; almost impossible; 2, not easily managed; 3, impassable, as roads.—n. im-prac'ti-ca-ble-ness.—adv. im-prac'ti-ca-bly.—n. im-prac'ti-ca-bil'i-ty.

im-pre-cate (im'prē-kāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -cated, p.pr. -cating], [< Lat. imprecari (-atus) < in, upon + precari, to pray], to call down (an evil or a curse); invoke: Obs. or Rare, to curse; wish evil to.—adj. im'pre-ca-to-ry.

im-pre-ca-tion (im"prē-kā'shŭn), n. a curse; the invoking of evil upon any one.

Syn. curse, execration, anathema. (See malediction.)

im-preg-na-ble (im-prĕg'nă-bl), adj. [< Fr. imprenable (< Lat. in-, not) + prendre, to take], 1, not to be captured, as a fortress; 2, not to be overcome, as virtue.—adv. im-preg'na-bly.—n. im-preg"na-bil'i-ty.

im-preg-nate (im-prĕg'nāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -nated, p.pr. -nating], [< L.L. impraegnare (-atus) < Lat. in, in + praegnans, pregnant], 1, to make (a female) pregnant; to fecundate (an ovum); also, to make fertile, as land; 2, to cause to be filled or permeated with; saturate, as wood with creosote; hence, 3, to imbue, as with feelings, principles, etc.:—adj. (-nāt), impregnated.—n. im"preg-na'tion.

im-pre-sa-ri-o (im"prā-sä'rē-ō), n. [pl. -rios (-ōz); -sari (-rē)], [It. < impresa, undertaking], the organizer, manager, or conductor of an opera or concert company.

im-pre-scrip-ti-ble (im"prē-skrĭp'tĭ-bl), adj. [in- + prescribe], inalienable; fixed: Law, not to be obtained or lost by the rule of prescription, as property.

[1]im-press (im-prĕs'), v.t. [< Lat. imprimere (-pressus) < in, in + premere, to press], 1, to exert pressure upon; mark (a thing), especially with a die, stamp, or the like; as, she impressed the wax with her seal; 2, to produce (a mark) by pressure on something; imprint; 3, to press (a thing upon another) so as to leave a mark; as, he impressed his brand on the animal; 4, figuratively, to affect or influence strongly; as, the speech impressed me deeply:—n. (im'prĕs), 1, a mark produced by pressure, as by a stamp; 2, a distinguishing mark; characteristic; stamp.

[2]im-press (im-prĕs'), v.t. [[1]in- + [2]press], 1, to compel to enter the public service, as soldiers or sailors; formerly, to seize by force for British naval service; 2, to seize for public service, as goods.

im-press-i-ble (im-prĕs'i-bl), adj. [see impress], capable of being mentally affected; sensitive.—n. im-press'i-bil'i-ty (-bil'i-ti).

im-pres-sion (im-prĕsh'ŭn), n. 1, the act of marking, stamping, etc.; 2, the state of being marked, stamped, or affected by outside influence; 3, the mark made by a stamp or mold; as, the impression on a coin; 4, the style or character formed by outside force or indirect influence; 5, an image in the mind caused by something outside it; the immediate effect produced upon the mind by sensation, emotion, or intellect; 6, a vague notion, remembrance, or belief; Print., the act or result of pressing type, plates, etc., on paper; Publishing, the whole number of copies printed at one time; especially, the copies reprinted unaltered from the original plates; distinguished from edition.

im-pres-sion-a-ble (im-prĕsh'ŭn-ā-bl), adj. capable of receiving effects from without or of being influenced by surroundings; as, an impressionable nature.—n. im-pres''sion-a-bil'i-ty.

Syn. susceptible, moldable, sensitive.

im-pres-sion-ism (im-prĕsh'ŭn-izm), n. Art, a theory of painting in which the underlying aim is to record the vividness and force of the artist's first impression without elaborate detail; Lit., the broad treatment of a subject, without much explanatory detail.—adj. and n. im-pres'sion-ist.

im-pres-sion-is-tic (im-prĕsh''ŭn-Is't'Ik), adj. designating, or pertaining to, a certain style, as in art and literature, which conveys a general impression throu_h the immediate subjective effect, with slight regard to minor details.

im-pres-sive (im-prĕs'iv), adj. capable of making an effect on the intellect or feelings.—adv. im-pres'sive-ly.—n. im-pres'sive-ness.

Syn. stirring, exciting, moving, imposing.

im-press-ment (im-prĕs'mĕnt), n. [see [2]impress], the act of impressing into public service or of seizing for public use.

im-prest (im'prĕst), n. [[1]in- + obs. prest, loan (O.F. < L.L. praestare, to stand surety for): influenced by It. and L.L. imprestare, to lend], 1, an advance of money to a person to enable him to execute a specified piece of state business; 2, formerly, advance pay of soldiers or sailors:—adj. Obs., advanced; loaned.

im-pri-ma-tur (im''pri-mā'tûr), n. [Lat. = let it be printed], a license to print a book, pamphlet, or the like; hence, sanction in general.

im-pri-mis (im-prī'mis), adv. [< Lat. in primis, among the first], in the first place.

im-print (im-print'), v.t. [in- + print], 1, to mark by pressure; 2, to stamp, as letters and words on paper, by means of inked type; 3, to impress deeply, as on the mind or memory:—n. (im'print), 1, an impression, impress, or mark left by something; 2, the publisher's or printer's name, usually with time and place of issue, on the title-page or at the end of a book.

im-pris-on (im-priz'n), v.t. [[1]in- + prison], 1, to put into a jail; detain in custody; incarcerate; 2, to restrain or confine in any way.

im-pris-on-ment (im-priz'n-mĕnt), n. 1, state of being shut in, or as in, jail; confinement; restraint; 2, the act of putting in jail.

im-prob-a-bil-i-ty (im-prŏb''ā-bil'i-ti), n. [pl. -ties (-tiz)], [see improbable], 1, unlikelihood; 2, an event not likely to happen.

im-prob-a-ble (im-prŏb'ā-bl), adj. [[2]in- + probable], not likely to be true; not easily believed; possible, but not to be expected; unlikely to occur.—adv. im-prob'a-bly.

im-promp-tu (im-prŏmp'tū), adv. [Fr. < Lat. in, in + promptus, readiness < promere (promptus), to produce], without preparation; offhand:—adj. said, made, or done on the spur of the moment:—n. an extemporaneous speech or performance.

im-prop-er (im-prŏp'ẽr), adj. [[2]in- + proper], 1, not well adapted or suited to the purpose in view; 2, not according to good manners; unseemly; unbecoming; indecent; 3, not in accord with fact, truth, or reason; wrong; inaccurate: improper fraction, Math., a fraction having a numerator larger than the denominator, as ⅘.—adv. im-prop'er-ly.

im-pro-pri-e-ty (im''prō-prī'ĕ-ti), n. [pl. -ties (-tiz)], 1, the quality of being improper; 2, an instance of that which is not in accordance with usage, custom, decency, or correctness.

im-prov-a-ble (im-prōōv'ā-bl), adj. [see improve], capable of being bettered.

im-prove (im-prōōv'), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. improved (-prōōvd'), p.pr. improving], [< A.F. emprower < O.F. en-, in + prou, profit < Lat. in, in + pro, for], 1, to make better, or more profitable or desirable; 2, to use to advantage; utilize; as, to improve an opportunity; 3, to alter so as to make more valuable, as a building lot:—v.i. 1, to grow better, as in health; 2, to alter for the better; add a degree of worth or value: with on or upon; 3, to increase in value; advance to a better quality or condition.—n. im-prov'er.

im-prove-ment (im-prōōv'mĕnt), n. 1, advancement of anything to a better condition; also, the result of this advancement; 2, that by which the value of anything, especially property, is increased: usually pl.

im-prov-i-dence (im-prŏv'I-dĕns), n. [see improvident], failure to provide for the future; want of foresight or thrift.

im-prov-i-dent (im-prŏv'I-dĕnt), adj. [[2]in- + provide], lacking foresight or thrift; not providing for the future.—adv. im-prov'i-dent-ly.

Syn. prodigal, wasteful, shiftless, thriftless, reckless.

im-prov-i-sa-tion (im-prŏv''I-sā'shŭn; -zā'shŭn), n. [see improvise], 1, the act of composing poetry or music without preparation; 2, an extemporaneous composition.

im-pro-vise (im''prō-vīz'), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -vised (-vīzd'), p.pr. -vising], [< It. improviso, unprovided, extempore < Lat. in-, not + providēre (-visus), to foresee, provide], 1, to compose without preparation or forethought: used especially of verse or music; 2, to make up on the spur of the moment or for a special occasion; as, to improvise a fancy costume:—v.i. 1, to compose without previous thought; 2, to do a thing offhand.—n. im''pro-vis'er; im-prov'i-sa''tor.

im-pru-dence (im-prōō'dĕns), n. [see imprudent], 1, want of discretion; rashness; carelessness of consequences; inattention to one's interests; 2, an act lacking discretion or foresight.

im-pru-dent (im-prōō'dĕnt), adj. [[2]in- + prudent], wanting caution or discretion; heedless of consequences; indiscreet.—adv. im-pru'dent-ly.

Syn. improvident, incautious, heedless, foolhardy, rash, inconsiderate, injudicious, indiscreet.

im-pu-dence (im'pū-dĕns), n. [see impudent], impertinence; forwardness; sauciness: Obs., immodesty; indelicacy.—n. im'pu-den-cy.

Syn. effrontery, pertness, boldness. (See assurance.)

im-pu-dent (im'pū-dĕnt), adj. [< Lat. impudens < in-, not + pudens (-entis), feeling shame], pert; insolent; offensively forward; disrespectful; insolent; brazen: Obs., not modest; indecent; shameless.—adv. im'pu-dent-ly.

im-pugn (im-pūn'), v.t. [< Fr. impugner < Lat. in, against + pugnare, to fight], to attack by arguments; question; attack as false.—n. im-pugn'er.

im-pu-is-sant (im-pū'I-sănt), adj. [[2]in- + puissant], powerless; impotent; feeble; weak.—n. im-pu'is-sance (-săns).

im-pulse (im'pŭls), n. [< Lat. impellere (-pulsus), to push: see impel], 1, force communicated suddenly, causing motion; an impetus; 2, the result of an impelling force; 3, incitement to action arising from some external stimulus or state of mind; 4, a sudden determination to act, without reflection or deliberation: Mech., the effect of a force in changing the motion of a body, measured by the product of the force multiplied by the time during which it acts: most frequently applied to forces of brief duration.

Syn. incentive, incitement, motive, instigation, influence. An incentive spurs or goads one to action; our desires, ambitions, or goals furnish incentives. A rich man may lack the incentive to earn money, but love of a certain profession may furnish a driving incentive to work. Incentive and motive are sometimes interchangeable, but motive implies the reason and will behind an action, rather than the stimulation that excited it. Motive determines what we shall do; incentive drives us to performance. Fear of punishment is often a child's motive for deceiving; detectives seek for the motive which may clear up an unexplained murder. An impulse is always mental; it is a sudden rush of feeling that incites to action without reflection; those who speak first and think afterward act on impulse; warm-hearted people yield to the impulse to be generous.

im-pul-sion (im-pŭl′shŭn), n. 1, the act of driving, or impelling, or the state of being driven, urged, or impelled: 2, the sudden driving impact of a body in motion upon another body; 3, tendency to onward motion derived from a driving force; impetus; 4, instigation; stimulation to action.

im-pul-sive (im-pŭl′siv), adj. 1, having the power of urging forward; 2, influenced by, or resulting from, some sudden moving force, either external or mental; as, impulsive movements; 3, apt to be moved to action by sudden and momentary feeling or emotion: Mech., acting for a short time: used of forces where the effect is measured by the impulse.—adv. im-pul′sive-ly.—n. im-pul′sive-ness.

Syn. impetuous, headlong, passionate, spontaneous.

im-pu-ni-ty (im-pū′nĭ-tĭ), n. [< Lat. impunitas < impunis, without punishment < in-, not + poena, punishment], freedom from punishment, injury, or loss; as, you cannot lie with impunity.

im-pure (im-pūr′), adj. [^{2}in- + pure], 1, not clean; unwholesome; 2, mixed with a foreign or inferior substance; adulterated; 3, not virtuous in thought, word, or deed; 4, unclean; unhallowed; 5, not idiomatic: ungrammatical; obscure: said of a language or style.—adv. im-pure′ly.—n. im-pure′ness.

im-pu-ri-ty (im-pū′rĭ-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tiz)], 1, the condition of being impure, physically or morally; 2, that which is, or tends to make, unclean.

im-pur-ple (im-pûr′pl), v.t. [see empurple], to make purple. See em-pur′ple, Pfd. S.

im-put-a-ble (im-pūt′ă-bl), adj. [see impute], capable of being charged or ascribed; attributable.—adv. im-put′a-bly.—n. im-put″a-bil′i-ty.

im-pu-ta-tion (im″pū-tā′shŭn), n. 1, the act of laying a charge against some one; an ascribing of responsibility; insinuation; 2, anything charged, especially discredit; blame; reproach.

im-put-a-tive (im-pūt′ă-tĭv), adj. 1, inclined to censure or charge to another; 2, attributable; ascribable.—adv. im-put′a-tive-ly.

im-pute (im-pūt′), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. imputed, p.pr. imputing], [< Lat. imputare (-atus) < in, to + putare, to reckon], to set to the account of; charge, attribute, or ascribe: Theol., to attribute (sin or righteousness) as received from another.—n. im-put′er.

in (in), prep. [A.S.], 1, within the bounds or limits of; as, lost in the woods; hurt in the hand; 2, being surrounded by, as circumstances, activities, interests, etc.; as, in business; in trouble; 3, within (a state, condition, occupation, situation, etc.); as, calm in death; in chains; in pain; 4, within (a period of time); during; as, in winter; 5, after; as, return in two days; 6, at the time of; as, in the beginning; 7, in the person or case of; as, you have a friend in me; 8, in the range of; as, in mathematics; within the capacity, thought, etc., of; as, it isn't in him to do that; 9, made of; as, a figure in porcelain; expressed in; as, a play in French; 10, on account of; as, to rejoice in youth; 11, as a means of; as, in explanation, let me offer this; 12, from among; as, nine times in ten: in as much as, inasmuch as, because; considering that:—adv. 1, to the inside; as, he went in; 2, close by; at home; as, my master is in:—adj. 1, incoming; inward; interior; 2, in port; arrived; as, an in ship: Slang, the richer by; as, he was in five dollars:—n. Baseball, a ball pitched so as to curve toward a right-handed batter: pl. 1, the political party in office; 2, in baseball, the side at the bat: ins and outs, 1, windings and turnings; 2, vicissitudes; as, the ins and outs of life; 3, the minute details of any complicated procedure.

^{1}in- prefix, [< Lat. in, in, into, on, to, against], in; into; toward; within; on: found in the forms il- before l, as illusion; ir- before r, as irradiate; im- before b, m, p, as imbibe; immerse; impart; and in words coming from the French, usually en-, as enrich.

^{2}in- prefix, [Lat. prefix = not], not; without; non-; un-; as, inaudible; inactive; inelastic: found, like ^{1}in-, as il-, ir-, and im-; as, illicit; irregular; immense.

^{3}in- prefix, [A.S.], meaning in, into, within, toward, on: usually combined with words of English origin.

In. abbr. [pl. in., ins.], inch:—In, Chem., the symbol [In] for the element indium.

-in suffix, [< Lat. -inus], Chem., used in names of certain elements and of neutral compounds; as, album*in*; fibr*in*: in elements, usually -ine; as, chlor*ine*.

in-a-bil-i-ty (in″ă-bĭl′ĭ-tĭ), n. [^{2}in- + ability], the state or condition of being without power to do; lack of power, mental, moral, or physical.

Syn. incapacity, impotence, incompetence. (See disability.)—Ant. strength, ability, power.

in-ac-ces-si-ble (in″ăk-sĕs′ĭ-bl), adj. [^{2}in- + access], not easy to get to or into; not approachable; not obtainable.—adv. in″ac-ces′si-bly.—n. in″ac-ces″si-bil′i-ty.

in-ac-cu-ra-cy (in-ăk′ū-rā-sĭ), n. [pl. -cies (-siz)], [see inaccurate], 1, the quality of being inexact; incorrectness; 2, a mistake; an error.

in-ac-cu-rate (in-ăk′ū-rāt), adj. [^{2}in- + accurate], incorrect; not exact; containing errors.—adv. in-ac′cu-rate-ly.—n. in-ac′cu-rate-ness.

in-ac-tion (in-ăk′shŭn), n. [^{2}in- + act], 1, lack of motion; 2, the state of idleness.

in-ac-tive (in-ăk′tĭv), adj. 1, powerless to move; 2, sluggish; idle.—n. in-ac′tive-ness.—adv. in-ac′tive-ly.—n. in″ac-tiv′i-ty.

Syn. inert, phlegmatic, lazy, idle, passive, supine, lifeless, indolent. Inactive people are not active: they may be lazy, and disinclined to act; they may be ill, and not able to exercise; they may be slow as opposed to lively or quick; they may be idle for the moment because there is nothing to do. Inert implies a disinclination to act, even to move, commonly inherent; inert natures, minds, bodies, are hard to prod or stimulate into motion or activity. Inert is applied figuratively to bodies in a state of torpor; as, the senseless man lay inert upon the floor; a hibernating animal lies inert the winter long. Both inactive and inert are applied to things; we speak of an inactive volcano; matter is inert. Phlegmatic describes those who are born heavy, dull, and stolid of mind and temperament; they are unexcitable rather than lazy or lifeless.

in-ad-e-quate (in-ăd′ĕ-kwāt), adj. [^{2}in- + adequate], not equal to some demand or requirement; not sufficient.—adv. in-ad′e-quate-ly.—n. in-ad′e-quate-ness.—n. in-ad′e-qua-cy.

Syn. incapable, deficient, insufficient, unsuitable.

in-ad-mis-si-ble (in″ăd-mis′ĭ-bl), adj. [^{2}in- + admit], 1, not to be granted or conceded as true; 2, not to be allowed or admitted.—adv. in″ad-mis′si-bly.—n. in″ad-mis″si-bil′i-ty.

in-ad-vert-ence (in″ăd-vûr′tĕns), n. [^{2}in- + advert], 1, inattention; negligence; 2, an oversight; a mistake.—n. in″ad-vert′en-cy.

in-ad-vert-ent (in″ăd-vûr′tĕnt), adj. 1, inattentive; careless; 2, unintentional; as, an inadvertent slight.—adv. in″ad-vert′ent-ly.

Syn. unconsidered, heedless, thoughtless, inattentive. (See negligent.)—Ant. thoughtful, considerate, careful.

in-al-ien-a-ble (in-āl′yĕn-ă-bl), adj. [^{2}in- + alien], incapable of being properly surrendered or transferred to another; as, inalienable rights or prerogatives.—adv. in-al′ien-a-bly.—n. in-al″ien-a-bil′i-ty.

in-am-o-ra-ta (in-ăm″ō-rā′tă), n. [It. < inamorare, to fall in love with < Lat. in, in + amor, love], a woman with whom one is in love.

in-ane (in-ān′), adj. [< Lat. inanis, empty, vain], empty; senseless; silly.—adv. in-ane′ly.

in-an-i-mate (in-ăn′ĭ-māt), adj. [^{2}in- + animate], 1, without life; specifically, not endowed with animal life; 2, hence, dull; spiritless; lifeless.—adv. in-an′i-mate-ly.—n. in-an′i-mate-ness.

Syn. lifeless, dull, inert, soulless, spiritless. (See dead.)

in-a-ni-tion (in″ă-nĭsh′ŭn), n. [< Lat. inanitio (-onis) < inanire (-itus), to make empty < inanis, empty], emptiness; exhaustion from hunger.

in-an-i-ty (in-ăn′ĭ-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tiz)], [see inane], emptiness; senselessness: pl. vanities.

in-ap-pli-ca-ble (in-ăp′lĭ-kă-bl), adj. [^{2}in- + apply], 1, not suitable or fit for a certain purpose or case; 2, not bearing upon the case in point.—adv. in-ap′pli-ca-bly.—n. in-ap″pli-ca-bil′i-ty.

in-ap-pre-ci-a-ble (in″ă-prē′shĭ-ă-bl), adj. [^{2}in- + appreciate], too small to be realized; of no consequence.—adv. in″ap-pre′ci-a-bly.

in-ap-pro-pri-ate (in″ă-prō′prĭ-āt), adj. [^{2}in- + appropriate], not suitable for a particular occasion or person; not fit; not proper.—adv. in″ap-pro′pri-ate-ly.—n. in″ap-pro′pri-ate-ness.

in-apt (in-ăpt′), adj. [^{2}in- + apt], not suitable; not ready; unfit.—adv. in-apt′ly.—n. in-apt′ness.

in-apt-i-tude (in-ăp′tĭ-tūd), n. 1, lack of general fitness or suitableness; 2, want of readiness; 3, want of skill; unhandiness.

INARCHED PLANTS
a, method of cutting branches.

in-arch (in-ärch′), v.t. [^{1}in- + ^{1}arch], to graft by bringing two branches into contact while both are growing on their own roots.

in-ar-tic-u-late (in″är-tĭk′ū-lāt), adj. [^{2}in- + articulate], 1, not uttered in the form of intelligible speech, as a moan or the sounds made by animals; 2, incapable of speech; unable to speak distinctly; as, inarticulate with rage; 3, unspoken; dumb; as, inarticulate grief: Zoöl., not composed of segments united by joints.—adv. in″ar-tic′u-late-ly.

in-ar-tis-tic (In"är-tĭs'tĭk), adj. [²*in-* + artistic], 1, not in accord with the principles of art; 2, lacking appreciation of art; 3, not graceful; not skilful. Also, in"ar-tis'ti-cal.—adv. in"ar-tis'ti-cal-ly.

in-as-much (In"ăz-mŭch'), adv. [in + ¹*as* + much], in so far; to such a degree; in view of the fact: often, in as much (see in): used with as.

in-at-ten-tion (In"ă-tĕn'shŭn), n. [²*in-* + attend], heedlessness; failure to fix one's mind on a matter; lack of courteous regard or attention.

in-at-ten-tive (In"ă-tĕn'tĭv), adj. paying no heed (to); negligent; heedless.—adv. in"at-ten'tive-ly.—n. in"at-ten'tive-ness.

Syn. absent-minded, thoughtless. (See negligent.)

in-au-di-ble (In-ô'dĭ-bl), adj. [²*in-* + audible], incapable of being heard; not heard.—adv. in-au'di-bly.—n. in-au"di-bil'i-ty.

in-au-gu-ral (In-ô'gŭ-răl), adj. [see inaugurate], pertaining to the ceremonies accompanying the dedication of a public building, the formal installation of a person in office, or the like:—n. an address made on such an occasion.

in-au-gu-rate (In-ô'gŭ-rāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -rated, p.pr. -rating], [< Lat. in- + augurare (-atus), to take omens, introduce to office with ceremonies by augurs < augur, a diviner or reader of omens], 1, to admit or introduce into office with appropriate ceremonies; invest with office in a formal manner; install; 2, to make a formal beginning of; as, to inaugurate a custom; begin, as a new policy; 3, to initiate the public use of by some ceremony; dedicate, as a public building.—n. in-au'gu-ra"tion.

Syn. institute, initiate, begin, commence, induct.

in-aus-pi-cious (In"ôs-pĭsh'ŭs), adj. [²*in-* + auspicious], unfavorable; of bad omen; as, an inauspicious sign.—adv. in"aus-pi'cious-ly.

in-board (In'bôrd"), adj. [²*in-* + board], Naut., situated inside the hull:—adv. Naut., toward the center of the vessel; as, ballast stored inboard.

in-born (In'bôrn"), adj. [²*in-* + ²*bear*], implanted by nature; innate.

Syn. inbred, natural, ingrained. (See inherent.) in-bound (In'bound"), adj. [²*in-* + ²*bound*], bound or headed toward, rather than away from, a given or implied place.

in-bred (In'brĕd"), p.adj. [see inbreed], 1, born with one; natural; as, man has an inbred love of freedom; 2, (In-brĕd'), born of closely related parents.

Syn. ingrained, innate, natural. (See inherent.) in-breed (In-brēd'), v.t. [²*in-* + breed], 1, to produce within; 2, to mate (animals closely related).

inc. abbr. 1, including; included; inclusive (also, incl.); 2, incorporated (also, incor.); 3, increase.

In-ca (Ing'kȧ), n. [Sp. < Peruv.], 1, an emperor of Peru before the Spanish conquest; also, a member of the imperial clan of Peru; 2, a member of the tribe of Indians dominant in South America at that time.

in-cage (In-kāj'), v.t. [²*in-* + cage], to shut in, or as in, a cage; coop up.

in-cal-cu-la-ble (In-kăl'kŭ-lȧ-bl), adj. [²*in-* + calculate], 1, beyond reckoning or estimate; 2, uncertain.—adv. in-cal'cu-la-bly.

in-ca-les-cent (In"kȧ-lĕs'ĕnt), adj. [< Lat. incalescens (-entis) < in-, in + calescere, to grow hot < calēre, to be hot, glow], increasing in heat.

in-can-des-cence (In"kăn-dĕs'ĕns), n. [see incandescent], the condition of emitting light as a result of intense heat, as does an electric lamp filament.—n. in"can-des'cen-cy.

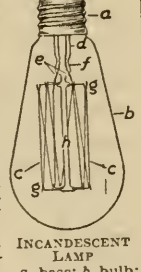
in-can-des-cent (In"kăn-dĕs'ĕnt), adj. [< Lat. incandescens (-entis) < in-, in + candescere, to begin to glisten, glow < candēre, to be glittering white], glowing with heat; white with intense heat; hence, brilliant; resplendent; shining; clear: incandescent lamp, a form of lamp in which the light is produced by a filament which is rendered luminous by its resistance to an electric current.



INCANDESCENT LAMP

a, base; b, bulb; c, c, filaments; d, stem; e, lead-in wires; f, sealed section of stem; g, g, anchors; h, hub.

in-can-ta-tion (In"kăn-tā'shŭn), n. [< Lat. incantatio (-onis), an enchanting < incantare, to enchant < in-, on + cantare, to sing, act, charm < canere, to sing], 1, the use of magical words, spoken or sung, for enchantment or exorcism; 2, the formula so used; 3, hence, any magic, sorcery, wizardry, or enchantment.

in-ca-pa-ble (In-kā'pȧ-bl), adj. [²*in-* + capable], 1, not having the power or fitness for a specified action: with of: as, incapable of understanding; 2, not able to admit; not susceptible; as, incapable of improvement; 3, not sufficiently wicked; as, incapable of murder; 4, deficient in ordinary ability; Law, lacking legal qualification.—n. in-ca'pa-ble-ness.—adv. in-ca'pa-bly.—n. in-ca"pa-bil'i-ty.

Syn. insufficient, unqualified, incompetent, inadequate. (See unable.)—Ant. able, sufficient, qualified.

in-ca-pac-i-tate (In"kȧ-păs'ĭ-tāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -tated, p.pr. -tating], [see incapacity], to deprive of ability or natural power; render powerless or unfit; disable; Law, to deprive of legal requisites; disqualify.—n. in"ca-pac'i-ta'tion.

in-ca-pac-i-ty (In"kȧ-păs'ĭ-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], [²*in-* + capacity], lack of power, physical or mental; disability from any cause.

Syn. inability, disability, incompetency, incapability, disqualification.—Ant. capacity, ability, qualification.

in-car-cer-ate (In-kär'sĕr-āt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -ated, p.pr. -ating], [< L.L. incarcerare (-atus), to imprison < Lat. in-, in + carcer, a prison], to imprison; confine:—adj. imprisoned.—n. in-car"cer-a'tion.—n. in-car'cer-a"tor (-ā"tẽr).

in-car-na-dine (In-kär'nȧ-dĭn), adj. [< It. incarnadino, carnation color < incarnato, incarnate, of flesh color < Lat. incarnare (-atus), to clothe with flesh], flesh-colored; pink; also, crimson, or blood red:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -dined (-dĭnd), p.pr. -dining], to dye red, flesh color, pink, or crimson.

in-car-nate (In-kär'nāt), adj. [< Lat. incarnare (-atus), to clothe with flesh < in-, in + caro (carnis), flesh], embodied in human form; personified:—v.t. (In-kär'nāt), [p.t. and p.p. -nated, p.pr. -nating], 1, to clothe with flesh; embody in flesh; 2, hence, to express in concrete form; actualize; 3, to be the type of; embody, as a quality or other abstraction.

in-car-na-tion (In"kär-nā'shŭn), n. 1, the act of clothing with, or of assuming, flesh; embodiment in human form; 2, a person or form embodying a principle, ideal, etc.; also, a person in whom some attribute, principle, or quality is exhibited in a human form: Theol., the taking upon himself of human nature by the Son of God; embodiment of God in human form, as in the person of Jesus.

in-case (In-kās'), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. incased (-kāst'), p.pr. incasing], [²*in-* + case], to inclose in a box or other covering; surround with anything. Also, en-case'.—n. in-case'ment.

in-cau-tious (In-kô'shŭs), adj. [²*in-* + caution], heedless; careless; indifferent; unwary.—adv. in-cau'tious-ly.—n. in-cau'tious-ness.

Syn. indiscreet, imprudent, thoughtless, foolhardy, rash.—Ant. cautious, prudent, discreet, circumspect.

in-cen-di-a-rism (In-sĕn'dĭ-ȧ-rĭzm), n. [see incendiary], the act of one who, for malicious purposes, sets fire to property.

in-cen-di-a-ry (In-sĕn'dĭ-ā-rĭ), adj. [< Lat. incendiarius < incendium, conflagration < in- (intensive) + candēre, to glow], 1, pertaining to the malicious setting on fire of property; 2, tending to excite sedition or violence; as, an incendiary speech:—n. [pl. -ries (-rĭz)], 1, one who maliciously sets fire to the property of another; 2, one who excites quarrels.

¹in-cense (In-sĕns'), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. incensed (-sĕnst'), p.pr. incensing], [< Lat. incendere (-census), to set on fire < in- (intensive) + candēre, to glow], to inflame, as passion; make angry; provoke.

Syn. vex, exasperate, inflame, madden. (See irritate.)

²in-cense (In'sĕns), n. [< Lat. incensum, thing set on fire], 1, any material, as aromatic gum or other vegetable product, which gives off perfume when burned; 2, the smoke or odor of such spices or gums when burned, as in religious rites or ceremonies; 3, any pleasant odor or perfume, as of flowers; 4, hence, anything offered in the way of homage, as flattery, applause, etc.:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. incensed (-sĕnst), p.pr. incensing], to perfume with, or as with, incense:—v.i. to burn incense.

in-cen-tive (In-sĕn'tĭv), adj. [< Lat. incentivus, setting the tune < incinere (-centus) < in-, into + canere, to sing, sound], arousing to action; encouraging:—n. that which arouses to action.

Syn., n. motive, stimulus, spur. (See impulse.)

in-cept (In-sĕpt'), v.t. [< Lat. incipere (-ceptus), to begin < in-, into + capere, to take], to take within: Obs., to begin; undertake.

in-cep-tion (In-sĕp'shŭn), n. the beginning; origin; initiation; first stage; as, the movement was successful from its inception.

in-cep-tive (In-sĕp'tĭv), adj. beginning; relating to a beginning:—n. Gram., a word which, by its form, indicates the beginning of an action.

in-cer-ti-tude (In-sûr'tĭ-tūd), n. [²*in-* + certitude], lack of assurance or decision.

in-ces-sant (ĭn-sĕs'ănt), adj. [< L.L. incessans (-antis), unceasing < Lat. in-, not + cessare, to cease], unceasing; ceaseless; continual. —adv. in-ces'sant-ly.—n. in-ces'san-cy.

Syn. uninterrupted, unceasing. (See continual.)

in-cest (ĭn'sĕst), n. [< Lat. incestus < in-, not + castus, chaste], sexual relationship between persons related within the degrees wherein marriage is forbidden by law.—adj. in-ces'tu-ous.

inch (ĭnch), n. [< A.S. ynce < Lat. uncia, twelfth part; inch], 1, a measure of length, a twelfth part of a foot (see App. II, illus.); 2, a small distance or degree:—v.t. 1, to measure by inches; 2, to move by small degrees:—v.i. to move slowly or by small degrees.

inch-meal (ĭnch'mēl"), adv. [< A.S. ynce, inch by little; slowly; gradually; inch by inch.

in-cho-ate (ĭn'kō-āt), adj. [< Lat. incohare, inchoare (-atus), to begin], incipient; just begun; hence, incomplete.—adv. in'cho-ate-ly.

in-cho-a-tive (ĭn-kō'ā-tĭv), adj. 1, incomplete; 2, expressing or pertaining to a beginning:—n. a word, especially a verb, which expresses the beginning of an action.—abbr. inch.

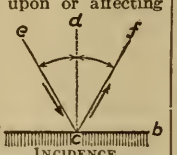
in-ci-dence (ĭn'sĭ-dĕns), n. [see incident], the act or fact of falling upon or affecting something: Geom., the position of two figures in relation to each other when they partly coincide, as of a line and a point within the line: angle of incidence, Phys., the angle between the line of direction of a ray and the perpendicular to the surface on which it falls.



INCIDENCE
ecd, angle of incidence upon surface ab; dcf, angle of reflection.

in-ci-dent (ĭn'sĭ-dĕnt), adj. [< Lat. incidere < in, in + cadere, to fall], 1, falling or acting upon something from without; as, incident rays, rays incident upon a surface; 2, apt to occur; naturally pertaining; as, the duties incident to his rank: Law, commonly depending on, or connected with, something, as an estate, office, etc.:—n. an event of small importance in relation to some larger event or experience; also, an accidental occurrence; episode: Law, something naturally or commonly attaching to an office, estate, etc.

Syn., n. circumstance, occurrence. (See event.)

in-ci-den-tal (ĭn"sĭ-dĕn'tăl), adj. happening as a chance or subordinate feature of something more important; casual; relatively unimportant; occurring as a necessary but minor result of something larger; as, expenses incidental to a journey: incidental music, 1, music played during the action of a play; 2, soft music accompanying, and accordant in feeling with, the reading or recitation of a poem:—n. something casual or relatively unimportant: pl. minor expenses.—adv. in"ci-den'tal-ly.

Syn., adj. casual, accidental, chance. (See fortuitous.)

in-cin-er-ate (ĭn-sĭn'ĕr-āt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -ated, p.pr. -ating], [< L.L. incinerare (-atus), to burn to ashes < Lat. in, in + cinis (-eris), ashes], to burn to ashes; consume by fire; as, to incinerate garbage; cremate.—n. in-cin"er-a'tion.

in-cin-er-a-tor (ĭn-sĭn'ĕr-ā"tĕr), n. a furnace for burning waste substances; especially, one for burning rubbish or for cremating bodies.

in-cip-i-ence (ĭn-sĭp'ĭ-ĕns), n. [see incipient], beginning; initial state; commencement, as of pride.—n. in-cip'i-en-cy.

in-cip-i-ent (ĭn-sĭp'ĭ-ĕnt), adj. [< Lat. incipiens (-entis), beginning < in, in + capere, to take], beginning to be or to appear; as, the incipient stage of a disease.—adv. in-cip'i-ent-ly.

in-cise (ĭn-sīz'), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. incised (-sīzd'), p.pr. incising], [< Fr. inciser < Lat. incidere (-cisus) < in, into + caedere, to cut], to cut in or into; engrave; carve into with a sharp instrument.

in-ci-sion (ĭn-sĭzh'ŭn), n. 1, the act of cutting in or engraving; 2, a cut made with a sharp instrument, as in a surgical operation.

in-ci-sive (ĭn-sī'sĭv), adj. 1, keen-edged; having the quality of cutting; 2, hence, sharply expressive, as language; sarcastic; cutting.—adv. in-ci'sive-ly.—n. in-ci'sive-ness.

in-ci-sor (ĭn-sī'zĕr; -sĕr), n. a cutting tooth; especially, in man, one of the four front teeth situated one in front of each eye tooth (see dentition, illus.).

in-ci-so-ry (ĭn-sī'sō-rĭ), adj. having the power of cutting; incisive.

in-cite (ĭn-sīt'), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. incited, p.pr. inciting], [< Fr. inciter < Lat. incitare, to rouse < in, on + ciēre (citus), to move, make to go], to move to action; stir up; spur on.—n. in-cit'er.

Syn. instigate, move, abet, animate, quicken, stir.

in-cite-ment (ĭn-sīt'mĕnt), n. the act of inciting; a spurring on; also, that which goads or spurs on; an incentive; impulse; encouragement.

Syn. spur, stimulation, incentive. (See impulse.)

in-ci-vil-i-ty (ĭn"sĭ-vĭl'ĭ-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], [in- + civil], 1, lack of courtesy; impoliteness; 2, any discourteous or impolite act.

Syn. indignity, rudeness, unmannerliness.

in-clem-en-cy (ĭn-klĕm'ĕn-sĭ), n. [pl. -cies (-sĭz)], [see inclement], 1, severity of weather; storminess; 2, harshness of disposition.

in-clem-ent (ĭn-klĕm'ĕnt), adj. [in- + clement], 1, harsh; unmerciful; 2, severe; stormy; as, inclement weather.

in-clin-a-ble (ĭn-klīn'ă-bl), adj. [see incline], 1, favorably disposed; propitious; 2, having a tendency; 3, capable of sloping.

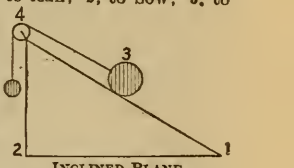
in-cli-na-tion (ĭn"klĭ-nā'shŭn), n. 1, a leaning or slanting position; 2, a turning aside from a given direction or position, usually the vertical or horizontal; 3, the act of bending; specifically, a nod; as, a courteous inclination of the head; 4, a tendency of the mind; disposition; bent; as, an inclination toward business; 5, desire; preference: Geom., the angle lying between two lines, planes, etc.; Magnetism, the angle below the horizontal which the lines of force in the earth's magnetic field make with the horizontal at any given point; the magnetic dip.

Syn. bias, affection, bent, propensity, proclivity, tendency, proneness, turn. (See disposition, desire.) —Ant. aversion, dislike, repulsion, disinclination.

in-cline (ĭn-klīn'), v.i. [p.t. and p.p. inclined (-klīnd'), p.pr. inclining], [< O.F. encliner < Lat. in, toward + clinare, to bend, lean], 1, to turn or lean from a given direction or position; 2, to bow; 3, to have a mental bent or tendency; 4, to have preference:—v.t. 1, to cause to lean; 2, to bow; 3, to direct; give a tendency to; turn; dispose:—n. a slope; a sloping surface; an inclined plane; an ascent or descent.



INCLINED PLANE
1-2, base; 3, large weight; 4, pulley or roller.

in-clined (ĭn-klīnd'), p.adj. 1, sloping; 2, having a tendency; 3, favorably disposed: Math., forming any angle with some line or surface: inclined plane, Mech., one of the simple machines, or mechanical powers, consisting of a sloping surface forming any angle, except a right angle, with a horizontal plane.

in-cli-nom-e-ter (ĭn"klĭ-nŏm'ĕ-tĕr), n. [incline + meter], an instrument for measuring the inclination or slope of anything; specifically: Aëro., an instrument used on aircraft for measuring their angle or dip during flight; Phys., an instrument for measuring the inclination, or magnetic dip, at any point; a dipping needle; Mech., a device for indicating divergence from a level; a clinometer; used in surveying, carpentry, etc.

INCLINOMETER

in-close (ĭn-klōz'), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. inclosed (-klōzd'), p.pr. inclosing], [in- + close], 1, to shut in; include within limits, as land within a wall or fence; surround; 2, to insert or fold in with something else; as, to inclose a check in a letter. Also, en-close'.

in-clo-sure (ĭn-klō'zhŭr), n. 1, the act of shutting in, or state of being shut in; 2, that which is surrounded, as a piece of land; specifically, at various periods in English history, a legally authorized fencing in of common land so as to include it in a large estate under private ownership; 3, that which surrounds, as a fence; 4, something included with a letter in an envelope, as a bill, check, etc. Also, en-clo'sure.

in-clude (ĭn-klōōd'), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. included, p.pr. including], [< Lat. includere (-clusus) < in, in + claudere, to shut], 1, to inclose; hold, as in an inclosure; shut up within something; 2, to contain as part of the whole; 3, to place in a class or category.

Syn. contain, inclose, comprise. (See comprehend.)

in-clu-sion (ĭn-klōō'zhŭn), n. the act of including; also, the state of being included or contained: Mineral., a foreign substance, usually minute, inclosed in a mineral mass (see illus. next page).

in-clu-sive (ĭn-klōō'sĭv), adj. 1, inclosing; containing; 2, comprehensive; all-embracing; 3, taking in, or including, the terms, limits, or extremes, mentioned; as, from Monday to Saturday inclusive.—adv. in-clu'sive-ly.—n. in-clu'sive-ness.

Syn. comprehensive, comprising, surrounding.

in-cog-ni-to (ĭn-kŏg′nĭ-tō), adj. [It. = unknown < Lat. in-, not + cognoscere (cognitus), to recognize], unknown or disguised:—adv. in disguise; with one's real title or character concealed, as under an assumed name; as, royalty may prefer to travel incognito:—n. [pl. -tos (-tōz)], 1, a person who appears or travels under an assumed title; 2, the assuming of a character or title to avoid recognition; 3, a disguise; 4, the state of being disguised or unrecognized. —Also, fem. in-cog′ni-ta.—abbr. incog.

INCLUSIONS IN A SECTION OF A CRYSTAL in-co-her-ence (ĭn″kō-hēr′ĕns), n. [see incoherent], 1, looseness; failure to stick together; 2, want of connection in thought or language; inconsistency; 3, that which is marked by want of connection.—n. in″co-her′en-cy.

in-co-her-ent (ĭn″kō-hēr′ĕnt), adj. [²*in-* + cohere], 1, consisting of parts that do not cling together; as, particles of sand are incoherent; 2, without logical connection; disjointed; rambling; as, incoherent speech.—adv. in″co-her′ent-ly.

in-com-bus-ti-ble (ĭn″kŏm-bŭs′tĭ-bl), adj. [²*in-* + combustible], incapable of being consumed by fire:—n. an unburnable substance, as asbestos.—n. in″com-bus″ti-bil′i-ty.

in-come (ĭn′kŭm), n. [²*in-* + come], 1, the amount, usually expressed in money, derived from labor, business, property, or capital; 2, the yearly receipts of a person or business company: income tax, a tax levied upon yearly receipts or profits.

Syn. proceeds, profit, revenue, emolument, interest.

in-com-ing (ĭn′kŭm″ĭng), adj. 1, coming in; as, the incoming administration; 2, accruing, as profits:—n. 1, the act of coming in; arrival; 2, that which comes in.—n. in′com″er.

in-com-men-su-ra-ble (ĭn″kŏ-mĕn′shŏō-rȧ-bl), adj. [see incommensurate], having no common measure; not commensurate.—n. in″com-men″su-ra-bil′i-ty.

in-com-men-su-rate (ĭn″kŏ-mĕn′shŏō-rāt), adj. [²*in-* + commensurate], 1, having no common measure; 2, inadequate; not great enough; as, his strength is incommensurate to the demands upon it.—adv. in″com-men′su-rate-ly.

in-com-mode (ĭn″kŏ-mōd′), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -moded, p.pr. -moding], [< Lat. in-, not + commodare, to adjust < commodus, fit], to inconvenience; trouble; disturb.

Syn. annoy, trouble, molest, inconvenience, vex.

in-com-mo-di-ous (ĭn″kŏ-mō′dĭ-ŭs), adj. not giving ease or advantage; inconvenient; as, incommodious apartments.—adv. in″com-mo′di-ous-ly.—n. in″com-mo′di-ous-ness.

in-com-mod-i-ty (ĭn″kŏ-mŏd′ĭ-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], inconvenience; trouble; disturbance; annoyance; disadvantage.

in-com-mu-ni-ca-ble (ĭn″kŏ-mū′nĭ-kȧ-bl), adj. [²*in-* + communicate], incapable of being shared with, or told to, another.

in-com-mu-ni-ca-tive (ĭn″kŏ-mū′nĭ-kā-tĭv), adj. not given to speaking freely; reserved; taciturn; reticent.

in-com-pa-ra-ble (ĭn-kŏm′pȧ-rȧ-bl), adj. [²*in-* + compare], 1, not to be compared, or unsuitable for comparison: with with or to; 2, unequaled; matchless; peerless.—n. in-com″pa-ra-bil′i-ty.—adv. in-com′pa-ra-bly.

in-com-pat-i-bil-i-ty (ĭn″kŏm-păt″ĭ-bĭl′ĭ-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], [see incompatible], 1, the state of being inharmonious, incongruous, irreconcilable, or inconsistent; 2, that which is incompatible.—n. in″com-pat′i-ble-ness.

in-com-pat-i-ble (ĭn″kŏm-păt′ĭ-bl), adj. [²*in-* + compatible], incapable of existing or acting together in harmony; discordant; disagreeing:—n.pl. persons or things that do not agree, harmonize, or correspond.—adv. in″com-pat′i-bly.

Syn., adj. incongruous, conflicting. (See inconsistent.)

in-com-pe-tence (ĭn-kŏm′pē-tĕns), n. [see incompetent], inability; insufficiency; legal disqualification.—n. in-com′pe-ten-cy.

Syn. incapacity, inadequacy, unfitness.

in-com-pe-tent (ĭn-kŏm′pē-tĕnt), adj. [²*in-* + competent], of inadequate ability or fitness: Law, not legally qualified:—n. one who is incapable of doing what is expected of him.

Syn., adj. incapable, disqualified, unable, insufficient.—Ant., adj. sufficient, capable, qualified.

in-com-plete (ĭn″kŏm-plēt′), adj. [²*in-* + complete], 1, not fully finished or developed; 2, not having all its parts; imperfect; as, an incomplete flower.—adv. in″com-plete′ly.—n. in″com-plete′ness.—n. in″com-ple′tion.

in-com-pre-hen-si-ble (ĭn-kŏm″prē-hĕn′sĭ-bl), adj. [²*in-* + comprehend], 1, not to be understood or grasped by the mind; hence, enigmatic; 2, infinite; without limit or end; boundless.—adv. in-com″pre-hen′si-bly.—n. in-com″pre-hen″si-bil′i-ty.—n. in-com″pre-hen′si-ble-ness.

Syn. mysterious, baffling, inconceivable, unintelligible, unfathomable, recondite, inscrutable.

in-com-press-i-ble (ĭn″kŏm-prĕs′ĭ-bl), adj. [²*in-* + compress], 1, incapable of being reduced in volume or compass by pressure; 2, resisting pressure.—n. in″com-press″i-bil′i-ty.

in-con-ceiv-a-ble (ĭn″kŏn-sēv′ȧ-bl), adj. [²*in-* + conceive], incapable of being grasped by the mind; unimaginable; unthinkable; unbelievable.—n. in″con-ceiv′a-ble-ness.—adv. in″con-ceiv′a-bly.—n. in″con-ceiv″a-bil′i-ty.

in-con-clu-sive (ĭn″kŏn-klōō′sĭv), adj. [²*in-* + conclude], 1, leading to no definite result in evidence or argument; unconvincing; 2, reaching no definite result in action; ineffective.—adv. in″con-clu′sive-ly.—n. in″con-clu′sive-ness.

in-con-gru-i-ty (ĭn″kŏn-grōō′ĭ-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], [see incongruous], 1, want of fitness or harmony; inconsistency; 2, that which is unfit, unsuitable, or inconsistent.

in-con-gru-ous (ĭn-kŏng′grōō-ŭs), adj. [²*in-* + congruous], inharmonious; unsuitable for given conditions; inappropriate.—adv. in-con′gru-ous-ly.—n. in-con′gru-ous-ness.

Syn. discordant, ill-matched. (See inconsistent.)

in-con-se-quence (ĭn-kŏn′sē-kwĕns), n. [see inconsequent], 1, the quality of being illogical; lack of proper sequence; irrelevancy; 2, that which does not follow as a logical sequence.

in-con-se-quent (ĭn-kŏn′sē-kwĕnt), adj. [²*in-* + consequent], 1, not logically resulting from what has gone before; 2, irrelevant; having nothing to do with the subject in hand.

in-con-se-quen-tial (ĭn-kŏn″sē-kwĕn′shȧl), adj. 1, irrelevant; illogical; 2, unimportant; of no consequence.

in-con-sid-er-a-ble (ĭn″kŏn-sĭd′ĕr-ȧ-bl), adj. [²*in-* + consider], not deserving consideration; unimportant.—adv. in″con-sid′er-a-bly.—n. in″con-sid′er-a-ble-ness.

in-con-sid-er-ate (ĭn″kŏn-sĭd′ĕr-ăt), adj. 1, not properly considered; rash; 2, not heeding the wishes, thoughts, or feelings of others; thoughtless of others.—adv. in″con-sid′er-ate-ly.—n. in″con-sid′er-ate-ness.

Syn. negligent, heedless, improvident, incautious, rash.—Ant. considerate, thoughtful, careful.

in-con-sist-en-cy (ĭn″kŏn-sĭs′tĕn-sĭ), n. [pl. -cies (-sĭz)], [see inconsistent], 1, want of agreement, as between two narratives of the same event; incongruity; 2, especially, a discrepancy between practice and professed principles; 3, changeableness.—n. in″con-sist′ence.

in-con-sist-ent (ĭn″kŏn-sĭs′tĕnt), adj. [²*in-* + consistent], 1, illogical; lacking agreement or uniformity; 2, self-contradictory; incompatible, as conduct with theory; showing a difference between principles and practice.—adv. in″con-sist′ent-ly.

Syn. incongruous, incompatible, illogical, contradictory, conflicting, inharmonious, irreconcilable, unsuitable. Inconsistent, incongruous, and incompatible agree in expressing discordance and disagreement. The idea under inconsistent is, unfit to be placed together; that under incompatible is, incapable of being suffered together; that under incongruous is, unsuitable, absolutely ill-matched. Inconsistent is applied to our actions or conduct when either is at variance with our principles. Inconsistent statements are contradictory. An inconsistent mode of life is not in keeping with one's income, standards, and the like. Colors that clash disagreeably are incongruous. Things, facts, natures, sentiments, that are incompatible cannot exist together. One cannot be at once serene and agitated—the states are incompatible. A man who adopts a certain course of action must discard all amusements or diversions that are incompatible with it.—Ant. accordant, harmonious, agreeing, consistent, consonant.

in-con-sol-a-ble (in″kŏn-sōl′ă-bl), adj. [²*in-* + console], not to be comforted; disconsolate.—adv. in″con-sol′a-bly.

in-con-so-nant (in-kŏn′sō-nănt), adj. [²*in-* + consonant], not agreeing; not harmonious; discordant.—n. in-con′so-nance.—adv. in-con′so-nant-ly.

in-con-spic-u-ous (in″kŏn-spĭk′ū-ŭs), adj. [²*in-* + conspicuous], 1, not easily perceived; so small as to escape notice; hardly to be seen; 2, not attracting attention.—adv. in″con-spic′u-ous-ly.—n. in″con-spic′u-ous-ness.

in-con-stan-cy (in-kŏn′stăn-sĭ), n. [see inconstant], 1, changeableness; fickleness; instability of temper; 2, an instance of fickleness.
Syn. faithlessness, volatility, gaiety. (See lightness.)

in-con-stant (in-kŏn′stănt), adj. [²*in-* + constant], subject to change; unstable; variable; fickle.—adv. in-con′stant-ly.
Syn. wavering, fluctuating, variable, disloyal, changeable, mutable, faithless.—Ant. constant, faithful.

in-con-test-a-ble (in″kŏn-tĕs′tă-bl), adj. [²*in-* + contest], not admitting of question or dispute.—adv. in″con-test′a-bly.
Syn. certain, undeniable, incontrovertible, indubitable, unquestionable, indisputable.—Ant. doubtful, dubious, questionable, hypothetical, unverified.

in-con-ti-nence (in-kŏn′tĭ-nĕns), n. [see incontinent], lack of restraint, especially in indulging the passions; Med., inability to restrain a natural discharge.—n. in-con′ti-nen-cy.

in-con-ti-nent (in-kŏn′tĭ-nĕnt), adj. [²*in-* + continent], unrestrained; specifically, not exercising control of the passions; impure: Med., unable to restrain a natural discharge:—n. an unchaste or immoral person:—adv. Archaic, immediately; instantly; forthwith.—adv. in-con′ti-nent-ly.

in-con-tro-vert-i-ble (in-kŏn″trō-vûr′tĭ-bl), adj. [²*in-* + controvert], not admitting of debate; indisputable.—adv. in-con″tro-vert′i-bly.—n. in-con″tro-vert′i-bil′i-ty.
Syn. incontestable, undeniable, indisputable, certain, positive, indubitable, irrefragable.

in-con-ven-ience (in″kŏn-vēn′yĕns), n. [see inconvenient], 1, discomfort; disadvantage; failure to fit the requirements of comfort or efficiency; 2, that which causes trouble; a hindrance, annoyance, or embarrassment:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -venienced (-vēn′yĕnst), p.pr. -veniencing], to put to trouble; annoy; molest.

in-con-ven-ient (in″kŏn-vēn′yĕnt), adj. [²*in-* + convenient], disadvantageous; not fitted for easy use; annoying; causing trouble; uncomfortable.—adv. in″con-ven′ient-ly.
Syn. unsuitable, inexpedient, inopportune, embarrassing, untimely.—Ant. convenient, suitable, fitting.

in-con-vert-i-ble (in″kŏn-vûr′tĭ-bl), adj. [²*in-* + convert], incapable of being changed into, or exchanged for, something else; as, the bank notes were inconvertible into gold.—adv. in″con-vert′i-bly.—n. in″con-vert′i-bil′i-ty.

incor. abbr. incorporated (also, inc.): often used as part of the name of an incorporated business.

in-cor-po-rate (in-kôr′pō-rāt), adj. [< Lat. incorporare (-atus), to furnish with a body < in, in + corpus (corporis), body], 1, closely united; united in one body; 2, formed into, or united with others in, a unified body of persons authorized to act legally or politically as one:—v.t. (in-kôr′pō-rāt), [p.t. and p.p. -rated, p.pr. -rating], 1, to combine into one body; unite; specifically, to form, as individuals, into a body authorized to act legally or politically as one; as, to incorporate a town, a club, or a manufacturing company; 2, to embody; put in as a part; include; as, to incorporate an idea into a story; 3, to blend; mix, as one substance with another; 4, to give bodily form to:—v.i. to unite with another body; be blended.

in-cor-po-ra-tion (in-kôr″pō-rā′shŭn), n. 1, a uniting into one body; a joining with another body; combination or union; 2, the formation of a corporation, or body of persons authorized to act legally or politically as a whole; 3, the body so formed: usually called corporation.

in-cor-po-ra-tor (in-kôr′pō-rā″tĕr), n. 1, one who embodies or unites; 2, an original member or founder of a corporation.

in-cor-po-re-al (in″kôr-pō′rē-ăl), adj. [²*in-* + corporeal], 1, not made of matter; 2, pertaining to spiritual beings or things: Law, having no material existence in itself, but attaching as a right to some actual thing and hence inheritable; as, incorporeal hereditaments.—adv. in″cor-po′re-al-ly.

in-cor-rect (in″kŏ-rĕkt′), adj. [²*in-* + correct], 1, not according to model or rule; faulty; 2, not according to fact; inaccurate; 3, not in accordance with morality or good manners; improper.—adv. in″cor-rect′ly.—n. in″cor-rect′ness.

in-cor-ri-gi-ble (in-kŏr′ĭ-jĭ-bl), adj. [²*in-* + corrigible], bad beyond correction or reform; as, an incorrigible drinker:—n. one who is bad beyond correction.—n. in-cor′ri-gi-ble-ness.—adv. in-cor′ri-gi-bly.—n. in-cor′ri-gi-bil′i-ty.

in-cor-rupt (in″kŏ-rŭpt′), adj. [²*in-* + corrupt], 1, free from physical or moral blemish; sound; 2, upright; especially, not to be bribed; honest; 3, pure; free from error, as a language.

in-cor-rupt-i-ble (in″kŏ-rŭp′tĭ-bl), adj. 1, incapable of physical corruption or decay; 2, not liable to moral contamination; especially, not to be bribed.—adv. in″cor-rupt′i-bly.—n. in″cor-rupt′i-ble-ness.—n. in″cor-rupt′i-bil′i-ty.

in-cor-rup-tion (in″kŏ-rŭp′shŭn), n. Archaic or Obs., freedom from physical decay or immoral conduct.

in-crease (in-krēs′), v.i. [p.t. and p.p. increased (-krēst′), p.pr. increasing], [< O.F. encreistre < Lat. in, in + crescere, to grow], to become greater in any respect; multiply; grow:—v.t. to augment; enlarge:—n. (in′krēs), 1, the act or fact of growing larger; 2, that which is added to the original stock; profits; offspring: Archaic, the period of waxing (of the moon).—n. in-creas′er.—adv. in-creas′ing-ly.
Syn., n. extension, expansion, enlargement, accession, addition, growth, development; v. extend, enlarge, dilate, expand, magnify, grow, multiply. These verbs agree in the idea of making bigger. Increase, the general term, is applied to quantity, number, and to size, especially as made greater by natural processes; we increase the quantity of a child's food as he grows older; as the child grows, he increases in height and weight; he is supposed to increase in wisdom. To enlarge is to make the dimensions of width, length, or height greater, and hence to increase the capacity, range, or bulk of a thing; we enlarge the docking facilities of a port; we enlarge a house, a business, a magazine, a room; we do not increase a room or a house. To extend is to make greater by stretching out to greater length, or into a greater space. We may increase our power by extending its influence.—Ant., n. loss, diminution; v. decrease, diminish, lessen.

in-cred-i-ble (in-krĕd′ĭ-bl), adj. [²*in-* + credible], surpassing belief; unlikely; marvelous; hard to believe; unimaginable.—adv. in-cred′i-bly.—n. in-cred′i-ble-ness.—n. in-cred′i-bil′i-ty.

in-cre-du-li-ty (in″krĕ-dū′lĭ-tĭ), n. [< Lat. in-, not + credulus, credulous], refusal or inability to believe; disbelief; skepticism.
Syn. unbelief, doubt, skepticism. (See disbelief.)

in-cred-u-lous (in-krĕd′ū-lŭs), adj. 1, indicating lack of belief; as, an incredulous expression on the face; 2, unbelieving; skeptical.—adv. in-cred′u-lous-ly.—n. in-cred′u-lous-ness.

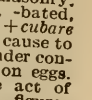
in-cre-ment (in′krē-mĕnt), n. [< Lat. incrementum < in, in + crescere (cretus), to grow], 1, increase; augmentation; 2, that which is added; especially, one of several small additions.

in-cres-cent (in-krĕs′ĕnt), adj. [< Lat. increscens (-entis), increasing], increasing; enlarging; waxing: used chiefly of the moon: Her., waxing: said of a crescent moon depicted with the points toward the dexter, or the wearer's right, side of the escutcheon.



INCRESCENT MOON

in-crim-i-nate (in-krĭm′ĭ-nāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -nated, p.pr. -nating], [< L.L. incriminare (-atus) < Lat. in- (intensive) + criminare, to accuse of crime < crimen (-minis), offense], to accuse of, or implicate or involve in, a crime.—n. in-crim′i-na′tion.—adj. in-crim′i-na-to-ry (-nă-tō-rĭ).

in-crust (in-krŭst′), v.t. [< Fr. incruster < Lat. in, in + crustare, to cover with a crust < crusta, a crust], to cover with, or as with, a crust; coat: Fine Arts, to overlay with a decorative covering, as with mosaics; inlay with mosaics. Also, en-crust′.

in-crus-ta-tion (in″krŭs-tā′shŭn), n. 1, the act of covering with a crust; 2, a crust; 3, an incrusted or inlaid object or substance; 4, a covering or inlay, as of mosaic, attached to masonry.

in-cu-bate (in′kū-bāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -bated, p.pr. -bating], [< Lat. in, on + cubare (-atus), to lie], 1, to sit upon (eggs) in order to cause to hatch; 2, to keep, as bacteria, embryos, etc., under conditions favorable for development:—v.i. to sit on eggs.

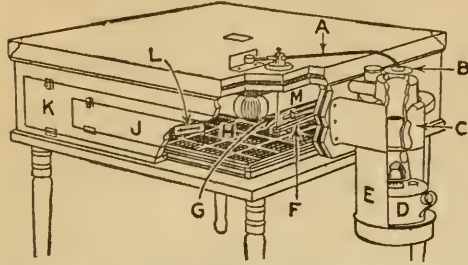
in-cu-ba-tion (in″kū-bā′shŭn), n. 1, the act of hatching by any means; 2, figuratively, a brooding upon: Pathol., the development of an infectious disease from the time of inception to the appearance of the first symptoms.

in-cu-ba-tor (In'kū-bā"tĕr), n. that which hatches; specifically, 1, an apparatus for hatching eggs; 2, an apparatus for rearing prematurely born babies; 3, an apparatus for maintaining cultures, as of bacteria, at the proper temperature.



INCUBATOR (def. 1)

A, regulating lever connected to damper; B, damper; C, water tank; D, lamp; E, lamp support; F, metal thermostat; G, rod connecting thermostat with lever; H, egg tray; J, inside door; K, outside door; L, thermometer; M, water pipe.

in-cu-bus (In'kū-bŭs), n. [pl. -buses (-ĕz; -ĭz); -bi (-bī)], [L.L. < Lat. incubo, a nightmare < incubare, to lie on], 1, in the Middle Ages, a demon believed to lie heavily on persons in their sleep; 2, a feeling of oppression during sleep; hence, a nightmare; 3, any depressing weight or burden.

in-cul-cate (In-kŭl'kāt; In'kŭl-kāt), v.t. [p.t. and inculcare (-atus), to tread in or on; impress < in, in + calcare, to tread < calx (calcis), heel], to impress upon the mind by persistent admonitions; as, to inculcate honesty.—n. in"cul-ca'tion.—n. in-cul'ca-tor (-kā-tĕr).

in-cul-pate (In'kŭl-pāt; In-kŭl'pāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -pated, p.pr. -pating], [< Lat. inculpare (-atus), to censure < in, upon + culpa, fault], to accuse of wrongdoing; blame; incriminate.—n. in"cul-pa'tion.—adj. in-cul'pa-to-ry (-pā-tō-rĭ).

in-cum-ben-cy (In-kŭm'bĕn-sĭ), n. [pl. -cies (-sĭz)], [see incumbent], 1, the act or state of holding an office; 2, possession of any office, and discharge of the functions pertaining thereto; as, the governor accomplished much during his incumbency; 3, the possession of a church benefice, or living.

in-cum-bent (In-kŭm'bĕnt), adj. [< Lat. incumbens (-entis), lying upon < in, on + cubare, to lie], 1, exerting pressure upon; hence, impending; 2, imposed as a duty; as, it is incumbent upon every good citizen to vote:—n. 1, the holder of an office; 2, a clergyman in possession of a benefice or parish.

in-cum-ber (In-kŭm'bĕr), v.t. [see encumber], 1, to impede; 2, to obstruct; 3, to load with debt. See en-cum'ber. Pfd. S.

in-cum-brance (In-kŭm'brăns), n. that which burdens. See en-cum'brance. Pfd. S.

in-cu-nab-u-la (In"kū-năb'ū-lă), n.pl. [Lat. pl. = cradle, origin], beginnings; early stages; also, specimens of early or primitive works of art or manufacture: Ornith., breeding places; Bibliography, [sing., Rare, -lum (-lŭm)], early books; especially, books printed before about 1500.

in-cur (In-kûr'), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. incurred (-kûrd'), p.pr. incurring], [< Lat. in, into + currere (cursus), to run], 1, to bring upon oneself by one's actions; as, to incur dislike; 2, to contract, as a debt.

in-cur-a-ble (In-kūr'ă-bl), adj. [in- + cure], incapable of being healed or remedied; beyond the power of skill or medicine:—n. a person diseased beyond remedy.—n. in-cur'a-ble-ness.—adv. in-cur'a-bly.—n. in-cur"a-bil'i-ty.

in-cu-ri-ous (In-kū'rĭ-ŭs), adj. [in- + curious], not inquisitive; not eager to know; inattentive.—n. in-cu'ri-os'i-ty.—adv. in-cu'ri-ous-ly.

in-cur-sion (In-kûr'shŭn), n. [see incur], an inroad; raid; invasion; as, the enemy made an incursion into the country.—adj. in-cur'sive.

in-cur-vate (In-kûr'vāt), adj. [< Lat. in, in + curvare (-atus), to curve], bent inward:—v.t. (In-kûr'vāt), [p.t. and p.p. -vated, p.pr. -vating], to cause to bend:—v.i. to bend inward—n. in"cur-va'tion.

in-curve (In-kûrv'), v.t. [in- + curve], to cause to bend inward:—v.i. to bend inward.

in-cus (Ing'kŭs), n. [pl. incudes (In-kū'dēz)], [Lat. = anvil < incudere, to stamp in, forge], Anat., a small anvil-shaped bone, one of three in the middle ear (for illus. see ear).

Ind (Ind), n. [< India], Poet. and Archaic, India: Obs., the Indies: pl. Obs., natives of India.

Ind. abbr. 1, official abbreviation for the state of Indiana; 2, India; Indian:—ind., 1, indigo; 2, independent; 3, indicative (also, indic.).

in-debt-ed (In-dĕt'ĕd), adj. [< O.F. endetté, p.p. of endetter < en, in + dette, debt < Lat. in, to + debēre (-itus), to owe], 1, owing money; 2, being under obligation; owing gratitude.

in-debt-ed-ness (In-dĕt'ĕd-nĕs), n. 1, the state of owing someone money, or of being under obligation; 2, the amount owed: debts.

in-de-cen-cy (In-dē'sĕn-sĭ), n. [pl. -cies (-sĭz)], [see indecent], 1, want of delicacy, refinement, or good manners; 2, that which is obscene or impure; a word or act offensive to modesty.

in-de-cent (In-dē'sĕnt), adj. [in- + decent], 1, improper in language, behavior, etc.; immodest; indelicate; 2, unfit to be heard or looked upon.

in-de-ci-pher-a-ble (In"dē-sī'fĕr-ă-bl), adj. [in- + decipher], incapable of being read or comprehended.

in-de-ci-sion (In"dē-sĭzh'ŭn), n. [in- + decide], a wavering of the mind; hesitation.

Syn. vacillation, fluctuation. (See irresolution.)

in-de-ci-sive (In"dē-sī'sĭv), adj. 1, not bringing to a sure end; inconclusive; 2, not positive; vacillating.—adv. in"de-ci'sive-ly.

in-de-clin-a-ble (In"dē-klīn'ă-bl), adj. [in- + decline], Gram., that cannot be varied by inflection:—n. Gram., a word that cannot be declined, as the Latin nihil.—obbr. indecl.

in-de-co-rous (In"dē-kō'rŭs; In-dĕk'ō-rŭs), adj. [in- + decorous], unsuitable or improper; violating the accepted rules of good breeding.—adv. in"de-co'rous-ly.—n. in"de-co'rous-ness.

in-de-co-rum (In"dē-kō'rŭm), n. [in- + decorum], violation of propriety or rules of conduct; a breach of etiquette or civility.

in-deed (In-dēd'), adv. [in + deed], in fact; in truth: used: 1, to lend emphasis; as, no, indeed; I should be glad, indeed; 2, to confirm and amplify; as, he went, indeed he had to go; 3, in conceding or admitting; as, there are, indeed, mistakes: —interj. denoting surprise, incredulity, irony, etc.

in-de-fat-i-ga-ble (In"dē-făt'ĭ-gă-bl), adj. [< Lat. indefatigabilis < in-, not + de-, completely + fatigare, to tire out], incapable of being wearied; untiring; unceasing in labor or effort.—adv. in"de-fat'i-ga-bly.—n. in"de-fat'i-ga-bil'i-ty.

Syn. assiduous, unremitting, unflagging, untiring.

in-de-fea-si-ble (In"dē-fē'zĭ-bl), adj. [< Lat. in-, not + O.F. desfaire, to undo < Lat. de, from + facere, to do], not to be annulled or made void, as a title.—adv. in"de-fea'si-bly.—n. in"de-fea"si-bil'i-ty.

in-de-fen-si-ble (In"dē-fĕn'sĭ-bl), adj. [in- + defense], incapable of being justified; as, an indefensible argument.—n. in"de-fen'si-ble-ness.—adv. in"de-fen'si-bly.—n. in"de-fen'si-bil'i-ty.

in-de-fin-a-ble (In"dē-fīn'ă-bl), adj. [in- + define], incapable of being described exactly or explained; as, indefinable charm.—adv. in"de-fin'a-bly.—n. in"de-fin'a-ble-ness.

in-def-i-nite (In-dĕf'ĭ-nĭt), adj. 1, not exact; vague; uncertain; 2, having no fixed limit, amount, or number; 3, too large for measurement: Bot., inconstant in numbers, or too numerous to be easily counted, as stamens of certain flowers; Gram., not defining, as various pronouns, adverbs, and adjectives, certain tenses of verbs, and the articles a and an.—adv. in-def'i-nite-ly.—n. in-def'i-nite-ness.

Syn. indeterminate, undetermined, general, vague, unlimited, unmeasured, inexact, loose, lax.

in-de-his-cent (In"dē-hĭs'ĕnt), adj. [in- + dehiscent], Bot., not opening at maturity, as certain fruit.—n. in"de-his'cence.

in-del-i-ble (In-dĕl'ĭ-bl), adj. [< Lat. in-, not + delebilis, destructible < delēre, to destroy], not to be blotted out, effaced, or forgotten; as, an indelible impression: indelible ink, an ink that cannot be obliterated by washing or ordinary use.—adv. in-del'i-bly.—n. in-del'i-bil'i-ty.—n. in-del'i-ble-ness.

in-del-i-ca-cy (In-dĕl'ĭ-kă-sĭ), n. [pl. -cies (-sĭz)], [see indelicate], 1, want of refinement; 2, that which is offensive to modesty.

in-del-i-cate (In-dĕl'ĭ-kāt), adj. [in- + delicate], lacking in refinement; offensive to modesty; coarse; indecent.—adv. in-del'i-cate-ly.

in-dem-ni-fi-ca-tion (In-dĕm"nĭ-fĭ-kā'shŭn), n. [see indemnify], 1, the act of securing against loss or damage; 2, reimbursement for loss, damage, or injury.

Syn. restitution, compensation, amends. (See redress.)

in-dem-ni-fy (in-dĕm′nĭ-fī), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -fied (-fīd), p.pr. -fying], [< Lat. indemnis, free from loss (< in-, not + damnum, loss) + -ficare (-atus) < facere, to make], 1, to protect or insure against loss or damage; 2, to repay or compensate for loss.

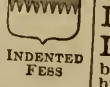
in-dem-ni-ty (in-dĕm′nĭ-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], [< L.L. indemnitas (-atis) < Lat. indemnis, free from loss], 1, security against loss, damage, or punishment; 2, that which is paid for loss or injury. Syn. protection, compensation, remuneration.

1in-dent (in-dĕnt′), v.t. [< L.L. indentare (-atus), to notch < Lat. in-, in + dens (dentis), tooth], 1, to give a zigzag outline to; 2, to cut into points like teeth; notch, as a board, for the purpose of dovetailing; 3, to notch the edges of (two copies of a written agreement); formerly used as a device for identification; hence, 4, to make formal agreement to, as in a bond, deed, articles of apprenticeship, or the like; 5, in writing or printing, to begin (a line) with a blank space: Law, to draw up (a document) in two or more exactly corresponding copies:—p.t. 1, to be cut into points or notches; 2, to enter into an agreement; 3, to begin a line of print or writing with a blank space:—n. 1, a notch in the border; 2, a formal written agreement; 3, a space at the beginning of a line in writing or printing.

2in-dent (in-dĕnt′), v.t. [1*in-* + dent], to make a depression in; dent; stamp; press in.

in-den-ta-tion (in″dĕn-tā′shŭn), n. 1, [see 2indent], a small depression, as from a blow; a dent; 2, [see 1indent], a notch; also, in writing or printing, a space at the beginning of a line.

in-dent-ed (in-dĕnt′ĕd), p.adj. [see 1indent], 1, notched on the edge like a row of teeth; zigzag; 2, held by an agreement, as an apprentice; 3, in writing or printing, having a space left at the beginning, as a line in paragraphing: Her., having a jagged, or serrated, edge, as a partition line.



INDENTED FESS

in-den-tion (in-dĕn′shŭn), n. 1, in printing or writing, the act of leaving a space at the beginning of a line; 2, the space so left; 3, a dent; act of indenting.

in-den-ture (in-dĕn′tūr), n. in writing or printing, a space left at the beginning of a line: Law, a written agreement, formerly in duplicate, with correspondingly notched edges; especially, an instrument of this description binding an apprentice to service:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -tured (-tūrd), p.pr. -turing], to bind by an indenture, or written contract.

in-de-pend-ence (in″dē-pĕn′dĕns), n. [see independent], 1, freedom from support or government by others; 2, a competency, or income sufficient for one's needs: Independence Day, July 4, the day on which, in 1776, the American Declaration of Independence was adopted: observed in the United States as a holiday.—n. in″de-pend′en-cy. Syn. freedom, exemption, immunity. (See liberty.)

in-de-pend-ent (in″dē-pĕn′dĕnt), adj. [2*in-* + dependent], 1, not relying on, supported by, or governed by, another; 2, having enough to live on; 3, not easily influenced; unbiased; 4, disinclined, through pride, to accept assistance, money, etc.: Politics, unattached to any party:—n. one who, in politics, art, literature, etc., acts or thinks for himself: Independent, 1, one who holds that an organized congregation should be free from any superior control; in England, a Congregationalist; 2, a member of any organized independent party.—adv. in″de-pend′ent-ly.

in-de-scrib-a-ble (in″dē-skrīb′ă-bl), adj. [2*in-* + describe], not to be portrayed in words; indefinite; vague; too wonderful or too bad to be described.—n. in″de-scrib′a-ble-ness.—n. in″de-scrib′a-bil′i-ty.—adv. in″de-scrib′a-bly.

in-de-struct-i-ble (in″dē-strŭk′tĭ-bl), adj. [2*in-* + destroy], 1, not capable of being broken up, ruined, or demolished; 2, durable.—n. in″de-struct′i-ble-ness.—adv. in″de-struct′i-bly.—n. in″de-struct′i-bil′i-ty.

in-de-ter-mi-na-ble (in″dē-tûr′mĭ-nă-bl), adj. [2*in-* + determine], not to be known or defined exactly.

in-de-ter-mi-nate (in″dē-tûr′mĭ-nāt), adj. not settled or fixed; indefinite; vague; not leading to a definite result: Bot., having the lower flowers opening first, as a raceme; Math., having an indefinite number of values or solutions.—adv. in″de-ter′mi-nate-ly.—n in″de-ter′mi-nate-ness.

in-de-ter-mi-na-tion (in″dē-tûr″mĭ-nā′shŭn), n. an unsettled, indecisive state of mind; lack of decision.

in-de-ter-min-ism (in″dē-tûr′mĭn-ĭzm), n. Philos., the doctrine that man's will is not determined, or driven to the choice of any given act, by external causes.

in-dex (in′dĕks), n. [pl. indexes (in′dĕk-sĕz; -sĭz); indices (in′dĭ-sēz)], [Lat. = discloser, that which indicates < indicare, to point out], 1, the forefinger; 2, a pointer, as the hand on a dial; 3, a table, usually alphabetical, of the contents of a book; 4, that which serves to point out, indicate, etc.: Obs., a prolog or preface: Math., the figure or letter placed above and to the right to show the power or root, as 3, $\frac{1}{x^3}$, $x^{\frac{1}{3}}$; an exponent; Print., a mark [☞] used to call attention; a fist: Index, R. C. Ch., short for Index Librorum Prohibitorum, a list of books not to be read, or Index Expurgatorius, a list of books from which certain passages must be eliminated: index finger, the forefinger:—v.t. 1, to provide with an alphabetical table of references; 2, to point out; indicate.

In-di-a ink (in′dĭ-ă), a black pigment, from the Far East: properly sepia, now made of lampblack, gum, etc.: used for fine drawing, painting, etc.: also called Chinese or China ink.

In-di-a-man (in′dĭ-ă-măn), n. [pl. -men (-mĕn)], [India (see Indian) + man], a large vessel employed in the India trade.

In-di-an (in′dĭ-ăn), adj. [< Lat. India, India < Gk. Indos, Indus < O.Pers. hind, river], 1, pertaining to India, the East Indies, or the British Indian Empire; also, pertaining to the West Indies, or to the American Indians; 2, made of maize, or Indian corn; 3, of a material, pattern, etc., made in India or by the American Indians:—n. 1, a native of the East or West Indies; sometimes, a European who formerly lived in India; 2, one of the original inhabitants of America, so called because the first discoverers supposed they had reached the Indies: also called Red Indian; 3, any one of the tribal languages spoken by the American Indians.

In-di-an bread tuckahoe; an edible underground fungus growing on old roots.

In-di-an club a bottle-shaped club, swung by the hands in gymnastic exercises.

In-di-an corn an American cereal plant growing in tall stalks which bear large ears of grain covered with a green husk: properly called maize, but known in the United States merely as corn.

INDIAN CLUB

In-di-an file single file: a method of traveling used by American Indians.

In-di-an pipe a low, waxy-white, sometimes reddish, saprophytic, fleshy herb, three to ten inches high, resembling a long-stemmed pipe: found in dense woods.

In-di-an red a dark purplish red earth, originally from the Persian Gulf.

In-di-an sum-mer a period of mild weather in the late fall.

In-di-an yel-low a bright yellow pigment used in oil and water-color painting.

In-di-a pa-per [1, a thin, absorbent, creamy yellow paper made in China: used in printing fine engravings; 2, a strong, thin, opaque paper, originally made in the Orient: used for printing books in which it is desired to avoid bulkiness.

In-di-a rub-ber caoutchouc, a gummy, elastic substance made from the milky juice of various tropical plants: often called rubber; also, a piece of rubber, or an article made of it. Also, n. in″di-a-rub′ber.—adj. In″di-a-rub′ber; in″di-a-rub′ber.

In-dic (in′dĭk), adj. [< Lat. Indicus < Gk. Indikos, Indian], pertaining to India, or to the Indo-European languages spoken there:—n. an Indic language.

in-di-can (in′dĭ-kăn), n. [see indigo], Chem., a natural glucoside, the active principle of the indigo plant, which by decomposition produces indigo blue; Physiol. Chem., an indigo-forming substance found in the urine of animals, including man.

in-di-cant (in′dĭ-kănt) adj. [see indicate], serving to point out:—n. that which points out.

in-di-cate (in′dĭ-kāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -cated, p.pr. -cating], [< Lat. indicare (-atus), to point out < in, in, at + dicare, to appoint, declare < dicere, to say], to point out: show make; suggest; hint; make known; as, signposts indicate the way to go: Med., to point out by signs or symptoms, as a disease, its cause, treatment, or outcome.

Syn. betoken, signify, denote, reveal, disclose, hint, suggest, intimate, manifest, exhibit, display.

in-di-ca-tion (in″dĭ-kā′shŭn), n. 1, the act of showing or pointing out; 2, that which points out; a token; evidence; sign; symptom: Med., a sign or circumstance which points out the cause, treatment, or outcome of a disease.

Syn. mark, manifestation, evidence, token, sign, symptom, proof, intimation, signal, suggestion, hint.

in-dic-a-tive (in-dĭk′ă-tĭv), adj. pointing out; suggestive of; as, cold hands are indicative of poor circulation: indicative mood, Gram., in the conjugation of a verb, the form used to assert or state a fact, or ask a direct question:—n. the indicative mood.—adv. in-dic'a-tive-ly.

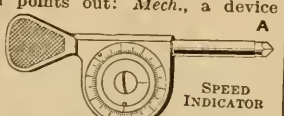
in-di-ca-tor (In'dĭ-kā"tẽr), n. one who or that which points out: Mech., a device that shows the condition or position of something, as a pointer or the like; Chem., a substance, such as litmus, used in analyses to indicate the condition of a solution as acid or basic, or the point at which a certain reaction ends and another commences.



SPEED INDICATOR

When the point A, connected with the dial by a reducing worm gear, is pressed against the end of a rotating shaft for a given time, the number of rotations of the shaft in that time is recorded on the dial.

in-di-ca-to-ry (In'dĭ-ka-tō-rĭ), adj. serving to point out; indicative (of).

in-di-ces (In'dĭ-sēz), n. [Lat., pl. of index, a dis-closer], Latin plural of index.

in-di-ci-a (In-dish'ĭ-ă), n.pl. [Lat., pl. of indicium, a sign < indicare, to point out], signs; symptoms; appearances; distinguishing marks; tokens.

in-dict (In-dīt'), v.t. [< A.F. enditer, to indict < O.F. enditer, to publish < Lat. in-, against + dictare, to declare], Law, to charge with a crime: used of the action of a grand jury in finding a true bill of indictment (see indictment).—n. in-dict'er; in-dict'or.

in-dict-a-ble (In-dīt'ă-bl), adj. 1, liable to be indicted, or charged with a crime in due form of law; 2, giving cause for indictment.

in-dic-tion (In-dĭk'shŭn), n. [< Lat. indictio (-onis), indiction < indicere, to appoint < in, in + dicere, to say], 1, in ancient Rome, a proclamation, instituted by Constantine in 312 and issued every fifteen years by the emperor, announcing the valuation and taxation of property; also, the tax thus levied; 2, a cycle of fifteen years; also, a particular year in the cycle.

in-dict-ment (In-dīt'mĕnt), n. [see indict], an accusation: Law, 1, a formal written accusation of a crime, which has been preferred to a grand jury in the form of a bill of indictment and, after consideration but without opportunity for defense by the accused, has been found to make out a probable case and has been returned to a court for trial: 2, the action of the grand jury in returning the case for trial; 3, the legal document embodying the accusation: bill of indictment, the formal accusation as presented by the prosecuting officer to the grand jury: so called until the grand jury either declares that the evidence as presented makes out a probable case against the accused (that is, finds a true bill of indictment), or dismisses the bill.

In-dies (In'dĭz), n.pl. [pl. of obs. Indy < Lat. India: see Indian], India and the islands beyond; the East Indies; also, formerly, the West Indies.

in-dif-fer-ence (In-dĭf'ẽr-ĕns), n. [see indifferent], 1, the state of being unconcerned; want of zeal or interest; absence of feeling for or against; 2, unimportance; insignificance.

Syn. apathy, listlessness, insensibility, unconcern, heedlessness, neglect, aloofness, coldness. Apathy is absence of feeling; primarily, apathy names a natural and permanent state, in which one is passionless and unexcitable, unfeeling, sluggish, phlegmatic; secondarily, apathy names a condition which resembles this state, induced or produced by some paralyzing shock or numbing influence: as, the apathy of hopelessness. Indifference is the absence of interest or attention; it is often a transitory lack of feeling. Insensibility is a lack of mental feeling or emotion; if induced, it is temporary, as the condition following nervous shock; if it is natural, it is permanent. Unconcern is complacent disregard for the future. It may be the fruit of apathy, insensibility, or indifference.

in-dif-fer-ent (In-dĭf'ẽr-ĕnt), adj. [< in- + different], 1, unconcerned; having no marked preference; 2, unimportant; immaterial; 3, mediocre; 4, nonessential; 5, impartial.—adv. in-dif'fer-ent-ly.

Syn. careless, heedless, apathetic. (See stoic.)

in-di-gence (In'dĭ-jĕns), n. [see indigent], the state of being destitute or very poor; poverty; want.—n. in'di-gen-cy.

Syn. lack, privation, need, penury. (See poverty.)

in-di-gene (In'dĭ-jēn), n. [< Fr. indigène < Lat. indigena, native: see indigenous], a native animal or plant; an autochthon.

in-dig-e-nous (In-dĭj'ē-nŭs), adj. [< L.L. indigenus, native < Lat. indi- (< O.Lat. indu-), within + gignere (genitus), to bear, beget], born or produced in a country; native; as, cotton is indigenous to America; innate.—adv. in-dig'e-nous-ly.

Syn. inborn, inherent, innate. (See native.)

in-di-gent (In'dĭ-jĕnt), adj. [Fr. < Lat. indigens (-entis), being in want < indigēre, to be in want < indi- (< O.Lat. indu-), in + egēre, to want], destitute; needy: Archaic, lacking: usually with of.

in-di-gest-ed (In"dĭ-jĕs'tĕd), adj. [< obs. indigest < Lat. in-, not + digestus, digested: see digest], 1, not converted into a form that can be assimilated into the system as food; 2, not softened, as food, by steam; 3, not sufficiently considered; 4, confused.

in-di-gest-i-ble (In"dĭ-jĕs'tĭ-bl), adj. not digestible physically or mentally.—adv. in"di-gest'i-bly.—n. in"di-gest'i-bil'i-ty.

in-di-ges-tion (In"dĭ-jĕs'chŭn), n. difficulty in digesting or inability to digest food; dyspepsia.—adj. in"di-ges'tive.

in-dign (In-dīn'), adj. [< Lat. indignus, unworthy < in-, not + dignus, worthy], Obs. or Poet., unworthy; contemptible; disgraceful; degrading.

in-dig-nant (In-dĭg'nănt), adj. [< Lat. indignans (-antis), feeling anger at something unworthy < in-, not + dignus, worthy], feeling anger or scorn at injustice, ingratitude, etc.—adv. in-dig'nant-ly.

in-dig-na-tion (In"dĭg-nā'shŭn), n. anger at what is unworthy, dishonorable, or base; justifiable anger mingled with contempt or disgust.

Syn. wrath, resentment, fury, rage. (See anger.)

in-dig-ni-ty (In-dĭg'nĭ-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], [< Lat. indignitas, unworthiness, unworthy behavior < in-, not + dignus, worthy], an act intended to lower the self-respect of another; an insult.

Syn. affront, rudeness, discourtesy, outrage, offense. —Ant. honor, compliment, politeness.

in-di-go (In'dĭ-gō), n. [pl. -gos; -goes (-gōz)], [< Gk. indikon, Indian (dye)], 1, a dark blue pigment and dye obtained from the decomposition of indican, which is found in the sap of various herbaceous shrubs: now made synthetically from naphthalene; 2, a deep violet blue, one of the seven primary colors: indigo blue, the chief coloring matter of pure indigo, crystallizing in fine prisms of metallic luster.

in-di-rect (In"dĭ-rĕkt'), adj. [< in- + direct], 1, not straight or in a line; as, an indirect road; 2, resulting from a cause in a roundabout manner; not reaching an end by the most straightforward method; 3, not straightforward.—adv in"di-rect'ly.

in-di-rec-tion (In"dĭ-rĕk'shŭn), n. roundabout means or methods; dishonesty.

in-dis-cern-i-ble (In"dĭs-zûr'nĭ-bl), adj. [< in- + discern], incapable of being seen or perceived; not discoverable.

in-dis-creet (In"dĭs-krēt'), adj. [< in- + discreet], imprudent; unwise; unadvised.—adv. in"dis-creet'ly.—n. in"dis-creet'ness.

in-dis-crete (In"dĭs-krēt'), adj. [< in- + discrete], not separate; closely or firmly united.

in-dis-cre-tion (In"dĭs-krĕsh'ŭn), n. [see indiscreet], 1, rashness; imprudence; also, an unwise or imprudent act; 2, a blunder in-dis-crim-i-nate (In"dĭs-krĭm'ĭ-nāt), adj. [< in- + discriminate], 1, not choosing carefully; not discriminating; 2, confused; promiscuous.—adv. in"dis-crim'i-nate-ly.—n. in"dis-crim'i-nate-ness.—n. in"dis-crim'i-na'tion.

Syn. confused, mingled, promiscuous, heterogeneous.

in-dis-crim-i-na-tive (In"dĭs-krĭm'ĭ-nā-tĭv), adj. making no distinction.

in-dis-pen-sa-ble (In"dĭs-pĕn'sa-bl), adj. [< in- + dispense], not to be done without; absolutely necessary or requisite.—adv. in"dis-pen'sa-bly.—n. in"dis-pen"sa-bil'i-ty.

Syn. essential, required, requisite. (See necessary.)

in-dis-pose (In"dĭs-pōz'), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -posed (-pōzd'), p.pr. -posing], [< in- + dispose], 1, to render unfit; disqualify; 2, to make ill or not well; 3, to make averse or unfavorable; disincline.

in-dis-posed (In"dĭs-pōzd'), p.adj. 1, slightly ill; 2, disinclined; 3, unfriendly.

in-dis-po-si-tion (In-dĭs"pō-zĭsh'ŭn), n. [< in- + disposition], 1, slight illness; 2, disinclination; unwillingness.

Syn. sickness, ailment; reluctance. (See disease.)

in-dis-pu-ta-ble (In-dĭs'pū-tă-bl; In"dĭs-pū't'ă-bl), adj. [< in- + dispute], too evident to admit of debate or question.—n. in-dis'pu-ta-ble-ness.—adv. in-dis'pu-ta-bly.—n. in-dis"pu-ta-bil'i-ty.

in-dis-so-lu-ble (In-dĭs'ō-lū-bl; In"dĭ-sŏl'ū-bl), adj. [< in- + dissolve], 1, not capable of being dissolved or broken up; indestructible; 2, forever binding, as an agreement.—n. in-dis'so-lu-ble-ness.—adv. in-dis'so-lu-bly.—n. in-dis"so-lu-bil'i-ty.

in-dis-tinct (In"dĭs-tĭngkt'), adj. [< in- + distinct], 1, not easily distinguishable by the senses or the mind; 2, faint; undefined; indefinite; confused.—adv. in"dis-tinct'ly.—n. in"dis-tinct'ness.

in-dis-tin-guish-a-ble (in″dĭs-tĭng′gwĭsh-ă-bl), adj. [²*in-*+distinguish], 1, incapable of being discerned or discriminated; blurred; 2, imperceptible.—adv. in″dis-tin′guish-a-bly.

in-dite (in-dīt′), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. indited, p.pr. inditing], [<O.F. enditer, to make known: see indict], 1, to compose; write; as, to indite a letter; 2, to express in formal style.—n. in-dit′er.

in-di-um (in′dĭ-ŭm), n. [<Gk. indikon, indigo: so called because it has two indigo blue lines in its spectrum], Chem., a rare, silver-white, fusible metallic element [symbol In], similar to aluminum.

in-di-vid-u-al (in″dĭ-vĭd′ū-ăl), adj. [<L.L. individualis <Lat. individuus, indivisible <in-, not+dividere, to divide], 1, existing as a single and distinct thing or personality; 2, pertaining to, or characteristic of, a single person or thing; 3, of a peculiar or striking character; as, an individual style of speaking: Obs., not divisible:—n. 1, a single or separate person, animal, or thing, as distinguished from a class or group; 2, anything that cannot be divided without losing its identity.—adv. in″di-vid′u-al-ly.

in-di-vid-u-al-ism (in″dĭ-vĭd′ū-ăl-ĭzm), n. 1, egoism; the conduct of the individual in pursuing his own personal ends; 2, a social theory or system that favors the rights of the individual, as opposed to socialism, or communistic organization in industry and government; 3, a personal peculiarity.

in-di-vid-u-al-ist (in″dĭ-vĭd′ū-ăl-ĭst), n. 1, one who thinks or acts independently; an egoist; 2, one who believes in economic individualism.—adj. in″di-vid″u-al-is′tic.

in-di-vid-u-al-i-ty (in″dĭ-vĭd″ū-ăl′ĭ-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], 1, the fact or condition of being separate and distinct; separate or distinct existence; oneness; 2, the sum of the distinctive characteristics that distinguish one person or thing from another; 3, an individual thing or person.

in-di-vid-u-al-ize (in″dĭ-vĭd′ū-ăl-īz), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -ized (-īzd), p.pr. -izing], 1, to characterize with distinctive qualities; 2, to note particularly or individually; select.

in-di-vid-u-ate (in″dĭ-vĭd′ū-āt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -ated, p.pr. -ating], [<L.L. individuare (-atus), to single out: see individual], 1, to give individuality to; 2, to distinguish from others.

in-di-vis-i-ble (in″dĭ-vĭz′ĭ-bl), adj. [²*in-*+divide], not separable into parts: Math., not to be divided exactly; as, 10 is indivisible by 4.—adv. in″di-vis′i-bly.—n. in″di-vis″i-bil′i-ty.

In-do-Chi-nese (in″dō-chī-nēz′; -nēs′), adj. pertaining to Indo-China, the peninsula south of China, or to its people or language.

in-doc-ile (in-dŏs′īl), adj. [²*in-*+docile], unteachable; not easily governed or trained; undisciplined; unruly.—n. in″do-cil′i-ty (-dō-sĭl′ĭ-tĭ).

in-doc-tri-nate (in-dŏk′trĭ-nāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -nated, p.pr. -nating], [¹*in-*+doctrine], to instruct in learning, principles, or doctrines; imbue with learning.—n. in-doc″tri-na′tion.

In-do-Eu-ro-pe-an (in″dō-ū″rō-pē′ăn), adj. designating, or pertaining to, a family of languages of India, western Asia, and Europe, and including Indic (Sanskrit), Iranian (Persian), Armenian, Greek, Italic (Romance tongues), Albanian, Balto-Slavic, Teutonic (English, German, Scandinavian, etc.), Celtic, etc.: also called Aryan and Indo-Germanic (see chart, page 499):—n. a member of a race speaking one of these languages; loosely, an Aryan.

In-do-Ger-man-ic (in″dō-jĕr-măn′ĭk), adj. designating, or pertaining to, a linguistic family also known as Indo-European (which see) or Aryan:—n. a Caucasian who speaks one of the Aryan tongues; an Indo-European.

in-do-lence (in′dō-lĕns), n. [see indolent], lack of bodily or mental activity; repugnance to toil or effort; love of ease; laziness.

in-do-lent (in′dō-lĕnt), adj. [<L.L. indolens (-entis) <Lat. in-, not+dolēre, to grieve], fond of ease; avoiding labor; lazy: Med., causing little pain; as, an indolent ulcer.—adv. in′do-lent-ly.

Syn. lazy, slothful, sluggish, inert. (See idle.)

in-dom-i-ta-ble (in-dŏm′ĭ-tă-bl), adj. [<L.L. indomitabilis <Lat. in-, not+domitare, to tame], untamable; irrepressible; unconquerable; unyielding.—adv. in-dom′i-ta-bly.

in-door (in′dōr″), adj. [<earlier (with)in door], 1, of or pertaining to the interior of a building; 2, living, belonging, or done, within doors; 3, of charity, administered within an institution.

in-doors (in-dōrz′; in′dōrz″), adv. [<earlier (with)in doors], inside or into the house.

in-dorse (in-dōrs′), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. indorsed (-dōrst′), p.pr. indorsing], [<M.E. endosse <O.F. endosser, to put on the back of <Lat. in, on+dorsum, back], 1, to write one's name on the back of, as a check, document, etc.; 2, to approve or sanction. Also, en-dorse′.—adj. in-dors′a-ble.

in-dor-see (in″dōr-sē′), n. a person to whom a check, note, etc., is assigned, or made payable. Also, en″dor-see′.

in-dorse-ment (in-dōrs′mĕnt), n. 1, the act of writing on the back of a check, note, etc.; 2, that which is so written; 3, sanction; approval. Also, en-dorse′ment.

in-dors-er (in-dōr′sēr), n. one who indorses, or writes his name on the back of, a check, note, etc.; a guarantor. Also, en-dors′er.

In-dra (in′drä), n. [Sans.], Hind. Myth., the greatest of the Vedic gods, wielder of the thunderbolt and dispenser of rain.

in-draft (in′drăft″), n. [³*in-*+draft], 1, the act of drawing or pulling in; 2, that which is drawn or pulled in; an inflowing. Also, in′draught″.

in-drawn (in′drôn″; in-drôn′), adj. [³*in-*+draw], drawn in; hence, lost in thought.

in-du-bi-ta-ble (in-dū′bĭ-tă-bl), adj. [<Lat. indubitabilis <in-, not+dubitare, to doubt], too evident to be doubted; unquestionable; not dubitable; sure.—adv. in-du′bi-ta-bly.

Syn. incontestable, indisputable, certain, unquestionable, evident, incontrovertible.

in-duce (in-dūs′), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. induced (-dūst′), p.pr. inducing], [<Lat. in, in, on+ducere (ductus), to lead], 1, to lead on; influence; prevail upon; 2, to bring on; effect; cause; as, illness induced by exposure: Phys., to produce without contact, as a magnetic or electric effect upon a body; Logic, to arrive at (a conclusion) by reasoning from particular cases to general principles.—adv. in-duc′ed-ly.

Syn. incite, persuade, influence, impel, urge, move.

in-duce-ment (in-dūs′mĕnt), n. something that causes action or influences conduct; a motive; incentive; reason.—adj. in-duc′i-ble.

in-duct (in-dŭkt′), v.t. to introduce; place in an office; install; also, to initiate: Eccl., to put into possession of a church or benefice.

in-duc-tance (in-dŭk′tăns), n. Elec., 1, the property of an electrical conductor or circuit by virtue of which an electromotive force is produced in it by the variation of an electric current, either in the circuit itself (self-inductance) or in an adjacent circuit (mutual inductance): measured by the ratio of the induced electromotive force to the rate of change of the inducing current; 2, an electrical conductor, as a coil of wire, having this property.

in-duc-tile (in-dŭk′tĭl), adj. 1, not capable of being drawn out into wire, as certain metals; 2, not easily led; unyielding.—n. in″duc-til′i-ty.

in-duc-tion (in-dŭk′shŭn), n. the introduction of a person into an office: Archaic, an introduction; preface: Eng. Eccl. Law, the formal introduction of a clergyman into a charge or benefice; Elec., 1, the production of an electric or magnetic effect by one body upon another without contact; 2, an electric or magnetic condition produced in a body when placed in an electric or magnetic field; Logic, the process of reasoning from a part to a whole, or of arriving at a general conclusion from particular cases; also, the result so reached: induction coil, Elec., an electrical apparatus consisting of an iron core and two concentric coils of wire insulated from each other: used for the production of induced currents of high potential: sometimes called inductorium.

INDUCTION COIL

A, vibrator contact spring; B, vibrator point of contact; C, contact screw adjustment standard; D, contact adjustment screw; E, E, secondary binding posts; F, F, secondary coil of fine wire; G, G, primary coil of heavy wire; H, iron core; J, J, insulation separating primary and secondary coils; K, condenser.

Syn. (see deduction, conclusion).

in-duc-tive (in-dŭk′tĭv), adj. 1, leading on; persuasive; 2, pertaining to, or employing, the method of logical induction; reaching a general conclusion from particular instances: said of reasoning: Elec., relating to the production of an electric or magnetic condition by induction.—adv. in-duc′tive-ly.

in-duc-tiv-i-ty (in″dŭk-tĭv′ĭ-tĭ), n. Elec., the property of a substance which determines its power to transmit electric or magnetic effects by induction; also called, when electrical, specific inductive capacity, and when magnetic, permeability.

in-duc-tom-e-ter (in″dŭk-tŏm′ĕ-tĕr), n. [induct(ance) + meter], Elec., an instrument for measuring inductance.

in-duc-tor (in-dŭk′tĕr), n. [see induce], one who establishes or installs another in an office or a benefice: Elec., a device in, or portion of, an apparatus which produces electric or magnetic effects on neighboring parts without contact: inductor compass, a compass controlled by an inductor, the magnetic field utilized being that of the earth: also called earth-inductor compass.

in-duc-to-ri-um (in″dŭk-tō′rĭ-ŭm), n. [L. L. = covering], Elec., an induction coil.

in-due (in-dū′), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. indued (-dūd′), p.pr. induing], [< O. F. enduire < Lat. in, in, on + ducere, to lead, influenced by induere, to put on (clothes)], 1, to put on, as clothes; assume: 2, to furnish; supply; give to or endow. Also, en-due′.

in-dulge (in-dŭlj′), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. indulged (-dŭljd′), p.pr. indulging], [< Lat. indulgēre, to indulge, be courteous to], 1, to give way to, through kindness or weakness; humor: 2, to yield to; give free rein to: Eccl., to grant an indulgence or a dispensation to: Com., to grant (a person) an extension of time on a note or bill:—v.i. to gratify one's tastes or desires without restraint: usually with in.

Syn. humor, pamper, spoil, satisfy. (See gratify.)

in-dul-gence (in-dŭl′jĕns), n. 1, the act of gratifying or humoring another; also, an instance of this; 2, the act of yielding to one's own desires or habits; self-gratification; also, an instance of this: Eccl., 1, R. C. Ch., remission of temporal punishment still due for sin after full repentance and sacramental absolution; 2, the reduction of the severity of an ecclesiastical law: properly called dispensation; 3, formerly, especially before the Reformation, a statement from the Pope releasing one for a stated time from punishment: also called pardon.—n. in-dul′gen-cy.

in-dul-gent (in-dŭl′jĕnt), adj. yielding to the humor, wishes, etc., of another; compliant: as, an indulgent parent: too lenient or forbearing.—adv. in-dul′gent-ly.

in-du-rate (in′dŭ-rāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -rated, p.pr. -rating], [< Lat. indurare (-atus), to make hard < in, in + durus, hard], to grow hard:—v.t. 1, to harden; as, heat indurates clay; 2, to make unfeeling:—adj. (in′dŭ-rāt), hardened; calloused.—n. in′du-ra′tion.

INDUSIUM

1, under side of a fern leaflet showing the fruit dot, or sorus; 2, enlarged view of sori (S.); 3, section of a leaflet (L.) through a fruit dot, showing the arrangement of the sporangia (Sp.) covered by the indusium (I.).

in-du-si-um (in-dū′zĭ-ŭm), n. [pl. -sia (-ä)], [Lat. = tunic < induere, to indue], Bot., a growth covering certain parts of a plant, especially the membranous sheath that covers the sporangia, or spore cases, of a fern; Entom., the covering of a larva.

in-dus-tri-al (in-dŭs′trĭ-ăl), adj. [see industry], 1, pertaining to, or of the nature of, industry, or productive enterprise; 2, devoted to training for systematic labor; as, industrial courses of study; 3, engaged in, or constituting, systematic labor; 4, derived from, or engaged in, manufacturing on a large scale: industrial insurance, life insurance for small amounts, ranging from $15 to $500, with premiums payable weekly, intended to bring insurance within the reach of the poorer classes: industrial union, a vertical union (see vertical).—adv. in-dus′tri-al-ly.

in-dus-tri-al-ism (in-dŭs′trĭ-ăl-ĭzm), n. a social and economic system founded on, or judged with reference to, industrial activities, characterized by machinery, large-scale production, etc.

in-dus-tri-ous (in-dŭs′trĭ-ŭs), adj. 1, characterized by diligence or application; hard-working; 2, zealous: Obs., skilful; ingenious; clever.—adv. in-dus′tri-ous-ly.—n. in-dus′tri-al-ist.—v.t. in-dus′tri-al-ize.

Syn. assiduous, diligent, sedulous. (See active, busy.)

in-dus-try (in′dŭs-trĭ), n. [pl. -tries (-trĭz)], [< Lat. industria, industry], 1, steady application to a task, business, or labor; 2, broadly, all forms of economic activity, including financial, commercial, and productive enterprises generally, as well as the professions; 3, in a more limited sense, the productive occupations as distinguished from finance and commerce; 4, a particular branch of work or trade.

in-dwell (in″dwĕl′), v.t. [in + dwell], to abide in; inhabit; also, to exist within; possess, as a spirit or principle:—v.i. to abide; dwell.—n. in′-dwell″er.—adj. in′dwell″ing.

-ine adj. suffix, [< Lat. -inus], of the nature of; pertaining to: as, asi*nine*; mari*ne*; Florenti*ne*; like; as, adamanti*ne*: Zoöl., belonging to the genus: as, cani*ne*; feli*ne*:—n. suffix, in nouns from Latin nouns or adjectives in -inus, -ina; as, doctri*ne*; medici*ne*; discipli*ne*: sometimes, -in: Chem., forming names of alkaloids and basic substances; as, cocai*ne*; anili*ne*; and of the elements brom*ine*, chlor*ine*, fluor*ine*, iod*ine*.

in-e-bri-ant (in-ē′brĭ-ănt), adj. [see inebriate], intoxicating:—n. an intoxicant.

in-e-bri-ate (in-ē′brĭ-āt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -ated, p.pr. -ating], [< Lat. inebriare (-atus), to make drunk < in, in + ebrius, drunk], 1, to make drunk; intoxicate; 2, hence, figuratively, to exhilarate (the mind or feeling) beyond judgment: 3, to stupefy:—n. (-ăt), a habitual drunkard:—adj. drunken: intoxicated.—n. in-e″bri-a′tion.—n. in″e-bri′e-ty (in″ē-brī′ĕ-tĭ).

in-ed-i-ble (in-ĕd′ĭ-bl), adj. [in- + edible], not fit to be eaten.—n. in-ed″i-bil′i-ty.

in-ef-fa-ble (in-ĕf′ă-bl), adj. [< Lat. in-, not + effabilis < effari, to speak out, utter < ex, out + fari, to speak], 1, transcending expression; unspeakable; inexpressible; 2, too sacred for utterance.—adv. in-ef′fa-bly.—n. in-ef′fa-ble-ness.

in-ef-face-a-ble (in″ĕ-fās′ă-bl), adj. [in- + efface], incapable of being blotted or rubbed out.—adv. in″ef-face′a-bly.

in-ef-fec-tive (in″ĕ-fĕk′tĭv), adj. [in- + effect], 1, not producing, or incapable of producing, the desired result; 2, lacking in artistic effect.—adv. in″ef-fec′tive-ly.—n. in″ef-fec′tive-ness.

Syn. vain, useless, fruitless, inefficient, inefficacious, futile.—Ant. efficient, fruitful, productive, operative.

in-ef-fec-tu-al (in″ĕ-fĕk′tū-ăl), adj. not producing the desired result; unavailing; inefficient.—adv. in″ef-fec′tu-al-ly.—n. in″ef-fec′tu-al-ness.

in-ef-fi-ca-cious (in-ĕf″ĭ-kā′shŭs), adj. [see inefficacy], not able to produce the desired result.—adv. in-ef″fi-ca′cious-ly.

in-ef-fi-ca-cy (in-ĕf′ĭ-kd-sĭ), n. [in- + efficacy], inability to produce the desired result; ineffectualness; inadequacy.

in-ef-fi-cien-cy (in″ĕ-fĭsh′ĕn-sĭ), n. [see inefficient], lack of power or skill to accomplish or complete something; incapacity.

in-ef-fi-cient (in″ĕ-fĭsh′ĕnt), adj. [in- + efficient], 1, not producing, or not equipped to produce, the desired result; 2, incapable; lacking in skill for a given undertaking.—adv. in″ef-fi′cient-ly.

Syn. ineffective, incompetent, powerless, futile, unavailing, fruitless, ineffectual, ineffective, vain.

in-e-las-tic (in″ĕ-lăs′tĭk), adj. [in- + elastic], 1, incapable, when stretched or compressed, of recovering the original form or volume; 2, rigid; 3, hence, not adaptable.—adv. in″e-las′ti-cal-ly.—n. in″e-las-tic′i-ty (-tĭs′ĭ-tĭ).

in-el-e-gance (in-ĕl′ĕ-găns), n. [see inelegant], lack of refinement in form or manner; want of elegance.—n. in-el′e-gan-cy.

in-el-e-gant (in-ĕl′ĕ-gănt), adj. [in- + elegant], lacking in beauty, refinement, elegance, or good taste.—adv. in-el′e-gant-ly.

in-el-i-gi-ble (in-ĕl′ĭ-jĭ-bl), adj. [in- + eligible], 1, unworthy of choice; unsuitable; 2, legally unfitted for choice or election.—adv. in-el′i-gi-bly.—n. in-el″i-gi-bil′i-ty.

in-e-luc-ta-ble (in″ĕ-lŭk′tă-bl), adj. [< Lat. ineluctabilis < in-, not + e, out + luctari, to struggle], unavoidable; overpowering; irresistible.

in-ept (in-ĕpt′), adj. [< Lat. ineptus < in-, not + aptus, apt], 1, not fit or suitable; 2, not consistent with reason; absurd; 3, clumsy; inefficient.—adv. in-ept′ly.—n. in-ept′ness.—n. in-ept′i-tude.

in-e-qual-i-ty (in″ē-kwŏl′ĭ-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], [in- + equal], 1, difference; disparity, especially of rank, station, size, number, etc.; 2, unevenness, as in surface; variableness; changeableness of condition; 3, want of due proportion; uneven distribution; insufficiency: Math., the relation between quantities that are unequal; also, an expression of this relation, shown by the insertion of the appropriate sign [≠ or ≯, is not equal to, >, is greater than, or <, is less than], between the quantities; Astron., a deviation from regularity in the motion of a heavenly body.

Syn. diversity, disproportion. (See disparity.)

in-eq-ui-ta-ble (in-ĕk′wĭ-tă-bl), adj. [see inequity], not according to fairness or justice; unjust.—adv. in-eq′ui-ta-bly.

CHART OF THE INDO-EUROPEAN FAMILY OF LANGUAGES

SUBFAMILY	BRANCH	[1] Languages and Dialects	[2] Regions where Spoken
		[3] Satem Languages
I. INDO-IRANIAN, or ARYAN	INDIC: Vedic; Classical Sanskrit; Pali; Prakrit,	from which are derived many modern local dialects, as Bengali, Singhalese, Eastern Hindi, Western Hindi (including Hindustani and its chief dialect, Urdu), etc., and perhaps Romany.	India.
	IRANIAN: Avestan (Zend, or Old Bactrian); Old Persian; Pahlavi;	Modern Persian, Kurdish, etc.; Afghan, Baluch, etc.	Persia, Kurdistan, Caucasia, Afghanistan, Baluchistan, etc.
II. ARMENIAN	ARMENIAN: Old Armenian;	Modern Armenian.	Armenia.
III. ALBANIAN	ALBANIAN: Illyrian;	Modern Albanian; Thracian.	Balkan Peninsula.
IV. BALTO-SLAVIC	BALTIC: Old Prussian;	Lithuanian; Lettish.	Baltic Provinces; Lithuania.
	SLAVIC, or SLAVONIC: Church Slavic, or Old Bulgarian;	Russian, in several dialects; Bulgarian; Serbian; Croatian; Slovenian; Czech, or Bohemian; Slovakian; Polish; etc.	Russia, Bulgaria, Serbia, Turkey, Austria, Hungary, Poland, etc.
		[3] Centum Languages
V. HELLENIC	GREEK: Old Ionic, or Epic; Attic; Doric; Æolic;	etc.; Modern Greek.	Greece and Asia Minor.
VI. ITALIC	OSCO-UMBRIAN: Oscan; Umbrian.		Italy.
	LATIN: Classical and Vulgar Latin, the latter developing into: Langue d'oïl; Langue d'oc;	French; Provençal; Catalan; Spanish; Portuguese; Italian; Rumanian, including Romansh and Wallachian.	Italy, France, Spain, Portugal, Switzerland, Rumania.
VII. CELTIC	CONTINENTAL CELTIC: Gaulic.		Ancient Gaul.
	GAELIC: Old Irish;	Irish; Scotch; Manx.	Ireland; Scotland; Isle of Man.
	CYMRIC, or BRITANNIC: Cornish;	Welsh; Breton.	Cornwall; Wales; Brittany.
VIII. TEUTONIC, or GERMANIC	EAST GERMANIC: Gothic.		Ancient Germany.
	NORTH GERMANIC, or SCANDINAVIAN: Old Norse, or Old Icelandic, developing into	Icelandic, Norwegian, Swedish, Danish.	Iceland and Scandinavia.
	WEST GERMANIC: Old High German, including Upper Frankish, Bavarian, Alemannic, and developing into Middle High German and	Modern German, including the developments from the Old High German dialects; Old Saxon, or Old Low German, developing into Low German, or Plattdeutsch; Old Low Frankish, or Old Dutch, developing into Middle Dutch, Dutch, Flemish, Brabantish, and Limburgish; Old Frisian and Modern Frisian; Anglo-Saxon, or Old English, including West Saxon, Kentish, Mercian, and Northumbrian, and developing into Middle English and thence into Modern English.	German Highlands; Austria; Switzerland; Germany; Northern Germany; Holland; Belgium; Friesland; England.

CHART OF THE SEMITIC FAMILY OF LANGUAGES

ARABIC, or SOUTHERN BRANCH	NORTHERN GROUP: Old or Classical Arabic;	Modern Arabic, including as dialects Syrian, Mesopotamian, Egyptian, Maltese, etc.	Arabia, Turkey in Asia, North, East, and Central Africa, Malay Archipelago.
	SOUTHERN GROUP: South Arabic; Ethiopic.		Southern Arabia, Abyssinia.
ARAMÆAN, or NORTHERN BRANCH	BABYLONIAN-ASSYRIAN: Babylonian, or Chaldean; Assyrian.		Ancient Babylonia and Assyria.
	ARAMAIC: eastern subgroup, consisting of Babylonian, Aramaic, Syriac, etc., and	Modern Aramaic; western subgroup, consisting of Biblical and Palestinian Aramaic, Samaritan, etc.	Ancient Babylonia, Mesopotamia, Syria, Armenia, Palestine, Northern Africa.
	HEBRAIC: Biblical Hebrew, Neo-Hebrew, Moabitish; Canaanitish; Phœnician, Punic.		Palestine; Phœnicia, Carthage, etc.

[1] Languages and dialects no longer spoken are printed in boldface; others in italics.

[2] In general, the locality named is that in which the given language was originally developed. Localities to which Indo-European languages have been recently carried by colonization, as America and South Africa, are not listed in-eq-ui-ty (ĭn-ĕk′wĭ-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], [in- + equity], lack of fairness or justice.

[3] The Indo-European family of languages is divided primarily into two groups, conveniently distinguished by the characteristic development of certain consonant sounds. One of these sounds, originally a palatal k, is differentiated into s and k respectively in the two groups. The initial letters of satem and centum (kentum), the Sanskrit and Latin forms of the original word for hundred, illustrate this differentiation, and the groups have been named from them. In general, the satem languages formed the eastern, the centum languages the western, division of the Indo-European family. Tocharian, however, a little known language recently discovered in Chinese Turkestan, is a centum language, generally believed to have been carried into Asia by emigrants from Europe.

in-e-rad-i-ca-ble (ĭn″ē-răd′ĭ-kȧ-bl), adj. [in- + eradicate], incapable of being rooted or torn out.—adv. in″e-rad′i-ca-bly.

in-er-rant (ĭn-ĕr′ȧnt), adj. [in- + errant], infallible; free from error.—n. in-er′ran-cy.

in-ert (ĭn-ûrt′), adj. [< Lat. iners (-ertis) < in-, not + ars, skill, art], 1, having no power of motion, action, or resistance; possessed of inertia: 2, sluggish; 3, having no active chemical or medicinal properties; neutral.—adv. in-ert′ly.—n. in-ert′ness.

Syn. passive, apathetic, dead, dull. (See inactive.)

in-er-ti-a (ĭn-ûr′shĭ-ȧ), n. [Lat. = lack of skill, inactivity: see inert], tendency not to move; lack of activity; sluggishness: Phys., that property by virtue of which a body if at rest tends to remain so, or if moving to continue in motion in the same straight line, unless acted upon by some external force.

in-es-cutch-eon (ĭn″ĕs-kŭch′ŭn), n. [in- + escutcheon], a small escutcheon used as a bearing on an escutcheon (see heraldry, illus.).

in es-se (ĭn ĕs′ē), [Lat. = in being], in actual existence; in being: opposite of in posse.

in-es-sen-tial (ĭn″ĕ-sĕn′shȧl), adj. [in- + essential], 1, not needed or indispensable; not important; 2, immaterial:—n. an inessential thing.

in-es-ti-ma-ble (ĭn-ĕs′tĭ-mȧ-bl), adj. [in- + estimate], not to be computed; beyond measure or price.—adv. in-es′ti-ma-bly.

in-ev-i-ta-ble (ĭn-ĕv′ĭ-tȧ-bl), adj. [< Lat. inevitabilis < in-, not + e, from + vitare, to shun, escape], not to be evaded; unavoidable; as, inevitable death.—adv. in-ev′i-ta-bly.—n. in-ev′i-ta-ble-ness.—n. in-ev″i-ta-bil′i-ty.

Syn. unpreventable, unevadable. (See necessary.)

in-ex-act (ĭn″ĕg-zăkt′), adj. [in- + exact], not precise, correct, accurate, or punctual; not careful.—adv. in″ex-act′ly.—n. in″ex-act′ness.

in-ex-cus-a-ble (ĭn″ĕks-kūz′ȧ-bl), adj. [in- + excuse], not admitting of excuse or apology; unpardonable.—adv. in″ex-cus′a-bly.

in-ex-haust-i-ble (ĭn″ĕg-zôs′tĭ-bl), adj. [in- + exhaust], 1, not to be used up; unfailing; 2, of exhaustless power, vigor, or strength; indefatigable; unwearied.—n. in″ex-haust′i-ble-ness.—adv. in″ex-haust′i-bly.—n. in″ex-haust′i-bil′i-ty.

in-ex-o-ra-ble (ĭn-ĕk′sŏ-rȧ-bl), adj. [< Lat. inexorabilis < in-, not + exorare, to entreat < ex, out + orare, to speak], not to be moved by prayers; unyielding; unrelenting.—n. in-ex′o-ra-ble-ness.—adv. in-ex′o-ra-bly.—n. in-ex″o-ra-bil′i-ty.

Syn. inflexible, relentless, resolute, implacable.

in-ex-pe-di-ent (ĭn″ĕks-pē′dĭ-ĕnt), adj. [in- + expedient], unsuitable to conditions; inadvisable; impolitic.—adv. in″ex-pe′di-ent-ly.—n. in″ex-pe′di-en-cy; in″ex-pe′di-ence.

in-ex-pen-sive (ĭn″ĕks-pĕn′sĭv), adj. [in- + expense], cheap; costing little.

in-ex-pe-ri-ence (ĭn″ĕks-pē′rĭ-ĕns), n. [in- + experience], 1, want of actual enjoyment, suffering, or personal contact with life, or of the knowledge gained from actual contact with the world's affairs; 2, lack of skill or practical wisdom.

in-ex-pe-ri-enced (ĭn″ĕks-pē′rĭ-ĕnst), adj. lacking the personal knowledge and skill that comes from living a practical, active life.

in-ex-pert (ĭn″ĕks-pûrt′), adj. [in- + expert], unskilled; lacking the knowledge gained from practice.—adv. in″ex-pert′ly.—n. in″ex-pert′ness.

in-ex-pi-a-ble (ĭn-ĕks′pĭ-ȧ-bl), adj. [in- + expiate], 1, not capable of being expiated or atoned for; as, an inexpiable crime; 2, implacable; relentless; as, inexpiable war.

in-ex-pli-ca-ble (ĭn-ĕks′plĭ-kȧ-bl), adj. [in- + explicate], not capable of being explained, made plain, or understood; not to be interpreted or accounted for; as, an inexplicable mystery.—adv. in-ex′pli-ca-bly.—n. in-ex″pli-ca-bil′i-ty.

in-ex-plic-it (ĭn″ĕks-plĭs′ĭt), adj. [in- + explicit], not plain; not definite; incomplete.

in-ex-plo-sive (ĭn″ĕks-plō′sĭv), adj. [in- + explode], not able or likely to burst.

in-ex-press-i-ble (ĭn″ĕks-prĕs′ĭ-bl), adj. [see inexpressive], incapable of being uttered or described: inexpressibles, n.pl. Humorous, trousers.—adv. in″ex-press′i-bly.

in-ex-pres-sive (ĭn″ĕks-prĕs′ĭv), adj. [in- + express], 1, lacking in expression or meaning; dull; 2, not adequate to convey meaning: Obs., inexpressible.—adv. in″ex-pres′sive-ly.

in-ex-pug-na-ble (ĭn″ĕks-pŭg′nȧ-bl; -pūn′ȧ-bl), adj. [< Lat. inexpugnabilis < in-, not + expugnare, to storm < ex, out + pugnare to fight], 1, not to be subdued or overcome by force; unconquerable; impregnable; hence, 2, of principles or truths, incapable of being overcome.

in-ex-ten-si-ble (ĭn″ĕks-tĕn′sĭ-bl), adj. [in- + extend], incapable of being stretched; inelastic; as, inextensible fibers.—adv. in″ex-ten′si-bly.—n. in″ex-ten″si-bil′i-ty.

in ex-ten-so (ĭn ĕks-tĕn′sō), [Lat. = in extension], at full length; in full.

in-ex-tin-guish-a-ble (ĭn″ĕks-tĭng′gwĭsh-ȧ-bl), adj. [in- + extinguish], unquenchable, as a fire; unslakable, as thirst.

in ex-tre-mis (ĭn ĕks-trē′mĭs), [Lat. = at the very end], at the point of death.

in-ex-tri-ca-ble (ĭn-ĕks′trĭ-kȧ-bl), adj. [in- + extricate], 1, involved beyond extrication; 2, incapable of being untied or disentangled; 3, hopelessly confused or obscure; unsolvable; 4, intricate in design; elaborate.—adv. in-ex′tri-ca-bly.

inf. abbr. 1, infantry; 2, infinitive (also, infin.):—in f., [Lat. in fine], at the end.

in-fal-li-ble (ĭn-făl′ĭ-bl), adj. [in- + fallible], 1, incapable of erring; unfailing; as, man is not infallible; 2, not liable to mistake or disappointment; certain.—adv. in-fal′li-bly.—n. in-fal″li-bil′i-ty.

in-fa-mous (ĭn′fȧ-mŭs), adj. [see infamy], 1, having notoriously evil or vile repute; 2, odious; scandalous: Eng. Law, designating a crime that entailed loss of honor and of witness and jury rights: now abolished.—adv. in′fa-mous-ly.

Syn. shameful, disgraceful, detestable, ignominious, abominable, outrageous, wicked, villainous, atrocious.

in-fa-my (ĭn′fȧ-mĭ), n. [pl. -mies (-mĭz)], [< Fr. infamie < Lat. infamia, ill fame < infamis, of ill fame < in-, not + fama, fame], 1, public disgrace; loss of good name; 2, baseness or vileness; 3, an odious act: Law, loss of character, and, formerly, of witness and jury rights, by a convicted person.

Syn. disgrace, ignominy, dishonor, reproach, baseness, opprobrium.—Ant. honor, dignity, respect.

in-fan-cy (ĭn′fȧn-sĭ), n. [see infant], 1, the state of being a babe in arms; early childhood; 2, the first stage of anything: Law, minority, the period from birth to manhood or womanhood, which, in Great Britain and the United States, is 21 years.

in-fant (ĭn′fȧnt), n. [< O.F. enfant < Lat. infans (-antis), child < in-, not + fari, to speak], a babe; a young child: Law, a person who has not attained the legal age of manhood or womanhood, or who is under age:—adj. pertaining to the earliest stages of childhood; immature; childish: Law, pertaining to the legal period of minority.

in-fan-ta (ĭn-fȧn′tȧ), n. [Sp. and Port. = girl child < Lat. infans: see infant], any daughter of the royal family of Spain and, prior to the Republic, of Portugal: used also as a title.

in-fan-te (ĭn-fȧn′tā), n. [Sp. and Port. = boy child < Lat. infans: see infant], any son of the royal family of Spain and, formerly, of Portugal, except the eldest: used also as a title.

in-fan-ti-cide (ĭn-făn′tĭ-sīd), n. [Fr. < L.L. infanticidium < Lat. infans (-antis), infant + caedere, to kill], 1, the murder of a newborn or recently born child: 2, one who commits such murder.

in-fan-tile (ĭn′fȧn-tīl; -tĭl), adj. [see infant], pertaining to babies or the period of babyhood; childish: Psych., designating, or pertaining to, a condition of retarded physical or mental development in one past the age of infancy, characterized by reactions resembling those of an infant.—n. in-fan′ti-lism.

in-fan-tile pa-ral-y-sis Pathol., a children's infectious disease characterized by inflammation of the motor nerve cells of the spinal cord, usually resulting in partial paralysis, and often death; acute anterior poliomyelitis.

in-fan-tine (ĭn′fȧn-tīn; -tĭn), adj. childish; childlike; infantile.

in-fan-try (ĭn′fȧn-trĭ), n. [< Fr. infanterie < It. infanteria < infante, youth < Lat. infans (-antis), infant: see infant], a body of soldiers armed, equipped, and trained for service on foot: mounted infantry, foot soldiers temporarily provided with horses.

in-fan-try-man (ĭn′fȧn-trĭ-măn), n. [pl. -men (-mĕn)], [infantry + man], a soldier of the organized foot service.

in-fat-u-ate (ĭn-făt′ū-āt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -ated, p.pr. -ating], [< Lat. infatuare (-atus), to make a fool of, infatuate < in, in + fatuus, foolish], 1, to lead into folly; 2, to inspire with an extravagantly foolish passion:—adj. (-ȧt), showing excessive fondness; deprived of sound judgment.—p.adj. in-fat′u-at″ed.

in-fat-u-a-tion (ĭn-făt″ū-ā′shŭn), n. 1, extravagant folly; 2, an extravagant and foolish passion or affection, as for gambling.

in-fect (in-fĕkt'), v.t. [<Lat. inficere (-fectus), to taint<in-, into+facere, to make], 1, to contaminate; taint; 2, to communicate a disease, mood, or the like, to (a person): followed by with.—adj. in-fec'tive.—n. in-fec'tor.

in-fec-tion (in-fĕk'shŭn), n. 1, the act or process of infecting; also, the state of being infected; the communication of a condition of body or spirit to another; 2, the communication of disease germs; 3, that which depraves or infects morally, as an evil influence or bad example; that which infects or communicates disease; 4, a disease that is communicated by germs in any manner: distinguished from contagion, which requires personal contact with an infected person; 5, a prevailing germ disease; an epidemic; 6, the communication of emotions from person to person.

Syn. communication, epidemic. (See contagion.)

in-fec-tious (in-fĕk'shŭs), adj. 1, capable of communicating some condition, as disease, by infection; 2, corrupting; demoralizing; 3, readily communicated or spread; as, infectious gaiety: Obs., tainted with disease: infectious disease, a disease that may be spread by germs without personal contact:—adv. in-fec'tious-ly.—n. in-fec'tious-ness.

in-fe-cun-di-ty (in"fē-kŭn'dĭ-tĭ), n. [²*in-*+fecund], barrenness; infertility.

in-fe-lic-i-tous (in"fē-lĭs'ĭ-tŭs), adj. [see infelicity], unfortunate; unhappy; inappropriate; inapt; ill-timed.—adv. in"fe-lic'i-tous-ly.

in-fe-lic-i-ty (in"fē-lĭs'ĭ-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], [²*in-*+felicity], 1, misfortune; unhappiness; inappropriateness; 2, an ill-timed act or expression.

in-fer (in-fûr'), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. inferred (-fûrd'), p.pr. inferring], [<Lat. inferre, to bring in; conclude<in, in+ferre, to bring], 1, to derive by reasoning; deduce or induce; conclude; 2, to be or furnish evidence of; involve as a consequence; imply; as, smoke infers a fire; 3, to indicate; as, your haste infers your eagerness: Colloq., to guess; suppose:—v.i. to draw inferences by deduction or induction.

Syn. deduce, derive, gather, conclude; imply. Infer is often confused with imply. To infer is, chiefly, to derive, or come to, a conclusion; one who implies suggests, or affords tangible grounds for, a conclusion. What a speaker implies, his hearers may infer.

in-fer-a-ble (in-fûr'ä-bl), adj. capable of being arrived at by reasoning, as a conclusion from premises; deducible. Also, in-fer'ri-ble.

in-fer-ence (in'fĕr-ĕns), n. 1, the process or act of inferring; the act of arriving at a conclusion by reasoning of any kind; 2, a process of reasoning and formation of conclusions by proceeding from premises according to rules of logic.

Syn. (see conclusion).

in-fer-en-tial (in"fĕr-ĕn'shăl), adj. having the nature of a conclusion arrived at by reasoning from known facts.—adv. in"fer-en'tial-ly.

in-fe-ri-or (in-fē'rĭ-ĕr), adj. [Lat., comp. of inferus, low], 1, lower in place, rank, value; secondary; 2, mediocre; second-rate: Astron., between the earth and the sun; as, inferior planets; Anat., situated below similar parts designated as superior; Print., set below type line, as a figure or letter, as ₂ in H_2O:—n. one who or that which ranks below another.

in-fe-ri-or-i-ty (in-fē"rĭ-ŏr'ĭ-tĭ), n. a lower, or inferior, state or quality: inferiority complex, Psych., an exaggerated sense of inadequacy, particularly in relation to other persons, supposedly based upon an unconsciously maintained infantile attitude toward one's parents.

in-fer-nal (in-fûr'năl), adj. [<Lat. infernalis<infernus, situated below<inferus, low], 1, pertaining to the lower world, the regions of the dead; 2, belonging to, or resembling, hell; hellish; 3, fiendish; outrageous: infernal machine, an apparatus designed to destroy life and property.—adv. in-fer'nal-ly.

Syn. diabolical, devilish, satanic, demoniac, hellish.

in-fer-no (in-fûr'nō), n. [pl. -nos (-nōz)], [It.<Lat. infernus, situated below<inferus, low], 1, the lower regions; hell; 2, a scene so horrible as to resemble hell: Inferno, the title of the part of Dante's "Divine Comedy" descriptive of hell.

in-fer-tile (in-fûr'tĭl; Br. -tīl), adj. [²*in-*+fertile], not productive; not fertilized, as an egg; sterile; barren.—adv. in-fer'tile-ly.—n. in"fer-til'i-ty.

in-fest (in-fĕst'), v.t. [<Lat. infestare, to assail<infestus, hostile], to attack; overrun; beset or annoy constantly and in numbers; as, moths infest woolen materials.—n. in"fes-ta'tion.

in-fi-del (in'fĭ-dĕl), n. [<Lat. infidelis, faithless<in-, not+fidelis, faithful<fides, faith], 1, one who rejects religion or divine revelation; a professed unbeliever in whatever religion is locally regarded as true, as from the Turkish viewpoint, a non-Mohammedan; in Christian communities, a non-Christian; 2, a renegade; 3, in general, one who does not believe in something specified:—adj. 1, unbelieving; heathen; 2, pertaining to, or characteristic of, infidels.

Syn., n. unbeliever, disbeliever. (See skeptic.)

in-fi-del-i-ty (in"fĭ-dĕl'ĭ-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], 1, disbelief in some religion, especially Christianity; 2, breach of trust; disloyalty, or an instance of it; 3, specifically, marital infidelity; adultery.

in-field (in'fēld"), n. [²*in-*+field], 1, in baseball, the space within the base lines; also, infielders collectively: opposite of outfield; 2, in Scotland, tilled land near the farmhouse: opposite of outfield.

in-field-er (in'fēl"dĕr), n. in baseball, the shortstop or any of the players, not a runner, on the first, second, or third base: distinguished from battery and outfielder.

in-fil-trate (in-fĭl'trāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -trated, p.pr. -trating], [²*in-*+filter], 1, to cause to pass through pores or very small openings; 2, to pass through as by straining:—v.i. to percolate, or filter through, pores or small spaces.—n. in"fil-tra'tion.

in-fi-nite (in'fĭ-nĭt), adj. [²*in-*+finite], 1, immeasurably great; having no restrictions in power, knowledge, etc.; 2, unlimited; immeasurable; inexhaustible: Math., having a value greater than any assignable value:—n. that which has no limit: Math., an infinite quantity: the Infinite, God; the Absolute Being.—adv. in'fi-nite-ly.—n. in'fi-nite-ness.

Syn., adj. limitless, illimitable, interminable, boundless, countless, fathomless, endless, vast, eternal.

in-fin-i-tes-i-mal (in"fĭn-ĭ-tĕs'ĭ-măl), adj. [infinite+(cent)esimal], 1, immeasurably small; very minute; 2, of or pertaining to very minute quantities: Math., having a value less than any assignable value.—adv. in"fin-i-tes'i-mal-ly.

in-fin-i-ti-val (in-fĭn"ĭ-tī'văl), adj. [see infinitive], pertaining to the infinitive verb form.—adv. in-fin"i-ti'val-ly.

in-fin-i-tive (in-fĭn'ĭ-tĭv), adj. [<Lat. infinitivus<in-, not+finire (-itus), to define], Gram., without limitation of person or number: applied to that verb form which merely expresses the general sense of the verb:—n. Gram., the infinitive verb form, usually indicated by to before the verb; as, to sing.

in-fin-i-tude (in-fĭn'ĭ-tūd), n. [see infinite], 1, the quality of being boundless or immeasurable; also, that which is boundless in space, number, etc.; 2, a quantity too great to be counted.

in-fin-i-ty (in-fĭn'ĭ-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], 1, the state of being immeasurable; 2, unlimited extent of time, space, or quantity; 3, an indefinitely great quantity: Geom., the portion of space lying at an infinite distance from the portion of space under consideration; Math., an infinite quantity: represented by ∞.

in-firm (in-fûrm'), adj. [<Lat. infirmus, weak<in-, not+firmus, firm, strong], 1, feeble in body or health; 2, weak; irresolute; 3, insecure; frail; 4, uncertain.—adv. in-firm'ly.

in-fir-ma-ry (in-fûr'mä-rĭ), n. [pl. -ries (-rĭz)], a room or building for the treatment of the sick and injured; especially, the quarters for the sick in a school, institution, or the like.

in-fir-mi-ty (in-fûr'mĭ-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], 1, the state of being weak or sick; 2, weakness of body or of mind; illness; failing; frailty.

Syn. foible, defect, disease, feebleness. (See debility.)

[1]in-fix (in-fĭks'), v.t. [²*in-*+fix], 1, to fasten in, as by piercing; 2, to implant; teach.

[2]in-fix (in'fĭks), n. [²*in-*+fix], Gram., a modifying element inserted in the body of a word, having a value similar to that of a suffix or prefix, as n in the present tense of Latin rincere (root vic-).

in-flame (in-flām'), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. inflamed (-flāmd'), p.pr. inflaming], [<O.F. enflammer<Lat. inflammare, to inflame<in, in+flamma, flame], 1, to set on fire; 2, to fire with passion; 3, to excite; provoke; irritate; 4, to put into a state of redness, swelling, and pain; as, weeping inflames the eyes; make unnaturally hot, as with a fever:—v.i. 1, to become affected with redness, swelling, and pain; 2, to become provoked or excited.—n. in-flam'er.

Syn. anger, exasperate, enrage, arouse, kindle, fire.

in-flam-ma-ble (in-flăm'ä-bl), adj. 1, easily set on fire; combustible; 2, easily excited; excitable; irritable.—n. in-flam'ma-ble-ness.—adv. in-flam'ma-bly.—n. in-flam"ma-bil'i-ty.

in-flam-ma-tion (in"flă-mā'shŭn), n. the act of inflaming, or the condition of being inflamed: Pathol., an unnatural condition of any part of the body due to irritation and shown by pain, redness, heat, and swelling.

in-flam-ma-to-ry (in-flăm'ä-tō-rĭ), adj. tending to excite passion, tumult, or rebellion: Pathol., pertaining to, tending to produce, or showing, a condition of redness, swelling, etc.

in-flate (in-flāt'), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. inflated, p.pr. inflating], [< Lat. in, into + flare (-atus), to blow], 1, to swell out with air or gas, as a balloon; 2, to puff up; make proud; 3, to expand or raise unduly, as prices: inflate the currency, to increase unduly or excessively the amount of money other than the standard of a country, so that its nominal value tends to rise in relation to its purchasing or actual value:—v.i. to swell out with air or gas.—n. in-flat'er; in-fla'tor.

in-fla-tion (in-flā'shŭn), n. a swelling or distending, especially from air or other gas; hence, pomposity; also, great conceit: Com., a general rise in prices accompanying an increase in the amount of money in circulation; Econ., the process whereby the volume and rapidity of circulation of the medium of exchange increase more rapidly than the volume of business done, as evidenced by a rise in prices.

in-fla-tion-ist (in-flā'shŭn-ĭst), n. one who favors a policy of a sweeping increase in the amount of money in circulation; specifically, one in favor of the issue of paper money not properly secured upon a gold basis.

in-flo-res-cence (in"flō-rĕs'ens), n. [< Lat. inflorescens (-entis), coming into flower < in, in + flos (floris), flower], Bot., 1, the process of coming into flower: 2, the arrangement of flowers on the stem: 3, blossoms collectively; flower clusters.

in-flow (in'flō"), n. [in- + flow], the act of running or flowing in; also, that which runs in.

in-flu-ence (in'flōō-ĕns), n. [< L.L. influentia < Lat. in, into + fluere, to flow], 1, originally, a flow of ethereal fluid believed to emanate from the stars and to affect human actions; 2, energy or power tending to produce effects by indirect or invisible means; as, the influence of a good example; 3, power arising from wealth or station; as, he has political influence; 4, one who or that which exerts power: Elec., an electrical effect produced by one body upon another without contact; electrical induction:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -enced (-ĕnst), p.pr. -encing], 1, to have unseen power over, physically or mentally; sway; as, to influence a community for good; 2, to modify or affect the condition of; as, rainfall influences the productiveness of a country.

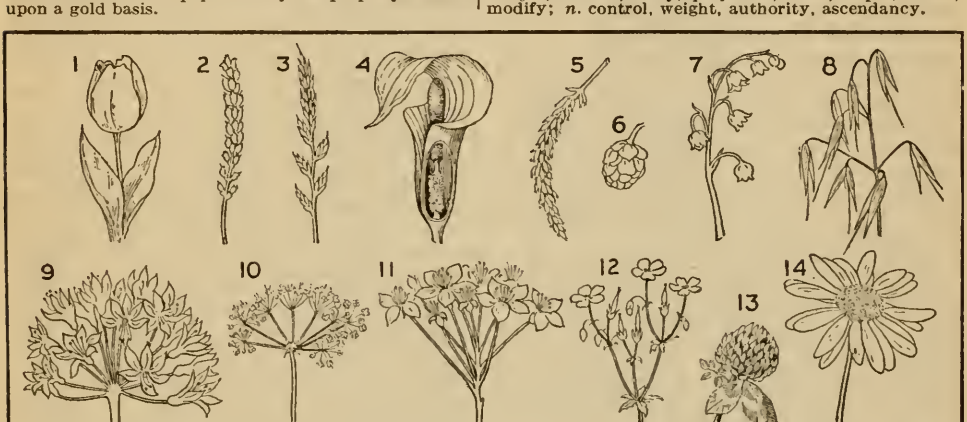
Syn., v. bias, sway, prejudice, alter, impel, affect, modify; n. control, weight, authority, ascendancy.



TYPES OF INFLORESCENCE

1, solitary (tulip); 2, spike (plantain); 3, compound spike (couch grass); 4, spadix (jack-in-the-pulpit); 5, ament, or catkin (birch); 6, cone, or strobile (hop); 7, raceme (lily of the valley); 8, panicle (oat); 9, umbel (African lily, Agapanthus); 10, compound umbel (wild carrot); 11, corymb (hawthorn); 12, cyme (wild geranium); 13, head (clover); 14, composite head (daisy).

in-flect (in-flĕkt'), v.t. [< Lat. in, in + flectere (flexus), to bend], 1, to bend; turn from a direct course; 2, to vary the sound of, as the voice, by producing changes in pitch or tone: Gram., to vary the form of (a noun, verb, or adjective) so as to show changes in the person, number, tense, case, etc.:—v.i. to undergo grammatical change of ending.

in-flec-tion (in-flĕk'shŭn), n. 1, the act of bending, or the state of being bent; a bend or curve; 2, rise and fall in the voice: Gram., the variations undergone by words to mark case, number, gender, etc. Also, in-flex'ion.

in-flec-tion-al (in-flĕk'shŭn-ăl), adj. Gram., showing changes in form to denote changes in person, number, case, etc.; as, Latin is an inflectional language. Also, in-flex'ion-al.

in-flec-tive (in-flĕk'tĭv), adj. capable of bending; Gram., inflectional (which see); as, inflective languages.

in-flex-i-ble (in-flĕk'sĭ-bl), adj. [< Lat. in-, not + flectere (flexus), to bend], 1, not to be bent; rigid; stiff; 2, not to be moved by entreaty; not to be varied or changed; unalterable.—n. in-flex'i-ble-ness.—adv. in-flex'i-bly.—n. in-flex"i-bil'i-ty.

Syn. unbending, obstinate, obdurate, unappeasable, implacable, immovable, inexorable, resolute, rigorous.

in-flict (in-flĭkt'), v.t. [< Lat. infligere (-flictus), to strike on; inflict < in, on + fligere, to strike], 1, to cause by, or as if by, striking, as pain, a wound, etc.; cause to be suffered or borne; 2, to impose, as a punishment, an unpleasant thing, etc.

in-flic-tion (in-flĭk'shŭn), n. 1, the act of imposing, as a punishment; 2, that which is suffered, as pain, annoyance, etc.—adj. in-flic'tive.

in-flu-en-tial (in"flōō-ĕn'shăl), adj. having or exerting power or sway; as, an influential citizen.—adv. in"flu-en'tial-ly.

in-flu-en-za (in"flōō-ĕn'zà), n. [It. < Lat. influens (-entis), flowing in], Pathol., an acute, infectious disease, probably caused by a specific bacterium and frequently occurring in epidemic form, characterized by inflammation of the air passages, severe muscular pains and headache, digestive and nervous disturbances, and prostration: often followed by serious after effects: popularly called flu.

in-flux (in'flŭks"), n. [< L.L. influxus < Lat. in, into + fluere (fluxus), to flow], 1, an inflow; inpouring, as of air, liquid, gas, etc.; 2, the addition or continual incoming of persons or things; as, an influx of late arrivals at a concert; 3, the point at which a stream flows into another or into the sea.

in-fold (in-fōld'), v.t. [in- + fold], 1, to wrap up or surround with folds; envelop; 2, to hold in the arms; embrace. Also, en-fold'.

in-form (in-fôrm'), v.t. [< O.F. enformer < Lat. informare, to give shape to, describe < in, in + forma, form], 1, to give to (a person) definite knowledge, as of an event; tell; enlighten; acquaint with a fact; 2, to animate; imbue; inspire; 3, to give characteristic form to; be the formative principle of; mold: Rare, to train; instruct; guide:—v.i. to give accusatory information: Obs., to assume form.

Syn. advise, notify, mention, tell, communicate, apprise, enlighten, vitalize, inspirit, animate.

in-for-mal (in-fôr'măl), adj. [in- + formal], 1, not according to custom or rule; irregular; 2, without ceremony; unceremonious; as, an informal reception.—adv. in-for'mal-ly.

in-for-mal-i-ty (in″fôr-măl′ĭ-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], want of regular, customary, or legal form or ceremony; also, an instance of such lack.

in-form-ant (in-fôr′mănt), n. [see inform], one who imparts news or knowledge.

in-for-ma-tion (in″fôr-mā′shŭn), n. 1, knowledge given or acquired; 2, valuable or timely knowledge, especially of facts; news: Law, 1, a kind of lawsuit or accusation brought on behalf of the government; 2, a declaration made before a magistrate requesting him to issue a summons or warrant.
Syn. tidings. (See knowledge, intelligence.)

in-form-a-tive (in-fôr′mă-tĭv), adj. capable of imparting knowledge; instructive.

in-form-er (in-fôr′mĕr), n. 1, one who informs a magistrate of a breaking of the law; 2, one who gives information or news: distinguished from informant in conveying a sense of opprobrium: Obs., one who or that which inspires or vitalizes.

in-fra- prefix, [Lat. = below], beneath; below; as, *infra*costal: infra-red.

in-fra-cos-tal (in″frā-kŏs′tăl), adj. [< Lat. infra, below + costa, rib], lying beneath or below the ribs; as, infracostal nerves.

in-frac-tion (in-frăk′shŭn), n. [< Lat. infractio (-onis), a weakening, breaking into < in, into + frangere (fractus), to break], the act of breaking a law, rule, or convention; a breach; violation; as, an infraction of a treaty.

in-fra-red (in″frā-rĕd′), adj. Phys., designating, or pertaining to, the part of the spectrum, or the rays refracted to it, which lies outside the range of the visible spectrum at its red end.

in-fre-quence (in-frē′kwĕns), n. [see infrequent], the state or fact of happening very seldom; rareness.—n. in-fre′quen-cy.

in-fre-quent (in-frē′kwĕnt), adj. [²*in-* + frequent], 1, seldom occurring: as, infrequent visits; infrequent rains; 2, occurring or placed only at long intervals.—adv. in-fre′quent-ly.

in-fringe (in-frĭnj′), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. infringed (-frĭnjd′), p.pr. infringing], [< Lat. infringere, to break into, violate < in, into + frangere, to break], to disregard or break, as a law; neglect to obey: —v.i. to encroach or trespass: with on or upon; as, to infringe upon a patent.—n. in-fring′er.
Syn. invade, transgress, violate, trespass, break.

in-fringe-ment (in-frĭnj′mĕnt), n. 1, the act of breaking or neglecting a law; violation; 2, encroachment on a right, as by reproduction or imitation of a patented article; also, the unlawful use of a trade name or trade-mark.

in-fun-dib-u-lar (in″fŭn-dĭb′ū-lăr), adj. [see infundibulum], having the shape of a funnel. Also, in″fun-dib′u-late (-lāt).

in-fun-dib-u-lum (in″fŭn-dĭb′ū-lŭm), n. [pl. -la (-lă)], [Lat. = a funnel < in, into + fundere, to pour], Anat. and Zoöl., any of various parts or organs having the form or shape of a funnel; especially, the hollow stalk at the base of the vertebrate brain, terminated by the pituitary body, or the terminations of the bronchioles.

in-fu-ri-ate (in-fū′rĭ-āt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -ated, p.pr. -ating], [< L.L. infuriare (-atus), < Lat. in, in + furia, fury < furere, to rage], to enrage; madden; as, to infuriate a mob:—adj. (in-fū′rĭ-āt), enraged; excessively angry.—n. in-fu′ri-a′tion (-ā′shŭn).

in-fuse (in-fūz′), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. infused (-fūzd′), p.pr. infusing], [< Lat. in, into + fundere (fusus), to pour], 1, to introduce, as by pouring; 2, to fill; animate; 3, to impart or teach gradually, as good principles; 4, to steep in water or other solvent in order to extract the active or useful qualities.—n. in-fus′er.

in-fu-si-ble (in-fū′zĭ-bl), adj. incapable of being melted by heat.

in-fu-sion (in-fū′zhŭn), n. 1, a pouring in; something poured in or mingled; 2, the imparting or teaching of ideas, principles, etc.; 3, the process of steeping a substance in water to extract its properties; also, the liquid obtained by this process; 4, any water containing dissolved organic matter.

in-fu-so-ri-a (in″fū-sō′rĭ-ă), n.pl. [Lat.: because found in infusions (def. 4)], Zoöl., 1, a class of Protozoa, including those one-celled animals, mostly microscopic, which possess cilia, or hairlike processes: found in exposed water and as parasites in higher animals (see illus. next column); 2, formerly, a group comprising most of the minute vegetable and animal organisms found in stagnant water.—adj. in″fu-so′ri-al.—n. in″fu-so′ri-an.

in-fu-so-ri-al earth a light-colored earth composed largely of microscopic shells of diatoms: kieselguhr: used as a filtering material, as an abrasive, and as an absorbent in explosives.

-ing suffix, [< A.S. n. suffix -ung, -ing, displacing p.pr. suffix -ende in late M.E.], used to form: 1, the present participle; as, a walk*ing* delegate; 2, certain types of verbal noun; as, the writ*ing* of books, or (gerund) writ*ing* books, is hard, or (n. der.) the writ*ing* is bad; 3, diminutives, patronymics, etc., as geld*ing*; farth*ing*.

in-gath-er-ing (in′găth″ĕr-ĭng), n. [²*in-* + gather], the act of collecting or of bringing in, especially the harvest.—n. in′gath″er-er.

in-gen-ious (in-jēn′yŭs), adj. [< Lat. ingeniosus < ingenium, cleverness, natural capacity], 1, having inventive skill; clever; 2, skilfully contrived or made: Obs., having brilliant mental qualities.—adv. in-gen′ious-ly.—n. in-gen′ious-ness.

REPRESENTATIVE FORMS OF INFUSORIA (highly magnified)

in-gé-nue (ăn″zhā″nü′), n. [pl. -nues (-nü′)], [Fr. < Lat. ingenuus, frank], 1, a frank, innocent, and unsophisticated girl or young woman; 2, an actress who portrays such a character.

in-ge-nu-i-ty (in″jē-nū′ĭ-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], [< Lat. ingenuitas, ingenuousness: see ingenuous: present meaning due to a confusion with ingenious], 1, cleverness in contriving or inventing; skill; 2, cleverness of design or execution: Archaic, frank sincerity; candor; ingenuousness.

in-gen-u-ous (in-jĕn′ū-ŭs), adj. [< Lat. ingenuus, free-born, frank < in, in + gen-, root of gignere, to beget], 1, frank; open; innocent; 2, noble; high-minded.—adv. in-gen′u-ous-ly.—n. in-gen′u-ous-ness.
Syn. unreserved, sincere; honorable. (See open.)

in-gest (in-jĕst′), v.t. [< Lat. in, into + gerere (gestus), to carry], to put or receive (food) into the stomach.—n. in-ges′tion (-chŭn).—adj. in-ges′tive.

in-gle (ĭng′gl), n. [prob. < Gael. aingeal, fire], a fire or fireplace; a blaze; as, sit thee by the ingle.

in-gle-nook (ĭng′gl-nōōk″), n. [ingle + nook], the chimney corner. Also, in′gle nook.

in-glo-ri-ous (in-glō′rĭ-ŭs), adj. [²*in-* + glory], 1, without fame; obscure; humble; 2, disgraceful; shameful; as, an inglorious defeat.—adv. in-glo′ri-ous-ly.—n. in-glo′ri-ous-ness.

INGLENOOK

in-glu-vi-es (in-glōō′vĭ-ēz), n. [Lat., perh. < in, in + glutire, to swallow], Zoöl., the crop, or craw, as of a bird or insect (see gizzard, illus.).

in-got (ĭng′gŏt; ĭn′-), n. [source uncertain], a mass of metal cast into a mold: Obs., a mold for casting.

in-graft (in-grăft′), v.t. [²*in-* + graft], 1, to set (a scion) from one tree into another for propagation; 2, to cause to undergo grafting, as a tree; 3, figuratively, to incorporate; 4, to implant, or cause to take root, as principles or ideas. Also, en-graft′.

in-grain (in′grān″; ĭn-grān′), v.t. [< M.E. engreynen, to dye with a fast color, especially scarlet < O.F. en graine, in a scarlet dye (later meaning of Eng. in (the) grain, deeply, in the texture, arose from association with meaning fiber, texture) < Lat. in, in + L.L. grana, seed, cochineal (the source of a scarlet dye, and thought of as a berry or seed) < Lat. granum, grain, seed], 1, to dye in the fiber or grain before manufacture; 2, to dye with any deep, lasting color; 3, (also, engrain), to saturate or fix in deeply; as, ingrained vice:—adj. (in′grān″), 1, dyed before being manufactured; 2, thoroughly wrought or worked in; deep-seated:—n. a carpet made of cotton and wool, in which the threads are dyed before being woven.

in-grained (in′grānd′; in″grānd′), p.adj. thoroughly worked into the fiber; in-wrought; hence, deep-seated; inherent; saturated. Syn. deep-seated, rooted. (See inherent.) in-grate (in′grāt), adj. [< Lat. in-, not + gratus, grateful], not thankful:—n. one who is not thankful or appreciative.—adj. Obs., in-grate′ful.

in-gra-ti-ate (in-grā′shi-āt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -ated, p.pr. -ating], [prob. < It. ingratiare, to put in grace < in grazia < Lat. in gratiam, into favor], 1, to bring (oneself) into the favor of another; as, he ingratiated himself with all about him; 2, to secure favorable reception for: with into.

in-grat-i-tude (in-grat′i-tūd), n. [see ingrate], absence of thankfulness; insensibility to kindness: Obs., unkindness; hostility.

in-gre-di-ent (in-grē′di-ĕnt), n. [< Lat. ingredi, to enter upon, begin < in, into + gradi, to go, step], a part of a compound or mixture; as, sugar is an ingredient of cake; an element.

in-gress (in′grĕs), n. [< Lat. ingressus, a going into, a beginning < in, into + gradi (gressus), to go, step], 1, entrance; access; 2, the place of entrance; 3, liberty of access: Astron., 1, the sun's entrance into a sign of the zodiac; 2, the entrance of the moon into the shadow of the earth at an eclipse, or of an inferior planet upon the disk of the sun at transit.

in-grow-ing (in′grō″ing), adj. [in- + grow], growing into something or growing inward.

in-grown (in′grōn″), adj. 1, grown within; also, innate; 2, having grown into adjacent flesh.

in-gui-nal (ing′gwi-nāl), adj. [< Lat. inguinalis < inguen (-inis), groin], Anat., of, pertaining to, or lying in the neighborhood of, the groin.

in-gulf (in-gŭlf′), v.t. [see engulf], to swallow up; bury; overwhelm. See en-gulf′, Pfd. S.

in-gur-gi-tate (in-gûr′ji-tāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -tated, p.pr. -tating], [< Lat. ingurgitare (-atus), to engulf in, gorge < in, in + gurges (-itis), whirlpool], 1, to swallow in a greedy manner; gulp; 2, to swallow up in, or as in, a deep pool:—v.i. to drink immoderately.—n. in-gur″gi-ta′tion.

in-hab-it (in-hăb′it), v.t. [< O.F. enhabiter < Lat. in, in + habitare, to dwell], to dwell in; occupy, as a land or a dwelling:—v.i. Archaic, to dwell.—adj. in-hab′it-a-ble.—p.adj. in-hab′it-ed.

in-hab-it-ance (in-hăb′i-tăns), n. 1, occupancy; residence; 2, an abode; a residence.—n. in-hab′it-an-cy.

in-hab-it-ant (in-hăb′i-tănt), n. one who or that which occupies; a resident.

in-hab-i-ta-tion (in-hăb″i-tā′shŭn), n. 1, the act of living in a place; the state of being lived in; 2, continued residence.

in-hab-it-ive-ness (in-hăb′it-iv-nĕs), n. a tendency to continue living in or near the same place: a term used in phrenology (which see).

in-hal-ant (in-hāl′ănt), n. [see inhale], Med., 1, an inhaler (def. 2); 2, a medicated vapor, or the like, to be inhaled:—adj. Zoöl., designating, or pertaining to, a passage, tube, or siphon through which is drawn or expelled a current of water carrying dissolved air or, sometimes, food, as in clams, tunicates, etc.: opposite of exhalant (see Lamellibranchia, illus.).

in-hale (in-hāl′), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. inhaled (-hāld′), p.pr. inhaling], [< Lat. in, in + halare (-atus), to breathe], to draw into the lungs, as a breath: opposite of exhale.—n. in″ha-la′tion.

in-hal-er (in-hāl′ĕr), n. 1, one who draws a breath into the lungs; 2, an instrument through which a medicated vapor, or the like, is drawn into the lungs; an inhalant; 3, an apparatus for purifying air.

in-har-mon-ic (in″här-mŏn′ik), adj. [in- + harmony], not concordant; unmusical; discordant. Also, in″har-mon′i-cal.

in-har-mo-ni-ous (in″här-mō′ni-ŭs), adj. 1, unmusical; inharmonic; discordant; 2, conflicting; not in accord.—adv. in″har-mo′ni-ous-ly.—n. in″har-mo′ni-ous-ness.

in-here (in-hēr′), v.i. [p.t. and p.p. inhered (-hērd′), p.pr. inhering], [< Lat. in, in + haerēre (haesus), to stick], to be fixed or to exist in something else; be vested, as a right; exist as an attribute.

in-her-ent (in-hēr′ĕnt), adj. existing inseparably in something else; essential; inborn; as, fear of death is inherent in man.—adv. in-her′ent-ly.—n. in-her′ence; in-her′en-cy.

Syn. innate, inbred, inborn, inseparable, ingrained, intrinsic, essential. That is inherent which exists in a person or thing as an inseparable or abiding quality; we speak of inherent characteristics; inherent properties. Intrinsic refers to the essential nature of a person or thing. Inherent and intrinsic are often used interchangeably, and both are opposed to the idea of accidental, merely apparent, adventitious, or transitory; but inherent emphasizes the permanent and connected, intrinsic the natural and constitutional aspect; we speak of an inherent, not an intrinsic love of luxury; we say intrinsic worth or virtue. That is essential without which a thing would not be what it is. Inborn, inbred, and innate are used only in connection with beings. Innate and inborn are almost exactly synonymous; but innate has the more extensive connotation; we say that properties are innate or inborn, innate emphasizing their natural and inherent quality, inborn the mere fact that they are implanted in us from birth. Inbred emphasizes either the inherited or the cultivated aspect of a characteristic; a property or quality that is inherited and nurtured, as a talent, is both inborn and inbred; innate shortcomings, inborn independence, inborn snobbishness, inbred considerateness, inbred feelings, ingrained selfishness.

in-her-it (in-hĕr′it), v.t. [< O.F. enheriter, to put in possession as heir < L.L. inhereditare, to appoint as heir < Lat. in, in + heres (-edis), heir], 1, to come into possession of, as property, rank, etc., from an ancestor by right of succession; 2, to derive, as physical or mental qualities, from one's ancestors; receive by birth; 3, to be heir to:—v.i. to come into possession of property as the heir.—adj. in-her′it-a-ble.

in-her-it-ance (in-hĕr′i-tăns), n. 1, the act of coming into a property, as an heir; 2, property received by an heir; 3, any immaterial possession that is inherited from previous generations; 4, a possession or blessing, especially one bestowed as a gift: Biol., the biologic process by which descendants possess or develop characters which were present in their ancestors: Obs., something possessed; ownership.

in-her-i-tor (in-hĕr′i-tĕr), n. one who receives property or possessions from ancestors or others; an heir.—n.fem. in-her′i-tress; in-her′i-trix.

in-he-sion (in-hē′zhŭn), n. [see inhere], the state of existing as a part of, or being inherent in, something else; inherence.

in-hib-it (in-hĭb′it), v.t. [< Lat. inhibēre (-hibitus), to restrain < in, in + habēre, to hold], to restrain; hold in check: Eccl., to forbid; as, to inhibit (a clergyman) from performing ministerial duties.

Syn. prohibit, forbid, hinder, debar, preclude. To forbid is the familiar term, and is both direct and personal; a mother forbids her child to cross the street. To prohibit is the formal, judicial term; it connotes more indirect, wide, and official action; the municipal government prohibits citizens from crossing the streets except at street intersections. A father forbids his boy to smoke; a garage owner prohibits smoking on his premises. The personal command in forbid has only personal force behind it; the prohibitions of a city or corporation are enforceable by law. To inhibit, in ordinary use, means to hold back or restrain; psychologists use the word to suggest repression; as, inhibited feelings or instincts.—Ant. further, permit, sanction, advance, promote.

in-hi-bi-tion (in″hi-bish′ŭn), n. the act of forbidding or preventing, or the state of being forbidden or restrained: Psych., the prevention of the exercise of an impulse, as by the exercise of another; Eccl. Law, the command of a bishop or high authority that a clergyman cease his ministerial duties.

in-hos-pi-ta-ble (in-hŏs′pi-tă-bl), adj. [in- + hospitable], 1, not welcoming strangers or guests; 2, providing no refuge; barren; cheerless; as, the inhospitable coast of Iceland.—adv. in-hos′pi-ta-bly.—n. in-hos′pi-ta-ble-ness.

in-hos-pi-tal-i-ty (in-hŏs″pi-tăl′i-ti), n. [in- + hospitality], 1, want of cordiality or desire to welcome strangers or guests; 2, lack of facilities for shelter or food, as in desert wastes.

in-hu-man (in-hū′măn), adj. [in- + human], 1, unfeeling; cruel; without kindly qualities; 2, displaying a lack of human qualities; 3, not like a human being.—adv. in-hu′man-ly.

Syn. ferocious, cruel, brutal, fierce, savage, merciless, ruthless, relentless, barbarous, bloodthirsty. Cruel describes that indifference to the suffering of others, or pleasure therein, which characterizes many people in their natural state, as is evidenced by the desire of children to torment animals or each other. As people grow civilized, or as children are molded by their environment, the disposition to be cruel is replaced by that kindness, gentleness, and tenderness to life which is known as humanity. Those who, civilized and mature, still lack the humanity to be expected of a decent human being, are inhuman. Sarage implies the cruelty of the untamed, the natural bloodthirstiness and delight in prey of the uncivilized. Ferocious adds to savage the fire of anger, a beastlike violence; ferocious is indicative of a natural disposition to be murderously rapacious. Fierce describes a hotly combative nature, flaring, vehement, raging; fierceness differs from ferocity in being more the matter of a moment, hot but passing, and in being, often, latent or dormant. The quietest of women will instantly wax fierce in defense of her children. Fierce is now often used of feelings that are ardent, impetuous, almost angrily passionate; as, fierce love or hate. Brutal describes an animal-like cruelty, formerly always malicious, now merely coarse, unfeeling, sensual. Barbarous is sometimes used to express the opposite of civilized; as, barbarous tribes; it is also used to describe the coarse and cruel side of uncivilized life; as, barbarous customs. Ferocious, fierce, and savage are used to describe the natural tempers of animals; inhuman, brutal, and barbarous describe people that act like animals.

in-hu-man-i-ty (in"hū-măn'ĭ-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], 1, the quality of being unfeeling or unkind; 2, cruelty; 3, an inhuman act.

in-hume (ĭn-hūm'), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. inhumed (-hūmd'), p.pr. inhuming], [< Lat. inhumare, to bury < in, in + humus, ground], to lay in the earth; bury.—n. in"hu-ma'tion.

in-im-i-cal (ĭn-ĭm'ĭ-kăl), adj. [< L.L. inimicalis < Lat. inimicus, hostile < in-, not + amicus, friend], 1, hostile; unfriendly; 2, opposed; antagonistic; as, weariness of body is inimical to hard brain work.—adv. in-im'i-cal-ly.

in-im-i-ta-ble (ĭn-ĭm'ĭ-tă-bl), adj. [²*in-* + imitate], matchless; unequalled; beyond imitation.—adv. in-im'i-ta-bly.—n. in-im"i-ta-bil'i-ty.

in-iq-ui-tous (ĭn-ĭk'wĭ-tŭs), adj. [see iniquity], wicked; grossly unjust.—adv. in-iq'ui-tous-ly.—n. in-iq'ui-tous-ness.

Syn. unrighteous, wrong, criminal, nefarious, atrocious.—Ant. good, right, righteous, virtuous, unsullied.

in-iq-ui-ty (ĭn-ĭk'wĭ-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], [< O.F. iniquité < Lat. iniquitas < in-, not + aequus, just], 1, wickedness; gross injustice; unrighteousness; 2, a wicked act; a sin or crime.

Syn. crime, injustice, sin, abomination.

in-i-tial (ĭn-ĭsh'ăl), adj. [< Lat. initialis < initium, a beginning < in, into + ire (itus), to go], 1, placed at the beginning; 2, marking, or pertaining to, the beginning; starting:—n. a letter placed at the beginning of a word, etc.: pl. the first letters of the words of a person's name placed separately in a series:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -tialed or -tialled (-ăld), p.pr. -tialing or -tialling], 1, to mark with an initial or initials; 2, to sign with initials.—adv. in-i'tial-ly.

in-i-ti-ate (ĭn-ĭsh'ĭ-āt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -ated, p.pr. -ating], [< Lat. initiare (-atus), to initiate, consecrate < in, into + ire (itus), to go], 1, to instruct in the first principles of anything; 2, to set on foot; begin; introduce; as, to initiate a series of reforms; 3, to introduce into a club, secret society, or the like, by special teachings and ceremonies:—adj. (ĭn-ĭsh'ĭ-āt), 1, introduced, as into a society; also, instructed, as in one's duties or in certain principles; 2, beginning, incipient: Obs., pertaining to, or marking, a beginning or a person newly initiated:—n. one who has been, or is about to be, introduced into a society, club, or the like.—n. in-i'ti-a"tor (-tẽr).

in-i-ti-a-tion (ĭn-ĭsh"ĭ-ā'shŭn), n. 1, the act of introducing into a club, secret society, business, literature, etc.; 2, the ceremonial rites by which one becomes a member of a society or fraternity.

in-i-ti-a-tive (ĭn-ĭsh'ĭ-ā-tĭv), adj. introductory:—n. 1, an introductory or first step; 2, power of originating something; the self-reliance or energy required to begin or dare new undertakings: Pol. Sci., the right or the method by which a people may originate a movement, as a reform, by demanding the necessary laws from their representative assembly: usually completed by the referendum.

in-i-ti-a-to-ry (ĭn-ĭsh'ĭ-ă-tō-rĭ), adj. 1, introductory; as, the initiatory steps in an undertaking; 2, serving to introduce, or initiate, as into some society or some special knowledge.

in-ject (ĭn-jĕkt'), v.t. [< Lat. injicere (-jectus), to throw into < in, into + jacere, to throw], 1, to drive or force in; introduce (a liquid) by mechanical means, as, especially, a drug into the body; 2 to introduce, as a remark; interject.

in-jec-tion (ĭn-jĕk'shŭn), n. 1, a forcing in; 2, that which is forced in: Med., the act of forcing a liquid into a part, such as the rectum or a blood vessel, or under the skin, as morphine; also, the liquid so introduced; an enema; a hypodermic.

in-jec-tor (ĭn-jĕk'tẽr), n. one who or that which forces in: used especially of an apparatus for injecting feed water into a steam boiler.

in-ju-di-cious (ĭn"jōō-dĭsh'ŭs), adj. [²*in-* + judicious], unwise; imprudent; incautious.—adv. in"ju-di'cious-ly.—n. in"ju-di'cious-ness.

in-junc-tion (ĭn-jŭngk'shŭn), n. [< L.L. injunctio (-onis), an order < injungere (-junctus), to join into, enjoin < in, into + jungere, to join], 1, the act of enjoining or commanding; 2, that which is enjoined or commanded; a command; an order: Law, a legal process whereby a person is commanded by a court to do, or forbidden to do, certain matters.

in-jure (ĭn'jẽr), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. injured (-jẽrd), p.pr. injuring], [see injury], to hurt; harm; damage, physically or morally.—n. in'jur-er.

Syn. wrong, mar, sully, spoil, maltreat, violate.

in-ju-ri-ous (ĭn-jōō'rĭ-ŭs), adj. 1, hurtful, physically or morally; harmful; 2, abusive; malicious.—adv. in-ju'ri-ous-ly.—n. in-ju'ri-ous-ness.

Syn. baneful, noxious, detrimental, pernicious, deleterious.—Ant. beneficial, helpful, advantageous.

in-ju-ry (ĭn'jōō-rĭ), n. [pl. -ries (-rĭz)], [< Lat. injuria, wrong, hurt < in-, not + jus (juris), right], 1, any hurt or harm, physical or moral; any damage to, or violation of, one's person, property, rights, etc.; 2, that which causes harm: Obs., insult.

Syn. damage, detriment, loss, hurt, harm, mischief, impairment, injustice, wrong, evil, outrage, prejudice. Injury, the general term, is applied to whatever affects one disadvantageously. We speak of an injury to the spine, to one's credit, to tires by a gravel road, to property adjoining garages or noisy factories. Damage, harm, hurt, and mischief are forms of injury. Damage connotes loss and diminished value; it is often partial, sometimes reparable, sometimes not; we insure against damage by fire. There is a note of blame in damage, suggesting carelessness or other fault in some agent. Harm, a word popularly used for injury, is practically interchangeable with it. Harm connotes loss or impairment, and though it may result from other causes, is frequently done by a living agent, with or without intention; false rumors often do harm to a candidate running for office; children unintentionally do harm to furniture. A broken arm, however, would be referred to as an injury, not a harm; undesirable neighbors would constitute an injury, not a harm, to the monetary value of property, but would be a harm, rather than an injury, to the morals of the children in the vicinity. Mischief, like harm, is often done by living agents, with or without intention. Children's sportive mischief vexes; the gossip's mischief produces evil; discontent is a great mischief-maker. Hurt, properly applied to such injury as affects soundness of tissue, as a bruise, is also used of figurative and moral objects; as, she carried that hurt in her heart for years.

in-jus-tice (ĭn-jŭs'tĭs), n. [²*in-* + justice], 1, the quality of being unfair; disregard of another's rights; 2, an injury; a wrong.

Syn. grievance, unfairness, iniquity, injury, inequity.—Ant. fairness, impartiality, justice, equity.

ink (ĭngk), n. [< O.F. enque < L.L. encaustum < Gk. egkauston, purple ink used by Roman emperors for signatures < egkaustos, burned in < en, in + kaiein, to burn], a colored solution of various chemicals used for writing, printing, etc.; also, a viscous paste used for printing: Zoöl., the inklike liquid ejected by certain cephalopods, as the cuttlefish, squid, etc., as a means of escape from an enemy:—v.t. 1, to spread ink upon; 2, to color, stain, or blacken with such a fluid.—n. ink'er.

ink-ber-ry (ĭngk'bĕr-ĭ), n. [pl. -ries (-ĭz)], [ink + berry], 1, a native American holly (Ilex glabra), having small black berries; 2, the pokeweed; 3, the fruit of these plants.

INKHORN (A) at one end of a portable writing table.

ink-horn (ĭngk'hôrn"), n. [ink + horn], a small, portable receptacle, made of horn, wood, or other material, and formerly used for holding ink and, sometimes, pens, for writing.

ink-i-ness (ingk'ĭ-nĕs), n. [see ink], 1, the state of being covered with ink; 2, blackness.

in-kle (Ing'kl), n. [source uncertain], 1, a kind of wide braid made of linen; 2, a kind of linen thread from which this braid is manufactured.

ink-ling (Ingk'ling), n. [< obs. or dial. inkle, to whisper, hint], partial knowledge; a hint; suspicion; as, an inkling of the truth.

ink-stand (Ingk'stănd"), n. [ink + stand], 1, a small receptacle for ink into which a pen may be dipped; 2, a tray, or other device, for holding pens, ink, and other conveniences for writing.

ink-well (Ingk'wĕl"), n. [ink + well], a cup for holding ink, fitted into a desk or inkstand; the ink-containing part of an inkstand.

ink-y (Ingk'I), adj. [comp. -ier, superl. -iest], [see ink], consisting of, or like, ink; discolored or spotted with ink; black.

in-lace (In-lās'), v.t. [see enlace], 1, to wrap or cover with lace; 2, to entangle. See en-lace', Pfd. S.

in-laid (In-lād'; In'lād"), p.adj. [see inlay], 1, set into a surface in order to ornament it; 2, ornamented with materials set in, as ivory, wood, metal, etc.

in-land (In'lănd), adj. [^{2}in- + land], 1, pertaining to, or situated in, the interior of a country; 2, away from the sea; 3, domestic; as, inland commerce; —adv. toward the interior; away from the coast or frontier:—n. (In'lănd"), the interior of a country.

in-lay (In-lā'), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. inlaid (-lād'), p.pr. inlaying], [^{2}in- + ^{2}lay], to ornament (a surface) by setting in pieces of ivory, wood, etc.:—n. (In'lā"), materials for inlaying; also, the pattern so formed.

in-let (In-lĕt'), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. inlet, p.pr. inletting], [^{2}in- + ^{2}let], to inlay:—n. (In'lĕt), 1, an entrance; 2, a small bay or creek; 3, something let or set in.

in lim. abbr. [Lat. in limine], at the outset:—in loc. cit., [Lat. in loco citato], in the place cited.

in-ly (In'lI), adv. [< A.S. innlīce, inly: see in], 1, inwardly; in the innermost parts; 2, cordially.

in-mate (In'māt), n. [^{2}in- + ^{2}mate], 1, one who dwells with others in a house; 2, one of a family, or body of persons, living under one roof; 3, one who is confined in a prison, lunatic asylum, or the like; 4, an inhabitant; sometimes, a stranger or foreigner.

in me-mo-ri-am (mē-mō'rI-ăm), [Lat.], in memory (of): used in epitaphs, elegies, etc.; as, Tennyson's "In Memoriam."

in-mesh (In-mĕsh'), v.t. [see enmesh], to ensnare in, or as in, a net. See en-mesh', Pfd. S.

in-most (In'mōst), adj. [< A.S. inne, in, within + -mest, superl. suffix], innermost; furthest within; as, the inmost wish of my heart.

inn (In), n. [A.S. = a dwelling, lodging < in, in], 1, a house for the lodging and entertainment of travelers; a tavern; hotel; hostelry; 2, formerly, a house or hotel used as a place of residence for law students: Inns of Court, in London, the four sets of buildings, the Inner Temple, the Middle Temple, Gray's Inn, and Lincoln's Inn, belonging to the four legal societies; hence, the societies themselves.

in-nate (In'nāt; In-nāt'), adj. [< L.L. innatus, inborn < Lat. in, in + nasci (natus), to be born], inborn; native; natural; as, innate grace.—adv. in'nate-ly.—n. in'nate-ness.

Syn. original, natural, intrinsic. (See inherent.) in-ner (In'ĕr), adj. [< A.S. innera, inner, comp. of in, in], 1, internal; interior; 2, pertaining to the mind or soul; 3, not easily perceived: Inner Light, in mystical religions, especially Quakerism, a guiding enlightenment of the spirit of the individual through its direct contact with God.

in-ner-most (In'ĕr-mōst), adj. [inner + -most], farthest inward from outside; inmost.

in-ner-va-tion (In"ĕr-vā'shŭn), n. [^{2}in + nerre], Anat., the distribution of nerve fibers to a part; Physiol., the supply of nerve force; specifically, the nervous stimulation of an organ necessary for its proper functioning.

in-ning (In'Ing), n. [< obs. in, to lodge; include < A.S. innian, to go in, put in], 1, in baseball, cricket, etc., one of the divisions of the game, during which a single side is at bat, or each side in turn is at bat once: in Great Britain usually innings, used as sing.; 2, hence, the period when a person or party is in power: in Great Britain usually innings, used as sing.; pl. lands reclaimed from the sea, as swamps.

inn-keep-er (In'kēp"ĕr), n. [inn + keep], the proprietor or lessee of an inn.

in-no-cence (In'ō-sĕns), n. [see innocent], 1, purity; freedom from guilt or sin; specifically, absence of guilt in the eyes of the law; 2, lack of acquaintance with evil; purity of thought and feeling; 3, harmlessness; 4, guilelessness; simplicity; Bot., a delicate meadow plant (Houstonia cærulea) of the United States, with small, bluish or white flowers; the bluet, or quaker-lady.—n. in'no-cen-cy.

in-no-cent (In'ō-sĕnt), adj. [< Lat. in-, not + nocens (-entis), doing harm], 1, sinless; free from guilt or wrongdoing; blameless; 2, pure in heart and life; 3, foolishly ignorant; 4, without evil effect or intention; 5, devoid; as, innocent of humor; 6, harmless; innocuous; as, an innocent medicine; 7, lawful:—n. 1, one who is free from, or unacquainted with, sin; 2, a simpleton: pl. bluets.—adv. in'no-cent-ly.

Syn., adj. guiltless, sinless, guileless, inoffensive, innocuous, virtuous, artless, ignorant.—Ant., adj. guilty, sinful, wicked, unrighteous, impure.

in-noc-u-ous (I-nŏk'ū-ŭs), adj. [< Lat. innocuus, harmless < in-, not + nocēre, to harm], harmless; safe; innocent; as, an innocuous dose.—adv. in-noc'u-ous-ly.—n. in-noc'u-ous-ness.

in-nom-i-nate (I-nŏm'I-nāt; In-nŏm'I-nāt), adj. [< Lat. in-, not + nominare (-atus), to name < nomen, name], having no specific name; unnamed: innominate bone, Anat., the hip bone.

HUMAN INNOMINATE BONE
In early youth, showing the three primary bones, or illum (Ilt.), ischium (Isc.), and pubis (Pub.), which later join along the lines of union (L.u.) to form one bone; Cr., crest of illum.

in-no-vate (In'ō-vāt), v.i. [p.t. and p.p. -vated, p.pr. -vating], [< Lat. innovare (-atus), to make new < in, in + novus, new], to make changes in something already established; introduce new things: —v.t. to introduce as new.—n. in'no-va"tor (-tĕr).

in-no-va-tion (In"ō-vā'shŭn), n. 1, the introduction of something new; 2, a novel custom, device, style, or the like.

in-nox-ious (I-nŏk'shŭs; In-), adj. [^{2}in- + noxious], innocuous; not hurtful; harmless.

in-nu-en-do (In"ū-ĕn'dō), n. [pl. -does (-dōz)], [Lat. = by nodding at, intimating < in, in, by, to + nuere, to nod], an insinuation; an indirect reference, usually derogatory.

in-nu-mer-a-ble (I-nū'mĕr-ă-bl; In-nū'-), adj. [< Lat. in-, not + numerare, to number], incapable of being counted; indefinitely numerous; numberless; as, innumerable stars.—adv. in-nu'mer-a-bly.—n. in-nu"mer-a-bil'i-ty.

in-nu-mer-ous (I-nū'mĕr-ŭs; In-nū'-), adj. Poet. or Rhet., numberless; uncountable.

in-nu-tri-tious (In"ū-trish'ŭs; In"nū-), adj. [^{2}in- + nutritious], not nourishing.

in-oc-u-late (In-ŏk'ū-lāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -lated, p.pr. -lating], [< Lat. inoculare (-atus), to implant < in, in + oculus, eye; bud], to inculcate, as harmful ideas, upon the mind of; imbue; infect: Med., to impregnate with the virus of a disease, as for protective purposes; Bot., to graft on by the insertion of buds; Bacteriol., to plant (bacteria or other germs) in a favorable food medium.—n. in-oc'u-la"tor.

in-oc-u-la-tion (In-ŏk"ū-lā'shŭn), n. the inculcation, as of feelings, ideas, etc.: Med., the insertion of a virus, or the poison of a disease, into body tissues, especially as a therapeutic measure, in order to communicate a mild form of the disease which builds up antibodies and so tends to prevent a serious attack: curative inoculation, the injection of an antiserum to cure a disease, as in diphtheria: preventive or protective inoculation, introduction of a vaccine to protect against a disease.

in-o-dor-ous (In-ō'dĕr-ŭs), adj. [^{2}in- + odor], without smell or scent.

in-of-fen-sive (In"ō-fĕn'sIv), adj. [^{2}in- + offense], 1, harmless; 2, free from disagreeable or disgusting qualities; 3, not annoying.—adv. in"of-fen'sive-ly.—n. in"of-fen'sive-ness.

in-op-er-a-ble (In-ŏp'ĕr-ă-bl), adj. [^{2}in- + operate], Surg., unfit to be operated on.

in-op-er-a-tive (In-ŏp'ĕr-ă-tIv), adj. 1, not active; inapplicable; 2, ineffective.

in-op-por-tune (In-ŏp"ŏr-tūn'), adj. [^{2}in- + opportune], not ready; not fit; unsuitable; unseasonable.—adv. in-op"por-tune'ly.—n. in-op"por-tune'ness.

Syn. inconvenient, ill-timed, inappropriate.

in-or-di-nate (In-ôr'dI-nāt), adj. [^{2}in- + ordinate], 1, without order or regularity; 2, immoderate; unrestrained; as, inordinate love of drinking.—adv. in-or'di-nate-ly.—n. in-or'di-nate-ness.

Syn. excessive, immoderate, intemperate, disordered.

in-or-gan-ic (ĭn″ôr-găn′ĭk), adj. [in-+organic], 1, without organs or the structure peculiar to living beings; not having the characteristics of a member of the animal or vegetable kingdom; 2, not formed from living substances; not produced by organic, or living, processes: Chem., pertaining to substances that do not contain carbon, except as an unimportant element, as minerals, rocks, and metals: inorganic chemistry, that branch of chemistry which treats of substances other than carbon compounds.

in-os-cu-late (ĭn-ŏs′kū-lāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -lated, p.pr. -lating], [in-+osculate], to unite by bringing two openings together, as arteries:—v.i. to meet and join together at the ends so as to form one continuous whole.—n. in-os″cu-la′tion.

in-quest (ĭn′kwĕst), n. [< O.F. enqueste: see inquire], 1, an official inquiry with the aid of a jury into a special matter, as the cause of a sudden death; 2, the body of men making such an inquiry; 3, the verdict from such an inquiry: Rare, inquiry.

in-qui-e-tude (ĭn-kwī′ĕ-tūd), n. [in-+quiet], a state of uneasiness or restlessness: pl. disturbing thoughts; anxieties.

in-quire (ĭn-kwīr′), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. inquired (-kwīrd′), p.pr. inquiring], [< O.F. enquerre < Lat. inquirere (-quisitus) < Lat. in, in+quaerere, to seek], 1, to seek for or after by questions; 2, to make examination into: with for, into, after, about: Obs., to question:—v.i. 1, to ask a question; 2, to make investigation. Also, en-quire′.—n. in-quir′er.

Syn. ask, interrogate, challenge. (See question.)

in-quir-ing (ĭn-kwīr′ĭng), p.adj. given to asking questions or making investigations; inquisitive.—adv. in-quir′ing-ly.

in-quir-y (ĭn-kwīr′ĭ), n. [pl. -ies (-ĭz)], 1, the act of seeking information, knowledge, etc.; research; 2, an investigation: as, to proceed with the inquiry; 3, a question; a query. Also, en-quir′y.

Syn. examination, inquisition, query, interrogation.

in-qui-si-tion (ĭn″kwĭ-zĭsh′ŭn), n. [< Lat. inquisitio (-onis) < inquirere (-quisitus), to seek], inquiry; examination: Law, an official inquiry, as by a coroner's jury: Inquisition, R. C. Ch., formerly, a court for the discovery and punishment of nonbelievers.—adj. in″qui-si′tion-al.

in-quis-i-tive (ĭn-kwĭz′ĭ-tĭv), adj. 1, given to asking questions; prying; improperly curious 2, active in the pursuit of knowledge.—adv. in-quis′i-tive-ly.—n. in-quis′i-tive-ness.

Syn prying, peeping, curious, meddlesome, searching.

in-quis-i-tor (ĭn-kwĭz′ĭ-tẽr), n. one who makes examinations or investigates; especially, one appointed by law to investigate, as a coroner: R. C. Ch., an officer of the Inquisition.

in-quis-i-to-ri-al (ĭn-kwĭz″ĭ-tō′rĭ-ăl), adj. 1, pertaining to an investigator, or inquisitor, or to his office; 2, making searching or unpleasant inquiry.—adv. in-quis″i-to′ri-al-ly.

I. N. R. I. abbr. [Lat. Iesus Nazarenus, Rex Iudaeorum], Jesus of Nazareth, King of the Jews: taken from Pilate's inscription (John 19:19).

in-road (ĭn′rōd), n. [in-+road], a sudden invasion; especially, entry by force; a hostile raid.

in-rush (ĭn′rŭsh′), n. [in-+rush], an influx; a sudden invasion; as, an inrush of waters.

ins. abbr. 1, inches (also, in.): 2, inscribed; 3, insurance; 4, inspector (also, insp.).

in-sa-lu-bri-ous (ĭn″sə-lū′brĭ-ŭs), adj. [in-+salubrious], not healthful; unwholesome; unhealthy.—n. in″sa-lu′bri-ty.

in-sane (ĭn-sān′), adj. [in-+sane], 1, mentally disordered; mad; lunatic; crazy; 2, very unreasonable; utterly senseless; 3, intended for the mentally disordered: as, an insane asylum; 4, lacking intelligence.—adv. in-sane′ly.—n. in-sane′ness.

in-san-i-ta-ry (ĭn-săn′ĭ-tă-rĭ), adj. [in-+sanitary], not healthful; injurious to health; as, insanitary plumbing.

in-san-i-ty (ĭn-săn′ĭ-tĭ), n. [see insane], 1, persistent and marked departure from the normal in thinking, acting, or feeling; 2, extravagant folly.

Syn. dementia, derangement, alienation, feeble-mindedness, amentia, lunacy, delirium, frenzy, mania, hallucination, madness, fanaticism, fury, aberration. Insanity includes both deterioration of the mental functions (dementia), and disorder of these functions (derangement or alienation). Legal insanity in many States also includes feeble-mindedness (amentia). Insanity, as a scientific term, is falling into disuse and, like lunacy, is tending to become obsolete, retaining significance mainly in the legal sense. Underlying the common meaning and the legal use of the term insanity are concepts of social incompetence, maladjustment, and social nonconformity, involving ideas of mental incompetence, irrational or irresponsible conduct, and the like. The psychiatrist in a hospital for the insane treats many patients who are not legally insane. Delirium, which is present in certain mental disorders and may accompany a high fever, denotes a condition of being "out of one's mind"; it is a temporary or intermittent condition characterized by lack of orientation, incoherent ideas and speech, and other symptoms of derangement. Delirium tremens, an especially violent form, often following the excessive and prolonged use of intoxicants, is marked by delusions, hallucinations, and motor disturbance. Frenzy is excessive emotional agitation without self-control, and may, or may not, be pathological; as, a frenzy of grief. Mania is mental disorder characterized by violent reactions, mental derangement, lack of self-control, etc., or it may name an obsession; as, a suicidal mania. In their secondary senses, mania names an uncontrollable desire or craze for something; as, a mania for bridge; delirium, a state of enthusiastic, rapturous, or wild excitement; as, a delirium of joy; lunacy names a silly, foolish wantonness of conduct, and frenzy, wild or frantic excitement; as, such folly is sheer lunacy; he acted in a frenzy of fear.

in-sa-ti-a-ble (ĭn-sā′shĭ-ă-bl; ĭn-sā′shĭ-ă-bl), adj. [see insatiate], beyond gratification; immoderate; not to be satisfied; as, an insatiable appetite or ambition.—n. in-sa′ti-a-ble-ness.—adv. in-sa′ti-a-bly.—n. in-sa″ti-a-bil′i-ty.

in-sa-ti-ate (ĭn-sā′shĭ-āt), adj. [in-+satiate], beyond gratification; not to be satisfied; not satiate.—adv. in-sa′ti-ate-ly.

in-sconce (ĭn-skŏns′), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -sconced (-skŏnst′), p.pr. -sconcing], [see ensconce], 1, to shelter; hide; 2, to settle cosily. See en-sconce′, Pfd. S.

in-scribe (ĭn-skrīb′), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. inscribed (-skrībd′), p.pr. inscribing], [< Lat. in, in+scribere (scriptus), to write], 1, to write or engrave, especially on some enduring substance; as, to inscribe a name on a tablet of brass; 2, to write or engrave upon; as, to inscribe the stone with a name; 3, to stamp deeply, as on the memory; 4, to address (a written greeting, poem, or the like) to a person: Geom., to draw, as a circle or polygon, within a figure in such a way that certain points of the figure drawn lie in the boundary of the original figure: opposite of circumscribe.—n. in-scrib′er.

Circle inscribed in square; pentagon inscribed in circle.

in-scrip-tion (ĭn-skrĭp′shŭn), n. 1, the act of writing or engraving, especially in permanent form; also, anything so written or engraved; 2, signs, letters, etc., written, printed, or engraved in permanent form, as on a monument, a picture, a coin, or the like; 3, a brief dedication, as of a book or work of art, to a person: Archæol., writing cut in stone, metal, or the like, preserved from ancient times and serving as a historical record; as, an inscription on an Assyrian tablet.—adj. in-scrip′tive.

in-scru-ta-ble (ĭn-skrōō′tă-bl), adj. [< L.L. inscrutabilis < Lat. in-, not+scrutari, to search], not to be penetrated by inquiry or reason; not to be understood; as, the inscrutable ways of God: Rare, not to be fathomed.—n. in-scru′ta-ble-ness.—adv. in-scru′ta-bly.—n. in-scru″ta-bil′i-ty.

in-sect (ĭn′sĕkt), n. [< Lat. insectum, notched: so called because appearing almost divided < in, In+secare (sectus), to cut], 1, one of the Insecta (which see; see also colored illus. facing page 508); also, popularly, a member of an allied, wingless class, as a spider or tick; 2, a despicable person.

In-sec-ta (ĭn-sĕk′tă), n.pl. Zoöl., a class of invertebrate animals, comprising those having the body divided into three distinct regions, head, thorax, and abdomen, and having only three pairs of jointed legs, most forms having two pairs of wings and well-marked metamorphic stages, and all breathing by means of tubes (tracheæ), which convey air from abdominal pores to all parts of the body.

in-sec-ti-cide (ĭn-sĕk′tĭ-sīd), n. [insect+-cide (< Lat. caedere, to kill)], a poisonous powder or solution for killing bugs, flies, etc.

In-sec-tiv-o-ra (ĭn″sĕk-tĭv′ō-rā), n.pl. [L.L., neut. pl. of insectivorus < insectum, insect+vorare, to eat], Zoöl., an order of mammals, comprising many small quadrupeds, as shrews, moles, hedgehogs, etc., that feed chiefly on insects: insectivore (ĭn-sĕk′tĭ-vōr), one of the Insectivora.—adj. in″sec-tiv′o-rous.

in-se-cure (ĭn″sĕ-kūr′), adj. [in-+secure], 1, not firm; unsafe; 2, not protected from danger; not assured of safety.—adv. in″se-cure′ly.

in-se-cu-ri-ty (In″sē-kū′rĭ-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], 1, lack or want of safety; the state of being unprotected from danger; 2, lack of firmness.

in-sem-i-nate (In-sĕm′ĭ-nāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -nated, p.pr. -nating], [< Lat. in, in- to + semen (-inis), seed], to implant; insert; impregnate.

in-sen-sate (In-sĕn′sāt), adj. [< L.L. insensatus < Lat. in-, not + sensus, sense], 1, unmoved; unfeeling; soulless; hence, brutal; harsh; 2, stupid; foolish; as, insensate rage; 3, without sensation; lifeless; inanimate.

in-sen-si-bil-i-ty (In-sĕn″sĭ-bĭl′ĭ-tĭ), n. [see insensible], the quality or state of being incapable of physical feeling or mental emotion.

Syn. apathy, numbness. (See indifference.)

in-sen-si-ble (In-sĕn′sĭ-bl), adj. [²*in-* + sensible], 1, incapable of feeling; lacking the power to feel; 2, by slow degrees; gradual; imperceptible; 3, without feeling or emotion; apathetic; indifferent; 4, unconscious.—adv. in-sen′si-bly.

Syn. numb, unfeeling, impassive, dull. (See hard.)

in-sep-a-ra-ble (In-sĕp′ā-rā-bl), adj. [²*in-* + separate], incapable of being divided or parted; permanently united; not separable.—adv. in-sep′a-ra-bly.—n. in-sep″a-ra-bil′i-ty.

in-sert (In-sûrt′), v.t. [< Lat. inserere (-sertus) < in, in + serere, to join], to place in or among; introduce into; cause to be included:—n. (ĭn′sûrt), that which is put in; an inset; insertion.

in-ser-tion (In-sûr′shŭn), n. 1, the act of putting in; 2, that which is put in, as a passage put into the text of a book; 3, a band of lace or embroidery used for trimming a garment, set in with plain material on each side: Anat., the point at which a muscle is attached to the part that is to be moved.

in-set (In′sĕt), n. [in- + set], 1, a leaf or leaves inserted in a newspaper, book, magazine, etc.; 2, a smaller map, cut, etc., inserted within the border of a larger one:—v.t. (In-sĕt′), to put in; insert.

in-shore (In′shōr″; In″shōr′), adj. [²*in-* + ¹*shore*], being near, or moving in the direction of, the shore:—adv. (In″shōr′), in toward the coast or bank.

in-shrine (In-shrīn′), v.t. [in- + shrine], to place in a shrine. See en-shrine′, Pfd. S.

in-side (In′sīd″), adj. [²*in-* + side], interior; being within: Colloq., secret; known only to a few; as, inside information:—adv. (In″sīd′; In′sīd″), within: inside of, Colloq., within the space of:—n. (In″sīd′), that which is within; inner part; contents: pl. Colloq., entrails:—prep. on the inner side of; within.

in-sid-er (In″sīd′ẽr), n. one who is so situated as to be able to get reliable or special information not available to the public: opposite of outsider.

in-sid-i-ous (In-sĭd′ĭ-ŭs), adj. [< Lat. insidiosus < insidiae, ambush < in, in + sedēre, to sit], treacherous; deceitful; sly; crafty; operating secretly; as, tuberculosis is an insidious disease.—adv. in-sid′i-ous-ly.—n. in-sid′i-ous-ness.

in-sight (In′sīt″), n. [²*in-* + sight], 1, penetration; intuition; mental vision; as, poetic insight; 2, an understanding of the true, inner nature of things.

Syn. discernment. (See discrimination, sagacity.)

in-sig-ni-a (In-sĭg′nĭ-ā), n. pl. [sing. insigne (-sĭg′nē)], [Lat., pl. of insigne, badge, neut. of adj. insignis, distinguished by a mark < in, on + signum, sign], distinguishing badges of honor, or office; as, the insignia of royalty; hence, distinguishing marks of any kind; as, the insignia of a profession.

INSIGNIA OF SIGNAL CORPS

in-sig-nif-i-cance (In″sĭg-nĭf′ĭ-kăns), n. [see insignificant], unimportance; triviality; smallness; pettiness.—n. in″sig-nif′i-can-cy.

in-sig-nif-i-cant (In″sĭg-nĭf′ĭ-kănt), adj. [²*in-* + significant], 1, without importance, force, influence, or meaning; 2, trifling; mean; small.—adv. in″sig-nif′i-cant-ly.

Syn. immaterial, meaningless, irrelevant, trivial, contemptible, small, petty, paltry, unimportant.

in-sin-cere (In″sĭn-sēr′), adj. [²*in-* + sincere], deceptive; making a false pretense; not to be trusted; hypocritical.—adv. in″sin-cere′ly.

Syn. artful, pharisaical, disingenuous, untrustworthy.

in-sin-cer-i-ty (In″sĭn-sĕr′ĭ-tĭ), n. deception; lack of candor; hypocrisy.

in-sin-u-ate (In-sĭn′ū-āt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -ated, p.pr. -ating], [< Lat. insinuare (-atus) < in, in + sinus, curve], 1, to push, work, or introduce by slow, gentle, or artful means, as into the confidence or affections; 2, to suggest or hint indirectly; as, he insinuated that I did not tell the truth; 3, to introduce as by a winding motion; worm in:—v.i. Obs., to wheedle oneself into the confidence or affection of another.—adj. in-sin′u-a-tive.—n. in-sin′u-a″tor.

in-sin u-a-tion (In-sĭn″ū-ā′shŭn), n. 1, an indirect or sly hint; as, to slander by insinuations; 2, the act of hinting or suggesting slyly; 3, a stealing in; 4, ingratiation, or an instance of it.

in-sip-id (In-sĭp′ĭd), adj. [< L.L. insipidus < Lat. in-, not + sapidus, savory < sapere, to taste; be wise], 1, without flavor; tasteless; 2, uninteresting; as, insipid conversation.—n. in-sip′id-ness.—adv. in-sip′id-ly.—n. in″si-pid′i-ty.

Syn. dull, flat, vapid, mawkish, pointless, prosaic, unsavory.—Ant. bright, sparkling, lively, piquant.

in-sist (In-sĭst′), v.i. [< Lat. insistere, to set foot on; insist < in, on + sistere, to stand], 1, to urge or press a wish or command: with on or upon; 2, to take a persistent stand and refuse to give way.

Syn. persevere, persist, urge, demand, require. We insist with force, argument, right, or authority, chiefly in a good sense; we insist that justice be done; that sanitary laws be enforced. The force behind insist is going outward; we are impelling others to do what they should do, or what we think they should do. To persist is to continue with firmness, even with obstinacy, in doing what we want to do. There is judgment back of insisting; there is mulishness and wilfulness back of persisting; hence persist is usually, and should always be, used in the bad sense. We persist in an ill-advised course, an unjust opinion, especially against protest or remonstrance. For such continuance in duty, or otherwise in the good sense, persevere is used. Reflection, determination in its courageous aspect, and virtue lie back of persevere; we persevere in unpleasant tasks, in a course of studies, in habits of daily exercise. To urge is to drive one to do a thing, but the force behind it is that of entreaty, exhortation, or pressing advocacy; we urge people to act, or we urge the adoption of an action or a plan.

in-sist-ence (In-sĭs′tĕns), n. the act of persisting or holding fast to something; urgency; perseverance.—n. in-sist′en-cy.

in-sist-ent (In-sĭs′tĕnt), adj. urgent; compelling attention.—adv. in-sist′ent-ly.

in si-tu (In sī′tū), [Lat. = in place], in position; in its original or proper place.

in-snare (In-snār′), v.t. [²*in-* + snare], to catch in, or as in, a trap; inveigle. Also, en-snare′.

in-so-bri-e-ty (In″sō-brī′ĕ-tĭ), n. [²*in-* + sober], intemperance; drunkenness.

in-sole (In′sōl″), n. [³*in-* + ²*sole*], 1, the part of the sole inside a boot or shoe; 2, a movable sole placed inside a shoe.

in-so-lence (In′sō-lĕns), n. [see insolent], contemptuous or haughty language or manner; offensive impertinence; insulting behavior; impudence: Rare, an affront; insult.

in-so-lent (In′sō-lĕnt), adj. [< Lat. insolens (-entis), unusual, arrogant < in-, not + solēre, to be accustomed], 1, haughty; contemptuously offensive; 2, insulting; very rude.—adv. in′so-lent-ly.

Syn. saucy, impudent, abusive, contemptuous. (See arrogant.)—Ant. respectful, mannerly, mild.

in-sol-u-ble (In-sŏl′ū-bl), adj. [²*in-* + soluble], 1, incapable of being dissolved in a liquid; as, fat is insoluble in water; 2, not to be explained or solved, as a mystery; 3, incapable of being paid off: said of a debt.—n. in-sol′u-ble-ness.—n. in-sol″u-bil′i-ty.

in-solv-a-ble (In-sŏl′vă-bl), adj. [²*in-* + solre], 1, not capable of explanation; 2, unnegotiable; not good; as, an insolvable bank note; 3, incapable of being dissolved.

in-sol-ven-cy (In-sŏl′vĕn-sĭ), n. [pl. -cies (-sĭz)], [see insolvent], the state of being unable to meet financial obligations; bankruptcy.

in-sol-vent (In-sŏl′vĕnt), adj. [²*in-* + solvent], 1, unable to pay all debts; bankrupt; 2, pertaining to bankrupts; 3, insufficient to pay all debts:—n. one who cannot pay his debts; a bankrupt.

in-som-ni-a (In-sŏm′nĭ-ā), n. [Lat. < insomnis, sleepless < in-, not + somnus, sleep], sleeplessness; chronic inability to obtain the proper amount of sleep; prolonged or abnormal wakefulness.

in-so-much (In″sō-mŭch′), adv. [in + ¹*so* + much], in such manner; to such a degree: usually followed by that or as.

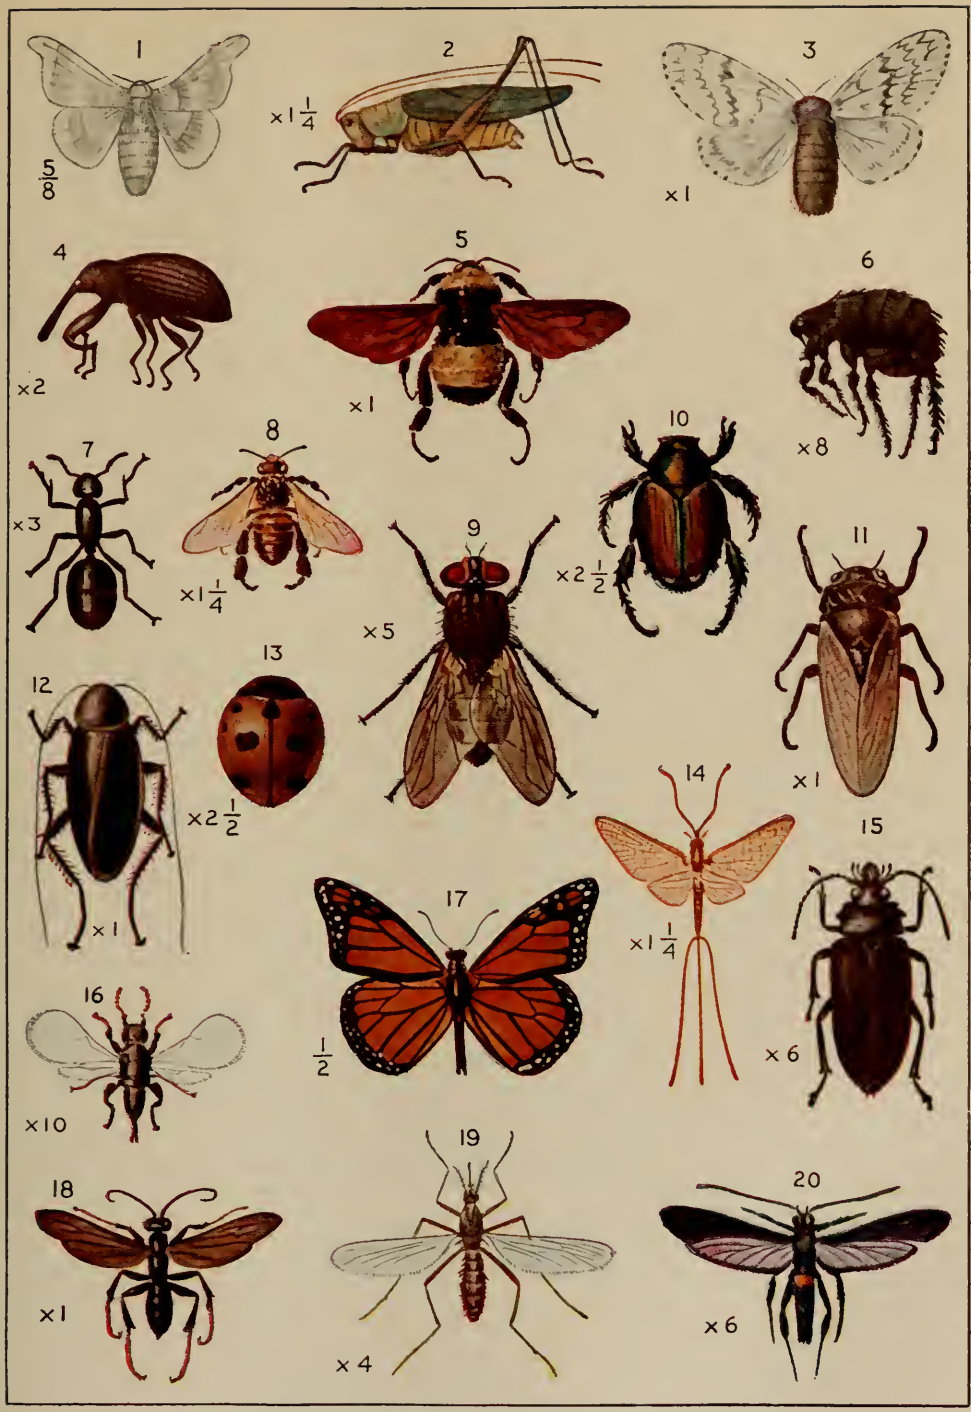
in-sou-ciance (ăn″sōō″syăns′; In-sōō′sĭ-ăns), n. [see insouciant], light-heartedness; indifference; lack of concern.

in-sou-ci-ant (In-sōō′sĭ-ănt; ăn″sōō″syăn′), adj. [Fr. < in-, not + soucier, to care < Lat. sollicitare, to disturb], indifferent; unconcerned.

in-span (In-spăn′), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. inspanned (-spănd′), p.pr. inspanning], [< Du. inspannen, to span, yoke], in South Africa, to yoke; make ready by yoking to a wagon:—v.i. to yoke oxen or other draft animals to a wagon.



TWENTY TYPICAL INSECTS OF NORTH AMERICA

1, silkworm moth (Bombyx mori); 2, long-horned green grasshopper (Orchelimum vulgare); 3, gypsy moth (Porthetria dispar); 4, cotton boll weevil (Anthonomus grandis); 5, bumblebee (Bombus americana); 6, flea (Ctenocephalus canis) 7, ant (Camponotus melleus); 8, honey bee (Apis mellifera); 9, housefly (Musca domestica); 10, Japanese beetle (Popillia japonica); 11, cicada (Cicada septendectm); 12, cockroach (Periplaneta americana); 13, ladybird (Coccinella novemnotata); 14, May fly (Ephemera varia); 15, a boring beetle (Prionus laticollis); 16, fig insect (Blastophaga psenes); 17, milkweed butterfly (Anosia plexippus); 18, hunting wasp (Larra americana); 19, mosquito (Culex pipiens); 20, peach moth (Synanthedon exitosa).

(See other side.)

TWENTY TYPICAL INSECTS

INSECTS outnumber all other animals. In complexity of structure, habits of life, and intelligence they stand at the head of invertebrates. They are both a bane and a blessing to man. In the United States alone certain injurious ones destroy or damage crops and forests every year to the value of approximately a billion dollars. Others carry disease germs that cause incalculable loss. Still others destroy houses and clothing. Some, however, are beneficial and insure the perpetuation of the seed and fruit of plants upon which, directly or indirectly, man depends for food.

The phenomenon of metamorphosis is one of the most interesting things in insect life. The members of the higher orders pass through three distinct stages after hatching from the egg. In the first, or growing stage, they resemble worms rather than beautiful winged creatures, and are called larvæ; in the next, or resting stage, they are in a completely dormant condition, and are called pupæ; to the third, the adult stage, the name imago has been applied. Some larvæ spin silken waterproof coverings for protection during the pupa stage, composed of a continuous thread which they wrap round and round themselves in a multitude of loops, forming a hermetically sealed case, or cocoon. In this covering they pass a long period of time, finally hatching out into adult form. The insects of most of the lower orders, as the dragonflies, crickets, and grasshoppers, when newly hatched from the egg, do not resemble a worm, but are like miniature, clumsy adults without wings, called nymphs. In some cases the imago, which has never seen a larva or a pupa, makes marvelous preparations for the survival of its offspring, which it will never see except as an egg.

Insects are the only invertebrates that fly. Most of them possess two pairs of wings. An early system of classification was based solely upon wing differences. Hence each order name in this system ended with the Greek word ptera, wings. Thus we have the Aptera, insects without wings; Orthoptera, those with straight wings; Diptera, those with two wings; etc. Recent study, however, has shown that other features, including certain life relationships, should be considered along with wing structure. Insects have, therefore, been partially reclassified, and distributed among a larger number of orders. Representatives of the leading ones are shown in our plate.

Among the best known of the beneficial insects are the bees (5, 8), classified as Hymenoptera (literally, membranous-winged). Bees are chiefly useful in carrying the dustlike powder, or pollen, from the anther of one flower to the stigma of another flower, thus enabling the plant to develop fertile seeds. The fig insect (16), a kind of wasp, made possible the fig industry of California. Imported from Smyrna, it cross-pollinated the fig flowers, and thus indirectly caused the fruit to mature. The honey bee not only carries pollen but also makes honey. The ladybird, or ladybug (13), in the order Coleoptera (sheath-winged), is really neither bird nor bug, but a beetle, having the hard outer wings characteristic of all beetles. It is useful to plants because it feeds on scale insects and plant lice, small insects which hinder the growth of plants by sucking their sap. The silkworm (1), a domesticated insect of the order Lepidoptera (scaly-winged), is fed in captivity upon its natural food, mulberry leaves. Another of this order is the milkweed, or monarch, butterfly (17), which migrates north in summer, laying its eggs on the way. The new broods hatched in the north migrate in flocks back to the south for the winter, as do the birds. This butterfly in its larval stage feeds only upon the milkweed, thus holding that weed in check.

Three destructive beetles are the Japanese beetle, the borer, and the weevil. The grub of the Japanese beetle (10) in its larval stage eats grass roots, while the adult feeds upon almost all kinds of vegetation. It was accidentally brought from Japan to Riverton, N. J., near Philadelphia, in 1916, and has already become a serious menace to fruit trees, flowers, and lawns. It multiplies with great rapidity; in southeastern Pennsylvania the infested area is steadily increasing, and no effective check for it, natural or artificial, has yet been found. The borer beetle (15) lays its eggs beneath the bark of living trees, and the grubs feed on the cambium, or growing tissue between the young wood and the bark. One of the most destructive is the pine-tree borer. The boll weevil (4), in its larval stage, eats the young fiber in the cotton boll, and does untold damage to our cotton crop each year. Other weevils eat the inner kernel of grain and other seeds. The gipsy moth (3), like the Japanese beetle, was accidentally introduced into America, and has done great damage to the trees in New England. The peach moth (20), another undesirable recent immigrant, came from Australia by way of cherry trees from Japan. It attacks first the tender twigs; later, the fruit.

The housefly (9) and the mosquito (19) belong to the order Diptera (two-winged). Not only are they annoying to man but some species carry the germs of disease, as of yellow fever and malaria, preventable by destroying certain kinds of mosquitoes or by securing complete protection against their bites. The dainty May fly (14) has four wings. As the adults live only a day or two, these insects are called Ephemeridæ (living but a day). The larvæ, however, may live two or three years. The hunting wasp (18) belongs to the same order as the bees, but to a different family. Its sting paralyzes its prey, chiefly spiders. These are carried to the nest and stored as food for the young wasps. The cicada, or harvest fly, or locust (11) belongs to the order Homoptera (wings alike: because the outer wings are of uniform thickness). The young spend several years underground, feeding on tree roots. The adults also damage trees by laying their eggs beneath the bark of young branches.

in-spect (in-spĕkt'), v.t. [< Lat. inspicere (-spectus) < in, in + specere, to look at], 1, to examine closely and critically, as to find possible errors; investigate 2, to review and survey officially, as troops.

in-spec-tion (in-spĕk'shŭn), n. careful or critical examination or review.

in-spec-tor (in-spĕk'tẽr), n. 1, one who examines or oversees; 2, an official who superintends some matter of public interest; 3, a police officer ranking next below a superintendent.

in-sphere (in-sfēr'), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. insphered (-sfērd'), p.pr. insphering], [in- + sphere], 1, to inclose in a globe or sphere; encircle; 2, to form into a globe or sphere. Also, en-sphere'.

in-spi-ra-tion (in"spi-rā'shŭn), n. [see inspire], 1, the act of drawing air into the lungs; 2, the influence or impulse which causes creation in art, literature, music, etc.; the effect upon the creative imagination of beauty, power, terror, or other emotional force; 3, the supernatural influence of the Holy Spirit on sacred writers and teachers; as, scripture given by the inspiration of God.—adj. in"spi-ra'tion-al.

in-spire (in-spīr'), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. inspired (-spīrd'), p.pr. inspiring], [< O.F. inspirer < Lat. in, in + spirare (-atus), to breathe], 1, to draw (air) into the lungs; 2, to animate or fill with ideas; as, to inspire a child with a hatred of wrong; 3, to control or guide by divine or supernatural influence; as, God inspired the ancient prophets; 4, to kindle or arouse, as an idea, emotion, impulse, etc., in the mind or spirit; suggest; as, his party inspired his policy: Obs., to breathe into: —v.i. to draw air into the lungs.—adj. in-spir'a-ble. —adj. in-spir'a-to-ry.—n. in-spir'er.

Syn. animate, cheer, stimulate, instil, impart, encourage, enliven.—Ant. dispirit, depress, discourage.

in-spir-it (in-spĭr'ĭt), v.t. [in- + spirit], to give life or vitality to; exhilarate; cheer; rouse: said of waning courage, etc.—adv. in-spir'it-ing-ly.

in-spis-sate (in-spĭs'āt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -sated, p.pr. -sating], [< L.L. inspissare (-atus) < Lat. in, in + spissus, thick], to thicken, as by evaporation:—v.i. to grow thick.—n. in"spis-sa'tion.

inst. abbr. 1, instant: used in allusion to the present month; 2, institute; institution.

in-sta-bil-i-ty (in"stă-bĭl'ĭ-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], [in- + stable], 1, want of firmness or steadiness; 2, inconstancy; fickleness; vacillation.

Syn. changeableness, mutability, unsteadiness, unsubstantiality.—Ant. constancy, steadiness, firmness.

in-stall (in-stôl'), v.t. [< L.L. installare (-atus) < Lat. in, in + stallum, stall], 1, to establish with the usual ceremonies in an office or position; induct; 2, to put into condition or position for use; as, to install an electric lighting system.

in-stal-la-tion (in"stô-lā'shŭn), n. 1, the act of formally establishing in an office or position; investiture; 2, the setting up in position for service, as machinery; 3, the apparatus so set up.

in-stal-ment (in-stôl'mĕnt), n. [< obs. install, to arrange: see install], 1, the act of installing or establishing in a position or office; 2, a portion of a sum of money or debt that is to be paid in parts at stated times; 3, one of a number of parts of anything, produced one part at a time; as, the first instalment of a new serial story. Also, in-stall'ment.

in-stance (in'stăns), n. [< Lat. instantia, presence; urgency < instans, being present: see instant], 1, something offered as an illustration or example; 2, a suggestion; request; as, the work was begun at the instance of the publishers: Obs., a motive:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. instanced (-stănst), p.pr. instancing], to refer to or offer as an example.

in-stan-cy (in'stăn-sĭ), n. insistence; urgency: Rare, 1, immediateness; 2, pressure.

in-stant (in'stănt), adj. [< Lat. instans (-antis), being present; pressing upon < in, on + stare, to stand], 1, urgent; 2, immediate; direct; 3, imminent; 4, of the present month; as, the tenth instant:—n. 1, a particular moment of time; 2, a very small portion of time; a second.

in-stan-ta-ne-ous (in"stăn-tā'nē-ŭs), adj. 1, acting or occurring in a moment; 2, at a given moment.—adv. in"stan-ta'ne-ous-ly.

in-stan-ter (in-stăn'tẽr), adv. [Lat. = urgently, pressingly], Colloq., immediately; without delay; as, I will go instanter.

in-stant-ly (in'stănt-lĭ), adv. [see instant], at once; without delay; as, when his father spoke, he obeyed instantly:—conj. as soon as.

Syn., adv., forthwith, directly. (See immediate.)

in-state (in-stāt'), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. instated, p.pr. instating], [in- + state], to put or establish in office or rank; install; as, he instated himself in the favor of those in power: Obs., to endow; invest.

in-stead (in-stĕd'), adv. [in + stead], 1, in room or place: followed by of; 2, in its place.

in-step (in'stĕp), n. [prob. in- + step], 1, the forward upper side of the human foot (see foot, illus.); 2, part of the hind leg of a horse, between hock and pastern; 3, a part, as of a stocking, covering the instep.

in-sti-gate (in'stĭ-gāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -gated, p.pr. -gating], [< Lat. instigare (-atus), to urge on, incite < Lat. in, on + root stig-, akin to Lat. stinguere and Gk. stizein, to prick, goad], to provoke or urge on; incite: usually in a bad sense; as, to instigate one to murder.—n. in'sti-ga"tor (-tẽr).

Syn. impel, abet, goad, spur, tempt, stimulate.

in-sti-ga-tion (in"stĭ-gā'shŭn), n. an urging forward; an incitement, chiefly to bad actions; a stimulus; a spur.

in-stil (in-stĭl'), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. instilled (-stĭld'), p.pr. instilling], [< Lat. in, in + stillare (-atus), to drop], 1, to pour in by drops; 2, hence, to introduce, as a principle, feeling, etc., gradually; cause to enter (the mind, heart, etc.) by degrees; impart slowly. Also, in-still'.—n. in-stil'ment; in-still'ment.

Syn. infuse, implant, inculcate, inspire, ingraft.

in-stil-la-tion (in"stĭl-lā'shŭn), n. 1, the act of instilling, or pouring in drop by drop; also, that which is instilled; 2, the act of infusing ideas, feelings, etc., gradually into the mind or heart.

in-stinct (in-stĭngkt'), adj. [< Lat. in, in, on + stinguere (stinctus), to prick], charged or filled (with); as, creatures instinct with life:—n. (in'stĭngkt), 1, in animals, a natural, involuntary urging to any action; 2, a natural tendency: unconscious skill; as, an instinct for direction: Psych., a more or less complex, stereotyped reaction which, under given stimuli, accomplishes a definite end, but is performed without dependence upon reason or intelligence.

in-stinc-tive (in-stĭngk'tĭv), adj. acting or prompted by natural impulse; as, instinctive fear; innate.—adv. in-stinc'tive-ly.

in-sti-tute (in'stĭ-tūt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -tuted, p.pr. -tuting], [< Lat. instituere (-tutus) < in, in + statuere, to cause to stand], 1, to establish; set up; fix; originate; 2, to put into operation; as, to institute a custom: Eccl., to appoint to a church:—n. 1, an established law or principle; 2, a scientific, artistic, professional, or literary organization or place of education; as, an institute of technology; 3, a building devoted to the work of such an organization: pl. the basic principles of law; also, a collection or classification of these principles; as, the Institutes of Justinian.—adj. in'sti-tu"tive.

in-sti-tu-tion (in"stĭ-tū'shŭn), n. 1, the act of establishing; 2, that which is established; especially, an established rule, custom, principle, or the like, regulating social or civic conduct and organization; as, church, home, and school are fundamental institutions; 3, an organized body or society for promoting a particular object, especially of a charitable or educational nature; 4, a building or buildings for carrying on the work of such an organization: Eccl., 1, the appointing of a clergyman to a church; 2, the establishment of the sacrament of the Eucharist, as originated by Christ at the Last Supper; also, the words used by Christ on that occasion (Matt. 26:26–28; Mark 14:22–24; Luke 22:19, 20; 1 Cor. 11:23–25) and repeated by the priest at the celebration of the sacrament.

in-sti-tu-tion-al (in"stĭ-tū'shŭn-ăl), adj. 1, of, pertaining to, or of the nature of, an institution or establishment; 2, pertaining to legal institutes; elementary; 3, established; 4, pertaining to educational or philanthropic organizations, or to their buildings; 5, accompanied by, and working through, organized agencies for charitable and educational objects; as, an institutional church in-sti-tu-tion-al-ism (in"stĭ-tū'shŭn-ăl-ĭzm), n. 1, the system of institutions; 2, devotion to, and support of, established institutions: used especially of zeal for religious customs.

in-sti-tu-tor (in'stĭ-tū"tẽr), n. a founder of a system or society: Eccl., the bishop, or his appointee, who institutes a clergyman into a parish.

in-struct (in-strŭkt'), v.t. [< Lat. in, in + struere (structus), to build], 1, to teach; educate; 2, to furnish with orders or directions; 3, to inform; apprise; advise; counsel: Eng. Law, 1, to direct (a barrister) to act as counsel in a case; 2, to furnish with information; as, a judge instructs a jury.

Syn. inform, direct, teach. (See advise.)

in-struc-tion (in-strŭk'shŭn), n. 1, the act of teaching; 2, knowledge imparted; pl. orders or directions; as, to follow instructions.

Syn. direction, requirement. (See education, order.)

in-struc-tion-al (in-strŭk'shŭn-ăl), adj. 1, pertaining to orders, directions, or teaching; 2, conveying information.

in-struc-tive (ĭn-strŭk'tĭv), adj. tending to inform; giving knowledge.—adv. in-struc'tive-ly.—n. in-struc'tive-ness.

in-struc-tor (ĭn-strŭk'tẽr), n. 1, one who gives knowledge or informs; a teacher; 2, in American colleges, a teacher ranking below a professor.—n. in-struc'tor-ship.—n. fem. in-struc'tress.

in-stru-ment (ĭn'strōō-mĕnt), n. [< Lat. instrumentum < instruere, to construct], 1, that by which anything is accomplished; an agent; a means; 2, a mechanical device; a tool; 3, a mechanical contrivance for producing musical sounds: Law, a formal writing of any kind; a legal document.

Syn. device, agent, medium, channel, apparatus.

in-stru-men-tal (ĭn"strōō-mĕn'tăl), adj. 1, serving as a means; helping to bring about some end; helpful; 2, performed on, or composed for, a musical instrument, or instruments.—adv. in"stru-men'tal-ly.—n. in"stru-men-tal'i-ty.

in-stru-men-tal-ism (ĭn"strōō-mĕn'tăl-ĭzm), n. Philos., the view that truth is genuine only when it is usable as an instrument.

in-stru-men-tal-ist (ĭn"strōō-mĕn'tăl-ĭst), n. one who plays upon a musical instrument: Philos., a believer in instrumentalism.

in-stru-men-ta-tion (ĭn"strōō-mĕn-tā'shŭn), n. the use or method of using a scientific or surgical instrument: Mus., the arrangement of music for a number of instruments, especially for an orchestra or band; orchestration.

in-sub-or-di-nate (ĭn"sŭb-ôr'dĭ-nāt), adj. [in- + subordinate], not submitting to authority; disobedient; mutinous; rebellious.—adv. in"sub-or'di-nate-ly.

Syn. contumacious, unruly, rebellious.

in-sub-or-di-na-tion (ĭn"sŭb-ôr"dĭ-nā'shŭn), n. physical or mental resistance to authority; rebellion: opposite of subordination.

in-sub-stan-tial (ĭn"sŭb-stăn'shăl), adj. [in- + substantial], not having solidity; frail; unreal; flimsy.—adv. in"sub-stan'tial-ly.—n. in"sub-stan"tĭ-al'ĭ-ty (-shĭ-ăl'ĭ-tĭ).

in-suf-fer-a-ble (ĭn-sŭf'ẽr-ă-bl), adj. [in- + suffer], not to be borne; intolerable; as, insufferable conduct.—adv. in-suf'fer-a-bly.

in-suf-fi-cien-cy (ĭn"sŭ-fĭsh'ĕn-sĭ), n. [see insufficient], 1, want of power, force, amount, quality, etc.; inadequacy; 2, inability to perform normal work: said of bodily organs.

in-suf-fi-cient (ĭn"sŭ-fĭsh'ĕnt), adj. [in- + sufficient], deficient in quality, amount, power, etc.; inadequate.—adv. in"suf-fi'cient-ly.

Syn. scanty, deficient, incapable, incompetent.

in-su-lar (ĭn'sŭ-lẽr), adj. [< Lat. insula, island], 1, pertaining to an island or to the inhabitants of an island, their customs, etc.; 2, isolated; hence, narrow-minded; provincial; prejudiced.

in-su-lar-i-ty (ĭn"sŭ-lăr'ĭ-tĭ), n. 1, the state of being an island; 2, narrowness of opinions, ideas, experience, associations, etc.

in-su-late (ĭn'sŭ-lāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -lated, p.pr. -lating], to place alone, or in a separate situation; isolate: Phys., to separate (conducting bodies), or to cover (a body), with a nonconducting material, in order to prevent transfer or leakage, as of electricity.

in-su-la-tion (ĭn"sŭ-lā'shŭn), n. the act of isolating, or the state of being isolated: Phys., 1, the act of separating by nonconducting materials; 2, the state of being separated by nonconductors to prevent the passage of electricity, heat, or sound; 3, nonconducting material.

INSULATORS

1, strain insulator; 2, spike insulator; 3, stud insulator; 4, antenna insulator.

in-su-la-tor (ĭn'sŭ-lā"tẽr), n. 1, one or that which isolates; 2, specifically, a body or material that is impervious to the passage of electricity, heat, or sound.

in-su-lin (ĭn'sŭ-lĭn), n. [< Lat. insula, island: in ref. to parts of pancreas called "islands" of Langerhans], a preparation from certain parts of the pancreas of oxen, sheep, and the like, used to retard the formation of sugar in the blood of diabetics.

in-sult (ĭn-sŭlt'), v.t. [< Lat. insultare, to keep jumping upon < in, on + saltire, to leap], to treat with gross contempt or abuse, either by word or act:—v.i. Archaic, to triumph impudently:—n. (ĭn'sŭlt), 1, an affront or indignity; 2, gross abuse in word or action.

Syn., n. affront, abuse, indignity, contumely, outrage.

in-sult-ing (ĭn-sŭl'tĭng), p.adj. containing or intending offense or affront.

in-su-per-a-ble (ĭn-sū'pẽr-ă-bl), adj. [in- + superable], not to be overcome; as, insuperable difficulties.—n. in-su'per-a-ble-ness.—adv. in-su'per-a-bly.—n. in-su"per-a-bil'i-ty.

in-sup-port-a-ble (ĭn"sŭ-pōr'tă-bl), adj. [in- + support], not capable of being endured; insufferable.—adv. in"sup-port'a-bly.

in-sur-a-ble (ĭn-shōōr'ă-bl), adj. [see insure], suitable or proper to be insured against injury, loss, etc., as real estate and personal property.

in-sur-ance (ĭn-shōōr'ăns), n. 1, a system of protection against the risk of individual loss, by distributing according to the law of averages the burden of losses over a large number of individuals; 2, a contract whereby, in consideration of a certain payment called a premium, one party to the contract agrees, in case of certain eventualities, as loss by fire, accident, death, etc., to indemnify a person or persons designated by the other party, by the payment of a stated sum of money; 3, the sum paid for the insuring; the premium; 4, the amount for which anything is insured; the amount of indemnity to be paid.

in-sure (ĭn-shōōr'), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. insured (-shōōrd'), p.pr. insuring], [var. of ensure < O.F. en-, in (< Lat. in-, in) + seur, sure (< Lat. securus, secure)], 1, to secure, as a person, against loss or damage by fire, accident, etc., in return for the payment of a premium; also, to issue a contract of insurance to; 2, to make sure or secure, as property, by the payment of a premium; 3, to assure; guarantee: with against:—v.i. to contract to give security against loss or damage by fire, death, accident, etc.; underwrite. Also, en-sure'.

in-sured (ĭn-shōōrd'), n. one who is secured against loss by fire, accident, theft, etc.

in-sur-er (ĭn-shōōr'ẽr), n. one who secures others against loss by fire, accident, death, etc.

in-sur-gence (ĭn-sûr'jĕns), n. [see insurgent], a revolt; an uprising; rebellion.

in-sur-gent (ĭn-sûr'jĕnt), adj. [< Lat. in, against + surgens (-entis), rising], rebellious; rising against civil or political authority:—n. a rebel: Insurgent, U. S. Politics, a member of a section of the Republican Party which has advocated progressive policies and opposed certain rules of the House.

Syn., adj. mutinous, rebellious, insubordinate.

in-sur-mount-a-ble (ĭn"sûr-moun'tă-bl), adj. [in- + surmount], incapable of being passed over or conquered; insuperable.—adv. in"sur-mount'a-bly.—n. in"sur-mount'a-bil'i-ty.

in-sur-rec-tion (ĭn"sŭ-rĕk'shŭn), n. [< Lat. insurrectio (-onis) < in, on + surgere (surrectus), to rise], active or open rebellion against authority; revolt.—adj. in"sur-rec'tion-al.

Syn. uprising, revolt, mutiny. (See revolution.)

in-sur-rec-tion-a-ry (ĭn"sŭ-rĕk'shŭn-ă-rĭ), adj. pertaining to, or engaged in, active or open rebellion; as, insurrectionary ideas.

in-sur-rec-tion-ist (ĭn"sŭ-rĕk'shŭn-ĭst), n. one who takes part in a rebellion; an insurgent.—n. in"sur-rec'tion-ism.

in-sus-cep-ti-ble (ĭn"sŭ-sĕp'tĭ-bl), adj. [in- + susceptible], not easy to influence or impress.—n. in"sus-cep"ti-bil'i-ty.

in-swathe (ĭn-swāth'), v.t. [see enswathe], to bind or wrap with a band or bandage; swathe. See en-swathe', Pfd. S.

in-swept (ĭn'swĕpt"), adj. [in- + sweep], tapering toward the front, as an automobile frame.

int. abbr. 1, interest; 2, interior; 3, interjection (also, interj.); 4, internal; 5, international; 6, interpreter; 7, intransitive (also, intrans.).

in-tact (ĭn-tăkt'), adj. [< Lat. intactus < in-, not + tangere (tactus), to touch], entire; unbroken; uninjured; untouched, as by anything harmful.

Syn. whole, unimpaired, perfect, entire, complete.

in-tag-lio (ĭn-tăl'yō; ĕn-tăl'yō), n. [pl. -lios (-yōz); -i (-yē)], [It. < in-, in + tagliare, to cut], 1, an incised design or figure, as a die, in any hard material; 2, a gem or stone having a design cut into the surface: opposite of cameo; 3, the art of making intaglios: chiefly in the phrase in intaglio; 4, a countersunk die for producing a design in relief: intaglio printing, printing from an engraved surface.

in-take (ĭn'tāk"), n. [in- + take], 1, a thing taken in; a taking in, as of breath; 2, the place where a fluid enters a pipe, channel, etc.; 3, a narrowing, as in a stocking: Mech., the amount of energy taken in.

in-tan-gi-ble (ĭn-tăn'jĭ-bl), adj. [in- + tangible], 1, incapable of being touched; 2, vague; not easily defined or formulated; as, the beauty of a poem is intangible.—n. in-tan'gi-ble-ness.—adv. in-tan'gi-bly.—n. in-tan"gi-bil'i-ty.

in-te-ger (in'tē-jēr), n. [Lat. = untouched < in-, not + tag-, root of tangere (tactus), to touch], an entity: Math., a whole number: opposite of fraction.

in-te-gral (in'tē-grăl), adj. 1, constituting a whole; complete; 2, necessary to the completeness of a whole; 3, pertaining to a whole number: integral calculus, a certain branch of higher mathematics (see calculus):—n. a whole made up of parts: Math., an expression whose derivative is a given expression.—adv. in'te-gral-ly.

in-te-grant (in'tē-grănt), adj. [see integrate], forming part of a whole; necessary to constitute an entire thing:—n. a necessary part.

in-te-grate (in'tē-grāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -grated, p.pr. -grating], [< Lat. integrare (-atus), to make whole: see integer], 1, to bring together the parts of; 2, to give the sum total of:—v.i. to become complete: opposite of differentiate.

in-te-gra-tion (in"tē-grā'shŭn), n. the process of making whole: Math., the act or process inverse to differentiation, whereby is found the expression of which a given expression is the derivative or the differential: denoted by the sign $\int$: originally a lengthened S, for Latin summa, sum.

in-te-gra-tor (in'tē-grā"tēr), n. Mech., a device for calculating definite integrals, generally by moving a pointer along the curve on which the integral depends, as a planimeter.

in-teg-ri-ty (in-tĕg'rĭ-tĭ), n. [< Lat. integritas (-atis), wholeness: see integer], 1, uprightness; virtue; honesty; 2, soundness; uninjured state; 3, unbroken condition; completeness.

Syn. (see justice, honesty).

in-teg-u-ment (in-tĕg'ū-mĕnt), n. [< Lat. integumentum < in-, upon + tegere, to cover], an external covering, as the skin.

in-tel-lect (in'tē-lĕkt), n. [< Lat. intelligere (-lectus), to understand], 1, the powers of the mind or understanding that know and reason: distinguished from feeling and will; 2, more specifically, the power to reason, or to think abstractly; the highest development of intelligence; 3, intelligent persons collectively; as, the intellect of the country; 4, intelligence embodied; as, Newton was a great intellect: pl. Archaic, the mental powers collectively; the senses.

Syn. mind, intelligence, understanding, sense, reason, reasoning, genius, brains. Mind, the general term for mental functioning, includes consciousness, thought, perception, cognition, feeling, volition, the subconscious, etc. Hence, we are aware of the world about us, we meditate, reason, and think things out, with the mind. We determine with the mind: as, I have made up my mind to do it; we decide and resolve; as, I know my own mind and shall stick to it; we feel disposed or inclined with our minds; as, I have half a mind to do it; we have disordered minds, or have peace of mind; and we conceive of the mind as the self, soul, or spirit in contrast with the body, or physical self. Intellect is commonly limited to that power of the mind that knows or reasons, as opposed to the power of feeling and will; mind may be used in this limited sense, and then becomes synonymous with intellect. Intelligence commonly names the power to exercise the mental functions, the capacity to know, to apprehend. Understanding and comprehension emphasize reason and the functioning of intelligence. Intellect tends to become limited to the higher aspects of intelligence, abstract reasoning, purposeful thought, etc. One who has this type of mind is an intellectual person. Intellect is found in man, but not in the lower animals, even those that have a fair degree of intelligence. Genius may be applied to a master mind, an outstanding intellect, as in the case of Leonardo da Vinci, or remarkable specific ability, as in a musical genius. (See genius.)

in-tel-lec-tion (in"tē-lĕk'shŭn), n. exercise of the mind; also, a particular act of understanding; thought; cognition.

in-tel-lec-tive (in"tē-lĕk'tĭv), adj. 1, belonging to, or proceeding from, the mind; mental; 2, endowed with the power of understanding.

in-tel-lec-tu-al (in"tē-lĕk'tū-ăl), adj. 1, pertaining to, or performed by, the mind; perceived by, or existing in, the understanding; 2, endowed with powers of understanding above the ordinary; 3, exercising the mind; as, intellectual pursuits: —n. a person of superior mentality; as, Bacon was an intellectual.—adv. in"tel-lec'tu-al-ly.

Syn., adj. intelligent, mental. Mental, which is opposed to corporeal and bodily, is applied to those things that are of the mind, done by the mind, and distinguished by the mind; as, mental enjoyments; mental discipline; mental endowments; mental arithmetic; a mental reservation. Intellectual, which, unlike mental, can also be applied to persons, applies to that which belongs to, appeals to, or demands the exercise of, the intellect, as opposed to the emotions, or the purely physical. Intellectual not only describes conversations which deal with thought-challenging or abstract subjects, but also the persons whose minds are so developed or gifted as to be able to handle such subjects. Such enlightened persons, taken collectively, are referred to as "the intellectuals." Intelligent describes, in the first place, those endowed with mind or intellect. It is also applied to animals, though bees and ants, in spite of their remarkably complex reaction patterns and the apparent purposefulness of their behavior, are not in the technical sense intelligent. It is applied further to those human beings who show the power to comprehend, as opposed to the idiotic or abnormal. Chiefly, however, intelligent describes those who comprehend quickly, show sagacity, a degree of shrewdness, and an all-round ability to understand. When we think of an intellectual man we think of a scholar; when we think of an intelligent man we picture a bright, active, quick mind working effectively.

in-tel-lec-tu-al-ism (in"tē-lĕk'tū-ăl-ĭzm), n. 1, the exercise of mental power; devotion to intellectual pursuits; 2, the doctrine that all knowledge comes from pure reason.

in-tel-lec-tu-al-i-ty (in"tē-lĕk"tū-ăl'ĭ-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], the quality or state of being scholarly or endowed with a high degree of mentality; trained intelligence.

in-tel-li-gence (in-tĕl'ĭ-jĕns), n. [see intelligent], 1, ability to learn, to profit by experience, or to acquire knowledge; comprehension; understanding; 2, ability for reasoning and abstract thinking; intellect; 3, ability to meet a new situation, to solve a problem, or direct one's conduct or thinking effectively; common sense; 4, that which possesses these abilities or powers of mind; as, the supreme Intelligence; 5, information or news, particularly secret information, as that secured for government use during war time: Psych., the quality or faculty which underlies these abilities, distinguished from habit, instinct, reflex action, etc., and from specific abilities, as musical talent or retentive memory for figures: intelligence quotient, a figure equal to 100 times the result of dividing the mental age rating given an individual in some intelligence test by his actual age in years, persons of sixteen years or older being considered to have an actual age of sixteen: generally abbreviated to I. Q.: intelligence test, 1, any question, task, problem, or controlled situation used in measuring or rating the degree of intelligence of a person or animal; 2, a series of such tests, usually standardized by repeated trials on many individuals, adapted especially to show the power and aptness of the person tested to understand ideas, and to apply and use knowledge reasonably and with understanding; used for classifying students, soldiers, employees, or the like.

Syn. information, news, tidings, advice. News is the general term, connoting knowledge or report of recent events; timeliness and freshness characterize news. Information is specific knowledge; if it is recent and timely it is also news; but it may be a fact sought for a practical purpose, for direction, or the like. Hence, we have bureaus of information. Tidings, now chiefly a literary word, is a piece of news; as, to bring glad tidings. Intelligence is news or information of a more formal coloring, with emphasis on the enlightening aspect of the facts so made known. (See intellect.)

in-tel-li-genc-er (in-tĕl'ĭ-jĕn-sēr), n. a person who conveys news; especially, a spy.

in-tel-li-gent (in-tĕl'ĭ-jĕnt), adj. [< Lat. intelligens (-entis), understanding < inter, between + legere, to collect, read], 1, possessing intelligence; capable of purposeful mental activity or, particularly, of reasoning or of learning by experience; 2, showing intelligence or comprehension; as, an intelligent answer; 3, less correctly, having ability for abstract thought; intellectual: Obs. or Rare, cognizant; well versed.—adv. in-tel'li-gent-ly.

Syn. bright, quick-witted, sagacious, sensible, shrewd. (See intellectual.)—Ant. dull, stupid, ignorant.

in-tel-li-gen-tial (in-tĕl"ĭ-jĕn'shăl), adj. 1, pertaining to, possessing, or displaying intelligence, or powers of mind and understanding; 2, conveying or transmitting information.

in-tel-li-gent-si-a (in-tĕl"ĭ-jĕnt'sĭ-ă; -gĕnt'-), n. [< Russ. intelligentsiya < It. intelligenza, -zia, intelligence], collectively, the educated classes. Also. in-tel"li-gent'zi-a.

in-tel-li-gi-ble (in-tĕl'ĭ-jĭ-bl), adj. [see intellect], understandable; clear, as an explanation.—adv. in-tel'li-gi-bly.—n. in-tel"li-gi-bil'i-ty.

in-tem-per-ance (in-tĕm'pēr-ăns), n. [see intemperate], 1, want of moderation or self-restraint; intemperateness; 2, excess, especially in the use of alcoholic liquors.

in-tem-per-ate (ĭn-tĕm'pĕr-ĭt), adj. [ᵃin-+temperate], 1, characterized by want of moderation or self-restraint; 2, excessive; inclement; severe; 3, addicted to alcoholic liquors.—adv. in-tem'per-ate-ly.—n. in-tem'per-ate-ness.

Syn. immoderate, excessive, inordinate, unrestrained, drunken.—Ant. temperate, controlled, moderate, mild.

in-tend (ĭn-tĕnd'), v.t. [< Fr. entendre, to understand < Lat. intendere (-tentus; -tensus), to direct < in, in+tendere, to stretch], 1, to purpose; mean; as, we intend to win this game; 2, to design (a thing) for some purpose: Obs., 1, to set the mind on; 2, to direct, as one's way; 3, to feign; pretend.

in-tend-an-cy (ĭn-tĕn'dăn-sĭ) n. [pl. -cies (-sĭz)], 1, the duties or office of an intendant; also, a body of intendants; 2, a territorial district in one of the Spanish American countries, or, formerly, in a French colonial possession.

in-tend-ant (ĭn-tĕn'dănt), n. 1, one who has direction or charge of a public business; a manager; a superintendent; 2, in Spanish American countries and, formerly, in French colonial possessions, an official in charge of a district.

in-tend-ed (ĭn-tĕn'dĕd), p.adj. purposed; as, the intended meaning of a remark: Colloq., betrothed:—n. Colloq., the person to whom one is engaged to be married.

in-tense (ĭn-tĕns'), adj. [see intend], 1, extreme in degree; excessive; 2, intent; ardent; eager.—adv. in-tense'ly.—n. in-tense'ness.

Syn. earnest, intent, fervid, rapt, glowing, ardent.

in-ten-si-fy (ĭn-tĕn'sĭ-fī), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -fied (-fīd), p.pr. -fying], [< Fr. < Lat. intensus, tightened+facere, to make], to make greater in degree.—n. in-ten'si-fi'er.—n. in-ten'si-fi-ca'tion.

Syn. aggravate, enhance, increase, heighten.

in-ten-sion (ĭn-tĕn'shŭn), n. [see intend], 1, determination; 2, increase of energy: Logic, the sum of the constituent elements of a concept.

in-ten-si-ty (ĭn-tĕn'sĭ-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], 1, the state or quality of being extreme; extreme strength, force, or energy; as, intensity of an electric current: 2, the degree or amount of some condition, quality, or physical attribute, as of light or sound.

in-ten-sive (ĭn-tĕn'sĭv), adj. 1, increasing in degree or amount; causing to increase in degree or amount; 2, of or pertaining to intensity, or the degree of force, strength, depth, etc., of anything; 3, deep and thorough rather than broad; as, an intensive study of a short period of history: Agr., designating a method of producing unusually large returns from a given area by a certain method: opposite of extensive; Gram., giving emphasis.—adv. in-ten'sive-ly.

in-tent (ĭn-tĕnt'), adj. having the mind closely fixed on a subject; diligent; directed with eager attention; intense:—n. 1, purpose; aim; 2, meaning; import.—adv. in-tent'ly —n. in-tent'ness.

Syn., n. drift, aim, purport, view. (See design.)

in-ten-tion (ĭn-tĕn'shŭn), n. 1, purpose; design; aim; as, his good intention; 2, meaning: pl. Colloq., purpose with regard to matrimony.

Syn. aim, object; import, significance. (See design.)

in-ten-tion-al (ĭn-tĕn'shŭn-ăl), adj. done on purpose; done by design; as, an intentional wrong.—adv. in-ten'tion-al-ly.

in-ten-tioned (ĭn-tĕn'shŭnd), adj. having designs: usually in composition; as, well-intentioned; ill-intentioned.

in-ter (ĭn-tûr'), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. interred (-tûrd'), p.pr. interring], [< O.F. enterrer < L.L. interrare < Lat. in, in+terra, earth], to bury.

in-ter- prefix. [Lat. = between, among], 1, among; between; as, *inter*cede; *inter*class; 2, together; mutually; as, *inter*join; *inter*lock.

in-ter-act (ĭn"tĕr-ăkt'), v.i. [inter-+act], to influence each other; have mutual effect.

in-ter-ac-tion (ĭn"tĕr-ăk'shŭn), n. the effect of one thing on another; mutual influence.

in-ter-bor-ough (ĭn"tĕr-bŭr'ō), adj. [inter-+borough], pertaining to, or operating in, several boroughs.

in-ter-breed (ĭn"tĕr-brēd'), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -bred (-brĕd'), p.pr. -breeding], [inter-+breed], to propagate by crossing different varieties, kinds, or stocks:—v.i. to propagate, or breed with each other: said of animals, plants, etc., of different race or species.

in-ter-ca-la-ry (ĭn-tûr'kă-lă-rĭ), adj. [< Lat. intercalarius: see intercalate], 1, of a day, month, etc., inserted in the calendar, as February 29 in the calendar of leap year; 2, of a year, having added days or an added month; 3, interpolated.

in-ter-ca-late (ĭn-tûr'kă-lāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -lated, p.pr. -lating], [< Lat. intercalare (-atus), to insert in calendar < inter, between +calare, to proclaim], 1, to insert, as a day, in the calendar; 2, to interpolate.—n. in-ter"ca-la'tion (-lā'shŭn).

in-ter-cede (ĭn"tĕr-sēd'), v.i. [p.t. and p.p. -ceded, p.pr. -ceding], [< Lat. inter, between +cedere (cessus), to go], 1, to mediate as a friend between persons who are unfriendly; 2, to plead for another; with with or for.—n. in"ter-ced'er.

in-ter-cel-lu-lar (ĭn"tĕr-sĕl'ū-lăr), adj. [inter-+cell], located between cells.

in-ter-cept (ĭn"tĕr-sĕpt'), v.t. [< Lat. intercipere (-ceptus), to intercept < inter, between +capere, to take], 1, to seize by the way; 2, to obstruct, as a view; interfere with the course of; come in the way of: Math., to include between two points or lines:—n. Math., a part, as of a line, so included.—n. in"ter-cep'tion.—n. in"ter-cep'tor; in"ter-cept'er.

in-ter-ces-sion (ĭn"tĕr-sĕsh'ŭn), n. [see intercede], 1, the act of trying to restore friendship between two who are separated by disagreement; 2, the act of pleading in behalf of another.

in-ter-ces-sor (ĭn"tĕr-sĕs'ĕr), n. 1, one who tries to restore friendly relations between two who are parted by differences; 2, one who pleads in behalf of another.

in-ter-ces-so-ry (ĭn"tĕr-sĕs'ō-rĭ), adj. seeking to make peace between two estranged parties; pleading in behalf of another.

in-ter-change (ĭn"tĕr-chānj'), v.t. [inter-+change], 1, to exchange, as opinions, gifts, courtesies, etc.; 2, to exchange the position of, by putting one thing in the place of another; 3, to vary:—n. (ĭn'tĕr-chānj"), 1, the exchange of two things, one for the other; 2, alternate sequence, as of seasons.

in-ter-change-a-ble (ĭn"tĕr-chān'jă-bl), adj. 1, capable of being put in place of each other; 2, capable of being exchanged.—n. in"ter-change'a-ble-ness.—adv. in"ter-change'a-bly.—n. in"ter-change"a-bil'i-ty.

in-ter-col-le-gi-ate (ĭn"tĕr-kŏ-lē'jĭ-ĭt), adj. [inter-+college], 1, carried on, as games, between colleges; 2, existing, as leagues, among colleges or universities.

in-ter-co-lum-ni-a-tion (ĭn"tĕr-kŏ-lŭm"nĭ-ā'shŭn), n. [inter-+column], Arch., the open space between two columns, measured at the bases, or the method of regulating it.

in-ter-com-mu-ni-cate (ĭn"tĕr-kŏ-mū'nĭ-kāt), v.t. [inter-+communicate], to impart or convey mutually:—v.i. to communicate with one another.—n. in"ter-com-mu"ni-ca'tion.

in-ter-cos-tal (ĭn"tĕr-kŏs'tăl), adj. [< Lat. inter, between+costa, a rib], Anat., between the ribs; Bot., between the veins of a leaf.

in-ter-course (ĭn'tĕr-kōrs), n. [< O.F. entrecours < Lat. inter, between+currere (cursus), to run], 1, connection, correspondence, or communication between individuals, nations, etc.; exchange; fellowship; 2, sexual connection.

Syn. commerce, communication, reciprocation.

in-ter-de-nom-i-na-tion-al (ĭn"tĕr-dē-nŏm"ĭ-nā'shŭn-ăl), adj. [inter-+denomination], pertaining to mutual action among several religious denominations.

in-ter-de-pend-ence (ĭn"tĕr-dē-pĕn'dĕns), n. [inter-+depend], the state of being mutually dependent.—adj. in"ter-de-pend'ent.

in-ter-dict (ĭn"tĕr-dĭkt'), v.t. [< O.F. entredit < Lat. inter, between, among+dicere (dictus), to say], to restrain or forbid: Eccl., to cut off from the spiritual services of a church:—n. (ĭn'tĕr-dĭkt), a formal prohibition: R. C. Ch., an order from the Pope debarring a person or place from ecclesiastical privileges.—adj. in"ter-dic'tive.—adj. in"ter-dic'to-ry.

in-ter-dic-tion (ĭn"tĕr-dĭk'shŭn), n. 1, the act of issuing an authoritative prohibition, or ban; also, the ban itself; 2, judicial restraint.

in-ter-est (ĭn'tĕr-ĕst), n. [Lat. = it matters < inter, between+esse, to be: earlier Eng. form interess, compensatory payment, advantage], 1, benefit; that which is of advantage; as, he acts for the public interest; 2, that which concerns one; the feeling that something concerns one; also, that which arouses such a feeling; as, suspense gives interest to a story; attentive or sympathetic concern or regard; 3, consideration for personal or selfish profit; 4, personal influence over the action of others; as, he used his interest with the president; 5, a share or part ownership in a business or other project: Fin., a sum paid for the use of money, being a certain per cent of the sum loaned per unit of time, as per year: Psych., 1, the tendency to give, or persist in, attention to an object, situation, or idea, or group of such objects of attention, in spite of distracting influences; 2, the consciousness of such tendency: pl. the persons concerned in some field of business or industry, taken collectively; as, the coal interests: simple interest, interest paid on the principal only, or the amount loaned: compound interest, interest paid on the sum of the principal and any interest due but not paid, such unpaid interest, as it falls due, being added to the principal:—v.t. 1, to engage the attention of; arouse to curiosity, sympathy, or the like; 2, to cause to take a share in; as, to interest oneself in politics; 3, to produce an effect upon.

in-ter-est-ed (ĭn'tẽr-ĕs-tĕd), p.adj. 1, having the feelings or emotions excited or held; 2, concerned; influenced by personal considerations or advantage; selfish; 3, having a share or a responsibility in.

in-ter-est-ing (ĭn'tẽr-ĕst-ĭng), p.adj. 1, engaging the attention or curiosity; 2, exciting the feelings, emotions, or curiosity.

in-ter-fere (ĭn"tẽr-fēr'), v.i. [p.t. and p.p. -fered (-fērd'), p.pr. -fering], [< O.F. (s')entreferir, to strike one another < Lat. inter, between, among + ferire, to strike], 1, to come into collision; clash; be in opposition; 2, to strike the fetlock with the opposite hoof: said of a horse; 3, to enter into, or meddle in, the affairs of others: Phys., to interact so as to affect one another, as waves of light.—n. in"ter-fer'er.

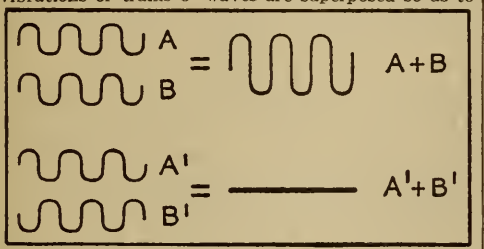
in-ter-fer-ence (ĭn"tẽr-fēr'ĕns), n. 1, opposition; obstruction; objection or hindrance; 2, the act of meddling in another person's affairs: Phys., the effect produced when two or more vibrations or trains of waves are superposed so as to



INTERFERENCE

In A and B, the vibrations are in the same phase and reënforce each other, producing, at A + B, vibrations of double magnitude; in A^1 and B^1, the vibrations are of opposite phase and neutralize each other, so that there is no resultant vibration, represented by $A^1 + B^1$.

strengthen or to neutralize one another, the magnitude of the effect depending on the relative phases of the components, being greatest when all are in the same phase; Rad., the overlapping or intermixing of electric waves from different sending stations, or from atmospheric or other disturbances, resulting in confusion or unintelligibility at receiving stations.—adj. in"ter-fe-ren'tial.

in-ter-fer-om-e-ter (ĭn"tẽr-fẽr-ŏm'ẽ-tẽr), n. [interfere + ²*meter*], Phys., an instrument for measuring minute distances by observing the interference of two rays of light.

in-ter-fold (ĭn"tẽr-fōld'), v.t. [inter- + fold], to fold, as the hands, one with the other.

in-ter-fuse (ĭn"tẽr-fūz'), v.t. [inter- + fuse], 1, to cause to flow together; 2, to cause to blend; 3, to spread through; pervade.—n. in"ter-fu'sion.

in-ter-gra-da-tion (ĭn"tẽr-grā-dā'shŭn), n. [inter- + grade], arrangement in a series of forms or kinds which differ very slightly from one another.—n. in'ter-grade".—v.i. in"ter-grade'.

in-ter-im (ĭn"tẽr-ĭm), n. [Lat. = meanwhile], an intervening time or period:—adj. temporary.

in-te-ri-or (ĭn-tē'rĭ-ẽr), adj. [Lat., compar. of inter, between], 1, inner; internal; 2, far from the coast or frontier:—n. 1, the inside; 2, the inland part of a country; 3, the inside of a room or building, or a view of such an interior; 4, the internal, or home, affairs of a country; also, the government department dealing with home affairs.—adv. in-te'ri-or-ly.

in-ter-ja-cent (ĭn"tẽr-jā'sĕnt), adj. [< Lat. interjacens (-entis) < inter, between + jacēre, to lie], lying between.—n. in"ter-ja'cence.

in-ter-ject (ĭn"tẽr-jĕkt'), v.t. [< Lat. interjicere (-jectus) < inter, between + jacere, to throw], to insert; throw in; interpose:—v.i. to interpose a remark or expression.—adj. in"ter-jec'to-ry.

in-ter-jec-tion (ĭn"tẽr-jĕk'shŭn), n. 1, exclamation; ejaculation; 2, the act of exclaiming: Gram., a word thrown in without grammatical connection, to express sudden emotion, feeling, etc.—adj. in"ter-jec'tion-al.—adv. in"ter-jec'tion-al-ly.

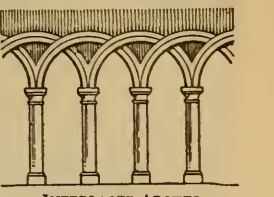
in-ter-lace (ĭn"tẽr-lās'), v.t. [inter- + lace], 1, to join or unite by weaving or lacing together; interweave; 2, to intermingle; intersperse:—v.i. to lace two things together; interweave.



INTERLACED ARCHES

in-ter-lard (ĭn"tẽr-lärd'), v.t. [< Fr. entrelarder < entre, between + larder < lard, fat], to mix; vary by mingling with something different; diversify; intermingle; as, to interlard a serious talk with jests.

in-ter-lay (ĭn"tẽr-lā'), v.t. [inter- + ³*lay*], to put or lay between or among.

in-ter-leaf (ĭn'tẽr-lēf"), n. [pl. -leaves (-lēvz")], [inter- + leaf], a leaf set in between other leaves of a book, as for additions, notes, etc.

in-ter-leave (ĭn"tẽr-lēv'), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -leaved (-lēvd'), p.pr. -leaving], to insert a leaf in; as, to interleave a book with illustrations.

¹in-ter-line (ĭn"tẽr-līn'), v.t. [inter- + ¹*line*], to write in, or insert, between the lines of (anything written or printed).—n. in"ter-lin'ing.

²in-ter-line (ĭn"tẽr-līn'), v.t. [inter- + ²*line*], to fit with an extra lining beneath the ordinary one: said of a garment.—n. in'ter-lin"ing.

in-ter-lin-e-ar (ĭn"tẽr-lĭn'ē-ẽr), adj. [see ¹interline], 1, written or printed between other lines, as a translation; 2, having matter written or printed between lines; 3, having the same text in different languages in alternate lines.

in-ter-lin-e-a-tion (ĭn"tẽr-lĭn"ē-ā'shŭn), n. 1, the act of writing or printing lines between other lines; interlining; 2, that which is written or printed between other lines.

in-ter-link (ĭn"tẽr-lĭngk'), v.t. [inter- + link], to link to another or to one another.

in-ter-lock (ĭn"tẽr-lŏk'), v.t. [inter- + ²*lock*], to fasten together by linking or engaging with one another:—v.i. to unite with one another by locking or overlapping.

in-ter-lo-cu-tion (ĭn"tẽr-lō-kū'shŭn), n. [< Lat. inter, between + loquor (locutus), to speak], interchange of speech; conversation.

in-ter-loc-u-tor (ĭn"tẽr-lŏk'ū-tẽr), n. 1, one who takes part in a conversation; a questioner; an interpreter; 2, in a minstrel troupe, the middle man who questions the end men.—n. fem., in"ter-loc'u-tress; in"ter-loc'u-trice; in"ter-loc'u-trix.

in-ter-loc-u-to-ry (ĭn"tẽr-lŏk'ū-tō-rĭ), adj. 1, conversational; 2, introduced between the parts of a conversation: Law, not final; made or done during the process of an action.

in-ter-lope (ĭn"tẽr-lōp'), v.i. [p.t. and p.p. -loped (-lōpt'), p.pr. -loping], [inter- + lope, dial. form of leap], 1, originally, to trade without a license; 2, hence, to meddle; intrude.

in-ter-lop-er (ĭn'tẽr-lōp"ẽr), n. 1, originally, an unlawful trader; 2, hence, one who intrudes or thrusts himself into the affairs of others; one who interferes officiously.

in-ter-lude (ĭn'tẽr-lūd), n. [< L.L. interludium < Lat. inter, between + ludus, play], 1, a short, usually farcical, entertainment given between acts of a play: especially popular prior to the time of Shakespeare; 2, a short passage of music played between the stanzas of a song or hymn, between the acts of an opera, etc.; also, such a passage played independently; 3, any interval of time or space between events.

in-ter-lu-nar (ĭn"tẽr-lū'nẽr), adj. [< Lat. inter, between + luna, moon], of or pertaining to the time elapsing between the old and the new moon. Also, in"ter-lu'nar-y.

in-ter-mar-riage (ĭn"tẽr-măr'ĭj), n. [see intermarry], 1, connection by marriage, as between families, races, and castes; 2, marriage between persons nearly related.

in-ter-mar-ry (ĭn"tẽr-măr'ĭ), v.i. [inter- + marry], to become related by marriage between members: said of families, tribes, sects, etc.

in-ter-med-dle (ĭn"tẽr-mĕd'l), v.i. [inter- + meddle], to interfere officiously or unduly in other people's affairs.—n. in"ter-med'dler.

in-ter-me-di-a-ry (ĭn"tẽr-mē'dĭ-ā-rĭ), adj. [see intermediate], 1, situated or coming between; 2, acting as a mediating agent:—n. [pl. -ries (-rĭz)], an agent; go-between; means.

in-ter-me-di-ate (In″tĕr-mē′dĭ-āt), adj. [inter- + mediate], existing or lying in the middle; coming between:—n. 1, that which lies between; 2, a go-between: Chem., a compound formed as an intermediate stage in manufacturing a finished product; especially, any of many such coal-tar products. —adv. in″ter-me′di-ate-ly.—n. in″ter-me″di-a′tion.

in-ter-ment (In-tûr′mĕnt), n. [see inter], the act or ceremony of burying; burial.

in-ter-mez-zo (In″tĕr-mĕd′zō), n. [pl. -mezzi (-zē)], [It., corr. of intermedio < Lat. intermedius, middle], a short, bright piece of music, or ballet, performed between the acts of a play: Mus., an interlude; a short, light composition inserted between the parts of a larger work, as between the acts of an opera; also, such a piece played independently.

in-ter-mi-na-ble (In-tûr′mĭ-nȧ-bl), adj. [< interminate], endless; boundless; immeasurable.—adv. in-ter′mi-na-bly.

Syn. infinite, limitless, boundless. (See eternal.)

in-ter-min-gle (In″tĕr-mĭng′gl), v.t. [inter- + mingle], to mix together; join together:—v.i. to intermix; become combined.

in-ter-mis-sion (In″tĕr-mĭsh′ŭn), n. [see intermit], 1, a short or temporary break; interruption; 2, an interval of time between two parts, as acts of a play.—adj. in″ter-mis′sive.

in-ter-mit (In″tĕr-mĭt′), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -mitted, p.pr. -mitting], [< Lat. inter, between + mittere (missus), to send], to stop for a time; discontinue; interrupt; delay temporarily.

in-ter-mit-tent (In″tĕr-mĭt′ĕnt), adj. more or less continuous, but with interruptions; periodic; recurrent.—adv. in″ter-mit′tent-ly. —n. in″ter-mit′tence; in″ter-mit′ten-cy.

in-ter-mix (In″tĕr-mĭks′), v.t. and v.i. [inter- + mix], to combine; mingle; mix.

in-ter-mix-ture (In″tĕr-mĭks′tûr), n. 1, the act of mingling together; 2, a quantity or mass of ingredients mingled together; a mixture; 3, something added to a mass.

in-tern (In-tûrn′), v.t. [< Fr. interner < Lat. internus, internal], to confine within fixed limits, as citizens of an enemy country or ships in a neutral port, in war time:—n. an inmate, as of a school; especially, a recently graduated physician or surgeon resident in a hospital: usually, interne.—n. in-tern′ment.

in-ter-nal (In-tûr′nȧl), adj. [< Lat. internus, within], 1, belonging to the center or inside; interior; inward: opposite of external; 2, not foreign; domestic; 3, inherent; intrinsic; 4, subjective; pertaining to the mind or soul; 5, to be taken inwardly: said of medicine.—adv. in-ter′nal-ly.—n. in″ter-nal′i-ty.

in-ter-nal com-bus-tion Mech., the process by which power is generated within an engine cylinder, or cylinders, by the explosion of a mixture of air and a fuel, such as vaporized gasoline (for illus. see gas engine): distinguished from the process represented by the steam engine, in which the power is derived and the pressure is generated from the combustion of fuel outside the engine cylinder.—adj. in-ter′nal-com-bus′tion.

in-ter-na-tion-al (In″tĕr-năsh′ŭn-ăl), [inter- + nation], n. a person connected with more than one nation, as a naturalized citizen; also, one who takes part in an international contest: Third International, an international organization of communistic socialists founded at Moscow in March, 1919:—adj. pertaining to, or carried on between, two or more nations or their people.—adv. in″ter-na′tion-al-ly. —v.t. in″ter-na′tion-al-ize.

In-ter-na-tio-nale (ăn″tăr″nä″syō″nȧl′), n. [Fr.], a communistic hymn sung first by French socialists and, later, by others.

in-ter-na-tion-al-ism (In″tĕr-năsh′ŭn-ăl-ĭzm), n. [see international], 1, the fact or state of being attached by sentiment to more than one nation; 2, organized action, as by the trade-unions of different countries, for the advancement of the working classes as a world group; 3, the political philosophy which stresses the solidarity and mutual dependence of all nations, and offers a theoretical foundation for world peace.—n. in″ter-na′tion-al-ist.

in-terne (In-tûrn′), n. [see intern], an inmate, as of a school; especially, a recently graduated physician or surgeon resident in a hospital: also, intern: Poet., the inner part; interior.

in-ter-ne-cine (In″tĕr-nē′sĭn; -sīn), adj. [< Lat. inter, between + necare, to kill], 1, deadly; killing; 2, destructive of one another.

in-tern-ist (In-tûr′nĭst), n. [see intern], a physician as distinguished from a surgeon: one who specializes in the treatment of diseases whose principal seat is within the body, as by drugs, diet, etc.

in-ter-node (In′tĕr-nōd″), n. [inter- + node], Anat., the space lying between two nodes, or swellings, found on nerves; Bot., the part of the stem of a plant which intervenes between the nodes, or points from which the leaves spring.—adj. in″ter-nod′al.

In., internode. N., N., nodes;

in-ter nos (In′tĕr nōs), [Lat. = between us], between ourselves; between you and me.

in-ter-nun-ci-o (In″tĕr-nŭn′shĭ-ō), n. [pl. -clos (-ōz)], [< It. internunzio < Lat. inter, between + nuntius, messenger], 1, a messenger from one party to another; an intermediary; 2, a papal representative at a court where no nuncio, or ambassador, is located.

in-ter-pel-late (In″tĕr-pĕl′āt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -pellated, p.pr. -pellating], [< Lat. interpellare (-atus), to interrupt < inter, between + pellere, to drive], to question formally: interrogate.—n. in″ter-pel-la′tion (-pĕ-lā′shŭn).

in-ter-pen-e-trate (In″tĕr-pĕn′ē-trāt), v.t. [inter- + penetrate], to pass into all parts of, and throughout:—v.i. to pervade each other.

in-ter-plan-et-a-ry (In″tĕr-plăn′ĕt-ā-rĭ), adj. [inter- + planet], Astron., situated between the planets; within the solar system.

in-ter-play (In′tĕr-plā″), n. [inter- + play], mutual action; interchange of action or influence; interaction, as of the parts of a machine.

in-ter-plead (In″tĕr-plēd′), v.i. [inter- + plead], Law, to litigate with each other to decide the claim to title to goods or rights, as two parties having the same claim against a third party.

in-ter-plead-er (In″tĕr-plēd′ĕr), n. Law, a proceeding by which a party against whom two others bring the same claim may compel them to settle between themselves the right to claim title.

in-ter-po-late (In-tûr′pō-lāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -lated, p.pr. -lating], [< Lat. interpolare, to polish, dress up < inter, between + polire, to polish], 1, to insert (new or unauthorized matter) into a book or writing; 2, to insert between other things or parts, as in a series in mathematics; 3, to intervene; insert.—n. in-ter′po-la″tor (-tĕr).

in-ter-po-la-tion (In-tûr″pō-lā′shŭn), n. 1, anything inserted, as in a text; especially, anything spurious; 2, the act of inserting.

in-ter-pose (In″tĕr-pōz′), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -posed (-pōzd′), p.pr. -posing], [< Lat. inter, between + pausare, to cease: see ¹pose], 1, to place or set between; 2, to thrust in; put forth in order to interfere or to mediate; 3, to introduce (a remark, opinion) in the midst of a conversation:—v.i. 1, to be between; 2, to mediate; come between parties in a dispute; 3, to interrupt by making a remark.—n. in″ter-pos′er.

Syn. intercede, arbitrate, intermeddle, intervene.

in-ter-po-si-tion (In″tĕr-pō-zĭsh′ŭn), n. [< Lat. inter, between + ponere (positus), to place], 1, the act of coming between, interrupting, or mediating; 2, that which is interjected.

in-ter-pret (In-tûr′prĕt), v.t. [< Lat. interpretari (-atus), to explain], 1, to explain the meaning of; elucidate; translate orally; 2, to bring out the meaning or significance of, by means of musical rendering, stage portrayal, or the like; as, Patti's interpretation of Lucia, or Booth's of Hamlet; 3, to regard from one's own viewpoint; construe:—v.i. to act as a translator or interpreter.

Syn. explain, solve, unfold, elucidate, decipher, construe. To interpret is to give the meaning of the language of one country or period in the language of another; or to explain in familiar terms that which is obscurely worded; or to bring out the meaning either by artistic presentation or sympathetic understanding; as, to interpret a dream will make it intelligible; to interpret a character on the stage is to render it so that it lives to the audience; to interpret the testimony of a foreign-speaking witness is to give it in our native tongue. To construe, as here compared, is to interpret in the light of certain circumstances which reveal motives, give sense to, or otherwise explain a particular situation; as, his silence was construed as consent. To explain is to clear up that which is not understood, is misunderstood, or is obscure; to explain is to make known meanings, account for conduct, make motives intelligible, solve difficulties; as, to explain how to operate a radio set; to explain why we voted for So-and-So. To elucidate is to explain, especially by throwing light on, as by apt illustration, revealing comparison, or the like.

in-ter-pre-ta-tion (In-tûr″prĕ-tā′shŭn), n. 1, the act of explaining the meaning or significance of something; 2, explanation; translation; 3, the expression, by an artist or actor, of his conception of a subject, as of a landscape or a character.

in-ter-pre-ta-tive (ĭn-tûr'prē-tā-tĭv), adj. 1, explanatory; intended or serving to explain or translate; 2, deducible by interpretation or interference.—adv. in-ter'pre-ta-tive-ly.

in-ter-pret-er (ĭn-tûr'prĕt-ẽr), n. 1, one who explains; 2, one who translates orally the words of persons conversing in different languages: Obs., an expounder of the principles of law or religion.

in-ter-reg-num (ĭn"tẽr-rĕg'nŭm), n. [Lat. < inter, between + regnum, reign], 1, the interval between two reigns, governments, etc.; 2, a break in a continuous period or series of events.

in-ter-re-lat-ed (ĭn"tẽr-rẽ-lāt'ĕd), adj. [inter- + relate], having a mutual connection; correlative; reciprocal.

in-ter-re-la-tion (ĭn"tẽr-rẽ-lā'shŭn), n. mutual connection; correlation.

in-ter-ro-gate (ĭn-tẽr'ō-gāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -gated, p.pr. -gating], [< Lat. inter, among + rogare (-atus), to ask], to question; examine by asking questions:—v.i. to ask questions.

Syn. ask, inquire, search, examine. (See question.)

in-ter-ro-ga-tion (ĭn-tẽr"ō-gā'shŭn), n. 1, the act of asking questions; 2, a question; inquiry; 3, a sign [?] indicating a question: also called interrogation point and question mark.

in-ter-rog-a-tive (ĭn"tẽ-rŏg'ā-tĭv), adj. indicating, or containing, a question or inquiry:—n. Gram., a word used in directing a question, as why, where, who, etc.—adv. in"ter-rog'a-tive-ly.

in-ter-ro-ga-tor (ĭn-tẽr'ō-gā"tẽr), n. one who asks questions; a questioner.

in-ter-rog-a-to-ry (ĭn"tẽ-rŏg'ā-tō-rĭ), adj. containing, or expressing, a question:—n. [pl. -ries (-rĭz)], a question: Law, a question, or series of questions, formally put in writing to a witness, to be used as evidence in a case.

in-ter-rupt (ĭn"tẽ-rŭpt'), v.t. [< Lat. inter, between + rumpere (ruptus), to break], 1, to stop or hinder by breaking in upon; 2, to obstruct; 3, to cause to stop; end suddenly:—v.i. 1, to break into a conversation or sentence; 2, to interfere with an action.

in-ter-rupt-er (ĭn"tẽ-rŭp'tẽr), n. one who or that which interrupts: Elec., a device for intermittently opening and closing the primary circuit of an induction coil. Also, in"ter-rup'tor.

in-ter-rup-tion (ĭn"tẽ-rŭp'shŭn), n. 1, the state of being broken in upon, or the act of breaking in upon something, as a conversation; 2, a hindrance; something that blocks progress or breaks in upon speech, action, etc.; 3, a sudden ceasing.

Syn. discontinuance, break, hindrance, intervention.

in-ter-scho-las-tic (ĭn"tẽr-skō-lăs'tĭk), adj. [inter- + scholastic], between schools; as, an interscholastic football game.

in-ter-sect (ĭn"tẽr-sĕkt'), v.t. [< Lat. inter, between + secare (sectus), to cut], to cut across, as one line another:—v.i. to cross each other.

in-ter-sec-tion (ĭn"tẽr-sĕk'shŭn), n. 1, the act of dividing by cutting across; 2, the place of crossing: Geom., the place where two lines or two surfaces meet or cut each other.

in-ter-space (ĭn"tẽr-spās"), v.t. [inter- + space], 1, to break up with intervals or distances; 2, to fill up intervals or distances between:—n. (ĭn'tẽr-spās"), an interval or distance between objects.

in-ter-sperse (ĭn"tẽr-spûrs'), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -spersed (-spûrst'), p.pr. -spersing], [< Lat. inter, among + spargere (sparsus), to scatter], 1, to vary by alternation or contrast; as, grassland interspersed with trees; a reading interspersed with comment; 2, to scatter about; as, to intersperse flowers in a garden.—n. in"ter-sper'sion.

in-ter-state (ĭn'tẽr-stāt"), adj. [inter- + state], including, or existing between, different states or their inhabitants: Interstate Commerce Commission, a commission appointed by the President to investigate and regulate common carriers, as railroads, doing business between States, with a view of preventing unfair discrimination in rates, illegal combinations, etc.

in-ter-stel-lar (ĭn"tẽr-stĕl'ẽr), adj. [< Lat. inter, among + stella, star], pertaining to, or situated in, space among the stars.

in-ter-stice (ĭn-tûr'stĭs), n. [pl. -stices (-stĭ-sĕz)], [< Lat. inter, between + sistere (-stitus), to stand], a narrow space between things closely set; a crevice.—adj. in"ter-sti'tial (ĭn"tẽr-stĭsh'ăl).

in-ter-tex-ture (ĭn"tẽr-tĕks'tûr), n. [inter- + texture], 1, the art or act of weaving one thing into another; 2, the condition of being woven in with something else; also, that which is so woven.

in-ter-twine (ĭn"tẽr-twīn'), v.t. [inter- + twine], to twist with one another; wind or coil together:—v.i. to become wound or coiled together.

in-ter-ur-ban (ĭn"tẽr-ûr'băn), adj. [< Lat. inter, between + urbs, city], between or among cities or towns; as, an interurban railroad.

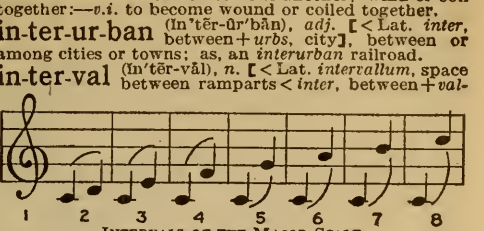
in-ter-val (ĭn'tẽr-văl), n. [< Lat. intervallum, space between ramparts < inter, between + vallum, rampart], 1, the time intervening between two events or periods, or between recurrences of similar states; 2, a space between objects; 3, the distance between persons or things with regard to quality, state, etc.: Mus., the difference in pitch between two tones; as, the interval from C to E is a third; the relation of two tones with regard to pitch: harmonic interval, two tones sounded simultaneously, or as a chord: melodic interval, two consecutive tones, as in a melody.



INTERVALS OF THE MAJOR SCALE

1, G, or treble, clef; 2, second; 3, third; 4, fourth; 5, fifth; 6, sixth; 7, seventh; 8, octave.

in-ter-vale (ĭn'tẽr-vāl), n. [inter- + vale], in the United States, a low, flat section of country lying between two lines of mountains or hills, or on either side of a river or stream.

in-ter-vene (ĭn"tẽr-vēn'), v.i. [p.t. and p.p. -vened (-vēnd'), p.pr. -vening], [< Lat. inter, between + venire (ventus), to come], 1, to come in from outside, as a force to influence action; interpose; come between, intercede, or interfere; 2, to occur in the meantime; elapse, as time: Law, to become a party, by leave of court, to a legal proceeding between two other parties, as for the protection of an interest therein.—n. in"ter-ven'er.—adj. in"ter-ven'ient.

in-ter-ven-tion (ĭn"tẽr-vĕn'shŭn), n. the act of coming between for any purpose; the act of interfering: Law, the act of entering, by leave of court, a legal proceeding and becoming a party to it.

in-ter-view (ĭn'tẽr-vū), n. [< Fr. entrevue < s'entrevoir, interview < entre, between + voir, to see], 1, a personal conference or meeting; 2, in journalism, the act of conversing with, or being questioned by, a reporter; also, the published account of such a conversation:—v.t. to question, especially in order to obtain information for the press.—n. in'ter-view"er.

in-ter-weave (ĭn"tẽr-wēv'), v.t. [inter- + weave], 1, to weave together; twist or twine together; 2, to intermingle; as, to interweave prose and poetry:—v.i. to become twisted together.

in-tes-ta-cy (ĭn-tĕs'tă-sĭ), n. [see intestate], the state of dying without a will.

in-tes-tate (ĭn-tĕs'tāt), adj. [< Lat. in- not + testari (-atus), to make a will], 1, not having made a will; as, to die intestate; 2, not lawfully bequeathed or disposed of by will; as, an intestate piece of property:—n. one who dies without having made a valid will.

in-tes-ti-nal (ĭn-tĕs'tĭ-năl), adj. [see intestine], pertaining to, or found in, the bowels.—adv. in-tes'ti-nal-ly.

in-tes-tine (ĭn-tĕs'tĭn), adj. [< Lat. intestinus internal < intus, within], 1, within the state or country; not foreign; as, an intestine war; 2, pertaining to what is inward or within:—n. the lower part of the alimentary canal extending from the stomach to the anus; the bowels: usually pl.

HUMAN STOMACH AND SMALL AND LARGE INTESTINES

S., stomach; Py., pylorus; D., duodenum; A.c., ascending colon; C., cæcum; A., vermiform appendix; Il., ileum; R., rectum; D.c., descending colon; J., jejunum; T.c., transverse colon; E., lower end of esophagus.

in-thrall (In-thrôl'), v.t. [see enthrall], to enslave. See en-thrall', Pfd. S.

in-throne (In-thrōn'), v.t. [see enthrone], to place on a seat of power; invest with the power of a sovereign. See en-throne', Pfd. S.

in-ti-ma-cy (In'tĭ-mă-sĭ), n. [pl. -cies (-sĭz)], [see intimate], confidential fellowship.

in-ti-mate (In'tĭ-māt), adj. [< L.L. intimare (-atus), to hint, make known < intimus, inmost], 1, pertaining to the inward nature of anything; intrinsic; as, intimate principles; 2, close in friendship; well acquainted; familiar; confidential; 3, resulting from close investigation or constant study; as, an intimate knowledge of art; 4, close in position or connection:—n. a close friend:—v.t. (In'tĭ-māt), [p.t. and p.p. -mated, p.pr. -mating], 1, to make known indirectly; imply; hint; 2, to announce.—adv. in'ti-mate-ly.

Syn., v. hint, suggest, insinuate, allude, imply.

in-ti-ma-tion (In'tĭ-mā'shŭn), n. 1, the act of announcing directly or indirectly; 2, an indirect hint; 3, a formal announcement.

in-tim-i-date (In-tĭm'ĭ-dāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -dated, p.pr. -dating], [< L.L. intimidare (-atus), to make timid < Lat. in, into + timidus, timid], to make afraid; overawe, especially by threats.—n. in-tim'i-da"tor (-tēr).

in-tim-i-da-tion (In-tĭm"ĭ-dā'shŭn), n. 1, the act of overawing by threats; 2, the state of being overawed by threats.

in-ti-tle (In-tī'tl), v.t. [see entitle], 1, to give a name to; 2, to dignify by a name or designation; 3, to give a right to. See en-ti'tle, Pfd. S.

in-tit-ule (In-tĭt'ūl), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -uled (-ūld), p.pr. -uling], [< O.F. intituler < L.L. intitulare < Lat. in, in + titulus, title], to give a title to, as a book, an act of legislature, or the like.

in-to (In'tōō), prep. [in + to], 1, to the inside of: designating motion or direction inward; as, come into the room; look into the matter; 2, to the condition of: designating change from one thing or state to another: Math., with goes understood, an expression of division; as, 2 into 6, 3 times; 2, multiplied by; as, 2 into 6 equals 12.

in-tol-er-a-ble (In-tŏl'ĕr-ă-bl), adj. [< Lat. in-, not + tolerare, to bear], unbearable; not to be endured, as heat.—n. in-tol'er-a-ble-ness.—adv. in-tol'er-a-bly.—n. in-tol"er-a-bil'i-ty.

in-tol-er-ance (In-tŏl'ĕr-ăns), n. 1, unwillingness to permit others to follow their own opinions and beliefs, especially in matters of religion and morals; 2, inability to bear or endure; as, intolerance of extreme cold.—n. in-tol'er-an-cy.

in-tol-er-ant (In-tŏl'ĕr-ănt), adj. 1, not allowing difference of opinion or belief to others, especially in religious matters; 2, unable to bear or endure: used with of; as, to be intolerant of pain.—adv. in-tol'er-ant-ly.

in-tomb (In-tōōm'), v.t. [see entomb], to bury; inter. See en-tomb', Pfd. S.

in-to-nate (In'tō-nāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -nated, p.pr. -nating], [< Lat. intonare (-atus) < in, in + tonus, a tone], 1, to read or recite in a rhythmic, musical tone, as in reading the church service; 2, to speak with the singing voice.

in-to-na-tion (In"tō-nā'shŭn), n. the modulation of the speaking voice: Mus., 1, the chanting of a plain song or psalm tone; 2, the singing of the opening phrase of a hymn by a precentor or leader, to be followed by congregational or group singing; 3, loosely, singing or playing in tune.

in-tone (In-tōn'), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. intoned (-tōnd'), p.pr. intoning], to recite in a singing tone; utter in a monotone; chant, as a church service:—v.i. to chant; recite in singing tones or in a monotone.

in-tox-i-cant (In-tŏk'sĭ-kănt), n. [see intoxicate], 1, that which makes drunk, as alcohol; 2, anything that elates or excites.

in-tox-i-cate (In-tŏk'sĭ-kāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -cated, p.pr. -cating], [< L.L. intoxicare, to smear with poison < Lat. in, on + toxicum, poison < Gk. toxikon < toxa, (poisoned) arrows], 1, to make drunk, as by alcoholic liquors; 2, to excite or stimulate exceedingly; as, pleasure intoxicates one: Med., to poison:—v.i. to cause or produce drunkenness or excessive stimulation.—p.adj. in-tox'i-cat"ing.

in-tox-i-ca-tion (In-tŏk"sĭ-kā'shŭn), n. 1, the act of making drunk; 2, the state of being drunk; 3, great excitement. Med., poisoning.

in-tra- prefix, [Lat. = inside], within; inside; as, *intra*mural.

in-trac-ta-ble (In-trăk'tă-bl), adj. [< Lat. in-, not + trahere (tractus), to draw], 1, ungovernable; unruly; unmanageable; as, an intractable horse; 2, not easy to work, treat, or control; as, intractable metal.—n. in-trac'ta-ble-ness.—adv. in-trac'ta-bly.—n. in-trac"ta-bil'i-ty.

Syn. froward, disobedient, perverse, unruly.

in-trac-tile (In-trăk'tĭl), adj. incapable of being drawn or spun out, as bismuth.

in-tra-dos (In-trā'dŏs), n. [Fr. < Lat. intra, within + dorsum, back], Arch., the under surface or curve of an arch or vault (see extrados, illus.).

in-tra-mu-ral (In"trā-mū'răl), adj. [< Lat. intra, within + murus, a wall], entirely within the limits of a building, university, city, etc.; as, an intramural railway; intramural sports: Anat., within the walls of an organ.

intrans. abbr. intransitive (also, int.):—in trans. [Lat. in transitu], on the way.

in-tran-si-gent (In-trăn'sĭ-jĕnt), adj. [< Fr. intransigeant < Sp. (los) intransigentes, extreme republicans < Lat. in-, not + transigere, to come to an understanding], not reconcilable; uncompromising: used of an extreme political party, especially a party of radicals:—n. 1, originally, a member of a Spanish revolutionary party in 1873; 2, in France, an extreme radical; hence, 3, any extreme radical.

in-tran-si-tive (In-trăn'sĭ-tĭv), adj. [< Lat. in-, not + trans, across + ire (itus), to go], Gram., not carrying action over to a receiver; permitting of no object because expressing action not received: said of certain verbs; as, he runs; he laughed.—adv. in-tran'si-tive-ly.

in-trench (In-trĕnch'), v.t. [in- + trench], 1, to make hollows or furrows in: 2, to surround with a ditch; fortify or defend with a ditch:—v.i. to encroach; intrude; take possession; as, to intrench upon the rights of others. Also, en-trench'.

in-trench-ment (In-trĕnch'-mĕnt), n. a long, narrow ditch in the earth: Mil., a defensive work consisting of ditches with walls of earth thrown up as a shield against the fire of the enemy. Also, en-trench'ment.

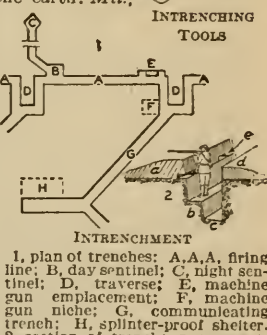
INTRENCHING TOOLS



INTRENCHMENT

1, plan of trenches: A,A,A, firing line; B, day sentinel; C, night sentinel; D, traverse; E, machine gun emplacement; F, machine gun niche; G, communicating trench; H, splinter-proof shelter. 2, section of trench: a, rampart; b, banquette; c, bottom of trench, lower at the back for drainage; d, embankment for protection from shrapnel; e, niche for extra rounds of ammunition.

in-trep-id (In-trĕp'-ĭd), adj. [< Lat. in-, not + trepidus, alarmed], bold; fearless; brave; daring.—adv. in-trep'id-ly.

Syn. gallant, dauntless, courageous.

in-tre-pid-i-ty (In"trĕ-pĭd'ĭ-tĭ), n. fearlessness; valor; coolness in danger.

Syn. (see bravery).

in-tri-ca-cy (In'trĭ-kă-sĭ), n. [pl. -cies (-sĭz)], [see intricate], 1, the condition of being intricate, or entangled or complicated; 2, that which is entangled or involved.

in-tri-cate (In'trĭ-kât), adj. [< Lat. intricare (-atus) < in, in + tricae, tricks], exceedingly entangled; involved; perplexing; complicated; as, an intricate plot in a story.—adv. in'tri-cate-ly.

Syn. difficult, complex, involved, obscure.

in-tri-gant (In'trĭ-gănt; ăn"trē'gäN'), n. [pl. -gants (-gănts'; -gäN'), [Fr. < intriguer, to plot], one who carries on a secret plot or love affair. Also, in'tri-guant.—n. fem. in"tri-gante' (In"trĭ-gănt'; ăn"trē'gäNt'), [pl -gantes (-gănts'; -gäNt')]; in"tri-guante'.

in-trigue (In-trēg'), v.i. [p.t. and p.p. intrigued (-trēgd'), p.pr. intriguing], [< Fr. intriguer < Lat. intrigare, to plot], 1, to carry on a secret plot; 2, to engage in secret love affairs:—v.t. 1, to bring about by secret plotting; 2, to interest keenly:—n. (In-trēg'; In'trēg), 1, secret plotting or scheming; 2, a secret or involved plot; a conspiracy; 3, the plot of a play or story; 4, a secret love affair.—n. in-tri'guer.

in-trin-sic (In-trĭn'sĭk), adj. [< Fr. intrinsèque < L.L. intrinsecus, on the inside < intra, within + secus, by, beside], 1, pertaining to the very nature of a thing; inherent; real; true: opposite of extrinsic; 2, being within; intimate.—adv. in-trin'si-cal-ly.

Syn. essential, innate, inbred. (See inherent.) in-tro-duce (In"trō-dūs'), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -duced p.pr. -ducing], [< Lat. intro, to the inside + ducere (ductus), to lead], 1, to conduct or bring in; 2, to bring into use or notice, as a style, a fad, or the like; 3, to make known, as one person to another; cause to become acquainted; 4, to put into something; insert; as, to introduce lime into the soil; 5, to give a first lesson in; as, to introduce the poerty of Keats; 6, to present in a formal manner, as a resolution; 7, to open; begin; as, a phrase introduces that sentence.

in-tro-duc-tion (in″trō-dŭk′shŭn), n. 1, the act of bringing into use or notice; 2, presentation, socially, of one person to another, of a speaker to his audience, of a young lady to society, or the like; 3, a preface, usually long and explanatory; Mus., 1, an opening movement of a larger musical form; 2, a group of measures leading into the main part of a composition.—abbr. introd.; intro.

in-tro-duc-to-ry (in″trō-dŭk′tō-rĭ), adj. serving to bring into notice or use; preliminary.—adj. in″tro-duc′tive.—abbr. introd.

in-tro-it (in′trō-ĭt), n. [< Lat. introitus, an entering < intro, to the inside + ire (itus), to go], Eccl., in liturgical churches, a chant or that part of the service sung before the celebration of the Eucharist.

in-tro-mis-sion (in″trō-mĭsh′ŭn), n. [see intromit], the act of inserting or introducing; admission.

in-tro-mit (in″trō-mĭt′), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -mitted, p.pr. -mitting], [< Lat. intro, to the inside + mittere (missus), to send], 1, to send or put in or inside; insert; introduce; 2, to permit to enter; let in; as, glass intromits light:—v.i. to intermeddle.

in-tro-spect (in″trō-spĕkt′), v.t. [< Lat. intro, to the inside + spectare, to look], to look into or within:—v.i. to look within oneself; examine one's own thoughts or feelings.

in-tro-spec-tion (in″trō-spĕk′shŭn), n. the act or process of examining one's own thoughts or feelings.

in-tro-spec-tive (in″trō-spĕk′tĭv), adj. pertaining to self-examination; inclined to look inward and search one's own thoughts and feelings. —adv. in″tro-spec′tive-ly.—n. in″tro-spec′tive-ness.

in-tro-ver-sion (in″trō-vûr′shŭn), n. [see introvert], 1, the act of looking into or within; 2, the act of turning inward.

in-tro-vert (in″trō-vûrt′), v.t. [< Lat. intro, to the inside + vertere (versus), to turn], to look into or within; introspect: Zoöl., to turn inward or within, as one part within another:—n. (in′trō-vûrt″), Psych., a person who habitually directs his attention to his own feelings, emotions, symptoms, etc.; one given to introspection, or self-examination: opposite of extrovert.

in-trude (in-trōōd′), v.i. [p.t. and p.p. intruded, p.pr. intruding], [< Lat. in, into + trudere (trusus), to thrust], to come in without invitation or welcome: often with on or upon:—v.t. to thrust or force in or upon: Obs., to invade.—n. in-trud′er.

in-tru-sion (in-trōō′zhŭn), n. the act of entering without invitation or welcome: Geol., the penetration of a rocky mass into another rock formation; also, the mass itself.

in-tru-sive (in-trōō′sĭv), adj. 1, inclined to enter without right or welcome; forward; 2, forced or thrust in, as a foreign substance or element. —adv. in-tru′sive-ly.—n. in-tru′sive-ness.

Syn. meddlesome, meddling, obtrusive, interfering, inquisitive, troublesome. (See officious.)

in-trust (in-trŭst′), v.t. [in- + trust], 1, to give into faithful keeping; confide; 2, to deliver or commit in trust to someone. Also, en-trust′.

in-tu-it (in′tū-ĭt; in-tū′ĭt), v.t. [< intuition], to perceive by immediate insight, or intuition.

in-tu-i-tion (in″tū-ĭsh′ŭn), n. [< L.L. intuitio (-onis) < Lat. in, into + tuĕri (tuitus), to look], 1, knowledge based on insight or spiritual perception rather than on reasoning; immediate insight; 2, that which is known immediately or without reasoning: Philos., instantaneous understanding or comprehension of a truth or rule of action.—adj. in″tu-i′tion-al.—adv. in″tu-i′tion-al-ly.

in-tu-i-tion-al-ism (in″tū-ĭsh′ŭn-ăl-ĭzm), n. Philos., the doctrine that absolute truth and absolute reality may be perceived by intuition.—n. in″tu-i′tion-al-ist.

in-tu-i-tion-ism (in″tū-ĭsh′ŭn-ĭzm), n. Philos., the doctrine that human knowledge is based on self-evident truths, intuitively recognized. —n. in″tu-i′tion-ist.

in-tu-i-tive (in-tū′ĭ-tĭv), adj. 1, known, or capable of knowing, by the mind without reasoning; 2, possessing, or acting by, instinctive knowledge or feeling.—adv. in-tu′i-tive-ly.—n. in-tu′i-tive-ness.

in-tu-mesce (in″tū-mĕs′), v.i. [p.t. and p.p. -mesced (-mĕst′), p.pr. -mescing], [< Lat. in, in + tumescere < tumēre, to swell], to swell; become larger; expand with heat.—n. in″tu-mes′cence (-mĕs′ĕns).—adj. in″tu-mes′cent (-ĕnt).

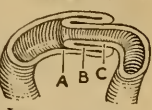
in-tus-sus-cep-tion (in″tŭs-sŭ-sĕp′shŭn), n. [< Lat. intus, within + susceptio < suscipere, to take up], 1, a receiving of one part within another; 2, a taking within: usually by absorption: Anat. and Surg., the entering of one part of the intestine within another; a telescoping of the bowel.



INTUSSUSCEPTION
A, sheath, or receiving section; B, C, returning and entering sections.

in-twine (in-twīn′), v.t. [see entwine], to wind around; interweave:—v.i. to become twisted together. Also, en-twine′, Pfd. S.

in-twist (in-twĭst′), v.t. [see entwist], to twine together. Also, en-twist′, Pfd. S.

in-u-lin (in′ū-lĭn), n. [< Lat. inula, name of a plant, probably elecampane], Chem., a horny, colorless, amorphous carbohydrate obtained from various roots, particularly the dahlia, chemically intermediate between a starch and a sugar and of greater sweetness than cane sugar: used in the preparation of diabetic foods and fructose.

in-un-date (in′ŭn-dāt; in-ŭn′-), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -dated, p.pr. -dating], [< Lat. in, upon + undare (-atus), to flow < unda, a wave], 1, to fill to overflowing; flood; 2, figuratively, to spread over.

in-un-da-tion (in″ŭn-dā′shŭn), n. 1, an overflow; flood; 2, a superabundance.

in-ure (in-ūr′), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. inured (-ūrd′), p.pr. inuring], [< [1]in- + obs. ure < Fr. œuvre, work < Lat. opera, works], to accustom; habituate: Obs., to put to use:—v.i. to come into use or operation; take or have effect.—n. in-ure′ment.

in-urn (in-ûrn′), v.t. [[1]in- + urn], to place in an urn, as ashes of the dead; hence, to bury.

in-u-til-i-ty (in″ū-tĭl′ĭ-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], [[2]in- + utility], 1, uselessness; 2, an unprofitable or useless thing.—adj. in-u′tile (-ū′tĭl).

inv. abbr. 1, [Lat. invenit], he, or she, invented (It); 2, invented; inventor; 3, invoice.

in-vade (in-vād′), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. invaded, p.pr. invading], [< Lat. in, into + radere (rasus), to go], 1, to enter (a country) with a hostile army; 2, to encroach on; infringe upon; violate; as, to invade the laws of a country; 3, to attack; affect seriously, as does disease: Obs., to enter:—v.i. to make an entrance into a country with a hostile army.—n. in-vad′er.

in-vag-i-nate (in-văj′ĭ-nāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -nated, p.pr. -nating], [< Lat. in, into + vagina, sheath], 1, to place or receive into, or as into, a sheath; 2, to cause to infold so that an outer portion, as of a hollow organ, is drawn back, or sheathed, within another portion.—n. in-vag″i-na′tion.

[1]in-val-id (in-văl′ĭd), adj. [< Lat. in-, not + ralidus, sound], of no force or authority; not valid: Law, not binding; null; without legal force; as, an invalid claim.

[2]in-va-lid (in′vă-lĭd; Br. in″vă-lēd′), n. [see [1]invalid], one who is weak or infirm in health; also, a disabled soldier or sailor:—adj. 1, sick; enfeebled by ill health; 2, adapted to the use of a sick person; as, an invalid chair:—v.t. 1, to affect with sickness; make weak; 2, to regard as sick; send away as sick, as from the army or navy.

in-val-i-date (in-văl′ĭ-dāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -dated, p.pr. -dating], to weaken or destroy the force or authority of: Law, to take away all binding force from.—n. in-val″i-da′tion.

in-va-lid-ism (in′vă-lĭd-ĭzm), n. [see [2]invalid], chronic illness or infirmity; the state of being a confirmed invalid.

in-va-lid-i-ty (in″vă-lĭd′ĭ-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], [see [1]invalid], want of legal force or strength; lack of validity; bodily weakness.

in-val-u-a-ble (in-văl′ū-ă-bl), adj. [[2]in- + value], priceless; exceedingly precious; valuable beyond estimation.—adv. in-val′u-a-bly.

in-var (in-vär′), n. [abbr. of invariable], Metal., an alloy steel containing 36 per cent nickel, remarkable for its low coefficient of expansion: used in scientific instruments, chronometers, etc.

in-va-ri-a-ble (in-vā′rĭ-ă-bl), adj. [[2]in- + vary], constant; uniform; unchanging; as, his invariable habit was to walk home.—n. in-va′ri-a-ble-ness.—adv. in-va′ri-a-bly.—n. in-va′ri-a-bil′i-ty.

Syn. permanent, continual, uniform, constant.

in-va-sion (in-vā′zhŭn), n. [see invade], 1, the act of entering a country with a hostile army; 2, encroachment; infringement; 3, an attack of anything injurious, as of a disease or epidemic.

in-va-sive (in-vā′sĭv), adj. of or pertaining to an invasion; aggressive; encroaching.

in-vect-ed (In-vĕk'tĕd), adj. [< Lat. invectus, carried in], Her., formed of, or bordered by, a serles of small convex arcs (for illus. see heraldry).

in-vec-tive (In-vĕk'tĭv), n. [< L.L. invectivus < Lat. in, against + vehere (vectus), to carry], a violent accusation or denunciation; hence, wordy abuse; vituperation:—adj. abusive.—adv. in-vec'tive-ly.

in-veigh (In-vā'), v.i. [< O.F. envoir, to attack < Lat. in, against + vehere (vectus), to carry], to speak violently and bitterly; utter blame or reproach: with against; as, a Congressman may inveigh against a proposed measure.—n. in-veigh'er.

in-vei-gle (In-vē'gl), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -gled (-gld), p.pr. -gling], [< 16th-cent. Eng. envegle, prob. < Fr. aveugler, to blind < Lat. ab, from + oculus, eye], to persuade by deception, flattery, etc.; lure; cajole.—n. in-vei'gle-ment.—n. in-vei'gler.

Syn. decoy, allure, entice, wheedle, seduce.

in-vent (In-vĕnt'), v.t. [< Lat. in, upon + venire (ventus), to come], 1, to create as a result of original study; originate; produce for the first time; as, to invent a machine; 2, to devise or contrive; fabricate; as, to invent a strange tale: Obs., to find; discover.

Syn. originate, devise, fabricate. (See discover.)

in-ven-tion (In-vĕn'shŭn), n. 1, the act or process of making for the first time, or originating; the doing or making of something in a new way; 2, the thing originated; a new device or contrivance, as a machine; 3, the quality by which one devises or produces anything for the first time, or finds a new method of doing something; 4, the act of producing by the imagination; fabrication; 5, that which is fabricated or made up, as a falsehood: Rhet., the choice and presentation of a theme or plot, or originality shown in its development; Mus., a short pianoforte piece written for the purpose of developing a single idea in two-part counterpoint through modulation in various keys: term invented by J. S. Bach: Archaic, a discovery.

in-ven-tive (In-vĕn'tĭv), adj. able to originate; clever at devising things, methods, or the like.—adv. in-ven'tive-ly.—n. in-ven'tive-ness.

in-ven-tor (In-vĕn'tĕr), n. one who contrives or devises something new, or who finds a new method; one who originates something, especially of a mechanical or scientific nature. Also, in-vent'er.

in-ven-to-ry (In'vĕn-tō"rĭ), n. [pl. -ries (-rĭz)], 1, a catalog or itemized list, as of books or furniture; specifically, the account of stock taken in a business; 2, things that are, or may be, included in such a list:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -ried (-rĭd), p.pr. -rying], 1, to draw up a list of (goods); 2, to place on such a list.—adj. in"ven-to'ri-al.—adv. in"ven-to'ri-al-ly.

in-verse (ĭn-vûrs'; ĭn'vûrs), adj. [< Lat. in, against + vertere (versus), to turn], opposite in tendency, direction, or effect; reversed; inverted: Math., opposite in nature and effect; as, subtraction is the inverse operation of addition; opposite; inverted; as, an inverse ratio:—n. the direct opposite; the contrary.—adv. in-verse'ly.

in-ver-sion (ĭn-vûr'shŭn), n. 1, the act of turning in the opposite direction; 2, the state of being turned in the opposite direction, inside out, or upside down; 3, any change of order or relative position: Gram., a change in the usual order of words in a sentence; Math., 1, the process of using an opposite rule of operation; 2, change in position of terms; Mus., the transposing of the tones of an interval or chord from their original order; as, in intervals, the placing of a lower note at its octave higher than a second note; also, the interval or chord resulting from such transposition; Chem., a rearrangement of molecular structure, as in sugars, whereby two new compounds are formed having opposite effects on the plane of polarization: sexual inversion, Psych., an abnormal condition in which the interests and reactions of an individual resemble those characteristic of the opposite sex.

in-vert (In-vûrt'), v.t. 1, to turn upside down, inside out, or in an opposite direction; 2, to reverse the meaning, order, or condition of: Mus., to reverse the positions of, as the upper and lower parts of an interval or two-part harmony:—n. (In'vûrt), Psych., one whose interests and reactions resemble those of the opposite sex: also called sexual invert.—adj. in-vert'i-ble.

in-vert-ase (In-vûr'tās), n. Chem., an enzyme present in ordinary yeast and in internal secretions, having the power to change cane sugar into glucose: also called invert sugar and invertin.

in-ver-te-brate (In-vûr'tĕ-brāt), n. [< Lat. in-, not + vertebra, joint of spine], Zoöl., an animal without a backbone or spinal column:—adj. 1, having no backbone; 2, having no force of character; weak; lacking in self-assertion.

in-vert-ed (In-vûr'tĕd), adj. [see invert], turned in an opposite position or turned upside down: inverted arch, an arch with its crown turned downward: used in the foundation work for floors of tunnels, sewers, and the like.

in-vest (In-vĕst'), v.t. [< Lat. in, upon + vestire, to clothe], 1, to array; dress; clothe: followed by in or with; 2, to clothe, as with office, authority, or dignity; 3, to furnish; endow, as with some quality or attribute: Mil., to surround; besiege; as, the armies invest the city; Com., to apply or lay out, as money or funds, for profit or income: with in; as, to invest $1,000 in stocks:—v.i. Com., to put money out for profit.

in-ves-ti-gate (In-vĕs'tĭ-gāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -gated, p.pr. -gating], [< Lat. in, into + vestigare (-atus), to track], to inquire carefully concerning; search; examine systematically; as, to investigate the cause of a disaster:—v.i. to pursue an inquiry.—adj. in-ves'ti-ga-ble.—n. in-ves'ti-ga"tor.

in-ves-ti-ga-tion (In-vĕs"tĭ-gā'shŭn), n. careful inquiry, search, or examination.

in-ves-ti-ture (In-vĕs'tĭ-tūr), n. [see invest], 1, a garment or covering; especially, an official cloak; hence, official insignia; 2, the receiving of the insignia of office; 3, the act or right of giving possession or of installing in office.

in-vest-ment (In-vĕst'mĕnt), n. 1, the act of clothing with something, as with the robes of office; 2, that in which one is clothed; a garment; also, any covering, as the external coating of an organism: Com., 1, the act of laying out money for the sake of profit; 2, money or capital so placed; 3, that in which money is invested; Mil., a siege; blockade: investment trust, an organization which receives in trust, and invests, funds placed in its care.

in-ves-tor (In-vĕs'tĕr), n. one who puts out money for profit; as, investors in railroad stock.

in-vet-er-a-cy (In-vĕt'ĕr-ā-sĭ), n. [see inveterate], the state of being firmly established, as a habit; long continuance; deep-rootedness.

in-vet-er-ate (In-vĕt'ĕr-āt), adj. [< Lat. in, in + veterare (-atus), to make old < vetus, old], 1, established a long time; deep-rooted; as, inveterate hatred; 2, habitual; confirmed in some fixed habit; as, an inveterate smoker: Obs., hostile; bitter; spiteful.—adv. in-vet'er-ate-ly.

in-vid-i-ous (ĭn-vĭd'ĭ-ŭs), adj. [< Lat. invidia, envy], likely to cause ill will or envy; unfairly discriminating; as, invidious comparisons: Obs., enviable.—adv. in-vid'i-ous-ly.—n. in-vid'i-ous-ness.

in-vig-or-ate (In-vĭg'ŏr-āt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -ated, p.pr. -ating], [< Lat. in, into + rigor, strength], to give vitality to; strengthen; animate; as, sea air invigorates the weak.—n. in-vig"or-a'tion.

Syn. refresh, stimulate, energize, exhilarate.

in-vin-ci-ble (In-vĭn'sĭ-bl), adj. [< Lat. in-, not + vincere, to conquer], not to be overcome or subdued; unconquerable.—n. in-vin'ci-ble-ness.—adv. in-vin'ci-bly.—n. in-vin"ci-bil'i-ty.

in-vi-o-la-ble (In-vī'ō-lā-bl), adj. [< Lat. in-, not + violare (-atus), to violate], 1, not to be profaned or injured, as a sanctuary; 2, to be kept unbroken, as a promise; also, incapable of being profaned, etc.—adv. in-vi'o-la-bly.—n. in-vi"o-la-bil'i-ty.

in-vi-o-late (In-vī'ō-lāt), adj. 1, uninjured; unbroken; 2, not defiled; pure; 3, inviolable. Also, in-vi'o-lat"ed.—adv. in-vi'o-late-ly.

in-vis-i-ble (In-vĭz'ĭ-bl), adj. [< Lat. in-, not + vidēre (risus), to see], not capable of being seen; beyond the reach of sight; not visible under certain conditions: invisible ink, ink that remains invisible on the paper until exposed to the action of heat, strong light, acid, etc.; sympathetic ink:—n. one who or that which cannot be seen.—n. in-vis'i-ble-ness.—adv. in-vis'i-bly.—n. in-vis"i-bil'i-ty.

in-vi-ta-tion (In"vĭ-tā'shŭn), n. [see invite], 1, the act of requesting a person to come to some place, or to do something; 2, the words or document by which the request is conveyed; 3, allurement.

in-vi-ta-to-ry (In-vī'tă-tō-rĭ), adj. of the nature of, or containing, a request:—n. [pl. -ries (-rĭz)], Eccl., a form of invitation used in worship, as a call to prayer or praise.

in-vite (In-vīt'), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. invited, p.pr. inviting], [< Fr. inviter < Lat. invitare (-atus), to invite], 1, to request courteously to go to some place or to do some act; request the presence of; 2, to tempt; attract; 3, to give opportunity for; draw on; as, to invite disease through neglect.—n. in-vit'er.

Syn. bid, summon, press, urge, allure. (See call.)

in-vit-ing (In-vīt'ĭng), p.adj. tempting; attractive; as, an inviting meal.—adv. in-vit'ing-ly.

in-vo-cate (ĭn'vō-kāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -cated, p.pr. -cating], [< Lat. invocare (-atus), to call upon: see invoke], to address in prayer; implore; call upon; invoke; supplicate.

in-vo-ca-tion (in″vō-kā′shŭn), n. 1, the act or form of addressing in prayer; supplication; especially, the act or form of calling upon God or a deity; 2, the act of conjuring an evil spirit, or a formula so used; an incantation.

in-voice (in′vois), n. [prob. < Fr. envois, pl. of envoi, a sending < enroyer, to send], 1, a commercial paper or written document listing goods, sent to a purchaser, with their prices, quantity, and charges; 2, the goods mentioned in the document either sent or received:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. invoiced (-voist), p.pr. invoicing], to list on such a paper; include in such a list.

in-voke (in-vōk′), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. invoked (-vōkt′), p.pr. invoking], [< Lat. in, upon + vocare (-atus), to call], 1, to address in prayer or supplication; as, to invoke the Muses; 2, to ask solemnly or earnestly for (aid or protection); 3, to conjure; appeal to by incantation; as, to invoke evil spirits.—n. in-vok′er.

in-vol-u-cel (in-vŏl′ū-sĕl), n. [< L.L. involucellum, dim. of Lat. involucrum, involucre: see involucre], Bot., a secondary involucre.

in-vo-lu-cre (in′vō-lū″kĕr), n. [< Lat. involucrum < involvere < in, in + volvere, to roll], Bot., a rosette of small leaves or bracts, sometimes resembling a calyx, situated below a flower or flower cluster, as in the dandelion and other composites; also, the circlet of bracts about the base of an umbel or cyme. Also, in″vo-lu′crum.—adj. in″vo-lu′cral.—adj. in″vo-lu′crate (-krāt).

INVOLUCEL (a) AND INVOLUCRE (b) in-vol-un-ta-ry (in-vŏl′ŭn-tā-rĭ), adj. [< Lat. in-, not + voluntas, the will], 1, not under the control of the will; 2, contrary to choice; compulsory; 3, unintentional.—adv. in-vol′un-ta-ri-ly.—n. in-vol′un-ta-ri-ness.

in-vo-lute (in′vō-lūt), adj. [see involve], complicated; involved: Bot., having edges rolled inward, as certain leaves in their buds; Zoöl., coiled spirally, as some shells:—n. Geom., a curve traced by a point on a taut thread as it unwinds from, or winds upon, a fixed curve, called the evolute.

INVOLUTE

1, involute shell; 2, section of an involute leaf bud; 3, geometrical involute: A, point at which thread starts to unwind; PPPP, involute.

in-vo-lu-tion (in″vō-lū′shŭn), n. 1, the act of folding or coiling in or round; also, that which folds in or round; 2, that which is intricate or complicated: Biol., a retrograde change, the reverse of evolution; Med., 1, a rolling or turning inward; 2, the return of an organ to its normal size, as the uterus after parturition; Math., the process of raising a mathematical quantity to a given power by multiplying it by itself: the opposite of evolution.

in-volve (in-vŏlv′), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. involved (-vŏlvd′), p.pr. involving], [< Lat. in, in + volvere (volutus), to roll], 1, to surround; envelop; entwine; 2, to complicate; entangle; 3, to draw, as into a quarrel; implicate; embarrass; 4, to produce or include as a consequence; as, to involve a loss of time and energy; 5, to engage completely: Math., to multiply (a quantity) by itself any given number of times; raise to a given power.—n. in-volve′ment.

Syn. implicate, embroil, imply, complicate, include, entwine, wind, coil, envelop, surround.

in-volved (in-vŏlvd′), p.adj. complicated; intricate; not easy to separate, analyze, or solve.

in-vul-ner-a-ble (in-vŭl′nĕr-a-bl), adj. [< Lat. in-, not + vulnerare, to wound < vulnus, a wound], 1, incapable of being wounded or harmed; 2, incapable of being answered or refuted; as, an invulnerable argument.—adv. in-vul′ner-a-bly.—n. in-vul″ner-a-bil′i-ty.

in-ward (in′wĕrd), adj. [< A.S. innanweard, inward], 1, situated within; internal; 2, pertaining to what is within, as the mind, soul, or the like; spiritual: Obs., familiar; private:—adv. 1, toward the center or interior; as, to bend inward; 2, into or toward the mind: Obs., on the inside; internally:—n. pl. Colloq., the entrails. Also, adv., in′wards.

in-ward-ly (in′wĕrd-lĭ), adv. 1, internally; especially, in the mind or feelings; secretly; 2, toward the center or inside.

in-ward-ness (in′wĕrd-nĕs), n. 1, the inner meaning or purpose of a thing; its real nature; 2, the quality of being internal, actually or figuratively; 3, spirituality; 4, intensity of feeling; earnestness: Obs., intimacy; familiarity.

in-weave (in-wēv′), v.t. [in- + weave], to twist or lace in or together; interlace: Rare, to weave.

in-wind (in-wīnd′), v.t. [in- + wind], to twist together; wind in; twine together.

in-wrap (in-răp′), v.t. [in- + wrap], 1, to inclose or cover by wrapping; 2, to entangle; involve; 3, to engage wholly; engross. Also, en-wrap′.

in-wreathe (in-rēth′), v.t. [in- + wreath], to surround with, or as with, a garland, or a wreath. Also, en-wreathe′.

in-wrought (in-rôt′; in′rôt″), adj. [in- + wrought], 1, worked in, as by embroidery; 2, adorned with figures or patterns.

I-o (ī′ō), n. [< Gk.], Gk. Myth., a beautiful maiden beloved by Zeus, changed by the jealous Hera into a heifer and tormented by a terrible gadfly which drove her across the Ionian Sea to Egypt, where she regained her original form.

Io. abbr. the state of Iowa (usually, Ia.):—I. O., India Office.

i-od-ic (ī-ŏd′ĭk), adj. [see iodine], Chem., of, pertaining to, or containing, iodine.

i-o-dide (ī′ō-dīd; -dĭd), n. Chem., a salt of hydriodic acid. Also, i′o-did.

i-o-dine (ī′ō-dĭn; -dīn; -dēn), n. [< Fr. iode < Gk. iōdēs, violet-like < ion, violet: from color of its vapor], Chem., a blue-black, nonmetallic element [symbol I], found widely distributed in mineral springs, seaweeds, Chile saltpeter, etc., its salts being largely used in medicine and photography: popular term for tincture of iodine. Also, i′o-din.

i-o-do-form (ī-ō′dō-fôrm; ī-ŏd′ō-fôrm), n. [iod(ine) + (chlor)oform], Chem., a yellow crystalline powder, a compound of iodine, with a characteristic and penetrating odor: used in surgical dressing and as an antiseptic.

i-o-dol (ī′ō-dōl; -dŏl), n. [see iodine], Chem., a yellow, odorless powder containing a high percentage of iodine: used, like iodoform, as an antiseptic.

I. O. F. abbr. Independent Order of Foresters:—Ion., Ionic; Ionian.

i-on (ī′ŏn), n. [Gk. = going], Phys., 1, one of the particles bearing electrical charges which transmit electric current through the air or other gases; 2, a product of electrolytic decomposition liberated at one of the electrodes during the passage of the electric current, that formed at the positive electrode being called the anion, a negative ion, and that at the negative electrode, the cation, a positive ion.

-ion n. suffix, [< Lat. -io (-ionis)], denoting: 1, action or the result of action; as, suspicion; option; 2, state or condition; as, infection; dejection.

I-o-ni-an (ī-ō′nĭ-ăn), adj. [< Gk. Iōnios], 1, pertaining to Ionia, the western coast of Asia Minor and the neighboring islands, or to its inhabitants: also, Ionic; 2, designating a certain mode in ancient Greek and medieval church music:—n. a member of that one of the main divisions of the ancient Greek race which settled first in Attica, Eubœa, and Achaia, and later spread to the western coast of Asia Minor and the adjacent islands.

i-on-ic (ī-ŏn′ĭk), adj. [see ion], Phys., of or relating to the ions, or electrically charged particles present in a gas or liquid in the conducting state.

I-on-ic (ī-ŏn′ĭk), adj. [< Gk. Iōnikos], 1, of or pertaining to Ionia, the western coast of Asia Minor and the neighboring islands, or to its inhabitants; 2, pertaining to that one of the main divisions of the ancient Greeks which settled originally in Attica, Eubœa, and Achaia, and later in Ionia; 3, pertaining to the language spoken by them: Arch., pertaining to, or descriptive of, an order of classic architecture characterized by scroll-like decorations, or spiral volutes, on the capitals of pillars; Gk. and Lat. Pros., designating, or pertaining to, a kind of metrical foot:—n. 1, an Ionic metrical foot; 2, a verse consisting of such feet; 3, the dialect spoken in Ionia and Attica, or classic Greek: ionic, Print., a kind of heavy-faced type.

IONIC COLUMN

i-o-ni-um (ī-ō′nĭ-ŭm), n. [see ion], Chem., a radioactive solid substance, from which radium is derived: produced by the decomposition of uranium.

i-on-i-za-tion (ī″ŏn-ĭ-zā′shŭn; -ī-zā′-) n. [see ionize], 1, the electrolytic dissociation of an electrolyte by solution or fusion; 2, the process by which the particles of a gas become converted into carriers of electricity.

i-on-ize (ī′ŏn-īz), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -ized (-īzd), p.pr. -izing], [see ion], Phys., to render (a substance) electrically conductive by the production in it of small electrified particles, or ions.—adj. i′on-iz′a-ble.

i-on-o-gen (ī-ŏn′ō-jĕn), n. [ion + -gen (< Gk. -genos, producing)], Phys., a substance which is capable of being ionized by electrolytic dissociation.

i-o-none (ī′ō-nōn), n. [< Gk. ion, violet], Chem., a substance artificially made from citral and acetone, having a strong odor of violets: used in perfumes.

i-on-o-sphere (ī-ŏn′ō-sfēr; ī-ō′nō-), n. [ion + sphere], a layer of air, 65 or more miles up, favorable to radio; Heaviside layer (which see).

I. O. O. F. abbr. Independent Order of Odd Fellows:—I. O. R., Indcpendent Order of Rechabites:—I. O. R. M., Improved Order of Red Men.

i-o-ta (ī-ō′tä), n. [< Gk. iōta], 1, the ninth letter of the Greek alphabet [ι, I (see App. I)], corresponding to the English i; hence, 2, a small or insignificant part; jot: iota subscript, Gk. Gram., a small iota below another vowel, as in ᾳ, ῃ, ῳ.

I O U (ī ō ū), n. [< I owe you, for which the names of the letters stand], a duly signed but informal acknowledgment of a debt: Colloq., a symbol of indebtedness:—I. O. U., abbr. I owe you.

ip-e-cac-u-an-ha (ĭp″ē-kăk″ū-ăn′ä), n. [Port. < nat. name of plant, ipekaguene], a South American creeping, shrubby plant; also, its root: Pharm., an extract or tincture of this root, used as an emetic and sometimes as a purgative: popularly known as ipecac.

Iph-i-ge-ni-a (ĭf″ĭ-jē-nī′ä), n. [< Gk.], Gk. Myth., a daughter of Agamemnon, offered by him as a sacrifice to Artemis in order to secure favorable winds for the Greeks in the expedition against Troy, but rescued by the goddess and carried to Tauris to serve as priestess: subject of dramas by Euripides.

i-po-mœ-a (ĭ″pō-mē′ä), n. [< L. Ips, name used by Linnæus for bindweed (< Gk. ips (ipos), worm) + homoios, like], Bot., any of a genus (Ipomœa) of flowering herbs, creeping or twining plants, or, rarely, shrubs or trees, mostly tropical, including the morning-glory and the sweet potato. Also, i″po-me′a.

ip-se dix-it (ĭp′sē dĭk′sĭt), [Lat.], he himself has said (it); hence, dogmatic assertion resting merely on the authority of the speaker.

ip-so fac-to (ĭp′sō făk′tō), [Lat.], as a result of the act, or fact, itself.

I. Q. abbr. intelligence quotient:—Ir, Chem., the symbol [Ir] for the element iridium:—Ir., Irish; Ireland (also, Ire.):—I. R., Inland, or Internal, Revenue.

ir- prefix, a form of the prefix in-, used for euphony before r; as, *ir*responsible.

I-ra-ni-an (ī-rā′nĭ-ăn), adj. [< Pers. Irān, Persia], 1, relating to Iran, formerly all the region between Kurdistan and India, but in modern times, Persia: the native name; also, relating to the people of Persia; 2, designating that branch of the Indo-European family of languages which includes Avestan, Old Persian, etc., and their descendants (see Indo-European, chart):—n. 1, a member of the Iranian race; 2, one of the Iranian languages.

i-ras-ci-ble (ī-răs′ĭ-bl; ĭ-răs′-), adj. [< Lat. irasci, to grow angry], easily excited to anger; irritable; choleric; captious; hot-tempered.—n. i-ras′ci-ble-ness.—adv. i-ras′ci-bly.—n. i-ras′ci-bil′i-ty.

Syn. irritable, touchy, petulant, snappish, cross.

i-rate (ī-rāt′; ī′rāt), adj. [< Lat. ira, anger], angry; enraged; incensed.—adv. i-rate′ly.

ire (īr), n. anger; wrath; strong resentment; as, his ire was aroused.—adj. ire′ful.—adv. ire′ful-ly.

Syn. rage, passion, wrath. (See anger.)

i-ren-ic (ī-rĕn′ĭk), adj. [< Gk. eirēnē, peace], tending to promote peace. Also, i-ren′i-cal.

i-ri-da-ceous (ī″rĭ-dā′shŭs), adj. [see iris], 1, of or relating to a family (Iridaceæ) of perennial herbs, which includes the iris, gladiolus, crocus, etc.; 2, similar in shape to the flower of the iris.

ir-i-des-cent (ĭr″ĭ-dĕs′ĕnt), adj. having changing, shimmering, rainbowlike colors.—adv. ir″i-des′cent-ly.—n. ir″i-des′-cence.

i-rid-i-um (ī-rĭd′ĭ-ŭm), n. [L.L. < Gk. iris: see iris], Chem., a hard, silver-white, metallic element [symbol Ir] of the platinum group, used to harden platinum alloys, and with osmium to make gold pen points, watch and compass bearings, etc.

i-ris (ī′rĭs), n. [pl. irises (-ĕz); irides (ĭr′ĭ-dēz; ī′rĭ-)], [Lat. < Gk. Iris (-idos), the rainbow goddess], the rainbow; also, a rainbowlike iridescent appearance: Anat., a circular, colored membrane suspended before the lens of the eye, containing a contractile opening, called the pupil, by which light reaches the retina (see eye, illus.); Bot., any of a genus (Iris) of plants with sword-shaped leaves and generally showy flowers: typical of a family (Iridaceæ) of temperate and tropical herbs, most of which have a perennial rootstock or other type of underground stem, and many of which are cultivated for their showy flowers, as the garden irises, sometimes called flags, or fleur-de-lis, and the gladiolus, crocus, and others: iris diaphragm, a device, as in a camera, consisting of a number of thin, movable leaves attached to a ring, which regulate the size of the aperture: Iris, Class. Myth., the goddess of the rainbow; in the "Iliad," the messenger of Zeus and Hera.

IRIS

I-rish (ī′rĭsh), adj. [< A.S. Iras, the Irish], pertaining to Ireland, its inhabitants, or its language:—n. the native Celtic language of the Irish; Erse; Gaelic; also, English as spoken by the Irish: the Irish, collectively, the people of Ireland.

I-rish-ism (ī′rĭsh-ĭzm), n. an Irish peculiarity, especially of speech.

I-rish-man (ī′rĭsh-măn), n. [pl. -men (-mĕn)], [Irish + man], a man of Irish race or birth.

i-ri-tis (ī-rī′tĭs), n. [see iris], Pathol., inflammation of the iris of the eye.—adj. i-rit′ic (ī-rĭt′ĭk).

irk (ûrk), t.t. [< M.E. irken, to weary: source uncertain], to weary; annoy; bore.

irk-some (ûrk′sŭm), adj. tedious; wearisome.—adv. irk′some-ly.—n. irk′some-ness.

Syn. troublesome, dull, fatiguing. (See tedious.)

i-ron (ī′ûrn), n. [< A.S. īsern, īsen, or īren, iron], 1, a silver-white metallic element [symbol Fe, < Lat. ferrum], the most important of all elements used in the metallic form: found widely distributed as natural oxides, sulphides, silicides, etc., in large deposits in various parts of the world, and used commercially in many forms; as, wrought iron, which is nearly pure iron containing little carbon, somewhat soft, ductile, and of great toughness; steel, usually containing less than two per cent carbon, of greater inherent strength and hardness, and capable through heat treatment of acquiring properties varying from extreme softness to great hardness and toughness as desired; and cast iron, with two to four per cent carbon, produced directly from the ore, of considerable hardness, but inclined to brittleness; 2, a utensil or weapon made of iron; specifically, a flatiron, branding tool, pistol, harpoon, etc.; 3, anything especially hard; 4, firmness; rigidity; robustness: pl. fetters or chains for a prisoner: Golf, any of several clubs with an iron head, especially a mid-iron; Med., a preparation of iron used as a tonic: galvanized iron, sheet iron which has been coated with metallic zinc:—adj. 1, pertaining to, or made of, iron; 2, resembling iron; hard; hardy; inflexible; merciless; harsh: iron pyrites, native iron disulphide, occurring as a brass-yellow mineral, pyrite, or as a pale yellow mineral, marcasite (see these terms): important as a source of sulphur in the manufacture of sulphuric acid:—v.t. 1, to smooth with a flatiron; 2, to furnish or arm with iron; 3, to fetter.

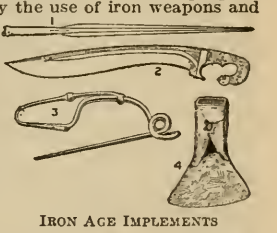
i-ron age Archæol., the stage of human progress marked by the use of iron weapons and tools, succeeding the stone age and the bronze age; Class. Myth., the last and worst age of the world: hence, an age of wickedness.



IRON AGE IMPLEMENTS
1, spear head; 2, sword; 3, brooch; 4, spade with socket for handle.

i-ron-bound (ī′ûrn-bound″), adj. 1, confined with bands of iron; 2, surrounded by, or faced with, rocks, as a coast; 3, inflexible; rigid; hard and fast; rigorously restricted.

i-ron-clad (ī′ûrn-klăd″), n. [iron + clad], a warship cased with iron or steel plates:—adj. covered or protected with iron plates: Colloq., not to be evaded; extremely strict; as, an ironclad agreement.

i-ron-gray (ī′ûrn-grā″), adj. of a color resembling freshly broken iron:—n. the color of freshly broken iron. Also, i′ron-grey″.

i-ron-i-cal (ī-rŏn′ĭ-kăl), adj. [see irony], 1, covertly sarcastic; expressing one thing and meaning exactly the opposite; 2, pertaining to a circumstance the reverse of what was, or might be, expected.—adv. i-ron′i-cal-ly.—n. i-ron′i-cal-ness.

i-ron-mas-ter (ī′ûrn-mās″tẽr), n. [iron+master], a manufacturer of iron; the owner or superintendent of an ironworks.

i-ron-mon-ger (ī′ûrn-mŭng″gẽr), n. [iron+monger], in Great Britain, a dealer in iron goods and hardware.—n. i′ron-mon″ger-y.

i-ron rust a reddish coating which forms on articles of iron or steel when exposed to weather, moisture, etc.

i-ron-side (ī′ûrn-sīd″), n. [iron+side], a man of great strength: pl. used as sing. an iron-clad warship: Ironsides, Cromwell's cavalry: Old Ironsides, the United States frigate Constitution.

i-ron-ware (ī′ûrn-wâr″), n. [iron+ware], hardware; articles made of iron.

i-ron-weed (ī′ûrn-wēd″), n. [iron+weed], Bot., in the United States, any of a genus (Vernonia) of perennial herbs of the composite family, varying from three to six feet high, bearing flat-topped clusters of chiefly purple, but sometimes white, flowers.

i-ron-wood (ī′ûrn-wŏŏd″), n. [iron+wood], Bot., in eastern North America, either of two trees of the birch family: the American hornbeam (genus Carpinus), a small, smooth-barked tree with beechlike leaves, and the hop hornbeam (genus Ostrya), a slender tree with bark and leaves resembling those of the birch: both trees having a hoplike flower cluster.

i-ron-work (ī′ûrn-wûrk″), n. [iron+work], 1, iron articles; work in iron; 2, a place where iron is smelted and articles are made from it: usually pl.

i-ro-ny (ī′rō-nĭ), n. [< Gk. eirōneia, pretended ignorance], 1, covert sarcasm; ridicule in the guise of compliment or praise; a mode of speech meaning the opposite of what is said; 2, pretended ignorance in argument: called Socratic irony; 3, an outcome of a situation which is the reverse of what would normally be hoped for or expected; as, the irony of life.

Syn. sarcasm, satire, banter. (See ridicule.)

Ir-o-quois (ĭr″ō-kwoi′), n. sing. and pl. [Fr. form of nat. name], a member of a powerful confederacy of American Indians, the Five Nations, formerly inhabiting central New York and comprising the Mohawk, Oneida, Onondaga, Cayuga, and Seneca tribes, and later the Tuscaroras.—adj. and n. Ir″o-quoi′an.

ir-ra-di-ant (ĭ-rā′dĭ-ănt), adj. [see irradiate], emitting rays of light; shining brightly; illuminating.—n. ir-ra′di-ance; ir-ra′di-an-cy.

ir-ra-di-ate (ĭ-rā′dĭ-āt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -ated, p.pr. -ating], [< Lat. in, upon+radiare (-atus), to send out rays], 1, to shed light upon; 2, to throw light on, intellectually; 3, to diffuse:—v.i. to emit rays of light.—adj. ir-ra′di-a-tive.

ir-ra-di-a-tion (ĭ-rā″dĭ-ā′shŭn), n. illumination; radiance: Optics, the apparent enlargement of an illuminated object when seen against a dark background.

ir-ra-tion-al (ĭ-răsh′ŭn-ăl), adj. [in-+rational], 1, lacking or not exercising reasoning powers; 2, contrary to reason; absurd: Math., not capable of being expressed in rational numbers; surd; specifically, expressed as an indicated root that cannot be extracted, as $\sqrt{3}$.—adv. ir-ra′tion-al-ly.—n. ir-ra″tion-al′i-ty (ĭ-răsh″ŭn-ăl′ĭ-tĭ).—n. ir-ra′tion-al-ism.

ir-re-claim-a-ble (ĭr″ē-klām′ă-bl), adj. [in-+reclaim], incapable of being recovered, amended, reformed, or restored.—adv. ir″re-claim′a-bly.—n. ir″re-claim′a-ble-ness.

ir-rec-on-cil-a-ble (ĭ-rĕk″ŭn-sīl′ă-bl; ĭ-rĕk″ŭn-sĭl′ă-bl), adj. [in-+reconcile], not adjustable, as differences or quarrels; hostile, as enemies; not in agreement, as actions and beliefs:—n. one who refuses to accept compromises or concessions, as from political opponents; one who is implacably discontented.—n. ir-rec″on-cil′a-ble-ness.—adv. ir-rec″on-cil′a-bly.—n. ir-rec″on-cil″a-bil′i-ty.

ir-re-cov-er-a-ble (ĭr″ē-kŭv′ẽr-ă-bl), adj. [in-+recover], not capable of being regained; irreparable.—adv. ir″re-cov′er-a-bly.

ir-re-cu-sa-ble (ĭr″ē-kū′zā-bl), adj. [< L.L. irrecusabilis < Lat. in-, not+recusare, to refuse], incapable of being rejected, or refused acceptance; as, irrecusable proof.—adv. ir″re-cu′sa-bly.

ir-re-deem-a-ble (ĭr″ē-dēm′ă-bl), adj. [in-+redeem], 1, incapable of being bought back; 2, not exchangeable for gold or silver: said of paper money; 3, irreclaimable; thoroughly depraved.—adv. ir″re-deem′a-bly.

ir-re-den-ta (ĭr″ē-dĕn′tä; ēr″rā-dĕn′tä), adj. [It. = unredeemed], under an alien government: said of a region regarded as belonging to a (specified) independent state.

Ir-re-den-tist (ĭr″ē-dĕn′tĭst), n. [< It. irredenta, unredeemed], in post-war Italian politics, one of a party favoring incorporating into Italy neighboring districts largely Italian in race, but subject to other governments, and known as Italia irredenta.

ir-re-du-ci-ble (ĭr″ē-dū′sĭ-bl), adj. [in-+reduce], 1, incapable of being brought into a different condition or form; 2, incapable of being diminished; 3, not capable of being subdued: Arith., of a fraction, not capable of simplification through the cancellation of common factors in numerator and denominator.—adv. ir″re-du′ci-bly.

ir-ref-ra-ga-ble (ĭ-rĕf′rā-gā-bl), adj. [< Lat. ir- (in-) not+refragari, to oppose], unanswerable; undeniable: Rare, indestructible; inviolable.—adv. ir-ref′ra-ga-bly.—n. ir-ref″ra-ga-bil′i-ty.

ir-re-fut-a-ble (ĭr″ē-fūt′ă-bl; ĭ-rĕf′ū-tă-bl), adj. [in-+refute], incapable of being proved false or incorrect, as an argument.—adv. ir″re-fut′a-bly.—n. ir″re-fut″a-bil′i-ty.

ir-reg-u-lar (ĭ-rĕg′ū-lẽr), adj. [in-+regular], 1, not straight or symmetrical; not uniform in shape, proportion, duration, order, etc.; 2, not conforming to rule or established method; disorderly; abnormal: Bot., having sepals or petals unlike each other in shape; Gram., not inflected or conjugated in the usual way.—adv. ir-reg′u-lar-ly.—n. ir-reg″u-lar′i-ty.

ir-rel-a-tive (ĭ-rĕl′ă-tĭv), adj. [in-+relative], not having relation; unconnected; also, not bearing upon the case; irrelevant.—adv. ir-rel′a-tive-ly.—n. ir-rel′a-tive-ness.

ir-rel-e-vant (ĭ-rĕl′ẽ vănt), adj. [in-+relevant], not bearing upon the case; unrelated to the matter under consideration.—n. ir-rel′e-vance; ir-rel′e-van-cy.—adv. ir-rel′e-vant-ly.

ir-re-li-gion (ĭr″ē-lĭj′ŭn), n. [in-+religion], the state of being without, or hostile to, religion; ungodliness; impiety.

ir-re-li-gious (ĭr″ē-lĭj′ŭs), adj. [in-+religious], 1, lacking religion; 2, profane.—adv. ir″re-li′gious-ly.—n. ir″re-li′gious-ness.

ir-re-me-di-a-ble (ĭr″ē-mē′dĭ-ă-bl), adj. [in-+remedy], not capable of being remedied or corrected.—adv. ir″re-me′di-a-bly.

ir-rep-a-ra-ble (ĭ-rĕp′ă-ră-bl), adj. [in-+reparable], not capable of being repaired, restored, or made good.—adv. ir-rep′a-ra-bly.

ir-re-press-i-ble (ĭr″ē-prĕs′ĭ-bl), adj. [in-+repress], incapable of being subdued or restrained.—n. ir″re-press′i-ble-ness.—adv. ir″re-press′i-bly.—n. ir″re-press″i-bil′i-ty.

ir-re-proach-a-ble (ĭr″ē-prōch′ă-bl), adj. [in-+reproach], blameless; faultless; not to be discredited.—n. ir″re-proach′a-ble-ness.—adv. ir″re-proach′a-bly.

ir-re-sist-i-ble (ĭr″ē-zĭs′tĭ-bl), adj. [in-+resist], incapable of being withstood; overpowering.—n. ir″re-sist′i-ble-ness.—adv. ir″re-sist′i-bly.—n. ir″re-sist″i-bil′i-ty.

ir-res-o-lu-ble (ĭ-rĕz′ō-lū-bl), adj. [in-+re-+soluble], 1, not capable of being dissolved in a liquid; 2, not relievable.

ir-res-o-lute (ĭ-rĕz′ō-lūt), adj. [in-+resolute], undecided; wavering; not determined.—adv. ir-res′o-lute-ly.—n. ir-res′o-lute-ness.

ir-res-o-lu-tion (ĭ-rĕz″ō-lū′shŭn), n. lack of determination; hesitation.

Syn. indecision, vacillation. Indecision wavers because it does not know what to do. This state of mind, usually temporary, arises from the inability to judge between courses or actions presenting themselves as possible. Indecision therefore does not necessarily indicate weakness; irresolution and vacillation do. Irresolution cannot summon the courage to act or decide one way or the other; vacillation decides bravely enough, but directly changes to the opposite decision or action, and as quickly back again.

ir-re-spec-tive (ĭr″ē-spĕk′tĭv), adj. [in-+respect], independent; regardless; used adverbially with of.—adv. ir″re-spec′tive-ly.

ir-re-spon-si-ble (ĭr″ē-spŏn′sĭ-bl), adj. [in-+responsible], 1, not to be held accountable; not subject to responsibility; 2, not able to respond to obligation; not trustworthy.—adv. ir″re-spon′si-bly.—n. ir″re-spon″si-bil′i-ty.

ir-re-triev-a-ble (ĭr″ē-trēv′ă-bl), adj. [in-+retrieve], not recoverable; irreparable.—adv. ir″re-triev′a-bly.

ir-rev-er-ence (ĭ-rĕv′ẽr-ĕns), n. [in-+revere], 1, a lack of respect or veneration, especially toward sacred things; 2, a disrespectful act or speech; 3, state of being regarded without respect.

ir-rev-er-ent (ĭ-rĕv′ẽr-ĕnt), adj. disrespectful: showing a want of veneration, as for things regarded as sacred.—adv. ir-rev′er-ent-ly.

ir-re-vers-i-ble (ĭr″ē-vûr′sĭ-bl), adj. [in-+reverse], 1, incapable of being turned back or upside down; 2, incapable of being repealed.—adv. ir″re-vers′i-bly.—n. ir″re-vers′i-bil′i-ty.

ir-rev-o-ca-ble (i-rĕv′ō-kȧ-bl), adj. [<in-+revoke], not to be called back; as, the irrevocable past; not capable of being repealed or undone.—adv. ir-rev′o-ca-bly.—n. ir-rev′o-ca-bil′i-ty.

ir-ri-gate (ir′i-gāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -gated, p.pr. -gating], [<Lat. in, upon+rigare (-atus), to moisten], 1, to supply with water, as land under cultivation, by means of ditches, channels, etc.; 2, to refresh, as by watering: Med., to wash out, as a wound, with a flow of liquid, for cleansing, disinfecting, etc.

ir-ri-ga-tion (ir″i-gā′shŭn), n. the furnishing of a water supply by means of ditches, canals, etc., as to land under cultivation: Med., a washing out by means of a stream of medicated liquid.

ir-ri-ta-ble (ir′i-tȧ-bl), adj. [see irritate], 1, easily annoyed; readily provoked to ill temper; 2, excessively sensitive: Physiol., capable of responding to a stimulus.—n. ir′ri-ta-ble-ness.—adv. ir′ri-ta-bly.—n. ir″ri-ta-bil′i-ty.

Syn. peevish, impatient, irascible, fretful, petulant.

ir-ri-tant (ir′i-tȧnt), adj. Pathol., causing undue sensitiveness or inflammation:—n. Pathol., anything which causes excessive sensitiveness or inflammation; Physiol., an agent which stimulates an organ to its vital action, or which overstimulates.

ir-ri-tate (ir′i-tāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -tated, p.pr. -tating], [<Lat. irritare (-atus), to provoke], to provoke or make angry; fret; annoy: Pathol., to cause inflammation, redness, or pain in; Physiol., to stimulate; overexcite; produce undue sensitiveness in.

Syn. vex, annoy, excite, incense, exasperate, provoke, offend, tease. To irritate is to excite to anger, impatience, nervousness, or fretfulness, usually by something that grates on the sensibilities. We are irritated by being constantly crossed or nagged, or by having to listen to harsh or unnecessary noise. To exasperate is to irritate so thoroughly and intensely that hot, often bitter, anger results. We stand irritation as long as we can, and the "last straw" so exasperates us that we fly into a temper. To annoy is to disturb to the point of irritation; to vex is to irritate to the point of offense. We are vexed by the intentional slight of a friend, by the continued tardiness at appointments which so inconveniences us. To provoke is to arouse annoyance or vexation; we are provoked at ourselves when we act heedlessly and find ourselves in trouble; a constant stream of questions will provoke the most patient. Provoke is sometimes used in the sense of tease; as, he pretended to have forgotten, just to provoke me. To incense is to incite one to maddened anger.—Ant. pacify, tranquilize, placate, appease, soothe, calm.

ir-ri-ta-tion (ir″i-tā′shŭn), n. 1, the act of exasperating; 2, the state of being provoked or vexed; exasperation; vexation; impatience: Physiol., the act of stimulating normally a muscle, organ, etc.; Pathol., a morbid condition of oversensitiveness of an organ or part of the body.—adj. ir′ri-ta-tive.

ir-rup-tion (i-rŭp′shŭn), n. [<Lat. in-, against +rumpere (ruptus), to break], 1, a bursting or rushing in; 2, sudden invasion.

ir-rup-tive (i-rŭp′tĭv), adj. breaking or rushing in upon; tending to invade violently.

is (ĭz), [A.S.<Teut. es-, to be], third person singular present indicative of the irregular verb be.

Is. abbr. Isaiah (also, Isa.):—is., island (also, isl.):—I.S., 1, Irish Society; 2, Inside Service.

I-saac (ī′zȧk), n. [Heb.=laughter], Bib., a Hebrew patriarch, the son of Abraham and Sarah, father of Jacob and Esau (Gen. 21:3; 35:29).

I-sa-iah (ī-zā′yȧ; ī-zī′ȧ), n. [Heb.=salvation of Jehovah], Bib., 1, a great Hebrew prophet before and during the reign of Hezekiah of Judah; 2, a book of the Old Testament containing his preaching. Also, E-sa′ias (ē-); in the Douay Bible, I-sa′ias (ī-).

Is-car-i-ot (is-kăr′ĭ-ŏt), n. [Heb.=a dweller in Kerioth], Bib., the surname of Judas, the apostle who betrayed Jesus (Matt. 10:4).

is-chi-um (is′kĭ-ŭm), n. [pl. ischia (-ȧ)], [<Gk. iskhion, hip], Anat., the lowest of the three parts of the innominate, or hip, bone, which forms half of the pelvis; one of the bones on which the body rests when sitting (see innominate, illus.).—adj. is′chi-al.

I-seult (ĭ-sōōlt′), n. [prob. Celt.], in medieval romance, either of two women, an Irish princess, wife of King Mark of Cornwall, called "the Beautiful," and beloved by Tristram; or the wife of Tristram, called "Iseult of Brittany" or "Iseult of the White Hands": a figure in "The Last Tournament" in Tennyson's "Idylls of the King," in Matthew Arnold's "Tristram and Iseult," in Swinburne's "Tristram of Lyonesse," and in Wagner's "Tristan and Isolde." Also, I-solde′ (ĭ-sōld′).

-ish adj. suffix, [<A.S. -isc], 1, pertaining to: added to names of places or countries; as, Scott*ish*; 2, of the nature of; like: especially, having the undesirable traits of: added to nouns; as, woman*ish*; 3, somewhat: added freely to adjectives; as, black*ish*.

-ish suffix, [<Fr. -iss-], a termination of some verbs derived from the French; as, fin*ish*; furn*ish*.

Ish-ma-el (ĭsh′mȧ-ĕl), n. [Heb.=God hears], 1, Bib., the exiled son of Abraham and Hagar (Gen. 16:11–16); hence, 2, an outcast.

Ish-ma-el-ite (ĭsh′mȧ-ĕl-īt), n. 1, a descendant of Ishmael; hence, 2, a social outcast; one at war with society.—adj. Ish′ma-el-it″ish.

Ish-tar (ĭsh′tär), n. [Assyr.]. Babylonian and Assyr. Myth., the supreme goddess; the goddess of love and of fertility: identified with the Phœnician Ashtoreth, the Greek Aphrodite, and the Egyptian Isis.

i-sin-glass (ī′zĭng-glȧs), n. [perh.<obs. Du. huisenblas, sturgeon's bladder], 1, a pure, commercial form of gelatin prepared from the air bladders of certain fish, especially sturgeon: used as an adhesive, for clarifying liquors, for stiffening silks, linens, etc.; 2, mica, especially in thin sheets: erroneously so called from its resemblance to sheets of gelatin.

I-sis (ī′sĭs), n. [Gk.], Egypt. Myth., the chief female divinity, symbolical of fruitfulness; sister and wife of Osiris: sometimes identified with Ishtar.

Is-lam (ĭs′lŏm; ĭz′lŏm; ĭs-lăm′), n. [Arab. =surrender], 1, the Mohammedan religion; 2, the whole body of Mohammedans and the countries they rule.—adj. Is-lam′ic.—n. Is′lam-ite.—n. Is′lam-ism.

Isis

is-land (ī′lȧnd), n. [<A.S. īgland<īeg, isle+land, land: s in spelling from confusion with O.F. isle<Lat. insula, island], 1, a tract of land surrounded by water; 2, anything detached or isolated, like such a tract of land: island universe, Astron., a spiral nebula regarded as a universe similar in scope to our solar system and visible stars:—v.t. 1, to make into or like an island; insulate; isolate; 2, to supply with islands.

is-land-er (ī′lȧn-dẽr), n. one born or living on an island.

isle (īl), n. [<O.F. isle, ile<Lat. insula, island], an island: usually poetical:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. isled (īld), p.pr. isling], to isolate:—v.i. to dwell on an island.

is-let (ī′lĕt), n. [dim. of isle], 1, a small island; 2, any isolated tract or spot.

ism (ĭzm), n. [see -ism], a distinctive system or doctrine: usually used in disparagement.

-ism n. suffix, [<Gk. -ismos], indicating: 1, the action of; as, bapt*ism*; 2, the state, condition, or quality of; as, mystic*ism*; hero*ism*; 3, a system, doctrine, policy, etc., indicated by the first part of the word; as, liberal*ism*; Presbyterian*ism*; 4, a characteristic or peculiarity, especially in manner or language; as, British*ism*: Med., a morbid condition induced by excessive use of; as, alcohol*ism*.

Is-me-ne (ĭs-mē′nē), n. [<Gk.], Gk. Myth., in Sophocles's tragedies, the timid, practical sister of Antigone, and daughter of Œdipus and Jocasta.

i-so-bar (ī′sō-bär), n. [<Gk. isos, equal+baros, weight], Meteor., on a chart, globe, or map, a line connecting places having the same barometric pressure.—adj. i′so-bar′ic (-băr′ĭk).

i-so-chro-mat-ic (ī″sō-krō-măt′ĭk), adj. [<Gk. isos, equal+khrōma, color], having the same color: Photog., orthochromatic.

i-soch-ro-nous (ī-sŏk′rō-nŭs), adj. [<Gk. isos, equal+khronos, time], equal in length, duration, or intervals of occurrence, as the vibrations of a pendulum; taking place in equal times or at the same intervals of time as something else: often with to or with. Also, i-soch′ro-nal.—adv. i-soch′ro-nal-ly.—n. i-soch′ro-nous-ly.—n. i-soch′ro-nism.

i-so-cli-nal (ī″sō-klī′nȧl), adj. [<Gk. isos, equal +klinein, to incline], indicating equal inclination: applied to imaginary lines connecting points on the earth's surface where the magnetic inclination or dip is the same: Geol., indicating strata that dip regularly in the same direction. Also, i″so-clin′ic.

i-so-di-mor-phism (ī″sō-dī-môr′fĭzm), n. [Gk. isos, equal+di, two+morphē, form], in crystallography, similarity in crystalline form between two dimorphous groups.

i-so-dy-nam-ic (ī″sō-dī-năm′ĭk), adj. [<Gk. isos, equal+dunamis, power], pertaining to, or indicating, equality of force: Physical Geog., exhibiting equal magnetic force: applied to imaginary lines connecting points on the earth's surface where the magnetic intensity is the same.

i-so-gon-ic (ī″sō-gŏn′ĭk), adj. [<Gk. isos, equal +gōnia, angle], pertaining to, having or noting equal angles: applied to lines on a map joining places on the earth's surface where the magnetic declination, or deviation from the true north, is the same.

i-so-hy-et (ī'sō-hī'ĕt), n. [< Gk. isos, equal + huetos, rain], a line joining points on a map having the same annual rainfall.—adj. i"so-hy'e-tal.

i-so-late (ī'sō-lāt; Is'ō-), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -lated, p.pr. -lating], [< Fr. isolé < It. isolato < Lat. insula, island], 1, to place alone or in a detached position; separate from others; 2, to insulate: Chem., to obtain in a pure or uncombined state.—n. i'so-la"tor.

i-so-la-tion (ī"sō-lā'shŭn; Is"ō-), n. the act of setting, or state of being, apart; seclusion.

Syn. solitude, separation. (See retirement.)

i-so-la-tion-ist (ī"sō-lā'shŭn-ĭst; Is"ō-), n. a person who favors avoidance of political entanglements with other nations.—n. i"so-la'tion-ism.

I-solde (ĭ-sōld'), n. [prob. Celt.], in medieval romance: 1, an Irish princess beloved by Tristram; 2, the wife of Tristram. See I-seult', Pfd. S.

i-so-mer (ī'sō-mĕr), n. [< Gk. isos, equal + meros, part], Chem., a substance containing the same elements combined in the same proportion as another, but differing in chemical or physical properties or both.—n. i-som'er-ism (ī-sŏm'ĕr-ĭzm).

i-so-mer-ic (ī"sō-mĕr'ĭk), adj. Chem., composed of the same elements in the same proportion, with different physical or chemical properties: said of two or more compounds. Also, i"so-mer'i-cal.

i-som-er-ous (ī-sŏm'ĕr-ŭs), adj. Bot., of a flower, having the same number of parts in each whorl, as sepals, petals, etc.; Chem., isomeric.

i-so-met-ric (ī"sō-mĕt'rĭk), adj. [< Gk. isos, equal + metron, a measure], having equality of measure; specifically, in crystallography, pertaining to that system of crystallization in which the three axes are of equal length and at right angles to one another: isometric projection, a method of mechanical drawing designed to show measurements in three dimensions without regard to the principle of perspective. Also, i'so-met'ri-cal.

ISOMETRIC PROJECTION

The lines AB, BC, CD, in the three dimensions respectively of the projection of the cube (In 1) are equal to the edges of a real cube, and hence to each other. Similarly the line ab in the circle (2) is equal to ab in the projection; the lines cd, in the circle and in its projection, and the lines ef, etc., are equal.

i-so-mor-phic (ī"sō-môr'fĭk), adj. [< Gk. isos, equal + morphē, form], in crystallography, being similar in crystalline form: Biol., alike in structure or appearance.—n. i"so-mor'phism.

i-so-pod (ī'sō-pŏd) n. [< Gk. isos, equal + pous (podos), foot], any of an order (Isopoda) of mostly small crustaceans, including the sow bugs, or wood lice.

i-sos-ce-les (ī-sŏs'ē-lēz), adj. [< Gk isos, equal + skelos, leg], Geom., having two equal sides, as a triangle.

i-so-therm (ī'sō-thûrm), n. [< Gk. isos, equal + thermē, heat], Meteor., a line on a map, connecting those places on the earth's surface having the same temperature at a given time.

i-so-ther-mal (ī"sō-thûr'măl), adj. having, or indicating, equal temperatures; designating, or pertaining to, lines, as on a map or chart, connecting places at which the temperature at a given time, or, usually, the mean annual temperature, is the same.

i-so-tope (ī'sō-tōp), n. [< Gk. isos, equal + topos, place], Chem., one of two or more closely allied elements having identical chemical properties, but differing slightly in atomic weights.

i-so-trop-ic (ī"sō-trŏp'ĭk), adj. [< Gk. isos, equal + tropē, a turning < trepein, to turn], Phys., having the same physical properties in every direction. Also, i-sot'ro-pous (ī-sŏt'rō-pŭs).

Is-ra-el (Iz'rā-ĕl), n. [Heb. = striver with God], 1, Bib., the Hebrew patriarch Jacob: so called after his return from exile (Gen. 32); 2, the descendants of Jacob; the Jews; 3, the northern kingdom after the division of the Jews; 4, those who returned from the Babylonian captivity; 5, figuratively, the chosen people of God; the elect.

Is-ra-el-ite (Iz'rā-ĕl-īt), n. a descendant of Israel or Jacob; a Hebrew; a Jew.—adj. Is'ra-el-it'ish (-ĕl-ĭt'ĭsh).—adj. Is'ra-el-it'ic (-ĕl-ĭt'ĭk).

is-su-a-ble (ĭsh'ū-ă-bl), adj. [see issue], Com., 1, that may come, as proceeds from an investment; 2, capable of being legally issued, as a bond; Law, capable of being made an issue at law; as, an issuable statement in a claim.

is-su-ance (ĭsh'ū-ăns), n. the act of giving out; as, the issuance of an edict; issue.

is-sue (ĭsh'ū), n. [O.F. < Lat. exire, to go out], 1, the act of passing or flowing out; 2, a means of egress; an outlet; also, the point of outlet, as of a river, stream, etc.; 3, that which is sent forth or produced, as a book, newspaper, etc.; especially, the entire number or amount sent out at one time; as, a government issue of bank notes; 4, offspring; descendants; 5, produce of the earth; profits of land, etc.; 6, the final result; outcome: Pathol., 1, a discharge, as of blood or pus; 2, an artificial sore, discharging pus, kept open by inserting some irritating substance; Law, 1, a point of contention between parties; 2, the point at which a matter becomes ripe for decision:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. issued (-ūd), p.pr. issuing], 1, to send out; emit; discharge; 2, to publish; put into circulation; send out officially: Obs., to give birth to:—v.i. 1, to come or pass forth; flow out; 2, to arise, as from a source; flow; 3, to proceed, as offspring; be descended; 4, to accrue, as proceeds or revenue; 5, to come to an end; result: with in: Law, to be sent out officially.

Syn., n. outcome, event, consequence. (See result.)

-ist n. suffix, [< Gk. -istēs], designating: 1, one who does, or makes a practice of doing, a given thing; as, plagiar*ist;* moral*ist;* 2, one who pursues or is skilled in a given branch of art or science; as, art*ist;* alchem*ist;* humor*ist;* 3, an adherent of a system, religion, or creed: as, Buddh*ist;* social*ist;* color*ist.*

isth-mi-an (Is'mĭ-ăn; Isth'-; Ist'-), adj. [see isthmus], pertaining to a neck of land which connects two larger bodies of land: Isthmian, adj. 1, pertaining to the Isthmus of Panama; 2, pertaining to the Isthmus of Corinth, Greece, or the games anciently held there every two years:—n. one who lives on, or who was born on, an isthmus.

isth-mus (Is'mŭs; Isth'-; Ist'-), n. [< Gk. isthmos, isthmus], a neck of land connecting two bodies of land, or joining a peninsula to the mainland: Anat., a narrow or constricted part, as of an organ.

it (ĭt), pron. [poss. its; pl. like that of he: they, their or theirs, them], [< A.S. hit, it], the neuter pronoun of the third person, singular number, used: 1, as the substitute for any noun or noun clause mentioned or understood; as, who is it (the person) knocking? 2, as subject of an impersonal verb; as, it hails; it is two miles to town; it is well with him; 3, as apparent subject of a verb whose real subject follows the predicate; as, it is useless to plead; it is true that he tried; 4, for an indefinite subject or object; as, it was he who called; let us walk it; 5, in children's games, for the one whom the other contestants oppose: Obs., its:—n. Colloq., personal magnetism; specifically, sex appeal.

It. abbr. Italy; Italian; Italic; (also, Ital.):—it., italic; italics (also, ital.).

I-tal-ian (ĭ-tăl'yăn), adj. [< Lat. Italia, Italy], pertaining to Italy, its people, or its language:—n. 1, a native of Italy; 2, the language of Italy.

i-tal-ic (ĭ-tăl'ĭk), adj. [Lat. Italicus < Gk. Italikos, pertaining to Italy], designating, or printed in, a sloping style of type, as in the word italics (for styles see App. I): Italic, pertaining to Italy, especially to ancient Italy, or to the subfamily of Indo-European languages which includes Latin (see Indo-European, chart):—italics, n. pl. (rarely, italic), italic type: Italic, n. an Italic language.

i-tal-i-cize (ĭ-tăl'ĭ-sīz), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -cized (-sīzd), p.pr. -cizing], to print in italics; in writing, to underline (letters or words) with a single line:—v.i. to use italics.

itch (ĭch), v.i. [< A.S. giccan, to itch], 1, to feel a particular uneasiness in the skin, which causes a desire to scratch the part affected; 2, to have a constant and teasing desire; to long:—n. 1, a sensation of irritation in the skin; 2, a constant and teasing desire for something: Pathol., a contagious skin disease characterized by intense itching; scabies.—n. itch'ing.—n. itch'i-ness.—adj. itch'y.

-ite n. suffix, [< Gk. -ītēs], denoting: 1, a follower, descendant, or inhabitant, of; as, Roosevelt*ite;* Israel*ite;* 2, the name of a commercial product; as, vulcan*ite;* 3, fossil organisms; as, trilob*ite:* 4, an explosive; as, dynam*ite: Anat.*, a part, segment, or joint of a body; Chem., 1, a salt of an acid the name of which ends in -ous, as phosph*ite;* 2, a saccharine substance; as, dulc*ite: Mineral.*, certain rocks; as, gran*ite.*

i-tem (ī'tĕm), n. [Lat. = in like manner], 1, a separate article, entry, or particular; a sum entered in an account; 2, a newspaper paragraph: Obs., a saying or hint, preceded by the word item:—adv. also; likewise: used to introduce a statement or each article in an enumeration.

i-tem-ize (ī'tĕm-īz), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -ized (-īzd), p.pr. -izing], to state by items; as, to itemize a bill.—n. i'tem-i-za'tion.—n. i'tem-iz"er.

it-er-ance (ĭt'ĕr-ăns), n. [see iterate], iteration; repetition.—adj. it'er-ant.

it-er-ate (ĭt'ĕr-āt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -ated, p.pr. -ating], [< Lat. iterare (-atus) < iterum, again], to utter a second time; repeat.—adj. it'er-a-tive.

it-er-a-tion (ĭt"ĕr-ā'shŭn), n. repetition, as of something said or done; reiteration.

Ith-a-ca (ĭth'ă-kă), n. [< Gk.], the island home of Odysseus, off the west coast of Greece.

I-thunn (ē'thōōn), n. [O.N.]. Norse Myth., the wife of Bragi and keeper of the golden apples eaten by the gods to retain youth. Also, I'thun; I'dun.

I-thu-ri-el (ĭ-thū'rĭ-ĕl), n. [Heb. = the discovery of God], in Milton's "Paradise Lost," an angel sent to find Satan.

i-tin-er-a-cy (ī-tĭn'ĕr-ă-sĭ; ĭ-), n. [see itinerate], the practice of traveling about, especially with a specific purpose or with routine duties.

i-tin-er-an-cy (ī-tĭn'ĕr-ăn-sĭ; ĭ-), n. 1, a passing from place to place, especially for some specific purpose, as preaching; 2, the practice of preaching in a circuit; 3, a body of officials passing from place to place in the discharge of duty.

i-tin-er-ant (ī-tĭn'ĕr-ănt; ĭ-), adj. passing from place to place; as, an itinerant preacher:—n. one who passes from place to place.

i-tin-er-a-ry (ī-tĭn'ĕr-ă-rĭ; ĭ-), adj. 1, pertaining to traveling, a journey, or a route; 2, traveling from place to place:—n. [pl. -ries (-rĭz)], 1, a traveler's guide- or route book; also, a plan of an extended journey; 2, a route; 3, a record of a journey.

i-tin-er-ate (ī-tĭn'ĕr-āt; ĭ-), v.i. [p.t. and p.p. -ated, p.pr. -ating], [< Lat. itinerari, to travel < iter (itineris), journey], to travel from place to place, usually for a definite purpose, as preaching.

-i-tis n. suffix, [< Gk. -itis], forming the names of inflammatory diseases; as, tonsill*itis*.

its (ĭts), pron. the possessive case of the pronoun it; as, the tree has lost its leaves. Also, Archaic, it.

it's (ĭts), a contraction of the two words, it is; as, it's a poor rule that won't work both ways.

it-self (ĭt-sĕlf'), pron. [it+self], the intensive or reflexive form of it.

I-u-lus (ī-ōō'lŭs), n. [Lat.] Class. Myth., the son of Æneas: also called Ascanius.

I-van-hoe (ī'văn-hō), n. [M.E.], the hero of Sir Walter Scott's so-named historical romance, of the time of King Richard I of England.

-ive adj. suffix, [< Lat. -ivus], relating to; of the nature of; as, act*ive;* fest*ive;* also in nouns, which in reality are adjectives used substantively; as, nat*ive.*

I've (īv), a colloquial contraction of the two words I have; as, I've no time to do it.

i-vied (ī'vĭd), adj. [see ivy], covered or overgrown with ivy; as, ivied walls.

i-vo-ry (ī'vō-rĭ), n. [pl. -ries (-rĭz)], [< O.F. ivoire < Lat. eboreus < ebur (eboris), ivory], 1, the hard, white, elastic substance which forms the tusks of certain mammals, as the elephant and walrus; 2, ivory color; whiteness; 3, a substance resembling ivory; 4, an article, as a carving, made of ivory: pl. teeth: used humorously: Slang, pl. 1, dice; 2, billiard balls; 3, the keys of a piano:—adj. made of, or like, ivory.

i-vo-ry black a fine, soft, black pigment made by burning ivory in a closed vessel; also, bone black of fine quality.

i-vo-ry nut the seed of a South American palm, from which vegetable ivory, used for buttons, etc., is obtained.

i-vo-ry palm the palm (Phytelephas macrocarpa) yielding the ivory nut.

i-vo-ry-type (ī'vō-rĭ-tīp"), n. [ivory+type], Photog., a picture in natural colors, made by placing upon a strong print a light print, colored on the back and rendered translucent by varnishing.

i-vy (ī'vĭ), n. [pl. ivies (-vĭz)], [< A.S. īfig: source uncertain], any of several clinging evergreen or deciduous vines with ornamental leaves, as English ivy (Hedera helix) or Boston ivy (Parthenocissus tricuspidata); also, any of various similar creeping plants.

I. W. abbr. Isle of Wight:—I. W. W., Industrial Workers of the World.

Ix-i-on (ĭk-sī'ŏn), n. [< Gk.], Gk. Myth., father of the centaurs: bound in Tartarus to a wheel as a punishment for aspiring to the love of Hera.

ix-tle (ĭks'tlē; -tlĭ; ĭs'-), n. [< Mex. istle], the fiber from any of several tropical American plants, used in basketry, rope making, etc. Also, ix'tli.

I-yar (ē"yär'), n. [< Heb. iyār], the second month of the ancient Hebrew ecclesiastical year, nearly equivalent to May: earlier called Zif (see App. II).

-ize v. suffix, [< Fr. -iser], meaning: 1, to subject or treat to the action denoted by the root; as, crit*icize;* 2, to make or make like; as, fossil*ize;* human*ize;* 3, to act like; treat after the manner or method of; as, Anglic*ize;* macadam*ize;* 4, to treat or combine with; as, oxid*ize;* carbon*ize.* Also, especially Br., -ise.

iz-zard (ĭz'ărd), n. [< earlier ezed < zed, q.v.], the letter Z: an old name; as, from a to izzard.

J

J, j (jā), n. [pl. J's; Js; j's; js (jāz)], the tenth letter of the English alphabet, or its sound (for certain uses see alphabet, NOTE): Archaic, used for final i in Roman numerals; as, xij = 12.

J. abbr. 1, Judge; Justice; 2, joule, a unit of energy or of work.

jab (jăb), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. jabbed (jăbd), p.pr. jabbing], [prob. imit.], to poke or punch; thrust something sharp into:—v.i. to make a thrust, as with something pointed:—n. a thrust or punch.

jab-ber (jăb'ĕr), v.t. [prob. imit.], to utter unintelligibly:—v.i. to talk rapidly and indistinctly; chatter:—n. incoherent or unintelligible talk.

Syn., v. babble, chatter, gabble, prate, prattle.

ja-bot (zhă"bō'), n. [Fr.], a lace frill on a woman's waist, or, formerly, on a man's shirt front.

ja-cinth (jā'sĭnth; jās'ĭnth), n. [< O.F. jacinthe < Lat. hyacinthus, hyacinth (flower or gem) < Gk. huakinthos, iris], a reddish orange gem: Obs., a hyacinth, flower or plant. See hy'a-cinth, Pfd. S.

[1]jack (jăk), n. [perh. < John, influenced by Fr. Jacques, James], 1, a young man, especially a man of the common people, or a menial or assistant; sometimes written Jack; hence, 2, any one of several mechanical devices which may be considered to do the work of an assistant, servant, or the like; as, a boot-jack, a roasting jack for turning meat on a spit, or a portable mechanism for lifting a great weight; 3, the male of any of several animals, especially the ass; 4, any of several fish, especially a small pike or pickerel; 5, a light which casts a bright glare, used to attract game in hunting or fishing at night; also called jack light; jack lamp; 6, in the game of bowls, a small bowl used as a mark; 7, a mechanical figure that strikes the bell in certain large clocks: Cards, any one of the four knaves: Mus., a part of the action of a piano: Naut., 1, a schooner-rigged vessel used in the Newfoundland fisheries; 2, a small flag, usually flown at the bowsprit, often the same as the canton of the ensign, in the United States a blue field with white stars: when emblematic of union called union jack; Elec., in combination with a plug, a device by which connection can readily be effected in electric currents: pl. the game of jackstones: Jack, 1, a nickname for John; 2, a young man: used with Jill to mean any youth and maid; 3, a familiar term of address among laborers, sailors, etc.; hence, a sailor: often jack-tar: Jack-of-all-trades, one who can do various kinds of work, often implying lack of skill in any line:—v.t. 1, to raise or hoist by means of a jack, levers, blocks, or other mechanical devices: often with up; 2, to hunt or fish for at night with a dazzling light: Slang, 1, to incite to renewed effort: with up; 2, to give up, as a job: with up:—v.i. to hunt or fish with the jack light.

WEIGHT-LIFTING JACKS
1, ratchet type automobile jack; 2, screw type heavy-duty jack.

[2]jack (jăk), n. [< Fr. jaque, a coat of mail], any defensive garment made of two interlined folds of leather or linen: Archaic, 1, a coat of mail; 2, a leather or metal pitcher or mug: also called blackjack.

[3]jack (jăk), n. [< Port. jaca < Malayalam chakka, native name], 1, a certain tree of the Indian archipelago yielding a fruit similar to, but larger than, the true breadfruit, and wood for building and cabinetwork: also called jack tree; 2, the fruit of this tree.

Jack (jăk), n. [abbr. of Jacqueminot], the Jacqueminot rose, a popular hardy crimson rose.

jack-al (jăk'ôl), n. [< Turk. chakāl < Pers. shagāl, jackal], 1, any of several doglike flesh-eating animals of the Old World (especially Canis aureus), which hunt at night in packs; 2, one who does base work for another: from the incorrect supposition that the jackal hunts prey for the lion.

jack-a-napes (jăk′ə-nāps″), n. [< nickname Jack Napes, applied to William de la Pole, Duke of Suffolk (?–1450) whose badge was a clog and chain like that of a tame ape], a conceited or impertinent fellow; a pert child: Archaic, a monkey; ape.

Jack and Jill (jil), 1, in an old English nursery rime, a lad and lass; 2, hence, any young man and his sweetheart. Also, Jack and Gill.

jack-ass (jăk′ăs″), n. [Jack + ass], 1, the male ass; donkey; 2, contemptuously, a blockhead.

jack boot a large boot reaching above the knee. Also, n. jack′boot″.

jack-daw (jăk′dô″), n. [Jack + daw], a European bird (Corrus monedula) of the crow family, which may be taught to imitate human speech.

jack-et (jăk′ĕt), n. [< O.F. jaquet, jacket, dim. of jaque, coat of mail], 1, a short tailless coat; also, anything put on like a coat, but not used as clothing; as, a cork jacket, used as a life preserver; 2, a covering for protection, insulation, etc.; as, a water jacket for cooling an engine:—v.t. to cover with a jacket.

jack-in-a-box (jăk′ən-ə-bŏks′), n. 1, a tropical tree bearing a fruit that rattles when shaken; 2, a jack-in-the-box.

jack-in-the-box (jăk′ən-thə-bŏks′), n. 1, a toy consisting of a grotesque figure which springs from within a box when the lid is released; 2, a kind of firework; 3, a rogue; cheat.

jack-in-the-pul-pit (jăk′ən-thə-po͝ol′pĭt), n. an American plant (Arisæma triphyllum) of the arum family, with inconspicuous flowers borne on a fleshy axis covered by a leaflike hood, or spathe (see also illus. under spathe).

JACK-IN-THE-PULPIT (⅛)

Jack Ketch (kĕch), [name of a notorious Eng. executioner of the time of James II], a hangman; executioner.

jack-knife (jăk′nīf″), n. [pl. jackknives (-nīvz″)], [Jack + knife], a pocketknife larger and stronger than a penknife.

jack light a light to dazzle or attract game in hunting or fishing at night: also called jack lamp; jack.

jack-o′-lan-tern (jăk′ə-lăn″-tərn), n. 1, a decorative lantern suggesting a human face, used especially at Halloween: usually made of, or in imitation of, a hollowed pumpkin; 2, a will-o′-the-wisp.

jack pine the prince's pine (Pinus divaricata), a slender pine of North America.

jack rab-bit any of several species of large hares of western North America.

jack-screw (jăk′skro͞o″), n. [Jack + screw], a pressing or lifting device operated by a screw (for illus. see Jack).

jack-stay (jăk′stā″), n. [Jack + stay], Naut., one of a set of ropes or rods which extend along the yards of a ship and to which sails are fastened.

jack-stone (jăk′stōn″), n. [Jack + stone], one of a set of pebbles or small metal pieces which are picked up in various ways in playing a children's game: pl. any of the games so played; jacks.

jack-straw (jăk′strô″), n. [Jack + straw], 1, a man of straw; a man of little consequence; 2, any of the strips of wood or metal used in a child's game, in which the players try in turn to lift the strips out of a pile without causing other strips to move: pl. the game so played.

jack-tar (jăk′-tär′), n. a sailor: used patronizingly or humorously.

Ja-cob (jā′kŭb), n. [< Heb. ya'aqōb, a supplanter], Bib., a Hebrew patriarch, younger son of Isaac and Rebekah, and ancestor, through his twelve sons, of the twelve tribes of Israel: also called Israel.

Jac-o-be-an (jăk″ō-bē′ăn; jə-kō′bē-ăn), adj. [< Lat. Jacobus, James], of or pertaining to the times or reign of James I of England; specifically, designating a style of architecture and design characteristic of that period: Bib., of or pertaining to St. James the Less or the Epistle of James.

Jac-o-bin (jăk′ō-bĭn), n. [Fr. = Dominican friar: because the order was established in the convent of the Church of St. Jacques in Paris < Lat. Jacobus, James], 1, a French friar of the Dominican order; 2, one of a club of very extreme democrats during the French Revolution of 1789, instigators of the Reign of Terror: so called because the club met in the convent of the Jacobin friars; 3, hence, any violently radical political extremist: jacobin, a pigeon with ruffed neck feathers which resemble a hood. —adj. Jac″o-bin′ic.—n. Jac′o-bin-ism.

Jac-o-bite (jăk′ō-bīt), n. [see Jacobean], in English history, a supporter of James II after his dethronement; also, a supporter of the claim to the throne of the son or the grandson of James II, known respectively as the Old and the Young Pretender. —adj. Jac″o-bit′i-cal (-bĭt′ĭ-kăl).—n. Jac′o-bit-ism.

Ja-cob's lad-der Bib., a ladder reaching from earth to heaven, seen by Jacob in a dream (Gen. 28:12); Naut., a rope ladder with wooden rungs, for ascending from deck to rigging: also, Jacob's-ladder; Bot., a plant (Polemonium cæruleum) about two feet high with pinnate leaves resembling a ladder, and terminal clusters of bright blue, sometimes white, flowers: also, Jacob's-ladder.

jac-o-net (jăk′ō-nĕt), n. [< Hind. Jagannāthi < name of town where made], 1, a fine, soft, white cotton material, originally made in India; 2, a cotton cloth with one side glazed, usually dyed. Also, jac′co-net; jac′co-not.

Jacque-mi-not (jăk′mĭ-nō; zhăk″mē″nō″), n. [< J. F. Jacqueminot (1787–1865), Fr. general], a kind of crimson hybrid perpetual rose.

Jacque-rie (zhăk″rē′), n. [< Jacques Bonhomme, a contemptuous name given by nobles to a peasant], the peasant uprising of 1358, in France; hence, any peasant insurrection.

jac-u-late (jăk′ū-lāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -lated, p.pr. -lating], [< Lat. jaculari (-atus) < jacere, to throw], Rare, to hurl, as a weapon:—v.i. Rare, to dart.—n. jac″u-la′tion.—adj. jac′u-la-to-ry.

[1]jade (jād), n. [source uncertain], 1, an inferior or worn-out horse; 2, a vicious woman; 3, a saucy young woman: used contemptuously or humorously:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. jaded, p.pr. jading], to tire by long-continued labor:—v.i. to become weary; flag.

Syn., v. weary, fag, exhaust, fatigue, wear out.

[2]jade (jād), n. [< Fr. le jade for l'ejade, the jade < Sp. (piedra de) ijada, (stone of) the colic (because supposed to cure colic) < Lat. ilia, pl., flanks], a hard semiprecious stone, green, brownish, white, or blue, used for gems and ornaments, and often carved: properly, a variety of pyroxene, essentially a silicate of sodium and aluminum, in mineralogy called jadeite (jād′īt).

jae-ger (yā′gĕr), n. [see jäger], 1, a huntsman: usually written jäger; 2, a German or Austrian rifleman: usually written jäger; 3, (also, jā′gĕr), any of several strong, long-winged, swimming birds closely resembling gulls, which rob gulls and other birds of their food; the skua: also written jäger.

Ja-el (jā′ĕl), n. [Heb.], Bib., the woman who invited Sisera, an enemy of the Israelites, into her tent and killed him while he slept, by driving a nail through his temples (Judg. 4: 18–21).

[1]jag (jăg), n. [prob. imit.], a sharp projecting point; a notch:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. jagged (jăgd), p.pr. jagging], to cut or tear into notches. Also, jagg.

[2]jag (jăg), n. [source uncertain], Collog., a small load; Slang, a drinking spree; also, enough liquor to intoxicate.

J. A. G. abbr. Judge Advocate General, chief of the legal bureau of the army or navy.

Jag-an-nath (jŭg′ə-nät; -nôt), n. [< Hind. Jagan-nāth, lord of the world], the Hindu god Krishna, the eighth embodiment of Vishnu, whose worship centers about the chief idol at Puri, in Orissa, before whose car it was formerly erroneously supposed that devotees cast themselves to death (see Juggernaut, illus.). Also, Jag″an-na′tha; Jug′ger-naut.

jä-ger (yā′gĕr), n. [Ger. = a hunter], 1, a huntsman; also, a German or Austrian rifleman: also, jaeger; 2, (also, jā′gĕr), a gull-like bird: usually, jaeger.

jag-ged (jăg′ĕd), p.adj. [see [1]jag], notched; irregular on the edge; cut or torn in points.—adv. jag′ged-ly.—n. jag′ged-ness.

Syn. rough, pointed, broken, uneven, cleft, notched.

jag-ger-y (jăg′ĕr-ĭ), n. [< Hind. jāgrī, palm sugar], a coarse East Indian palm sugar.

jag-uar (jă′g-wär; jə-gwär′), n. [< S. Amer. Ind. yaguara], a fierce forest cat (Felis onca), resembling the leopard, having yellow fur with black spots and a body three to four feet long, ranging from Texas to Patagonia.

JAGUAR (1/35)

Jah (yä; jä), n. [< Heb. Yāh, shortened form of Yahweh, Jehovah], a contracted form of Jehovah, Jahveh, or Yahweh, often forming part of a proper name.

ja-had (jə-häd'), n. [see jihad], a Mohammedan holy war. Also, je-had'. See ji-had', Pfd. S.

Jah-weh (yä'wĕ), n. [< Heb. yahweh < hāwāh, to exist], Jehovah: a restoration of the supposed original name. See Yah'weh, Pfd. S.

Jah-wist (yä'wĭst), n. the author of certain passages in the Old Testament in which God is styled Jahweh, Yahweh, etc.: distinguished from Elohist. Also, Jah'vist. See Yah'wist, Pfd. S.

jai a-lai (hī' ä-lī'), [Sp. < Basque jai, festival + alai, merry], a game of Spain and tropical America, played by two players on a large court, who alternately hurl a ball at a wall with long wicker rackets, returning it on the rebound.

jail (jāl), n. [< O.F. jaiole, prison, cage < L.L. gabiola, cage, dim. of L.L. gabia, for Lat. cavea, cage < cavus, hollow], a prison; especially, a place where persons guilty of minor offenses are confined: jail fever, typhus fever, formerly common in certain jails:—v.t. to imprison. Also, Br., gaol (jāl).

jail-bird (jāl'bûrd"), n. [jail + bird], 1, a convict; 2, a habitual criminal; 3, one who has been confined in a jail. Also, Br., gaol'bird".

jail de-liv-er-y the breaking out or forcible liberation of prisoners, without legal authority: Old Eng. Law, the clearing of a jail by bringing all prisoners to trial: written gaol delivery.

jail-er (jāl'ẽr), n. [see jail], a person in charge of a jail. Also, jail'or; Br., gaol'er (jāl'ẽr).

Jain (jīn; jān), n. [< Hind. < Sans. jaina, of a Buddha < jina, overcomer; a Buddha < root ji, to conquer], an adherent of an East Indian religious system, called Jainism, resembling both Buddhism and Brahmanism and characterized by the reverence paid to holy men of past times, called jinas: also called Jaina: —adj. pertaining to this religious system.—n. Jain'ism.

Ja-i-rus (jā'ĭ-rŭs; jă-ī'rŭs), n. [Heb.], Bib., the father of a girl whom Jesus is reported to have restored to life (Matt. 9:18).

jal-ap (jăl'ăp), n. [Fr. < Sp. jalapa < Xalapa, Jalapa, a town in Mexico where first obtained < Aztec xalli, sand + pan, upon], the dried root of a Mexican climbing plant (Exogonium purga), from which a purgative extract or powder is made.

ja-lou-sie (zhă"lōō"zē'), n. [Fr. = jealousy: see jealous: so called because it prevents strangers from seeing in], a blind or shutter composed of overlapping slats like louver boards (which see for illus.), sloping upward from without, so as to admit light while excluding sun and rain; a Venetian blind.

1jam (jăm), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. jammed (jămd), p.pr. jamming], [prob. imit.], 1, to squeeze or crush into a compact mass; press in tightly; 2, to block or render immovable by crowding:—v.i. to become tightly wedged or packed:—n. a dense collection or crowd.

2jam (jăm), n. [prob. < 1jam], a thick, sweet fruit preserve.

Jam. abbr. Jamaica, the largest island in the British West Indies, 80 miles southeast of Cuba.

Ja-mai-can (jə-mā'kăn), n. [< place name], a native or inhabitant of Jamaica.

jamb (jăm), n. [< Fr. jambe, leg < L.L. gamba, hoof, perh. < Celt. camb-, crooked], one of the upright sides of a doorway, window opening, or fireplace: Hist., a piece of armor for the leg (for illus. see arms).

jam-bo-ree (jăm"bō-rē'), n. [source uncertain], 1, in euchre, a hand containing the five highest cards, giving a score of 16; 2, an international gathering of boy scouts, occurring every four years: Slang, an uproarious spree or carouse.

James (jāmz), n. [Fr. < Lat. Jacobus < Heb. Ya'aqōb, a supplanter], Bib., 1, one of the twelve apostles, the son of Zebedee; 2, another apostle, the son of Alpheus; 3, the James described as the Lord's brother (Gal. 1:19); also, a book of the New Testament, traditionally ascribed to him.

James-town weed (jāmz'toun"), [see Jimson weed], a coarse, poisonous plant: also called thorn apple. See Jim'son weed, Pfd. S.

Jam-shid (jăm-shēd'), n. [Pers.], Pers. Myth., king of a race of elves or fairies, called peris, who for his boastfulness was condemned to a life on earth, where he reigned 700 years. Also, Jam-shyd'.

Jan. abbr. January, the first month of the year according to the present, or Gregorian, calendar.

jan-gle (jăng'gl), v.i. [p.t. and p.p. -gled (-gld), p.pr. -gling], [< O.F. jangler, to jangle; prattle; talk saucily], 1, to sound out of tune; be discordant; 2, to gossip; chatter; 3, to quarrel or wrangle:—v.t. to cause to sound discordantly:—n. 1, a discordant sound, as of bells ringing together; 2, a wrangle: Obs., chatter.

jan-i-tor (jăn'ĭ-tẽr), n. [Lat. < janua, door], 1, a doorkeeper; porter; 2, the caretaker of a building or apartment.—n. fem. jan'i-tress.

Jan-i-za-ry (jăn'ĭ-zā-rĭ), n. [pl. -ries (-rĭz)], [< Fr. janissaire < Turk. yeñi, new + cheri, soldiery], 1, formerly, one of a military force, organized in the 14th century, which acted as the standing army of the Turkish Empire: suppressed in 1826 because of its unruliness; 2, now, a Turkish soldier. Also, jan'i-za-ry; Jan'is-sa-ry; jan'is-sa-ry.

Jan-u-a-ry (jăn'ū-ă-rĭ), n. [< Lat. Januarius (mensis), (the month) of Janus, q.v.], the first month of the year, having 31 days.

Ja-nus (jā'nŭs), n. [Lat.], an ancient Roman god, protector of doorways and gates, able to look into the past and future, and hence patron of beginnings and endings, whose head had two faces on opposite sides, and whose temple in the Roman Forum was closed only in times of peace.

JANUS

Ja-nus-faced (jā'nŭs-fāst"), adj. looking both ways; two-faced; hence, deceitful; misleading.

ja-pan (jə-păn'), n. [< Japan < Malay Japung < Chin. Jih-pun, sunrise < jih, sun + pun, origin], 1, Japanese lacquer, a hard, brilliant varnish for wood or metal; also, any coating resembling it; 2, a similar preparation mixed with turpentine and litharge, used as a drier; 3, collectively, articles lacquered in the Japanese manner: black japan, a hard, black varnish made from linseed oil and asphalt: used on metal: Japan clover, a bushy forage plant of eastern Asia, and common in the United States: Japan rose, 1, any of several roses of Japan; 2, a camellia (which see):—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -panned (-păn'd'), p.pr. -panning], to coat with japan or similar varnish.

Jap-a-nese (jăp"ă-nēz'; -nēs'), adj. pertaining to Japan, or to its inhabitants or language: Japanese barberry, a dwarf variety of barberry used for ornamental hedges: Japanese beetle, a small, bronze-green, very destructive beetle (Popillia japonica), unintentionally brought to the neighborhood of Philadelphia in 1916 (for colored illus. see insect): Japanese ivy, an ornamental climbing plant with glossy, dark-green foliage: Japanese persimmon, a fine-flavored persimmon (Diospyros kaki) of China and Japan: Japanese plum, a tree (Prunus triflora) of China and Japan, bearing a large, sweet, yellow or light-red fruit; also, its fruit: Japanese quince, 1, the loquat (which see); 2, an ornamental quince (Cydonia japonica) bearing red flowers: —n. 1, a native of Japan; 2, the language of Japan.

Jap-a-nesque (jăp"ă-nĕsk'), adj. resembling the Japanese style of art.

jape (jāp), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. japed (jāpt), p.pr. japing], [perh. < O.F. japer, to bark], Archaic, to mock or trick:—v.i. Archaic, to jest or jeer:—n. a jest or jibe.

Ja-pheth (jā'fĕth), n. [Heb.], Bib., the youngest son of Noah (Gen. 5:32).

Ja-phet-ic (jə-fĕt'ĭk), adj. pertaining to Japheth: formerly used loosely to designate the Caucasian races of Europe and some adjacent parts of Asia: distinguished from Semitic and Hamitic.

ja-pon-i-ca (jə-pŏn'ĭ-kă), n. [< Mod.Lat. japonicus (-ca), Japanese < Fr. Japon, Japan: see japan], 1, the camellia, or Japan rose, a plant with white or red roselike flowers; 2, the Japanese quince.

Ja-ques (jā'kwēz; jāk'wēs; zhāk), n. [< Fr. Jacques < Lat. Jacobus < Heb. Ya'aqōb: see James], in Shakespeare's "As You Like It," a melancholy philosopher, attendant upon the exiled duke.

1jar (jär), v.i. [p.t. and p.p. jarred (järd), p.pr. jarring], [prob. imit.], 1, to give out a harsh sound; be discordant; 2, to shake; vibrate; 3, to clash; disagree:—v.t. 1, to make discordant; 2, to cause to shake:—n. 1, a harsh sound; discord; 2, a sudden shake or quivering; 3, a conflict of opinion.

Syn., v. tremble, jolt, quiver, disturb. (Cf. shake.)

2jar (jär), n. [< Fr. jarre < Sp. jarra < Arab. jarrah, jar, jug], 1, a more or less cylindrical, broad-mouthed vessel of earthenware or glass; 2, the contents or capacity of such a vessel: Leyden jar, a glass jar coated nearly to the top outside and inside with tin foil and used as an electrical condenser (see illus. page 564).

3jar (jär), n. [M.E. char < A.S. cerr, a turn], a turn: obsolete except in ajar, and in on the jar, ajar.

jar-di-nière (zhär"dē"nyär'), n. [Fr. = female gardener; pot or stand for flowers < O.N.F. gardin, garden < O.L.G. gardo, a yard], an ornamental porcelain or metal flower stand or holder.

jar-gon (jär'gŏn), n. [O.F.: source uncertain], 1, originally, the twitter of birds; hence, unintelligible utterance; gibberish; 2, a mixture of two or more languages or dialects, such as pidgin English; 3, speech containing the peculiar expressions of a party, sect, etc.; cant; lingo; as, psychologists' jargon:—v.i. to use unintelligible speech.

Syn., n. gabble, argot, slang. (See language.)

jar-go-nelle (jär"gō-nĕl'), n. [Fr. dim. of jargon], an early ripening variety of pear.

jarl (yärl; järl), n. [O.N. = nobleman], in old Norse history, a nobleman; a chieftain.

Jas. abbr. James; especially, a book of the New Testament of this name.

ja-sey (jā'zĭ), n. [source uncertain], Humorous, in England, a wig, especially one of worsted.

jas-mine (jăs'mĭn), n. [< Arab. < Pers. yāsmīn, jasmine], 1, any of a genus (Jasminum) of shrubs of the olive family, bearing fragrant flowers; 2, any of various other shrubs, as the Carolina jasmine (Gelsemium sempervirens), a climbing shrub with evergreen leaves and handsome fragrant yellow flowers; 3, a perfume made from the flower of the jasmine: jasmine oil, an oil distilled from jasmine flowers, used in perfumery. Also, jas'min; jes'sa-mine (jĕs'ā-mĭn).

Ja-son (jā'sŭn), n. [< Gk.], Gk. Myth., son of Æson, who, at the bidding of his jealous uncle Pelias, organized the expedition of the Argonauts to Colchis, and stole the Golden Fleece from King Æëtes with the help of the enchantress Medea, whom he married and later deserted for a princess of Corinth.

jas-per (jăs'pĕr), n. [< O.F. jaspre < Gk. iaspis, a bright stone < Oriental source], a many-shaded opaque variety of silica, partially quartz and akin to flint: usually red, brown, or yellow: sometimes polished and made into ornaments: Bib., a stone, probably green chalcedony, used in the breastplate of the high priest (Ex. 28:20).

jaun-dice (jän'dĭs; jôn'dĭs), n. [< Fr. jaunice, jaundice < jaune, yellow < Lat. galbinus, greenish yellow < galbus, yellow], 1, a condition characterized by yellowness of the eyes, skin, and urine, due to the presence of bile in the blood, resulting from a variety of causes: also known as icterus; 2, a mental condition such as jealousy, which distorts the judgment: —v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -diced (-dĭst), p.pr. -dicing], 1, to affect with, or as with, jaundice; 2, to affect with envy or prejudice.—p.adj. jaun'diced (-dĭst).

jaunt (jänt; jônt), n. [source uncertain], a short excursion or ramble:—v.i. to roam; take a short trip: Obs., 1, to jolt; 2, to trudge wearily.

Syn., n. excursion, journey, tour, trip, stroll.

jaunt-ing car a two-wheeled, one-horse vehicle with a seat for the driver in front and two back-to-back, lengthwise seats for passengers, with footboards over the wheels: used especially in Ireland.

JAUNTING CAR

jaun-ty (jän'tĭ; jôn'tĭ), adj. [comp. -tier, superl. -tiest], [< earlier jantee < Fr. gentil, genteel < Lat. gentilis, belonging to a clan], airy; gay; stylish; nonchalant.—adv. jaun'ti-ly.—n. jaun'ti-ness.

Ja-va man an apelike man whose fossil remains were found in Java: a species of pithecanthrope.

Jav-a-nese (jăv"ā-nēz'; -nēs), n. [< Java, nat. name], 1, a native or inhabitant of Java, an island of the Dutch East Indies; 2, the language of Java:—adj. of or pertaining to Java.

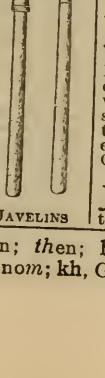
jave-lin (jăv'lĭn; jăv'ē-lĭn), n. [< Fr. javeline, javelin], a light spear to be thrown by hand.



JAVELINS

jaw (jô), n. [perhaps akin to chew, chaw], 1, Anat., in man and most other vertebrates, one of the two bony structures which frame the mouth and in which the teeth are set: also called jawbone: in technical language called maxilla (upper) and mandible (lower); 2, the lower part of the cheek covering the jawbone; 3, anything that resembles an animal's jaw in form or power of gripping; as, the jaws of a vise: Slang, superfluous talk; scolding:—v.i. to talk tediously: Colloq., to sermonize:—v.t. Colloq., to scold; nag; lecture.

jay (jā), n. [< O.F. jai, a jay, perh. < O.H.G. gāhi, quick], any of several noisy, restless birds of Europe and America, akin to the crow, with bright, handsome feathers: especially, in the United States, the blue jay (Cyanocitta cristata): Slang, a chatterer: a poor actor: simpleton.

jay walk-er Slang, a pedestrian who ignores regular street crossings or traffic signals.

jazz (jăz), n. [source uncertain: traditionally from name of Jasbo Brown, a negro musician on the Mississippi in the 19th cent.], Colloq., ragtime music, usually loud and in syncopated measures accompanied by novel and acrobatic musical effects, played generally on the trombone and nonorchestral instruments such as the banjo, mandolin, ukulele, saxophone, and piano, and deriving its distinguishing effect by the sliding from one tone to another:—v.t. 1, to play (music) so as to make it resemble jazz; 2, to render lively or slightly rowdy: with up:—v.i. to act in a gay, lively, or rowdyish way.

J. C. abbr. 1, Jesus Christ; 2, Julius Cæsar; 3, [Lat. juriscconsultus], one learned in the law; 4, Justice Clerk, a Scottish legal officer:—J. C. D., [Lat. juris civilis doctor], Doctor of Civil Law:—J. D., [Lat. jurum doctor; juridicae doctor], Doctor of Laws.

jeal-ous (jĕl'ŭs), adj. [< O.F. gelos, jealous < L.L. zelosus, full of zeal < Gk. zēlos, zeal], 1, characterized by envy or suspicious fear; as, to be jealous of a man's prosperity; 2, apprehensive of a rival in affection; deeply resentful of successful rivalry; 3, intolerant of all but exclusive worship and love: said of God (Ex. 20:5); 4, suspiciously or anxiously watchful; as, to be jealous of a good name: Archaic, zealous; Obs., apprehensive; afraid.—adv. jeal'ous-ly.

jeal-ous-y (jĕl'ŭs-ĭ), n. [pl. -ies (-ĭz)], 1, envy; 2, resentment toward, or fear of, a rival; 3, insistence on exclusive affection; 4, watchful care.

Syn. envy. Jealousy is a passionate desire to keep what one has, intensified by the fear of losing it. In its noble sense, jealousy names a watchfulness and care that amount to zeal; as, the rights of a minor child should be preserved with jealousy. In its bad sense, jealousy is the green-eyed monster of fiction; it has the apprehensive or suspicious quality of fear, and is akin to anger, especially in its tendency to retaliation or revenge. Envy is a base passion, fed by the grudging hatred with which it covetously contemplates the advantages or possessions of others. Envy may be less intensely personal than jealousy, since one may feel envy of a friend without wishing him harm. Jealousy can be appeased, though often temporarily, by arguments, proofs, or the like, by the long-suffering object; envy is always sick over what others have and it lacks. Envy is found only between individuals; jealousy is also applicable to bodies of individuals; as, democracies show a proper jealousy of their liberties.

jean (jēn; jān), n. [prob. < M.E. gene < L.L. Janua, Genoa, whence it was brought], a kind of twilled cotton cloth: pl. clothes made of this cloth.

jeer (jēr), v.t. [source uncertain], to sneer at; make loud fun of; ridicule:—v.i. to speak in a sneering or sarcastic manner:—n. a sneer; coarse ridicule.

Syn., v. scoff, sneer, gibe, taunt, mock. To scoff is to direct mockery or insolent derision, especially at serious and sacred things, particularly at religion, as exemplified in Goldsmith's famous line, "and fools who came to scoff remained to pray." To sneer is to show contempt as by curling the lip, smiling derisively, or by other facial expression; one may sneer also by uttering derisive remarks, usually ironical, often covert. Sneers may be cast at a person, thing, or cause. Gibes and jeers, which are always uttered, are directed only toward persons; a gibe is ill-natured, often disguised under fair speech, and usually reproachful. A jeer is insulting, satirical, and unsoftened; as, he could stand the jeers of the crowd better than the privately bitter gibes of his wife. To scoff is irreverent; to sneer, gibe, and jeer are at best unfitting, at worst vulgar.

jeers (jērz), n.pl. [source uncertain], Naut., tackle for moving the lower yards of a vessel.

Jef-fer-so-ni-an (jĕf"ēr-sō'nĭ-ăn), adj. [< proper name], characteristic of the American statesman, Thomas Jefferson (1743–1826), or his principles or policies.

je-had (jē-häd'), n. [see jihad], a Mohammedan holy war. Also, ja-had'. See ji-had', Pfd. S.

Je-ho-vah (jē-hō'vä), n. [16th-cent. Eng.], a reconstructed form, commonly used since the 17th century, of the proper name of the God of the Hebrews, formed by combining the consonants J H V H of Yahaveh, with J for Y, with the vowel points of the word Adōnāi (Lord), which in reading aloud was substituted by the Hebrews for the name Yahaveh, a word too sacred for ordinary utterance: the Yahweh, Jahreh, etc., of modern Biblical scholars; in devotional use, God, the Lord; the Almighty.—adj. Je-ho'vic.

Syn. God, Lord, Almighty, Deity, Creator.

Je-ho-vist (jē-hō'vĭst), n. 1, as established by modern critical research, the author of those portions of the Pentateuch in which God is spoken of in the Hebrew as Jehovah, that is, Yahweh, or Jahveh, instead of as Elohim, as in other portions; 2, one who maintains that the spelling and pronunciation Jehovah correspond to the original Hebrew.—adj. Je"ho-vis'tic.

Je-hu (jē'hū), n. [Heb.], Bib., a warrior and king of Israel, who drove his chariots furiously (2 Kings 9:20); hence, jehu, Colloq., a driver of horses, especially a reckless driver.

je-june (jē-jōōn'), adj. [< Lat. jejunus, fasting; dry; empty], barren; dry; without interest; as, a jejune tale.—adv. je-june'ly.—n. je-june'ness.

je-ju-num (jē-jōō'nŭm), n. [pl. jejuna (-nə)], [L.L. < Lat. jejunus, empty: so called because formerly supposed to be empty after death], Anat., the middle part of the small intestine, extending from the duodenum to the ileum (see intestine, illus.).

Je-kyll, Dr., and Mr. Hyde (jē'kĭl; hīd), the two personalities, different phases of the same individual, together forming the hero of a tale by Stevenson, Dr. Jekyll being a kindly physician who, by drinking a certain potion, can change to Mr. Hyde, a person of criminal tendencies, who is finally unable to recover his true character; hence, any person having two distinct personalities, especially an evil and a benevolent one.

jel-li-fy (jĕl'ĭ-fī), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -fied (-fīd), p.pr. -fying], [see jelly], to make gelatinous:—v.i. to become like jelly.

jel-ly (jĕl'ĭ), n. [pl. -lies (-ĭz)], [< Fr. gelée, frost < Lat. gelare, to freeze], 1, the juice of meat, fruit, etc., containing gelatin or a similar coagulant, becoming semisolid after boiling and cooling; 2, hence, any substance of gelatinous consistency:—v.i. [p.t. and p.p. -lied (-ĭd), p.pr. -lying], to become jelly or like jelly:—v.t. to cause to become jelly.—p.adj. jel'lied.

jel-ly-fish (jĕl'ĭ-fĭsh"), n. [jelly+fish], any of several marine invertebrates (phylum Cœlenterata), of disklike shape, varying size, and jellylike consistency (see Cœlenterata, illus.); a medusa.

jen-net (jĕn'ĕt), n. [< Fr. genet < Sp. jinete, light horseman], a small Spanish horse.

jen-ny (jĕn'ĭ), n. [pl. jennies (-ĭz)], [familiar form of Janet], 1, a machine for spinning; 2, a female: used with or without the name of the creature; as, a jenny ass, or a jenny; 3, [in allusion to designation JN], a wartime training airplane: jenny wren, an affectionate name for the wren.

jeop-ard-ize (jĕp'ər-dīz), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -ized (-dīzd), p.pr. -izing], [see jeopardy], to endanger; expose to risk. Also, jeop'ard.

jeop-ard-y (jĕp'ər-dĭ), n. [< M.E. iuparti, risk < O.F. iu parti, a divided game < Lat. jocus, game+partiri, to divide], risk; peril; hazard.

Syn. harm, risk, insecurity, peril. (See danger.)

Jeph-thah (jĕf'thə), n. [Heb.], Bib., a judge in Israel who, in fulfilling a rash vow, sacrificed his only daughter (Judg. 11: 30–40).

je-quir-i-ty (jē-kwĭr'ĭ-tĭ), n. [< Fr. jéquirity < jekiritī, nat. name], a twining shrub of India, whose colored seeds, called jequirity beans, are used in medicine, for weights, and for ornaments.

Jer. abbr. Jeremiah: especially, a book in the Old Testament of that name.

jer-bo-a (jĕr-bō'ə), n. [< Arab. yarbu', loin flesh; jerboa: in allusion to the strong leg muscles], any of a family (Dipodidæ) of ratlike, jumping rodents of the Old World, having short forelegs and a long tail.

JERBOA ($\frac{1}{10}$) je-reed (jē-rēd'), n. [< Arab. jarid, javelin], 1, a wooden javelin used by Turkish and Persian horsemen in mock battles; 2, a game played with jereeds. Also, jer-rid'; je-rid'.

jer-e-mi-ad (jĕr"ē-mī'ăd), n. [see Jeremiah], a lamentation; tale of sorrow, disappointment, or complaint: so called in allusion to "Lamentations," a book in the Old Testament attributed to Jeremiah.

Jer-e-mi-ah (jĕr"ē-mī'ə), n. [Heb., prob. = exalted of the Lord], Bib., 1, a great Hebrew prophet of about 630–585 B.C.; 2, a book of the Old Testament containing his prophecies. Also, Jer'e-my (-mē); in the Douay Bible, Jer"e-mi'as (-mī'ăs).

[1]jerk (jûrk), v.t. [source uncertain: prob. limit.], 1, to give a quick pull, twist, or push to; 2, to throw with a sudden, quick movement:—v.i. to move convulsively:—n. 1, a sudden, quick pull, twist, push, or throw; 2, a convulsive movement.

[2]jerk (jûrk), v.t. [< Amer. Sp. charque < Peruv. ccharqui, dried flesh], to cut into long, thin strips and dry in the sun, as beef:—n. beef so treated.

jer-kin (jûr'kĭn), n. [source uncertain], a short, close-fitting coat or waistcoat, often of leather and sleeveless, worn by men in the 16th and 17th centuries.

jerk-y (jûr'kĭ), adj. [comp. -ier, superl. -iest], [see [1]jerk], moving with quick starts and frequent stops; spasmodic.—adv. jerk'i-ly.—n. jerk'i-ness.

JERKIN

Jer-o-bo-am (jĕr"ō-bō"ăm), n. [Heb.], Bib., 1, a Jewish leader who became the first king of the northern kingdom, Israel, while Solomon's son, Rehoboam, reigned over the southern kingdom, Judah (1 Kings 11–14); 2, a son of Joash, and king of Israel, who, though wicked, brought prosperity (2 Kings 13:13): called Jeroboam II: jeroboam, Slang, a very large goblet or bottle.

jer-ry-built (jĕr'ĭ-bĭlt"), adj. [prob. abbr. of Jeremiah], flimsily built, as houses.

Jer-sey (jûr'zĭ), adj. [< Lat. Caesarea, of Cæsar < Caesar], 1, pertaining to the island of Jersey or to its breed of cattle; 2, pertaining to New Jersey:—n. one of a breed of dairy cows that originated in the island of Jersey: jersey, 1, a knitted fabric of silk, wool, or cotton; 2, a close-fitting upper garment of this elastic fabric.

Je-ru-sa-lem ar-ti-choke a perennial American sunflower (Helianthus tuberosus); also, its root, used as a vegetable.

jess (jĕs), n. [< O.F. ges (get) < L.L. jactus, a jess, a throw < Lat. jacere (jactus), to throw], 1, a leathern strap fastened to the leg of a hawk and provided with a ring to which is attached the falconer's leash; 2, a streamer on a wreath or crown.

JESSES ON A FALCON'S LEG

a, jesses; b, swivel; c, leash.

jes-sa-mine (jĕs'ə-mĭn), n. [see jasmine], any of various shrubs with fragrant flowers: sometimes preferred in this spelling to distinguish certain American species. See jas'mine, Pfd. S.

Jes-se (jĕs'ē), n. [Heb.], Bib., a Hebrew of the time of Samuel and Saul, father of eight sons, the youngest of whom was David (1 Sam. 16).

Jes-si-ca (jĕs'ĭ-kə), n. in Shakespeare's "Merchant of Venice," Shylock's daughter.

jest (jĕst), n. [< O.F. geste, exploit < Lat. gerere (gestus), to do, perform], 1, a joke; pleasantry; also, a taunt; jeer; 2, the butt, or object, of a joke: Obs., 1, an exploit; 2, a tale of adventure:—v.i. to joke; jeer; act or speak banteringly:—v.t. Obs., to ridicule; banter.

jest-er (jĕs'tĕr), n. 1, one who makes jokes; 2, in medieval times, a court fool.

Je-su (jē'sū; yā'sōō), n. [vocative case of Lat. Jesus, q.v.], Poet., Jesus: used in direct address.

Jes-u-it (jĕz'ū-ĭt), n. [see Jesus], 1, a member of the Society of Jesus, an order of Roman Catholic missionary priests founded by Ignatius Loyola, 1534: charged by its enemies with the use of crafty and intriguing methods; 2, hence, a crafty intriguer.

Jes-u-it-ic (jĕz"ū-ĭt'ĭk), adj. pertaining to, or resembling, the Jesuits, or their reputed practices: jesuitic, cunning; secretive in method; crafty. Also, Jes"u-it'i-cal; jes"u-it'i-cal.

Jes-u-it-ism (jĕz'ū-ĭt-ĭzm), n. 1, the principles, system, or practices of the Jesuits; 2, subtlety; secret diplomacy.—n. Jes'u-it-ry.

Jes-u-its' bark cinchona, a tree growing in the region of the Andes, from the bark of which quinine is obtained: so called because its value was made known to Europe by the Jesuits.

Je-sus (jē'zŭs), n. [Lat. < Heb. Yēshūa', Jehovah is salvation < Yāh, Jehovah+hōshīa, to help: a common Hebrew proper name, also found as Jeshua, Joshua, Jehoshua], Bib., 1, the son of Mary and founder of the Christian religion (Matt. 1:20–21): called Jesus of Nazareth or Jesus Christ; 2, the author of the apocryphal book Ecclesiasticus; 3, any of several other characters, as Joshua and Justus (Heb. 4:8; Col. 4:11).

[1]jet (jĕt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. jetted, p.pr. jetting], [< Fr. jeter < L.L. jectare < Lat. jactare, to throw], to spurt out:—v.i. 1, to shoot or spout out; 2, to jut out: Obs., to swagger:—n. 1, a stream of fluid issuing in more or less cylindrical form from an opening; as, the whale spouts a jet of water; 2, a spout or nozzle intended for the emission of a fluid, as gas.

[2]jet (jĕt), n. [< O.F. jaiet, jet], 1, a hard, black, fossil substance, akin to coal, used extensively in making ornaments and buttons; 2, the color of jet, a deep, glossy black:—adj. 1, of jet; 2, very black.

jet-sam (jĕt'săm), n. [see jettison], Maritime Law, 1, goods thrown overboard to ease a ship in peril; especially, such goods when washed ashore; 2, Obs., jettison; the act of throwing goods overboard.

jet-ti-son (jĕt'ĭ-sŭn), n. [< O.F. getaison, a throwing < Lat. jactatio, a throwing < jacere (jactus), to throw], Maritime Law, the throwing overboard of goods, especially to ease a ship in time of peril:—v.t. Law, to throw overboard in time of peril.

1jet-ty (jĕt'ĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-ĭz)], [< O.F. jetee, structure extending out < jeter, to throw: see 1jet], 1, a structure extending into the water, used as a pier or as a wall to protect a harbor or to direct currents; 2, a projecting part of a building:—v.i. [p.t. and p.p. -tied (-ĭd), p.pr. -tying], to jut out or project.

2jet-ty (jĕt'ĭ), adj. [see 2jet], 1, made of jet; 2, like jet in color; of a deep, glossy black.

jeu d'es-prit (zhœ" dĕs"prē'), [pl. jeux (zhœ")], [Fr. = play of mind], a witticism.

Jew (jū; jōō), n. [< Heb. Yehūdāh, Judah, son of Jacob], originally, a member of the tribe of Judah; now, in religion, an adherent of Judaism; in race, a Hebrew or Israelite, derived from a Semitic tribe which first achieved importance in Palestine, but is now found, with more or less local modification from the original Semitic type, in most countries of the world.—n. fem. Jew'ess.

jew-el (jū'ĕl; jōō'ĕl), n. [< O.F. joel, jewel, perh. < Lat. gaudium, joy, or jocus, play], 1, a gem or precious stone, especially one cut for use in personal adornment; 2, a valuable ornament or trinket set with precious stones or gems; 3, a piece of precious stone or similar hard substance used to form a durable bearing in the works of a timepiece; 4, a person or thing especially loved; anything excellent or precious:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. jeweled or jewelled (-ĕld), p.pr. jeweling or jewelling], 1, to furnish or adorn with precious stones or something resembling them; 2, to fit, as the works of a timepiece, with jewels as bearings.

jew-el-er (jū'ĕl-ĕr; jōō'ĕl-ĕr), n. one who makes or deals in jewels. Also, jew'el-ler.

jew-el-ry (jū'ĕl-rĭ; jōō'-), n. 1, gems, ornaments of gold and silver, etc., collectively; 2, the art or trade of a jeweler. Also, Br., jew'el-ler-y.

jew-el-weed (jū'ĕl-wēd"; jōō ĕl-), n. [jewel + 1weed, prob. from resemblance of flower to an earring], any of a genus (Impatiens) of herbs of the balsam family, especially either of two wild American species (I. aura and I. biflora) having spotted yellow or orange flowers and thin, silvery leaves, growing in damp, shady places: also called touch-me-not.

jew-fish (jū'fĭsh"; jōō'-), n. [Jew + fish], any of several large sea basses (family Serranidæ).

Jew-ish (jū'ĭsh; jōō'ĭsh), adj. [see Jew], pertaining to, or like, the Jews or their customs: Jewish calendar, the calendar based on the lunar month, used by the ancient Jews (for full statement, see App. I).

Jew-ry (jū'rĭ; jōō'rĭ), n. 1, Judea; 2, the part of a town inhabited by Jews; 3, the Hebrew race.

jew's-harp (jūz'-härp"; jōōz'-), n. 1, a small lyre-shaped musical instrument with a thin metal tongue which, when placed between the teeth and struck by the finger, gives forth tones; 2, the fastening or shackle by which a chain cable is attached to an anchor ring. Also, jews'-harp".

JEW'S-HARP

Jez-e-bel (jĕz'ē-bĕl), n. [< Heb.], 1, Bib., the evil wife of Ahab, king of Israel (2 Kings 9:30); 2, a bold or wicked woman.

1jib (jĭb), n. [perh. abbr. of gibbet, q.v.], 1, a three-cornered sail extending beyond the bow of the vessel, set on a stay, and stretching from the head of the foretopmast to the jib boom or bowsprit (see sail, illus.); 2, the projecting arm or beam of a crane or lifting machine, from which the load is hung. Also, jibb.

2jib (jĭb), v.i. [p.t. and p.p. jibbed (jĭbd), p.pr. jibbing], [source uncertain], to move restlessly backward and sidewise, as a horse in harness; balk.

3jib (jĭb), v.i. [p.t. and p.p. jibbed (jĭbd), p.pr. jibbing], [perh. akin to gybe, q.v.], Naut., to shift suddenly from one side of the boat to the other, as a sail or boom in tacking:—v.t. to shift from one side to the other; as, to jib a sail. Also, jibb.

jib boom [1jib + 1boom], a spar which serves to prolong the bowsprit of a vessel, and to which a jib is fastened (see bowsprit, illus.).

1jibe (jīb), v.i. and v.t. [p.t. and p.p. jibed (jībd), p.pr. jibing], [see gybe], 1, to shift from one side of a vessel to the other, as a sail or boom when the vessel is running before the wind and changes its course so that the wind must strike the other side of the sail; 2, to change course as a vessel, with such a shift. See gybe, Pfd. S.

2jibe (jīb), v.i. [p.t. and p.p. jibed (jībd), p.pr. jibing], [source uncertain], Colloq., to harmonize, as two statements; agree; also, to get along (with a person).

3jibe (jīb), n. [see gibe], a scoff; taunt:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. jibed (jībd), p.pr. jibing], to sneer at:—v.i. to scoff; sneer. See gibe, Pfd. S.

jif-fy (jĭf'ĭ), n. [pl. jiffies (-ĭz)], [source uncertain], Colloq., an instant; a moment.

jig (jĭg), n. [source uncertain], 1, a rapid, irregular dance, or the music for it, often in triple time: also written gigue; 2, a prank or practical joke; 3, a guiding tool or a template; 4, any of various jolting devices, used especially in mining; 5, a fishhook, or set of hooks, with loaded shanks, used in trolling:—v.i. [p.t. and p.p. jigged (jĭgd), p.pr. jigging], 1, to dance a jig; 2, to use a jig for fishing:—v.t. 1, to sing or play in a lively manner suggestive of a jig; 2, to fashion with the aid of a guiding tool or template, called a jig; 3, to drill with a jolting mechanism; 4, to sift (ore) by jolting in a jig.

JIG, 5

1jig-ger (jĭg'ĕr), n. 1, one who jigs; 2, any of various mechanical contrivances, especially one working with a jerky motion: in particular, a device for washing or separating ore by jolting it; 3, a small sail and tackle for yawl or canoe; 4, a drink of spirits; a dram; 5, a measure of 1½ fluid ounces, used especially in mixing alcoholic beverages: Colloq., a thing; object; also, a contrivance; gadget: used often of objects of which the real name is unknown: Golf, a club with a narrrow iron head with considerable loft, or slope, used for approach shots: jigger mast, the after mast of a four-masted or a yawl-rigged vessel.

2jig-ger (jĭg'ĕr), n. [see chigoe], 1, in the southern United States, any of various mites, the larvæ of which burrow under the skin: sometimes called chigoe; 2, in the West Indies, the chigoe (which see), a flea parasitic on man. Also, chig're; chig'ger.

jig-gle (jĭg'l), v.t. and v.i. [p.t. and p.p. jiggled (-ld), p.pr. jiggling], [freq. of jig, q.v.], to move jerkily back and forth; joggle:—n. a slight, jerky movement.

jig-jog (jĭg'-jŏg"), n. [reduplication of jig], a jolt:—adj. having a jolting motion:—adv. joltingly.

jig saw a scroll saw; a saw with a very narrow blade held in a frame, moved vertically back and forth, usually by hand or by a treadle: used to cut along curved or irregular lines.

ji-had (jē-hädʹ), n. [< Arab. jihād, holy war], 1, a holy war against the enemies of the Mohammedan faith; 2, any bitter war for religion or principle. Also, ja-had' (jä-hädʹ); je-had' (jē-hädʹ).

jill (jĭl), n. [see gill], 1, a young woman; sweetheart: preferably, gill; 2, the female of a ferret or weasel.

jilt (jĭlt), n. [prob. < obs. gillot, dim. of Gill, a girl's name, q.v.], one who capriciously discards a lover; an extreme coquette:—v.t. to discard or desert (a lover):—v.i. to desert a lover.—n. jilt'er.

jim (jĕm), n. [Arab.], the fifth letter of the Arabic alphabet (see App. I), approximately equivalent to the English j: as a numerical symbol, 3.

Jim Crow [< refrain of old Negro song: prob. < Jim, for James + 2crow], a Negro.

jim-my (jĭm'ĭ), n. [pl. -mies (-ĭz)], [< James], a short crowbar used by burglars:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -mied (-ĭd), p.pr. -mying], to force (open) with a jimmy.

jimp (jĭmp), adj. [source uncertain], Sc., 1, slender; graceful; trim; 2, scanty; scarce.

Jim-son weed (jĭm'sn), [orig. Jamestown weed < place in Virginia, whither it was probably carried from Asia], a coarse, poisonous plant (Datura stramonium) of the nightshade family, having trumpet-shaped flowers and globose, usually prickly, fruit: also called thorn apple; rarely, Jamestown weed.

jin-gle (jĭng'gl), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -gled (-gld), p.pr. -gling], [imit.], to cause to give a tinkling, metallic sound; as, he jingled his keys:—v.i. to give a tinkling, metallic sound:—n. 1, a metallic sound, as of clinking coins, or the motion which produces it; 2, a pleasing or catchy succession of sounds or rimes; also, verse having such a succession of sounds or rimes, usually with little sense; a simple little riming song; 3, a covered, two-wheeled car used in Australia and Ireland.

jin-go (jĭng'gō), n. [pl. -goes (-gōz)], [orig. conjurers' gibberish], one who favors an aggressive policy in foreign affairs, or who boasts noisily of his country's warlike achievements: used in reproach: so called from the expression by jingo in a patriotic song popular in England in 1878: by jingo, a mild or jocular oath:—adj. characteristic of, or pertaining to, an aggressive foreign policy.—n. jin'go-ism.—adj. jin'go-is'tic.

jinks (jĭngks), n. pl. [prob. imit.], pranks; hilarity: chiefly in the phrase high jinks.

jin-ni (jĭ-nēʹ), n. [pl. jinn (jĭn), often used as sing.], [< Arab. jinnī, a demon], a supernatural being, believed to be able to assume both animal and human forms, and to be subject to magic control, often appearing in Mohammedan tales. Also, jin-nee'; ge'nie.

jin-rik-i-sha (jĭn-rĭk′ĭ-shä), n. [<Jap. jin, man +riki, power+sha, vehicle], a small, Japanese, two-wheeled carriage, drawn by one or more men. Also, jin-rik'sha; jin-rick'sha; jin-rick'shaw.

JINRIKISHA

jinx (jĭngks), n. [source uncertain], Slang, anything supposed to bring bad luck; a hoodoo; a Jonah.

jit-ney (jĭt′nĭ), n. [perh. <Fr. jeton, a small metal disk], Slang, a five-cent piece; nickel: Colloq., a conveyance, especially an automobile, in which passengers are carried for a small fare:—v.i. Colloq., 1, to travel by jitney, or short-distance automobile bus; 2, to operate such a conveyance.—n. jit'ney-man.

jit-ter (jĭt′ẽr), v.i. [imit.], to be extremely nervous: —n. a state of nervous excitability: jitters, extreme nervousness.—adj. jit'ter-y.

jiu-jit-su (jōō′jĭt″sōō), n. [see jujutsu], a Japanese weaponless method of self-defense. Also, jiu'jut″su (-jōōt″-). See ju'jut″su, Pfd. S.

JJ. abbr. Justices:—jn., junction (also, jnc.; junc.): —Jno., John:—Jo., Joel.

jo (jō), n. [pl. joes (jōz)], [perh. Sc. form of joy], Sc., a sweetheart of either sex. Also, joe.

1job (jŏb), n. [source uncertain], 1, a piece of work, especially of an odd or occasional kind or one undertaken for a fixed price; 2, any scheme for making money or securing private advantage at public expense: Colloq., 1, one's business situation; employment; 2, any event or circumstance:—adj. bought, sold, or handled in the gross, or as a total; as, a job lot:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. jobbed (jŏbd), p.pr. jobbing], 1, to buy up (goods) for resale in smaller quantities; buy and sell as a broker; 2, to do by the lot or by the piece; sublet, as parts of a process such as tailoring; 3, to effect by corrupt political methods:—v.i. 1, to do work of an occasional nature; work by the job or lot; 2, to act as a broker or middleman; 3, to secure private advantage under pretense of serving others or the public.

2job (jŏb), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. jobbed (jŏbd), p.pr. jobbing], [prob. imit.], to prod; jab:—v.i. to make a thrust or prod:—n. a slight stab; thrust.

Job (jōb), n. [Heb.], Bib., 1, the hero of a poetical book of the Old Testament, who patiently suffered much affliction; 2, the book containing his story: Job's comforter, one who, under pretense of sympathy or comfort, increases distress.

job-ber (jŏb′ẽr), n. [see 1job], 1, a middleman; 2, in England, a middleman operating between stockbrokers; 3, one who transacts public business for his own private interests; 4, one who works by the job.

job-ber-y (jŏb′ẽr-ĭ), n. [pl. -ies (-ĭz)], low scheming for private advantage or political ends.

Jo-cas-ta (jō-kăs′tȧ), n. [<Gk.], Gk. Myth., the wife of Laius, king of Thebes, who unwittingly married her son, Œdipus, supposedly dead, and killed herself upon discovering her crime.

jock-ey (jŏk′ĭ), n. [pl. -eys (-ĭz)], [<Sc. Jock, Jack], 1, one hired to ride a horse in a race; a groom; 2, a dealer in horses; 3, a cheat; an unfair trader:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -eyed (-ĭd), p.pr. -eying], 1, to cheat or deceive; 2, in racing, to jostle against; hinder by riding unfairly:—v.i. 1, to cheat; be tricky; 2, to seek to secure a legitimate advantage by maneuvering.—n. jock'ey-ism.—n. jock'ey-ing.

jock-o (jŏk′ō), n. [pl. -os (-ōz)], [Fr. <engeco<ncheko, nat. Afr. name], a chimpanzee or ape.

jo-cose (jō-kōs′), adj. [<Lat. jocosus, sportive <jocus, jest], sportive; full of jokes; humorous; merry; as, a jocose manner.—adv. jo-cose'ly.—n. jo-cose'ness.—n. jo-cos'i-ty (jō-kŏs′ĭ-tĭ).

Syn. facetious, droll, playful, waggish, funny, jocular. —Ant. doleful, sad, mournful, surly, dispirited, sober.

joc-u-lar (jŏk′ū-lẽr), adj. [<Lat. jocularis, sportive <joculus, dim. of jocus, jest], 1, making jokes; 2, done as a joke.—adv. joc'u-lar-ly.

Syn. jocose, merry, blithe, sportive, good-humored.

joc-u-lar-i-ty (jŏk″ū-lăr′ĭ-tĭ), n. 1, merriment; 2, inclination to joke or make fun.

joc-und (jŏk′ŭnd; Br. jō′kŭnd), adj. [<O.F. jocond <Lat. jucundus, pleasant<jurare, to please], jovial; sportive; gay; as, jocund spring or dances.—adv. joc'und-ly.—n. jo-cun'di-ty (jō-kŭn′dĭ-tĭ).

jodh-purs (jŏd′pōōrz; jŏd′pŭrz), n.pl. [<Jodhpur, city of India], a kind of riding breeches made to fit close from the knee to the ankle.

Jo-el (jō′ĕl), n. [Heb.], an ancient Hebrew prophet, or an Old Testament book of his preachings.

joe-pye weed (jō″-pī′), [source uncertain], Bot., a tall plant (Eupatorium purpureum) of the composite family, with whorled leaves and purple flowers: also called trumpetweed.

jog (jŏg), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. jogged (jŏgd), p.pr. jogging], [prob. imit.], 1, to push or shake lightly; nudge; 2, hence, to arouse gently; as, to jog the memory:—v.i. to travel along with a slow trotting motion; also, to make one's way laboriously:—n. 1, a slight push or shake; 2, a slow trot; 3, a notch: Colloq., an irregularity of line or surface.—n. jog'ger.

jog-gle (jŏg′l), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. joggled (-ld), p.pr. joggling], [prob. freq. of jog, q.v.], 1, to join, as timbers, with a notch or angle in one fitted to hold a projection in the other; 2, to shake slightly; nudge: —v.i. to totter:—n. 1, a sudden shake or push; 2, a joint of stones or timbers made by fitting a projection of one into an indentation in the other, to prevent slipping; 3, a projection, notch, or dowel, used to make such a joint: joggle post, a post furnished with shoulders to prevent slipping; a king-post.

jog trot a slow, regular gait; hence, a monotonous repetition or routine; an easy-going way.

jo-han-nes (jō-hăn′ēz), n. [Mod. Latin = John: named for John V], a former Portuguese gold coin worth about $8.81.

John (jŏn), n. [<Gk. Iōannēs< Heb. Yehōkhānān], Bib., 1, one of the twelve apostles, a son of Zebedee: traditional author of the Fourth Gospel, the three Epistles bearing his name, and the Book of Revelation; 2, the Fourth Gospel; 3, any of the three epistles in the New Testament ascribed to the apostle John: John the Baptist, a preacher of repentance who preceded and baptized Jesus and was put to death by Herod at the request of his wife, Herodias (Matt. 3); John Bull, an Englishman; also, the English collectively; John Doe, (dō), a fictitious name for a party to any transaction, especially at law.

John-a-dreams (jŏn′ȧ-drēmz′), n. [corr. of John of Dreams], a dreamy idler.

John Do-ry [see 2dory], a brightly colored European marine food fish (Zeus faber), or any member of its family (Zeidæ). Also, john do'ree.

john-ny-cake (jŏn′ĭ-kāk″), n. [source uncertain], a flat cake of corn meal mixed with milk or water, eggs, etc., and baked; a hoecake.

join (join), v.t. [<O.F. joindre<Lat. jungere, to join], 1, to unite; connect; put or bring together; unite in marriage; 2, to unite with; become a member of; as, to join a club; the lane joins the highway; 3, to engage in, with others; as, to join battle; 4, to be adjacent to; adjoin:—v.i. 1, to be in contact; be adjacent; 2, to become associated or united; come together as one:—n. a joint or union.

Syn., v. unite, consolidate, couple, associate. (See combine.)—Ant., v. separate, detach, dissolve.

join-der (join′dẽr), n. [<Fr. joindre, to join, taken as noun: see join], Law, the joining of two or more causes of action in the same declaration.

join-er (join′ẽr), n. [see join], 1, one who or that which joins; 2, specifically, a skilled workman who finishes the inside woodwork for houses or who makes furniture: Colloq., one who joins many societies; a good fellow.

join-er-y (join′ẽr-ĭ), n. skilled work in wood; the art of making furniture.

joint (joint), n. [O.F., p.p. of joindre<Lat. jungere (junctus), to join], 1, the place where two or more things are united; especially, the union of bones into a movable or immovable articulation; a hinge; the part between two joinings; 2, a large piece of meat cut for roasting: Geol., one of a series of cracks intersecting a mass of rock, dividing it into more or less regular blocks: Slang, a low resort:—adj. 1, united; combined; 2, used, held, or shared by two or more: joint-stock company, Econ., a company like a corporation in that its capital is divided into transferable shares of stock, but like a partnership in that shareholders are individually liable without limit for the debts of the company, except in States in which specific legislation decrees limited liability:—v.t. 1, to form with joints; articulate; 2, in joinery, to prepare the edge of, as of a board to fit another; 3, to cut, as meat, into parts or joints.—adv. joint'ly.—n. joint'er.

join-ture (join′tūr), n. [Fr. < Lat. junctura, a joining <jungere (junctus), to join], Law, a settlement accepted by a wife, by which, upon her husband's death, she inherits certain specified property from his (or their joint) estate, in lieu of her right, called a dower right, by which she could inherit a life interest in a portion (usually a third) of his real property: Rare, a joining:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -tured (-tûrd), p.pr. -turing], to settle property upon (a wife) in place of her dower right.—n. fem. Law, joint'ress.

joist (joist), n. [<O.F. giste, a place to lie on, a beam<gesir<Lat. jacēre, to lie], a horizontal timber to which the boards of a floor or laths of a ceiling are fastened (for illus. see frame house):—v.t. to furnish with joists.

joke (jōk), n. [prob. < Lat. jocus, jest], 1, something said or done to cause mirth; a witticism; jest; 2, a laughingstock:—v.i. [p.t. and p.p. joked (jōkt), p.pr. joking], to make fun of:—v.i. to jest.

jok-er (jōk'ẽr), n. 1, one who makes or tells humorous stories or plays pranks; 2, an extra card used in certain card games, usually the highest trump; 3, a disguised nullifying clause, as in a legislative measure; hence, any concealed obstruction or difficulty.

jole (jōl), n. [see ¹jowl], 1, the jaw; 2, a dewlap or wattle; 3, the fore part of a fish. See jowl, Pfd. S.

jol-li-fi-ca-tion (jŏl'ĭ-fĭ-kā'shŭn), n. [see jollify], merrymaking; festivity.

jol-li-fy (jŏl'ĭ-fī), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -fied (-fīd), p.pr. -fying], [< O.F. joli, gay + -fier (< Lat. facere, to make)], Colloq., to make merry:—v.i. to be merry.

jol-li-ty (jŏl'ĭ-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], [see jolly], the state of being merry, gay, or sportive.

jol-ly (jŏl'ĭ), adj. [comp. jollier, superl. jolliest], [< O.F. joli, gay], 1, full of life and mirth; gay; 2, causing mirth or gaiety:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. jollied (-ĭd), p.pr. jollying], Slang, 1, to flatter; treat pleasantly in the hope of obtaining a favor; 2, to make good-humored fun of:—adv. Colloq., in Great Britain, very; uncommonly:—n. a ship's small boat; a jolly-boat.—adv. jol'li-ly (-lĭ-lĭ).—n. jol'li-ness.

Syn., adj. gay, festive, merry, jovial. (See joyful.)

jol-ly-boat (jŏl'ĭ-bōt"), n. a ship's small boat, used for general or rough work; a jolly.

jolt (jōlt), v.t. [source uncertain], to shake by sudden jerks and jars:—v.i. to have a jerky motion:—n. a sudden jerk or stop.—n. jolt'er.

Jo-nah (jō'nȧ), n. [< Heb. Yōnāh, dove], 1, Bib., a minor Hebrew prophet; also, a book of the Old Testament, which tells the history of the prophet Jonah (see Bible, Note): in the Douay Bible, Jonas; 2, one who brings ill luck.

Jon-a-than (jŏn'ȧ-thăn), n. [< Heb. Yehōnāthān, gift of Jehovah], 1, Bib., the son of King Saul and close friend of David (1 Sam. 18–20); 2, jocularly, the United States, Uncle Sam; hence, a typical American: usually, Brother Jonathan.

jon-gleur (zhōn'glûr'), n. [Fr. < same source as juggle, q.v.], in medieval France and England, an itinerant minstrel.

jon-quil (jŏn'kwĭl; jŭng'kwĭl), n. [< Lat. dim. of juncus, rush], 1, a plant (Narcissus jonquilla) of the amaryllis family, with yellow or white fragrant flowers and very short crown, growing from perennial bulbs; 2, a pale yellow color. Also, jon'quille.

jo-rum (jō'rŭm), n. [source uncertain], Colloq., 1, a large drinking bowl; 2, its contents.

Jos-eph (jō'zĕf), n. [< Heb. Yōsēph, he shall add], Bib., 1, a Hebrew patriarch, son of Jacob, sold into Egypt by his brothers (Gen. 37:28); 2, the husband of Mary, the mother of Jesus (Matt. 1:18–25); 3, the rich man of Arimathæa who buried Jesus (Matt. 27:57–60): joseph, 1, a coat worn by women in the 18th century as a riding habit; 2, a similar coat for men.

josh (jŏsh), v.t. [perh. < Josh Billings (1818–85), Am. humorist], Slang, to hold up to ridicule; banter:—n. Slang, good-natured raillery; pleasantry.

Josh-u-a (jŏsh'ū-ȧ), n. [< Heb. Yehōshūa, God of salvation: see Jesus], Bib., an Old Testament leader of the Israelites, successor to Moses; also, a book of the Old Testament giving his history (see Bible, Note). Also, in the Douay Bible, Jos'u-e (jŏs'ū-ē).

Jo-si-ah (jō-sī'ȧ), n. [< Heb. Yōshiyāh, given of the Lord], Bib., a king of Judah (2 Kings 22–23).

joss (jŏs), n. [prob. < Port. deos < Lat. deus, god], a Chinese household divinity or idol: joss house, a Chinese temple: joss stick, a stick made of hardened paste of scented wood, burned as incense, as a measure of ti ne at night, etc.

jos-tle (jŏs'l), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -tled (-ld), p.pr. -tling], [earlier justle, freq. of O.F. juster, to joust < Lat. juxtare, to approach], to push against; run against and shake; elbow:—n. a collision, as of pedestrians; bumping; elbowing.

jot (jŏt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. jotted, p.pr. jotting], [< Gk. iōta, the letter i], to make a memorandum of: with down:—n. a tittle or small particle.

Jo-tunn (yō'tōon), n. [< O.N. = giant], Teut. Myth., a giant. Also, Jo'tun; Jö'tunn (yö'tōon).

Jo-tunn-heim (yō'tōon-hām), n. [< O.N. = giant's home], the home of the Teutonic giants, at the edge of the world. Also, Jo'tunn-heimr (-hāmr); Jö'tunn-heim (yö'-); Jö'tunn-heimr.

joule (joul; commonly, jōōl), n. [< J. P. Joule (1818–89), Eng. physicist], Elec., a unit of work or energy, practically equivalent to the work done, or heat generated, in maintaining for one second a current of one ampere through a resistance of one ohm; ten million ergs.

jounce (jouns), v.i. and v.t. [p.t. and p.p. jounced (jounst), p.pr. jouncing], [source uncertain], to shake up and down; jolt; bounce:—n. a jolt.

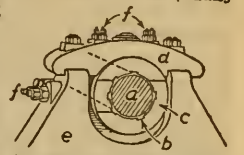
jour-nal (jûr'nȧl), n. [O.F. < Lat. diurnalis, daily < dies, day], 1, a daily record of news or events; 2, hence, a daily record kept by a legislative body; 3, a daily newspaper or other periodical; 4, a diary; 5, a daybook; in double-entry bookkeeping, a book in which each transaction is entered, with record of the accounts to which it is debited and credited: Naut. a ship's log book; the log; Mech., that portion of an axle, spindle, or rotating shaft that rests or turns in a bearing: journal box, 1, the bearing for a journal (see illus.); 2, a casing inclosing a bearing and journal.



JOURNAL IN JOURNAL BOX

a, end of shaft (journal); b, bearing surface (babbitting); c, bearing box, consisting of three adjustable parts; d, cap; e, frame; f, f, adjusting bolts and lock nuts.

jour-nal-ism (jûr'nȧl-ĭzm), n. the occupation of publishing, or writing for, newspapers or periodicals.—n. jour'nal-ist.—adj. jour'nal-is'tic.

jour-nal-ize (jûr'nȧl-īz), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -ized (-īzd), p.pr. -izing], to enter in a day-book or other record:—v.i. to keep a daily record or diary.

jour-ney (jûr'nĭ), n. [< O.F. journée, to journey < jornee, day, day's work, day's journey < L.L. diurnata, daily < Lat. dies, day], 1, a passage or expedition from one place to another, especially by land; travel; 2, the amount of time consumed or space covered in travel: Obs., a day's work or travel:—v.i. to travel, especially by land, from one place to another.

Syn., n. tour, trip, excursion, jaunt.

jour-ney-man (jûr'nĭ-măn), n. [pl. -men (-mĕn)], [journey (in obs. sense of day's work; work; labor) + man], a mechanic or craftsman who has served his apprenticeship or learned a trade and works for another, especially by the day.

jour-ney-work (jûr'nĭ-wûrk"), n. [journey (see journeyman) + work], mechanical or routine work; hack work.

joust (jŭst; jōōst), n. [see ²just], a combat with lances between mounted knights:—v.i. to engage in a joust. See ²just, Pfd. S.—n. joust'er.

Jove (jōv), n. [< stem of oblique cases of Lat. Jupiter (Joris), Jupiter], 1, Rom. Myth., Jupiter; 2, Poet., the planet Jupiter.—adj. Jo'vi-an.

jo-vi-al (jō'vĭ-ȧl), adj. jolly; merry; as, he was always a jovial comrade: Jovial, Obs., of or pertaining to the god Jupiter, or the planet, which was thought to have a benignant influence over men.—adv. jo'vi-al-ly.—n. jo'vi-al'i-ty.—n. jo'vi-al-ness.

Syn. festive, gay, mirthful, good-natured. (See joyful.)

¹jowl (jōl; joul), n. [< confusion of M.E. jowle < A.S. ceafl, jaw, and M.E. cholle < A.S. ceolur, throat], 1, the jaw or cheek; 2, a dewlap; 3, a wattle; 4, the head and contiguous parts of a fish. Also, jole.

²jowl (jōl; joul), v.t. [source uncertain], Obs. or Sc., to strike, as a bell:—v.i. Obs. or Sc., to sound or strike:—n. Obs. or Sc., the sound or toll of a bell.

joy (joi), n. [< O.F. joie < Lat. gaudium, joy], 1, the emotion of gladness; happiness; gaiety; 2, that which inspires gladness: Joy, Class. Myth., one of the three Graces; Euphrosyne:—v.i. to rejoice or be glad; as, to joy in happiness:—v.t. to gladden.

Syn., n. (see happiness).—Ant., n. grief, gloom.

joy-ance (joi'ȧns), n. Archaic, delight; gaiety; festivity; enjoyment.

joy-ful (joi'fo͝ol), adj. 1, full of joy; 2, showing joy; as, a joyful manner; 3, causing joy.—adv. joy'ful-ly.—n. joy'ful-ness.

Syn. festive, glad, happy, gay, joyous, jolly, jovial. Joyful describes that which produces or inspires keenly pleasurable emotions; it connotes, usually, expression or demonstration; as, bells rang in the joyful tidings; he was wildly joyful over his success. Joyous describes rather an innate, bubbling quality; as, the joyous smile of the proud mother; joyous laughter. Jolly and jovial often suggest good-natured mirth; a jovial company is festive; a jolly company is merry, often hilarious.

joy-less (joi'lĕs), adj. 1, without gladness; gloomy; despairing; 2, incapable of causing joy; unenjoyable.—adv. joy'less-ly.—n. joy'less-ness.

joy-ous (joi'ŭs), adj. 1, full of joy; 2, showing joy; 3, causing joy; as, a joyous occasion.—adv. joy'ous-ly.—n. joy'ous-ness.

Syn. (see joyful).—Ant. doleful, sad, gloomy.

joy ride Slang or Colloq., 1 a ride in a motor car characterized by reckless driving and, usually, rowdyism or impropriety; 2, any reckless ride.

joy stick Slang, in an airplane, the lever which operates the movable planes for the purpose of controlling its motion: also called control stick.

J. P. abbr. Justice of the Peace:—Jr., Junior (also, jr.; Jun.; jun.; Junr.; junr.).

Ju-bal (jōō'bāl), n. [Heb.], Bib., son of Lamech: inventor of the harp and organ (Gen. 4:21).

ju-bi-lant (jōō'bĭ-lānt), adj. [see jubilate], 1, uttering songs of triumph; 2, shouting with joy; exultingly glad.—adv. ju'bi-lant-ly.

ju-bi-late (jōō'bĭ-lāt), v.i. [p.t. and p.p. -lated, p.pr. -lating], [< Lat. jubilare (-atus), to shout for joy < jubilum, a shout], to utter triumphant rejoicing; Jubilate (jū'bĭ-lā'tē; yōō'bē-lä'tä), n. 1, the 100th Psalm: from its opening word in the Latin version; 2, in ritualistic church services, the canticle beginning "Oh be joyful in the Lord"; also, its musical setting; hence, 3, any hymn of rejoicing; 4, the third Sunday after Easter.—n. ju'bi-la'tion.

ju-bi-lee (jōō'bĭ-lē), n. [< Fr. jubilé < L.L. jubilaeus (annus), (year) of jubilee < Gk. iōbēlaios < Heb. yōbēl, ram, ram's-horn trumpet, used in announcing the grand sabbatical year: confused also with Lat. jubilum, shout], 1, a Jewish festival celebrated every fiftieth year, to commemorate the deliverance of the Israelites from Egyptian bondage; 2, the fiftieth anniversary of an event, its commemoration, or celebration: often, also, twenty-fifth anniversary; 3, R. C. Ch., a year of special indulgence granted by the Pope, formerly every twenty-fifth year, now at any time; 4, any occasion of rejoicing; also, any expression of joy.

Jud. abbr. 1, Judges, the seventh book of the Old Testament (also, Judg.); 2, Judith; 3, judicial.

Ju-dah (jōō'dä), n. [< Heb. Yehūdāh, praised], 1, a common Jewish personal name: also written Judas and Jude; specifically, 2, a son of Jacob and Leah; 3, the powerful tribe descended from him, from which sprang the house of David; also, the district of southern Palestine in which the tribe lived; 4, the kingdom formed of the tribes of Judah and Benjamin, when the other ten tribes seceded (1 Kings 12:16–20).

Ju-da-ic (jōō-dā'ĭk), adj. [< Lat. < Gk. Ioudaïkos < Ioudaios, a Jew < Heb.: see Judah], pertaining to the Jews. Also, Ju-da'i-cal.

Ju-da-ism (jōō'dā-ĭzm), n. 1, the religious ceremonies and doctrines of the Jews; 2, conformity to Jewish rites and customs.

Ju-da-ize (jōō'dā-īz), v.i. [p.t. and p.p. -ized (-īzd), p.pr. izing], to practice or be converted to Judaism:—v.t. to convert to Judaism.

Ju-da-iz-er (jōō'dā-īz"ẽr), n. 1, one who conforms to, or advocates, Judaism; 2, in the early Christian church, a Jew who, though converted to Christianity, honored the ancient laws of Moses.

Ju-das (jōō'dăs), n. [see Judah], Bib., 1, the Greek and Latin form of the Jewish name Judah; specifically, 2, the disciple who betrayed Jesus (Matt. 26:14, 15, 48, 49): called in full Judas Iscariot; hence, one who betrays another under pretense of friendship; 3, a brother of Jesus (Matt. 13:55) 4, a disciple who is identified by the phrase "not Iscariot" (John 14:22).

Ju-das tree [from legend that Judas hanged himself on a European species of this tree], 1, any of a genus (Cercis) of shrubs or small trees, especially a species (C. canadensis) bearing brilliant, rose-pink flowers early in the spring, before the leaves appear: common in the eastern United States south of New York; 2, a European species of elder.

Jude (jōōd), n. [see Judah], Bib., 1, an epistle of the New Testament; 2, its author, who speaks of himself as "brother of James," and is thought to be the Judas who was one of the brothers of Jesus.

Ju-de-an (jōō-dē'ăn), adj. [< Lat. Judaeus, pertaining to the Jews: see Jew], pertaining to Judea, the land of Judah:—n. a Jew. Also, Ju-dæ'an.

Judg. abbr. Judges, the seventh book of the Old Testament (also, Jud.).

judge (jŭj), n. [< O.F. juge < Lat. judex (judicis), judge < jus, right + -dicus, speaking], 1, the presiding official in a court of law, having authority to hear and decide civil and criminal cases; 2, a person appointed to decide in a trial of skill, speed, etc., between two or more persons; 3, one who has skill, knowledge, or experience to decide on the quality or value of anything; as, a judge of poetry; 4, one of the chief rulers of the Israelites from the death of Joshua to the kingship of Saul: Judges, a book of the Old Testament, giving the history of the Jews during the time of the judges, from Joshua to Samuel:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. judged (jŭjd), p.pr. judging], 1, to hear and pass sentence on, as a law case; 2, to estimate; criticize; as, we judged him unfairly; 3, to rule; as, Samuel judged Israel; —v.i. 1, to form an opinion after careful consideration: 2, to hear and determine a case and pass sentence; 3, to consider; think; hold an opinion; 4, to criticize, especially adversely.—n. judge'ship.

Judge Ad-vo-cate an officer of a court-martial whose duty it is to prosecute in the name of the government an officer or soldier on trial, and also to act as counsel for the accused by protecting him from incriminating himself.

judg-ment (jŭj'mĕnt), n. 1, the mental process by which we become aware of differences or similarities in what we perceive; discrimination; 2, the mental power of deciding by the comparison of facts and ideas; the critical faculty; estimate; opinion; 3, correct decision; discernment; acumen; 4, the act of deciding or passing sentence; also, a sentence; specifically, 5, the decision of a court; the sentence or order of a presiding officer after a proceeding; 6, the divine estimate of, and attitude toward, a wrongdoer; hence, a calamity attributed to the anger of God; as, a judgment fell upon Sodom and Gomorrah: the Judgment, the final trial of mankind by God: also called Last Judgment. Also, judge'ment.

Syn. discernment, discretion. (See discrimination.)

ju-di-ca-to-ry (jōō'dĭ-kā-tō-rĭ), adj. [see judicature], of or pertaining to the administration of justice:—n. [pl. -ries (-rĭz)], 1, a court of justice; 2, that department of the government which administers justice.

ju-di-ca-ture (jōō'dĭ-kā-tûr), n. [< L.L. judicatura, judicature < Lat. judex, judge: see judge], 1, a court of justice; also, judges collectively; 2, the power of doing justice by legal trial and judgment; 3, the territory and matter over which the authority of a court extends: Obs., legality.

ju-di-cial (jōō-dĭsh'ăl), adj. [< Lat. judicium, judgment < judex: see judge], 1, pertaining to the administration of justice or to a judge; 2, proceeding from, or inflicted by, a court of justice; 3, impartial; 4, functioning as a judge; involving judgment; as, a judicial decision.—adv. ju-di'cial-ly.

ju-di-ci-a-ry (jōō-dĭsh'ĭ-ā-rĭ), n. [pl. -ries (-rĭz)] 1, judges collectively; 2, that branch of a government concerned with the trial and determination of controversies at law;—adj. judicial.

ju-di-cious (jōō-dĭsh'ŭs), adj. prudent; wise; sagacious; exhibiting sound sense or discretion.—adv. ju-di'cious-ly.—n. ju-di'cious-ness.

Syn. wise, politic, discreet, sensible, well-advised.

Ju-dith (jōō'dĭth), n. [< Heb. Yehūdīth, praised], 1, a Jewish heroine who slew Holofernes, an Assyrian general, and saved her country; 2, a book of the Apocrypha, which tells of her story.

jug (jŭg), n. [source uncertain], a narrow-necked, earthenware or metal vessel, usually with a handle: used to hold or carry liquids: Slang, a prison or jail:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. jugged (jŭgd), p.pr. jugging], to put into, or cook in, a jug: Slang, to commit to jail.

Jug-ger-naut (jŭg'ẽr-nôt), n. [see Jagannath], 1, the Hindu god Krishna, or his idol: sometimes, Jagannath; 2, the idol dragged in yearly processions on a great car; 3, anything demanding blind devotion and self-sacrifice, as a custom or institution: from the former belief that worshipers cast themselves to death before the car of Jagannath (which see).

JUGGERNAUT

jug-gle (jŭg'l), v.i. [p.t. and p.p. juggled (-ld), p.pr. juggling], [< O.F. jogler < Lat. joculari, to jest < jocus, jest], 1, to perform sleight-of-hand tricks; 2, to practice deceit or artifice:—v.t. 1, to conjure with; perform tricks with; 2, to cheat by tricks:—n. 1, a sleight-of-hand trick; 2, imposture; fraud.

jug-gler (jŭg'lẽr), n. 1, a conjurer; one who is skilled in sleight-of-hand tricks; 2, an impostor; a tricky, cunning person; a deceiver.

jug-gler-y (jŭg'lẽr-ĭ), n. [pl. -ies (-ĭz)], 1, magic; trickery; sleight of hand; hence, 2, deception; imposture; fraud.

Ju-go-slav (yōō'gō-slävˇ), n. [see Yugoslav], a citizen of the Serb-Croat-Slovene state: one of the southern Slavs. See Yu'go-slav', Pfd. S.

ju-gu-lar (jōō'gū-lär), adj. [< Lat. jugulum, collar bone; throat], pertaining to the neck or throat; Anat., designating or pertaining to the jugular vein: jugular vein, either of two large veins, lying on either side of the throat, which carry the blood from the head toward the heart:—n. the jugular vein.

juice (jōōs), n. [< Fr. jus < Lat. jus, broth; juice], 1, the fluid contained in plant or animal tissues; as, meat juice, fruit juice, etc.; hence, 2, the essence of anything: Slang, electric current; power.

juic-y (jōōs'ĭ), adj. [comp. -ier, superl. -iest], full of fluid or juice; succulent.—n. juic'i-ness.

ju-jube (jōō'jōōb), n. [Fr. < L.L. jujuba < Gk. zizuphon, the jujube fruit], 1, the edible fruit of any of various shrubs or trees (genus Zizyphus) of tropical and subtropical regions; 2, a lozenge or small tablet flavored with, or in imitation of, the jujube fruit.

ju-jut-su (jōō'jōōt'sōō), n. [Jap. jū, soft + jutsu, art: prob. because no weapons are used], Japanese wrestling, which opposes anatomical knowledge and skill to physical strength. Also, jiu'jit'su.

Jul. abbr. July, the seventh month in the present calendar: named for Julius Cæsar.

ju-lep (jōō'lĕp), n. [Fr. < Arab. julāb, julep < Pers. gulāb, rose water < gul, rose + āb, water], 1, a drink composed of brandy or whisky sweetened and flavored; as, mint julep; 2, a mixture of sugar and water in which medicine is given.

Jul-ian (jōōl'yăn), adj. [< Lat. Julianus, pertaining to Julius], pertaining to Julius Cæsar: Julian calendar, the calendar devised by Julius Cæsar in 46 B. C. to give a civil year of 365 days with one of 366 days every fourth year: often designated Old Style [abbr. O. S.]: replaced by the Gregorian calendar, often designated New Style [abbr. N. S.], in Roman Catholic countries in 1582, in the British Isles and colonies in 1752, in most of Russia in 1918, and in Greece in 1923.

ju-lienne (zhū'lyĕn'; jōō'lĭ-ĕn'), n. [prob. from a proper name], a clear meat soup, with chopped vegetables, especially carrots: julienne potatoes, potatoes cut into long, very narrow strips and fried in deep fat.

Ju-li-et (jōō'lĭ-ĕt), n. [dim. of Julia, fem. of Julius: a proper name], in Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet," the heroine who with her lover, Romeo, suffered a tragic death as a result of a feud between their families, the Capulets and Montagues.

Ju-ly (jōō-lī'), n. [< Lat. Julius (Caesar)], the seventh month of the year: so named from Julius Cæsar.

jum-ble (jŭm'bl), n. [prob. imit.], 1, a confused mass, mixture, or collection; disorder; 2, a kind of thin cake:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -bled (-bld), p.pr. -bling], to mix in a confused mass; throw together without order:—v.i. to mix or unite confusedly.

jum-bo (jŭm'bō), n. [source uncertain], a huge person or animal: from the name (Jumbo) of an elephant, said to have been the largest ever in captivity, bought by P. T. Barnum from the London Zoölogical Gardens for his American menagerie.

jump (jŭmp), n. [prob. imit.], 1, a spring or bound; hence, a sudden rise; as, stocks took a jump; 2, the space covered by a spring or bound; 3, an involuntary start or jerk: Obs., a venture; Slang, advantage of a first start:—v.t. 1, to leap over; 2, to leap aboard (a train); 3, to cause to spring or bound; 4, to leave as by a leap; as, the trolley pole jumped the wire; 5, to take possession of fraudulently, as a mining claim: Obs., to risk:—v.i. 1, to spring forward or upward; 2, to give a sudden or involuntary start; rise, as prices: Archaic, to agree; act in harmony: with together or with:—adv. Obs., exactly; immediately upon.

jump-er (jŭm'pĕr), n. 1, one who or that which jumps; 2, a member of any of various religious sects which practice dancing under religious excitement; 3, a hooded fur jacket worn in Arctic regions; 4, in the United States, a sort of blouse or loose jacket worn by workmen over their clothes as a protection; 5, a kind of loose outer blouse, or jacket, reaching to the hips.

jump spark in the ignition system of certain internal-combustion engines, the electric spark produced through an arc between permanently separated poles: opposite of make-and-break spark.

Jun. abbr. 1, June; 2, Junior (also, jun.; Jr.; jr.): —Junc., Junction (also, jn.; junc.).

jun-co (jŭng'kō), n. [pl. juncos (-kōz)] [Sp. < Lat. juncus, a rush], any of several American finches (genus Junco) about the size of the English sparrow; especially, the snowbird, gray above and white underneath, with white outer tail feathers.

junc-tion (jŭngk'shŭn), n. [< Lat. jungere (junctus), to join], 1, the act of joining or state of being joined; union; 2, a point or place of union; as, the junction of two rivers.—adj. junc'tion-al.

junc-ture (jŭngk'tŭr), n. 1, the point or line at which two bodies are joined; joint; 2, a union of circumstances producing a particular or critical occasion; concurrence of events; a crisis.

June (jōōn), n. [< Lat. Junius, the name of a Roman gens], the sixth month of the year.

June ber-ry the shadbush, or service berry; also, its berrylike fruit.

June bug a reddish brown beetle, of any of numerous species, that emerges from the ground at night in May and June: also called June beetle.

jun-gle (jŭng'gl), n. [< Hind. jangal, desert; forest], a close, tropical thicket; any tract overrun with dense undergrowth and tangled vegetation: jungle fowl, 1, any of several wild birds (genus Gallus) of Asia, especially a species (G. bankiva) supposed to be the ancestor of the domestic fowl (see bird, colored illus.); 2, any of several related birds of Australia.

jun-ior (jōōn'yĕr), adj. [Lat., comp. of juvenis, young], 1, younger in years: as, John Smith, junior; 2, of lower standing; as, the junior partner in a firm; 3, belonging to youth; 4, later in date or occurrence: U. S. Education, designating, or pertaining to, the next to the last year of a collegiate or high-school course: junior college, U. S. Education, an institution offering, often in connection with studies of high-school rank, the equivalent of the first two years of collegiate work, and affording a basis for advanced professional specialization: junior high school, U. S. Education, a school between the elementary school (first six grades) and the high school (last three grades), including the seventh, eighth, and ninth grades: characterized by departmental teaching, subject promotion, and attention to individual needs and capabilities and to the problems of adolescence:—n. 1, the younger; 2, one of lower standing; 3, in American colleges and high schools, a student in the next to the last year. —n. jun-ior'i-ty (jōōn-yŏr'ĭ-tĭ).

ju-ni-per (jōō'nĭ-pĕr), n. [< Lat. juniperus, juniper], any of a genus (Juniperus) of evergreen trees or shrubs of the pine family, as the common juniper (J. communis) and the red cedar (J. virginiana).

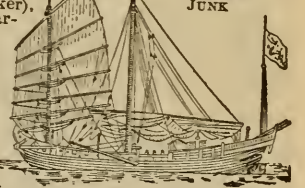
[1]junk (jŭngk), n. [source uncertain], 1, old metal, glass, paper, etc., of small marketable value; hence, any jumble of articles of little or no value; 2, pieces of cordage, etc., used in making mats, for calking, etc.; 3, hard, salt, ship beef; 4, a chunk.

[2]junk (jŭngk), n. [prob. < Javanese djong, junk], a Chinese flat-bottomed vessel with a square bow and high stern, and from one to five masts, each in one piece.



CHINESE JUNK

Jun-ker (yōōng'kĕr), n. [< earlier Ger. junkher, nobleman: literally, young sir], 1, a member of the aristocratic, conservative party in Prussia, which came into power in 1862; 2, a young German nobleman. Also, jun'ker.—n. jun'ker-ism.

jun-ket (jŭng'kĕt), n. [prob. < A.F. jonquette, rush basket used in making junket < Lat. juncus, a rush], 1, a preparation of curdled milk and cream sweetened; 2, a kind of sweetmeat; 3, a feast; excursion; picnic:—v.i. to join an excursion or picnic.

Ju-no (jōō'nō), n. [Lat.], Rom. Myth., the wife of Jupiter, god of the heavens, goddess of marriage and childbirth: identified with the Greek Hera.

jun-ta (jŭn'tä), n. [Sp. < Lat. juncta, fem. p.p. of jungere, to join], in Spain, Italy, and Central South America, an assembly or council for making or administering laws.

jun-to (jŭn'tō), n. [pl. juntos (-tōz)], [erroneous form of junta, q.v.], a number of men secretly combined for some purpose, especially a political one.

Ju-pi-ter (jōō'pĭ-tĕr), n. [< Lat. Juppiter, a contraction of Lat Joris pater, Jove father], 1, Rom. Myth., the greatest of the gods: identified with the Greek Zeus; 2, the fifth planet in order of distance from the sun, the largest in the solar system, and, except Venus, the brightest (see solar system, illus.).

Ju-pi-ter Am-mon (ăm'ŏn), Rom. Myth., the name given to the Egyptian god Ammon by the Romans.

ju-pon (jōō'pŏn; jōō-pŏn'), n. [Fr. < jupe, skirt < Sp. aljuba, a Moorish garment < Arab. jubbah, garment], 1, a cotton and wool dress fabric; 2, a medieval jacket or doublet: Her., a sleeveless surcoat bearing the insignia of the wearer.

ju-ral (jōō'răl), adj. [< Lat. jus (juris), law, right], Law, pertaining to legal rights and obligations.

Ju-ras-sic (jōō-răs'ĭk), adj. [< Jura, name of mountains + -assic after analogy of Triassic], pertaining to the Jura Mountains, between France and Switzerland; like them in exhibiting oölitic limestone: Geol., designating, or pertaining to, the second period in the Mesozoic era, immediately following the Triassic, and characterized by the first birds and the saurian monsters (see geology, chart):—n. Geol., the Jurassic period or system of strata.

ju-rat (jo͝o′răt; zhŭ′rä′), n. [< L.L. jurare (-atus), to swear], Law, the clause in a sworn declaration stating when and before whom the declaration was made.

ju-ra-to-ry (jo͝o′rə-tō-rĭ), adj. Law, pertaining to, or including, an oath.

ju-rid-i-cal (jo͝o-rĭd′ĭ-kəl), adj. [< Lat. juridicus, pertaining to law < jus (juris), law + dicere, to say], 1, pertaining to law, the proceedings of law courts, or the office of a judge; 2, considered by law to exist; as, a juridical person: juridical days, days on which the courts are open.

ju-ris-con-sult (jo͝o′rĭs-kŏn′sŭlt; -kən-sŭlt′), n. [< Lat. jurisconsultus, one learned in the law], one learned in law; a jurist.

ju-ris-dic-tion (jo͝o′rĭs-dĭk′shən), n. [< Lat. jurisdictio (-onis), jurisdiction < jus (juris), right + dictio, a saying], 1, the right to exercise legal authority; extent of power; as, the jurisdiction of a court or state; 2, the district over which any authority extends: Law, the right of a court to pass upon a given case; also, the scope of a court's authority.

Syn. dominion, power, authority, right, control.

ju-ris-pru-dence (jo͝o′rĭs-pro͞o′dĕns), n. [< Lat. jurisprudentia, the science of law < jus (juris), right + prudentia, skill], 1, the philosophy or science of law; 2, the system of laws of a country.—abbr. jurisp.—adj. ju′ris-pru′dent.—adj. ju′ris-pru-den′tial (-dĕn′shəl).

ju-rist (jo͝o′rĭst), n. [< Fr. juriste < L.L. jurista, lawyer < jus (juris), law], one skilled in the science of law; a writer on law; a student or expounder of its principles.—adj. ju-ris′tic; ju-ris′ti-cal.

ju-ror (jo͝o′rẽr), n. [< O.F. jureor < Lat. jurotor, one who swears < jurare, to swear], one who serves on a jury; a juryman.

ju-ry (jo͝o′rĭ), n. [pl. -ries (-rĭz)], [< O.F. jurée, oath < Lat. jurare (-atus), to swear], 1, Law, a body of persons, residents of the county having jurisdiction of the cases called before them, usually twelve in number, selected according to law and sworn to inquire into, or decide on, the evidence in a case of law before them: also called a petit jury; 2, a committee of experts selected to award prizes, to adjudge the value of land, or the like: grand jury, Law, a body of from 13 to 23 persons, residents of the county having jurisdiction of the cases called before them, chosen to inquire into bills of indictment to discover whether there is ground for formal criminal trial before a court.

ju-ry-man (jo͝o′rĭ-mən), n. [jury + man], a juror; one who serves on a jury.

ju-ry mast [source of jury uncertain], 1, Naut., a temporary mast; 2, a surgical support for an injured spine.

1just (jŭst), adj. [< Lat. justus, right < jus, law], 1, according to divine or human laws; upright; 2, giving to every man his due; faithful; equitable; 3, based on reasonable grounds; as, a just opinion; 4, exact; regular; fair; as, a just measure:—adv. 1, exactly; without lack or excess; as, just right; 2, but now; a moment ago; as, he has just gone; 3, only, barely; as, just a little: Colloq., perfectly; quite; as, just beautiful.—adv. just′ly.—n. just′ness.

Syn., adj. honest, honorable, fair, true, righteous.

2just (jŭst), n. [< O.F. juste, just < L.L. juxtare, to approach], a combat with lances between two mounted knights; especially, such a combat as part of a tournament: pl. a tournament:—v.i. to engage in a just. Also, joust (jŭst; jo͝ost).—n. just′er.

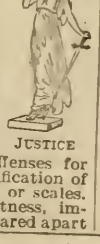
jus-tice (jŭs′tĭs), n. [O.F. < Lat. justitia, justice < justus, right < jus, law], 1, the principle or practice of dealing uprightly and equitably with others; rectitude; integrity; 2, absolute fairness; impartiality; 3, the rendering of due reward or appreciation; deserved reward or punishment; as, to do oneself justice; 4, legal authority; 5, a judge; magistrate: justice of the peace, a public officer, originally invested only with judicial powers for preventing and punishing breaches of the peace; now, in the United States, an officer having duties widely varying in the several states, from the mere administering of oaths to the judging of minor cases and the holding of offenders charged with serious criminal offenses for trial by a superior court: Justice, a personification of justice, often blindfolded, holding a sword or scales.



JUSTICE

Syn. equity, right, honesty, integrity, justness, impartiality. Justice and equity are here compared apart from their legal distinctions. Justice gives a man his strict due, deciding the case on its own merits, excluding the thought of others, and rendering decision on the basis of fairness, propriety, conformity to standards, adherence to fact, living worthily up to one's abilities, showing appreciation, or the like; as, the justice of his punishment; the justice of her conduct; the justice of the criticism, or his resentment; the justice of his statement; to do oneself justice; do another justice. Equity does not exclude the thought of others, but rather entertains it, having for its purpose a fair apportionment, an even-handed distribution, of what there is. Justice is strict; equity has the elasticity of a spiritual quality, yielding where conditions demand or permit, and sometimes appearing to break the letter, while conserving the spirit, of a law. Justness can mean either justice or equity, but it usually connotes conformity to accuracy, truth, reasonableness, or the like. Just resentment is well grounded; just punishment is deserved; just divisions are fair. Impartiality is unbiased, unprejudiced, impersonal fairness.—Ant. injustice, unfairness, dishonesty, partiality, untruth, wrong.

jus-tice-ship (jŭs′tĭs-shĭp), n. the office, or period in office, of a judge or magistrate.

jus-ti-ci-a-ble (jŭs-tĭsh′ĭ-ə-bl), n. a person under the jurisdiction of another:—adj. 1, subject to jurisdiction, as a person; 2, capable of being disposed of judicially, as a case.

jus-ti-ci-a-ry (jŭs-tĭsh′ĭ-ə-rĭ), n. [pl. -ries (-rĭz)], [< L.L. justitiarius, one who administers justice], Eng. Hist., the chief judicial and political officer under Norman and early Plantagenet kings: also, justiciar:—adj. pertaining to law or the work of the courts; relating to the administration of justice.

jus-ti-fi-a-ble (jŭs′tĭ-fī′ə-bl), adj. [see justify], capable of being shown to be right; excusable; as, killing in self-defense is legally justifiable.—adv. jus′ti-fi′a-bly.—n. jus′ti-fi′a-ble-ness.

jus-ti-fi-ca-tion (jŭs′tĭ-fĭ-kā′shən), n. 1, the act of justifying or state of being justified; 2, an acceptable excuse; defense; as, there was no justification for his disobedience; 3, exoneration.—adj. jus′ti-fi-ca-tive (-kā-tĭv).—adj. jus′ti-fi-ca-to-ry.

jus-ti-fy (jŭs′tĭ-fī), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -fied (-fīd), p.pr. -fying], [< Fr. justifier < L.L. justificare, to do justice to < Lat. justus, just + facere, do], 1, to show or prove to be right; warrant; vindicate; make right; 2, to pronounce free from blame; exonerate: Theol., to declare blameless of sin on the ground of Christ's righteousness; Print., to make straight, even, or true, as lines of type:—v.i. 1, to show lawful grounds for an act; 2, to prove to be surety: Print., to form an even surface or true line; be straight; fit.—n. jus′ti-fi′er.

Syn. vindicate, clear, exonerate, excuse, warrant, defend, absolve, acquit.—Ant. condemn, blame, censure, convict.

jut (jŭt), v.i. [p.t. and p.p. jutted, p.pr. jutting], [var. of 1jet, q.v.], to project beyond the main body; as, a rock juts out from a hillside:—n. a projection.

jute (jo͞ot), n. [< Bengali jhoto < Sans. juta, jata, braid of hair], 1, the fiber of either of two East Indian plants (genus Corchorus), used for ropes, burlap, bagging, mats, etc.; 2, either of these plants.

Jute (jo͞ot), n. [< L.L. Jutae, pl. < A.S. Eotas < O.N. Iotar, people of Jutland], a member of a Low German tribe living in Jutland, some of whom, with the Angles and Saxons, invaded and settled in Britain during the fifth century.—adj. Jut′ish.

jut-ty (jŭt′ĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-ĭz)], [corr. and confusion of 1jetty, 1jet, and jut, q.v.], 1, a projection, as from a building; 2, a jetty, or structure extending into the sea to divert currents; a pier:—v.i. Obs., to jut.

ju-ve-nes-cent (jo͞o′və-nĕs′ənt), adj. [< Lat. juvenescens (-entis), p.pr. of juvenescere, to reach the age of youth < juvenis, young], becoming young again.—n. ju′ve-nes′cence.

ju-ve-nile (jo͞o′və-nīl; Br. -nĭl), adj. [< Lat. juvenilis, youthful < juvenis, young], 1, youthful; immature; 2, characteristic of, or suitable to, youth; as, juvenile books; 3, pertaining to children under a certain age, as sixteen years, fixed by law; as, juvenile delinquent: juvenile court, Law, a court in which juveniles within the definition of local law are tried for certain or, frequently, any offenses:—n. 1, a young person; 2, a book for children; 3, an actor in youthful rôles.—n. ju′ve-nil′i-ty (-nĭl′ĭ-tĭ).

jux-ta-pose (jŭks′tə-pōz′), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -posed (-pōzd′), p.pr. -posing], [< Lat. juxta, side by side + ponere (positus), to place], a placing or being placed close together or side by side; contiguity.

jux-ta-po-si-tion (jŭks′tə-pŏ-zĭsh′ən), n. [< Lat. juxta, side by side + pausare, to pause: see 1pose], to place side by side; put close together.

K

K, k (kā), n. [pl. K's; Ks; k's; ks (kāz)], 1, the eleventh letter of the English alphabet, or its sound (for certain uses, see alphabet, NOTE); 2, anything having the shape of the printed capital K: K, Chem., the symbol [K, < L.L. kalium] for the element potassium; Math., any of various constants.

K. abbr. 1, King; Kings; 2, Knight:—k., 1, Meteor., cumulus; 2, Chess, king.

Ka-a-ba (kä'ə-bə; kä'bə), n. [see Caaba], the shrine at Mecca, toward which all Mohammedans turn when praying. See Ca'a-ba, Pfd. S.

kab-a-la (kăb'ə-lə), n. [see cabala], 1, a mystic Hebrew system of theosophy and scriptural interpretation; 2, occultism; secret doctrines. Also, kab'ba-la. See cab'a-la, Pfd. S.

ka-di (kä'dĭ; kā'dĭ), n. [pl. -dis (-dĭz)], [see cadi], a Mohammedan village judge. Also, ca'di, Pfd. S.

kaf (käf), n. [Arab.], the twenty-second letter of the Arabic alphabet (see App. I), approximately equivalent to the English k: as a numeral, 20.

Ka-fir (kä'fẽr), n. [Arab. = infidel], 1, an infidel, or one who is not a Mohammedan; 2, a member of any of several tribes of Kafiristan in northeastern Afghanistan; 3, a member of one of the native races of the east coast of Africa; especially, the most intelligent race of the Bantu negroes in South Africa: Kafir corn, a variety of Indian millet, or durra, cultivated in South Africa. Also, Kaf'fir (käf'ẽr).

kaf-tan (käf'tăn; käf-tän'), n. [see caftan], a long-sleeved gown worn in Near Eastern countries (for illus. see caftan). See caf'tan, Pfd. S.

kai-ak (kī'ăk), n. [see kayak], an Eskimo canoe of sealskin stretched over a light wooden or bone frame (for illus. see kayak). See kay'ak, Pfd. S.

kai-nite (kī'nīt), n. [< Gk. kainos, recent], a hydrous magnesium sulphate combined with potassium chloride: used as a fertilizer.

kai-ser (kī'zẽr), n. [< Lat. Caesar, emperor: from family name of first Roman emperors], emperor: a title applied, 1, to the emperors of the Holy Roman empire; 2, to the former emperors of Austria and, especially, Germany.

ka-ka (kä'kə), n. [Maori = parrot: imit.], a parrot of New Zealand, gray, red, and olive-brown.

ka-ka-po (kä'kä-pō'), n. [< Maori kaka, parrot + po, night], a curious parrot of New Zealand, with a disklike growth of feathers about the eyes.

ka-ki (k 'kē), n. [Jap.], the Japanese persimmon, or date plum; the Chinese date plum.

kale (kāl), n. [northern dial. form of cole, cabbage], 1, a kind of cabbage with open, curled leaves; 2, in Scotland, any kind of cabbage; also, a broth or soup of kale: Colloq., money. Also, kail.

ka-lei-do-graph (kə-lī'dō-grăf), n. [< Gk. kalos, beautiful + eidos, form + -graphos, written], a certain contrivance for displaying kaleidoscopic effects, as on a screen.

ka-lei-do-scope (kə-lī'dō-skōp), n. [< Gk. kalos, beautiful + eidos, form + skopein, to behold], an instrument containing small bits of colored glass, which, by an arrangement of mirrors, appear in a variety of symmetrical forms when rotated.

ka-lei-do-scop-ic (kə-lī'dō-skŏp'ĭk), adj., 1, pertaining to the kaleidoscope; 2, constantly changing in color; changingly beautiful.

kal-en-dar (kăl'ẽn-dẽr), n. [see calendar], 1, a system of dividing time into years, months, etc., so as to fix dates; 2, a table, or group of tables, showing how in a given year the dates of the month fall with respect to the days of the week; 3, a schedule or list. See cal'en-dar, Pfd. S.

kal-ends (kăl'ẽndz), n. [see calends], in the ancient Roman calendar, the first day of the month. Also, cal'ends, Pfd. S.

ka-lif (kā'lĭf; kăl'ĭf), n. [see caliph], in Mohammedan countries, one having supreme civil and religious authority. See ca'liph, Pfd. S.

kal-mi-a (kăl'mĭ-ə), n. [named by Linnæus for his pupil, Peter Kalm (1716–79)], Bot., any of a genus (Kalmia) of evergreen laurel-like shrubs of the heath family, with showy clusters of white, pink, or purplish flowers; especially, the American flowering mountain laurel.

Kal-muck (kăl'mŭk), n. [< Russ. Kalmuiku], 1, a member of any of various Buddhist Mongol tribes of western China or eastern Russia; 2, also, their language: kalmuck, a variety of coarse cloth. Also, Kal'muk; kal'muk.

kal-so-mine (kăl'sō-mīn), n. [see calcimine], a white or colored wash for coating walls, etc.:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -mined (-mīnd), p.pr. -mining], to coat with such a wash. Pfd. S., cal'ci-mine.

ka-ma-la (kə-mä'lə; kăm'ə-lə), n. [Hind.], an East Indian vegetable dyestuff of rich orange color, used for silks. Also, ka-mi'la (-mē'-).

Kan-a-ka (kăn'ə-kə; kə-näk'ə), n. [Hawaiian = a man], 1, a native of the Hawaiian Islands; 2, a South Sea Islander. Also, Ka-nack'a.

Ka-na-rese (kä'nə-rēz'; -rēs'), adj. [< Kanara, in southern India], pertaining to the Dravidian inhabitants of Kanara, a district in the south of India, and the language spoken by them.

kan-ga-roo (kăng"gə-rōō'), n. [nat. name], any of a family (Macropodidæ) of mammals of Australia, feeding on grass and leaves, and having short forelegs, long, powerful hind legs with which it leaps, a long, strong tail, and a marsupium, or external pouch, for carrying its immature young.

KANGAROO ($\frac{1}{60}$)

Kans. abbr. Kansas: official abbreviation (also, Kan.; Kas.).

Kant-i-an (kăn'tĭ-ən), adj. [< proper name], pertaining to the German philosopher, Immanuel Kant (1724–1804), or to his doctrines:—n. a follower of Kant; one who believes in, or advocates the philosophy of, Kant.

Kant-i-an-ism (kăn'tĭ-ən-ĭzm), n. the philosophy of Immanuel Kant, who taught that the data of experience can be perceived, and thought can be carried on, only in certain ways determined by the inherent nature of the mind, so that ultimately the mind determines the form of our universe and of our thought processes; and further, that, though no proof can be given of the existence of mind or of God, of freedom of the will, or of immortality, these are necessary assumptions if there is to be either experience or thought: this teaching constituting the beginning of the so-called critical philosophy. Also, Kant'ism.

ka-o-lin (kā'ō-lĭn; kä'ō-lĭn), n. [< Chin. kao ling, high hill: name of mountain where found], caolinite: the commercial name. Also, ka'o-line.

ka-o-lin-ite (kā'ō-lĭn-īt; kä'-), n., a very pure white clay used to form the paste from which porcelain is made.

ka-pok (kā'pŏk), n. [< Malay kāpoq], the mass of silky fibers within the seed pods of a certain tropical tree (Ceiba pentandra): used as a stuffing for mattresses, etc., and also woven into fabrics.

kap-pa (kăp'ə), n. [Gk.], the tenth letter of the Greek alphabet [κ, K (see App. I)], sounded like k: often transliterated by c in words from Greek.

ka-ra-kul (kă'rə-kōōl'; Colloq. kăr'ə-kŭl), n. [< Karakul, in Bokhara], the pelt of the very young lamb of the astrakhan, or curly-haired sheep of Russia and Asia. Also, ca'ra-cul'.

kar-at (kăr'ăt), n. [see carat], 1, a unit of weight for precious stones; 2, a twenty-fourth part: used to express the fineness of gold. See car'at, Pfd. S.

kar-ma (kär'mə; kŭr'mə), n. [Sans. = action], 1, in Hinduism, a person's actions in one stage of his existence thought of as affecting his lot in the next; 2, destiny as determined by previous acts.

ka-roo (kə-rōō'), n. [pl. karoos (-rōōz')], [Hottentot name], in South Africa, a dry, elevated tableland: Great Karoo, the karoo in Cape Colony.

kat-a- prefix, [see cata-], down; under; against. Also written kath-; kat-: see cat-a-.

ka-tab-a-sis (kə-tăb'ə-sĭs), n. [pl. -ses (-sēz)], [< Gk. kata, down + bainein, to go], a going down: Katabasis, the adventurous retreat to the sea, of the Greeks who followed Cyrus against Artaxerxes, as related by Xenophon in the "Anabasis."

ka-tab-o-lism (kə-tăb'ō-lĭzm), n. [< Gk. kata, down + ballein, to throw], Biol., the process in a cell, tissue, or organ by which protoplasm is broken down into less complex, waste substances, as carbonic acid, water, and salts: destructive metabolism. Also, ca-tab'o-lism.—adj. kat'a-bol'ic.

ka-tal-y-sis (kə-tăl'ĭ-sĭs), n. [pl. -ses (-sēz)], [see catalysis], Chem., the producing of a reaction between two substances by the presence of a third substance which itself remains unchanged. Also, ca-tal'y-sis. Pfd. S.—adj. kat'a-lyt'ic.

kath-ode (kăth'ōd), n. [see cathode], Elec., in an electric cell, the negative electrode, or the conductor by which the current leaves: opposite of anode. See cath'ode, Pfd. S.—adj. kath'o-dal.

ka-ty-did (kā'tĭ-dĭd″), n. [imit. of insect's note], a green, tree insect resembling a large grasshopper, belonging to the order Orthoptera, which makes a shrill sound similar to the words, "Katy did."

kau-ri (kou'rĭ), n. [Maori], a very large resinous New Zealand tree of the pine family, yielding exceptionally long timbers: kauri gum, the resin which exudes from the kauri: used in varnish.

kay-ak (kī'ăk), n. [< Eskimo], a boat used by men in Arctic America, made of sealskin stretched over a frame and kept watertight above by a decklike covering laced about the paddler. Also, kai'ak; ky'ack.

KAYAK

K. B. abbr. Knight of the Bath:—K. C., 1, Knights of Columbus (also, K. of C.); 2, Knight Commander; 3, King's Counsel:—K. C. B., Knight Commander of the Bath:—K. D., knocked down (cut to fit but not assembled).

ke-a (kā'ä; kē'ä), n. [Maori: imit.], Ornith., a large parrot of New Zealand, which naturally feeds on fruit, insects, and carrion, but which also kills sheep by tearing their backs to obtain the fat about the kidneys.

keb-bie (kĕb'ĭ), n. [Sc.], in Scotland, a cudgel; a walking stick.

keb-buck (kĕb'ŭk), n. [Sc. < Gael. cabag, a cheese], Sc. and Ir. Dial., a cheese. Also, keb'bock.

keck (kĕk), v.i. [imit.], 1, to heave as in nausea; retch; 2, to show or feel loathing.

kedge (kĕj), n. [perh. var. of cadge], a light anchor: also called kedge anchor:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. kedged (kĕjd), p.pr. kedging], to move (a vessel) by carrying a small anchor out in a boat, dropping it overboard, and hauling the vessel up to it.

keek (kēk), v.i. [< M.E. kiken, to peep], Sc. and Eng. Dial., to peep:—n. Slang, an industrial spy.

[1]keel (kēl), n. [< O.N. kjolr, a ship], 1, the chief and lowest timber or steel plate of a vessel, extending from stem to stern along the bottom and supporting the whole frame; 2, a ship; 3, in an airship, the lowest and central part of the body of the machine, which helps to keep the balance; 4, anything with a shape or purpose similar to that of a ship's keel, as a longitudinal ridge on the breastbone of most birds:—v.t. to furnish with a keel: Poet., to sail:—v.i. to turn up the keel; turn over: keel over, Colloq., to upset; capsize; fall suddenly.

[2]keel (kēl), n. [< M.Du. kiel, ship], 1, a barge, especially one used on the Tyne for carrying coal; 2, hence, a unit of weight for coal, equal to 21⅓ tons.

[3]keel (kēl), n. [< Gael. cīl, ruddle], a red ocher used for marking lumber, sheep, etc.; ruddle.

[4]keel (kēl), v.t. [< A.S. cēlan, to make cool < cōl, cool], Obs., to cool or prevent from boiling over, as liquid, by stirring or skimming:—v.i. to become cool.

keel-haul (kēl'hôl″), v.t. [keel+haul], 1, to drag (a person) from one side of a ship to the other, beneath the bottom: formerly a naval punishment; 2, to rebuke abusively.

keel-son (kĕl'sŭn), n. [prob. related to Sw. kölsvin, keelson, or to Norw. kjölsvill < kjöl, keel +svill, sill], a longitudinal beam or timber bolted to the keel of a vessel to strengthen it. Also, kel'son.

[1]keen (kēn), adj. [< A.S. cēne < O.Teut. source], 1, sharp; cutting; as, a keen tool; piercing; bitter; as, a keen wind; keen sarcasm; 2, acute; intelligent; as, a keen student; 3, eager; ardent; as, a keen sportsman.—adv. keen'ly.—n. keen'ness.

Syn. cutting, penetrating, stinging, acute, shrewd.

[2]keen (kēn), n. [< Ir. caoine, lamentation], a wailing lamentation for the dead:—v.t. to lament (the dead) with a wail:—v.i. to utter a wailing dirge.

keep (kēp), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. kept (kĕpt), p.pr. keeping], [< A.S. cēpan, to observe: source uncertain], 1, to have the care of; defend; as, to keep a castle, or a goal; 2, to preserve; support; maintain; as, to keep servants, or an automobile; 3, to conduct; carry on; manage; as, to keep a shop; 4, to maintain in proper order; as, to keep house; 5, to have and retain in use, ownership, or possession; as, whatever you find you may keep; 6, to observe; fulfil; perform; as, to keep a holiday, or a promise; 7, to reserve; hold in; detain; as, to keep a secret; to keep a boy after school; 8, to have on hand or in stock, as for sale; as, to keep shoes; 9, to cause to persist; as, to keep one's health, or silence; maintain or cause to continue in a specified condition; as, keep your hat on; 10, to remain in; as, to keep one's room:—v.i. 1, to remain or continue in any state or condition; as, to keep cheerful; keep up in a crisis; 2, to continue sweet, fresh, or unspoiled, as fruit; 3, to continue in session:—n. 1, means of, or provision for, maintenance; board; as, he worked for his keep; 2, the stronghold or donjon of an ancient castle: Obs., that in which something is stored or preserved, as a cupboard for meat: for keeps, Colloq., for the winner to retain what he wins; as, to play marbles for keeps.

Syn., v. save, support, hold. (See defend, celebrate.)

keep-er (kēp'ẽr), n. one who keeps; especially, a person who has custody of prisoners, the mentally unsound, or animals: Phys., a soft-iron bar connecting the poles of a horseshoe magnet.

keep-ing (kēp'ĭng), n. 1, care; custody; charge; 2, means of life; 3, harmony; congruity.

keep-sake (kēp'sāk″), n. [keep+sake], a token kept in memory of the giver; memento.

Kee-wa-tin (kē-wä'tĭn), adj. [< name of former district including central and western Canada], Geol., designating, or pertaining to, the earlier period of the Archæan, or Archæozoic, era (see geology, chart):—n. the Keewatin period.

kef-ir (kĕf'ẽr), n. [Caucasian], a fermented liquor made from milk. Also, keph'ir.

keg (kĕg), n. [< dial. cag < O.N. kaggi, a keg], a small, strong barrel, holding 5 to 10 gallons.

keir (kēr), n. [recorded from 16th cent.: perh. < Scand.], a vat holding bleaching liquor. Also, kier.

kelp (kĕlp), n. [< M.E. culp], 1, any of several large, brown seaweeds (for illus. see Thallophyta); 2, ashes of seaweed: a source of alkalies and iodine.

kel-pie (kĕl'pĭ), n. [pl. kelpies (-pĭz)], [source uncertain], an evil water sprite, supposed to take the form of a horse, and to warn people who are to be drowned, or to assist in their drowning. Also, kel'py.

kel-son (kĕl'sŭn), n. [see keelson], a timber bolted to the keel of a vessel. See keel'son, Pfd. S.

Kelt (kĕlt), n. [see Celt], a descendant of the Bretons, Welsh, Irish, or Gaelic Scotch. See Celt (sĕlt), Pfd. S.—adj. Kelt'ic.

kel-ter (kĕl'tẽr), n. [see kilter], Colloq., proper order; good condition. See kil'ter, Pfd. S.

Kel-vin scale (kĕl'vĭn), [< Lord Kelvin (1824–1907), Br. physicist], Phys., the absolute scale of temperature, with zero at −273° C.

ken (kĕn), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. kenned (kĕnd), p.pr. kenning], [< A.S. cennan, to know < O.Teut. source], Sc., to know; understand: Archaic, to descry; discern:—v.i. Archaic, to know:—n. knowledge; comprehension.

Ken. abbr. an abbreviation for the State of Kentucky (officially, Ky.).

Ken-dal (kĕn'dăl), n. [< place name], 1, a rough, green, woolen cloth formerly woven at Kendal, England; 2, its color, also called Kendal green.

ken-nel (kĕn'ĕl), n. [< Fr. chenil < L.L. canile < canis, dog], 1, a house for a dog or dogs; also, a place where dogs are bred and reared; 2, a pack of dogs; 3, a vile lodging:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -neled or -nelled (-ĕld), p.pr. -neling or -nelling], to confine in a kennel:—v.i. to live in a kennel, as a dog does.

ken-ning (kĕn'ĭng), n. [see ken], 1, Obs., a knowing; 2, in early Teutonic poetry, a conventionalized, figurative name for an object, as gannet's bath for sea.

ke-no (kē'nō), n. [source uncertain], a game of chance resembling lotto.

ken-o-tron (kĕn'ō-trŏn), n. [keno- (< Gk. kenos, empty)+-tron, as in electron: a trade name], Rad., a vacuum tube, containing a filament and plate, used as a rectifier of alternating current.

Kep-ler's laws (kĕp'lẽrz), three laws of the motions of the planets, announced by the German astronomer Johannes Kepler (1571–1630), the basic one of which says that the orbit of a planet is an ellipse with the sun at one of the foci.

kept (kĕpt), past tense and past participle of the irregular verb keep.

ke-ram-ic (kē-răm'ĭk), adj. [see ceramic], pertaining to pottery:—n.pl. 1, used as sing., the art of making pottery; 2, used as pl., articles of pottery collectively. Also, ce-ram'ic (sē-), Pfd. S.

ker-a-tin (kĕr'ă-tĭn), n. [< Gk. keras (keratos), horn], a nitrogenous compound forming a large part of horny substances, such as nails, claws, horns, etc.—adj. ke-rat'i-nous (kē-răt'ĭ-nŭs).

ker-a-tol (kĕr'ă-tōl; -tŏl), n. [trade name < Gk. keras (-atos), horn], a kind of artificial leather with a hard surface.

kerb (kûrb), n. [see curb], 1, an edging, as along a sidewalk; 2, the street as a market for stocks and bonds:—v.t. 1, to restrain; control; 2, to furnish with a curb. See curb, Pfd. S.—n. kerb'ing.

ker-chief (kûr'chĭf), n. [< O.F. couvrechief < covrir, to cover+chief, head: see cover, chief], 1, a square of cloth worn, usually by women, on the head or about the neck; 2, a handkerchief.

kerf (kûrf), n. [<A.S. cyrf, a cutting], 1, the notch or slit made by cutting, as by a saw; 2, the cut end of a felled tree; 3, the wool taken off in one passage through the cutter of a cloth-shearing machine.

ke-rite (kē'rit), n. [<Gk. kēros, wax], a variety of vulcanite made of asphalt with animal or vegetable oils and sulphur: used for insulating.

ker-mes (kûr'mēz), n. [<Pers. qirmiz], 1, a scarlet dye consisting of the dried bodies of certain insects found especially in countries bordering the Mediterranean; 2, any of these insects; 3, a Mediterranean dwarf oak on which the kermes insect lives.

ker-mis (kûr'mis), n. [Du.<kerk, church+mis, mass: because orig. used of mass on anniversary of a church dedication when an annual fair was held], 1, in the Netherlands, a periodical outdoor fair accompanied by noisy festivity; 2, in the United States, an indoor fair held for charity. Also, ker'mess; kir'mess.

1kern (kûrn), n. [see kirn], in Scotland, the last sheaf of a harvest: also, a feast at the close of the harvest; a harvest home. See kirn, Pfd. S.

2kern (kûrn), n. [<Fr. carne, a projecting angle <Lat. cardo (-dinis), a hinge], Print., a part of the face overhanging the body, or shank, of a type.

3kern (kûrn), n. [<Ir. ceithern], 1, a Celtic light-armed foot soldier; 2, a peasant. Also, kerne.

ker-nel (kûr'nĕl), n. [<A.S. cyrnel, dim. of corn, grain], 1, a grain or seed; the softer, sometimes edible, portion of a nut, fruit stone, or the like; 2, the nucleus of anything: core; as, the kernel of a plan:—v.i. [p.t. and p.p. -neled or -nelled (-nĕld), p.pr. -neling or -nelling], to form kernels, as wheat.

ker-o-sene (kĕr'ō-sēn"), n. [<Gk. kēros, wax], a light, colorless oil used for illuminating purposes: a mixture of liquid hydrocarbons distilled from petroleum, coal, etc.: also called coal oil.

Ker-ry (kĕr'ĭ), n. [<Kerry, place name], a breed of small black cattle of County Kerry, Ireland.

ker-sey (kûr'zĭ), n. [pl. kerseys (-zĭz)], [<Kersey, village in Suffolk], a coarse, woolen cloth of light weight, often ribbed.

ker-sey-mere (kûr'zĭ-mēr), n. [corr. of cassimere, cashmere], a fine, twilled, woolen cloth: also called cassimere.

kes-trel (kĕs'trĕl), n. [<O.F. cresserelle, a kestrel], a small European falcon (Cerchneis tinnunculus) of reddish color: also called windhover; stannel.

KESTREL (♂)

1ketch (kĕch), n. [<earlier cache, ketch: prob. akin to catch, q.v.], a small, fore-and-aft-rigged sailing vessel, with relatively small mizzenmast located forward of the rudder post (see ship, illus.).

2ketch (kĕch), n. [see Jack Ketch], Br., a public executioner:—v.t. to hang.

ketch-up (kĕch'ŭp), n. [see catchup], a sauce prepared from tomatoes, mushrooms, spices, etc.: used with meat, etc. Also, cat'sup. See catch'up, Pfd. S.

ke-tone (kē'tōn), n. [<Ger. keton, formed, for sake of distinction, from acetone, q.v.], Chem., any of an important class of organic compounds, usually volatile liquids or crystalline solids, allied to the aldehydes, including acetone.—adj ke-ton'ic (kē-tŏn'ĭk).

ket-tle (kĕt'l), n. [<A.S. cetel, kettle<O.Teut. source], 1, a metal vessel for boiling liquids; a teakettle; 2, a tin pail; 3, a pool of deep water where carp lie in the winter; 4, a kettledrum: Geol., a depression, up to 150 feet wide, formed by glacial action: also called kettle hole.

ket-tle-drum (kĕt'l-drŭm"), n. [kettle+drum], a drum consisting of a large bowl of copper or brass with parchment stretched over the opening: when used in orchestras, called timpano, which see.

KETTLEDRUM

Ke-wee-naw-an (kē"wē-nô'ăn), adj. [<Keweenaw Point, Michigan], Geol., designating, or pertaining to, the later period of the Algonkian era (see eology, chart):—n. the Keweenawan period or strata.

1key (kē), n. [<A.S. cǣg, key], 1, a metal instrument for moving the bolt of a lock; 2, any of several instruments resembling a key in general form or use; as, the key of a clock; 3, a device which, when slipped into place, wedges, supports, or locks together different parts, as a keystone; 4, figuratively, that which allows or hinders passage, and hence controls: as, Gibraltar is the key to the Mediterranean; hence, that by means of which a difficulty is removed or something unintelligible explained; as, the key to a riddle, or to a code; 5, the part of the first coat of plaster that passes between the laths and so forms a secure basis for succeeding coats; the rough surface under veneering; 6, in certain musical instruments, as the piano, in typewriters and similar devices, a lever by means of which the instrument is made to operate by the fingers; 7, the general pitch or tone of the voice; as, men naturally speak in a lower key than women; also, tone of thought or expression; as, a poem in minor key: Elec., a device operated by the fingers for opening or closing an electric circuit; Mech., a straight piece of metal inserted into a slot called the keyway, so as to prevent a wheel from turning on a shaft; Mus., an arrangement or series of musical tones bearing a fixed relation to a given note, called the keynote; as, the key of G major:—v.t. to lock with a key; also, to provide with a key: Mus., to regulate the tone of: Colloq., to make tense: stimulate: often with up.

KEY AND KEYHOLE

A, main ward or bridge; B, stem or body; C, pin; D, collar; E, bit or web; F, bow; G, eye; H, slot.

2key (kē), n. [<Sp. cayo, shoal; reef], a low, small reef or island; as, the Florida keys.

key-board (kē'bōrd"), n. [1key+board], 1, the row of keys on a piano; 2, the manual of an organ; 3, the bank of keys of a typewriter, etc.

keyed (kēd), p.adj. [see 1key], 1, having keys; 2, tightly stretched, as a musical string; 3, tuned, as a musical instrument; 4, set to a stated key, as a tune; 5, figuratively, in a state of tension: with up.

key fruit a hinged seed, as of the maple, ash, elm, etc.; a samara (see fruit, illus.).

key-hole (kē'hōl"), n. [1key+hole], a small opening in a door or lock for inserting a key.

key-note (kē'nōt"), n. [1key+note], the ruling principle; as, the keynote of her costume was simplicity: Mus., the basal note in a scale of musical notes; the tonic: also called key tone.

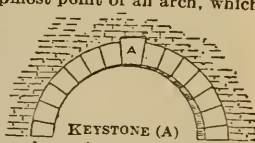
key-stone (kē'stōn"), n. [1key+stone], the stone at the topmost point of an arch, which holds the whole structure in place: Keystone State, Pennsylvania: so called because in the geographical order of the original thirteen states of the Union, Pennsylvania occupied the seventh, or middle, place.



KEYSTONE (A)

key tone Mus., the basal note in a related arrangement of musical notes; key; keynote.

key-way (kē'wā"), n. [1key+way], 1, Mech., a lengthwise slot cut partly in a shaft and partly on the inside of the hub of a wheel, to hold a key, or strip of metal designed to prevent the wheel from turning on the shaft; 2, the slot in a lock which is operated by a flat key.

K. G. abbr. Knight of the Garter:—kg., kilogram:—K. G. F., Knight of the Golden Fleece.

kha (khä), n. [Arab.], the seventh letter of the Arabic alphabet (see App. I), approximately equivalent to the English kh; as a numeral, 600.

kha-ki (kä'kē), n. [Hind. = dusty], a dust-colored or olive-drab wool or cotton cloth, much used for uniforms; collectively, uniforms of this cloth; as, the boys in khaki:—adj. olive drab in color.

kha-lif (kā'lĭf; kăl'ĭf), n. [see caliph], in Mohammedan countries, one who has supreme civil and religious power; the sultan. See ca'liph, Pfd. S.

1khan (kän; kăn), n. [Pers. = a prince], 1, a Tatar sovereign title originally applied to the conqueror Genghis Khan (about 1162–1227) and his successors as supreme rulers over various Asiatic tribes and regions; 2, now, a title applied to the princes who rule over certain semi-independent Asiatic states, and to various officers and chiefs of lower rank; 3, in Afghanistan, India, and Persia, a title of respect.

2khan (kän; kăn), n. [Arab. = inn], in the Orient, a public rest house, built around a courtyard.

khan-ate (kän'āt), n. [see 1khan], a district ruled by a khan; also, the office of a khan.

khe-dive (kē-dēv′), n. [<Turk. khedív < Pers. khedīw, great prince], from 1867 until 1914, the official title of the Turkish viceroy of Egypt.

kibe (kīb), n. [source uncertain], a crack in the skin, especially of the foot: ulcerated chilblain.

kib-itz-er (kĭb′ĭt-sẽr), n. [Yiddish < Ger. kiebitzen, to look on (at cards) < kiebitz, kibitzer, orig. plover: imit.], Colloq., one who volunteers advice; a meddler; especially, one who watches the play at a game of cards.

kick (kĭk), v.t. [<M.E. kike: source uncertain], 1, to thrust at, or strike, with the foot; 2, to push against violently, as does a firearm in recoiling; 3, to propel by striking with the foot, as a football; 4, to fling or move quickly upward; as, he kicked up his heels: kick up a fuss, to make trouble:—v.i. 1, to strike out with the foot, especially habitually; 2, to recoil, as a firearm; resist; spring back: Slang, to protest vigorously; grumble:—n. 1, a blow with the foot; 2, a spring backward, as of a gun when fired; 3, in football, a turn at kicking: Slang, 1, a vigorous objection or protest: 2, in beverages, a distinct taste of alcohol, or its after effect; 3, stimulus; thrill; vivid reaction; as, to get a kick out of sailing.—n. kick′er.

kick–off (kĭk′-ôf″), n. Football, in the United States, a place kick used to start play, as at the opening of a game.

kick-shaw (kĭk′shô″), n. [<Fr. quelque chose, something], 1, something trifling, fantastic, uncommon, or without any particular name; 2, a light, unsubstantial dish of food; a tidbit; a delicacy.

1kid (kĭd), n. [prob. < O.N. kidh, a kid], 1, the young of the goat; also, this animal's flesh; 2, leather made from the skin of a kid or goat: used especially for shoes and gloves; 3, a young female deer: Colloq., a child:—adj. made of leather called kid: Slang, youthful:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. kidded, p.pr. kidding], to give birth to: Slang, to humbug; banter with:—v.i. to give birth to a kid or kids: Slang, to hoax.

2kid (kĭd), n. [prob. var. of 1kit], a small tub: Naut., a sailors' mess tub.

kid-nap (kĭd′năp″), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -naped or -napped (-năpt″), p.pr. -naping or -napping], [1kid+obs. nap, to seize], to steal, carry away, or abduct, and restrain forcibly (a human being, especially a child).—n. kid′nap″er; kid′nap″per.

kid-ney (kĭd′nĭ), n. [pl. kidneys (-nĭz)], [source uncertain], 1, either of two glandular organs in mammals, birds, and reptiles, which secrete urine and thereby remove waste nitrogenous matter from the blood; 2, temperament; disposition; hence, sort or kind; as, a man of that kidney: kidney bean, 1, a reddish brown bean shaped like a kidney (see haricot, illus.): also called haricot and French bean; 2, any of various beans shaped more or less like a kidney, as distinguished from the lima bean, which is flattened; 3, the scarlet runner, a climbing bean with scarlet flowers.

kier (kēr), n. [16th-cent. Eng.: perh. < Scand.], a vat for holding bleaching liquor. Also, keir.

kie-sel-guhr (kē′zĕl-gōōr″), n. [Ger. < kiesel, flint +guhr, ferment], a fine earth or powder consisting of the siliceous remains of certain algæ, or one-celled plants: used as a polishing powder and, formerly, as a component of dynamite.

kie-ser-ite (kē′zĕr-īt), n. [<D. G. Kieser, Ger. scientist], a hydrated sulphate of magnesium, occurring in large beds at Stassfurt, Germany: used in the manufacture of Epsom salts.

kil-erg (kĭl′ûrg″), n. [<Gk. khilioi, a thousand +ergon, work], Phys., a unit of work or energy equivalent to one thousand ergs.

1kill (kĭl), v.t. [source uncertain], 1, to deprive of life: said of animals and vegetables; 2, to deaden; weaken; consume; as, to kill one color with another; to kill time; 3, to reject; discard; as, to kill an article or a play: Print., to stop the publication of; mark as not to be used; Tennis, to play (a ball) so hard that the opponent cannot make a return:—v.i. to destroy life:—n. 1, in hunting, the act of killing; 2, the animal killed, or the total amount of game taken.

Syn., v. assassinate, execute, murder, slaughter, slay, massacre, dispatch. To kill, the general word, means to deprive of life, whether by accident, by law, by wrongdoing, or in self-defense; it refers equally to human beings, animals, or plants, and is as colorless as to method as it is to motive. To execute is to kill, according to law, one legally sentenced to death. Assassinate, murder, and slaughter are used in connection with the wrongful killing of human beings; to assassinate is to kill by treacherous, violent assault, whether secretly or openly; to murder is to kill with premeditated malice; to slaughter is to kill brutally, ruthlessly, and on a large scale. Slaughter as used in connection with the sweeping destruction of troops in battle does not connote brutality. Slaughter as applied to animals means to butcher them for food.

2kill (kĭl), n. [<Du. kil, a channel], a creek or channel: archaic except in proper names.

kill-deer (kĭl′dēr″), n. [imit. of bird's cry], the ring plover of North America, a restless bird that flies low over meadows or flats, and nests on the ground, usually near shores. Also, kill′dee″.

kill-ing (kĭl′ĭng), p.adj. [see 1kill], able to cause death; destructive: Colloq., 1, overwhelming; captivating; as, killing kindness; a killing glance; 2, extremely laughable; ludicrous; as, the play was killing:—n. Slang, a great success; profitable achievement; as, to make a killing.—adv. kill′ing-ly.

kiln (kĭl; kĭln), n. [<A.S. cylene < Lat. culina, kitchen], a furnace or oven for burning, drying, or hardening, as bricks:—v.t. to bake in such an oven.

kil-o (kĭl′ō), n. [pl. -os (-ōz)], [Fr. abbr. of kilogramme], a kilogram, a metric measure of weight.

kil-o- prefix, [<Gk. khilioi, thousand], in the metric system, one thousand.

kil-o-cy-cle (kĭl′ō-sī′kl), n. [kilo-+cycle], Elec., 1000 cycles per second: a unit used especially in radio, in giving the frequency of an alternating current or oscillation.

kil-o-gram (kĭl′ō-grăm), n. [kilo-+gram], a metric measure of weight equal to 1000 grams, or 2.2046 pounds: often called kilo. Also, kil′o-gramme.

kil-o-gram-me-ter (kĭl′ō-grăm-mē″tẽr), n. [<Gk. khilioi, thousand + gramma, a weight + metron, a measure], a unit of work or energy, equivalent to the work required to raise one kilogram one meter vertically: equal to 7.2334 foot pounds. Also, kil′o-gram-me″tre.

kil-o-li-ter (kĭl′ō-lē″tẽr), n. [kilo-+liter], a metric measure of capacity equal to 1000 liters, or one cubic meter: equivalent to 264.18 gallons.

kil-o-me-ter (kĭl′ō-mē″tẽr), n. [kilo-+3meter], in the metric system, a measure of length or distance equal to 1000 meters: equivalent to 3,280.8 feet or 0.62137 statute mile. Also, kil′o-me″tre.—adj. kil′o-met′ric.

kil-o-volt (kĭl′ō-vōlt″), n. [kilo-+volt], Elec., a unit of electromotive force equal to 1000 volts.

kil-o-watt (kĭl′ō-wŏt″), n. [kilo-+watt], a unit of electrical power equal to 1000 watts: kilowatt hour, Elec., a commercial unit of electrical energy, equal to the work done by a current of one kilowatt acting for one hour, or to 3,600,000 joules.

kilt (kĭlt), n. [prob. < Da. kilte, to tuck up], a short, plaited petticoat worn by men of the Scottish Highlands; a skirt similarly made:—v.t. 1, to form into broad, flat plaits, as cloth in making a skirt; 2, in Scotland, to tuck up (clothing) around the body.

KILT (A)

kil-ter (kĭl′tẽr), n. [source uncertain], Colloq., proper order; good condition: used only in the phrases out of kilter, in kilter. Also, kel′ter.

ki-mo-no (kĭ-mō′nō; kĭm′ō-nō), n. [pl. -nos (-nōz)], [Jap.], 1, the loose outer robe of the Japanese; 2, a similar garment worn as a dressing gown by women of western countries.

1kin (kĭn), n. [<A.S. cynn < O.Teut. source], 1, race; family; hence, kind; 2, persons of the same race or family; kindred; as, one's nearest kin; 3, relationship:—adj. of the same ancestry or kind.—n. kin′ship.

Syn., n. kinsfolk, kinsmen, kindred, family, consanguinity, blood, connection, affinity, descent.

2kin (kĭn), n. [Chin.], a Chinese lute or cittern having from five to twenty-five silk strings.

-kin suffix, [<Du. -kijn], suffix used to form diminutive nouns; as, lamb*kin*; manni*kin*; Peter*kin*.

kin-æs-the-si-a (kĭn″ĕs-thē′sĭ-ă; -zhĭ-ă; kī″nĕs-), n. [<Gk. kinein, to move+aisthēsis, sensation], Psych., sensation from nerve endings, as in muscles and joints, giving rise to perception of movement, position, strain, etc.: also called kinæsthetic sensation. Also, kin″es-the′si-a.—adj. kin″æs-thet′ic.

kin-æs-the-sis (kĭn″ĕs-thē′sĭs; kī″nĕs-), n. the sense of muscular effort; kinæsthesia (which see). Also, kin″es-the′sis.

kind (kīnd), n. [<A.S. gecynde: see 1kin], 1, a class or natural group of animals or plants; as, the cat kind; 2, variety; sort; as, what kind of dress did she wear? 3, nature; character; style; way; as, to differ in kind: Archaic, blood relationship; natural descent; as, he was of noble kind: to pay in kind, to pay with things of the same sort, or with products of the soil, instead of with money: kind of, Colloq., somewhat; in slight degree; as, I feel kind of sick; a kind of tower; he kind of laughed:—adj. 1, sympathetic; benevolent; gracious; amiable; considerate; 2, mild; tractable; as, a kind horse: Archaic, appropriate to the race or individual; native; natural.

Syn., n. sort, description, nature, character. Kind and sort are used interchangeably, but sort is often used when a tone of disparagement or slight is to be conveyed; as, that sort of people should be kept out; adj. compassionate, friendly, gentle, tender, humane, charitable, good.—Ant., adj. brutal, unmerciful.

kin-der-gar-ten (kĭn'dĕr-gär"tĕn), n. [Ger. = children's garden], a school in which very young children are taught by the use of objects and instructive play: originated by Friedrich Froebel (1782–1852) in 1840.—n. kin'der-gart"ner.

kind-heart-ed (kīnd'härt"ĕd), adj. generous; sympathetic; charitable; humane.

1kin-dle (kĭn'dl), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. kindled (-dld), p.pr. kindling], [<O.N. kynda, to kindle], 1, to set fire to; ignite; 2, to inflame; inspire; stir up, as the passions; 3, to illuminate; brighten; as, enthusiasm kindled her face:—v.i. 1, to catch fire; 2, to become excited or illumined.

2kin-dle (kĭn'dl), v.i. [p.t. and p.p. -dled (-dld), p.pr. -dling], [<M.E. kindlen, to bring forth <kind, nature: see kind], to bring forth young.

kind-li-ness (kīnd'lĭ-nĕs), n. [see kindly], the quality of being gracious and sympathetic; humaneness.

kind-ling (kĭnd'lĭng), n. [see 1kindle], light, combustible material for starting a fire.

kind-ly (kīnd'lĭ), adj. [comp. -lier, superl. -liest], [see kind], 1, pleasant; gracious; sympathetic; benevolent; 2, agreeable; beneficial: said of climate, surroundings, etc.: Archaic, 1, characteristic; innate; as, it is kindly for him to be good to animals; 2, native; as, a kindly Scot:—adv. 1, in a gracious manner; goodhumoredly; 2, in a natural manner; readily; as, willows take kindly to damp ground.

Syn., adj. gentle, pleasant, propitious, well-disposed.—Ant., adj. ill-disposed, uncharitable, unforgiving.

kind-ness (kīnd'nĕs), n. 1, the state or quality of being ready to do good to others; 2, a helpful or gracious act.

Syn. gentleness, benignity, clemency, tenderness, mildness.—Ant. brutality, mercilessness, severity.

kin-dred (kĭn'drĕd), n. [<A.S. cynn, kin+rædden, condition], 1, relationship by birth or marriage; kinship; 2, persons thus related, collectively; kin; those united by likeness of interest, by relationship, etc., as a clan; 3, likeness in nature or character:—adj. 1, related by blood or marriage; 2, of like nature or character; congenial; akin.

kine (kīn), n. [<older kyen, formed like oxen <A.S. cȳ, pl. of cū, cow], Archaic, plural of cow.

kin-e-ma-col-or (kĭn"ĕ-mə-kŭl"ĕr), n. [<Gk. kinēma, movement+Lat. color, color], a process of making and showing motion pictures in colors: a trade name.

kin-e-mat-ics (kĭn"ĕ-măt'ĭks; kĭ"nĕ-), n.pl. used as sing. [<Gk. kinēma, motion], Phys., the science which treats of the motion of bodies and systems without regard to the forces producing it: a branch of mathematics, but often included in treatises on dynamics.—adj. kin"e-mat'ic; kin"e-mat'i-cal.

kin-e-mat-o-graph (kĭn"ĕ-măt'ō-grăf; kĭ"nĕ-), n. [see cinematograph], 1, a lantern for projecting motion pictures upon a screen, as in a theater; 2, a camera for making such pictures. See cin"e-mat'o-graph (sĭn"-), Pfd. S. kin-e-scope (kĭn'ĕ-skōp; kĭ'nĕ-), n. [<Gk. kinein, to move+skopein, to look], an instrument for drawing a curve representing the resultant of several circular motions: also called kinetoscope.

kin-es-the-si-a (kĭn"ĕs-thē'sĭ-ə; -zhĭ-ə; kĭ"nĕs-), n. [see kinæsthesia], Psych., sensation from nerve endings, as in muscles and joints, giving rise to perception of movement, position, strain, etc.: also called kinesthetic sensation. Also, kin"æs-the'si-a. Pfd. S.—adj. .in"es-thet'ic.

ki-net-ic (kĭ-nĕt'ĭk; kī-), adj. [<Gk. kinētikos <kinein, to move], Phys., pertaining to, or causing, motion; as, the kinetic theory of gases assumes that their molecules dart in all directions:—n.pl. used as sing. Phys., the division of dynamics treating of changes of motion as produced by unbalanced forces: distinguished from statics: kinetic energy, the energy possessed by a moving body due to its motion, and equal to one half the product of its mass and the square of its velocity: opposite of potential energy.

ki-ne-to-graph (kĭ-nē'tō-grăf; kī-), n. [<Gk. kinein, to move+graphein, to write], Rare, 1, a camera for making the exposures for moving pictures; 2, a lantern for projecting moving pictures on a screen.—adj. ki-ne"to-graph'ic.—n. kin"e-tog'ra-pher (kĭn"ĕ-tŏg'rə-fĕr; kĭ"nĕ-).

ki-ne-to-phone (kĭ-nē'tō-fōn; kī-), n. [<Gk. kinein, to move+phōnē, sound], an instrument by which appropriate sounds, as of words, etc., are automatically synchronized with the action of a motion picture on the screen: also called biophotophone; kinetophonograph.

ki-ne-to-scope (kĭ-nē'tō-skōp; kī-), n. [<Gk. kinein, to move+skopein, to look], 1, a machine invented by Edison which enables an observer to see, through slits in a vertical, hollow, rotating cylinder, a series of pictures on a strip pressed against the inside wall of the cylinder, the series appearing as a continuous picture of a moving object; 2, an instrument for drawing a curve representing the combination of a number of circular movements: also called kinescope.—adj. ki-ne"to-scop'ic (-skŏp'ĭk).

KINETOSCOPE
A, rotating cylinder; B, base.

king (kĭng), n. [<A.S. cyning, king <cynn, kin], 1, a male sovereign or ruler; 2, one who is specially distinguished in his class or kind; as, a king of men; the king of beasts; 3, a playing card representing a king; Checkers, a piece which, having crossed the board to the opponent's last row, may move in either direction; Chess, the principal piece, moving one space in any direction.—n. king'ship.—adj. king'ly.—n. king'li-ness.

King Ar-thur (är'thûr), a legendary leader of the Celtic tribes in Britain, who defeated the Saxon invaders in the sixth century; organizer of the Round Table, model of knightly chivalry, and hero of a cycle of romances, the best known versions being Malory's "Morte d'Arthur," and Tennyson's "Idylls of the King."

king-bird (kĭng'bûrd"), n. [king+bird], Ornith., any of several of the larger American flycatchers (genus Tyrannus); especially, the bee bird (T. tyrannus), noted for its pugnacity and darting flight.

king-bolt (kĭng'bōlt"), n. [king+1bolt], a vertical bolt attaching the forward axle to the body of a vehicle or the truck to a railroad coach, and acting as a pivot in turning; a king-pin.

king crab Zoöl., any of several species of marine invertebrates (order Xiphosura), especially a species (Limulus polyphemus) having a horseshoe-shaped anterior shell to which is jointed a smaller posterior shell bearing a long spinelike tail, the legs and breathing organs being attached to the under side of the body; the horseshoe crab (for illus. see Arachnida).

king-craft (kĭng'krăft"), n. [king+craft], the art of kingly government.

king-dom (kĭng'dŭm), n. [<A.S. cyning, king +dōm, authority], 1, the territory ruled by a king or queen; royal authority; 2, one of the classes into which all natural objects are divided; as, the animal, mineral, and vegetable kingdoms; 3, any separate sphere of influence or activity: as, the kingdom of the mind: kingdom of heaven, or of God, the spiritual reign of God as king: kingdom come, the hereafter.

Syn. empire, state, realm, dominion, monarchy.

king-fish-er (kĭng'fĭsh"ĕr), n. [king+fish], Ornith., any of a family (Alcedinidæ) of long-billed, fish-eating birds having a harsh cry, the species common in the eastern United States, called belted kingfisher (Ceryle alcyon), being conspicuously crested, colored bright blue or slate-blue and white, and building its nest in banks.

BELTED KINGFISHER (½)

King Horn (hôrn), a Christian prince, the hero of various medieval romances in French and English, who was driven from his realm, and after many adventures married a king's daughter.

King James Ver-sion the English translation of the Bible sanctioned by James I, and published in 1611; the Authorized Version (see Bible, NOTE).

king-let (kĭng'lĕt), n. [dim. of king], a lesser or petty king: Ornith., 1, any of several small migratory song birds (genus Regulus) of North America, with olive-green back and whitish under parts; 2, either the golden-crested or the ruby-crowned wren of Europe.

king–pin (king'ˌpin"), n. 1, a vertical bolt pivoting the forward axle to the body of a vehicle; a kingbolt; 2, the pin at the apex in a triangular arrangement of tenpins: Colloq., a person of importance or one essential to a project.

king–post (king"ˌpōst"), n. in carpentry, an upright beam supporting the apex of a triangular truss, and resting on the center of a beam which forms the base of the triangle: used especially in a truss formed by two rafters of a roof and the horizontal tiebeam: also called jogle post: distinguished from queen-post.

KING TRUSS
A, king-post; B, tiebeam; C, C, struts or braces.

Kings (kingz), n. [see king], Bib., 1, in the Protestant Old Testament, either of two historical books recording the reigns of the Jewish kings following David; 2, in the Douay (Roman Catholic) Version, any of four books identical with 1 and 2 Samuel and 1 and 2 Kings in the Protestant Version (see Bible).

king's Eng-lish correct or pure English in writing or speech.

king's ev-i-dence Br. Law, state's evidence; evidence given for the government: called queen's evidence if a queen is reigning.

king's e-vil scrofula: so called because formerly thought curable by a king's touch.

king truss Arch., a braced structure supporting a roof, with a vertical member, called a king-post, supporting the apex (see illus. above).

king-wood (king'wo͝od"), n. [king + wood], a hard, violet-tinted wood imported from Brazil: used in fine cabinetwork.

kink (kingk), n. [prob. Du. = a twist], 1, a twist, bend, or curl in a rope, wire thread, or the like; 2, a crotchet; odd whim or notion; unusual turn of mind:—v.t. to cause to twist upon itself:—v.i. to form a twist or curl, as in wire; be extremely curly.—adj. kink'y.

ki-no (kē'nō; kī'nō), n. [prob. W.Afr.], a reddish brown, brittle gum extracted from certain tropical trees (especially genus Pterocarpus), used in medicine as an astringent and in tanning and dyeing.

kins-folk (kinz'fōk"), n. [kin + folk], relatives; kin; family; as, his kinsfolk aided him.

kins-man (kinz'mən), n. [pl. -men (-mĕn)], [kin + man], 1, one related by blood; 2, loosely, a relative by marriage.

kins-wom-an (kinz'wo͝om"ən), n. [pl. -women (-wim"ĕn)], [kin + woman], 1, a woman related by blood; 2, loosely, a female relative.

ki-osk (kē-ŏsk'), n. [< Turk. kiushk], 1, in Turkey and Persia, an open pavilion; 2, a building of similar construction used as a news stand, etc.

kip (kip), n. [source uncertain], 1, the untanned skin of a young beast, as a calf or sheep, or of an undersized animal; 2, leather made from such a skin.

kip-per (kip'ĕr), v.t. [source uncertain], to cure, as salmou and herring, by cleaning, salting, and drying or smoking:—n. 1, a male salmon or sea trout during or after the spawning season, when it is unfit to eat; 2, the spawning season of salmon; 3, a salmon or herring that has been kippered.

Kir-ghiz (kir-gēz'), n. [pl. -ghiz; -ghizes (-gēz'ĕz)], [nat. name], a member of a nomadic people allied to the Mongols in race and to the Tatars in speech, living on the steppes of southwest Siberia and the adjacent Chinese highlands. Also, Kir-giz'; Kir-ghis'.

kirk (kûrk), n. [northern form of church], a church: the Kirk, the established church of Scotland, which is Presbyterian.

kir-mess (kûr'mĕs), n. [see kermis], 1, in Holland, an outdoor festival; 2, in the United States, an indoor fair. See ker'mis, Pfd. S.

kirn (kûrn; kĭrn), n. [perh. < churn: because a churn full of cream appeared in the festivities], in Scotland, 1, the last sheaf of a harvest; 2, a feast at the close of the harvest; a harvest home. Also, kern.

kir-tle (kûr'tl), n. [< A.S. cyrtel, perh. < Lat. curtus, short], Archaic, 1, a woman's gown or dress; 2, a man's tunic or coat.

Kis-lev (kĭs'lĕf), n. [< Heb.], the ninth month of the Hebrew ecclesiastical year (Neh. 1:1), approximately December (see App. I). Also, Chis'leu.

kis-met (kĭs'mĕt), n. [< Arab. qismat < qasama, to divide], fate; destiny.

kiss (kĭs), n. [< A.S. coss, a kiss], 1, a salute or caress with the lips; a slight touch; 2, any of various confections:—v.t. to salute with the lips; touch slightly. —v.i. to salute each other with the lips; touch gently.

[1]kit (kĭt), n. [prob. < M.Du. kitte, tub], 1, a small wooden box or tub for packing mackerel, butter, or the like; 2, an outfit of tools or articles for a special purpose: often including the box or bag holding them.

[2]kit (kĭt), n. [source uncertain], a small, three-stringed violin, about sixteen inches long.

[3]kit (kĭt), n. [abbr. of kitten], a young cat; a kitten, or young of any member of the cat family.

[4]kit (kĭt), n. [prob. < [1]kit], Colloq., family; brood; as, the whole kit and crew of them.

kitch-en (kĭch'ĕn), n. [< A.S. cycene < Lat. coquina < coquere, to cook], 1, a room or apartment where cooking is done; the cooking department; 2, an establishment where food is cooked and sold.

kitch-en-er (kĭch'ĕn-ĕr), n. a worker in, or head of, a kitchen: Br., a cooking range.

kitch-en-ette (kĭch"ĕn-ĕt'), n. in the United States, a small room or pantry fitted with conveniences for cooking.

kitch-en gar-den a garden for raising vegetables for home use.

kitch-en mid-den (mĭd'n), [< Da. kjökken-møding, kitchen refuse heap], a mound of bones and refuse, usually the site of a prehistoric human dwelling: also called midden.

kitch-en po-lice in the army, the duty of helping the cook and cleaning up the kitchen; 2, soldiers assigned to this duty, frequently as a punishment for petty offenses.

kite (kīt), n. [< A.S. cȳta, kite (bird)], 1, any of several falconlike species of birds of prey (chiefly genus Milvus); 2, a light frame of wood covered with paper or linen, for flying in the air; 3, a grasping person; a rogue; sharper: Naut., a light, lofty sail, used only in a light wind: Slang, commercial paper of fictitious value, used to raise money or secure credit, as a check which is not covered by funds in the bank: kite balloon, an anchored balloon, so constructed as to take advantage, like a kite, of the lifting power of the wind, and used for observation purposes:—v.i. [p.t. and p.p. kited, p.pr. kiting], Slang, to get money or credit by using commercial paper of questionable value; Colloq., to go with great rapidity:—v.t. Slang, to draw (a check) with the intention of depositing funds to cover it before it is cashed.

TYPES OF KITES
1, Chinese kite; 2, tailed kite; 3, Eddy kite with bowed crosspiece; 4, multicellular kite; 5, box kite.

kith (kĭth), n. [< A.S. cȳthth, known country], acquaintances; friends; neighbors: used only in the expression kith and kin.

kit-ten (kĭt'n), n. [prob. < O.F. chitoun, var. of chaton dim. of chat, cat], a young cat; also, the young of certain other animals:—v.i. to give birth to a kitten.—adj. kit'ten-ish.

KITE, OR OBSERVATION, BALLOON kit-ti-wake (kĭt'ĭ-wāk), n. [imit. of bird's cry], any of several gulls (genus Rissa), distinguished by a small or rudimentary hind toe.

kit-tle (kĭt'l), adj. [< M.E. kytylle, to puzzle], Obs., skittish; capricious; as, a kittle horse.

ki-va (kē'vä), n. [Amer. Ind. = sacred chamber], in Pueblo Indian houses, a large room used for religious ceremonies, as a men's dormitory, etc.

Ki-wa-nis (kē-wä'nĭs), n. [coined word], an international group of clubs of business and professional men, organized in 1915 for civic service, fraternity, and good fellowship.—n. Ki-wa'ni-an.

ki-wi (kē'wi), n. [Maori], any of a genus (Apteryx) of nocturnal, flightless New Zealand birds; an apteryx (which see for illus.): Army Slang, a member of the flying corps who does not fly.

k. k. abbr. [Ger. ka ser ich-königlich], imperial-royal: —K. K. K., Ku-Klux Klan.

Klebs–Löff-ler ba-cil-lus (klĕbz' = lĕf'lĕr), [< Edwin Klebs (1834–1913) and Friedrich A. J. Löffler (1852–1915), Ger. bacteriologists], a rod-shaped organism with a tendency to club-shaped ends: the cause of diphtheria.

klep-to-ma-ni-a (klĕp″tō-mā′nĭ-ă), n. [<Gk. kleptēs, thief + mania, madness], an abnormal and often irresistible impulse to steal. Also, clep″to-ma′ni-a.—n. klep″to-ma′ni-ac.

Klieg light (klēg), [<Kliegl, firm name], a kind of electric arc light that gives an especially bright illumination, used in photography: commonly called Klieg, officially Klieglight.

Kling-sor (klĭng′zôr), n. [Ger.], the archenemy of the knights of the Grail, who, by his magic, attempts to corrupt the pure-hearted hero of Wagner's "Parsifal," and is destroyed on his failure and the loss of the sacred spear to Parsifal.

klip-spring-er (klĭp′spring″ĕr), n. [S. Afr. Du. <klip, rock + springer, springer], a small African antelope (Oreotragus saltator), noted for its coarse hair and agility: also called klipbok.

KLIPSPRINGER ($\frac{1}{30}$) knack (năk), n. [source uncertain], 1, the adroit way of doing a thing; dexterity; 2, an ingenious device; a clever contrivance, or toy.

knap[1] (năp), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. knapped (năpt), p.pr. knapping], [imit.], to shape by chipping off pieces, as, flint arrowheads: Obs., 1, to strike sharply; break or snap; 2, to bite or nibble:—v.i. Obs., 1, to make a short, sharp sound; 2, to speak affectedly:—n. Obs., 1, a sharp blow; rap; 2, a cheating throw at dice.

knap[2] (năp), n. [<A.S. cnæpp, hilltop], Obs., 1, a protuberance; a knop; 2, a rise of ground.

knap-sack (năp′săk″), n. [knap (prob. <L.G. knappen, to bite) + sack], a leather or cloth bag carried on the back, used especially by soldiers.

knap-weed (năp′wēd″), n. [<earlier knop, knob + weed], 1, a common European weed (Centaurea nigra) of the composite family, naturalized in the United States in meadows and pastures, with heads of purple flowers: also called bullweed; buttonweed; loggerhead; 2, any of various similar plants, as the bachelor's-button and star thistle.

knar (när), n. [<M.E. knarre, knot], a knot in wood; a bark-covered protuberance on a tree.

knave (nāv), n. [<A.S. cnafa, boy], 1, a dishonest person; a rascal; 2, a playing card bearing the figure of a soldier or servant; a jack: Archaic, a servant or a man of humble birth.

knav-er-y (nāv′ĕr-ĭ), n. [pl. -eries (-ĭz)], dishonesty; fraud; deceit: Obs., frolicsomeness.

knav-ish (nāv′ĭsh), adj. dishonest; as, a knavish trick: Obs., mischievous.

knead (nēd), v.t. [<A.S. cnedan, to knead], 1, to mix by manipulating, usually with the hands, as dough; 2, to treat or operate upon by massage; form or mold, as if by kneading.

knee (nē), n. [<A.S. cnēow, knee <O.Teut. source], 1, the joint between the lower leg and the thigh of man; also, the anterior, or front, portion of the leg near this joint; also, the corresponding part of the leg of any animal or insect or, popularly, a joint likened to it; 2, the part of a garment covering this portion of the body; 3, anything resembling this joint, as a bent piece of timber used to brace the side of a boat to a crosspiece: knee breeches, breeches reaching to, or just below, the knee: knee jerk, a jerk or involuntary muscular contraction resulting from a smart tap on the patellar tendon: also called patellar reflex: knee joint, Anat., in man, the articulation of the femur, or bone of the thigh, with the tibia, or large bone of the lower leg; also, any joint likened to this; Mech., a toggle joint (see toggle, illus.):—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. kneed (nēd), p.pr. kneeing], 1, to hit with the knee; 2, to fasten with a knee, as part of a construction:—v.i. to kneel.

HUMAN KNEE JOINT

1, right knee from the front, showing ligaments: A, lower end of femur; B, anterior crucial ligament; C, posterior crucial ligament; D, interior semilunar cartilage; E, external cartilage; F, part of the ligament of the patella turned down; G, synovial bursa laid open beneath the ligature of the patella. 2, longitudinal section of the left knee: A, lower end of femur; B, tendon of extensor muscles of leg; C, patella; D, ligament of patella; E, head of tibia; F, anterior crucial ligament; G, posterior ligament; H, mass of fat projecting into the cavity of the joint below the patella; I, bursa.

knee-cap (nē′kăp″), n. [knee + cap], 1, a flattened, triangular, movable bone on the front of the knee joint; the patella, or kneepan (for illus. see knee, patella); 2, a protective covering for the knee.

kneel (nēl), v.i. [p.t. and p.p. knelt (nĕlt) or kneeled (nēld), p.pr. kneeling], [<A.S. cnēowlian, to kneel], to bend down or rest upon the knee or knees.

knee-pan (nē′păn″), n. [knee + pan], the patella, or flattened, triangular, movable bone on the front of the knee joint: usually called kneecap.

knell (nĕl), n. [<A.S. cnyllan, to toll], the sound of a bell when struck, especially a funeral bell; hence, a sign of coming evil:—v.t. Poet. or Archaic, to announce or summon by a knell:—v.i. to toll dolefully.

knew (nū), past tense of the irregular verb know, which see.

Knick-er-bock-er (nĭk′ĕr-bŏk″ĕr), n. [<Dierdrich Knickerbocker, name used by Irving in writing his "History of New York"], a person descended from the original Dutch settlers of New York; also, any New Yorker: knickerbockers, wide breeches gathered in below the knee, such as were worn by Dutch settlers of New York; now, a popular sports garment, usually called knickers.

knick-knack (nĭk′năk″), n. [<obs. knack, trinket], an ornamental trifle; a toy.

knife (nīf), n. [pl. knives (nīvz)], [<A.S. cnīf, knife], a cutting instrument consisting of a sharp-edged steel blade set in a handle: Mech., a sharp-edged blade forming part of an implement or device; as, the knives of a lawn mower:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. knifed (nīft), p.pr. knifing], to stab with a knife: Colloq., to ruin by secret or underhand methods.

knife-edge (nīf′-ĕj″), n. 1, Mech., a sharp blade serving as a fulcrum on which a balance beam rests; 2, a sharp edge, as of a knife.

knife switch Elec., a switch consisting in its simplest form of a pair of thin, springy, platelike posts between which a blade, hinged like a jackknife blade, may be gripped when the circuit is to be closed.

KNIFE SWITCH

knight (nīt), n. [<A.S. cniht, soldier], 1, in medieval Europe, one, generally of high birth, who, after serving as page and squire, was admitted by solemn ceremonies to the rank of knighthood; one who attended a lady or championed her cause in war or tournament; 2, in Great Britain, one who holds a rank, next below a baronet, which gives him the title of Sir, and is conferred in recognition of merit or patriotic service; 3, in Roman history, one of the equites, or citizens of the class from which the cavalry was recruited; 4, in chess, a piece bearing the figure of a horse's head; 5, a member of any of certain orders and societies: Knights of Columbus, a benevolent and fraternal organization of Catholic men, founded in 1882:—v.t. to confer knighthood upon.

knight-er-rant (nīt′-ĕr′ănt), n. [pl. knights-errant], in the Middle Ages, a knight who wandered about in search of adventures and to show his military prowess.

knight-er-rant-ry (nīt′-ĕr′ănt-rĭ), n. [pl. knight-errantries (-rĭz)], 1, a wandering in search of adventure; also, the character of knights-errant; 2, quixotic or chivalric conduct.

knight-hood (nīt′hŏŏd), n. [knight + -hood], 1, the character, rank, or dignity of a knight; 2, knights collectively.

knight-ly (nīt′lĭ), adj. [see knight], 1, like a knight; chivalrous; brave; gentle and courteous; 2, consisting of knights.—n. knight′li-ness.

Knight Tem-plar [see temple], 1, [pl. Knights Templars], a member of a powerful military order, founded about 1118 to protect pilgrims on the way to Jerusalem during the Crusades: suppressed in 1312; 2, [pl. Knights Templar], a member of a branch of the Freemasons in the United States, an organization reputed to be based on the military order.

knit (nĭt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. knitted, also, chiefly Archaic or Poet., knit, p.pr. knitting], [<A.S. cnyttan, to knit], 1, to unite closely; tie or draw together; 2, to draw into wrinkles; as, to knit the brows; 3, to form, as a fabric, by looping or weaving thread or yarn on needles: Archaic or Poet., to fasten with a knot; tie in knots:—v.i. 1, to knit a fabric of thread or yarn; 2, to become closely joined or united; as, the broken limb knitted well.—n. knit′ter.

knit-ting (nĭt′ĭng), n. 1, the work of a knitter; 2, the netted fabric thus woven.

knives (nīvz), the irregular plural of the noun knife, which see.

knob (nŏb), n. [<M.E. knobbe, knob], 1, a round swelling, lump, or mass; 2, the rounded handle of a door, an umbrella, etc.; 3, a rounded hill.—adj. knob'by.—n. knob'bi-ness.

knock (nŏk), v.t. [<A.S. cnocian, prob. imit.], 1, to strike or beat; give a blow to; hit; 2, to bring into contact; as, to knock the head against a wall: Slang, to criticize harshly: knock down, in auctions, to indicate the sale of by a blow with a hammer: knock off, Colloq., 1, to stop; as, to knock off work; 2, to deduct; as, to knock off a dollar from the price:—v.i. 1, to strike a blow with the fist or something hard; especially, to rap on a door; 2, to drive or strike against something; 3, to jar or pound noisily: said of machinery parts: knock about, to wander in an aimless way:—n. a heavy blow or stroke; a rap.

knock-a-bout (nŏk'ə-bout"), n. [knock+about], 1, a small yacht carrying a mainsail and jib and having a fin keel or centerboard; 2, an article used for rough or everyday wear:—adj. characterized by roughness; suitable for rough usage.

knock-er (nŏk'ẽr), n. [see knock], 1, one who knocks; especially, Slang, one who makes critical or disparaging remarks; 2, a loose handle attached to a door, to be used as a means of rapping.

knock-kneed (nŏk'=nēd"), adj. having the legs bent inward at the knees.

knock-out (nŏk'=out"), n. a blow, as in boxing, that produces insensibility:—adj. causing insensibility; very severe: knock-out drops, Slang, any drug criminally used to cause insensibility.

[1]knoll (nōl), v.t. [var. of knell], Archaic, 1, to ring, as a bell; especially, to ring slowly, as for a funeral; 2, to proclaim by tolling:—n. Archaic, a knell.

[2]knoll (nōl), n. [<A.S. cnoll, hilltop], a hilltop; a rounded hillock.

knop (nŏp), n. [<M.E. knoppe, knob], a knob or button; especially, a knoblike architectural ornament, as at the intersection of ribs in Gothic vaulting or on the top of a pinnacle: Obs., a bud.

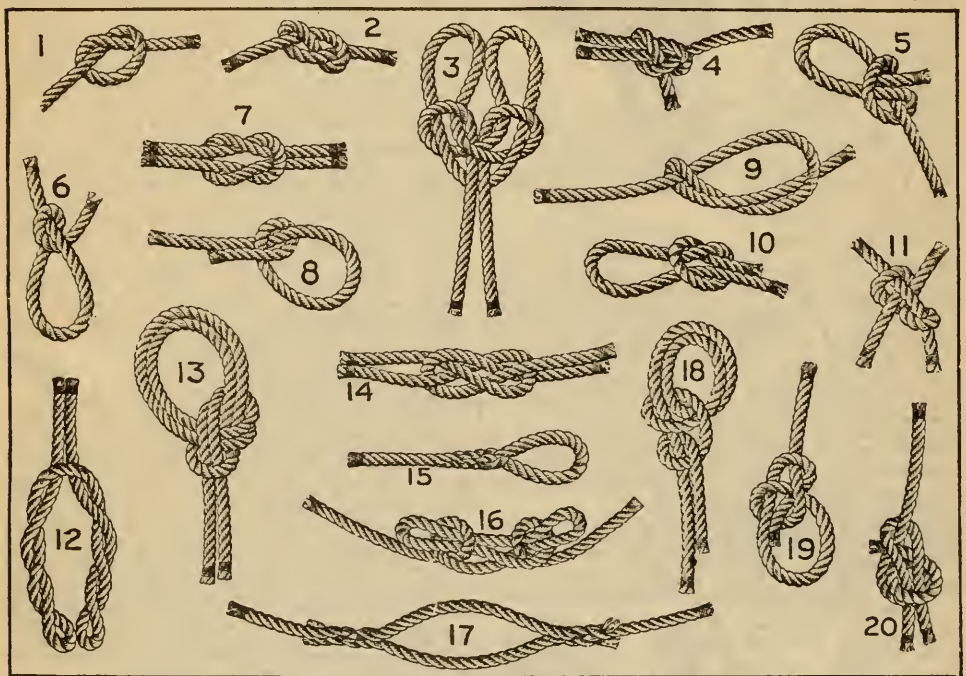
[1]knot (nŏt), n. [<A.S. cnotta, a knot], 1, an interweaving or tying of the parts of one or more threads, cords, etc., so that they will not slip or come apart; 2, anything resembling a knot or lump; as, a knot of muscles, of ribbon; 3, an entanglement; difficulty; something not easily solved; 4, the hard knob or lump at the insertion of a branch, as of a tree; also, the fibers of a branch that are within the trunk, or the gnarled fibers of the trunk which grow around the insertion of a branch; 5, a group or cluster of people: Naut., 1, a section of a log line marked at the ends by knots or colored rags, at such intervals that the number of knots run out in 28 seconds equals the speed of the vessel in nautical miles per hour; 2, a unit of velocity equal to one nautical mile per hour: as, the ship made nine knots; 3, loosely, a nautical mile: in the United States, 6080.27 feet; in other countries, approximately the same:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. knotted, p.pr. knotting], 1, to tie in a knot; form knots in; 2, to make secure, as with knots; hence, to unite closely; entangle: —v.i. 1, to form joints or heads, as some plants; 2, to make knots, as in ornamental work, or for a fringe.



KNOTS, BENDS, AND HITCHES.—1, overhand knot; 2, figure eight; 3, Spanish bowline knot; 4, common, or sheet, bend; 5, studding-sail tack bend; 6, inside clinch; 7, square, or reef, knot; 8, half hitch; 9, timber hitch; 10, running knot; 11, clove hitch; 12, cat's-paw; 13, bowline knot on a bight; 14, single carrick bend; 15, eye-splice; 16, sheepshank; 17, cut splice; 18, fisherman's bend; 19, bowline knot, which will not slip and never pulls tight; 20, double sheet bend.

Syn., n. tie, bend, hitch, splice. Tie and knot are general terms, applied to any fastening or knoblike interlacing formed with a flexible cord. More specifically, a knot is a simple knob or lump formed by interweaving the strands of a single cord, as to prevent raveling; a bend is a tie by which one cord is fastened to another or to an object; a hitch is a tie forming a temporary fastening, easily undone. A splice is a joint between two cords, made by interweaving their strands.

[2]knot (nŏt), n. [source uncertain], a sandpiper (Tringa canutus), breeding within the arctic circle and scattering over the world during the winter.

knot-grass (nŏt'grăs"), n. [[1]knot+grass], 1, a trailing weed (Polygonum aviculare) of the buckwheat family, having pink or white flowers and triangular seeds: also called doorweed and knotweed; 2, any of various grasses, especially oat grass.

knot hole a hole in a tree or in lumber caused by the rotting or falling out of a knot.

knot-ting (nŏt'ing), n. [see [1]knot], 1, the tying of a knot; tying or entangling in a knot; 2, a kind of fancywork made with knotted threads; 3, in cloth manufacture, the removal of knots from cloth; 4, a kind of paint for protecting metals.

knot-ty (nŏt′ĭ), adj. [comp. -tier, superl. -tiest], 1, having many knots; gnarly; 2, rugged; 3, difficult; as, a knotty problem.—n. knot′ti-ness.

knout (nout; nōōt), n. [< Russ. knut, scourge], a leathern whip formerly used for punishing criminals or serfs in Russia:—v.t. to punish by flogging.

know (nō), v.t. [p.t. knew (nū), p.p. known (nōn), p.pr. knowing], [< A.S. cnāwan, to know < Aryan source], 1, to perceive with the mind as true; be certain of; understand clearly; as, he knows right from wrong; 2, to recognize; as, he knew the landscape; 3, to be acquainted with; be intimate with; be versed in; have experience of; as, to know Spanish; to know trouble: Archaic, to have sexual intercourse with:—v.i. to be informed; have certain knowledge: Archaic, to acquire knowledge, experience, or skill:—n. Slang, knowledge; the state of having secret information; as, in the know.—adj. know′a-ble.—n. know′er.

know-ing (nō′ĭng), p.adj. 1, having knowledge; intelligent; 2, shrewd; cunning:—n. knowledge; cognizance.—adv. know′ing-ly.

knowl-edge (nŏl′ĕj), n. 1, clear perception of a truth or fact; the act or state of knowing; cognition; 2, that which has been perceived or grasped mentally; learning; the sum of information or enlightenment of the world, a group, an individual, or the like; 3, practical understanding gained from experience; skill; 4, notification; advertisement; as, knowledge of the event has been made public; 5, sexual intercourse: Archaic, recognition; cognizance.

Syn. acquaintance, comprehension, erudition, experience, learning, lore, information, enlightenment, intuition, conviction, wisdom, science, scholarship. Broadly, knowledge is the sum of what is known; as, every branch of knowledge. In a limited sense, knowledge is the whole body of facts, acquired or intuitive, known to a mind; as, he has a marvelous store of knowledge: referring to a single subject, such knowledge is an understanding of that subject; as, a knowledge of botany. Information is knowledge of fact, usually not systematized, but gathered in a haphazard or casual way, as from instruction, reading, observation, or hearsay. Experience is the yield of life as it has been lived; it is the knowledge taught by all that one has enjoyed or suffered, viewed especially as a source of better judgment and increased skill for the future; as, he learned by bitter experience: the lessons of experience. Wisdom, though consisting of knowledge plus experience, is a power which transcends them both. A man may possess first-hand knowledge of life, yet never apply it in such a way as to show wisdom. Wisdom unites with the facts of knowledge and the fruit of experience a genius for judgment; wisdom is both ideal and practical. Science, broadly, is systematized and formulated knowledge regarded as the result of the search for truth. In a more limited sense, science is the body of ordered knowledge available with reference to any particular subject, especially some aspect of the physical world; as, the science of physics. (See learning.)

Know-Noth-ing (nō′-nŭth′ĭng), n. a member of a political party in the United States, officially known as the American party, which flourished in 1853 and a few years following, and which held that none but native Americans should hold office: so called because the members replied "I don't know" to questions concerning the party: know-nothing, a densely ignorant person.

knuck-le (nŭk′l), n. [< M.E. knokel, prob. dim. of M.L.G. knoke, bone], 1, any of the joints of the fingers; 2, in cookery, the knee or the hock joint, especially of a calf, with the surrounding meat, used for stews or soups; 3, in shipbuilding, an acute angle in some of the timbers; 4, a loop of intestine in a hernia: Mech., in a hinge, the part where the two flanges or straps join, with a pin as axis: so called when the joint is in cylindrical form:—v.i. [p.t. and p.p. -led (-ld), p.pr. -ling], 1, to bend the fingers; 2, to yield or submit: with under; 3, to apply oneself earnestly: with down.

knuck-le-bone (nŭk′l-bōn″), n. [knuckle+bone], 1, in man, one of the bones in the finger; 2, a bone at the knuckle, especially of sheep: pl. an ancient game of the Greeks, played originally with the knucklebones of sheep.

knuck-le-dust-er (nŭk′l-dŭs″tĕr), n. a metal instrument worn over the knuckles as a weapon: commonly called brass knuckles.

knurl (nûrl), n. [< earlier knur, hard knob], 1, a hard knot, nodule, or anything swelled or pushed beyond the surface, as in a tree, stone, etc.: also, knur; 2, any of the ridges on the edge of a coin, nut, or screw head; also, a tool for producing them:—v.t. to mill; bead; ridge about the edges.—adj. knurl′y.

ko-a (kō′ä), n. [native name], a Hawaiian acacia tree valuable for its timber and bark.

ko-a-la (kō-ä′lä), n. [native name], an arboreal, pouch-bearing animal of Australia, about two feet long, somewhat resembling a small bear, having a rudimentary tail and ash-gray woolly fur.

ko-bold (kō′bōld), n. [Ger.], Teut. Myth., a nature spirit, brownie, or gnome belonging particularly to the earth and living in mines or caves.

Ko-dak (kō′dăk), n. [arbitrarily coined word], 1, a trade-mark applied originally to a certain make of small hand camera, and later to other cameras of this make; 2, (often, kodak), any camera bearing this trade-mark; erroneously, any hand camera:—adj. designating photographic goods manufactured under this trade-mark:—v.t. and v.i. to photograph with a kodak.—n. ko′dak-er.

Ko-hel-eth (kō-hĕl′ĕth), n. [Heb. = preacher], the book of Ecclesiastes; also, the name given to Solomon in this book, translated "preacher."

Koh-i-noor (kō′hĭ-nōōr″; kō′ĭ-), n. [< Pers. kōh-i-nūr, mountain of light], 1, a famous East Indian diamond, weighing about 106 carats, or 1¼ ounces troy, one of the British crown jewels since 1849; 2, hence, anything of supreme excellence. Also, Koh′-i-nur″ (-nōōr″); Koh′-i-noor″.

kohl (kōl; kō′hl), n. [Arab. = powder for eyelids], finely powdered antimony sulphide, used by Eastern women to darken the eyelids.

kohl-ra-bi (kōl′-rä′bĭ; kōl′-rä′bĭ), n. [pl. -bies (-bĭz)], [Ger. < It. caroli rape < Lat. caulis, cabbage + rapum, turnip], a variety of cabbage with an enlarged, edible, turniplike stem.

ko-la (kō′lä), n. [W.Afr.], an African tree (Cola acuminata); also, its bitter nut, containing caffeine, used for chewing, like tobacco. Also, co′la.

koo-doo (kōō′dōō), n. [< Kafir iqudu], a species of large antelope, found in Africa.

Koord (kōōrd), n. [see Kurd], one of a dark, fierce race of Kurdistan. See Kurd, Pfd. S.

kop (kŏp), n. [Du. = head], in Dutch South Africa, a hill; mountain.

ko-peck (kō′pĕk), n. [Russ.], a Russian copper coin which in 1913 was worth from one half to three fourths of a cent. Also, co′peck; ko′pek.

koph (kōf), n. [Heb.], the 19th letter of the Hebrew alphabet (ק) (see App. I), approximately equivalent to the English q: as a numeral, 100.

kop-je (kŏp′ĭ), n. [Du., dim. of kop, head], in Dutch South Africa, a small hill.

Ko-ran (kō-răn′; kō′răn), n. [< Arab. qorān, recitation], the sacred book of the Mohammedans, written in Arabic and believed by them to be the revelations of Allah (God) to Mohammed. Also, Al″co-ran′ (ăl′kō-răn′; ăl′kō-răn).

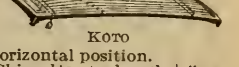
Ko-re-an (kō-rē′ăn), adj. [< Korea], of or pertaining to the language, people, customs, etc., of a Japanese dependency in eastern Asia: called Korea until 1910, but now officially called by native name, Chosen:—n. a native of Korea, or the language spoken there.

ko-ru-na (kō-rōō′nä), n. [Czech < Lat. corona, crown], a copper-and-nickel coin, the monetary unit of Czechoslovakia, worth about three cents.

ko-sher (kō′shĕr), adj. [< Heb. kashēr, right], lawful; clean according to Jewish law: used of food, especially meat, or of shops where such meat is sold:—n. food, or a food shop, fulfilling the requirements of Jewish law.

ko-to (kō′tō), n. [Jap.], a Japanese musical instrument, similar to the harp, but having only thirteen strings and played in a horizontal position.



Koto

ko-tow (kō″tou′), n. [< Chin. k'o, to knock + t'ou, head], a Chinese custom of kneeling and touching the ground with the forehead as a token of respect or worship:—v.i. to show deference by such an act; hence, to be obsequious. Also, kow″tow′.

kou-miss (kōō′mĭs), n. [see kumiss], fermented liquor made from milk. See ku′miss, Pfd. S.

K. P. abbr. 1, Knight of St. Patrick; 2, Knights of Pythias; 3, Mil., kitchen police:—Kr, Chem., the symbol [Kr] for the element krypton.

kraal (kräl; krôl), n. [S.Afr.Du. < Port. curral, cattle pen], 1, in South Africa, a group of huts surrounded by a defense of stakes; 2, a sheepfold or cattle pen:—v.t. to inclose in a kraal, as sheep or cattle.

kra-ken (krä′kĕn; krā′-), n. [< Scand. krake, sea monster], a huge, mythical sea monster.

kran (krän), n. [Pers., ult. < Lat. corona, crown], a former Persian monetary unit (about 24 cents).

krem-lin (krĕm′lĭn), n. [Fr. < Russ. kreml, fortress], a Russian citadel or fortress: Kremlin, a large inclosure in Moscow containing a palace of the former czar, the arsenal, churches, etc.

kreut-zer (kroit'sĕr), n. [< Ger. kreuzer, kreutzer, < kreuz, cross: because orig. marked with a cross], a copper coin formerly current in Germany, or a similar coin formerly current in Austria, worth about half a cent. Also, kreu'zer (krolt'sĕr).

Kriem-hild (krēm'hĭld), n. [< M.H.G. Krimhilt], Teut. Myth., in the "Nibelungenlied," Siegfried's beautiful wife, who, after his death at the hands of her brother, married Etzel (Attila), King of the Huns, and through him avenged her husband's murder: identified with Gudrun in the "Volsunga Saga."

kris (krēs), n. [see creese], a short Malay sword or dagger (for illus. see creese). See creese, Pfd. S.

Krish-na (krĭsh'nä), n. [< Sans.], an incarnation of Vishnu, the second god of the Hindu trinity: in Hindu epic literature, the hero of many exploits; as a god, the personification of the fruitful, reproductive aspect of nature.

Kriss Krin-gle (krĭs krĭng'gl), [< Ger. Christkindel, the little Christ child], originally, an embodiment of the Christ child appearing on Christmas Eve, according to legend: later confounded with Santa Claus, or St. Nicholas, and now represented as a lovable old man who brings Christmas gifts.

kro-na (krō'nē), n. [pl. kronor (-nōr)], [Sw.], a coin, and the monetary unit, of Sweden, equivalent to about 45 cents: also, by translation, called crown.

kro-ne (krō'nē), n. [pl. kroner (-nĕr)], [Ger. and Da. = crown], 1, in Norway and Denmark, a silver coin, worth about 45 cents; 2, (krō'nē), [pl. kronen (-nĕn)], formerly, an Austrian coin and monetary unit, worth about 20 cents; also, a German coin worth ten marks; 3, the koruna (which see). Also, by translation, called crown.

kroon (krōn; krōōn), n. [prob. < Scand. krone or krona, crown (the coin) < Lat. corona, crown], the monetary unit of Estonia (45 cents).

kryp-ton (krĭp'tŏn), n. [< Gk. krupton, hidden], Chem., a rare gaseous element [symbol Kr], present in very small quantities in the atmosphere.

ku-dos (kū'dŏs; kōō'-), n. [Gk. = glory], Colloq., glory; fame; credit for good work.

Ku–Klux (kū'-klŭks'), n. [< Gk. kuklos, circle], the Knights of the Ku-Klux Klan, a secret society in the southern United States after the Civil War, whose aim was to regain white political ascendancy in the South: revived after the World War in many parts of the United States in advocacy of the supremacy of a native-born, white, Protestant citizenship: also called Ku-Klux Klan. Also, Ku'klux'.

ku-lak (kōō-läk'), n. [Russ., orig. = fist: of Tatar origin], 1, in prerevolutionary Russia, a peasant who exploited his poorer neighbors; later, one of the richer peasants; 2, as used by the communists, a peasant who opposes the soviet economic policy.

Kul-tur (kōōl-tōōr'), n. [Ger.], civilization; an organized system of life and education tending to secure efficiency and progress in all phases of material well-being, science, and art, especially as exemplified by the German system before 1914.

ku-miss (kōō'mĭs), n. [< Tatar kumiz, fermented mare's milk], a fermented liquor made from mare's or camel's milk by Tatar tribes of central Asia; also, a similar dietetic drink made from cow's milk in western countries. Also, ku'mys; kou'miss.

küm-mel (küm'ĕl), n. [Ger. = caraway seed], a cordial made usually from rectified alcohol and flavored with caraway seed, anise, etc.

kum-quat (kŭm'kwŏt), n. [< Chin. kin keu, golden orange], 1, a small citrous fruit, about the size and shape of an olive, used chiefly in preserves; 2, the tree bearing this fruit. Also, cum'quat.

Kun-dry (kōōn'drĭ), n. [Ger.], in Wagner's "Parsifal," a woman who was doomed to wander eternally for laughing at Jesus while he was bearing the cross, and who is forced by Klingsor to try to seduce Parsifal, whose resistance enables him to lift her curse.

Kuo-min-tang (gwō'mĭn-täng'), n. [Chin. = nationalist people's party], the nationalist party organized in the Chinese Republic, largely by Sun Yat-sen in 1926–27.

Kurd (kōōrd), n. [Turk.], a member of a dark, fierce race in the undefined region of Kurdistan, eastern Turkey, and western Persia. Also, Curd; Koord.—adj. Kurd'ish (kōōr'dĭsh).

kvass (kväs), n. [< Russ. kras, beer], a Russian fermented drink, usually made of rye.

kw. abbr. kilowatt (also KW; K. W.):—kwh., kilowatt hour:—Ky., Kentucky: official abbreviation (also, Ken.).

ky-ak (kī'ăk), n. [see kayak], a hunting canoe covered with sealskin, used in arctic America. For illus. see kay'ak, Pfd. S. ky-an-ize (kī'ăn-īz), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -ized (-īzd), p.pr. -izing], [< J. H. Kyan (1774–1850), Irish inventor], to treat (wood) with corrosive sublimate to prevent decay.

ky-mo-graph (kī'mō-grăf), n. [< Gk. kuma, a wave + graphein, to write], an instrument for recording waves or periodic variations, as of muscular contractions, pulse beats, or respirations. Also, cy'mo-graph (sī'-).—adj. ky'mo-graph'ic.

Kym-ry (kĭm'rĭ), n.pl. [see Cymry], the Welsh race collectively. Also, Kym'ri. See Cym'ry, Pfd. S.—adj. Kym'ric.

ky-pho-sis (kī-fō'sĭs), n. [< Gk. kuphos, crooked], humpback; angular curvature of the spine. Also, cy-pho'sis (sī-).—adj. ky-phot'ic (-fŏt'ĭk).

Kyr-i-e e-lei-son (kĭr'ĭ-ē ē-lī'sŏn; kū'rĭ-ā ē-lā'ĭ-sŏn), [Gk. = Lord, have mercy (upon us)], Eccl., the first words of a brief petition used at various places in the service in the Eastern and Roman churches, and in the Anglican church, especially as a response; also, a musical setting of these words.

L

L, l (ĕl), n. [pl. L's; Ls; l's ls (ĕlz)], 1, the twelfth letter in the English alphabet, or its sound (for certain uses, see alphabet, NOTE); 2, as a Roman numeral, 50; 3, (also, ell), any one of several objects shaped like a capital L, as a right-angled pipe fitting, or a wing or extension to a building, set at right angles to it: Colloq., an elevated railroad: often written el.

L. abbr. 1, Lady; 2, Latin (also, Lat.); 3, Law; 4, Liberal; 5, Low; 6, [Lat. liber], book (also, Lib.); 7, Late; 8, Licentiate; 9, Lord:—l., 1, [Lat. libra], pound: before figures written £; as, £40; 2, lake; 3, land; 4, latitude; 5, leaf; 6, league; 7, left; 8, length; 9, line; 10, link; 11, liter.

1la (lä), n. [see 2do], Mus., the sixth in the series of syllables used in singing any diatonic scale.

2la (lō; lä), interj. [var. of lō], Obs., look! Dial., oh! usually with me; as, la me!

La. abbr. Louisiana:—L. A., 1, Legislative Assembly; 2, Literate in Arts; 3, Library Association.

laa-ger (lä'gĕr; lō'gĕr), n. [< S. Afr. Du. lager, camp], in South African campaigning, a camp with a hastily made barricade of wagons:—v.t. to form, as wagons, into a barricade:—v.i. to encamp.

Lab. abbr. 1, Labrador; 2, Laborite:—lab., 1, laboratory; 2, labiate; labial.

La-ban (lā'băn), n. [Heb.], Bib., the father of Leah and Rachel, the wives of Jacob (Gen. 29:16).

lab-a-rum (lăb'a-rŭm), n. [pl. -ra (-rä)], [Lat. < Gk. labaron, a standard], 1, the Christianized form of the Roman cavalry standard or banner, adopted by the Emperor Constantine after his conversion and bearing the sacred monogram of Christ; 2, figuratively, a standard of conduct or a moral guide: R. C. and Angl. Chs., a banner carried in ecclesiastical processions.

lab-e-fac-tion (lăb'ĕ-făk'shŭn), n. [< Lat. labare, to totter + facere (factus), to make], Rare, decay; ruin; downfall.

la-bel (lā'bĕl), n. [O.F. = ribbon], 1, a ticket or slip of paper or other material to be attached to an object and to bear an inscription indicating the size, contents, price, ownership, or other facts concerning the object; 2, a strip of ribbon or parchment attached to a document to bear the seal; 3, a short, convenient, classifying phrase or catchword, applied to persons, theories, or the like: Her., a narrow bar of special shape across an escutcheon or coat of arms, to indicate an only or first-born son; Arch., a projecting molding over a door, window, or other opening, as if to check the flow of rain down the wall:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -beled or -belled (-bĕld), p.pr. -beling or -belling], 1, to mark with a label; 2, to classify; apply a classifying word or catchword to.—n. la'bel-er.

LABEL

la-bel-lum (lă-bĕl'ŭm), n. [pl. -la (-ä)], [Lat., dlm. of labium, lip], Bot., the lip, or lower petal, of an orchid, often spurred or enlarged.

la-bi-al (lā'bĭ-ăl), adj. [< Lat. labium, lip], of or pertaining to the lips; as, the labial glands: Phon., 1, formed or articulated mainly by the lips, as the consonants p, b; 2, modified by a rounding and partial closing of the lips, as the vowels ō, ŏŏ; Mus., having a lip instead of a reed: said of an organ pipe:—n. Phon., 1, a sound, or a symbol indicating a sound, formed mainly by the lips, as p, b, m, f, v; 2, a device for the correction of stammering: Mus., an organ pipe in which the tone is produced by the impact of a current of air against a labium, or liplike edge.—adv. la'bi-al-ly.

la-bi-ate (lā'bĭ-āt), adj. having parts like lips; lipped: Bot., having lips or liplike parts, as the calyx or corolla of the lady's-slipper.

la-bile (lā'bĭl; lăb'ĭl), adj. [< Lat. labilis, slipping < labi, to slip], Chem., unstable; metastable: Elec., gliding or flowing smoothly.

la-bi-o-den-tal (lā"bĭ-ō-dĕn'tăl), adj. [< Lat. labium, lip + dens (dentis), tooth], pertaining to the lips and teeth: Phon., articulated by the lips and teeth, as f, v:—n. a labiodental consonant.

la-bi-o-na-sal (lā"bĭ-ō-nā'zăl), adj. [< Lat. labium, lip + nasus, nose], Phon., formed or modified by the lips and nose jointly, as m:—n. Phon., a sound formed by both nose and lips, as m. la-bi-um (lā'bĭ-ŭm), n. [pl. labia (-ă)], [Lat. = lip], Anat., Bot., Zoöl., Mus., etc., a lip or part shaped like a lip, as a human lip, one of the folds of the vulva, the lower, liplike part of the corolla of some flowers, an insect's lower lip, the lip of an organ pipe, etc.

la-bor (lā'bẽr), n. [Lat. = work], 1, work; toil; physical or mental exertion or effort; 2, that which requires effort; a task; as, the twelve labors of Hercules; 3, the act of toiling or working; 4, the class of wage-earning workers; especially, those doing physical work, as distinguished from those who supply capital, and from those doing mental work; 5, travail; the effort and pangs of childbirth; 6, the heavy rolling or pitching of a vessel at sea: Obs., trouble; pains:—v.i. 1, to toil or work; exert oneself physically or mentally; 2, to strive; take pains; as, he labored to understand me; 3, to be hard pressed; operate or proceed with difficulty; move slowly, as if under a burden; as, the wagon labored in the mud; 4, to be in childbirth; travail; 5, to pitch and roll heavily, as a vessel at sea in a storm: laboring class, the class engaged in rough physical work, or in day labor; the proletariat: laboring man, a man who belongs to the wage-earning class; a workingman:—v.t. to work out carefully and in detail; elaborate; as, I will not labor the point: Obs., to cause to work hard. Also, la'bour.

Syn., n. work, toil, drudgery. Work, the general term, names any output of energy or close application of effort to some purpose. Hence, its range is wide: work may be hard, easy, light, heavy, serious, pleasant, or burdensome. Labor is hard work; it may be mental, but is more apt to be physical exertion of a severe, tiring sort. Toil is even harder work than labor; it is painful as well as monotonous, exhausting rather than merely wearing. Work may leave us agreeably or badly tired; labor leaves us painfully tired, heavy in body and mind from fatigue; toil leaves us frankly worn out. Drudgery is slavish, displeasing, often menial, work; work, light in itself, may be drudgery to one who hates routine.—Ant., n. idleness, sloth.

lab-o-ra-to-ry (lăb'ō-rā-tō-rĭ), n. [pl. -ries (-rĭz)], [< Lat. laborare (-atus), to work], 1, a building or room equipped for experiments or for research work in one of the natural sciences; 2, a place where chemicals, drugs, or the like, are prepared.

La-bor Day in most States of the United States, a day, usually the first Monday in September, set apart as a legal holiday to honor workingmen as a class. Also, La'bour Day.

la-bored (lā'bẽrd), p.adj. [see labor], done with difficulty or elaborate care; forced; not easy or natural; as, a labored speech. Also, la'boured.

la-bor-er (lā'bẽr-ẽr), n. a toiler; one who for pay does unskilled, physical work. Also, la'bour-er.

Syn. workingman. (See artisan.)

la-bo-ri-ous (lă-bō'rĭ-ŭs), adj. 1, difficult; requiring much toil; 2, painstaking; hard-working.—adv. la-bo'ri-ous-ly.—n. la-bo'ri-ous-ness.

La-bor-ite (lā'bẽr-ĭt), n. Colloq., in Great Britain, a person belonging to the Labor party; laborite, one who supports the interests of the laboring class. Also, La'bour-ite; la'bour-ite.

La-bor par-ty in Great Britain, a political party, the members of which are drawn mainly from trade-unions, socialist and liberal organizations, or the like, and which strives by political means to advance the interests of the working class: labor party, a similar party in any country.

la-bor un-ion an association of workers organized for mutual protection and benefit.

la-brum (lā'brŭm), n. [pl. -bra (-brȧ)], [Lat. = lip], any liplike part; a rim, as of a dish: Zoöl., 1, the upper lip of an insect, or similar part of other arthropods; 2, the outer lip of a univalve shell.

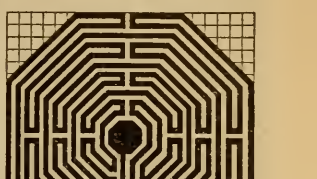
la-bur-num (lȧ-bûr'nŭm), n. [Lat., name of shrub], Bot., any of a genus (Laburnum) of poisonous, ornamental trees or shrubs in the pea family, bearing trifoliolate leaves and hanging clusters of pea-shaped, yellow flowers.

lab-y-rinth (lăb'ĭ-rĭnth), n. [< Gk. laburinthos, labyrinth], 1, a building or structure with many intricate or confusing passages; a maze; 2, a difficult, complicated, or confusing situation; a puzzle: Anat., the winding tubes of the inner ear (see ear, illus.): Labyrinth, Gk. Myth., the bewildering structure built in Crete by Dædalus for King Minos as a prison for the Minotaur, and penetrated by Theseus.



LABYRINTH: Follow black line.

lab-y-rin-thine (lăb"ĭ-rĭn'thĭn), adj. intricate; perplexing; confusing. Also, lab'y-rin'-thi-an; lab'y-rin'thic.

[1]lac (lăk), n. [< Hind. lākh < Sans. laksha, a lac], in India, 100,000; as, a lac of rupees. Also, lakh.

[2]lac (lăk), n. [< [1]lac, because of immense number of insects at certain seasons], 1, a dark red, resinous substance deposited by a scale insect (Carteria lacca) on the twigs of various trees in India and obtained in three forms: stick-lac, the twigs with adherent resin; seed-lac, the resin cleaned from twigs and coloring matter; and shellac, the resin melted and strained: used in sealing wax, varnishes, and insulating materials; 2, the sap of various trees, used in making varnish; 3, lacquer.

lace (lās), n. [< O.F. laz < Lat. laqueus, noose], 1, a cord or string passed through eyelets or other holes to bind or fasten; as, a shoe lace; 2, a delicate, ornamental fabric made from fine threads of linen, cotton, gold, or silver, woven in an open pattern; 3, a braid for trimming men's hats, uniforms, or the like; as, gold lace and silver lace: lace bug, any of numerous small bugs (family Tingitidæ) having lacelike wings (see Hemiptera, illus.):—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. laced (lāst), p.pr. lacing], 1, to fasten with a cord; pull together or compress by means of a cord; 2, to adorn or trim, as with lace; 3, to weave or twine together; interlace; 4, to provide with a string or cord running through eyelets or other holes; 5, to beat, lash, or whip.

Lac-e-dæ-mon (lăs"ē-dē'mŏn), n. [< Gk. Lakedaimōn], 1, Sparta, the capital city of Laconia; 2, the state of Laconia.

Lac-e-dæ-mo-ni-an (lăs"ē-dē-mō'nĭ-ăn), adj. 1, of or pertaining to Lacedæmon, or Laconia, in southern Greece, of which the principal city was Sparta; 2, Spartan:—n. a Spartan. Also, Lac"e-de-mo'ni-an.

lac-er-ate (lăs'ẽr-āt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -ated, p.pr. -ating], [< Lat. lacerare (-atus), to tear], 1, to tear or mangle with jagged cuts, as flesh; 2, to afflict or harrow, as the feelings:—adj. (-ăt), torn; jagged, as an irregularly cut leaf.—adj. lac'er-a-ble.—adj. lac'er-a-tive.

lac-er-a-tion (lăs"ẽr-ā'shŭn), n. 1, the act of tearing or mangling; 2, a jagged rent or wound; 3, a harrowing or wounding, as of the feelings.

la-cer-ta (lȧ-sûr'tȧ), n. [Lat. = lizard], Zoöl., a lizard; especially, any of a genus (Lacerta) of Old World lizards, formerly inclusive of nearly all known lizards: Lacerta, Astron., a small northern constellation, the Lizard (see constellation).

la-cer-ti-an (lȧ-sûr'shĭ-ăn; -tĭ-), adj. Zoöl., pertaining to lizards; lizardlike:—n. a lizard.

lace-wing (lās'wĭng"), n. [lace + wing], any of various insects with delicately veined, lacelike wings, and brilliant eyes, especially any of a family (Chrysopidæ) of the order Neuroptera.

lach-es (lăch'ĕz), n. [< O.F. laschesse < lascher < Lat. laxare, to slacken < laxus, slack], remissness; neglect: Law, inexcusable delay in laying claim to a right, or in performing a legal duty.

Lach-e-sis (lăk'ē-sĭs), n. [< Gk. lakhesis, destiny < lakhein, to fall by lot], Gk. Myth., that one of the Fates who measures off the thread of life.

lach-ry-mal (lăk'rĭ-măl), adj. [< Lat. lacrima, a tear], pertaining to tears:—n. a lachrymatory, or small bottle supposedly for tears: Anat., one of a pair of bones on the inner side of the eye socket, through which excess tear secretion passes to the nose: pl. the lachrymal organs; also, fits of crying. Also, lac'ri-mal; lac'ry-mal.

lach-ry-ma-to-ry (lăk'rĭ-mȧ-tō-rĭ), n. [pl. -ries (-rĭz)], 1, Class. Antiq., a tear bottle, or small, narrow-necked vessel of a kind found in ancient Roman tombs, formerly supposed to contain the mourners' tears, but now known to have been used for ointments or perfumes: 2, a tear-producing substance:—adj. pertaining to, or causing, tears: lachrymatory shell, a bomb, or explosive projectile, filled with a gas which causes smarting and watering of the eyes: also called tear shell. Also, lac'ri-ma-to-ry.

lach-ry-mose (lăk'rĭ-mōs), adj. 1, shedding or given to shedding tears; tearful; 2, causing to shed tears, as a tragedy; sad. Also, lac'ri-mose.

lac-ing (lās'ĭng), n. [see lace], 1, a cord, braid, or the like, passed through eyelets to fasten or bind, or used as trimming; 2, the action or method of fastening or binding with a cord, thong, or the like: Colloq., a sound thrashing.

la-cin-i-ate (lȧ-sĭn'ĭ-ăt), adj. [<Lat. lacinia, lappet], fringed; bordered with fringe: Bot. and Zoöl., fringed, or deeply cut into somewhat irregular, narrow, pointed lobes. Also, la-cin'i-at"ed.

lack (lăk), v.t. [<M.E. lac, fault, defect], 1, to be without; not have; be destitute of; 2, to be in want of; need; require; Obs., to miss; feel the absence of:—v.i. 1, to be deficient; fail; be wanting: usually in present participle; as, information was lacking; 2, to have need; be in want; be short: usually with of or in; as, he lacks in wisdom:—n. 1, want; deficiency; 2, that which fails, or is absent or deficient.

lack-a-dai-si-cal (lăk"ȧ-dā'zĭ-kăl), adj. [<archaic interj. alack-a-day!], 1, languishing; lazily indifferent; 2, having affected airs; affectedly or languidly sentimental.—adv. lack"a-dai'si-cal-ly.—n. lack"a-dai'si-cal-ness.

lack-er (lăk'ẽr), n. [see lacquer], a kind of varnish or varnished woodwork:—v.t. to varnish or cover with lacquer. See lac'quer, Pfd. S. lack-ey (lăk'ĭ), n. [pl. -eys (-ĭz)], [<Fr. laquais, a soldier or footman], 1, a male attendant of low rank; footman; valet; 2, a slavish follower; toady:—v.t. to wait on; serve:—v.i. to act as valet; serve as attendant. Also, lac'quey.

lack-lus-ter (lăk'lŭs"tẽr), n. [lack + luster], absence of luster or brightness; dulness:—adj. lacking luster; dull; dim. Also, lack'lus"tre.

La-co-ni-an (lȧ-kō'nĭ-ăn), adj. [<Gk. Lakōn, a Spartan], of or pertaining to Laconia, a state in the southeastern part of ancient Greece, of which the capital was Sparta, or Lacedæmon:—n. an inhabitant of Laconia; a Spartan.—n. lac'o-nism.

la-con-ic (lȧ-kŏn'ĭk), adj. saying a great deal in a few words; concise; pithy; terse: from the abrupt, terse manner of the Laconians. Also, la-con'i-cal.—adv. la-con'i-cal-ly.—n. la-con'i-cism.

Syn. succinct, brief, concise, pithy, terse. (See short.)

lac-quer (lăk'ẽr), n. [<obs. Fr. lacre, sealing wax, perh. <Port. lacca, lac], 1, a transparent varnish made by dissolving any of various resins, nitrocellulose, etc., in alcohol or another solvent, and used to protect brass, silver, etc., from tarnish and as a finish for automobiles; 2, any of various varnishes made with resin, especially one made from the sap of certain trees in Japan and China; 3, Chinese or Japanese woodwork finished with a hard, polished varnish, and often inlaid with gold, ivory, pearl, or the like:—v.t. to cover or paint with lacquer. Also, lack'er.

lac-quey (lăk'ĭ), n. [see lackey], a valet; hence, any servile attendant:—v.t. to serve:—v.i. to act as servant. See lack'ey, Pfd. S.

lac-ri-mal (lăk'rĭ-măl), adj. [see lachrymal], pertaining to tears:—n. Anat., a bone on the inner side of each eye socket. See lach'ry-mal. Pfd. S.

lac-ri-ma-to-ry (lăk'rĭ-mȧ-tō-rĭ), n. [pl. -ries (-rĭz)], a small bottle of a kind found in ancient tombs:—adj. pertaining to tears. See lach'ry-ma-to-ry, Pfd. S.

lac-ri-mose (lăk'rĭ-mōs), adj. tearful; given to weeping easily. See lach'ry-mose, Pfd. S.—adv. lac'ri-mose-ly.

la-crosse (lȧ-krŏs'), n. [Fr. <la, the + crosse <O.F. croce, a hook], a game played by 24 players with a ball about three inches in diameter and a netted bat or racket, called a crosse: originated by the North American Indians.

lac-ta-rine (lăk'tȧ-rĭn; -rēn), n. [<Lat. lactare (-atus), to contain milk; suckle], a preparation of casein or milk curds, used to fix the colors in printing calico. Also, lac'ta-rene (lăk'tȧ-rēn).

lac-tate (lăk'tāt), n. Chem., a salt of lactic acid: —v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -tated, p.pr. -tating], to change into milk; make milky:—v.i. 1, to secrete milk; 2, to suckle young.—n. lac-ta'tion.

lac-te-al (lăk'tē-ăl), adj. [<Lat. lacteus, milky <lac, milk], pertaining to, or like, milk; milky:—n.pl. Anat., the lymphatic vessels of the small intestines, which take up the chyle and convey it to the thoracic duct or to the right lymphatic duct.

lac-te-ous (lăk'tē-ŭs), adj. milky; resembling, or suggesting, milk.

lac-tes-cence (lăk-tĕs'ĕns), n. [<Lat. lactescens (-entis), turning to milk], 1, the act or process of becoming milky; 2, milkiness: Bot., the flow of latex, a milky juice, from certain plants when gashed, as the rubber tree; Zoöl., milk production.

lac-tes-cent (lăk-tĕs'ĕnt), adj. 1, milky; becoming like milk; 2, secreting, or involved in the secretion of, milk or a milklike juice; as, lactescent plants: Bot., yielding latex, a milky juice, as the rubber plant; Zoöl., producing milk.

lac-tic (lăk'tĭk), adj. [<Lat. lac (lactis), milk], of or pertaining to milk; derived from milk: lactic acid, Chem., a colorless, sirupy liquid occurring in sour milk, in sauerkraut, and in the fermentation of various vegetable juices: used in chemical industries, and in the manufacture of soft drinks as a substitute for the more expensive tartaric and citric acids.

lac-tif-er-ous (lăk-tĭf'ẽr-ŭs), adj. [<Lat. lac, milk + ferre, to carry], yielding or conveying milk or a milky juice.

lac-to-ba-cil-lus (lăk"tō-bȧ-sĭl'ŭs), n. [lacto- (<Lat. lac (lactis), milk + bacillus], any of a genus (Lactobacillus) of lactic-acid-forming bacteria, some species of which are used in making fermented milk.

lac-tom-e-ter (lăk-tŏm'ē-tẽr), n. [<Lat. lac, milk + metron, a measure], an instrument for determining the quality or richness of milk, as a hydrometer which determines its specific gravity. Also called galactometer.

lac-tose (lăk'tōs), n. [<Lat. lac, milk], Chem., a white, crystalline powder of sweetish taste, obtained from whey and used in pharmacy and in infant foods: also called milk sugar and sugar of milk.

la-cu-na (lȧ-kū'nȧ), n. [pl. -næ (-nē); -nas (-nȧz)], [<Lat. lacus, lake], a space where something has been omitted; a blank or gap, as in a manuscript: Biol., a small pit or hollow, as found in a bone or in certain other animal tissues.—adj. la-cu'nal; la-cu'nar.—adj. la-cu'nose.

la-cus-trine (lȧ-kŭs'trĭn), adj. of or pertaining to lakes; living in lakes; specifically, pertaining to the lake dwellers, a prehistoric race who built houses over the water (see lake dweller, illus.).

lac-y (lās'ĭ), adj. [comp. -ier, superl. -iest], [see lace], lacelike; resembling a fine fabric woven in a delicate open pattern.

lad (lăd), n. [<M.E. ladde, a follower], a boy, youth, or stripling; familiarly, any comrade or mate.

lad-der (lăd'ẽr), n. [<A.S. hlæder, a ladder], 1, a device for climbing or scaling, consisting generally of two long uprights of wood, iron, rope, or the like, connected by numerous crosspieces, called rungs, to serve as steps; 2, any means by which one climbs or ascends; as, the ladder of success.

SCALING LADDER

lad-der shell any of various spirally formed sea shells showing plainly marked ribs: also called wentletrap.

lad-die (lăd'ĭ), n. [dim. of lad], Sc., a boy or lad: sometimes, a lover.

lade (lād), v.t. [p.t. laded, p.p. laded or laden (lād'n), p.pr. lading], [<A.S. hladan, to load], 1, to load; put a cargo aboard, as a ship; place a burden on or in: rare, except in past participle; 2, to throw out or in with a scoop or dipper; bail; as, to lade water out of a vat:—v.i. 1, to take on cargo; 2, to dip up water or other liquid.

lad-en (lād'n), past participle of the verb lade:—p.adj. 1, loaded; burdened; 2, oppressed, as with sorrow or sin.

lad-ing (lād'ĭng), n. 1, the act of loading; 2, the act of bailing; 3, the thing loaded; burden; freight; cargo: bill of lading, a receipt issued by a railroad, shipping company, or other carrier to a shipper, acknowledging responsibility for the shipment of goods, and promising delivery to the person and place designated in the receipt.

La-di-no (lȧ-dē'nō), n. [pl. -nos (-nōz; -nōs)], [<Lat. Latinus, Latin], 1, a Romance dialect spoken by the descendants of the Jews who were exiled from Spain and Portugal; 2, in Spanish America, a half-breed; especially, a person of mixed Spanish and Indian descent; a mestizo.

la-dle (lā′dl), n. [< A.S. hlædel < hladan, to lade out], 1, a spoon or dipper, with a long handle, for transferring liquids; 2, a large pot or vessel for holding, transporting, and pouring molten metal:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. ladled (-dld), p.pr. ladling], to take up and pour out, (a liquid) with a dipper or spoon.

la-drone (lā-drōn′), n. [< Sp. ladrón < Lat. latro (-onis), robber], in Spanish-speaking countries, a robber; brigand.—n. la-dron′ism.

la-dy (lā′dī), n. [pl. -dies (-dīz)], [< A.S. hlǣfdīge, lady, perh. < hlāf, loaf + dīge, one who kneads], 1, originally, a woman in a position of household authority, or having proprietary rights over an estate: corresponding to lord; 2, a woman of good family or high position in society: corresponding to gentleman; 3, a woman of courtesy and refinement: corresponding to gentleman in the same sense; 4, in the days of chivalry, the woman chosen by a knight or squire as the object of his devoted service; hence, later, a sweetheart or wife: Lady, in Great Britain, 1, the proper title of the wife of any nobleman below the rank of duke; 2, the courtesy title of the wife of a knight or baronet; 3, the title of the daughter of a duke, marquis, or earl: used with the Christian name: Our Lady, R. C. Ch., the Virgin Mary.

la-dy-bird (lā′dī-bûrd″), n. [lady + bird], a lady-bug (which see): Obs., sweetheart.

la-dy-bug (lā′dī-bŭg″), n. [lady + bug], Colloq., any of various small, brightly colored beetles (for colored illus. see insect).

La-dy chap-el a chapel dedicated to the Virgin, situated east of the altar in larger churches (see cathedral, illus.).

La-dy Day Eccl., March 25, the feast of the Annunciation (which see): until 1752, the beginning of the civil year in the English calendar.

la-dy fin-ger a small sweet cake, somewhat like a finger in shape.

la-dy-kill-er (lā′dī-kĭl″ēr), n. a man who is peculiarly fascinating to women.

la-dy-like (lā′dī-līk″), adj. [lady + ¹*like*], 1, befitting a gentlewoman; courteous; well-bred; 2, womanly; delicate; 3, effeminate; unmanly.

la-dy-love (lā′dī-lŭv″), n. [lady + love], 1, a sweetheart; a woman who is beloved; 2, love for a lady; romantic affection.

la-dy-ship (lā′dī-shĭp), n. [lady + -ship], the rank of a gentlewoman: used with her or your by inferiors in addressing one whose title is Lady.

la-dy's-slip-per (lā′dīz-slĭp″ēr), n. 1, a cypripedium, an orchid that resembles a slipper (see cypripedium, illus.): also called moccasin flower; 2, the garden balsam. Also, la′dy-slip″per.

La-er-tes (lā-ûr′tēz), n. [< Gk.], 1, Gk. Myth., a king of Ithaca and father of Odysseus; 2, in Shakespeare's "Hamlet," Ophelia's brother, who poisons his rapier, wounds Hamlet in a duel, and by an exchange of weapons is fatally wounded with his own: a bold and resolute person, contrasting with Hamlet.

læ-vo-gy-rate (lē″vō-jī′rāt), adj. [see levogyrate], Phys. and Chem., turning the plane of polarization to the left. See le″vo-gy′rate, Pfd. S.

læ-vo-ro-ta-to-ry (lē″vō-rō′tā-tō-rĭ), adj. [see levorotatory], Phys. and Chem., levogyrate. See le″vo-ro′ta-to-ry, Pfd. S.

¹lag (lăg), v.i. [p.t. and p.p. lagged (lăgd), p.pr. lagging], [perh. dial. distortion of ³*last*], to move slowly; linger; fall behind:—n. a falling behind in movement: Phys., the amount by which a movement is retarded; Elec., the amount by which an alternating current is behind the electromotive force: lag of the tide, the amount by which actual high tide falls behind the mean time of high tide in the first and third quarters of the moon.—n. lag′ger.

²lag (lăg), n. [prob. < O.N. lögg, rim of barrel], 1, a barrel stave; 2, a stavelike strip of lagging: lag bolt, a bolt or screw made with a square head: also called lag screw.

LAG BOLT

lag-an (lăg′ăn), n. [see ligan], Law, merchandise cast overboard with an identifying buoy attached. See li′gan, Pfd. S.

la-ger beer (lä′gĕr), [< Ger. lagerbier, stored beer < lager, a storehouse + bier, beer], a brewed malt liquor: so called because it is aged for some months before being used: also called lager.

lag-gard (lăg′ärd), n. [see ¹lag], one who loiters or is sluggish:—adj. backward; slow; tardy.—adv. lag′gard-ly.—n. lag′gard-ness.

lag-ging (lăg′ĭng), n. slow motion; the act of loitering or holding back: Mech., material, such as strips of wood, felt, or asbestos, used in making a nonconducting covering over a steam cylinder, wall, boiler, or the like; Arch., planks or beams used to support an arch during construction.

la-gniappe (lăn-yăp′), n. [Louisiana Fr., prob. < Fr. la, the + Sp. napa, yapa, a tip], Southern U. S., a small gratuity or present given by a tradesman to a customer. Also, la-gnappe′.

la-goon (lä-gōōn′), n. [< It. and Sp. laguna < Lat. lacuna < lacus, lake], 1, a shallow lake or channel, usually an inlet of the sea. Also, la-gune′.

la-ic (lā′ĭk), adj. [< Gk. laikos, lay < laos, people], 1, pertaining to those who are not clergymen; secular; lay; 2, pertaining to those who are not of a specified profession:—n. a layman. Also, adj. la′i-cal.

laid (lād), past tense and past participle of ²*lay*: laid paper, paper watermarked with prominent vertical lines some distance apart and fine close cross lines.

lain (lān), past participle of the intransitive verb ²*lie*, which see.

lair (lâr), n. [< A.S. leger, bed], a resting place or couch; especially, the den of a wild beast:—v.i. to go to one's resting place: lie down; rest.

laird (lârd), n. [Sc. form of lord], in Scotland, the master of a landed estate.

lais-sez faire (lā″sā″ fâr′), [Fr. = let act], an expression denoting, literally, "let alone"; "let (people) do (as they please)": used especially, in economics, of a policy of noninterference by the government with competitive business methods, nonregulation of conditions of labor, manufacturing, transportation, or the like. Also, lais″ser″ faire′.

la-i-ty (lā′ĭ-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tiz)], [< Fr. lai < Gk. laikos, lay < laos, people], 1, laymen; the body of the people, as distinguished from the clergy; 2, all those who are outside any given profession.

La-i-us (lā′ĭ-ŭs; lā′yŭs), n. [< Gk. Laïos], Gk. Myth., father and accidental victim of Œdipus.

¹lake (lāk), n. [< O.F. lac < Lat. lacus, lake], 1, a body of water surrounded by land: usually applied to a body of water of considerable area; 2, sometimes, an artificial, ornamental pond, as in a park: lake dweller, one living in a structure, called a lake dwelling, built on piles, or on an island made within piles, driven into the bed of a lake; especially, one of a prehistoric race inhabiting such dwellings: lake trout, any of several species and varieties of fresh-water food fishes of the salmon family, especially the salmon trout of western North America and the Mackinaw trout: Lake Country, a mountainous region in the English counties of Westmoreland, Cumberland, and Lancashire, where there are many lakes: Lake poets, Coleridge, Southey, and Wordsworth, who lived in the English Lake Country.

LAKE DWELLING

a, b, c, layers of clay, stones, and logs, stumps or branches, respectively, held in place by piles.

²lake (lāk), n. [var. of ²*lac*, q.v.], 1, an insoluble pigment, obtained by precipitating solutions of organic coloring matter with metallic salts; 2, a color from such a pigment; as, crimson lake.

lakh (lăk), n. [see ¹lac], in British India, the sum of 100,000 rupees; a great number. See ¹lac, Pfd. S.

lal-la-tion (lăl-ā′shŭn), n. [< Lat. lallare (-atus), to sing lullaby], the pronunciation of r as l.

l'al-le-gro (lăl-lā′grō), [It.], the cheerful (man): opposite of il penseroso, the pensive (man): L'Allegro, one of Milton's minor poems.

lam (lăm), n. [Arab.], the 23d letter of the Arabic alphabet (see App. I), approximately equivalent to the English l: as a numerical symbol, 30.

Lam. abbr. Lamentations, a book of the Old Testament, ascribed to Jeremiah.

la-ma (lä′mä), n. [Tibetan], a priest of Lamaism; also, a monk noted for learning and sanctity.

La-ma-ism (lä′ma-izm), n. the branch of Buddhism prevalent in Tibet and Mongolia.

La-marck-ism (lä-märk′kĭzm), n. [< proper name], Biol., the theory of organic evolution proposed by the French naturalist Jean Baptiste Lamarck (1744–1829), to the effect that new body characteristics are developed in, and others lost to, an organism through adaptation to its environment, and that such modifications may be transmitted to its offspring; the theory of inheritance or transmission of acquired characteristics.—adj. La-marck′i-an.

lamb (lăm), n. [A.S. < O.Teut. source], 1, the young of sheep; 2, the flesh of young sheep, used as food; 3, one who is gentle or innocent, as a little child: Slang, one who is easily swindled: the Lamb, Christ:—v.t. to bring forth lambs.—adj. lamb′like.

lam-baste (lăm-bāst′), v.t. [prob. < dial. lam, to beat, akin to O.N. lemja, to beat + baste, to beat], to beat; whack; thrash.

lamb-da (lăm′dä), n. [Gk.], the 11th letter of the Greek alphabet [Λ, λ (see App. I)], corresponding to English l.

lam-bent (lăm′bĕnt), adj. [< Lat. lambens (-entis), licking], 1, touching lightly; playing lightly over the surface, as flame; flickering; 2, softly radiant, as light; 3, gently brilliant; as, lambent wit. —adv. lam′bent-ly.—n. lam′ben-cy (-bĕn-sĭ).

lam-bert (lăm′bĕrt), n. [< Johann Heinrich Lambert (1728–77), Ger. scientist], Optics, a unit of brightness, being the brightness of a diffusing surface which emits one lumen per square centimeter.

lamb-kin (lăm′kĭn), n. [dim. of lamb], 1, a little lamb; 2, a tenderly cherished child.

lam-bre-quin (lăm′brē-kĭn; lăm′bĕr-kĭn), n. [Fr.: orig., scarf worn over helmet], an ornamented piece of fabric, as tapestry or velvet, hanging by one edge as a curtain for the upper part of a window or doorway, as a drapery for the edge of a shelf, or the like: Obs. or Hist., a kind of scarf worn over a helmet.

lamb-skin (lăm′skĭn″), n. [lamb+skin], the skin of a lamb, or the leather made from it; especially, a lamb's skin dressed with the fleece on it.

lamb's-quar-ters (lămz′-kwôr′tĕrz), n. the common goosefoot (Chenopodium album); also, any of various herbs related to it.

lamb's wool 1, the wool of lambs; also, fabric made from it; 2, a drink made of hot ale and the pulp of roasted apples, seasoned with nutmeg and other spices.

lame (lām), adj. [comp. lamer, superl. lamest], [< A.S. lama, lame], 1, crippled or disabled, especially in a leg or foot, so that movement is difficult, painful, or impossible; halt; 2, inefficient; insufficient; ineffectual; not sound; as, a lame excuse:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. lamed (lāmd), p.pr. laming], to cripple or disable.—adv. lame′ly.—n. lame′ness.

la-medh (lä′mĕd), n. [Heb. = oxgoad], the 12th letter of the Hebrew alphabet [> (see App. I)], approximately equivalent to the English l: as a numerical symbol, 30.

lame duck 1, a speculator who is unable to meet his obligations; 2, an officeholder, as a Congressman, whose successor has been chosen but has not yet taken his seat.

la-mel-la (lä-mĕl′ä), n. [pl. lamellæ (-ē); lamellas (-äz)], [Lat., dim. of lamina, a thin piece of metal or wood], a thin plate, sheet, or layer; a plate-shaped part: Anat., a thin sheet of bone.

la-mel-lar (lä-mĕl′är; lăm′ĕ-lär), adj. composed of, or resembling, thin layers or scales.

lam-el-late (lăm′ĕ-lāt; lä-mĕl′āt), adj. Bot. or Zoöl., 1, composed of, or supplied with, thin plates or scales; 2, in the form of, or made of, a flat plate or leaflike structure. Also, lam′el-lat′ed (-lāt′ĕd).—n. lam′el-la′tion (-lā′shŭn).

La-mel-li-bran-chi-a (lä-mĕl″ĭ-brăng′kĭ-ä), n. pl. [< Lat. lamella, a thin metal plate + branchiae, gills], Zoöl., a class of mollusks having paired gills, generally in the form of thin plates, and a hinged shell held together by one or more adductor muscles, as oysters and clams. Also, La-mel″li-bran″chi-a′ta (-ā′tä).—n. la-mel′li-branch (-brăngk).—adj. la-mel″li-bran′chi-ate.

A TYPICAL LAMELLIBRANCH

Interior view of a fresh water mussel: A.ad., anterior adductor muscle; Mth., mouth; M., M., mantle; Ft., foot; Int., intestine; S., shell; Gills, one of the platelike gills; I.s., inhalant siphon; E.s., exhalant siphon, P.ad., posterior adductor muscle; Kd., kidney; Ht., heart; St., stomach.

la-ment (lä-mĕnt′), v.t. [< Lat. lamentari, to bewail], to mourn for; grieve for; bewail:—v.i. to feel or express grief or sorrow; weep; mourn: often with for or over:—n. 1, an expression of sorrow, as by weeping or wailing; 2, a literary expression of sorrow, as an elegy: Mus., an old Scottish or Irish folk song of pathetic character.

Syn., v. bewail, mourn, sorrow, grieve, beweep, bemoan, deplore.—Ant., v. exult, triumph, rejoice.

lam-en-ta-ble (lăm′ĕn-tä-bl), adj. 1, pitiable; deplorable; regrettable; as, a lamentable occurrence; 2, mournful; expressing grief or sorrow.—adv. lam′en-ta-bly.

Syn. despicable, grievous, sorrowful, wretched, miserable, pitiful, doleful, mournful.

lam-en-ta-tion (lăm″ĕn-tā′shŭn), n. 1, the act of bewailing; 2, uttered words or cries expressive of grief; a written expression of grief or sorrow: Mus., a medieval plain song with text from the book of Lamentations: Lamentations, a poetical book of the Old Testament, attributed to Jeremiah.

la-ment-ed (lä-mĕn′tĕd), p.adj. regretted; mourned for: especially used in the common expression, late lamented.

La-mi-a (lā′mĭ-ä), n. [< Gk. lamia, female demon], 1, Gk. Myth., a queen of Libya, beloved by Zeus and changed by Hera into a vampire, feeding on the blood of young children; 2, in the poem by Keats, of this name, a bride who reverts to her original form of serpent: lamia, 1, Class. Myth., one of a class of blood-sucking monsters, half woman and half serpent; 2, a vampire; witch; sorceress.

lam-i-na (lăm′ĭ-nä), n. [pl. -næ (-nē); -nas (-näz)], [Lat. = thin plate], a thin scale, flake, layer, or plate, as of bone, stratified rock, vegetable tissue, or the like: Metal., a thin plate, sheet, or layer; Bot., the blade, or flat, extended part, of a foliage leaf, as distinguished from the petiole or leaf stem.

lam-i-na-ble (lăm′ĭ-nä-bl), adj. capable of being separated into thin layers, as mica, or of being formed into a single thin sheet, or lamina, as gold, by rolling or hammering.

lam-i-nate (lăm′ĭ-nāt), adj. having the form of a thin plate; composed of, or arranged in, thin coats, scales, or layers:—v.t. (lăm′ĭ-nāt), [p.t. and p.p. -nated, p.pr. -nating], 1, to roll or press into the form of a thin plate; divide or separate into thin sheets or layers by splitting, as mica; 2, to overlay or build up with thin sheets or layers:—v.i. to separate into thin sheets or layers; also, to assume the form of a thin plate or layer: laminated steel, steel made up of separate sheets or plates.—n. lam″i-na′tion.

Lam-mas (lăm′ăs), n. [< A.S. hlāfmæsse, loaf for Mass], R. C. Ch., the first day of August, formerly observed in England as a harvest festival, loaves of bread from the first ripe wheat being consecrated at Mass: now observed as the feast of St. Peter in Chains (Acts 12:3–11): also called Lammas Day.

Lam-mas-tide (lăm′ăs-tīd″), n. [Lammas+tide], the time of year about the first of August, or Lammas Day.

lam-mer-gei-er (lăm′ĕr-gī″ĕr), n. [< Ger. lämmer, lambs + geier, vulture], a very large bird (Gypaëtus barbatus), allied to the eagles and vultures and inhabiting the mountains of southern Europe and Asia: also called bearded vulture. Also, lam′mer-gey″er.

lamp (lămp), n. [< Fr. lampe < Gk. lampas, a torch], 1, a vessel in which oil or other inflammable liquid is burned for lighting purposes by means of a wick: in modern times provided with a chimney or globe, usually of glass, to protect the flame and make combustion more complete; 2, any device employing a flame, incandescent wire, or the like, for giving out artificial light; 3, anything that gives out light, real or metaphorical: Slang, usually pl., the eyes:—v.t. Slang, to gaze at.

ANCIENT LAMPS

1lam-pas (lăm′păs), n. [source uncertain], in horses, an inflammation and swelling in the roof of the mouth. Also, lam′pass; lam′pers.

2lam-pas (lăm′păs), n. [source uncertain], a kind of silken fabric, originally Chinese, with an elaborate ornamental pattern worked on a ground of different color: used for upholstery.

lamp-black (lămp′blăk″), n. [lamp+black], a fine soot of pure carbon formed by the imperfect combustion of highly carbonaceous substances, as oil in a lamp, or tar in a specially constructed kiln: used in paints, printing ink, etc.:—v.t. to cover or daub with such substance.

lam-per eel (lăm'pĕr), [corr. of lamprey, q.v.], a lamprey (which see).

lam-pi-on (lăm'pĭ-ŭn), n. [< It. lampione < lampa, lamp], a small oil lamp, usually of colored glass, used for festive illumination.

lamp-light-er (lămp'lĭt"ĕr), n. [lamp + ¹*light*], 1, a person who lights lamps, especially street lamps; 2, a rol ed tube or long, folded slip of paper, or splinter of wood, used, especially before matches became common, to light lamps, pipes, or the like; 3, an American, edible, fresh-water fish, eight to ten inches long: also called calico bass; strawberry bass.

lam-poon (lăm-pōōn'), n. [< Fr. lampon, drinking song < lampons, let us drink], a bitter or malicious personal satire; an article holding a person up to ridicule or contempt:—v.t. to abuse or ridicule in a written article; satirize virulently.—n. lam-poon'er.

lam-prey (lăm'prĭ), n. [pl. -preys (-prĭz)], [< O.F. lamproie < L.L. lampreda, perh. < lampetra, as if < lambere, to lick + petra, stone], any of various eel-like, fresh-water or marine, low vertebrates (subclass Petromyzontia), from a few inches to three feet in length, which have no jaws, but a large, circular, sucking mouth, and some of which are valued as food.

la-na-i (lä-nä'ē), n. [Hawaiian nat. name], a porch: term used in Hawaii.

la-nate (lā'nāt), adj. [< Lat. lanatus, woolly], densely hairy; woolly; having fine hairs or filaments: used especially of hairy or woolly stems or leaves of certain plants, as the tall field mullein.

Lan-cas-tri-an (lăng-kăs'trĭ-ăn), adj. [< Lancaster], of or pertaining to the house of Lancaster, an English royal family descended from John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster, fourth son of Edward III, of which three members, Henry IV, Henry V, and Henry VI, reached the throne:—n. a member or follower of this family, especially during its struggle with the house of York in the Wars of the Roses (1455–85), in which its symbol was the red rose.

lance (lăns), n. [< Lat. lancea, lance], 1, a thrusting weapon, used principally by cavalry, consisting of a long wooden shaft with a sharp steel spearhead (see arms, illus.); 2, any long, slender spear or implement resembling a soldier's lance; especially, a spear with a sharp point and keen cutting edges, used in killing whales or spearing fish; 3, a soldier equipped with a lance: in the Middle Ages, a knight thus armed, with his retinue; as, a company of fifteen lances; 4, in fireworks, a small paper tube or case, filled with combustibles for white or colored fire: lance corporal, a corporal's assistant; a private acting as corporal: lance sergeant, an acting sergeant:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. lanced (lănst), p.pr. lancing], 1, to cut, pierce, or wound with a lance or similar weapon; 2, to pierce or cut open, as a boil or abscess, with a surgeon's lancet or similar instrument: Obs. or Archaic, to fling; launch.

lance-let (lăns'lĕt), n. Zoöl., any of a genus (Branchiostoma) of small, burrowing, fish-shaped animals, akin to the vertebrates, with a dorsal nerve cord, but a cartilaginous rod instead of a backbone: found in warm, shallow water in temperate and tropical climates; an amphioxus (for illus. see Chordata).

Lan-ce-lot (lăn'sē-lŏt), n. [prob. Celt.], the lover of Guinevere, bravest and handsomest of the knights of King Arthur's Round Table: subject of many medieval romances, often conflicting, and a prominent figure in Tennyson's "Idylls of the King."

lan-ce-o-late (lăn'sē-ō-lāt), adj. [< Lat. lanceola, dim. of lancea, lance], shaped like a spearhead: Bot. and Zoöl., slender and tapering to a point, as certain leaves (see leaf, illus.): opposite of spatulate.

lanc-er (lăn'sĕr), n. [see lance], a person who uses the long, spearlike weapon called a lance; especially, a cavalry soldier so armed: pl. a dance, popular in the latter half of the 19th century, in which groups of four couples perform an elaborately prescribed series of movements; also, a sprightly musical arrangement accompanying such a dance.

lan-cet (lăn'sĕt), n. [< O.F. lancette < Lat. lancea, lance], 1, a small, spearlike weapon; 2, a surgeon's small knife, pointed and sharpened on both edges: Arch., a sharply pointed arch or window characteristic of early Gothic: short for lancet arch or lancet window.

LANCET WINDOW

lance-wood (lăns'wŏŏd"), n. [lance + wood], 1, a straight-grained, flexible wood, suitable for archery bows, cabinetwork, etc.; 2, any tree yielding such wood, especially a tropical American tree (Aberemoa quitarensis).

lan-ci-nate (lăn'sĭ-nāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -nated, p.pr. -nating], [< Lat. lancinare (-atus), to rend], 1, to tear; pierce; 2, to dart through, as does a pain.—n. lan'ci-na'tion.

land (lănd), n. [A.S. < O.Teut. source], 1, the solid part of the earth's surface, as opposed to water, sea, or ocean; 2, a natural, political, or other division of the earth's surface, considered by itself or with reference to its population, owner, or other attribute; a country; district; estate; 3, the inhabitants of a country; a people; nation; 4, ground; soil; earth: especially with reference to location or use: as, swamp land; pasture land; 5, the country as distinguished from the city; obsolete except in the expression back to the land; 6, in Scotland, a tenement; a building having a single entrance common to a number of distinct apartments, called houses: Econ., all the elements of the wealth of a nation which are contributed by nature, as opposed to the improvements, which result from man's labor and enterprise; the permanent and ultimate sources of economic wealth, whether in soil, water, air, sunshine, or any natural element; Law, a parcel of ground regarded as the object of ownership, including all things attached to it by nature, as trees and springs, or by man, as buildings, fences, and other improvements, and all things located at any distance from the surface vertically above or below it; Mech., the original face or level of a surface having grooves or indentations, as the surface between the spiral grooves of a rifle barrel, or between the furrows of a twist drill (see ¹*drill*, ²*rifle*, illus.):—v.t. 1, to bring to, or set on, shore, as passengers; 2, to bring to and set down, as at a destination; as, the train landed him at his station on time; 3, to bring to shore; hence, to capture, as a fish; 4, to secure; win; as, to land a prize:—v.i. 1, to come or go ashore, as a passenger; disembark; 2, to arrive at a dock or other destination, as a vessel; 3, to come to the end of a course; get into a situation; as, he landed in jail; 4, to alight; come to earth, as after a jump or a fall.

lan-dau (lăn'dô; lăn'dou), n. [< Landau, town in Germany where first made], a four-wheeled, inclosed carriage, with a top in two sections which can be raised or lowered independently.

LANDAU

lan-dau-let (lăn"dô-lĕt'), n. [dim. of landau], 1, a small, inclosed, four-wheeled carriage; small landau; 2, a two-seated motor of which the rear section of the top can be folded down.

land-ed (lăn'dĕd), adj. [see land], 1, possessed of land; as, a landed proprietor; 2, consisting of land; as, a landed estate.

land-fall (lănd'fôl"), n. [land + fall], 1, a landslide; 2, the sudden acquisition of landed property through the death of the owner: Naut., the first land sighted after a voyage, or the act of sighting it; Aëro., a coming to land.

land-grab-ber (lĕnd'grăb"ĕr), n. 1, one who obtains land, especially a large amount of land, illegally or selfishly; 2, formerly, in Ireland, one who bought or occupied land from which another had been expelled.

land-grave (lănd'grāv"), n. [< M.H.G. lant, land + graf, count], in medieval Germany, a count having certain territorial jurisdiction; later, a title of certain German princes.—n. fem. land'gra-vine.

land-hold-er (lănd'hōl"dĕr), n. [land + ²*hold*], a landowner; a holder, occupier, or proprietor of land.—adj. and n. land'hold"ing.

land-ing (lăn'dĭng), n. [see land], 1, the act of going or putting ashore, or of alighting or coming to earth; 2, a place or structure, as a wharf or platform, where goods or persons can be loaded or unloaded; a level field suitable for airplanes to come to rest: Arch., a platform at the end of a flight of steps.

land-la-dy (lănd'lā"dĭ), n. [pl. -dies (-dĭz)], [land + lady], 1, a woman who leases land or houses to tenants; 2, the mistress of an inn, boarding house, or the like; 3, the wife of a man who owns or leases land, or of the master of an inn or lodging house.

land-locked (lănd'lŏkt"), adj. [land + ²*lock*], 1, nearly or wholly inclosed by land, as a body of water; 2, living in, or confined to, waters shut off from the sea; as, landlocked fish.

land-lord (lănd'lôrd"), n. [land + lord], 1, a man who owns land; 2, one who leases land or buildings to others; 3, the master of a hotel, inn, boarding house, lodging house, or the like.

land-lub-ber (lănd'lŭb"ĕr), n. [land + lubber], 1, one who has had little or no experience at sea: a sailor's term of ridicule; hence, 2, any one who is awkward on shipboard.

land-mark (lănd'märk"), n. [land + ¹*mark*], 1, a fixed object that marks the boundary of a tract of land; 2, any familiar, conspicuous, or memorable object, especially one on land, used as a guide either by travelers on land or by navigators; 3, any prominent fact, object, or occurrence which is considered a turning point in history, or which may help to explain, recall, or locate other facts and events.

land of-fice a government bureau where records are kept, and other business transacted, pertaining to the public lands.

land-own-er (länd'ōn"ẽr), n. [land+own], a person who possesses property in land.

land–poor (länd'-pōōr"), adj. possessing property in real estate, but having little or no income with which to maintain it and pay taxes on it.

land-scape (länd'skāp), n. [<Du. landschap, landscape], 1, a section of land, or of land and water, seen as one view; 2, a picture representing natural scenery; 3, sometimes, a picture of natural scenery other than the sea: distinguished from seascape.

land-slide (länd'slīd"), n. [land+slide], 1, the dislodgment of earth, stones, etc., from a hillside; 2, the material so dislodged. Also, land'slip".

lands-man (ländz'mən), n. [pl. -men (-mẽn)], [land+man], a person who lives on land: opposite of seaman: Naut., an inexperienced sailor, especially one on his first voyage.

Lands-thing (länns'ting"), n. [<Da. land, country+thing, parliament], the upper house of the Danish Parliament or Rigsdag.

Land-sturm (länt'stōōrm"; -shtōōrm"), n. [<Ger. land, country+sturm, alarm], 1, in various countries, as formerly in Germany, and in Japan, a levy, or mustering, in time of war, of all men fit for military duty and not already under arms; 2, the forces called, or subject to call, under such a levy, constituting the last reserve and summoned only in case of invasion or grave national emergency.

Land-tag (länt'täkh"), n. [Ger.<land, country+tag, diet or council], the parliament, or lawmaking body, of a German state, especially of Prussia, consisting of an upper and a lower house.

land-ward (länd'wẽrd), adv. [land+-ward], toward the shore:—adj. facing or moving toward the shore. Also, adv. land'wards.

Land-wehr (länt'vār"), n. [Ger.<land, country+wehr, defense], in various countries, as formerly in Germany, and in Japan, that part of the national military forces consisting of the men who have completed their military service and constitute a reserve practically exempt from duty during peace times.

lane (lān), n. [A.S.<O.Teut. source], 1, an informal or unpaved rural road or street, not used as a highway; a narrow path or byway; a passageway between hedges or walls; 2, any narrow passage or track, as between more or less densely crowded objects, people, or the like; 3, any one of the courses across the ocean fixed as routes for vessels going in the same direction, to diminish the danger of collision.

lang-syne (läng"sīn'), adv. [Sc.=long since], long ago; long since:—n. the days of long ago: used chiefly in auld langsyne. Also, lang syne.

lan-guage (läng'gwâj), n. [<Fr. langage<Lat. lingua, tongue], 1, the body of words, forms, and idioms ordinarily used for the communication of ideas within a community; speech, whether spoken or written; 2, the established system of verbal communication of one group or nation as distinct from that of another; a tongue; as, the French language; 3, any conventionalized or effective means for the expression of thoughts, ideas, feelings, or the like; as, the language of signs; the language of flowers; 4, a special vocabulary or manner of expression characteristic of a person or a class; style; as, he uses good language; the language of childhood; 5, the vocabulary or phraseology pertaining to a department of knowledge or to a special subject; as, the language of chemistry.

Syn. speech, dialect, idiom, tongue, expression, diction, vernacular, patois, lingo, jargon, argot, slang. Language is, in its general sense, a means of conveying ideas. Among human beings ideas are conveyed by words, by expressive gestures, eyes, signs, or symbols. A nation which uses the same store of words in the same way possesses a language; we speak of the dead languages of ancient, vanished countries. The finger or sign language is used by the deaf and dumb. We speak of the language of the eyes, of flowers. Speech is the power to utter articulate sound; also, the sound articulated or the thing said; in this latter sense speech and language are used interchangeably; as, his speech was that of an educated man. The method of communication ascribed to animals, however, is their language, not their speech. A tongue is the language of a nation. Idiom is a distinguishing character peculiar to a language, perceived in the turn of its words and phrases, or in the nature of its construction. The way in which we use "shall" and "will" is idiomatic; such usages, the very bone of our English, are hardest for foreigners to grasp. Vernacular is the language belonging to one by birth; it is the mother tongue, conceived of particularly as unenriched by foreign additions and unweighted by the scholarly or heavy. A dialect is a language within a language, grown up or surviving in a district or in a certain class, with idiom, pronunciation, and vocabulary distinguishable from that of the main language, and admitted to, though not recognized except as a subordinate part of, the main language. Slang consists of a body of words or phrases, or words in special senses, in a current, often rapidly passing, use. Slang may be coarse; it may be the characteristic cant of a club, a race track, or a group of students; or it may be merely colloquial, familiar speech. In the last-mentioned case, if it possesses aptness or force, it may become a part of standard English. Lingo, jargon, and argot are the special languages used by certain classes. Jargon is confused gibberish; it names a mode of speech full of unfamiliar terms, as that of baseball enthusiasts, students, or the like. Argot is particularly the secret jargon of thieves and tramps. A backwoodsman might style the speech of a scholar lingo; a foreign language, not understood, is sometimes contemptuously referred to as lingo, as is the vocabulary of an unfamiliar subject; as, puzzlists', scientists' lingo. Jargon also names language fallen into a barbarous state.

langue d'oc (läng" dōk'), [<O.F. langue (<Lat. lingua, tongue)+de, of+Prov'l oc, yes (<Lat. hoc, this)], a dialect akin to French, spoken in the Middle Ages in the southern provinces of France and surviving in one of its branches, Provençal: literally, "language of oc," so called because in these provinces the word for "yes" was oc.

langue d'o-ïl (läng" dō"ēl'), [<O.F. langue (<Lat. lingua, tongue)+de, of+oïl, yes (<Lat. hoc illud, this (is) that)], a French dialect of the Middle Ages, also called Old French, which was spoken in the provinces of France north of the Loire River, and from which modern French is mainly derived: literally, "language of oïl," so called because in these provinces the word for "yes" was oïl, later oui.

lan-guet (läng'gwẽt), n. [<Fr. languette, little tongue], a little tongue, or tonguelike object or implement, as the reed of a wood-wind instrument, the flat plate opposite the mouth of an organ pipe, a tongue of land, etc. Also, lan'guette.

lan-guid (läng'gwid), adj. [<Lat. languidus<languēre, to languish], 1, drooping; weak, as from exhaustion; 2, slow; spiritless; uninterested; apathetic; 3, feeble; without force.—adv. lan'guid-ly.—n. lan'guid-ness.

Syn. faint, flagging, listless, sluggish, inert, dull, wearied.—Ant. active, eager, vigorous, energetic, fresh.

lan-guish (läng'gwish), v.i. [<Fr. languir<Lat. languēre, to languish], 1, to lose strength or animation; become slack or feeble; fail; fade; flag; pine; 2, to droop or pine away, as with longing; 3, to show an affected weariness or a sentimental tenderness.—n. lan'guish-ment.—adv. lan'guish-ing-ly.

lan-guor (läng'gẽr; läng'gwẽr), n. [<Lat. languor, faintness], 1, weariness of body or depression of mind, as the result of exertion; lassitude; listlessness; 2, dreamy indolence; 3, dulness; inertness; slackness.—adj. lan'guor-ous.—adv. lan'guor-ous-ly.

lan-iard (lăn'yẽrd), n. [see lanyard], Naut., a small rope or cord used on shipboard; Mil., a cord used in firing cannon. See lan'yard, Pfd. S.

la-nif-er-ous (lā-nĭf'ẽr-ûs), adj. [<Lat. lana, wool+ferre, to bear], wool-bearing; woolly; covered with fine hairs resembling wool.

la-nig-er-ous (lā-nĭj'ẽr-ûs), adj. [<Lat. lana, wool+gerere, to carry], wool-bearing; woolly; covered with fine, woolly hair.

lank (lăngk), adj. [<A.S. hlanc, slender], 1, lean; not well filled out; shrunken; thin; as, a man with a tall, lank figure; 2, long, and without curl or wave, as hair.—n. lank'ness.

Syn. gaunt, thin, spare, meager, bony. (See lean.)

lank-y (lăngk'ĭ), adj. [comp. -ier, superl. -iest], lean; gaunt; tall and spare; loose-jointed or awkward.—n. lank'i-ness.

lan-o-lin (lăn'ō-lĭn), n. [<Lat. lana, wool+oleum, oil], a fatty substance obtained from sheep's wool, used, when purified, as the basis for various ointments: also called wool fat. Also, lan'o-line.

lans-downe (lănz'doun), n. [<Lansdowne, Pennsylvania, residence of manufacturer], a finely woven silk and wool fabric, used as dress goods.

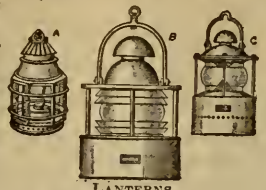
lans-que-net (lăns'kẽ-nĕt), n. [Fr.<Ger. landsknecht, mercenary soldier<land, country+knecht, servant], 1, a mercenary foot soldier, especially a pikeman, formerly common in European armies; 2, a gambling game played with cards.

lan-ta-na (lăn-tā′nȧ; lăn-tä′nȧ), n. [L.L.: name used by Linnæus for this shrub], Bot., any of a genus (Lantana) of shrubs of the vervain family, growing mainly in tropical and subtropical America and bearing spikes or heads of red and yellow or orange, or white flowers.

lan-tern (lăn′tẽrn), n. [<Lat. lanterna<Gk. lamptēr, torch<lampein, to shine], 1, a lamp or other illuminating device, as a transparent case inclosing a candle, chiefly for use out of doors, so constructed that it can be carried about, or if fixed, as to a wall or post, will burn without being extinguished by the wind or weather; 2, the room in a lighthouse containing the lamp; 3, any of various structures similar in shape or purpose: Arch., 1, an open, towerlike structure set on the roof of a building, as of a cathedral, to give light and air to the interior; 2, a small cupola or dome surmounting a larger one.



LANTERNS
A, post; B, range light; C, riding light.

lan-tern-jawed (lăn′tẽrn-jôd″), adj. having a long, thin face, with the suggestion of hollow cheeks and prominent jaws.

lan-tha-num (lăn′thȧ-nŭm), n. [<Gk. lanthanein, to lurk: so called because of late discovery], Chem., a somewhat rare grayish white metallic element [symbol La] of the cerium group, the compounds of which are used in making incandescent gas mantles. Also, lan-tha′ni-um (-thā′nĭ-ŭm).

lant-horn (lănt′hôrn; lăn′tẽrn), n. [<lantern, influenced by horn, material of early lanterns], Archaic, a lantern. See lan′tern, Pfd. S.

la-nu-gi-nous (lȧ-nū′jĭ-nŭs), adj. [<Lat. lanugo (-inis), woolly substance<lana, wool], covered with delicate, soft hair or down, as the leaves of some plants. Also, la-nu′gi-nose (lȧ-nū′jĭ-nōs).

lan-yard (lăn′yȧrd), n. [<earlier lannier<Fr. lanière, leather band, influenced by yard, a spar], Naut., a small line used as a fastening on shipboard, especially in extending or tightening the stays and shrouds; Mil., a strong line with a hook attached, used in firing a certain type of cannon. Also, lan′iard.

La-oc-o-ön (lā-ŏk′ō-ŏn), n. [<Gk.], 1, Class. Myth., a priest of Apollo at Troy, who incurred the wrath of Athena by warning the Trojans against the wooden horse, and was thereupon, with his two sons, strangled by two serpents which Athena summoned from the sea; 2, a famous group of statuary, portraying Laocoön and his sons in the coils of the serpents.

La-od-a-mi-a (lā-ŏd″ȧ-mĭ′ȧ), n. [<Gk.], Gk. Myth., the wife of Protesilaus, who won permission of the gods for her husband, the first Greek killed in the Trojan War, to return to life for three hours, after which she went with him to the underworld.

La-od-i-ce-an (lā-ŏd″ĭ-sē′ăn), adj. [<Gk.], 1, pertaining to Laodicea, a Greek city in Phrygia, Asia Minor, where one of the very early Christian churches was established; 2, indifferent, or lukewarm, as in religion (Rev. 3:14–16):—n. 1, an inhabitant of Laodicea; 2, a lukewarm person.

La-om-e-don (lā-ŏm′ē-dŏn), n. [<Gk.], Gk. Myth., founder and first king of Troy, and father of Priam.

¹lap (lăp), n. [<A.S. lappa, something hanging loosely], 1, Obs., the loose or hanging part of a garment, which may be doubled over; especially, the skirt of a coat or gown; 2, that part of the clothing that rests upon the thighs and knees of a person in a sitting position; the part of the body thus covered; 3, a place for supporting, sheltering, or rearing; 4, that part of any object, as a shingle, that lies upon or extends over another; the state of being so extended over something else; the measure or degree of such extension; as, a lap of four inches; 5, one circuit of a race course where several circuits constitute a race; also, one length in a straight race course; 6, a single turn, as of rope, thread, or the like, about a drum, reel, or spool; 7, in some games, the points won in excess of the number necessary to win: so called if counted in the score of the next game: Mech., a revolving disk used in cutting gems, in polishing, or the like:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. lapped (lăpt), p.pr. lapping], 1, to fold over, as cloth; wrap, as paper about a package; 2, to hold as if in one's lap; as, lapped in luxury; 3, to place over or alongside of something else so as partly to cover it; also, to come to such a position over or beside; 4, in racing, to get ahead of by a lap; 5, to cut or polish with a lap, as gems:—v.i. 1, to be folded; as, the sleeve laps back; 2, to lie partly over something; as, the boards lap; 3, to project beyond something.

1, 2, 3, courses of shingles. The exposed part of each course is the gauge.

²lap (lăp), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. lapped (lăpt), p.pr. lapping], [<A.S. lapian, to lick up], 1, to lick up, or take up with the tongue, as a liquid; 2, to wash or splash gently against, as do waves:—v.i. 1, to take up a liquid with the tongue, as do cats and dogs; 2, to make a sound like that of taking up liquid with the tongue; splash gently; ripple:—n. 1, the act or manner of taking up liquids with the tongue; 2, a sound of washing or rippling, as of wavelets; 3, any liquid intended to be licked up, as milk or soup for cats and dogs: Slang, a beverage; especially, an alcoholic beverage.

lap-board (lăp′bōrd″), n. [¹*lap*+board], a board laid across the lap and used as a table.

lap dog a pet dog small enough to be held in one's lap and carried about in the arms.

la-pel (lȧ-pĕl″), n. [<¹*lap*, q.v.], a part of a garment that folds back; especially, the fold at either side of a coat front, forming a continuation of the collar.

lap-ful (lăp′fo͝ol), n. [pl. -fuls (-fo͝olz)], [see ¹lap], as much as can be held in the lap.

lap-i-da-ry (lăp′ĭ-dā-rĭ), n. [pl. -ries (-rĭz)], [<Lat. lapidarius<lapis (-idis), a stone], 1, one who cuts, polishes, engraves, or sets, jewels; 2, a dealer in, or collector of, precious stones; an expert in, or lover of, the art of working with gems; 3, one who cuts or engraves tombstones:—adj. 1, pertaining to stones or to the art of cutting stones, especially gems; 2, pertaining to, or suitable for, monumental inscriptions; 3, engraved upon stone.

lap-i-des-cent (lăp″ĭ-dĕs′ĕnt), adj. [<Lat. lapidescens (-entis), becoming stone], having the power to petrify another substance:—n. a substance with the power of turning another into stone.

la-pid-i-fy (lȧ-pĭd′ĭ-fī), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -fied (-fīd), p.pr. -fying], [<Fr. lapidifier<Lat. lapis, stone+facere, to make], to petrify; make stonelike:—v.i. to become stonelike.—n. la-pid″i-fi-ca′tion.—adj. lap′i-dif′ic (lăp″ĭ-dĭf′ĭk).

lap-i-dist (lăp′ĭ-dĭst), n. [<Lat. lapis (-idis), stone], one who is an expert in, deals in, or collects, stones, especially precious stones; a student of minerals; a lapidary.

lap-in (lăp′ĭn; lȧ″păṅ′), n. [Fr. = rabbit], a rabbit; also, rabbit fur.

la-pis (lā′pĭs; lăp′ĭs), n. [pl. lapides (lăp′ĭ-dēz)], [Lat. = stone], 1, a stone: generally used in combination with other Latin words; 2, a method of producing figures or dots on calico with indigo.

la-pis laz-u-li (lā′pĭs lăz′ū-lī), [Lat. = stone of azure], an opaque, semiprecious stone of deep azure blue color, a compound silicate of aluminum, calcium, and sodium; also, its color.

Lap-i-thæ (lăp′ĭ-thē), n.pl. [Lat.<Gk.], Gk. Myth., a wild people of Thessaly, whose conflicts with the centaurs, especially one at the wedding feast of King Pirithoüs, where the centaurs tried to carry off the bride and other maidens, were often the subject of ancient poets and sculptors.

Lap-land-er (lăp′lăn-dẽr), n. [Lapp+land], an inhabitant or native of Lapland, a region in the northern part of Scandinavia; a Lapp.

Lapp (lăp), n. [Sw.: perh. a term of contempt], 1, an inhabitant of Lapland, a region in the northern part of Scandinavia; a Laplander; 2, the language of that region.

lap-pet (lăp′ĕt), n. [<¹*lap*, q.v.], 1, a loose, overhanging piece, as of a garment or headdress; 2, a flap or process of flesh, as a bird's wattle or an ear lobe; 3, any hanging part of a thing.

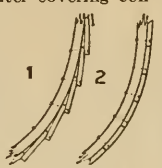
lapse (lăps), v.i. [p.t. and p.p. lapsed (lăpst), p.pr. lapsing], [<Lat. labi (lapsus), to glide], 1, to pass, glide, or slip slowly or gently: mainly figurative; as, to lapse into unconsciousness; buildings lapse into ruin; 2, to fall, deviate, or depart, as from a moral standard or ideal; commit a fault through negligence; fall into error: Eccl., in the early church, to backslide, or to deny the faith under persecution; Law, to terminate or revert, as a privilege, right, title, etc., through failure of the holder to observe the contingent terms:—n. 1, a slipping; gliding; slow or gentle passing, as of water or time, or as from one condition or state to another, usually lower or worse; 2, an interval; period; as, after the lapse of centuries; 3, a slip, as of memory, tongue, or pen; a slight deviation from what is usual or right; a slight fault; 4, a passing into ruin or disuse; as, the lapse of freedom of speech: Law, the termination of a claim, right, or the like, through some negligence or failure to exercise it; Eccl., a falling away from the true faith; apostasy.

Syn., n. default, error, mistake, deviation, decline.

lap-stone (lăp′stōn″), n. [¹*lap* + stone], a stone, held in the lap, upon which shoemakers hammer leather to harden or toughen it.

lap-streak (lăp′strēk″), adj. [¹*lap* + streak], Naut., having a shell or outer covering constructed of planks whose edges overlap like clapboards on a house; clinker-built: said of a boat.



LAPSTREAK

Lapstreak, or clinker-built (1), and carvel-built (2) construction of boat planking.

lap-wing (lăp′wing″), n. [< A.S. hlēapwince < hlēapan, to leap + wincian, to waver: with reference to flight], Ornith., any of several Old World ployerlike birds, especially one species (Vanellus vanellus) often called pewit.

lar-board (lär′bōrd; lär′bērd), n. [< M.E. ladde borde (ladde, lathe, changed to lar by influence of starboard) < A.S. hladan, to load + borde, side of ship], Naut., the left side of a ship as one faces the bow; the port side:—adj. designating, or pertaining to, the left side of a ship: now replaced by port: opposite of starboard.

lar-ce-ner (lär′sē-nēr), n. [see larceny], a thief; one who commits theft or larceny.

lar-ce-ny (lär′sē-nĭ), n. [pl. -nies (-nĭz)], [< Fr. larcin < Lat. latrocinium < latro, robber], Law, the unlawful taking away of another's property, with intent to defraud and to deprive him of its use; theft: grand larceny, theft of a relatively serious character, according to the circumstances of the theft, or the character or value of the property stolen, as variously defined by statutes: petit larceny, rheft of a relatively unimportant character: also, petty larceny.—adj. lar′ce-nous.

larch (lärch), n. [< Ger. lärche < Lat. larix (-icis), larch], 1, any of a genus (Larix) of graceful, cone-bearing trees of the pine family, with short, needlelike, deciduous leaves; 2, the wood of any of these trees, usually of great durability.

lard (lärd), n. [< Fr. larder < Lat. lardum, fat], a semisolid fat or grease, prepared by drawing off the liquid from melted hog's fat and letting it cool:—v.t. 1, to smear with fat or grease; 2, to enrich by the insertion of strips of pork or bacon before roasting; 3, to enrich; garnish; decorate; as, to lard a speech with compliments and metaphors.

lard-er (lär′dēr), n. 1, the provisions of a household; 2, the place where they are kept.

lard oil a colorless and translucent oil expressed from hog's lard and consisting largely of olein: used as a lubricant, illuminant, and adulterant.

la-res (lā′rēz), n.pl. [sing. lar (lär); Eng. pl. lars (lärz)], [Lat. = household gods], Rom. Antiq., originally, gods or spirits of particular localities, as of the home, fields, crossroads, or the like; later, the kindly spirits of ancestors considered as household gods: lares et penates (ēt pē-nā′tēz), the household gods of an establishment as a group, comprising the lares, or spirits of ancestors, and penates, or spirits of the storeroom, worshiped in association with Vesta, goddess of the hearth and the guardian spirit of the establishment.

large (lärj), adj. [comp. larger, superl. largest], [< Lat. largus, copious], 1, great in size; bulky; extensive; big; 2, broad in range or scope; comprehensive; as, large authority; large discretion; 3, broad and liberal in understanding or sympathy; generous; munificent: now obsolete or archaic except in a few phrases such as, large charity; large tolerance; a large mind: Naut., fair; favorable: said of the wind: at large, 1, in full; in detail; as, to discuss a subject at large; 2, free; unrestrained; unconfined; as, the thief is still at large; 3, chosen to represent a whole state or section composed of many districts, rather than a specified district: used of electors, political representatives, or the like: by and large, in general; in all respects.—adv. large′ly.—n. large′ness.

Syn. big, broad, abundant, bulky, colossal, enormous, huge, massive, spacious, great, ample, immense.

lar-gess (lär′jĕs), n. [< Fr. largesse < Lat. largus, copious], liberal or generous giving; a generous gift, especially one bestowed by some great personage on an occasion of public festivity or rejoicing: Archaic, liberality; bounty. Also, lar′gesse.

Syn. present, gratuity, gift, bestowal, dole. (See boon.)

lar-ghet-to (lär-gĕt′tō), adj. [It. = somewhat slow], Mus., moderately slow; in a tempo between largo and adagio:—adv. moderately slowly:—n. a passage requiring moderately slow tempo.

lar-go (lär′gō), adj. [It. = slow], Mus., slow:—adv. slowly:—n. a musical composition or passage requiring slow tempo and a solemn style.

lar-i-at (lăr′ĭ-ăt), n. [< Sp. la reata < reatar, to tie again], 1, a rope with a running noose, for catching horses or cattle; a lasso; 2, a rope for picketing or tethering horses, mules, or cattle.

la-rith-mics (lă-rĭth′mĭks), n.pl. used as sing. [< Gk. laos, people + arithmos, number], the study of population from the numerical side.

¹lark (lärk), n. [< A.S. lāferce, lark], 1, any of various small singing birds (family Alaudidæ), mostly inhabiting the Old World; especially, the skylark, noted for its song, and the American horned lark; 2, any of various birds resembling larks, but classified in some other family, as the meadow lark and titlark.

²lark (lärk), n. [19th cent.: source uncertain], Colloq., a frolic; spree; hilarious time; an amusing adventure:—v.i. to frolic; have a hilarious time:—v.t. to make sport of; tease.

lark-spur (lärk′spûr), n. [¹*lark* + spur], any of a genus (Delphinium) of plants, many of which are cultivated for their showy spikes or racemes of flowers, generally pink or blue: so called because the calyx has a spur resembling a lark's long back claw.

lar-ri-gan (lăr′ĭ-găn), n. [Can.], in Canada and northern United States, a high moccasin of oil-tanned hide: used by lumbermen and trappers.

lar-ri-kin (lăr′ĭ-kĭn), n. [Australian slang], a rowdy:—adj. disorderly; rowdyish.

lar-rup (lăr′ŭp), v.t. [dial. or colloq.: cf. Du. larp, a lash], Colloq., to beat; thrash soundly.

lar-va (lär′vă), n. [pl. -væ (-vē)], [Lat. = ghost; mask], Zoöl., the immature, often wormlike, form of insects that undergo metamorphosis, in the stage between the egg and the pupa (see metamorphosis, illus.); also, the early form of any animal which while immature, and during its development, is structurally unlike its parent; hence, an animal in this form, as a caterpillar or tadpole.—adj. lar′val.

la-ryn-ge-al (lă-rĭn′jē-ăl; lăr″ĭn-jē′ăl), adj. [see larynx], Anat., pertaining to, or situated near, the larynx, or upper end of the windpipe.

lar-yn-gi-tis (lăr″ĭn-jī′tĭs), n. Pathol., inflammation of the larynx, or upper end of the windpipe.—adj. lar″yn-git′ic (lăr″ĭn-jĭt′ĭk).

lar-yn-gol-o-gy (lăr″ĭng-gŏl′ō-jĭ), n. [< Gk. larugx, larynx + -logia, a study], the study of the structure, functions, and treatment of the larynx.—n. lar″yn-gol′o-gist.—adj. la-ryn″go-log′i-cal.

la-ryn-go-scope (lă-rĭng′gō-skōp), n. [< Gk. larugx, larynx + skopein, to see], Surg., an instrument for visually examining the larynx.—n. lar″yn-gos′co-py (-gŏs′kō-pĭ).

lar-yn-got-o-my (lăr″ĭng-gŏt′ō-mĭ), n. [< Gk. larugx, larynx + temnein, to cut], Surg., a cutting into the larynx to remove an obstruction or to relieve difficult breathing.

lar-ynx (lăr′ĭngks), n. [pl. larynges (lă-rĭn′jēz)], [< Gk. larugx, larynx], Anat., the upper part of the windpipe, a boxlike formation of cartilage and muscles in the throat, containing the vocal cords, a projection on which constitutes the Adam's apple; the organ of voice (see bronchi, vocal, illus.).

las-car (lăs′kär; lăs-kär′), n. [< Hind. lashkarī, one attached to an army < lashkar, army], 1, an East Indian sailor, especially in a British ship; 2, an East Indian army servant or artilleryman of low rank.

las-civ-i-ous (lă-sĭv′ĭ-ŭs), adj. [< Lat. lascivus, wanton], 1, lustful; lewd; wanton, as persons or desires; 2, tending to excite lewd or wanton thoughts or emotions, as objects or pictures.—adv. las-civ′i-ous-ly.—n. las-civ′i-ous-ness.

Syn. unchaste, impure, lewd, licentious, sensual, salacious.—Ant. chaste, pure, continent, restrained.

¹lash (lăsh), v.t. [imit.], 1, to beat or strike violently, as with a whip or thong; flog; scourge; also, to rush, dash against; 2, hence, to stir up or arouse by a strong emotional appeal; as, to lash an audience to fury; 3, to rebuke, censure, satirize, or berate severely: Archaic, to fling recklessly: with out or up:—v.i. 1, to ply the whip; 2, to use strongly censuring language; 3, to rush; dash; move quickly; burst out, as flames:—n. 1, a thong; the flexible part of a whip; 2, a stroke of a whip; 3, a satiric attack; a severe or cutting rebuke; 4, one of the little hairs on the edge of an eyelid; an eyelash; 5, in textile weaving, a device for controlling certain groups of threads in the fabric, for the formation of the pattern or figure.

²lash (lăsh), v.t. [source uncertain], to fasten or bind with a cord or rope.

lash-er (lăsh′ĕr), n. [see ¹lash], 1, one who whips or flogs; 2, in England, the water rushing into a weir, or the pool below the weir; also, the weir itself.

lash-ing (lăsh'ĭng), n. [see ¹lash]. 1, the act or process of whipping, or of administering a cutting rebuke; 2, a sharp rebuke or reproof; 3, [see ²lash], the act or process of binding; 4, a cord, thong, or the like, used for tying or binding.

lass (lăs), n. [<M.E. lasce, girl, maiden], Sc., 1, a girl; usually, a country girl; 2, a sweetheart; 3, a serving maid.

las-sie (lăs'ĭ), n. [dim. of lass], Sc., a girl or young woman; a young lass: often affectionate.

las-si-tude (lăs'ĭ-tūd), n. [<Lat. lassitudo, weariness], weariness; lack of energy.

Syn. languor, debility, exhaustion, droopiness, indifference.—Ant. vigor, energy, vitality, freshness, briskness.

las-so (lăs'ō), n. [pl. -sos (-ōz)], [<Sp. lazo, a lace], a rope, usually of hide, with a running noose, used for catching wild horses and cattle; a lariat:—v.t. [p.t. and p. p. -soed (-ōd), p.pr. -soing], to catch (cattle, horses, or the like) with a rope, by slinging a running noose over the head or leg.—n. las'so-er.

¹last (lăst), n. [<A.S. læst, boot], a wooden model of the foot on which shoes are shaped or fitted; also, a metal form inserted into shoes, against which nails are clinched:—v.t. to shape or mold, as boots or shoes, about a model of a foot.

²last (lăst), n. [<A.S. hlæst, a load], Rare, 1, a commercial measure of weight or quantity, varying with different localities and commodities: of fish or ashes, 12 barrels; of gunpowder, 24 barrels, each containing 100 pounds; of wool, 12 sacks; 2, a measure of a ship's capacity: approximately two tons.

³last (lăst), adj. [superl. of late], [<A.S. latost, superl. of læt, late], 1, being at the end; after all others, in a given group, in respect to time, place, degree, order of succession, or the like; final; as, the last man to volunteer; to spend one's last dollar; 2, next before the present: as, last year; 3, least likely; least fitted; as, he is the last man to do such a job well; 4, authoritative; conclusive; final; as, the last word of science; 5, utmost; supreme; as, of the last importance: at last, finally; at the end of a long period, as of waiting:—adv. 1, after all the others; as, last came the king; 2, on the occasion, or at the time, next preceding the present; as, I last heard her sing in "Faust"; 3, in conclusion; finally; at the end:—n. the end; the final act or stage; conclusion.

Syn., adj. final, latest, ultimate, conclusive. That is last which comes after all others or comes at the end; as, the last company in the parade; the last trolley; trust a woman to have the last word. Last is also used to designate that which is nearest now or the present; as, last week; it designates, too, the most recent; as, his last story; her last baby. Latest differs from last as earliest differs from first; latest is applied only to the order of time; the latest news is up to the last minute; the latest trolley may also be the last trolley; but "his latest book" may bear a different sense from "his last book." Ultimate designates that beyond which nothing more exists or is possible; ultimate may refer to the remote future, knowledge yet unplumbed, and the like; as, the ultimate object, result, destiny; or it may refer to the remote past, or all that which has preceded regarded as a factor; as, the ultimate cause; ultimate source; or it may describe the last that can be obtained, delved into, or traced out; as, ultimate analysis. That is final which comes at the end, is terminating, is followed or can be followed by nothing else; the final performance of a play is the last performance; the final session of Congress; the final cause is, specifically, the end or purpose for which anything is done. That is conclusive which is convincing or decisive; a conclusive argument ends the discussion; a conclusive reply decides a matter one way or the other.

⁴last (lăst), v.i. [<A.S. læstan, to fulfil], 1, to continue in time or in existence; 2, to be sufficient for a given time; hold out; as, enough supplies to last till tomorrow; 3, to endure; wear well.

last-ing (lăst'ĭng), p.adj. wearing well; enduring; permanent:—n. a durable woolen or worsted fabric used for the uppers of women's shoes, for covering buttons, and for similar purposes.—adv. last'ing-ly.—n. last'ing-ness.

LATCH

Syn., adj. durable, stable. (See permanent.)

last-ly (lăst'lĭ), adv. [see ³last], finally; in conclusion; at the end.

lat (lăt), n. [<Latvia, name of country], the gold monetary unit of Latvia, equivalent to 19.3 cents.

lat. abbr. latitude: used especially in giving positions at sea:—Lat., Latin (also, L.).

latch (lăch), n. [<O.F. lache, lace, or <A.S. læccan, to grasp], a fastening device for a door or gate, often not requiring a key (see illus. preceding column).—v.t. to secure or fasten with a catch:—v.i. to be fastened or secured by a catch.

latch-et (lăch'ĕt; lăch'ĭt), n. [<O.F. lachet, dim. of lache, lace], a shoe string; a strip of leather that fastens a sandal.

latch-key (lăch'kē"), n. [latch+key], a key for raising the catch, or lock, of a gate or door, on the side where the knob does not move the latch; hence, any key to a door of a house.

latch-string (lăch'strĭng"), n. [latch+string], a cord for raising a door catch, usually run through a hole in the door above the latch, so that the door can be unfastened from the outside.

late (lāt), adj. [comp. later (lāt'ẽr) or latter (lăt'ẽr), superl. latest or last], [<A.S. læt, late <O.Teut. source], 1, coming, occurring, or acting, after the usual time; tardy; long delayed; as, late trains; a late spring; a late riser; 2, occurring far on toward the end or close; as, a late hour of the day; 3, of recent date; as, a late occurrence; 4, formerly in office; as, the late judge; also, deceased; 5, just preceding the present member of a series; 6, lasting far into the night; as, late parties:—adv. 1, after the suitable, appointed, or customary time; as, to get up late; 2, formerly, but no longer; 3, far into the day, night, week, or the like; as, to work early and late: Poet. or Archaic, recently; as, "I sent thee late a rosy wreath": of late, recently; as, I have not seen you of late.—n. late'ness.

LATCH-STRING (a)

Syn., adj. tardy, slow, delayed. (See modern.)

lat-e-bra (lăt'ẽ-brȧ), n. [Lat.=a hiding place, retreat], Embryol., in an egg, the flask-shaped extension of the white yolk to the center of the yellow yolk (see ¹egg, illus.).

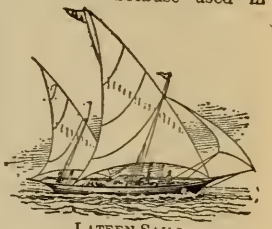
la-teen sail (lă-tēn'; sāl): [<Fr. (voile) latine, Latin Mediterranean], Naut., a three-cornered sail attached to a yard which is crossed obliquely on a low mast, raking forward.



LATEEN SAILS

Late Lat-in a form of Latin which followed the Latin of the Classical period, from about A.D. 200 to about A.D. 600: distinguished from Low Latin.—abbr. L.L.; LL.

late-ly (lāt'lĭ), adv. [<A.S. læt-līce<læt, late], a short time ago; recently; of late.

la-ten-cy (lā'tẽn-sĭ), n. [see latent], the state of being present, but not active or apparent.

la-tent (lā'tẽnt), adj. [<Lat. latens (-entis), hidden], present in some form, but not fully developed or active; concealed; not apparent; as, latent disease germs: latent heat, Phys., heat which is expended, without producing an increase in temperature, in the transformation of a solid into a liquid or gas or of a liquid into a gas, and which is evolved in the reverse transformation.—adv. la'tent-ly.

Syn. dormant, quiescent, hidden, potential, invisible.—Ant. manifest, operative, developed.

lat-er (lāt'ẽr), adj. comparative of late:—adv. after a lapse of time.

lat-er-al (lăt'ẽr-ăl), adj. [<Lat. latus (lateris), side], 1, pertaining to, proceeding from, or acting upon, the side; as, lateral pressure; 2, in genealogy, descended from a brother or sister of a person in the direct line of descent; as, a lateral branch of the family: Biol., growing at the side:—n. anything situated or growing at the side.—adv. lat'er-al-ly.

Lat-er-an (lăt'ẽr-ăn), n. [<Lat. Lateranus, Roman family name], 1, the cathedral church of St. John Lateran, in Rome, ranking above all other Roman Catholic churches; 2, the palace adjoining it, formerly the residence of the popes, now a museum.

lat-est (lāt'ĕst), adj. and adv. [superl. of late], of the most recent occurrence: Archaic, last.

Syn., adj. (see ³last).

la-tex (lā'tĕks), n. [Lat.=liquid], Bot., a milky juice secreted by certain plants, as the rubber tree.

lath (lăth), n. [pl. laths (lăthz)], [<M.E. latthe, perh. <A.S. lætt, lath], Building, one of the thin, narrow strips of wood nailed to the framework of a house to support plaster; also, coarse-meshed woven wire or perforated sheet metal used similarly:—v.t. to cover, as a framework, with laths, as for a foundation for plastering.—n. lath'er (lăth'ẽr).

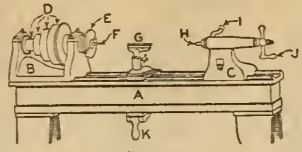
lathe (lāth), n. [pl. lathes (lāthz)], [source uncertain: prob. < Scand.: cf. Da. -lad, frame], Mech. a machine by which articles of wood or metal are held and shaped, by turning against a tool thrust against the object.



LATHE
A, bed; B, headstock; C, tailstock; D, cone-driving pulley; E, face plate; F, live center; G, tool rest; H, dead center; I, dead-center clamp handle; J, dead-center adjusting handle; K, cross slide clamp.

lath-er (lāth'ėr), n. [< A.S. lēathor, washing soda < O. Teut. source], 1, foam or froth made from soap and water; 2, foam produced by sweat, as of horses:—v.i. to form foam or suds:—v.t. to cover with froth or foam, as in shaving.—n. lath'er-er.—adj. lath'er-y.

lath-ing (lāth'iŋg), n. [see lath], 1, the act or process of covering a framework with narrow thin strips of wood or metal as a foundation for plastering; 2, strips of wood or metal so placed; lath work.

lath-y (lāth'ī), adj. [comp. -ier, superl. -iest], long and slender, like a lath or thin strip of wood.

Lat-in (lăt'in), adj. [< Lat. Latinus, Latin], 1, pertaining to Latium, a district of ancient Italy of which Rome was the capital, or to its inhabitants, the Latins; as, the Latin language; Latin customs; 2, designating, pertaining to, or written in, the language of the Latins, or Romans; as, a Latin grammar; Latin literature; 3, pertaining to the Roman Catholic Church, as opposed to the Greek Church: Latin cross, a figure like a plus sign with the lower vertical arm somewhat prolonged (see cross, illus.): Latin languages, the languages which in the main are derived from classical Latin, as Italian, French, Spanish, Portuguese, Provençal, and Rumanian: Latin peoples, Latin races, those peoples, or nations, whose languages are mainly derived from classical Latin, and whose culture and civilization are akin to ancient Roman civilization: Latin quarter, a section of Paris, south of the Seine, where many students lodge: Latin Union, formerly, a union of several European countries speaking Latin languages, for the regulation of their coinage:—n. 1, an inhabitant of ancient Latium or Rome; 2, the language of ancient Latium or Rome, or the literature written in that language; 3, one whose language is derived from the Latin, as a Frenchman, Spaniard, etc.; 4, a member of the Roman Catholic Church.

Lat-in-ism (lăt'in-izm), n. an expression or idiom belonging peculiarly to the Latin language; in another language, an expression or construction formed according to a Latin model.

Lat-in-ist (lăt'in-ist), n. one learned in Latin; a student of Latin.

La-tin-i-ty (lă-tin'i-ti), n. manner or style in the use of the Latin language; the Latin language with respect to construction or style.

Lat-in-ize (lăt'in-īz), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -ized (-īzd), p.pr. -izing], 1, to give Latin style, endings, or characteristics, to; 2, to translate into Latin:—v.i. to use Latin words and expressions.

lat-ish (lāt'ish), adj. [see late], somewhat after the proper time; a little late or tardy.

lat-i-tude (lăt'i-tūd), n. [< Lat. latitudo (-inis) < latus, broad], 1, literally, breadth; hence, range; extent of applicability; as, your remarks cover a wide latitude of meanings; 2, degree of freedom or independence of rules; as, he was given great latitude in making the arrangements; 3, a region or locality with reference to its distance from the equator; as, cold latitudes: Geog., angular distance north or south of the equator, one degree of latitude on the earth being equivalent to about 69 statute miles; Astron., the angular distance of a heavenly body from the ecliptic, or plane in which the earth moves about the sun: short for celestial latitude.—adj. lat'i-tu'di-nal.

lat-i-tu-di-na-ri-an (lăt'i-tū'di-nā'ri-ăn), adj. not attached strictly to any particular belief or opinion, especially in religious matters; allowing others their own beliefs; as, latitudinarian ministers:—n. 1, one who holds views wide in range or scope or who cares little about forms of creed, worship, or church government; 2, one of a group of English churchmen who, in the 17th century, tried to inculcate a more liberal spirit into the English Church, in order to reunite the dissenters with the Church.—n. lat'i-tu'di-na'ri-an-ism (-izm).

La-to-na (lă-tō'nă), n. [Lat. < Gk. Lētō], Rom. Myth., mother of Apollo and Diana: called Leto by the Greeks.

la-trine (lă-trēn'), n. [Fr. < Lat. latrina < lavatrina < lavare, to wash], a privy, especially one in a camp; often equipped also as a wash room.

lat-ro-cin-y (lăt'rō-sin'i), n. [< Lat. latrocinium, freebooting, robbery], Archaic, highway robbery; brigandage; also, a band of brigands.

lat-ten (lăt'ėn), n. [< O.F. laton, mixed metal], a metallic alloy resembling brass: formerly much used in making church vessels.

lat-ter (lăt'ėr), adj. [comparative of late], [< A.S. lætra, comp. of læt, late], 1, more recent; later; also, pertaining, or belonging, to the end of a period of time; as, the latter part of his life; 2, being the second of two things already mentioned: opposite of former: Obs., last; final: Latter-day Saint, a Mormon.

lat-ter-ly (lăt'ėr-li), adv. 1, recently; 2, toward the end of some period of time, as of life.

lat-tice (lăt'is), n. [< O.F. lattis < laite, lath], 1, openwork made by crossed or interlaced strips of metal or wood; hence, 2, any door, window, gate, or screen, having, or made of, such a network:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -ticed (-ist), p.pr. -ticing], 1, to arrange in a network; 2, to furnish with such openwork.

lat-tice-work (lăt'is-wûrk'), n. [lattice + work], a grill made by crossing or interlacing strips or bars, as of wood or metal.

Lat-vi-an (lăt'vi-ăn), adj. [< name of country], pertaining to Latvia; Lettish.

laud (lôd), v.t. [< Lat. laus (laudis), praise], to praise highly; extol:—n. 1, praise; exaltation; 2, a hymn extolling God; a song of praise: pl. Eccl., a service of praise, usually held in the early morning.

laud-a-ble (lôd'ă-bl), adj. [< Lat. laudare, to praise], commendable; worthy of praise; as, a laudable effort.—n. laud'a-bil'i-ty.—n. laud'a-ble-ness.—adv. laud'a-bly.

lau-da-num (lô'dă-nŭm; lŏd'n-ŭm; n. [perh. < Lat. ladanum, gum resin], Med., tincture of opium: a poisonous, narcotic drug.

lau-da-tion (lô-dā'shŭn), n. [see laud], praise; the act of praising.

Syn. eulogy, commendation, encomium, extolment.

laud-a-to-ry (lôd'ă-tō-ri), adj. pertaining to praise; expressing praise; eulogizing.

laugh (lăf), n. [< A.S. hlehhan, to laugh < O.Teut. source], the expression of mirth, ridicule, derision, or the like, by convulsive sounds accompanied by contortions of the face, etc.:—v.i. 1, to express merriment in such a way; 2, to be happy; appear gay or pleasant; 3, to jeer: with at:—v.t. 1, to express or utter, with laughter; 2, to move or affect by merriment or ridicule; as, they laughed her out of her ill-temper.—n. laugh'er.

laugh-a-ble (lăf'ă-bl), adj. mirth-provoking; ridiculous; causing hilarity; funny.—n. laugh'a-ble-ness.—adv. laugh'a-bly.

Syn. droll, comical, amusing, witty, facetious, absurd, humorous; queer, odd. (See ludicrous.)

laugh-ing (lăf'iŋg), p.adj. accompanied with gaiety; capable of being treated lightly without serious consequences; as, a laughing matter.

laugh-ing gas Chem., nitrous oxide, a colorless gas with a slightly sweetish smell, producing, when inhaled, exhilaration, sometimes laughter, and afterwards insensibility: used as an anæsthetic.

laugh-ing-stock (lăf'iŋ-stŏk'), n. [laugh + stock], a person or object generally ridiculed; a butt.

laugh-ter (lăf'tėr), n. [see laugh], 1, the facial movements and convulsive sounds provoked by merriment, keen amusement, derision, etc.; 2, the cause for, or object of, merriment or jest; a butt.

¹launch (lănch; lônch), v.t. [< O.N.F. lancher < Lat. lanceare, to throw a lance < lancea, a lance], 1, to hurl, as a weapon; throw; 2, to cause to glide into the water, as a vessel; 3, to send forth; start, as an enterprise; set, as a person, on a course:—v.i. (often with forth, out, or into), 1, to put to sea; 2, to enter on a new career or course; 3, to plunge; start with vigor; as, she launched into a torrent of abuse:—n. 1, the sliding of a ship from the ways into the water; 2, the act causing this movement.

²launch (lănch; lônch), n. [< Sp. lancha, pinnace], a large, open, pleasure or passenger boat, usually motor-driven: Naut., the largest of the boats carried by a man-of-war.

laun-der (lăn'dėr; lôn'dėr), v.t. [< O.F. larandier < Lat. lavare, to wash], to wash and iron, as garments:—v.i. to be washable; as, this silk launders well.—n. laun'der-er.

laun-dress (lăn'drės; lôn'drės), n. a woman who washes and irons clothes.

laun-dry (lăn'dri; lôn'dri), n. [pl. -dries (-driz)], 1, a room or building where clothes are washed and ironed; 2, the act of washing and ironing: Colloq., articles sent to be washed.

Laun-fal (län'făl; lôn'făl), n. [O.F. or A.F.], in medieval romance, a knight of the Round Table: subject of Lowell's "The Vision of Sir Launfal."

Lau-ra-ce-æ (lô-rā'sē-ē), n.pl. [< Lat. laurus, laurel tree], Bot., a widespread family of shrubs or trees including laurel, sassafras, cinnamon, and others, many of which have medicinal or aromatic properties.—adj. lau-ra'ceous (lô-rā'shŭs).

lau-re-ate (lô'rē-āt), adj. [< Lat. laureatus, crowned with laurel], 1, made of laurel; 2, decked or crowned with laurel; hence, worthy of honor:—n. one crowned with laurel: poet laureate, the official court poet of Great Britain.—n. lau're-ate-ship".

lau-rel (lô'rĕl; lŏr'ĕl), n. [< Fr. laurier < O.F. lor < Lat. laurus, laurel tree], 1, an aromatic evergreen shrub (Laurus nobilis) of southern Europe, used by the ancient Greeks as a symbol of fame and honor: also called bay tree; sweet bay; etc.; 2, any of several shrubs of the heath family; especially, the flowering mountain laurel (for colored illus. see flower); 3, any of several ornamental deciduous or evergreen shrubs, native or imported; 4, a crown or wreath of bay given as a prize or honor; hence, honor or distinction: usually pl.—adj. lau'reled; lau'relled.

Lau-ren-ti-an (lô-rĕn'shĭ-ăn; -shăn), adj. [< O.F. < Lat. Laurentum, town in Latium], pertaining to the St. Lawrence River: Geol., designating, or pertaining to, the later period of the Archæan era (see geology, chart):—n. Geol., the Laurentian period.

lau-rus-tine (lô'rŭs-tīn), n. [< L.L. < Lat. laurus, laurel tree + tinus, shrub], an evergreen, flowering garden shrub (Viburnum tinus) of the Mediterranean region, having oblong leaves.

lau-wine (lô'wĭn; lou-vē'nē), n. [Ger. pl. lauwinen (lou-vē'nĕn)], [Ger. = avalanche], a sliding mass of ice and snow, or of rocks; an avalanche.

la-va (lä'vä), n. [It. < Lat. lavare, to wash], 1, melted rock such as that which is thrown from a volcano; 2, such substance solidified by cooling.

la-va-bo (lä-vä'bō), n. [pl. -bos (-bōs)], [Lat. = I shall wash: first word of Ps. 26:6], 1, the washing place in a monastery; 2, a washbasin: pl. a lavatory or place for washing: Eccl., the ceremonial washing of hands by the priest before the consecration of the Host; also, the towel or basin used for this purpose.

lav-age (lăv'äj; lä'vàzh'), n. [Fr. = a washing < laver, to wash], the act of washing: Med., the washing out of the stomach or large intestine.

lav-a-liere (lăv"ä-lēr"), n. [Fr. = knot of a cravat, perh. < Louise de La Vallière, mistress of Louis XIV], a lady's flat, round, or oval pendant, and the chain on which it is worn around the neck. Also, lav'a-lier'; la"val"lière' (lä"vä'lyâr').

la-van-de-ra (lä"vän-thā'rä), n. [Sp. = washerwoman], in Spanish-speaking countries, a washerwoman; laundress.

lav-a-to-ry (lăv'ä-tō-rĭ), n. [pl. -tories (-rĭz)], [< Lat. lavatorium, lavatory < lavare, to wash], 1, a room with conveniences for washing the hands and face; a retiring room; 2, a washbasin.

[1]lave (lāv), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. laved (lāvd), p.pr. laving], [< A.S. lafian, to pour, and < Fr. laver < Lat. lavare, to wash], 1, to bathe oneself; 2, to flow; wash:—v.t. 1, to wash; bathe; 2, to flow gently upon or against, as the sea upon a beach.—n. la-va'tion.

[2]lave (lāv), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. laved (lāvd), p.pr. laving], [< A.S. lafian, to pour], to lift or pour out, as with a ladle; bail out: Obs., to pour out or bestow lavishly:—v.i. Obs., to droop.

[3]lave (lāv), n. [Sc. < A.S. lāf, what is left], Sc., the rest; remainder.

lav-en-der (lăv'ĕn-dẽr), n. [< A.F. lavendre < L.L. lavendula, lavender], 1, a fragrant European plant (Lavandula vera) of the mint family; 2, the oil or perfume obtained from the plant; 3, the pale lilac color of its flowers.

[1]la-ver (lā'vẽr), n. [see [1]lave], Bib., a large vessel for ceremonial ablutions of the priest (Ex. 30: 18): Archaic or Poet., a font; basin; bowl for water.

[2]la-ver (lā'vẽr), n. [Lat., name of water plant], any of various edible, purple seaweeds.

La-ver-na (lä-vûr'nä), n. [Lat.], Rom. Myth., the goddess of thieves, mountebanks, etc.

lav-er-ock (lăv'ẽr-ŭk; lăv'rŭk; lăv'rŭk), n. [see [1]lark], Obs. or Poet., the lark.

lav-ish (lăv'ĭsh), adj. [< obs. n. lavish, profusion < O.F. lavache, deluge of rain], 1, giving or producing profusely; extravagant; prodigal; 2, unstinted; excessive; 3, unrestrained; exuberant: said of speech or action:—v.t. to bestow liberally; squander.—adv. lav'ish-ly.—n. lav'ish-ment.—n. lav'ish-ness.

Syn., adj. wasteful, profuse, bountiful, free-handed.

[1]law (lô), n. [< A.S. lagu, a thing laid down < O.N. lag], 1, a binding rule of action established by authority with the intent of enforcing justice; 2, an enactment of a legislative body; 3, a body of rules or regulations recognized as binding by men or nations, or in courts; 4, the state of society produced by the existence and enforcement of such a body of rules; 5, a rule of action or conduct established by custom and having no legal foundation; as, the laws of courtesy; 6, authoritative injunction; as, to lay down the law; 7, litigation; trial by legal process; as, to go to law; 8, jurisprudence, or the science of legal rules and principles; 9, the legal profession; 10, legal knowledge; as, his law is sound; 11, a correct statement of the invariable occurrence of certain natural phenomena in the same way under specified conditions; as, the law of gravitation; an established principle; 12, in art, sciences, games, or the like, the rules of procedure; recognized usage: Bib., the moral and ceremonial code ascribed to Moses and contained in the first five books of the Old Testament; also, this part of the Scriptures: common law, a system of rules originating in custom rather than in the enactments of a legislative body: parliamentary law, the body of rules recognized as correct for regulating procedure in legislative or deliberative bodies: periodic law, Chem., the statement of the classification of the chemical elements in the order of their atomic weights, as devised by Mendeléeff (see App. I): Roman law, the body of Roman rules or principles accepted by most governments of Continental Europe as the basis of their jurisprudence: statute law, a formal, codified, regularly enacted law:—v.t. Colloq., to prosecute; sue:—v.i. Colloq., to have recourse to law.

Syn., n. edict, decree, code, commandment, enactment, mandate, order, ordinance, statute, regulation.

[2]law (lô), interj. [perh. var. of [2]*la, lo, or corr. of Lord], expressing surprise. Also, laws; la.

law-ful (lô'fo͝ol), adj. [see [1]law], according to established rule or custom; sanctioned by law; legitimate; rightful.—adv. law'ful-ly.—n. law'ful-ness.

Syn. legal, legitimate, authorized, allowable.

law-giv-er (lô'gĭv"ẽr), n. [[1]law + give], one who declares or enacts a law or code of laws, as Moses, Solon, and others; a legislator.

lawk (lôk), interj. [corr. of Lord or alack], Colloq. or Vulgar, expressing astonishment. Also, lawks.

law-less (lô'lĕs), adj. [see [1]law], not obedient to, or controlled by, authority; regardless of law; disorderly; unruly; licentious.—n. law'less-ness.

law-mak-er (lô'māk"ẽr), n. [[1]law + make], one who formulates, or who assists in formulating or enacting, a law; a legislator.

[1]lawn (lôn), n. [prob. < Laon, France, where made], a fine, thin linen or cotton fabric.—adj. lawn'y.

[2]lawn (lôn), n. [< O.F. launde, a plain < O.Celt. source; cf. W. llan, a space], a plot of closely mown grass: Archaic, a woodland glade.—adj. lawn'y.

lawn ten-nis an outdoor game for two, three, or four players: played on a specially planned outdoor court crossed in the middle by a net, over which a ball is played by means of rackets.

DIMENSIONS OF LAWN-TENNIS COURT: NN, net

law-suit (lô'sūt"), n. [[1]law + suit], an action in a court for the settlement of a claim or for the enforcement of a right.

law-yer (lô'yẽr), n. [see [1]law], a member of the legal profession, as an attorney, solicitor, barrister, or the like; one knowing the law well: Bib., one who expounded the law of Moses (Luke 14: 3).

lax (lăks), adj. [< Lat. laxus, loose], 1, not firm or stiff; flabby; slack; 2, weak; not strict; as, lax principles; inexact; careless; not precise; 3, loose or relaxed, as the bowels.—adv. lax'ly.—n. lax'ness.

Syn. yielding, relaxed, dissolute, loose, slack. (See negligent.)—Ant. severe, strict, energetic, heedful.

lax-a-tive (lăk'sä-tĭv), adj. [< Lat. laxare (-atus), to relax], Med., mildly cathartic; aperient; causing the bowels to move: said of a medicine: —n. a mild cathartic medicine.

lax-i-ty (lăk'sĭ-tĭ), n. [see lax], the state or quality of being loose, negligent, or weak.

[1]lay (lā), n. [< O.F. lai, perh. < O.H.G. leich, melody], 1, a lyric or narrative poem meant to be sung; 2, loosely, any song or poem.

[2]lay (lā), adj. [< Fr. lai < Eccl. Lat. < Gk. laikos, of the people], 1, pertaining to, or done by, those outside the clergy; 2, belonging to, or proceeding from, nonmembers of any profession; nonprofessional.

[3]lay (lā), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. laid (lād), p.pr. laying], [< A.S. lecgan, to lay], 1, to place, put, or deposit; cause to lie; 2, to place in orderly fashion, as in layers or rows; 3, to construct by arranging materials according to a plan; as, to lay railroads, foundations, or floors; 4, to bring or beat down; as, the storm laid the crops; a blow laid him low; 5, to cause to be quiet or to subside; calm; as, to lay the dust; to lay a ghost; 6, to apply; as, to lay advice to heart; cause to be in a given position or condition; as, to lay bare a secret; lay waste a country; 7, to locate, as a scene; 8, to place things on or in, for a special purpose; as, to lay a table for a meal; 9, to impose, as a tax, penalty, or burden; 10, to ascribe or impute; as, to lay the blame of an accident at one's door; 11, to present for consideration or conference, as a claim or facts; 12, to devise, as a plan or plot; 13, to deposit, as a wager; stake; 14, to place on or over a surface in layers or coats; as, to lay colors on a canvas; lay a carpet; 15, to make, as a rope or cable, by arranging the strands and twisting them; 16, to produce and deposit, as an egg:—v.i. 1, to produce and deposit eggs; 2, to bet; 3, to apply oneself energetically: Naut., to take up a position (as required); as, to lay aft:—n. 1, the manner or direction in which something lies, or its general arrangement; as, the lay of the ground; 2, a wager; 3, the amount and direction of the twist in the strand of a twine, rope, or cable: Slang, a line of business; job; prospect.

[4]lay (lā), past tense of the irregular intransitive verb [2]*lie, which see.

lay-er (lā'ẽr), n. [see [2]lay], 1, a person or thing that places or lays; as, a layer of great plans; that hen is a good layer; 2, one thickness, stratum, row, coating, or the like; as, a layer of sand; 3, a runner, or long shoot, of a plant, as the strawberry, the tip or a part of which when covered with earth develops roots which produce a new plant; 4, in tanning, a pit or tank in which hides are soaked:—v.t. Hort., to start (a new plant) by bending down a stalk or a runner of an established plant and covering part of it with earth, so that new roots may develop in it.—n. lay'er-ing.

lay-ette (lā-ĕt'), n. [Fr.], a complete outfit of bedding, clothes, etc., for a newborn child.

lay fig-ure [lay < Du. lee (man), lay (figure) < led, joint: akin to Ger. g-lied, limb], 1, an adjustable model of the human body, used by artists for arranging draperies, costumes, etc.; 2, hence, a mere puppet; one subject to another's will; a person technically in authority but without real influence.

lay-man (lā'măn), n. [pl. -men (-mĕn)], [lay + man], 1, a person not of the clergy; one of the laity; 2, a person not of a given profession, or not possessed of expert knowledge; as, the layman's opinion of a painting may differ from that of an artist.

lay-out (lā'out'), n. [lay + out], Colloq., 1, the act, process, or manner of laying something out; especially, the manner in which the details of a plan or arrangement are assembled; 2, something that is, or may be thought of as being, spread out, as a supply of tools, equipment, or apparatus; as, a burglar's layout; 3, a display: Print., the plan for a page of printing.

la-zar (lā'zär), n. [< L.L. lazarus, a leper < Gk. Lazaros, the beggar: see Lazarus], a person, especially a beggar, who has a horrible disease; a leper: lazar house, a lazaretto.—adj. la'zar-like'.

laz-a-ret-to (lăz'ä-rĕt'ō), n. [pl. lazarettos (-ōz)], [< It. lazzaretto < L.L. lazarus, leper: < Heb. source: see Lazarus], 1, a building or, rarely, a ship, used as a public hospital for the care of persons, especially the poor, with loathsome or contagious diseases, such as leprosy: also called lazar house; 2, a building or ship used as a quarantine station: Naut., a space between the decks of some large merchant ships, used as a storeroom for provisions. Also, laz'a-ret'.

Laz-a-rus (lăz'ä-rŭs), n. [< Gk. Lazaros < Heb. El'āzār, he whom God helps], Bib., 1, the brother of Mary and Martha, restored to life by Christ (John 11); 2, in one of the parables, a beggar with loathsome sores, who, after death, was taken to heaven, while the rich man who had refused him aid went to hell (Luke 16:20–31).

laz-u-lite (lăz'ŭ-līt), n. [see lapis lazuli], Mineral., a brittle, azure-blue mineral, occurring in small masses, often crystalline, chemically a basic phosphate of aluminum, iron, and magneslum.

la-zy (lā'zĭ), adj. [comp. lazier, superl. laziest], [< earlier laysy, perh. < [2]lay, as tipsy from [2]tip], 1, indisposed to move quickly or to work; indolent; 2, slow; sluggish; slothful: lazy tongs, an extensible device consisting of many joined and pivoted short bars terminating in pincers, used to pick up an object at a distance.—n. la'zi-ness.—adv. la'zi-ly.

Syn. (see idle; cf. inactive.)

laz-za-ro-ne (läz"ä-rō'nā; läd"zä-rō'nā), n. [pl. -ni (-nē)], [It.: see lazar], an idler or homeless beggar in the streets of Naples: usually pl.

lb. abbr. [pl. lbs.], [Lat. libra], a pound:—l. c., 1, [Lat. loco citato], in the place cited; 2, letter of credit; 3, lower case:—L. C., Lower Canada:—L / C., letter of credit:—l. c. d., least common denominator:—l. c. f., least common factor:—L. C. J., Lord Chief Justice: —l. c. l., less than carload lot:—l. c. m., least common multiple:—Ld., Lord:—Ldp., Lordship:—lea., 1, league; 2, leave.

lea (lē), n. [< A.S. lēah, meadow], a grassy field or stretch of pasture land: a meadow.

leach (lēch), v.t. [prob. < A.S. leccan, to water], 1, to cause to drip or wash through something; as, to leach water through wood ashes to obtain lye; 2, to wash or percolate with water to extract soluble substances; as, to leach wood ashes with water in order to extract lye; 3, to extract by percolation; as, to leach the alkaline salts from ashes:—v.i. to be extracted by percolation, as a soluble substance; as, lye leaches from the ashes:—n. 1, the substance, such as wood ashes, through which water is percolated in making lye; 2, the soluble substance obtained by percolation and held in solution by the liquid percolated; 3, a vessel in which wood ashes are placed in order that water may be percolated through them.—adj. leach'y.

[1]lead (lĕd), n. [< A.S. lēad, lead], 1, a common heavy, bluish white metallic element [symbol Pb, < Lat. plumbum], easily fusible, soft, malleable, but not ductile or tenacious, the chief ore being galena, native lead sulphide: used in the metallic state for water pipes, roofing, gutters, etc., and in many alloys, as solder, pewter, type metal, etc.; used in compounds for making paint, insect poison, dyes, etc.; 2, a weight attached to a rope, as for measuring depths at sea; a plummet; 3, a thin strip of metal used in printing for separating lines of type; 4, a stick of graphite or black carbon used in a pencil: lead arsenate, a poisonous white crystalline salt, used as insecticide: black lead, graphite, used in lead pencils, as a lubricant, etc.: blue lead, galena: red lead, lead oxide of a bright red color, used as a pigment or, mixed with linseed oil, as a cement: white lead, a mixture of carbonate and hydroxide of lead, a heavy white substance used as a pigment and in paint manufacture: sugar of lead, a crystalline salt, lead acetate, used in medicine:—adj. consisting wholly or partly of lead; as, a lead pipe:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. leaded, p.pr. leading], 1, to cover, fit, fasten, or join with lead; as, to lead the glass in a window sash; 2, in pottery, to glaze with a lead compound: Print., to spread, as lines of type, by inserting thin sheets of metal between:—v.i. to become coated with lead, as the inside of a gun barrel.

[2]lead (lēd), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. led (lĕd), p.pr. leading], [< A.S. lǣdan < O.Teut. source], 1, to guide, or conduct, by the hand or other means; as, to lead a horse; 2, to guide, or conduct, by going ahead or otherwise showing the way; 3, to guide the actions of, as by counsel or advice; direct by influence; 4, to have control or direction of; command; as, to lead an expedition; 5, to go or be ahead of; be first among; as, America leads the world in wealth per capita; 6, to induce; influence; as, her friends led her to make the purchase; 7, to spend; pass: as, he leads a life of luxury; 8, to cause (one) to undergo or pass through something: with implication of perplexity or hardship; as, she led me a chase; 9, in card games, to begin a game or a trick by playing; as, he led hearts:—v.i. 1, to act as guide, director, manager, or the like; conduct; 2, to have or take first place; 3, to be capable of being led; as, the horse leads easily; 4, to go; take a course; as, all roads lead to Rome; 5, in games, to make the first play:—n. 1, guidance; as, I will follow your lead; 2, first place or position; precedence; measure of precedence; as, the bay horse has a lead of six lengths; 3, in games, the right to play first, or the play thus made; 4, something which may guide on a special path or course of action, such as an open channel in an ice field or a piece of information; 5, a principal actor in a play; the part played by a principal actor: Elec., 1, a wire connecting an instrument to an electric circuit; 2, the amount by which an alternating current is, in some cases, in advance of the electromotive force; Mining, a stratum of ore following an old river bed; lode.

lead bath 1, a furnace in which crushed ores of gold or silver are exposed to the action of molten lead to form an alloy from which the valuable metal may be extracted; 2, a bath of molten lead used as a medium for heating tools, before hardening by quenching in oil or water.

lead-en (lĕd'n), adj. [see lead]. 1, of the color of, made of, or heavy, as lead; heavy; 2, sluggish; dull; slow, as with weariness.

lead-ing (lēd'ĭng), n. 1, the act or process of guiding or conducting; 2, a thing that leads; 3, a guiding influence; an example:—p.adj. 1, guiding; directing; 2, foremost; as, the leading feature.
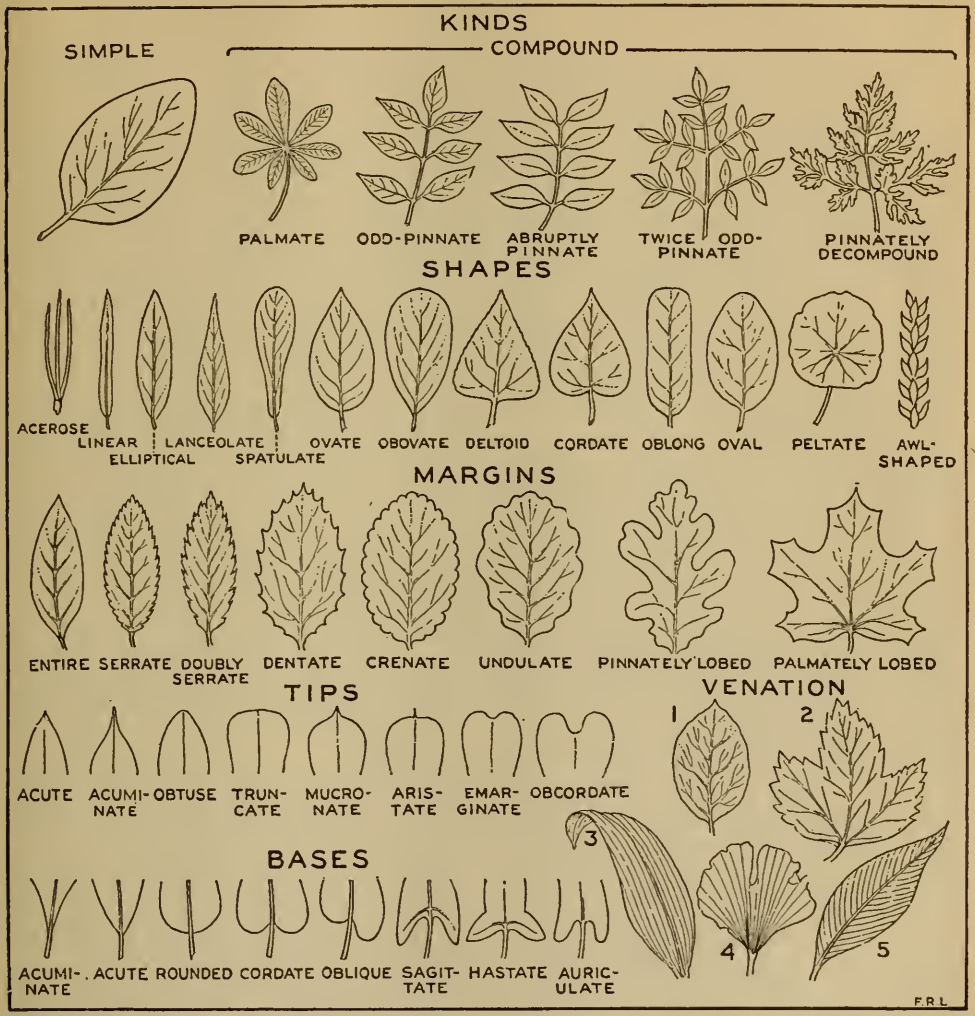
Syn., adj. capital, first, chief, main, principal.

lead-ing strings 1, cords or lines used to guide and support young children learning to walk; 2, guidance; assistance, especially to one who is infantile or unable to take care of himself.



LEAF.—Explanation of Venation: 1, pinnate; 2, palmate; 3, 4, 5, parallel from base to tip, base to margin, midrib to margin.

lead-er (lēd'ēr), n. [see lead], 1, one who guides, directs, or conducts; 2, a person or thing that occupies, or is fitted to occupy, the first or chief place; as, a leader among men; used also of the first horse in a tandem; 3, the principal editorial article of a newspaper; 4, an article of merchandise, especially advertised and sold at a price to attract trade; 5, a pipe to carry off rain water from a roof; 6, a tendon; as, the leaders of the toes; 7, pl. in printing, a line of dots or dashes to direct the eye to a certain point; 8, in fishing, a wall or net for leading fish, as into a weir; also, a strip of catgut or the like, fastened to a casting line, to which the hooks are attached.—n. lead'er-ship.
Syn. chief, commander, guide, head, conductor.

lead-ing tone Mus., in harmony, the seventh tone of an ascending diatonic scale.

lead pen-cil (lĕd), an implement for drawing or writing, consisting of a thin core of black lead incased in paper or wood; also called pencil.

lead wa-ter (lĕd), an aqueous solution of subacetate of lead, used in medicine as an external application for bruises and sprains.

leaf (lēf), n. [pl. leaves (lēvz)], [< A.S. lēaf, leaf], any of various thin, flat objects, as a sheet of metal beaten very thin, a single sheet of a book with a page on each side, a removable section of the top of a folding table, one half of a folding door, or the like; Bot., one of the flat, thin plant structures, green and variously shaped and usually supported on a stem of a green color, which make up the foliage: Colloq., a flower petal or sepal:—v.i. to put forth foliage:—v.t. to turn the pages of without reading carefully: usually with through; as, to leaf through a book.

leaf-age (lēf'āj), n. leaves collectively; foliage of trees, shrubs, etc.

leaf bud a bud, or undeveloped shoot, from which a leaf rather than a flower will grow.

leafed (lēft), p.adj. having leaves, or (such) a leaf: usually in composition.

leaf-less (lēf'lĕs), adj. having no foliage; having lost its leaves.

leaf-let (lēf'lĕt), n. a small or a young foliage leaf, as on a plant: Bot., one of the divisions of a compound leaf: Print., a sheet of printed matter which may be folded into pages, but not stitched; a folder.

leaf-stalk (lēf'stôk"), n. [leaf+stalk], Bot., a petiole: the stem of a foliage leaf, by which it is ordinarily supported and attached to the branch; the footstalk of a leaf: absent in sessile leaves.

leaf-y (lēf'ĭ), adj. [comp. -ier, superl. -iest], [see leaf], made of, having, or characterized by, leaves or foliage; pertaining to a leaf.—n. leaf'i-ness.

[1]league (lēg), n. [< Fr. ligue < It. liga, league < Lat. ligare, to bind], 1, an agreement entered into by two or more persons, nations, or parties for their common good; 2, the parties to such an agreement, considered as making up an association, alliance, or confederation:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. leagued (lēgd), p.pr. leaguing], to unite, as in a confederation:—v.i. to join together, as in an alliance; confederate.—n. lea'guer.

Syn., n. alliance, confederation, association, combination, confederacy, union, coalition; covenant, compact.

[2]league (lēg), n. [< L.L. leuga, a Gallic mile < Celt. source], 1, a measure of distance, varying with time and country, but approximately three miles; 2, in English-speaking countries, either three statute miles, or three nautical miles.

League of Na-tions an organization for the furtherance of international coöperation and the maintenance of peace among nations by arbitration, enforced by economic boycott or, if necessary, by armed intervention, established in 1919 largely through the efforts of Woodrow Wilson, and maintaining a permanent secretariat at Geneva for the transaction of routine business: bicameral in government, with an Assembly composed of not over three members from each of the more than 50 subscribing nations, with one vote for each nation, meeting annually and exercising the superior power, and a Council consisting of representatives of England, France, Germany, Italy, and Japan, as permanent members, and nine others chosen in rotation from the other member nations, meeting more frequently, as occasion requires.

lea-guer (lē'gẽr), n. [< Du. leger, a lair; camp], Obs., in the Middle Ages, a camp, especially of a besieging army: Archaic, a siege, or protracted effort to take a fortified place:—v.t. Archaic, to besiege.

Le-ah (lē'ä), n. [< Heb.], Bib., the daughter of Laban, older sister of Rachel, and first wife of Jacob (Gen. 29:16).

leak (lēk), n. [prob. < O.N. leka, to drip], 1, a hole, crack, or other opening, which lets anything, especially a fluid or friable substance, out or in; as, a leak in a tunnel lets sand in; a leak in a gas pipe lets gas out; 2, any means by which, in a figurative sense, something may get out or get away; as, a leak in the treasury; a leak in an electric system whereby current is lost.—v.i. to flow or pass accidentally through, or as through, a hole, crack, or other small aperture, literally or figuratively: used of liquids, money, information, etc.:—v.t. to allow to enter or escape through a leak.

leak-age (lēk'āj), n. 1, the accidental passing in or out of a liquid, gas, or the like, through a hole or crack; 2, the quantity that thus passes in or out: Com., an allowance for loss through the escape of part of a liquid from its container, or for wastage in process of storage or handling.

leak-y (lēk'ĭ), adj. [comp. -ier, superl. -iest], having holes or cracks which allow water or other fluid to pass in or out; as, a leaky boat or pan: Colloq., not able to keep a secret; tattling.—n. leak'i-ness.

leal (lēl), adj. [< O.F. leel, loyal < Lat. legalis, lawful], Poet. or Sc., loyal; faithful; true.

[1]lean (lēn), v.i. [p.t. and p.p. leaned (lēnd), sometimes leant (lĕnt), p.pr. leaning], [< A.S. hleonian, to lean < O.Teut. source], 1, to be in an attitude or assume a position that slants, or deviates from the upright; incline; as, the Tower of Pisa leans; to lean out of a window; 2, to bend or incline so as to receive support; as, the lame girl leaned upon his arm; to lean upon a crutch; hence, 3, to rely or depend, as for counsel, support, or comfort; as, she leans upon her mother in all things; 4, to have a tendency or inclination; as, this program leans toward socialism; he leans always toward the easy solution:—v.t. to cause to slant, or incline; as, to lean a pole against a house:—n. the act of inclining; the degree of inclining.

[2]lean (lēn), adj. [< A.S. hlæne, lean], 1, lacking in fat; as, lean meat; not well filled out; lank; thin; as, a lean person; 2, scant; wanting in richness, productiveness, profit, or the like; barren; as, lean ores; lean research work:—n. meat, flesh, or muscle without fat.—adv. lean'ly.—n. lean'ness.

Syn., adj. thin, meager, spare, gaunt, lank. Thin people are noticeably without fat; thin usually describes a skinny appearance, or the worn emaciation that follows illness or malnutrition; but we do hear the expression "naturally thin," describing those who are well but slim or slender. Lean is used of those who are "naturally thin," or who develop a muscular instead of a fat body; lean people usually look healthy. Lean is sometimes used in the less pleasing sense of thin. Meager applied to people suggests a starveling, blue-skinned look; a gaunt frame is bony, angular, full of unlovely hollows; a gaunt face is hollow and haggard. Lank people look long, whether they are tall or short, because of their characteristic shrunken thinness; the word is usually applied to tall, angular people, often with the suggestion of loose-jointedness, and, sometimes, of flabbiness.—Ant., adj. stout, fat, full, corpulent.

Le-an-der (lē-ăn'dẽr), n. [< Gk.], Gk. Myth., the lover celebrated for swimming the Hellespont nightly from Abydos to Sestos to visit Hero, but who was finally drowned and his corpse washed ashore, whereupon Hero cast herself into the sea.

lean-ing (lēn'ĭng), p.adj. [see [1]lean], inclining; slanting:—n. a tendency; inclination; desire; as, he shows a leaning toward radicalism.

lean-to (lēn'-tōō"), n. a building, shed, or the like, especially one built against another structure:—adj. having only one pitch: said of a roof.

leap (lēp), v.i. [p.t. and p.p. leaped (lēpt) or leapt (lĕpt), p.pr. leaping], [< A.S. hlēapan, to jump < O.Teut. source], 1, to jump, or spring, some little distance through the air; 2, to bound; move swiftly or suddenly; as, my heart leaps:—v.t. 1, to jump, or spring, over; as, to leap a fence; 2, to cause to jump; as, to leap a horse over a hedge:—n. 1, a jump; a spring; 2, the space cleared in leaping: Mus., in harmony, a passing from one tone to another at an interval of two or, usually, several diatonic steps, as from c to e, d to g sharp.—n. leap'er.

leap-frog (lēp'frŏg"), n. [leap+[1]frog], a game in which one person bends down and another vaults over him.

leap year [prob. so called because in following year any given date leaps over the day of the week on which it would naturally fall], a year, occurring usually every fourth year, having 366 days, in which February has 29 instead of 28 days: found by dividing the number of the year by four, or, in the case of the century years, by 400: if there is no remainder, it is a leap year.

Lear (lēr), n. [< Celt.], a legendary king of Britain, the aged hero of Shakespeare's tragedy "King Lear," who, deceived in his old age by false protestations of love from his elder daughters, Goneril and Regan, and misjudging the true but undemonstrative affection of Cordelia, his youngest daughter, perishes as a victim of filial ingratitude.

learn (lûrn), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. learned (lûrnd) or learnt (lûrnt), p.pr. learning], [< A.S. leornian, to learn], 1, to acquire knowledge of, or skill in; as, to learn French; 2, to ascertain; hear; be informed about; as, I regret to learn that Mr. X. is dead; 3, to memorize: Obs., to teach:—v.i. to gain knowledge; fix information in the mind; as, to learn quickly.—n. learn'er.

learn-ed (lûr'nĕd), p.adj. 1, having much knowledge, especially book knowledge; erudite; as, a learned professor; 2, pertaining to knowledge or erudition; requiring much study; as, one of the learned professions.—adv. learn'ed-ly.

Syn. trained, scholarly, erudite, deeply read, scholastic, well-informed.—Ant. unscholarly, untrained.

learn-ing (lûrn'ĭng), n. 1, the act or process of acquiring knowledge; as, she was slow at learning; 2, knowledge or skill gained by study or instruction; scholarship; erudition: Psych., modification of behavior tendencies through experience.

Syn. erudition, scholarship, lore. Learning is knowledge obtained by study, commonly in the field of the languages, literature, history, or science. The amount of knowledge sufficient to be called learning is great, but learning shares the disadvantages of mere knowledge: it does not necessarily connote the power of efficient action or superior judgment. Learning has, in fact, been so often divorced from these qualities in the persons of those who loved books to the exclusion of life itself, as to gain for the learned a reputation for being impractical and visionary. Erudition is profound learning in the abstruse studies beyond the interest or comprehension of ordinary people; it is more frequently applied to learning in literature and languages than in science. Scholarship is learning of an accurate, sometimes academic, always schooled and disciplined sort, commonly in the field of the liberal arts. Like learning, scholarship has been so much the possession of students that it is often unfavorably opposed to the practical ability of the average man. Lore, formerly another word for erudition, now is applied to a body of facts or traditions in connection with a certain subject; as, bird lore. (Cf. knowledge.)

lease (lēs), n. [<A.F. les, a leaving<O.F. laisser, to let go], 1, a written contract whereby one party grants the use of land, buildings, or personal property, for a definite consideration known as rent, for a specified term, to another; also, the document in which the contract is written; 2, the land, buildings, or personal property, thus acquired and held; 3, the term during which such a contract is in force:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. leased (lēst), p.pr. leasing], 1, to grant possession of, for a specified term, by a written contract; as, an owner of property, the lessor, leases it to a tenant, the lessee; 2, to take possession of under a contract of lease; as, a tenant leases a house from the owner.

lease-hold (lēs'hōld"), n. [lease+²*hold*], 1, the tenure, or possession, of property by lease, or contract granting such possession for a specified term and for a definite consideration; 2, the real estate so held.—n. lease'hold"er.

leash (lēsh), n. [<O.F. lesse, perh.<Lat. laxus, loose], 1, a thong of leather or a long cord by which a dog, hawk, or the like, is held; 2, in hunting, three creatures of a kind, as hounds, foxes, or hares; hence, in general, three of a kind; three: 3, in textile weaving, a looped cord for raising certain threads: —v.t. to tie together or hold with a cord or thong.

leas-ing (lēz'ing), n. [<A.S. lēasian, to lie<lēas, false], Archaic, the act or practice of lying; a lie or falsehood.

least (lēst), adj. [superl. of little], [<A.S. læsest, læst, least], smallest in degree, size, value, importance, etc.:—adv. in the lowest or smallest measure.

leath-er (leth'ėr), n. [<A.S. lether, leather], 1, the skin of an animal, tanned and prepared for use; 2, any of various objects made of or like the skin so prepared; 3, the hanging part of a dog's ear:—v.t. to cover, or provide, with leather: Colloq., to thrash; whip.

leath-er-back (leth'ėr-bak"), n. [leather+¹*back*], one of the largest known sea turtles, often weighing over 1,000 pounds, found in warm waters, especially of the Atlantic: so called because of its thick, leathery upper shell.

1/60

LEATHERBACK

leath-er-et (leth'ėr-et), n. [dim. of leather], an imitation leather made of paper and cloth: used as a substitute for leather. Also, leath'er-ette'.

leath-ern (leth'ėrn), adj. [see leather], like, or made of, leather or tanned hide; leathery.

leath-er-oid (leth'ėr-oid), n. a material, made chiefly from vegetable fiber, having qualities resembling those of leather.

leath-er-y (leth'ėr-i), adj. resembling leather or tanned hide; tough.

¹leave (lēv), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. left (left), p.pr. leaving], [<A.S. lǣfan, to leave<O.Teut. source], 1, to fail to take; allow to remain behind; 2, to allow to remain, or continue, in the same place or condition; as, the appeal left him cold; 3, to depart from; forsake; 4, to take to a place and let remain; deliver; as, to leave packages, cards; 5, to cease from; desist from; as, leave your bickering; 6, to bequeath; give by legacy; 7, to end one's connection with or residence at; as, he is leaving his club; 8, to refer for decision; as, I leave it to you:—v.i. Colloq., to go away; depart.

Syn. quit, forsake, desert, relinquish, surrender, forego. (See abandon, let.)

²leave (lēv), n. [<A.S. lēaf, pleasure, approval], 1, a permission granted; 2, permission to take a short vacation, as from active military service; the vacation thus permitted; 3, departure; formal farewell: mainly in the expression, take leave: French leave, a going away hastily or secretly.

Syn. liberty, license, allowance, permission.

³leave (lēv), v.i. [p.t. and p.p. leaved (lēvd), p.pr. leaving], [see leaf], to put forth foliage; leaf: often used with out.

leav-en (lev'n), v.t. [<Fr. levain<Lat. levamen, alleviation; that which raises<levare, to lift], 1, to produce fermentation in, by adding a fermenting agency, as yeast; make light, as dough, by adding yeast or some other fermenting agency; 2, to touch or tinge with something that modifies:—n. 1, a substance that produces fermentation, especially in dough, as yeast or fermenting dough; 2, any element or influence which, working silently and strongly, causes changes.

leaves (lēvz), plural of noun leaf, the foliage of trees, shrubs, and plants.

leav-ing (lēv'ing), n. [see ¹leave], that which is left over; a thing left: pl. refuse; offal.

lech-er (lech'ėr), n. [<O.F. lecheor<lechier, to live by lust<O.H.G. leccōn, to lick], a lewd or excessively sensual man; a debauchee.

lech-er-ous (lech'ėr-ūs), adj. lewd; lustful; excessively sensual.—adv. lech'er-ous-ly.—lech-er-y (lech'ėr-i), n. [pl. -ies (-iz)], gross sensuality; indulgence in lust; lewdness.

lec-tern (lek'tėrn), n. [<O.F. leitrun<L.L. lectrum, a pulpit<Lat. legere (lectus), to read], 1, in ritualistic churches, the reading desk from which the Scripture lessons are read or chanted; 2, Sc., a reading or writing desk.

EAGLE LECTERN

lec-tion (lek'shŭn), n. [<Lat. lectio (-onis), a reading], a special wording, spelling, or variation in a text: Eccl., a lesson, especially a portion of the Scriptures, read in a church service.

lec-tion-a-ry (lek'shŭn-ā-ri), n. [pl. -ries (-riz)], Eccl., a book or list of Scripture lessons to be read in church services during the year.

lec-tor (lek'tōr), n. [Lat.=a reader], one who reads lectures, especially in European universities: Eccl., a reader; one who reads the lessons in church.

lec-ture (lek'tūr), n. [<Lat. lectura, commentary <legere (lectus), to read], 1, a formal talk or discourse, on any subject, especially before a public audience; 2, a formal talk by a teacher in a university or college; 3, a lengthy reproof:—v.i. [p.t. and p.p. -tured (-tūrd), p.pr. -turing] to deliver a formal talk or discourse:—v.t. 1, to deliver a formal talk or discourse to; 2, to rebuke at length.—n. lec'tur-er.—n. lec'ture-ship.

led (led), past tense and past participle of the irregular verb lead, which see.

Le-da (lē'dą), n. [<Gk.], Gk. Myth., wife of Tyndareus, king of Sparta and beloved by Zeus, who visited her in the form of a swan: mother of Castor and Pollux, Helen of Troy, and Clytemnestra.

ledge (lej), n. [prob.<M.E. leggen, to lay], 1, a ridge, shelf, or bar projecting from a vertical surface, especially from a building, a cliff, or wall; as, the ledge of a window; a ledge of rock; 2, a ridge, as of rock, projecting upward from the bottom of a lake or other body of water: Geol., a small mass of rock projecting above the surface, or from the side of a hill: Mineral., a narrow mass of rock containing a mineral deposit; a lode or vein.—adj. ledg'y.

ledg-er (lej'ėr), n. [prob.<M.E. leggen, to lie, but confused with leggen, to lay], in bookkeeping, a book in which are recorded the final summaries of debits and credits: ledger line, Mus., a line above or below the staff to increase its scope: also, leger line.

LEDGER LINES (a)

lee (lē), n. [<A.S. hlēo, shelter], Naut., 1, shelter from the wind afforded by some object or point of land; as, in the lee of an island; a place sheltered from the wind; 2, the direction toward which the wind blows; the side away from the wind; as, on the lee of a vessel:—adj. pertaining to the side or direction away from the wind: opposite of weather: lee shore, a shore toward which the wind blows from a vessel: lee tide, a tide that runs with the wind.

¹leech (lēch), n. [<A.S. lǣce,a leech], 1, any of various bloodsucking, flat worms, two to four inches long, formerly much used by physicians, and still used occasionally, for bleeding patients (for illus. see annelida); 2, one who gets all he can out of another:—v.t. to bleed by applying a bloodsucking worm.

²leech (lēch), n. [<A.S. lǣce, physician; perh. same as ¹leech], Archaic, a physician:—v.t. to heal.

³leech (lēch), n. [<Scand.], Naut., the perpendicular or sloping edge of a sail (see sail, illus.).

leek (lēk), n. [<A.S. lēac, leek], a plant of the lily family resembling an onion in flavor and structure, and used for food or flavoring.

leer (lēr), v.i. [perh.<obs. leer, cheek], to look slyly, evilly, or with a sidelong glance:—v.t. 1, to glance slyly into; 2, to entice with sly glances:—n. a sly, sidelong look of malice, triumph, or evil desire.

leer-y (lēr'ĭ), adj. [perh. < leer], Colloq., 1, knowing; sly; 2, suspicious; distrustful; afraid.

lees (lēz), n.pl. [< Fr. lie < L.L. lia, sediment in wine], sediment of liquor; dregs.

lee-ward (lē'wĕrd; lū'ĕrd), adj. [lee+-ward], Naut., being in the direction toward which the wind blows from the observer: opposite of windward:—adv. toward the lee; down the wind from the observer:—n. the direction toward which the wind blows from the observer.—adv. lee'ward-ly.

lee-way (lē'wā"), n. [lee+way], Naut., the movement or drift of a ship occasioned by the wind, away from the line or direction in which it is pointed: Colloq., room for action or for free play.

[1]left (lĕft), past tense and past participle of the irregular verb leave.

[2]left (lĕft), adj. [< A.S. lyft, left, weak, worthless], 1, pertaining to that side of the body which is, in general, the weaker and less skilful; namely, that side which, as one faces the sunrise, is toward the north: opposite of right; 2, of a stream bank, on the left of a person in mid stream, facing down stream: left wing, the more liberal or radical element, especially in a political party:—n. 1, the direction or region which lies on the left side; as, turn to the left; the house is on the left; 2, in a theater, the side of a stage to the left of a player facing the audience: Left or left, in politics, the most liberal or radical party: so called because in a European deliberative assembly this party is often seated at the left of the presiding officer.

left-hand (lĕft'=hănd"), adj. situated on the left side: Obs., sinister; unlucky.

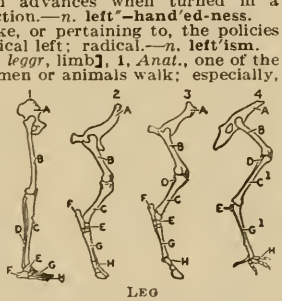
left-hand-ed (lĕft'=hănd'ĕd; lĕft'=hănd'ĭd), adj. 1, using the left hand with greater skill or strength than the right hand; 2, done with the left hand; as, a left-handed blow; 3, adapted for use by a person whose left hand is more skilful than the right; as, a left-handed golf club; 4, awkward; 5, malicious; derogatory; equivocal; as, a left-handed compliment: left-handed marriage, a morganatic marriage, the groom giving the left instead of the right hand to the bride in the marriage ceremony: left-handed screw, Mech., a screw which advances when turned in a counterclockwise direction.—n. left"-hand'ed-ness.

left-ist (lĕft'ĭst), like, or pertaining to, the policies of the political left; radical.—n. left'ism.

leg (lĕg), n. [< O.N. leggr, limb], 1, Anat., one of the limbs by which men or animals walk; especially, in man, the part of the lower limb between the knee and the ankle; 2, any of various things resembling a limb in form or in use; as, the leg of a stool; 3, the part of a garment covering one of the legs; 4, in cricket, the part of the field to the left of and behind the batsman as he faces the bowler: Naut., the course covered by a vessel on one tack; Math., one of two sides of a triangle, the third side being regarded as the base.



LEG

1, of a man; 2, of an ox; 3, of a horse; 4, of a bird.—A, pelvis; B, femur; C, tibia (C1, tibiotarsus); D, fibula; E, tarsus; F, os calcis; G, metatarsus (G1, tarsometatarsus); H, phalanges.

leg. abbr. 1, legal; 2, legate; 3, legato; 4, legislative; legislature.

leg-a-cy (lĕg'ă-sĭ), n. [pl. -cies (-sĭz)], [< O.F. legacie, legateship < Lat. legatus, commissioned], 1, a gift of money or other property by will; a bequest; 2, figuratively, anything handed down from an ancestor, predecessor, or previous condition; as, a legacy of family pride; wars leave legacies of hatred.

le-gal (lē'găl), adj. [< Lat. lex (legis), law], 1, pertaining to law; as, legal questions; 2, permitted or authorized by law; as, the procedure was entirely legal; 3, enforceable in, or protected by, law or a court of law; as, legal rights: distinguished from equitable, inherently just: legal tender, Law, money or currency which by law is made suitable for the payment of a debt.—adv. le'gal-ly.

le-gal-ist (lē'găl-ĭst), n. one who interprets law, or conforms to law, strictly and formally, according to the letter rather than the spirit; one who thus interprets any authoritative statement or doctrine in such matters as theology, propriety, or art; a formalist: Theol., one who believes in salvation through works or obedience to the law rather than through faith.—adj. le'gal-is'tic.—n. le'gal-ism.

le-gal-i-ty (lē-găl'ĭ-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], conformity to law; lawfulness: Theol., belief in salvation through works; insistence on the letter rather than the spirit of the law.

le-gal-ize (lē'găl-īz), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -ized (-īzd), p.pr. -izing], to make lawful; as, to legalize the sale of drugs: Theol., to apply or interpret strictly according to the letter of the law.—n. le'gal-i-za'tion.

leg-ate (lĕg'ăt), n. [< Lat. legare (-atus), to commission], an ambassador, envoy, or delegate: R. C. Ch., a representative of the Pope in the performance of certain functions:—v.t. Obs. or Rare, [p.t. and p.p. -ated, p.pr. -ating], to bequeath; leave by will.—n. leg'ate-ship.—adj. leg'a-tine (lĕg'ă-tĭn; -tīn).

leg-a-tee (lĕg"ă-tē'), n. [< legate, to bequeath: see legate], Law, a person to whom money or other property is bequeathed, or left by will.

le-ga-tion (lē-gā'shŭn), n. [see legate], 1, the authorization of one person to act for another; 2, a deputation; a diplomatic envoy, especially one not of the rank of ambassador, and his associates: a diplomatic minister and his suite; 3, the official residence of a diplomatic representative.

le-ga-to (lā-gä'tō), adj. and adv. [It. = bound together < Lat. ligare, to bind], Mus., in a smooth, flowing manner, without breaks between notes: opposite of staccato.

leg-end (lĕj'ĕnd; lē'jĕnd), n. [< O.F. legende < L.L. legenda, things to be read < Lat. legere, to read], 1, a story, often telling of miracles or wonders, handed down from the past, especially one connected with a person or event in authentic history, of doubtful certainty, but popularly believed to be true; a tradition; 2, the words of an inscription, motto, title, or the like, as on a coin or under an illustration in a book.

leg-end-a-ry (lĕj'ĕn-dă-rĭ), adj. pertaining to, or related in, a legend or tradition; based on legend rather than on authentic history; as, legendary elements in a narration; according to popular tradition; as, the legendary founder of Rome.

leg-er-de-main (lĕj"ĕr-dē-mān'), n. [< Fr. léger de main, light of hand], 1, sleight of hand; the art of juggling; 2, any deception based on manual dexterity or trickery.

leg-er line Mus., a line above or below the musical staff. See ledg'er line, Pfd. S.

legged (lĕgd; in combination, lĕg'ĕd or lĕgd), adj. [see leg], having legs: usually in combination; as, a three-legged stool.

leg-gings (lĕg'ĭngz), n.pl. long gaiters, or outer coverings for the legs, as a protection from cold or wet. Also, leg'gins.

Leg-horn (lĕg'hôrn), adj. [< place name], pertaining to the Italian city of Leghorn:—n. a breed of rather small domestic fowl, originating in or near Leghorn, having smooth yellow legs and white ear lobes, and valued as prolific layers: leghorn, n. 1, a braid made of fine Italian wheat straw: so called because exported from Leghorn; 2, a hat made of such straw.

leg-i-ble (lĕj'ĭ-bl), adj. [< Lat. legibilis, readable < legere, to read], capable of being read or deciphered; plain; clear; readable.—adv. leg'i-bly.—n. leg'i-ble-ness.—n. leg"i-bil'i-ty (-bĭl'ĭ-tĭ).

le-gion (lē'jŭn), n. [< Lat. legio (-onis), legion < legere, to choose], 1, in Roman history, the most important army unit, containing, at various periods, from 3,000 to 6,000 foot soldiers, with accompanying cavalrymen; 2, a military force; an army; 3, a vast number; a multitude: Legion of Honor, an honorary order of France, founded in 1802 by Napoleon as a reward for distinguished civil or military services: American Legion, an organization of citizens of the United States, in military service during the World War: incorporated by Act of Congress in 1919.

le-gion-a-ry (lē'jŭn-ă-rĭ), n. [pl. -ries (-rĭz)], a soldier or member of a legion:—adj. 1, pertaining to a legion; 2, very numerous; multitudinous. Also, n. le"gion-naire' (lē"jŭn-ār').

leg-is-late (lĕj'ĭs-lāt), v.i. [p.t. and p.p. -lated, p.pr. -lating], [< legislator, q.v.], to make or enact a law or laws; as, Congress legislates for our country:—v.t. to bring about or regulate by law; cause to go, pass, or the like, by enacting a law; as, to legislate child labor out of existence.

leg-is-la-tion (lĕj"ĭs-lā'shŭn), n. 1, the act of making a law or laws; 2, the laws promulgated by a legislator or legislative body.

leg-is-la-tive (lĕj'ĭs-lā-tĭv), adj. pertaining to the power to make, or the making of, laws.

leg-is-la-tor (lĕj'ĭs-lā"tẽr), n. [< Lat. lex (legis), law + lator, proposer (of a law) < ferre (latus), to bear], a member of a lawmaking body.

leg-is-la-ture (lĕj'ĭs-lā"tûr), n. 1, that body in a state which has the power of enacting laws; 2, in the United States, the lawmaking body of a state or territory, as distinguished from Congress.

le-gist (lē'jĭst), n. [<Lat. lex (legis), law], a person learned or skilled in the law.

le-git-i-ma-cy (lē-jĭt'ĭ-mə-sĭ), n. [see legitimate], 1, the state or condition of being allowed by law, or of conforming to recognized principles or standards; as, the legitimacy of a claim; 2, the state of having been born in lawful marriage.

le-git-i-mate (lē-jĭt'ĭ-māt), adj. [<Lat. legitimus, lawful], 1, lawful; in accord with the law; as, a legitimate procedure; a legitimate monarch; 2, lawfully begotten; born in wedlock; 3, genuine; not false; as, legitimate sorrow; the legitimate works of Shakespeare; 4, conforming to accepted standards or conventions; as, the legitimate drama; hence, presenting dramatic productions, as opposed to photoplays, burlesque, musical comedy, and vaudeville; as, the legitimate stage; 5, reasonable; logical; as, illness is a legitimate excuse for absence:—v.t. (lē-jĭt'ĭ-māt), [p.t. and p.p. -mated, p.pr. -mating], to make, or declare to be, lawful or regular.—adv. le-git'i-mate-ly.—n. le-git'i-mate-ness.—n. le-git"i-ma'tion.

le-git-i-mist (lē-jĭt'ĭ-mĭst), n. a supporter of established government, especially of a hereditary monarchy: Legitimist, in French history, a supporter of the elder branch of the Bourbon dynasty.

le-git-i-mize (lē-jĭt'ĭ-mīz), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -mized (-mīzd), p.pr. -mizing], to make or declare to be lawful or regular. Also, le-git'i-ma-tize.—n. le-git"i-mi-za'tion (-mĭ-zā'shŭn; -mī-).

leg–of–mut-ton (lĕg"ə-ŏv-mŭt'n), adj. shaped like a leg of mutton; large and full at the top, small at the bottom: said of a sleeve (see gigot, illus.); of a sail, triangular, with the apex at the top and the base attached to a fore-and-aft boom.

leg-ume (lĕg'ūm; lē-gūm'), n. [<Fr. <Lat. legumen, leguminous plant < legere, to pick], Bot., 1, a type of podlike fruit in which a row of several seeds is attached to the internal ridge formed where the two halves of the inclosing pod join, as in the pea and the bean (for illus. see fruit); 2, the seed of such fruit regarded as food: usually pl.; 3, a plant bearing such fruit.—adj. le-gu'mi-nous (lē-gū'mĭ-nŭs).

le-i (lā'ē), n. [Hawaiian], a decorative dress, as a wreath or garland, for the head or neck.

lei-sure (lē'zhūr; lēzh'ūr), n. [<O.F. leisir < Lat. licēre, to be allowed], spare time at one's disposal:—adj. free from business; as, leisure hours.—adj. and adv. lei'sure-ly.—n. lei'sure-li-ness.

leit-mo-tif (līt'mō-tēf"), n. [Ger. = leading theme], Mus., a recurring phrase or theme, as in opera, that characterizes some person or idea.

lem-an (lĕm'ăn; lē'măn), n. [<M.E. leofman < A.S. lēof mann, dear person], Archaic, a sweetheart or lover of either sex; especially, a mistress.

lem-ma (lĕm'ə), n. [pl. lemmata (lĕm'ə-tə) ; -mas (-əz)], [<Gk. lēmma, something taken < lambanein, to take], a summary of the contents of a poem or other literary composition, prefixed to the composition as a subtitle; a statement of a theme, as of a poem, musical composition, or the like: Math. and Logic, a minor or secondary proposition, proved or assumed to be true for the purpose of proving the main proposition.

lem-ming (lĕm'ĭng), n. [Norw.], Zoöl., any of several species of small, mouselike rodents, having short tails and furry feet, found in the arctic regions.

LEMMING

lem-on (lĕm'ŭn), n. [<Fr. limon, perh. < Pers. līmūn, a lemon], 1, a citrous fruit with pale yellow skin, and very acid juice; 2, the tree (Citrus medica limon) on which this fruit grows; 3, the pale yellow color of its skin:—adj. 1, flavored with the juice of, or containing, the fruit called lemon; 2, pale yellow; resembling a lemon in color.

lem-on-ade (lĕm"ŭn-ād'), n. a beverage of sweetened water flavored with lemon juice.

lem-pi-ra (lĕm-pē'rä), n. [< name of an aboriginal chief], the monetary unit of Honduras, equivalent to 50 cents.

le-mur (lē'mûr), n. [Lat. = a ghost: so called from nocturnal habits and stealthy movements], Zoöl., any of several species of mammals (suborder Lemuroidea), about the size of a cat and allied to the monkeys, generally having a foxlike face, large eyes, and soft, woolly fur, and found mainly in Madagascar and near-by islands (see Primates, illus.).—adj. lem'u-rine (lĕm'û-rĭn; -rīn).—adj. lem'u-roid (lĕm'û-roid).

lem-u-res (lĕm'û-rēz), n.pl. [Lat. = ghosts], Rom. Myth., mischievous spirits of the dead.

lend (lĕnd), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. lent, p.pr. lending], [<earlier len <A.S. lǣnan < lǣn, loan], 1, to grant to another for temporary use, without compensation, or for a small fee, as a book from a library, or at interest, as in the case of money; 2, to afford; furnish; provide; as, to lend aid; rugs lend beauty to a room; 3, to devote; as, to lend oneself to a scheme:—v.i. to make a loan.—n. lend'er.

length (lĕngth), n. [<A.S. lengthu, length], 1, the measure of an object from end to end, or along its longest dimension; as, the length of the boat; 2, extent in space, time, or degree; as, the length of a race course; the length of an interview; he will go to any length to get it; 3, a specified distance considered as a unit of measure; as, to win by a length; 4, a single piece, as of a series of objects that may be connected together; as, a length of silk; a length of pipe: Pros. and Phon., the quality of a syllable (in prosody) or vowel (in phonetics), especially in Greek, Latin, or the old Germanic languages, as regards the time required for pronunciation, whether long or short; Phon., generally, in modern English, the quality of a vowel as regards its sound value, the so-called long vowels being pronounced like their names in the alphabet; Theat., forty-two lines of an actor's part: at length, 1, in full; 2, at last.

length-en (lĕng'thn), v.t. to make long or longer: Pros., to make (a vowel or syllable) long:—v.i. to grow or become longer.

length-wise (lĕngth'wīz"), adv. [length + -wise], in the direction from end to end; along the length. Also, length'ways" (-wāz").

length-y (lĕng'thĭ), adj. [comp. -ier, superl. -iest], [see length], long; long and tiresome; as, a lengthy speech.—adv. length'i-ly.—n. length'i-ness.

le-ni-en-cy (lē'nĭ-ĕn-sĭ; lēn'yĕn-sĭ), n. [see lenient], forbearance; mildness; mercifulness. Also, le'ni-ence (lē'nĭ-ĕns; lēn'yĕns).

Syn. clemency, lenity, forgivingness, gentleness, compassion. (See mercy.)

le-ni-ent (lē'nĭ-ĕnt; lēn'yĕnt), adj. [<Lat. leniens (-entis), soothing], not severe; indulgent; mild; merciful; as, a lenient judge.—adv. le'ni-ent-ly.

len-i-tive (lĕn'ĭ-tĭv), adj. [<Lat. lenire (-itus), to soothe], soothing; allaying pain:—n. 1, anything that allays pain; 2, a laxative.

len-i-ty (lĕn'ĭ-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], [<Lat. lenitas <lenis, gentle], mildness of temper or disposition; gentleness of treatment; forbearance.

Syn. leniency, clemency, gentleness. (See mercy.)

lens (lĕnz), n. [Lat. = a lentil: so called from shape of double convex lens], a piece of glass or other transparent substance, with one or two curved surfaces, usually spherical or cylindrical, having the property of converging or diverging beams of light and forming images of objects; hence, a transparent body in the eye (see eye, illus.), the purpose of which is to form on the retina images of external objects; the crystalline lens of the eye: achromatic lens, a lens so constructed that the images formed will be free from extraneous color: converging lens or convex lens, a lens thicker in the center than at the edges, which brings parallel rays of transmitted light to a real focus and forms a real image: diverging lens or concave lens, a lens thicker at the edges than in the center, which diverges transmitted light rays and forms a virtual image (see focus, illus.).

LENSES

A, plano-concave; B, double concave; C, plano-convex; D, double convex; E, F, meniscus, or concavo-convex.

Lent (lĕnt), n. [see Lenten], the forty week days preceding Easter Sunday, beginning with Ash Wednesday, observed by the Roman Catholic, Anglican, and some other churches, in commemoration of Christ's forty days of fasting and temptation, as a season of special penitence, self-denial, and preparation for the great feast of Easter.

lent (lĕnt), past tense and past participle of the irregular verb lend, which see.

-lent adj. suffix, [<Lat. -lentus], full of; as, fraudu*lent*; corpu*lent*.

Lent-en (lĕn'tĕn), adj. [<M.E. n. lenten < A.S. lencten, the spring, prob. < lang, long, because days are longer in spring], pertaining to Lent, or the forty fast days preceding Easter: lenten, somber; cheerless; meager; as, a lenten face; lenten fare.

len-ti-cel (lĕn'tĭ-sĕl), n. [<Fr. dim. of Lat. lens (lentis), lentil], Bot., a lens-shaped formation on woody stems, which bursts the covering outer layer of bark and thus forms a pore for the admission of air.

len-tic-u-lar (lĕn-tĭk′ū-lär), adj. [< Lat. lenticula, lentil], 1, having the shape of a lentil; convex or bulging on both sides; shaped like a double convex lens; 2, pertaining to a lens.

len-ti-go (lĕn-tī′gō), n. [pl. -tigines (-tĭj′ĭ-nēz)], [< Lat. lens (lentis), a lentil], a freckle.—adj. len-tig′i-nous (-tĭj′ĭ-nŭs).

len-til (lĕn′tĭl), n. [< Fr. lentille < Lat. lenticula, lentil], a plant (Lentilla lens) of the pea family, much grown in southern Europe and the Orient for the edible seeds, either in the natural state or when ground into meal: pl. the seeds of the plant used for food.

len-to (lĕn′tō), adv. [It. = slowly], Mus., slowly: molto lento, (mōl′tō), Mus., very slowly.

l'en-voi (läN″vwä′: lĕn-voi′), n. [O.F. = the sending], Archaic, a postscript to a poem, play, etc., expressing the author's parting thoughts, or the moral; a short concluding stanza: also called envoy.

Le-o (lē′ō), n. [Lat. = lion], Astron., 1, a northern zodiacal constellation, the Lion, containing a group of bright stars known as the Sickle, the brightest star of which, in the handle, is known as Regulus; 2, the fifth sign of the zodiac: Leo minor, Astron., a small northern constellation, between Leo and Ursa Major.

Le-o-nid (lē′ō-nĭd), n. [< Lat. leo (leonis), a lion], one of the meteors which appear to radiate from the constellation Leo, about November 15 of each year; supposedly one of a meteoric swarm with a period of 33 years, the largest displays having occurred in 1833 and 1866; generally used in plural.

le-o-nine (lē′ō-nīn), adj. pertaining to, or like, a lion; hence, strong; fierce; majestic.

Le-o-nine verse Pros., a kind of medieval Latin verse, consisting of hexameters, or alternating hexameters and pentameters, in which the last word of each line rimes with a word near the middle of that line.

leop-ard (lĕp′ĕrd), n. [< Gk. leopardos < leōn, lion + pardos, panther], 1, a large and ferocious catlike mammal (Felis pardus) of Africa and southern Asia, having a yellow skin dappled with black spots; 2, some similar animal, such as the so-called American leopard, or jaguar (see jaguar, illus.); 3, a gold coin of the time of Edward III of England: Her., the broadside figure of a lion represented as walking with the right paw raised, and looking at the spectator: also called lion passant gardant.—n. fem. leop′ard-ess.

LEOPARD ($\frac{1}{30}$)

lep-er (lĕp′ĕr), n. [< obs. leper < O.F. lepre, leprosy < Gk. lepra, scaly], 1, a person suffering from leprosy, a chronic, infectious, loathsome disease marked by nodules, ulcers, and white, scaly scabs and followed by deformity and mutilation of parts; 2, figuratively, a perverted person; an outcast.

Lep-i-dop-ter-a (lĕp″ĭ-dŏp′tĕr-ȧ), n.pl. [< Gk. lepis (-idos), scale + pteron, wing], a very large order of insects, the butterflies and moths, the larvæ of which are called caterpillars.—n. and adj. lep″i-dop′ter-an.—adj. lep″i-dop′ter-ous.

lep-i-do-si-ren (lĕp″ĭ-dō-sī′rĕn), n. [< Gk. lepis (-idos), scale + seirēn, siren], an eel-shaped fish (Lepidosiren paradoxa) of the swamps of the Amazon.

lep-re-chaun (lĕp″rē-khŏn′), n. [< Ir. lupracān < O. Ir. luchorpān, goblin < lu, small + corp, body], in Irish folklore, a sprite or fairy, usually in the form of a little old man.

lep-ro-sy (lĕp′rō-sĭ), n. [pl. -sies (-sĭz)], [see leper], 1, a chronic, infectious, loathsome disease, marked by nodules, ulcers, and white, scaly scabs, and followed by deformity and mutilation of parts; 2, hence, depravity or moral corruption.—adj. lep′rous.

Les-bi-an (lĕz′bĭ-ăn), adj. [< Lesbos], 1, pertaining to the island of Lesbos; 2, erotic: Lesbian love, sexual attraction felt by a woman for another woman:—n. 1, an inhabitant of Lesbos; 2, a woman with a tendency to Lesbian love.—n. Les′bi-an-ism.

lese maj-es-ty (lēz măj′ĕs-tĭ), [< Fr. lèse-majesté < Lat. laesa majestas, injured dignity], Law, a crime against the sovereign or ruling power; treason; especially, any of various acts felt to be offensive to the dignity of a government. Also, leze maj′es-ty; lèse″-ma″jes″té′ (läz″ᵉma″zhĕs″tā′).

le-sion (lē′zhŭn), n. [< Lat. laesio (-onis), injury], injury; hurt; loss: Law, the injury or loss suffered by a party to a contract who does not receive under the contract the equivalent of what he gives; Med., a hurt, wound, or local degeneration of an organ, causing a change in its function or structure.

less (lĕs), adj. [comp. of little], [< A.S. lǣssa, less < O.Teut. source], 1, not so large; not so much: used of quantity, amount, or bulk, but distinguished from smaller, used of size, and fewer, used of number; 2, not so great in importance; as, less than the dust:—adv. to a smaller extent; in a lower degree; not so much:—n. a smaller amount; as, I have less than ten dollars:—prep. diminished by; as, ten less seven is three.

-less adj. suffix, [< A.S. lēas, free from], 1, devoid of, free from, without: used freely with nouns; as, homeless; worthless; pitiless; 2, unable, or without power, to be acted upon (as indicated by its verb); as, dauntless; countless; resistless; 3, not (acting in the manner indicated by its verb); as, ceaseless; relentless:—adv. suffix, without; as, doubtless.

les-see (lĕs-ē′), n. [< O.F. lessé, p.p. of lesser, to let go < Lat. laxare, to let go], Law, a person to whom a lease is granted or who holds property by lease; a tenant under a lease.

less-en (lĕs′n), v.t. [see less], 1, to make smaller; reduce; diminish; 2, to represent as being less or less important than commonly supposed; disparage; as, I would not lessen his services to the state:—v.i. to grow smaller; shrink; become less important.

Syn. reduce, diminish, lower, abate. (See decrease.)—Ant. aggravate, increase, expand, wax, swell, distend.

less-er (lĕs′ĕr), adj. a double comparative, from the comparative adjective less: smaller; less.

les-son (lĕs′n), n. [< O.F. leçon, lesson < Lat. lectio (-onis), a reading < legere, to read], 1, material assigned to a pupil to learn as a single task; as, the lesson begins on page 50; 2, instruction given at one time; an exercise; a lecture; as, my next lesson is at eleven o'clock; 3, that which is learned or taught by experience, observation, or the like, and which serves as warning or encouragement; as, let that accident teach you a lesson; 4, a rebuke; severe lecture: pl. systematic instruction; as, the child has lessons every morning: Eccl., 1, a portion of Scripture read as a part of divine worship; 2, in certain ritualistic churches, one of two such portions of Scripture appointed to be read at morning and evening prayer, the first lesson from the Old Testament, the second lesson from the New Testament:—v.t. to teach; give a lesson to; inculcate.

les-sor (lĕs′ôr; lĕs-ôr′), n. [< A.F. lesser, to let go < Lat. laxare, to let go], Law, the grantor of a lease; one who rents property to another.

lest (lĕst), conj. [< M.E. les < A.S. (thȳ) lǣs the, whereby less], 1, that . . . not; in order that . . . not; for fear that; as, "take heed lest ye fall"; 2, that: used without not after expressions denoting fear; as, I was apprehensive lest they should be late.

[1]let (lĕt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. letted or let, p.pr. letting], [< A.S. lettan, to hinder < læt, slow], Archaic, to hinder:—n. 1, Archaic, a hindrance; 2, in lawn tennis, a ball interfered with in some way specified in the rules.

[2]let (lĕt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. let, p.pr. letting], [< A.S. lǣtan, to allow < O.Teut. source], 1, to permit; allow; 2, to enable, cause, or make, to do: with the infinitive without to; as, let them go; let me understand; 3, to grant to a tenant; rent or hire; lease; 4, to give out; assign, as a contract; 5, used as an auxiliary verb with an infinitive without to, to form the imperative of the first and third persons, the subject being expressed; as, let us build a fire; let everyone stand; let alone, to leave undisturbed or in solitude; let blood, to cause blood to flow by surgical means; draw blood:—v.i. to be leased or rented; as, your room will let easily; let on, Slang, 1, to pretend; as, I'll let on to be sick; 2, to give oneself away by revealing something; as, don't let on that you know me.

Syn. allow, permit, suffer, endure, grant, give leave to, leave. Let, to permit or allow, is used without to: I, let him go; I let the children decide. Leave, meaning to allow, especially with the idea of offering no interference, is used with to: we leave our guests to follow their own inclinations; we leave our students to decide upon their own courses. The use of leave, without to, in this sense for let, as in leave me have it, should be avoided.

-let n. suffix, [< wrong division of O.F. nouns in l with diminutive ending in et; as, hamlet < O.F. hamelet = hamel + et], forming: 1, diminutive nouns; as, streamlet; cloudlet; eaglet; 2, names of pieces of clothing or bodily ornaments: as, armlet; bracelet.

le-thal (lē′thăl), adj. [< Lat. lethalis < letum, death], 1, deadly; fatal: as, a lethal dose; 2, pertaining to death: lethal chamber, a room in which animals or condemned criminals may be put to death by gases.

leth-ar-gy (lĕth′är-jĭ), n. [pl. -gies (-jĭz)], [< Gk. lēthargia < lēthargos, forgetful < lantha- nesthai, to forget], 1, unhealthy drowsiness; unnaturally prolonged slumber; listlessness; 2, a state of inaction or indifference.—adj. le-thar'gic (lē-thär'jĭk).

Le-the (lē'thē), n. [< Gk. lēthē, forgetfulness < lanthanesthai, to forget], Class. Myth., a river in Hades, a draft of whose waters produced forgetfulness of the past; hence, oblivion.—adj. Le-the'an.

Le-to (lē'tō), n. [< Gk.], Gk. Myth., a goddess beloved by Zeus, mother of Apollo and Artemis: equivalent to the Roman Latona.

Lett (Lĕt), n. [< Ger. Lette < nat. Latvi, Lett], a member of a Slavic people living mainly in the Baltic provinces, especially in Latvia, closely related in blood and language to the Lithuanians.

let-ter (lĕt'ĕr), n. [< O.F. lettre < Lat. littera, letter of alphabet], 1, a mark or character used as an alphabetic symbol to represent a speech sound, as in writing or printing; 2, a written or printed communication; epistle; missive; note; 3, one of a set of types used in printing; also, a style of type; as, the book is printed in black letter; 4, the exact, word-for-word meaning; as, "the letter killeth, but the spirit giveth life"; 5, a document certifying certain privileges or authority, or identifying the bearer; as, a letter of credit: pl. literature; learning; knowledge; as, great men of letters: letters of administration, Law, the instrument or writing issued by a court by which an administrator is granted authority to manage and settle the business affairs and estate of a person who has died: letter of advice, Com., 1, a written report from an agent to a principal or from a consignor to a consignee transmitting special information; 2, especially, in foreign exchange, a letter by which the drawer of a bill of exchange, or draft, notifies the drawee that the bill has been drawn: letter of credit, Fin., a letter addressed by a bank or a mercantile house to one or more of its correspondents at home or abroad, authorizing the correspondent to honor drafts or bills of exchange drawn upon it by certain designated parties: when addressed to several correspondents sometimes called circular letter of credit: letter or letters of marque and reprisal, Pol. Sci., a document issued by a government, authorizing a private individual to seize subjects of another government or their goods by way of retaliation or reprisal; later, governmental permission to fit out a private armed vessel to capture vessels flying the flag of another government, such capture not being considered piracy: letters patent, an official paper under seal of the government, giving a person some specified authority, permission, or privilege: letters testamentary, Law, the instrument or writing issued by a court by which an executor or executrix is authorized to manage and settle the business affairs and estate of a person who has died: day letter, a telegraphic message sent during the day at a reduced rate: night letter, a similar telegraphic message at even lower rates, sent during the night:—v.t. to impress or write letters on.

let-ter car-ri-er a postman; one who carries mail to the ultimate addressees.

let-tered (lĕt'ĕrd), p.adj. 1, literate; possessed of an ordinary education; 2, learned; having to do with erudition; 3, inscribed with letters.

let-ter-gram (lĕt'ĕr-grăm), n. [letter + -gram (< Gk. gramma, a writing)], a day letter or a night letter: see letter.

let-ter-head (lĕt'ĕr-hĕd"), n. [letter + head], 1, a printed form at the top of a sheet of writing paper, usually containing the business name and address of the sender; 2, a sheet so printed.

let-ter-ing (lĕt'ĕr-ĭng), n. [see letter], 1, the act or process of marking with letters; 2, letters, or an inscription, marked on an object.

let-ter-press (lĕt'ĕr-prĕs"), n. [letter + press], the text of a book, newspaper, or the like, as distinguished from the illustrations.

let-ter press a device for making facsimile copies of letters, documents, etc., by pressing a manuscript, written or printed in suitable ink, against a sheet of dampened paper.

Let-tish (lĕt'ĭsh), adj. [see Lett], Latvian; pertaining to the Letts:—n. their language.

lettre de ca-chet (lĕtr'" dē kă"shā'), [pl. lettres (lĕtr'") de cachet], [Fr. = letter with seal], a sealed letter; especially, a secret, official letter from a sovereign ordering an arbitrary arrest or imprisonment.

let-tuce (lĕt'ĭs), n. [< Lat. lactuca < lac (lactis), milk; in ref. to milky juice of root], 1, a garden plant (Lactuca sativa) of the composite family, with delicate, crisp leaves used especially in salads; 2, any of several similar plants of the same genus.

le-u (lē'ōō), n. [pl. lei (lā)], [Rumanian < Lat. leo (leonis) < Gk. leōn, lion], the gold monetary unit of Rumania, equivalent to about one cent. Also, ley (lā).

leu-co-cyte (lū'kō-sīt), n. [< Gk. leukos, white + kutos, a vessel], Physiol., a white blood corpuscle; a tiny, nucleated, amœboid cell found in the blood and lymph, and in pus, and able to change its shape and to move about within the blood vessels or through the softer tissues: useful in destroying harmful bacteria. Also, leu'ko-cyte.

leu-co-cy-to-sis (lū"kō-sī-tō'sĭs), n. Med., a temporary increase in the number of white corpuscles in the blood.

leu-cor-rhe-a (lū"kō-rē'ă), n. [< Gk. leukos, white + rhein, to flow], Pathol., a whitish, viscid, mucous discharge from the vagina and uterus, due to congestion; the whites. Also, leu"cor-rhœ'a.

lev (lĕf), n. [pl. leva (lĕ'vă)], [< Bulgarian lev, lev < Lat. leo: see leu], the gold monetary unit of Bulgaria, equivalent to about one cent. Also, lew (lĕf).

Le-vant (lē-vănt'), n. [Fr. = a rising < lever, to raise < Lat. levare, to lift: so called because the sun rises in direction of Orient], the Orient; especially, the Near East; the countries near the eastern end of the Mediterranean Sea; the coast regions of Asia Minor, Syria, and Egypt: levant, 1, a fine kind of leather, ordinarily made of goatskin, used especially in bookbinding, and originally obtained from the Near East, or Levant; 2, a strong east wind which frequently blows on the Mediterranean: also called levanter.—adj. and n. Le-van'tine (lē-văn'tĭn; lĕv'ăn-tīn).

le-vant-er (lē-văn'tĕr), n. a strong east wind which frequently blows on the Mediterranean: also called levant: Levanter, an inhabitant of the Levant, or Near East; a Levantine.

le-va-tor (lē-vā'tŏr), n. [L.L. < Lat. levare, to lift], Anat., a muscle that raises or lifts an organ or part; Surg., an instrument for raising a depressed part in fracture of the skull.

[1]lev-ee (lĕv'ē'; lĕv'ē), n. [< Fr. levé, lever, rising < (se) lever, to raise oneself: because first used of a king's morning reception upon rising from bed], 1, originally, a morning reception or assembly held by a great personage upon rising from bed; 2, in Great Britain and Ireland, an assembly held by a sovereign or his representative in the early afternoon, for men; 3, in the United States, a reception held by the President; 4, any assemblage of guests.

[2]lev-ee (lĕv'ē; lĕv-ē'), n. [< Fr. levée, raised < Lat. levare, to raise], in the southern and western United States, an embankment or wall built to prevent a river from overflowing its banks; also, a landing place or quay:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -eed (-ēd; -ēd'), p.pr. -eeing], to provide, as a river, with an embankment to keep water within a channel or to prevent inundations.

lev-el (lĕv'ĕl), adj. [< O.F. livel < Lat. libella, dim. of libra, balance], 1, smooth and flat; having or lying in a horizontal surface or plane; as, a level field; the level surface of the ocean; 2, exactly horizontal; as, the bar is level; 3, having the same altitude, rank, importance, or condition; as, the window is level with the tree top; 4, in sports, open to all participants on the same conditions; without handicap; as, a level race; 5, steady; judicious; well-balanced; as, a level head; 6, plain; straightforward; clear: Phys., perpendicular at all points to the intersecting lines of force: used of an imaginary surface in a field of force, as a magnetic field, such that at all points a body would have the same potential energy; equipotential:—n. 1, a horizontal or nearly horizontal line or surface; a smooth, horizontal area, as of a field; 2, condition of being horizontal; as, the surface of the water will come to a level; 3, a horizontal plane used as the basis from which to measure altitude: usually the surface of the ocean; as, 5,000 feet above sea level; 4, position relative to a given standard, referring to literal altitude, or social or moral matters, or the like: as, trees cannot grow above this level; I would not stoop to your level of conduct; 5, equality of altitude, rank, importance, or the like; as, his ancestry is on a level with the best; 6, an open stretch of water, as in a river or between two locks in a canal; 7, in mechanics and surveying, an instrument used to find a horizontal line or position, or to adjust something to the horizontal (see tool, illus.): often called spirit level, or, as used in surveying, surveyor's level; 8, in mining, a horizontal passage in a mine:—adv. 1, in a straight or horizontal line; as, hold your gun level; 2, directly; plainly; honestly:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -eled or -elled (-ĕld), p.pr. -eling or -elling], 1, to make smooth, flat, or even, especially in a more or less horizontal plane: as, to level a piece of ground; 2, to bring into a horizontal position; 3, to bring into the same altitude with something else; 4, to bring into line with an object; aim, as a gun; 5, to bring, as a building, to the ground; raze; 6, to bring to a common or equal condition or rank; as, death levels prince and pauper; 7, in surveying, to ascertain the altitudes of various points on, as with a surveyor's level:—v.i. 1, to aim a weapon; direct one's attention or efforts toward something; 2, to bring persons or objects to a level: with up or down: level off, Aëro., to fly horizontally, near the ground, in preparation for landing.—n. lev'el-ness.

Syn., adj. horizontal, even, flush, plain, plane. (See ¹flat.)

lev-el-er (lĕv'ĕl-ẽr), n. 1, one who or that which makes something equal, even, level, or the like; specifically, a device used for leveling billiard tables, or an implement used in scraping and grading roads, or the like; 2, one who would destroy social and economic distinctions: Leveler, in English history, a member of a political party which arose in 1647 and became prominent during the time of Cromwell, advocating a leveling of all ranks and a more democratic form of government. Also, lev'el-ler; Lev'el-ler.

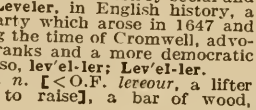
le-ver (lē'vẽr; lĕv'ẽr), n. [<O.F. lereour, a lifter <Lat. levare, to raise], a bar of wood, metal, or the like, used to pry or move a heavy object by placing one part of it against the object, bracing it against something fixed, and lifting or pushing on the other end: Mech. and Phys., any rigid bar capable of turning about a fixed point, called the fulcrum, and having counteracting forces applied at two other points.



THREE TYPES OF LEVER
P, power; F, fulcrum; W, weight.

le-ver-age (lē'vẽr-ăj; lĕv'ẽr-ăj), n. 1, the action or application of a lever; 2, the mechanical power gained by using a lever.

lev-er-et (lĕv'ẽr-ĕt), n. [<O.F. lerrete < levre < Lat. lepus (leporis), hare], a young hare; specifically, a hare less than a year old: Obs., a mistress.

Le-vi (lē'vī), n. [<Heb. Lēvī], Bib., the third son of Jacob, ancestor of the Levites (Gen. 29: 34).

lev-i-a-ble (lĕv'ĭ-ă-bl), adj. [see levy], 1, liable to levy or seizure, as goods; 2, that may be levied or imposed, as a tax.

le-vi-a-than (lē-vī'ă-thăn), n. [<Heb. liryāthān, aquatic animal], 1, Bib., a large aquatic animal not definitely identified, but generally regarded as a reptile or whale (Job 41: 1; Ps. 104: 26; etc.); 2, anything huge of its kind: usually applied to a very large ship, or to a person of outstanding power or influence: Leviathan, the title of a work on the state, by Thomas Hobbes (1588–1679).

lev-i-gate (lĕv'ĭ-gāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -gated, p.pr. -gating], [<Lat. levigare (-atus), to smooth < levis, smooth], to make smooth; reduce to an extremely fine powder; make fine paste of; mix thoroughly:—adj. (-gāt), smooth, as if rubbed to a gloss; burnished.—n. lev"i-ga'tion.

lev-in (lĕv'ĭn), n. [<M.E. leven, lightning], Poet. or Archaic, lightning:—v.i. to lighten: flash.

lev-i-tate (lĕv'ĭ-tāt), v.i. [p.t. and p.p. -tated, p.pr. -tating], [<L. L. < Lat. levis, light], to rise because of, or as if because of, lightness or buoyancy:—v.t. to make light or buoyant, so as to cause to rise and float in the air.

lev-i-ta-tion (lĕv"ĭ-tā'shŭn), n. the act of making, or the state of being, light or buoyant: Spiritualism, the process or illusion of moving heavy objects without human or other natural agency, or of suspending them in the air without support.

Le-vite (lē'vīt), n. [see Levi], Bib., 1, an Israelite of the tribe descended from Levi; 2, specifically, one of the men of this tribe, who, between 25 and 50 years of age, acted as assistants to the priests in the rites of the Jewish tabernacle or temple.

Le-vit-i-cal (lē-vĭt'ĭ-kăl), adj. 1, of or pertaining to the tribe of Levi or to the Levites; 2, of or pertaining to the book of Leviticus; 3, pertaining to dogma or ritual: Levitical degrees, the degrees of relationship within which individuals were forbidden by the Mosaic law to marry (Lev. 18): also called forbidden degrees.

Le-vit-i-cus (lē-vĭt'ĭ-kŭs), n. [<L.L. Leviticus (liber), book of the Levites], the third book of the Old Testament, containing the Jewish ceremonial laws administered by the priests and Levites.

lev-i-ty (lĕv'ĭ-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], [<O.F. levité <Lat. levitas, lightness], 1, the state or quality of being buoyant; 2, lightness of disposition or conduct; frivolity; 3, inconstancy; capriciousness.

Syn. thoughtlessness, flightiness. (See ²lightness.)

le-vo-gy-rate (lē"vō-jī'rāt), adj. [<Lat. laevus, left + gyrare (-atus), to revolve < Gk. guros, ring], turning to the left: specifically, in crystallography, levorotatory (which see).

le-vo-ro-ta-to-ry (lē"vō-rō'tă-tō-rĭ), adj. [<Lat. laevus, left + rotare (-atus), to turn], Phys. and Chem., causing the plane of polarization to turn to the left, or counterclockwise: said of certain crystals: opposite of dextrorotatory. Also, læ"vo-ro'ta-to-ry.—n. le"vo-ro-ta'tion (lē"vō-rō-tā'shŭn).

lev-u-lose (lĕv'ū-lōs), n. [<Lat. laevus, left: because applied to *levo*rotatory form of glucose], Chem., a yellowish crystalline substance found with glucose in sweet fruits and in honey; fruit sugar; fructose: used in foodstuffs, etc. Also, læv'u-lose.

lev-y (lĕv'ĭ), n. [pl. levies (-ĭz)], [<Fr. lever, to raise], 1, the act of raising by compulsion, as money or men; 2, the amount or number raised:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. levied (-ĭd), p.pr. levying], 1, to raise or collect by compulsion; exact or impose by authority, as a tax; 2, to raise (troops) for active service; 3, to wage; engage in (warfare): Law, to seize or take (property); enforce (an execution):—v.i. to effect a seizure in order to collect money: with on.

lewd (lūd), adj. [<A.S. lǣwede, of the lay people, unlearned], sensual; impure; unchaste: Obs., pertaining to the laity; hence, ignorant; Obs. or Archaic, vicious; base.—adv. lewd'ly.—n. lewd'ness.

Syn. licentious, immodest, indecent, lascivious.

lew-is (lū'ĭs), n. [source uncertain], an iron device, for attaching heavy stones and the like to a lifting apparatus, consisting of a sectional dovetailed tenon inserted in a dovetail mortise in the object to be raised: also called lewisson.

LEWIS
a, key; b,b, dovetail section in stone into which the two side pieces fit; c, bolt.

Lew-is au-to-mat-ic ri-fle a light, gas-operated, air-cooled automatic rifle with a normal firing speed of 300 shots a minute: invented by Col. I. N. Lewis, U.S.A.: also called Lewis machine gun; Lewis gun.

lew-is-ite (lū'ĭs-īt), n. [<W. J. Lewis, Am. chemist], a faintly yellow liquid, compounded from arsenic trichloride, producing a violently irritating and deadly gas: used in chemical warfare.

lex-i-cal (lĕk'sĭ-kăl), adj. [<Gk. lexikos, lexical < lexis, word], 1, pertaining to the words of a language as distinguished from its grammar and syntax; 2, pertaining to a dictionary, or lexicon, or to the process or art of making it.

lex-i-cog-ra-pher (lĕk"sĭ-kŏg'ră-fẽr), n. [see lexicography], one who compiles, or is skilled in the art of compiling, a dictionary.

lex-i-cog-ra-phy (lĕk"sĭ-kŏg'ră-fĭ), n. [<Gk. lexikos of words + graphein, to write], the art or occupation of compiling dictionaries or lexicons.—adj. lex"i-co-graph'i-cal.

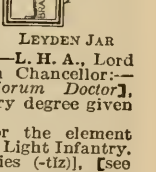
lex-i-con (lĕk'sĭ-kŏn), n. [Gk., neut. of lexikos, pertaining to words], a dictionary, especially of an ancient language, as Greek, Hebrew, or Latin.

Ley-den jar (lī'dĕn), Elec., a form of condenser for static electricity, invented in Leyden, Holland, consisting of a glass jar or cylinder coated inside and out with tin foil nearly to the top, the inner coating being commonly connected with a metallic knob at the top.



LEYDEN JAR

leze maj-es-ty (lēz), Law, a crime against the sovereign or ruling power. See lese maj'es-ty, Pfd. S.

L. F. C. Elec., Low Frequency Current:—L. G., 1, Low German (also, L. Ger.); 2, Life Guards:—l. h., left hand:—L. H., Light Horse:—L. H. A., Lord High Admiral:—L. H. C., Lord High Chancellor:—L. H. D., [Lat. Litterarum Humaniorum Doctor], Doctor of the Humanities: an honorary degree given by colleges and universities.

Li abbr. Chem., the symbol [Li] for the element lithium:—L. I., 1, Long Island; 2, Light Infantry.

li-a-bil-i-ty (lī"ă-bĭl'ĭ-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], [see liable], 1, exposure to some occurrence or casualty; as, liability to accident; 2, the state of being responsible for a loss, debt, penalty, or the like; as, liability for damages; 3, that for which one is responsible: pl. one's pecuniary obligations: debts.

li-a-ble (lī'ă-bl), adj. [<Fr. lier, to bind <Lat. ligare, to bind], 1, legally responsible; answerable; 2, exposed to damage, danger, expense, penalty, or the like: with to: Obs., 1, adapted to an end; 2, subject: with to.

Syn. accountable, answerable. (See responsible, apt.)

li-ai-son (lyā″zôn′), n. [Fr. = a bond < Lat. ligatio, a bond], an improper intimacy between a man and a woman: Cookery, a sauce or thickening, usually made of eggs; Phon., in reading or speaking French, the carrying over of a final consonant, otherwise mute, to a succeeding word beginning with a vowel or mute h, as in the two words nous (nōō) and arons (ä″vôn′), when pronounced together (nōō″zä″vôn′); Mil., a linking of operations, as between two distant forces, by means of officers in communication with both forces, through signals, radio, etc.; Mus., a tie: a curved line binding two notes of the same pitch.

li-a-na (lē-ä′nä; lī-ăn′ä), n. [< Fr. liane, perh. < lier < Lat. ligare, to bind], any climbing perennial plant with a woody stem: applied especially to high-climbing plants of this kind found in tropical forests.

li-ar (lī′ėr), n. [< A.S. lēogere, liar], one who intentionally tells an untruth.

Syn. hypocrite, dissembler, deceiver, prevaricator.

lib. abbr. 1, librarian; library; 2, [Lat. liber], book; 3, Obs., [Lat. libra], pound.

li-ba-tion (lī-bā′shŭn), n. [< Lat. libare (-atus), to pour], 1, the act of pouring wine or other liquid on the ground or on a sacrifice in honor of a god; 2, the liquid so poured; 3, humorously, a drink.

li-bec-cio (lē-bĕt′chō), n. [It. < Gk. Lips, the southwest wind < Libuē, Libya], the southwest wind. Also, incorrectly, li-bec′chio.

li-bel (lī′bĕl), n. [O.F. < Lat. libellus, dim. of liber, book], 1, anything asserted or implied tending to defame or bring into ill repute; especially, a written or printed slander; 2, defamation; calumniation: Law, 1, any written or printed statement which reflects upon the character of another, published maliciously and without justification; 2, in certain jurisdictions, the written statement of the plaintiff, under oath, of his cause of action: Obs., a short declaration or writing:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -beled or -belled (-bĕld), p.pr. -beling or -belling], to publish a false, injurious statement against; defame; expose to ridicule: Law, 1, to publish a false or injurious statement against, calculated to injure the character of (a person); 2, to bring suit against by filing a libel; as, to libel a ship for nonpayment of fees.—n. li′bel-er; li′bel-ler.

Syn., v. asperse, revile, slander, discredit, vilify.

li-bel-ant (lī′bĕl-ănt), n. Law, one who brings a suit by filing a libel, as in an admiralty court against a ship, or in a divorce case: corresponding to the plaintiff in a common-law action. Also, li′bel-lant.

li-bel-ee (lī″bĕl-ē′), n. Law, one against whom a libel is filed. Also, li″bel-lee′.

li-bel-ous (lī′bĕl-ŭs), adj. 1, Law, containing, or of the nature of, defamation; 2, vilifying; scurrilous. Also, li′bel-lous.—adv. li′bel-ous-ly.

li-ber (lī′bėr), n. [pl. libri (lī′brī)], [Lat. = book], a book; especially, a book of records, as of deeds or wills.

lib-er-al (lĭb′ėr-ăl), adj. [< Lat. liber, free], 1, free-born; hence, suitable to one of free birth; refined; not narrowly restricted; as, a liberal education; the liberal arts; 2, generous; open-handed; having or displaying a generous inclination; 3, plentiful; bountiful; abundant; 4, unprejudiced; free from narrowness in ideas or religious doctrines; catholic; 5, not literal; free, as a translation; 6, disposed to a democratic rather than aristocratic or conservative form of government; progressive: Obs. or Archaic, unrestrained; licentious: liberal arts, the branches of academic learning, such as literature, history, science, language, etc., leading to a degree of bachelor of arts or master of arts: called by the ancient Romans artes liberales (literally, arts befitting a free man): see trivium, quadrivium:—n. an advocate of liberal principles and practice in government, industry, art, or the like: opposite of conservative, and distinguished from radical: Liberal, a member of a political party in Great Britain which advocates free trade, abolition of privilege, democratic reform, etc.; a member of a similar party in any other nation.—adv. lib′er-al-ly.

Syn., adj. abundant, ample, munificent, bounteous, free-handed. (See generous.)

lib-er-al-ism (lĭb′ėr-ăl-izm), n. 1, the quality of being open-minded or benevolent; 2, the principles or theories of one who advocates freedom of thought or speech in religion, politics, etc.

lib-er-al-i-ty (lĭb″ėr-ăl′ĭ-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], 1, the quality or state of being generous, open-handed, open-minded, etc.; 2, a donation; gift.

lib-er-al-ize (lĭb′ėr-ăl-īz), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -ized (-īzd), p.pr. -izing], to render free from restrictions or prejudices:—v.i. to express liberal opinions; become liberal in one's ideas or principles.

lib-er-ate (lĭb′ėr-āt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -ated, p.pr. -ating], [< Lat. liberare (-atus), to free < liber, free], 1, to set free from restraint or bondage; 2, to free from combination, as a gaseous element in a compound.—n. lib′er-a′tor.—n. lib″er-a′tion.

Syn. extricate, unfasten, discharge, deliver, release, emancipate, free. We free by setting at liberty that which is bound, by ridding of or clearing away that which entangles or burdens; we free slaves, free our consciences from a sense of guilt, free land of mortgages, free ourselves from pain. To liberate is to set free from bondage, as a slave, or from confinement, as a prisoner; in these senses it is a more formal word than free. To release is to deliver from bondage, or set free from anything that restrains, fastens, or confines; we release acquitted prisoners, a friend from a promise, a debtor from his obligation. To emancipate is to free from legal, social, political, moral, or intellectual repression or restraint. We emancipate slaves by freeing them, unenfranchised citizens by giving them the suffrage, our minds by giving them range of thought. We extricate a person from a predicament or difficulty by literally disentangling the threads of his perplexities. To discharge, as here compared, is to release legally, as a prisoner, to dismiss from service, as an employee, or to clear, as a debt, by paying.—Ant. confine, restrain, hold.

Li-be-ri-an (lī-bē′rĭ-ăn), adj. [< Lat. liber, free], pertaining to Liberia, a Negro republic in western Africa:—n. a native or inhabitant of Liberia.

lib-er-tine (lĭb′ėr-tĭn), n. [< Lat. libertinus, a freedman], one who gives free play to his evil impulses, appetites, and desires; a rake: Rom. Antiq., a freedman, or liberated slave, or his child: —adj. loose in morals; profligate; dissolute: Obs. or Archaic, unrestrained; free.—n. lib′er-tin-ism.

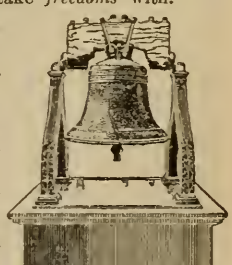
lib-er-ty (lĭb′ėr-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], [< Fr. liberté < Lat. libertas (-atis), < liber, free], 1, freedom from control or subjection; 2, freedom from restraint; the right to do what one pleases; 3, the possession and use of the privilege of self-government; 4, a transgression of the rules of propriety or ordinary usage; 5, a special privilege, right, or immunity, conferred by authority; franchise; 6, a place or a territory in which certain privileges are enjoyed: Ethics, freedom or power to make a voluntary choice: Liberty bond, an interest-bearing bond of any of several series issued by the United States government during the World War: Liberty loan, any of several popular loans floated by the United States government during the World War.

Syn. freedom, independence, emancipation, license, exemption, franchise, immunity. Liberty and freedom are used interchangeably; but freedom connotes an absence, want of, or the nonexistence of, compulsion or restraint; liberty connotes being freed from some sort of restraint or control, as captivity, despotism, or bondage. Freedom is wider of signification, and can be applied in the field of figurative oppression; we desire freedom from care, freedom from responsibility. "Liberty of conscience" is a phrase that suggests that once consciences were dictated to; "liberty of the press" has the echo of a one-time suppression; "personal liberty" suggests personal slavery. Independence is the name of that state of freedom in which nations are not dependent on, or subject to, the domination of others. Emancipation names the state of one set free from social, moral, intellectual, or political repression or restraint. Emancipation secured liberty of person for the slaves. License, in its better sense, is a permit issued by the government or other competent authority to carry on some certain business, or to marry, preach, or the like. In its unfavorable sense, license names an abuse of freedom. Freedom and liberty are also used in an unfavorable sense, meaning undue familiarity, a setting aside of rules or conventions; as, to take liberties with; take the liberty of doing; to take freedoms with.

Lib-er-ty Bell the bell rung in Philadelphia, July 4, 1776, when the Continental Congress declared the independence of the thirteen American colonies.



LIBERTY BELL

li-bid-i-nous (lĭ-bĭd′ĭ-nŭs), adj. [see libido], having impure desires; lascivious.

li-bi-do (lĭ-bē′dō; -bī′-), n. [Lat. = pleasure, desire, lust], desire; especially, normal sexual desire: Psych., the desire, urge, or personal interest of a person directed toward another person or something regarded as a person; the sex instinct in its broadest sense.

Li-bra (lī'brə), n. [Lat. = scales], Astron., 1, a southern zodiacal constellation, also called Scales or Balance; 2, the seventh sign of the zodiac, which the sun enters at the autumnal equinox, about September 22: libra, formerly, the gold monetary unit of Peru, equivalent to about $4.87: replaced in 1930 by the sol.

li-bra-ri-an (lī-brâ'rĭ-ən), n. [see library], one who has charge of a library.

li-bra-ry (lī'brâ-rĭ), n. [pl. -ries (-rĭz)], [< Fr. librairie, bookshop < Lat. librarius, of books < liber, book], 1, a collection of books for reading or reference; 2, a room or building containing such a collection; 3, a series of books issued by the same publisher; 4, a private collection of books for study or recreation; 5, a place where books are rented or lent to patrons.

li-brate (lī'brāt), v.i. [p.t. and p.p. -brated, p.pr. -brating], [< Lat. librare (-atus), to balance], to balance; poise:—v.i. to hang balanced; be poised; vibrate, as does a balance.—adj. li'bra-to-ry.

li-bra-tion (lī-brā'shŭn), n. Astron., a real or apparent oscillatory motion of a heavenly body: libration of the moon, Astron., an apparent irregularity of the moon's rotation by which those parts on or near the edge of the disk become alternately visible and invisible, denoting a kind of lunar oscillation.

li-bret-tist (lĭ-brĕt'ĭst), n. [see libretto], the writer of the words of an opera, oratorio, etc.

li-bret-to (lĭ-brĕt'ō), n. [pl. -tos (-ōz); -ti (-tē)], [It., dim. of libro, book], the text of an opera or other long dramatic musical composition.

li-bri-form (lī'brĭ-fôrm), adj. [< Lat. liber, bark + forma, shape], Bot., shaped like, or resembling, bast, or the inner bark of various trees.

Lib-y-an (lĭb'ĭ-ən), adj. [< Gk. Libuē], pertaining to a region in North Africa, called Libya by the ancient Greeks, or to the Hamitic language spoken in that region: Poet., African:—n. a native of ancient Libya; also, the Hamitic language used there.

lice (līs), plural of the irregular noun louse, which see.

li-cense (lī'sĕns), n. [< Lat. licentia < licēre, to be lawful], 1, authority to act at discretion; permission; leave; 2, a document issued by the proper authorities granting permission to do something that would otherwise be contrary to the law; a legal permit; 3, unrestrained liberty; lack of regard for propriety; freedom abused; 4, permissible variation from a set form or rule for the sake of effect; as, poetic license:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. licensed (-sĕnst), p.pr. licensing], to permit by law. Also, li'cence.—n. li'cens-er.

Syn., n. permission, authority, permit, privilege, excess, abuse. (See liberty.)

li-cen-see (lī"sĕn-sē'), n. one to whom permission or authority is given. Also, li"cen-cee'.

li-cen-ti-ate (lī-sĕn'shĭ-āt), n. 1, one given authority by license to preach or to practice a profession; 2, in certain universities of continental Europe, an academic degree between that of bachelor and that of doctor.

li-cen-tious (lī-sĕn'shŭs), adj. 1, unrestrained by law or morality; lawless; 2, lewd; dissolute; libertine; lascivious.—adv. li-cen'tious-ly. —n. li-cen'tious-ness.

Syn. unchaste, lustful, sensual, profligate, lewd.

lich (lĭch), n. [< A.S. līc, body, shape], Scot. and Eng. Dial., a corpse; Obs., the body; trunk: lich gate, the roofed gate of a churchyard, intended to shelter a coffin awaiting burial. Also, lych; lyke.

li-chen (lī'kĕn), n. [< Gk. leikhēn, tree moss], Bot., any of a group of low-growing plant formations composed of certain fungi growing with certain algæ in a condition of close union and mutual interdependence: found on trees, fences, stones, etc.: Pathol., any of various skin diseases, some with wide, flat eruptions, often very persistent.—adj. li'chen-ous.

li-chen-ol-o-gy (lī"kĕn-ŏl'ō-jĭ), n. [< lichen + -ology (< Gk. -logia, study)], that branch of botany which treats of lichens.

lich-wake (lĭch'wāk"), n. [< M.E. lich, corpse + wake, a watching], Archaic or Dial., a night watch over a corpse; wake. Also, lyke'wake".

lic-it (lĭs'ĭt), adj. [< Lat. licitus, lawful], lawful; allowed; permitted.—adv. lic'it-ly.—n. lic'it-ness.

lick (lĭk), v.t. [< A.S. liccian, to lick], 1, to pass the tongue over; lap up; 2, to play lightly over: usually said of flames: Colloq., 1, to whip or flog; 2, to overcome in a fist fight, or, less commonly, in some other specified form of contention:—v.i. to make a sudden movement, as a flame; dart: Slang, to win:—n. 1, the act of passing the tongue over something; 2, a small quantity; as much as the tongue will take up; 3, a place to which animals come for salt; a salt lick: Colloq., a quick or careless stroke; blow; specifically, a stroke of work; as, he put in some hard licks.

lick-er-ish (lĭk'ĕr-ĭsh), adj. [< earlier lickerous, corr. of lecherous, lustful], 1, greedy or eager, especially for tempting food; 2, lecherous; lustful: Obs., toothsome. Also, liq'uor-ish.—adv. lick'er-ish-ly.—n. lick'er-ish-ness.

lick-spit-tle (lĭk'spĭt"l), n. an abject flatterer; parasite; bootlicker. Also, lick'-spit".

lic-o-rice (lĭk'ō-rĭs), n. [< A.F. lycorys < L.L. liquiritia < Gk. glukurrhiza < glukus, sweet + rhiza, root], 1, a plant (Glycyrrhiza glabra) of the pea family, bearing blue flowers; 2, its dried root, or extract, used in medicine. Also, liq'uo-rice.

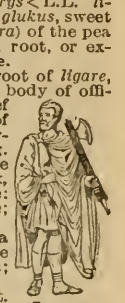
lic-tor (lĭk'tôr), n. [Lat., perh. < lig-, root of ligare, to bind], Rom. Antiq., one of a body of officials or guards who attended the chief magistrates, and bore as a badge of authority the fasces, a bundle of rods surrounding an ax with the blade projecting.



Lictor

lid (lĭd), n. [< A.S. hlid, lid], 1, a movable cover closing an opening, as of a box, trunk, etc.; top; 2, the cover of the eye: Slang, 1, a hat; 2, police restraint of crime; as, to put the lid on.—adj. lid'ded.

lid-less (lĭd'lĕs), adj. 1, devoid of a cover; 2, without lids, as the eyes of snakes and certain other animals; 3, hence, wakeful; alert; watchful.

[1]lie (lī), n. [< A.S. lēogan, to lie < O.Teut. source], 1, a falsehood; 2, anything that misleads or is intended to mislead: to give the lie to, to accuse of falsehood: lie detector, a device or apparatus for determining whether a spoken statement is a lie by utilizing the effects of uttering it, often unconscious, upon the speaker:—v.i. [p.t. and p.p. lied (līd), p.pr. lying], 1, to speak a falsehood; 2, to make false representations; as, figures never lie.

Syn., n. untruth, falsity, fabrication, quibble, prevarication, equivocation, mendacity, falsehood. An untruth is something stated which is contracy to fact. A falsehood is the utterance of something known to be untrue; if it is the cloaking sort of refuge indulged in by frightened children, it is less culpable than an untruth told with intent to deceive. A lie is a deliberate, intentional falsehood. A quibble is an evasion of the truth, effected often by the shifting operation known as "side-stepping," or by making capital of ambiguity. An equivocation is a deliberate concealing of the truth behind words capable of a double interpretation. A fabrication is an invention; it is sometimes a plain lie; it is sometimes a fanciful embroidery of fact indulged in by the imaginative, and creative of more amusement than harm, as its nature is perfectly evident; sometimes it is a story told for its fictional or dramatic value. In this last-named sense, it is not of course comparable with the other words, as it is not meant to deceive. Mendacity is habitual, shameless lying; it bespeaks a falseness in the very nature of the person practicing it.—Ant., n. truth, fact, verity, reality.

[2]lie (lī), v.i. [p.t. lay (lā), p.p. lain (lān), p.pr. lying], [< A.S. licgan, to lie < O.Teut. source], 1, to assume, or rest in, a reclining position: often with down; 2, to be at rest, usually horizontally: used of things; 3, to be, for a period, in a state of disuse, inactivity, or the like; 4, to exist or be situated in a certain position, connection, or arrangement; as, the town lies west of the river; 5, to extend, or have direction; as, the road lies before us; 6, to exist; reside; be found; as, the trouble lies in the engine; 7, to stop for the night; lodge: Law, to be valid or able to be sustained, as an action:—n. 1, the way, position, or direction in which a thing lies; 2, the lair of an animal: Golf, the position in which a ball in play comes to rest or is placed to be struck.

Lied (lēt), n. [pl. Lieder (lē'dĕr)], [Ger. = song], Mus., a German song or ballad.

Lie-der-sing-er (lē'dĕr-zĭng"ĕr), n. [Ger. = song singer], Mus., one who specializes in the singing of German songs and ballads.

lief (lēf), adj. [< A.S. lēof, pleasant, dear], Archaic, 1, willing; 2, precious; valued:—adv. willingly; gladly; as, he had (or would) as lief go as stay.

liege (lōj), adj. [< O.F. lige, perh. < O.H.G. ledig, free], 1, having the feudal right to devotion and service; sovereign; as, he reverenced his liege lady; 2, bound by feudal law to give service and allegiance; 3, faithful; true:—n. 1, one bound by feudal law to give service; a vassal; 2, a sovereign; lord and master.

liege man 1, a vassal; 2, hence, a devoted follower or adherent. Also, n. liege'man [pl. -men (-mĕn)].

li-en (lē'ən; lēn), n. [Fr. < Lat. ligamen, a binding], Law, 1, a legal claim upon property until a debt upon it is discharged; 2, security for payment: mechanic's lien, a right to compensation for labor or material supplied in improving real property, enforceable as a legal claim against that property.

lieu (lū), n. [Fr. < Lat. locus, place], place; stead: used in the phrase in lieu of.

Lieut. abbr. Lieutenant (also, Lt.):—Lieut. Col., Lieutenant Colonel.

lieu-ten-an-cy (lū-tĕn'ăn-sĭ), n. [pl. -cies (-sĭz)], [see lieutenant], the office, term of office, rank, or authority of a lieutenant.

lieu-ten-ant (lū-tĕn'ănt; Br. lĕf-tĕn'ănt), n. [< Fr. lieu, place + tenant, p.pr. of tenir, to hold], 1, one who acts for a superior; 2, in the army, an officer ranking next below a captain; 3, in the British navy, an officer ranking next below a commander; 4, in the U. S. navy, a commissioned officer ranking next below a lieutenant commander: lieutenant colonel, an army officer next in rank above a major, and below a colonel: lieutenant commander, in the U. S. navy, an officer ranking next above a lieutenant, and below a commander: lieutenant general, an army officer next in rank above a major general, and below a general: lieutenant governor, a deputy governor; one next in rank below a governor, who succeeds to the office in case of the latter's death.

Lieut. Gen. abbr. Lieutenant General:—Lieut. Gov., Lieutenant Governor.

life (līf), n. [pl. lives (līvz)], [< A.S. līf. life], 1, the particular quality which marks the difference between an animal or plant and an inorganic body, or a dead organism; 2, the state of being alive; living existence; vitality; as, to bring to life that which appears to be dead; 3, union of soul and body; 4, a living person; as, but one life was saved from the wreck; 5, living beings regarded collectively; as, human life; animal life; 6, the period between birth and death; as, all the years of a man's life; the period from birth to the present; as, all my life; the period from the present to death; as, I shall live my life as well as I can; 7, manner of living; as, a life of pleasure; 8, a biography; as, a life of Tennyson; 9, animation; vivacity; as, she was full of life; 10, the controlling principle; the moving spirit; as, he was the life of the household; 11, the period during which a thing exists in an efficient condition; as, the life of a car; life of an empire; 12, living counterpart; also, spirit, as of a statue; 13, intelligent or conscious existence, thought of as a quality of the soul; as, spiritual life: life belt, a buoyant girdle, as of cork, to keep persons afloat: life buoy, a float, often a buoyant ring, to keep persons afloat.—adj. life'ful.

life-blood (līf'blŭd"), n. [life + blood], 1, the blood necessary to life; vital blood; 2, any source or spring of vital strength and energy.

life-boat (līf'bōt"), n. [life + boat], a strong boat, specially constructed for rescues at sea and for escape from shipwrecked vessels (see davit, illus.).

life guard 1, a body of troops defending the person of a sovereign or a high officer; 2, in the United States, an expert swimmer at public bathing beaches, detailed to save people from drowning.

life in-sur-ance 1, a type of insurance based on a contract by which, in consideration of certain periodic payments called premiums, a company agrees to pay a certain sum of money to a stated beneficiary at a stipulated time or at the death of the insured person; 2, the contract making such an agreement: called a policy; 3, the amount of money to be paid to the insured or his beneficiary.

life-less (līf'lĕs), adj. [see life], 1, not possessing life; inanimate; deprived of life; dead; also, seemingly dead; insensible; 2, wanting in energy and vitality; listless; dull.—adv. life'less-ly.—n. life'less-ness.

Syn. inanimate, torpid, inert, heavy. (See dead.)

life-like (līf'lĭk"), adj. [life + like], like the real thing; realistic.—n. life'like"ness.

life line 1, a rope thrown to a vessel in distress; 2, a diver's signal rope (see diver, illus.); 3, one of the main lines in the palm of the hand (see palmistry, illus.).

life-long (līf'lông"), adj. [life + long], enduring or remaining throughout life.

life pre-serv-er 1, a jacket or belt of buoyant material, for keeping a person afloat; 2, a weighted stick or cane.

LIFE PRESERVER

life-size (līf'sīz"), adj. of natural or original size.

life-time (līf'tīm"), n. [life + time], the duration of existence, or of one's life.

lift (lift), v.t. [< O.N. lypta, to lift: related to loft, sky], 1, to raise to a higher point: place in a higher position; 2, to maintain in an elevated position; as, the mountains lift their heads; 3, to exalt; raise to a higher degree or condition, physically or spiritually; 4, to remove; 5, to pay off (a mortgage); 6, to treat (the face) surgically so as to tighten up sagging muscles, remove wrinkles, or improve the contour: Dial. Eng., to collect, as wages, rent, etc.; Colloq., to steal, as cattle: Golf, 1, to remove (the ball), as from a hazard, to a better lie behind the original position, counting the penalty and continuing to play; 2, to take up (the ball) from an unplayable position, or when the player is already beaten, thereby conceding the hole:—v.i. 1, to exert strength in raising something; pull upward; 2, to rise or have the appearance of rising; as, the fog lifts:—n. 1, the act of raising to a higher point; also, that which is raised; 2, hence, high position; as, the proud lift of her head; 3, the height to which, or through which, anything is raised; 4, aid; help; assistance; as, give me a lift with this burden; 5, in England, an elevator; 6, an advance in position; promotion; 7, that which raises or is raised, as a handle on a window sash, one thickness of leather in the heel of a shoe, or the like; Naut., a rope from the mast to an end of a yard below, supporting the yard (see rigging, illus.): lift pump, a pump which lifts a liquid but does not force it out under pressure; a suction pump (see ¹*pump*, illus.): opposite of force pump.—n. lift'er.

lig-a-ment (lĭg'ă-mĕnt), n. [< Lat. ligamentum < ligare, to bind], a bond or connecting tie: Anat., any band of strong, fibrous tissue which connects the ends of bones, or holds in place an organ of the body.—adj. lig"a-men'tous (-mĕn'tŭs).

li-gan (lī'găn), n. [< O.F. lagan, perh. < Scand. source; akin to ²lie], Law, goods cast overboard with an identifying buoy attached. Also, lag'an (lăg'ăn).

li-gate (lī'gāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. ligated, p.pr. ligating], [< Lat. ligare (-atus), to bind], to bind with a ligature, or narrow bandage.—n. li-ga'tion.

lig-a-ture (lĭg'ă-tûr), n. 1, the act of tying or binding; 2, a thing that unites or binds; a narrow bandage: Mus., a curved line connecting notes, or the notes so connected; a slur; Print., a double character, or two or more letters united to form a single character, as fl or æ; also, a proof reader's mark [⁀] placed over two letters to indicate that they are to be printed as a ligature; Surg., a thread or wire, used to tie blood vessels to arrest bleeding, etc.:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -tured (-tûrd), p.pr. -turing], to tie or bind with a ligature, or narrow band; ligate.

li-geance (lī'jăns; lē'-), n. [see liege], Archaic, allegiance; Law, the district ruled over, or the extent of power exercised, by a sovereign.

¹light (līt), n. [< A.S. lēoht, light], 1, the condition of illumination necessary for vision: opposite of darkness; 2, luminous, radiant energy; that which acts upon the eye to cause sight; 3, the sensation excited in the eye from which sight results; 4, brightness given out by an illuminated or illuminating body; 5, that which so illuminates; 6, a window, or a window pane; 7, daylight; especially, dawn; 8, clear mental vision or that which gives it; as, to throw light on a problem; 9, appearance from a special point of view; as, to put the matter in a new light; 10, the state of being visible, especially in public; as, his deeds were brought to light; 11, a means of producing or kindling a flame or blaze of light; 12, an eminent or model person: often referred to as a shining light: Painting, the bright part of a painting or picture: opposite of shade:—adj. 1, clear or bright; not dark; 2, pale in color; blond:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. lighted or lit (līt), p.pr. lighting], 1, to set on fire; kindle; 2, to cause to shine and give forth brightness; 3, to illuminate; as, the lamp lights up the room; 4, to furnish with, or guide by, a light:—v.i. 1, to take fire; 2, to be illuminated; reflect brightness: often with up: Obs., to grow light; shine.

Syn., n. blaze, flare, flame, flash, glare, gleam, glimmer, glitter, glow, sparkle, illumination. Blaze and flame suggest light accompanied by heat; a flame is often sudden and intermittent; while a blaze is steadier both in heat and light, and is usually larger than a flame; thus, a candle flame, but the blaze of the sun. Flare suggests a sudden, unsteady, blinding light, as that of a torch; flash, a sudden light of short duration; glare, a steady, blinding, unpleasant light; gleam, a momentary, small light shining through darkness; glimmer, a faint wavering light; glitter, a hard, brilliant light; glow, a warm, soft, subdued, often rosy light; and sparkle, light in small, quick, sudden flashes. Illumination means either the general condition of light or brightness, or, specifically, the decoration of a house, a street, etc., with lights.—Ant., adj. dark, dim, gloomy.

²light (līt), adj. [< A.S. lēoht, light, not heavy], 1, of little weight or specific gravity; not heavy; 2, short in weight, as a coin; 3, delicate in structure or appearance; 4, easy to understand, perform, or endure; as, light books; light tasks; light taxes; 5, of food, easy of digestion; as, a light diet; not soggy; 6, of wines, containing little alcohol; 7, not heavy in movement or touch; also, nimble; easy; graceful; 8, of small volume; not dense: as, a light rain; 9, sandy or friable, as soil; 10, not heavily equipped; as, light infantry; 11, having no burden or care; cheerful; gay; as, light of heart; 12, feeling no responsibility; unsteady; frivolous; fickle; hence, 13, morally loose or lax; 14, unstable; flighty: light heavyweight, a pugilist weighing 160, but less than 175, pounds:—v.i. [p.t. and p.p. lighted or lit (lĭt), p.pr. lighting], 1, to come down: alight, as from a horse; also, settle from flight, as a bird; 2, to come by chance: with on or upon; 3, to fall suddenly, as a blow.—adv. light'ly.

[1]light-en (līt'n), v.t. [see [1]light], 1, to give light to; make bright, as the face, eye, sky, etc.; 2, to illuminate intellectually; 3, to flash forth or reveal, as in lightning:—v.i. 1, to gleam or flash with light; 2, to clear; become lighter.

[2]light-en (līt'n), v.t. [see [2]light], 1, to reduce in weight; 2, to alleviate, as cares or burdens; 3, to gladden or brighten:—v.i. to become less heavy.

[1]light-er (līt'ẽr), n. [see [1]light], one who or that which illuminates or makes bright; specifically, a tightly twisted strip of paper or an electrical device for lighting gas, cigarettes, etc.

[2]light-er (līt'ẽr), n. [see [2]light], a large, open barge used in loading and unloading vessels not lying at a wharf, or in carrying freight about a harbor.

light-er-age (līt'ẽr-ăj), n. 1, the unloading of a cargo by large, open barges, called lighters; 2, the charge made for such work.

light-face (līt'fās"), n. [light+face], Print., ordinary type, having relatively thin lines: opposite of boldface (see page 1174).—adj. light'-faced".

light-fin-gered (līt'=fĭng"gẽrd), adj. 1, having a deft, graceful touch; 2, addicted to picking pockets; thievish.—n. light"-fin'gered-ness.

light-foot-ed (līt'=fo͝ot"ĕd), adj. not heavy of step; nimble; springy; of lively gait. Also, light'-foot".—adv. light"-foot'ed-ly.

light-head-ed (līt'=hĕd"ĕd; līt'=hĕd"ĭd), adj. 1, dizzy; slightly delirious; out of one's head, as in a fever; 2, thoughtless; heedless.—adv. light"-head'ed-ly.—n. light"-head'ed-ness.

light-heart-ed (līt'=härt"ĕd), adj. free from care; gay; cheerful; sanguine.—adv. light"-heart'ed-ly.—n. light"-heart'ed-ness.

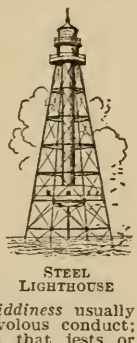
light-horse-man (līt'=hôrs"măn), n. [pl. -men (-mĕn)], a cavalry soldier bearing light arms or equipment.

light-house (līt'hous"), n. [[1]light+house], a tower or other structure with a brilliant, flashing or steady light at the top, by which ships are guided at night.



STEEL LIGHTHOUSE

light-mind-ed (līt'=mīnd"ĕd), adj. without mental seriousness or force; frivolous; silly.—n. light"-mind'ed-ness.

[1]light-ness (līt'nĕs), n. [see [1]light], the state of being illuminated; degree of illumination.

[2]light-ness (līt'nĕs), n. [see [2]light], 1, the state or quality of being small in weight; hence, 2, lack of seriousness; frivolity; fickleness; nimbleness; delicacy; grace.

Syn. gaiety, giddiness, flippancy, levity, flightiness, unsteadiness, inconstancy, volatility, buoyancy. Gaiety is a proper lightness of heart apparent in speech and manner. Giddiness, flippancy, levity, and flightiness are alike in being forms of gaiety carried to an extreme; but they differ in that giddiness usually means merely unsuitably wild or frivolous conduct; flippancy refers especially to speech that jests or trifles with a serious subject or upon a serious occasion; levity refers to inappropriately gay or trifling speech or conduct; as, in regard to so grave a decision his levity was ill-timed; and flightiness implies an unbalanced mental condition. Unsteadiness, inconstancy, and volatility are alike in suggesting lack of firmness; but unsteadiness suggests readiness to be moved from a purpose; inconstancy adds to this the idea of failure in loyalty; and volatility implies a fickle readiness to fly from one idea or plan to another. Buoyancy, taken literally, means lightness sufficient to enable a body to float on a liquid; but it suggests a lightness of spirit which can keep its possessor from sinking under trouble.

light-ning (līt'nĭng), n. [contr. of lightening <lighten, to flash], a sudden discharge of electricity between clouds, or between clouds and the ground: lightning arrester, Elec., a device for protecting electrical instruments from lightning.

light-ning bug a firefly; any insect that emits a phosphorescent light while flying.

light-ning rod a metal rod fastened on a building, and connected with the earth, to protect the building from lightning.

lights (līts), n.pl. [<A.S. (thā) lihtan, (the) light things: akin to [2]*light], the lungs of domestic animals or, Obs. or Vulgar, of human beings.

light-ship (līt'shĭp"), n. [[1]light+*ship], Naut., a vessel carrying a warning light and moored at a dangerous place, or marking a channel.

[1]light-some (līt'sŭm), adj. [[1]light+*-some], Rare, 1, having light; 2, luminous.

[2]light-some (līt'sŭm), adj. [[2]light+*-some], 1, cheerful; lively; 2, nimble; 3, frivolous.

light-weight (līt'wāt"), n. [[2]light+*weight], 1, one who weighs less than the average; especially, a pugilist who weighs 130, but less than 135, pounds; 2, a stupid or unimportant person:—adj. 1, below average in weight; 2, of little account.

light-wood (līt'wo͝od"), n. [[1]light+*wood], in the southern United States, pine wood full of pitch or resin, used for torches and kindling.

light year Astron., a unit of stellar distance: the distance traversed by light in one year, equal to approximately 5,880,000,000,000 miles.

lign-al-oes (lĭn"=ăl'ōz; lĭg=năl'ōz), n. [<L.L. lignum aloes, wood of aloe], an East Indian tree (Aquilaria agallocha) containing aromatic resin; the agallochum; also, its wood, burned as incense.

lig-ne-ous (lĭg'nē-ŭs), adj. [<Lat. ligneus<lignum, wood], composed of, or like, wood.

lig-ni-fy (lĭg'nĭ-fī), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -fied (-fīd), p.pr. -fying], [<Fr. lignifier<Lat. lignum, wood+facere, to make], to turn into wood:—v.i. to become like wood.—n. lig'ni-fi-ca'tion.

lig-nin (lĭg'nĭn), n. [<Lat. lignum, wood], Bot., a substance that forms the main part of wood in woody stems, found in the thickened cell wall.

lig-nite (lĭg'nīt), n. a soft, brownish black kind of coal showing the original structure of the wood and intermediate between peat and bituminous coal: also called brown coal.—adj. lig-nit'ic (-nĭt'ĭk).

lig-num-vi-tæ (lĭg'nŭm=vī'tē), n. [Lat.=wood of life], the very heavy hard wood of certain trees of tropical America, especially the guaiacum, and of Australia; also, any of these trees.

lig-u-la (lĭg'ū-lă), n. [pl. -læ (-lē); -las (-lăz)], [Lat., dim. of lingua, tongue], Bot., a tongue-shaped part of a leaf; Zoöl., a tonguelike part of the mouth of an insect.

lig-u-late (lĭg'ū-lāt), adj. tongue-shaped: Bot. and Zoöl., having certain parts tongue-shaped. Also, lig'u-lat"ed.

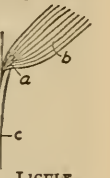
lig-ule (lĭg'ūl), n. Bot., a thin, membranous part attached to a leaf at the point where the blade joins the leafstalk, as in the grasses.

lig-ure (lĭg'ûr), n. [<Gk. ligurion, a gem], one of the twelve precious stones in the Jewish high priest's breastplate (Ex. 28:19; 39:12).



LIGULE
a, ligule; b, leaf blade; c, stem.

Li-gu-ri-an (lĭ-gū'rĭ-ăn), adj. [<Lat. Ligures], pertaining to Liguria, a district of ancient Italy:—n. a native of Liguria.

[1]like (līk), adj. [comp. more like, Rare, liker, superl. most like, Rare, likest], [<A.S. gelīc, similar, like<O.Teut. source], 1, similar; equal or nearly equal; as, in a like manner; 2, in a mood for; disposed to: with a verbal noun; as, I feel like reading; 3, characteristic of; as, it was like him to be generous; 4, giving promise of; showing evidence of; as, it looks like rain; this looks like revenge: Dial., likely; as, I was like to die:—prep. in the manner of; as, you act like your father:—adv. Archaic, in the same way or manner: with as; as, "like as a father pitieth his children"; Collog., 1, probably; as, very like he'll go; 2, so to speak: used parenthetically; as, his face was pinched like:—conj. Archaic or Dial., as; as if; as, do like I do; he acts like he was boss:—n. that which is equal or similar to another; a counterpart; as, where will you find his like? Golf, the stroke that, when played, will equalize the number of strokes played by each side.

[2]like (līk), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. liked (līkt), p.pr. liking], [<A.S. līcian, to please, be suitable for<O.Teut. source], to have a taste for; enjoy; find agreeable; also, to wish, or want:—v.i. to choose; as, do as you like:—n.pl. the things one fancies; as, our likes and dislikes.—adj. lik'a-ble; like'a-ble.—n. lik'a-ble-ness.

-like adj. suffix, [see [1]like], similar to; resembling: added freely to nouns, without hyphen except when stem word ends in l: as, boy*like*; eel-like.

like-li-hood (līk'lī-hŏŏd), n. [see likely], 1, probability; 2, something that is likely to happen; 3, evidence; indication; 4, prospect; promise, as, a man of little likelihood.

like-ly (līk'lĭ), adj. [comp. -lier, superl. -liest], [< O.N. líkligr, likely], 1, credible; plausible; as, a likely story; 2, suitable; well-adapted; as, a likely place to hide; 3, being such as to make probable; as, that is likely to happen; 4, favorable; promising: Archaic or Colloq., good-looking; as, a likely child:—adv. probably; in all probability.

Syn., adj. probable, credible, plausible. A likely event is one that might in the circumstances happen; a likely rumor is such as might prove true; a likely prophecy is one that is apt to be justified by events. Probable is not so emphatic as likely; it connotes less assurance, more of doubt, although carrying the idea that the odds are in favor of the thing specified; a probable event may be expected to happen; a probable rumor is apt to prove true; a probable story has more evidence for it than against it. (See apt.)

lik-en (līk'n), v.t. [see 1like], to regard or represent as like; compare: followed by to or unto; as, "I will liken him unto a wise man."

like-ness (līk'nĕs), n. 1, state or quality of being like; resemblance; similarity; 2, a portrait; copy; 3, guise; external appearance.

Syn. resemblance, similarity, identity, agreement, parallel, portrait, effigy. Likeness, resemblance, and similarity are often used one for another. Likeness, however, connotes an essential and specific sameness in the qualities or properties under discussion. Resemblance may suggest merely a fleeting or superficial correspondence. Similarity expresses a degree of likeness, but it is also casual, contingent, external in its nature. There is at times a startling likeness between father and son; a mirror reflects our likeness. A stranger's faint resemblance to some one we know bothers us until we can recall the one we are reminded of; a resemblance in form or shape is noticeable among natural objects, especially as seen in different lights or from different angles. Similarity is observable between characters, circumstances, reactions, styles of speech, modes of making decisions, acres, or the like.

like-wise (līk'wīz"), adv. [< in like wise, in similar manner], in a similar manner; also; too:—conj. also; moreover.

lik-ing (līk'ĭng), n. [see 2like], fondness; inclination; desire: often with for; as, my liking for her increased: Archaic, good appearance.

li-lac (lī'lăk), n. [Fr. < Arab. līlak, indigo plant < Pers. nīlak, bluish], 1, any of a genus (Syringa) of shrubs of the olive family, especially a species (S. vulgaris) native to Europe and Asia, the flowers of which are generally small, clustered, fragrant, and white or pinkish purple (see inflorescence, illus.); 2, the characteristic color of the lilac; a pinkish purple.

lil-i-a-ceous (lĭl"ĭ-ā'shŭs), adj. [< Lat. liliaceus < lilium, lily], pertaining to, or resembling, lilies: Bot., 1, pertaining, or belonging, to the lily family; 2, similar to the lily.

lil-ied (lĭl'ĭd), adj. [see lily], decorated with lilies: Poet., resembling, or having many, lilies.

Lil-ith (lĭl'ĭth; lī'lĭth), n. [Heb. = night demon], 1, in ancient Hebrew legend, an evil spirit, apparently of Babylonian origin, regarded in early times as a demon of the night, later as a vampire in the form of a seductive woman; 2, according to some Jewish traditions, the first wife of Adam; 3, in medieval legend, a witch.

lil-li-bul-le-ro (lĭl"ĭ-bŭ-lē'rō), n. [meaningless refrain of a song], part of the refrain of a song mocking the Irish Roman Catholics at the time of the revolution of 1688; hence, the song itself: Mus. a light ballad, often a parody.

Lil-li-pu-tian (lĭl"ĭ-pū'shăn), adj. [< name invented by Jonathan Swift], 1, of or pertaining to Lilliput, a fictitious country described in Swift's "Gulliver's Travels," inhabited by a race of tiny people, about six inches tall; 2, hence, very small: —n. 1, one of the inhabitants of Lilliput; 2, a very small or insignificant person; a dwarf. Also, Lil"i-pu'tian.

lilt (lĭlt), n. [< M.E. lulte, perh. related to Norw. lilla, to sing], 1, a light or lively tune; a merry song; 2, rhythmic movement; as, the lilt of verse; 3, a sprightly motion:—v.t. to sing in a rhythmic and gay manner:—v.i. to sing gaily; as, to lilt and play.

lil-y (lĭl'ĭ), n. [pl. lilies (-lz)], [< Lat. lilium, lily], 1, any of a genus (Lilium) of plants, typical of a large family (Liliaceæ), having a bulblike root and more or less conical, showy flowers (for colored illus. see flower): 2, any of various related plants resembling true lilies: 3, the fleur-de-lis as a heraldic charge, especially on the royal arms of France: often in pl.: lily of the valley, a low-growing, perennial herb (Convallaria majalis), bearing racemes of fragrant, white, bell-shaped flowers (for illus. see inflorescence): lily pad, one of the broad, flat, floating leaves of the water lily:—adj. 1, resembling a lily; 2, white; pale; 3, innocent; pure.

lil-y-liv-ered (lĭl'ĭ-lĭv"ĕrd), adj. 1, having a pale or wan look: white-livered; 2, hence, cowardly; timid; base; timorous.

Li-ma bean (lī'mă), [< Lima, Peru: bean is orig. from S. Am.], a common variety of bean (Phaseolus limensis), or its flat seed, prized as food.

[1]limb (lĭm), n. [< A.S. lim, limb of body; branch of tree], 1, an arm, leg, or wing; 2, one of the main branches of a tree; 3, any part resembling a leg or branch; as, the limb of a cross; also, a projection; a spur, as of a mountain chain; 4, any person or thing regarded as part of something else; a branch, member, or representative; as, a policeman is a limb of the law: Colloq., a mischievous child:—v.t. to cut or tear the legs or branches from: Rare, to furnish with arms or legs.

[2]limb (lĭm), n. [< Lat. limbus, edge], the graduated part of a leveling rod or of an instrument for measuring angles: Astron., the circular edge of the disk of the sun or moon or of a planet.

limbed (lĭmd), adj. [see 1limb], possessed of limbs: usually in combination; as, long-limbed.

[1]lim-ber (lĭm'bĕr), n. [< earlier lymor, perh. < Fr. limonière, shafts and frame], Mil., the detachable front part of a gun carriage:—v.t. Mil., to attach the limber to (a gun carriage):—v.i. to attach the trail of a gun to the limber: often with up.

LIMBER

[2]lim-ber (lĭm'bĕr), adj. [source uncertain], 1, flexible; pliant; limp; 2, supple; lithe; nimble:—v.t. to make flexible, easy to bend, or supple.—n. lim'ber-ness.

Syn., adj. pliable, supple, lithe, pliant. (See flexible.) —Ant., adj. stiff, rigid, brittle, firm, unbending.

lim-bo (lĭm'bō), n. [< Lat. in limbo, on the edge (of hell) < limbus, edge], 1, in medieval theology, the eternal abode of the souls of those who never had opportunity to accept the Christian faith; 2, a place of confinement or oblivion: Slang, jail. Also, lim'bus.

Lim-burg cheese (lĭm'bûrg) [< place name], a mild-flavored, strong-smelling cheese, originally made in the province of Limburg, Belgium: also called Limburger cheese and Limburger.

[1]lime (līm), n. [< A.S. līm, cement], 1, a sticky substance smeared on twigs to catch small birds: usually called birdlime; 2, a white, earthlike substance, calcium oxide, obtained by the action of heat upon limestone, marble, sea shells, etc., and used in making cement, mortar, etc.: also called quicklime; 3, quicklime mixed with water, forming white powder, calcium hydroxide: also called slaked lime:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. limed (līmd), p.pr. liming], 1, to apply quicklime to; dress with slaked lime, as land; 2, to catch, as birds, with a sticky substance smeared on twigs; 3, also, to smear with birdlime.

[2]lime (līm), n. [Fr. < Pers. līmūn, a lemon], a tree (Citrus medica acida) yielding a small, juicy, acid fruit, much like a lemon; also, the fruit of this tree.

[3]lime (līm), n. [prob. var. of lind, old form of linden], the linden: a much-used shade tree.

lime-kiln (līm'kĭl"; -kĭln"), n. [1lime+kiln], a furnace for the burning of limestone or shells, to obtain lime.

lime-light (līm'līt"), n. [1lime+1light], 1, a brilliant, incandescent light produced by playing upon lime an intensely hot flame made by burning a mixture of hydrogen and oxygen under pressure in a jet: also called calcium light or oxyhydrogen light; 2, the brilliant light thrown upon the central figure or group on a stage; spotlight; 3, hence, notoriety; prominent position before the public.

li-men (lī'mĕn), n. [Lat. = threshold], Psych., 1, the threshold; the point at which a stimulus gradually intensified, or a difference, gradually increased, between similar stimuli, becomes just barely perceptible; 2, a quantitative measure of stimulation: absolute limen, the measure of a stimulus that is just perceptible: difference limen, the measure of difference between two similar stimuli that are barely to be distinguished.—adj. lim'i-nal.

lim-er-ick (lĭm'ĕr-ĭk), n. [perh. < refrain of nonsense song, "Will you come up to Limerick?"], a nonsense poem of five anapestic lines, of which lines one, two, and five have three stresses and rime, and three and four have two stresses and rime.

lime-stone (līm'stōn"), n. [lime + stone], a kind of rock, essentially of calcium carbonate: used for building stone, for road construction, in smelting iron, and, when burned, as a source of lime.

lime twig a twig smeared with birdlime for catching birds; hence, a snare of any kind.

lime-wa-ter (līm'wô'tẽr), n. [lime + water], a saturated aqueous solution of lime: used medicinally as a mild alkali.

li-mic-o-line (lī-mik'ō-līn; -lĭn), adj. [< Lat. limus, mud + colere, to inhabit], Zoöl., frequenting the shore; Ornith., pertaining to shore birds, as the snipes and plovers.

lim-it (lĭm'ĭt), n. [< Fr. limite < Lat. limes (-itis), boundary], 1, that which confines, ends, or bounds; a border or boundary; a fixed line or point beyond which extent is not possible: used of space, time, quantity, etc.; utmost extent; 2, something that has boundaries or borders; a district or region: Math., a value or form such that the difference between it and a variable value or form becomes, and remains during subsequent stages of variation, less than any preassigned difference, however small; as, the circumference of a circle forms the limit of the lengths of the perimeters of the circumscribed and the inscribed regular polygons as the number of sides is increased: —v.t. to set bounds to; confine within bounds: Law, to set a limit to; allot; fix.—adj. lim'it-a-ble.

lim-i-ta-ry (lĭm'ĭ-tā-rĭ), adj. 1, restricted; subject to limitations; 2, confining; bounding.

lim-i-ta-tion (lĭm"ĭ-tā'shŭn), n. 1, the act of bounding or restricting; 2, that which bounds, binds, or holds back; restriction; qualification: Law, a period, fixed by statute, after the expiration of which claims cannot be enforced.—adj. lim'i-ta-tive.

lim-it-ed (lĭm'ĭt-ĕd), p.adj. 1, restricted; circumscribed; 2, carrying a restricted number of passengers, at an increased fare: said of a railway train: Law, 1, controlled in action by constitutional provisions; as, a limited government or monarchy; 2, controlled in action and extent of liability by statute; as, a limited partnership: used also as the last word of a company's name to indicate that the liability of each shareholder is limited to the amount of his stock:—n. a fast express train, offering superior accommodations, and usually charging an extra fare.—adv. lim'it-ed-ly.

lim-it-less (lĭm'ĭt-lĕs), adj. having no limit; unconfined; immeasurable; boundless.

Syn. infinite, boundless, illimitable, unrestricted.

lim-mer (lĭm'ẽr), n. [source uncertain], Sc. and Dial. Eng., 1, a scamp; rascal; villain; 2, a worthless or immoral woman.

limn (lĭm), v.t. [< obs. lumine < O.F. luminer, to illuminate < Lat. lumen, light], 1, to paint or draw; 2, hence, to portray; depict: Obs., to illuminate, as books and manuscripts.—n. lim'ner.

Li-moges (lē-mōzh'), adj. [Fr.], pertaining to, or coming from, Limoges, a city of southwest France, famed for its china and enamel ware:—n. articles of porcelain or enamel made at Limoges.

li-mo-nite (lī'mō-nīt), n. [< Gk. leimōn, meadow: because at first used of bog iron ore], Mineral., hydrated ferric oxide, an important ore of iron: also called brown hematite, yellow ocher.

li-mou-sine (lĭm"ōō-zēn'; lē"mōō-zēn'), n. [Fr.], a type of motor car having a large, closed body and permanent top, and a separate covered, but not inclosed, seat for the driver.

[1]limp (lĭmp), v.i. [related to A.S. lempheall, limphalting or lame], to walk with a halt; go in a lame manner; of verse, to halt:—n. lameness in walking.

[2]limp (lĭmp), adj. [source uncertain], 1, lacking stiffness, firmness, or strength; 2, weak in character; lacking vigor.—adv. limp'ly.—n. limp'ness.

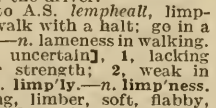
Syn. loose, elastic, drooping, limber, soft, flabby, flaccid.—Ant. stiff, substantial, firm, rigid, unbending.

lim-pet (lĭm'pĕt; -pĭt), n. [< A.S. lempedu < L.L. lampreda, limpet], any of several marine mollusks (class Gastropoda) having a more or less broadly cone-shaped shell, found sticking tightly to rocks and piles, and often used for food.



A LIMPET

lim-pid (lĭm'pĭd), adj. [< Lat. limpidus, clear], transparent; sparklingly clear; as, a limpid stream.—adv. lim'pid-ly.—n. lim'pid-ness.

—n. lim-pid'i-ty.

Syn. lucid, pellucid, crystalline. (See transparent.)

lim-y (līm'ĭ), adj. [comp. -ier, superl. -iest], [see [1]lime], 1, like, or with the qualities of, lime; 2, smeared with birdlime; sticky; 3, containing, or composed of, lime or birdlime.

linch-pin (lĭnch'pĭn"), n. [linch (< A.S. lynis, axle) + pin], a pin or piece of iron through the end of an axle to keep the wheel in place: also called axle pin.

LINCHPIN (A) Shown (B) in axle.

Lin-coln's Inn one of the four great legal societies of England: so called because the buildings it occupies in London were formerly owned by the Earl of Lincoln; also, the buildings themselves.

lin-den (lĭn'dĕn), n. [< A.S. lind, lime tree], any of a genus (Tilia) of large trees with heart-shaped leaves and small clusters of cream-colored flowers, bearing fruit in small balls with attached wings; basswood.

[1]line (līn), n. [< A.S. līne, cord, or < Fr. ligne, a line: both < Lat. linea, a string of flax < linum, flax], 1, a slender, strong string, wire, cord, or the like; as, a clothes*line;* fishing line; 2, a mark drawn by a pen, pencil, or the like, as in a drawing; also, any slender mark resembling this, as a wrinkle in the skin or a crease in the palm; 3, a boundary; as, to cross the line into Canada; hence any line of division, or limit; as, he drew the line at drinking; 4, a real or imaginary line defined by a series of objects; as, all four horses seemed to be in line; hence, figuratively, harmony, or accord; as, to bring voters into line; 5, contour; as, his face has good lines; hence, outline; plan; method; 6, a row of printed or written words, as the lines of a newspaper; hence, a verse; also, a short note or letter; 7, trolleys, vessels, stages, or the like, operated under one management over a regular route; as, the White Star Line; 8, railroad tracks or route; as, a branch line; main line; a system as a whole; also, one of the wires of a telephone or telegraph system; 9, a course of thought or conduct; also, a business or profession; 10, direction; track; route; 11, a measure of length, usually one twelfth of an inch; also, a millimeter; 12, pl. in geography, the marks on a map indicating the circles of latitude and longitude; 13, the equator: with the; 14, descendants of a common ancestor; family; lineage: Math., a figure which has extent in one dimension without breadth or thickness; Mus., one of the horizontal, parallel rulings that form the staff; Mil., 1, a row of defended positions; as, a trench in the front line; 2, a row of soldiers marching abreast; 3, the district occupied or inclosed by a military force; 4, the fighting forces of an army; Nav., 1, a certain formation of war vessels; 2, in the United States, the officers in charge of the direction of the fighting forces of a warship; Com., 1, a branch of commercial business; as, his line is hardware; 2, a stock of goods of a specified kind; as, a full line of silks; Aëro., an area in front of a hangar for warming up, etc.; apron: pl. 1, lot; fortune; as, hard lines; 2, the words of a part in a play: line officer, in the United States army, a captain or lieutenant, who commands his troops on the field in person: distinguished from staff officer and field officer: line telegraphy, telegraphy over wires: opposite of radio:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. lined (līnd), p.pr. lining], 1, to draw marks upon, as with a pen or pencil; 2, to place in a row side by side; as, to line fruit trees; 3, to show by lines; outline; 4, to establish a row along; as, to line a road with houses; 5, to read out a few words from, or one verse of, at a time; as, to line a hymn: Baseball, to bat (the ball) swiftly and close to the ground: Archaic, to help; aid:—v.i. to form a row; be in a row; as, the men line up for inspection.—n. [1]line'age.

[2]line (līn), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. lined (līnd), p.pr. lining], [< A.S. līn, flax: because linen was used for lining garments], 1, to cover on the inside, as a garment; 2, to serve as the inside covering of; 3, to put something inside; fill, as one's purse or pockets.—n. lin'er.

lin-e-age (lĭn'ē-ăj), n. [< O.F. lignage < Lat. linea, line], 1, descent from an ancestor; 2, family; pedigree; as, a lady of high lineage.

lin-e-al (lĭn'ē-ăl), adj. [< Fr. linéal < L.L. linealis, of a line], 1, pertaining to, or composed of, lines; linear; 2, pertaining to direct descent from an ancestor: opposite of collateral; 3, transmitted from father to son; hereditary.—adv. lin'e-al-ly.

lin-e-a-ment (lĭn'ē-ā-mĕnt), n. [< Lat. lineamentum < lineare, to draw lines on < linea, line], a feature or outline, especially of the face: usually pl.

lin-e-ar (lĭn'ē-ẽr), adj. [< Lat. linea, line], 1, pertaining to, or consisting of, a line or lines; 2, having length only; 3, resembling a line; hence, uniform in width, elongated, and very narrow: linear equation, Math., an equation between two or more variables, each in the first degree: so called because the graph of every such equation is a straight line.

line-man (līn'măn), n. [pl. -men (-mĕn)], [line + man], 1, a man who repairs the poles and wires of a telephone or telegraph, or of an electric system; 2, a man who inspects the rails of a railroad; 3, one who carries the tape, line, or chain in surveying.

lin-en (lin'ĕn; -in), n. [< A.S. līnen < līn, flax], 1, thread or fabric made of flax; 2, articles made of this cloth, as sheets, table linen, etc.; hence, 3, similar articles made of cotton:—adj. made of flax: linen draper, one who sells linen goods at retail.

line of force Phys., an imaginary line drawn in a field of force to represent the direction of the force at each point (see magnet, illus.).

lin-er (līn'ẽr), n. [see [1]line], 1, a steamship belonging to a regular system of passenger transport; especially, a large, swift steamship in transoceanic service: also sometimes used of dirigible aircraft operating in a somewhat similar manner; 2, one who or that which makes lines, or stripes: Baseball, a batted ball which flies nearly horizontally through the air.

lines-man (līnz'măn), n. [pl. -men (-mĕn)], [line + man], Football, an official who has charge of a line marking the progress of the ball in play and the distance to be gained; Lawn Tennis, one of several officials who watch the lines of the court and decide whether the ball in play strikes in or out with respect to them.

line–up (līn'ʷŭp″), n. in football, the arrangement of the players just before a play; hence, Colloq., any grouping of persons. Also, line' up″.

[1]ling (ling), n. [< M.E. lenge, perh. < A.S. lang, long: in allusion to its length], 1, a large North Atlantic fish (Molva molva) resembling the cod; 2, any of various other fishes, as the burbot, hake, etc.

[2]ling (ling), n. [< M.E. lyng < O.N. lyng, heath], the common heather of England and Scotland.

[1]-ling n. suffix, 1, [< A.S. < O.Teut. source], meaning one connected or related; as, nurse*ling*; 2, [< O.N. < O.Teut. source], forming diminutives, often contemptuous; as, duck*ling*; prince*ling*.

[2]-ling adv. suffix, [< A.S. < O.Teut.], Archaic or Dial., showing direction or condition; as, dark*ling*.

lin-ger (ling'gẽr), v.i. [< A.S. lengan, to lengthen], 1, to delay; daily about; 2, to remain alive, though waning, suffering, dying, or the like; 3, to remain long or be reluctant to go:—v.t. to pass slowly; lengthen in time: Obs., to defer; delay.—n. lin'ger-er.

lin-ge-rie (lăn″zhē-rē′), n. [Fr. < linge, linen], 1, linen articles collectively; 2, specifically, linen, cotton, or silk undergarments for women.

lin-go (ling'gō), n. [pl. -goes (-gōz)], [corr. of lingua (franca), q.v.], a form of speech; dialect: used generally in a humorous or contemptuous way of an unfamiliar language or vocabulary.

Syn. jargon, cant, dialect. (See language.)

lin-gua fran-ca (ling'gwȧ frăng'kȧ), [It. = Frankish tongue], a mixture of several languages, as Italian, Greek, Turkish, etc., used by western Europeans in their intercourse with the Oriental races; hence, any mixture of languages similarly used.

lin-gual (ling'gwăl), adj. [< Lat. lingua, tongue], 1, pertaining to the tongue; 2, shaped like a tongue: Phon., formed by the tongue:—n. Phon., a letter or sound formed by the tongue, as l, r, th, etc.

lin-guist (ling'gwist), n. one skilled in languages; a student of languages.

lin-guis-tic (ling-gwis'tik), adj. pertaining to the study and comparison of languages: n.pl. used as sing. the science of language; the comparative study of the origin, growth, likenesses, and differences of languages.—adj. lin-guis'ti-cal.

lin-i-ment (lin'ĭ-mĕnt), n. [< Lat. linimentum < linire, to smear], Med., a liquid applied to the skin by friction to soothe or stimulate.

lin-ing (lin'ing), n. [see [2]line], 1, a covering for the inside of anything; 2, contents; as, the best lining for a purse is money; 3, the act of furnishing or inserting an inside covering.

[1]link (lingk), n. [< O.N. < O. Teut source], 1, a single loop or division of a chain; specifically, a length in a surveyor's land measure, equal to 7.92 inches; 2, a single part of a connected series; as, a link in a chain of evidence; 3, a connection; tie; as, bound by links of friendship: Colloq., one section of a chain of sausages: link motion, Mech., a system of rigid pieces linked or pivoted together; specifically, such a system used on a steam engine to control the valve gear, especially in reversing the engine (see illus. next column):—v.t. to connect by, or as by, a link; couple: Elec., to encircle; pass about, as a ring about a stake; as, the lines of magnetic force link the electric circuit:—v.i. to be connected or coupled.—n. link'age.

[2]link (lingk), n. [source uncertain], a torch made of pitch and tow, or coarse flax.

link-boy (lingk'boi″), n. [[2]link + boy], one who carries a link or torch: also called linkman.

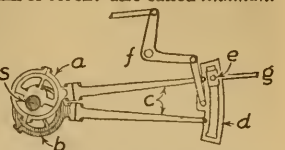
links (lingks), n.pl. sometimes used as sing. [< A.S. hlinc, ridge of land], golf grounds; a golf course: Sc., flat or rolling land along a seashore.



ONE TYPE OF LINK MOTION

a, b, straps inclosing eccentric disks, which are both attached to shaft, s (in a locomotive, the axle of a driving wheel); c, rods connected with ends of slot link, d; e, block with flanges, between which link slides up or down, as adjusted by lever pivoted at f; g, rod actuating the D valve.

linn (lin), n. [< A.S. hlynn, torrent, or Gael. linne, pool], Sc., 1, a waterfall; 2, a pool above or below this; 3, a sheer gully; high and steep ravine.

Lin-næ-an (lĭ-nē'ăn), adj. [< Lat. Linnaeus, Lat. name of Karl von Linné (1707–78), Sw. naturalist], pertaining to Linné, or his binomial system of scientific nomenclature. Also, Lin-ne'an.

lin-net (lin'ĕt; -ĭt), n. [< O.F. linette < lin, flax: because it feeds on flaxseed], a small finch (Linota cannobina) common in the Old World.

lin-o-le-ic (lin″ō-lē'ik; lī-nō'lē-ik), adj. Chem., designating a certain acid found in linseed oil and similar oils.—n. Chem. li-no'le-ate.

li-no-le-um (lī-nō'lē-ŭm), n. [< Lat. linum, flax + oleum, oil], 1, a floor covering made of a mixture of ground cork and boiled linseed oil, with a backing of burlap or felt paper; 2, a preparation of linseed oil, made hard by oxidizing.

Lin-o-type (lin'ō-tīp), n. [< line o' type], Print., the trade-mark of a kind of type-setting machine operated by keys resembling those of a typewriter, which casts each line of type in one piece.—n. lin'o-typ″ist.

lin-seed (lin'sēd″), n. [< A.S. līn, flax + sǣd, seed], the seed of flax; linseed oil, a pale yellow oil pressed from flaxseed, used in making paint, linoleum, varnish, printers' ink, rubber substitutes, etc.: linseed cake, linseed after the oil has been expressed.

lin-sey–wool-sey (lin'zĭ=wo͝ol'zĭ; lin'sĭ=wo͝ol'sĭ), n. [< A.S. līn, flax + obs. say, silk + wool + riming syllable], a coarse cloth of linen or cotton and wool: also called linsey: Obs., nonsense.

lin-stock (lin'stŏk), n. [< earlier lintstock < Du. lontstok < lont, a match + stok, a stick], Obs., a long, forked stick tipped with iron, for holding a lighted rope match: formerly used in firing a cannon.

lint (lint), n. [perh. < Fr. linette, dim. of lin, linen, or < Lat. linteum, linen cloth], 1, the soft down obtained by scraping linen, used for dressing wounds; also, ravelings from textiles; 2, in the southern United States, the raw cotton after ginning: Obs. or Sc., flax.

lin-tel (lin'tĕl), n. [O.F. = threshold], Arch., the horizontal piece of wood or stone over the top of a door or window (see frame house, illus.).

lin-ters (lin'tẽrz), n.pl. [see lint], short fibers left adhering to cottonseed after one ginning, removed by further ginning and used in making mattresses, cotton batting, etc.

lint-white (lint'hwīt″), n. [< A.S. līnetwige, linnet], in northern Scotland, the linnet.

li-on (lī'ŭn), n. [< A.F. leun < Lat. leo (leonis) < Gk. leōn, lion], 1, a powerful, flesh-eating mammal (Felis leo) of the cat family, found in the deserts of Africa and southern Asia (see illus. next page); 2, a person who possesses great courage; 3, an object of interest and curiosity; especially, a person who is celebrated and consequently much sought after by society: Her., a figure of a lion, depicted, as a bearing on an escutcheon, in any of several conventional attitudes: Lion, Astron., the constellation and zodiacal sign Leo.—n.fem. li'on-ess.

THE LION AS DEPICTED IN HERALDIC DEVICES

li-on-heart-ed (lī'ŭn=härt'ĕd), adj. bold; courageous; chivalrous; intrepid.

li-on-ize (lī'ŭn-īz), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -ized (-īzd), p.pr. -izing], to treat as a celebrity; pay very great attention to socially; as, to lionize a novelist:—r.i. to visit the lions, or objects of interest, of a place.—n. li'on-i-za'tion.

LION AND LIONESS (⅛₀)

lip (lĭp), n. [<A.S. lippa, lip], 1, one of the two fleshy borders of the mouth; 2, the flaring or folding edge or margin of anything, as of a cup, crater, wound, etc.; as, the lip of a pitcher: Slang, saucy language:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. lipped (lĭpt), p.pr. lipping], to press with the lips; kiss: Rare, to utter softly: Sc., to notch:—v.i. to use the lips, as in playing a musical instrument:—adj. 1, spoken but not felt; insincere; as, lip service; 2, made or pronounced with the lips; labial: lip stick, a small cosmetic stick, or pencil, for the lips; especially, one colored with rouge and used to tint or outline the lips.

li-quate (lī'kwāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -quated, p.pr. -quating], [<Lat. liquare (-atus), to melt], Metal., to separate (one metal from another) by subjection to sufficient heat to cause the more fusible to melt and flow away from the other.

li-qua-tion (lī-kwā'shŭn), n. Metal., 1, the art of melting or fusing; 2, the separation of one metal from another in a mixture by heating to a temperature at which the more fusible metal melts.

liq-ue-fac-tion (lĭk'wē-făk'shŭn), n. [see liquefy], 1, the transformation of a gas or a solid into a liquid; 2, the state of being melted.

liq-ue-fy (lĭk'wē-fī), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -fied (-fīd), p.pr. -fying], [<Fr. liquéfier<Lat. liquēre, to be liquid+facere, to make], to transform into a liquid:—v.i. to become liquid.—adj. liq'ue-fi'a-ble.

li-ques-cent (lī-kwĕs'ĕnt), adj. [<Lat. liquescens (-entis), melting<liquēre, to be liquid], 1, in a melting condition; 2, easily melted.—n. li-ques'cence.

li-queur (lē'kûr'; lī-kûr'), n. [Fr.=liquor], an alcoholic drink sweetened and variously flavored with aromatic substances; a cordial.

liq-uid (lĭk'wĭd), adj. [<O.F. liquide<Lat. liquidus, liquid], 1, freely flowing; not solid; 2, clear or smooth in sound; as, a liquid melody; 3, colorless; transparent, as the air: Phys., having free movement of the constituent molecules, but not tending, as does a gas, to expand indefinitely; Phon., smooth; flowing, as the consonants l and r: Fin., easily and quickly turned into cash; as, liquid assets: liquid measure, a system of measuring liquids (see App. II):—n. a liquid substance: Phon., any of the consonants l, r, and, sometimes, m and n.—adv. liq'uid-ly.—n. li-quid'i-ty.

Syn. (see fluid).

liq-uid-am-bar (lĭk'wĭd-ăm'bär), n. [<Lat. liquidus, liquid+L.L. ambar, amber], 1, either of two trees, one (Liquidambar storax) of Asia Minor, yielding the balsam storax, and the other (L. styraciflua) of the warmer parts of North America, also called sweet gum, yielding a gum used as a substitute for storax in medicine, etc., and having star-shaped leaves and branches marked by corklike ridges; 2, the fragrant balsam of the sweet gum.

liq-ui-date (lĭk'wĭ-dāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -dated, p.pr. -dating], [see liquid], to settle or pay off, as a debt: Law, 1, to settle the affairs of (a corporation, estate, or the like) with the purpose of closing (it); 2, to arrange or adjust, and gradually extinguish, as the obligations of a bankrupt: Obs., or Rare, to make plain: liquidated damages, damages, the amount of which has been determined between the parties to a contract as the damages to be paid and accepted in full if a breach of contract occurs: sometimes called liquidating damages:—v.i. to pay one's debts.—n. liq'ui-da'tor (-dā'tẽr).

liq-ui-da-tion (lĭk'wĭ-dā'shŭn), n. the act of paying off a debt: Law, 1, a fixed valuation of things which before was uncertain; 2, the settlement of the affairs of a bankrupt or of a company.

liq-uid fire a highly inflammable liquid, such as gasoline, ejected from an apparatus by pressure and ignited so as to form a stream of fire.

liq-uor (lĭk'ẽr), n. [<O.F. licur<Lat. liquor<liquēre, to be liquid], 1, any liquid; specifically, an alcoholic or intoxicating liquid; 2, in cookery, a liquid in which meat or other food has been boiled: Med., an aqueous solution of a nonvolatile substance: —v.t. Obs., to cover with oil or grease, as leather.

liq-uo-rice (lĭk'ŏ-rĭs), n. [see licorice], 1, a certain herb of the pea family; 2, the root of this plant, or its juice. See lic'o-rice, Pfd. S.

li-ra (lē'rä), n. [pl. lire (lē'rā)], [It.<Lat. libra, pound], 1, the monetary unit of Italian currency, a silver coin now worth about 5½ cents; 2, a Turkish gold coin, normally worth about $4 40.

lisle (līl), n. [Fr.<town Lisle, now Lille], a fine, hard-twisted cotton thread; also, a fabric knitted of it: used especially for stockings, gloves, etc.

lisp (lĭsp), v.i. [<A.S. wlisp, lisping], 1, to pronounce s and z incorrectly, giving them the sounds of th; 2, to speak imperfectly or with hesitation:—v.t. 1, to utter imperfectly or affectedly; 2, to express in a timid or childlike manner:—n. 1, a speech defect characterized by the imperfect utterance of s and z; 2, any sound like a sibilant; as, the lisp of falling leaves.—n. lisp'er.

lis-som (lĭs'ŭm), adj. [contr. of lithesome, q.v.], limber; nimble; swift and light in motion. Also, lis'some; lithe'some (līth'sŭm).—n. lis'some-ness.

[1]list (lĭst), n. [<Fr. liste, roll, catalog<O.F. liste, edge, border, strip<O.H.G. lista, a border], 1, the edge or selvage of cloth; 2, a band of cloth; 3, a catalog, roll, or register; an inventory, as of bonds, books, names, or the like: Agr., a ridge thrown up alongside a furrow; Carp., a slender strip of wood, especially that trimmed from the bark edge of a board: Obs., a limit or boundary; an inclosure:—v.t. 1, to cover with strips of cloth, or list; 2, to trim away a strip from the edge of (a board); 3, to prepare (land) by making alternate furrows and ridges, as with a lister; 4, to catalog, enroll, or register:—v.i. to enlist.

[2]list (lĭst), v.i. [p.t. listed or list, p.p. listed, p.pr. listing], [<A.S. lystan, to please], Archaic, to wish; choose; as, the wind bloweth where it listeth:—n. Archaic, a wish or desire.

[3]list (lĭst), v.i. [prob.<A.S. hlust, pleasure, joy, desire <lystan, to please], Naut., to tilt over to one side: said of a ship:—r.t. Naut., to cause (a ship) to lean over on one side:—n. Naut., a leaning or tilting to one side: said of a ship.

[4]list (lĭst), v.t. [<A.S. hlystan, to hear], Archaic, to listen to:—r.i. to hearken; attend.

lis-ten (lĭs'n), v.i. [<M.E. lustnen<A.S. hlosnian, to listen<O.Teut. source], 1, to attend closely, so as to hear; hearken; 2, to heed; obey: listen in, Radio, to adjust the receiving mechanism of a wireless apparatus, so that one is brought into connection with a sending station: listening patrol, the soldiers occupying a listening post: listening post, Mil., a position from which soldiers can detect indications of the movements of the enemy:—r.t. Archaic, to give heed to; hearken to.—n. lis'ten-er.

Syn. hear; attend, hark, heed. To hear is to perceive by the ear, as a sound, cry, etc. To listen is to make the effort to hear, to try consciously to hear. We may hear without listening and we may listen without hearing.

list-er (lĭs'tẽr), n. [see [1]list], a kind of plow which digs a furrow, plants grain, and covers it, at one operation.

lis-ter-ine (lĭs'tẽr-ēn), n. [<Joseph Lister (1827–1912), inventor: a trade name], a solution sold as an antiseptic and toilet accessory, containing benzoic acid, boric acid, borax, etc.

list-less (lĭst'lĕs), adj. [see [2]list], indifferent; languid; spiritless; lacking energy; as, a listless child.—adv. list'less-ly.—n. list'less-ness.

Syn. languid, dull, flagging, unconcerned, unheeding.

lists (lĭsts), n.pl. [see [1]list], 1, the barriers of an inclosure where tournaments were held; 2, the inclosure itself; 3, any place where contests are held.

[1]lit (lĭt), past tense and past participle of the verbs [1]light and [2]light. Also, light'ed.

[2]lit (lĭt), n. [<Lithuanian, from name of country], the gold monetary unit of Lithuania, equivalent to ten cents. Also, lit'as.

lit. abbr. 1, liter, a measure or capacity in the metric system; 2, literal; literally; 3, literary; literature.

lit-a-ny (lĭt'ă-nĭ), n. [pl. -nies (-nĭz)], [<Gk. litaneia, prayer<litanos, suppliant], Eccl., a solemn form of supplication consisting of a series of petitions by the clergy with frequent responses by the congregation; Poet., any solemn supplication: the Litany, a special form of service of this sort, especially that found in the Book of Common Prayer.

li-tchi (lē'chē'), n. [<Chin. li-chi, name of tree], 1, a Chinese tree bearing a nutlike fruit which is eaten dried or preserved; 2, the fruit of this tree.

Lit. D. abbr. [Lat. Literarum Doctor], Doctor of Letters or Literature (also, Litt. D. [Lat. Litterarum Doctor]).

li-ter (lē′tĕr), n. [< Fr. litre < Gk. litra, pound], the metric unit of capacity, equal to the volume of a kilogram of water at 4° C.: approximately 1000 (more accurately, 1,000.027) cubic centimeters: equivalent to 1.0567 U. S. liquid quarts. Also, li′tre (lē′tĕr).

lit-er-a-cy (lit′ĕr-ă-sĭ), n. [see literate], the ability to read and write.

lit-er-al (lit′ĕr-ăl), adj. [< Lat. littera, letter], 1, according to the natural or usual interpretation or meaning of something written or expressed in words; as, a literal interpretation of the law; 2, consisting of, or pertaining to, letters; as, a literal error; 3, expressed in writing; written; as, a literal contract; 4, exactly representing the given words; as, a literal translation; 5, not exaggerated; as, the literal truth; 6, matter-of-fact; prosaic; 7, etymological; as, the literal meaning of a word: Math., designating an expression in which quantities are expressed by letters: opposite of numerical.—adv. lit′er-al-ly.—n. lit′er-al-ness.

lit-er-al-ism (lit′ĕr-ăl-ĭzm), n. preciseness; exactitude: Art, the tendency to depict things exactly as they are; realism.—n. lit′er-al-ist.

lit-er-a-ry (lit′ĕr-ă-rĭ), adj. 1, pertaining to literature or to men of letters; 2, having a knowledge of, or engaged in, literature.

lit-er-ate (lit′ĕr-ăt), adj. [< Lat. litteratus, learned], 1, knowing how to read and write; 2, pertaining to, or having a knowledge of, letters or literature: —n. a learned or educated person: opposite of illiterate.

lit-e-ra-ti (lit″ē-rä′tī), n.pl. men of letters; learned people: the literary class.

lit-e-ra-tim (lit″ē-rä′tĭm), adv. [Lat. = letter by letter], literally; letter for letter.

lit-er-a-ture (lit′ĕr-ă-tūr), n. [< Lat. littera, letter], 1, the written or printed productions of a country or period, especially those that are notable for beauty or force of style; 2, the occupation of authors; 3, the body of writing upon a given subject: Colloq., printed matter issued for a special purpose; as, campaign literature; Archaic, literary culture.

lith-arge (lĭth′ärj), n. [< O.F. litarge < Gk. lithos, stone + arguros, silver], lead monoxide, a yellow or red substance used in the manufacture of pottery, glass, varnish, drying oils, rubber, and cement.

lithe (līth), adj. [comp. lither, superl. lithest], [< A.S. līthe, soft], bending easily; limber; gracefully nimble; supple.—adv. lithe′ly.—n. lithe′ness.

lithe-some (līth′sŭm), adj. nimble; limber; lithe; as, a lithesome maid. Also, lis′som; lis′some (lĭs′ŭm).—n. lithe′some-ness.

lith-i-a (lĭth′ĭ-ă), n. [< Gk. lithos, of stone], Chem., a white crystalline substance, lithium oxide, a constituent of various mineral waters: lithia water, a natural mineral water containing a small proportion of lithium salts: used as an antacid and diuretic.

lith-ic (lĭth′ĭk), adj. [< Gk. lithos, stone], pertaining to, or like, stone; as, lithic decoration: Med., pertaining to the formation of hardened masses, or stones, due to uric acid, as in the bladder.

lith-i-um (lĭth′ĭ-ŭm), n. [see lithia], Chem., a silver-white metallic element [symbol Li], the lightest known metal.

lith-o-graph (lĭth′ō-grăf), n. [< Gk. lithos, stone + graphein, to write], an impression, as of a picture or of printed matter, often in colors, reproduced from a smooth, flat, porous surface of stone or other material on which the design has been laid down by the use of grease and water in such a way that when the whole surface is inked only certain parts as desired will take the ink and print:—v.t. to reproduce by this process.—adj. lith″o-graph′ic (-grăf′ĭk); lith″o-graph′i-cal.—adv. lith″o-graph′i-cal-ly.

li-thog-ra-phy (lĭ-thŏg′rä-fĭ), n. the art or process of making a lithograph of a drawing, design, printed matter, or the like, often in colors.

lith-o-pone (lĭth′ō-pōn), n. [source uncertain], a white pigment and paint filler, a mixture of zinc sulphide and barium sulphate, used largely in place of white lead in the manufacture of paint.

lith-o-sphere (lĭth′ō-sfēr), n. [< Gk. lithos, stone + sphaira, sphere], the solid portion of the globe; the crust of the earth: distinguished from atmosphere and hydrosphere.

li-thot-o-my (lĭ-thŏt′ō-mĭ), n. [< Gk. lithos, stone + tomia, a cutting], Surg., a cutting into the bladder for the removal of a stone or stones.

Lith-u-a-ni-an (lĭth″ū-ā′nĭ-ăn), adj. [< Lat. Lituania], of or pertaining to the republic of Lithuania in Europe:—n. 1, a native or inhabitant of Lithuania; 2, the language spoken there.

lith-y (lī*th*′ĭ; lĭ*th*′ĭ), adj. [see lithe], supple; bending easily; pliable; flexible.

lit-i-ga-ble (lĭt′ĭ-gă-bl), adj. [see litigate], capable of being contested at law.

lit-i-gant (lĭt′ĭ-gănt), adj. engaged in a lawsuit; also, inclined to resort to the law to settle claims:—n. either party in a lawsuit.

lit-i-gate (lĭt′ĭ-gāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -gated, p.pr. -gating], [< Lat. litigare (-atus) < lis (litis), lawsuit], to bring to a court of law for settlement; as, to litigate a dispute about boundaries of land:—v.i. to engage in a lawsuit.—n. lit′i-ga″tor.

lit-i-ga-tion (lĭt″ĭ-gā′shŭn), n. [see litigate], 1, the act or process of carrying on a lawsuit; 2, a suit at law.

li-ti-gious (lĭ-tĭj′ŭs), adj. [< Fr. litigieux < Lat. litigiosus, contentious < litigium, strife, litigation], 1, given to engaging in lawsuits; hence, quarrelsome; 2, disputable by law; also, subject to, or involved in, a suit at law; 3, pertaining to a suit at law.—adv. li-ti′-gious-ly.—n. li-ti′gious-ness.

lit-mus (lĭt′mŭs), n. [< M.Du. leecmos (< Hind. lākh, gum lac, used as red dye) + mocs, pulp], Chem., a violet-blue coloring matter obtained from lichens, which is turned red by an acid and restored to blue by an alkali: litmus paper, an absorbent paper saturated with litmus: used to test solutions for acids and alkalies.

li-to-tes (lī′tō-tēz; lĭt′ō-), n. [< Gk. litotes, plainness < litos, plain], Rhet., understatement by denial of the opposite; as, a man of no mean ability.

Litt. B. abbr. [Lat. Litterarum Baccalaureus], Bachelor of Letters, a title given to a college student completing the course in literature:—Litt. D. [Lat. Litterarum Doctor], Doctor of Letters, an honorary title given to distinguished persons by some universities (also, Lit. D. [Lat. Literarum Doctor]).

lit-ter (lĭt′ĕr), n. [< O.F. litiere < L.L. lectaria, litter < Lat lectus, bed], 1, a kind of curtained couch with shafts projecting at each end, borne on men's shoulders; 2, a stretcher or cot for carrying a sick or wounded person; 3, straw, shavings, or the like, used as bedding for animals; 4, a condition of confusion or untidiness; 5, odds and ends scattered about untidily; 6, the young produced at one birth, as of pigs or dogs:—v.t. 1, to supply with straw or the like for bedding; cover with straw; 2, to scatter carelessly; 3, to render untidy by scattering rubbish about; 4, to give birth to: said of animals:—v.i. to bring forth young: said of animals.

ROMAN LITTER

lit-té-ra-teur (lē″tā″rä″tûr′), n. [Fr. = man of letters], a scholarly man; a man well versed in literature or letters.

lit-tle (lĭt′l), adj. [comp. less or, Dial., littler, superl. least or, Dial., littlest], [< A.S. lȳtel, little], 1, small in size, quantity, dignity, importance, or power; 2, brief in time; 3, young; 4, mean; petty: little slam, Cards, the taking by a player or partners of all the tricks but one:—adv. 1, in a small degree; not much; 2, not at all: before such verbs as know, imagine, realize, think; as, he little realizes the results of his actions:—n. that which is small in size, quantity, dignity, importance, or power: a little, slightly; to a small degree; for a short time; somewhat; also, a small amount.—n. lit′tle-ness.

Syn., adj. small, diminutive, tiny, minute. Little is the opposite of great or big, and usually is applied to that which is of natural size, condition, or amount; as, a little book of poems; the little finger. Little also connotes, in certain connections, tenderness, indulgence, condescension, or the like; as, little woman; you generous little simpleton; your little favor was appreciated. Small is opposed rather to large, and describes that either definitely or comparatively lacking, or deficient in size or strength as set by a standard; a small number is less than we expected; so is a small contribution: we say a dress is too small, not too little. Unlike little, small does not carry a favorable emotional connotation; a bereaved parent speaks of a little grave, not a small grave; an annoyed old gentleman refers to small boys' mischief, not to that of dear little boys. Both small and little connote the unimportant, the paltry, or contemptible: we speak of small significance; little minds; small change; little trials are harder to bear than big ones. Tiny is a child's word for very small; it is conversationally used also for minute, which means exceedingly small, and, as applied to details or particulars, precise, exact, accurate. Diminutive means relatively small; a diminutive person is smaller than he ought to be.

lit-to-ral (lĭt′ō-răl), adj. [< Lat. litus (-oris), shore], pertaining to, near, or living on, a shore:—n. the shore of a sea, lake, or other water, and the country lying near it.

li-tur-gi-cal (lĭ-tûrjĭ-kăl), adj. [see liturgy], of or pertaining to a set form of divine service; as, a liturgical form of worship. Also, li-tur'gic.—adv. li-tur'gi-cal-ly.

lit-ur-gy (lĭt'ûr-jĭ), n. [pl. -gies (-jĭz)], [< Gk. leitourgia, public service < leitos, public + ergon, work], Gk. Antiq. a form of service to the state required on demand of its wealthy citizens, as the staging of a theatrical spectacle, in peace, or the equipping of a ship, in war; Eccl., 1, the set form of service for public worship, such as that in the Book of Common Prayer; 2, in the Catholic churches, the form of service for the celebration of the Eucharist; the Mass.

liv-a-ble (lĭv'ă-bl), adj. [see 1live], 1, capable of being lived through; endurable; 2, fit or agreeable to live in or with. Also, live'a-ble.

1live (lĭv), v.i. [p.t. and p.p. lived (lĭvd), p.pr. living], [< A.S. libban, to live < O.Teut. source], 1, to exist, or have life; 2, to pass life (in a particular manner); as, to live happily; live well; 3, to reside or dwell; as, to live in a foreign land; 4, to win a livelihood; subsist (economically); as, to live by working; 5, to eat; be nourished; subsist (physically); with on or by; as, to live on meat; 6, to continue to have life or existence; as, to live to be old; to live in our memories; 7, to dwell together; with with; 8, to exist (spiritually); as, to live by faith; 9, to survive or endure; as, the ship lived through the storm;—v.t. 1, to experience or pass; as, to live a happy life; 2, to practice or express constantly; as, to live one's religion: live down, so to live as to refute, or cause to be forgotten; as, to live down disgrace.

2live (lĭv), adj. [< alive, q.v.], 1, having life; alive; living: not dead; 2, pertaining to living things; 3, effective; operative; specifically, burning; as, a live coal; unexploded, as a shell; charged, as an electric wire; delivering power or motion, as machinery; 4, bright; striking; as, a live color: Colloq., animated; energetic; full of enthusiasm; wide-awake; as, a live society; also, of present interest; as, a live topic or debate: Print., about to be used; as, live copy: live weight, the weight of an animal before it is slaughtered: live wire, a wire carrying an electric current; also, Colloq., an energetic, wide-awake person.

live-li-hood (lĭv'lĭ-hŏŏd), n. [< earlier lifelade < A.S. līflād < līf, life + lād, course: Influenced by obs. livelihood, liveliness], means of existence; regular support.

Syn. living, maintenance, subsistence, support.

live-long (lĭv'lông"), adj. [< earlier lefe long < A.S. lēof lang, dear long], 1, lasting long (of time); tedious; 2, whole; entire; as, they toiled the livelong day: Obs., lasting (of objects).

live-ly (lĭv'lĭ), adj. [comp. -lier, superl. -liest], [< A.S. līflīc, like life], 1, active; brisk; full of spirit; as, a lively disposition; 2, vivid; keen; as, a lively fancy; 3, cheering; exhilarating; as, a lively tune; 4, cogent; as, a lively argument; 5, resilient; as, a lively golf ball: Rare, lifelike:—adv. briskly.—n. live'li-ness.

Syn., adj. merry, sportive, sprightly, vivacious, spirited, gay, alive.—Ant., adj. slow, languid, sluggish, dull.

liv-en (lĭv'n), v.t. [see 2live], to brighten; cheer; make lively: usually with up:—v.i. to become cheerful or lively.

live oak an evergreen oak (Quercus virginiana) of the southern United States.

1liv-er (lĭv'ĕr), n. [see 1live], 1, a resident; 2, one who exists, dwells, or spends time in some special way; as, a high liver.

2liv-er (lĭv'ĕr), n. [< A.S. lifer, liver], Anat., an organ of the body, the chief functions of which are to secrete bile and to form glycogen from the digested food material brought to it from the intestines.

liv-er-ied (lĭv'ĕr-ĭd), adj. [see livery], clothed in a livery, or special dress.

liv-er-wort (lĭv'ĕr-wûrt"), n. [2liver + 1wort, plant: from shape of some parts], Bot., 1, any of a class (Hepaticæ) of mosses including the lower forms, consisting of a flat, leaflike structure, or thallus, and rudimentary roots (see Bryophyta, illus.); 2, any of a genus (Hepatica) of plants of the crowfoot family; the early spring flower hepatica.

liv-er-y (lĭv'ĕr-ĭ), n. [pl. -ies (-ĭz)], [< Fr. livrée, livery < livrer, to free], 1, originally, a supply of food or clothing, given to retainers and servants; 2, a particular costume worn by servants, or by any special group of persons; also, the persons wearing such a costume; 3, the keeping and feeding of horses for compensation or the hiring out of horses and vehicles; 4, in the United States, a stable where horses are boarded or where horses and vehicles are hired out: also called livery stable; hence, a place where boats, etc., may be hired: Law, the act of delivering possession of land: livery of seisin, Eng. Law, the ceremonial delivery of possession of real property, made upon the property itself.

liv-er-y-man (lĭv'ĕr-ĭ-măn), n. [pl. -men (-mĕn)], [livery + man], 1, the keeper of a stable where horses are boarded or where horses and vehicles are hired out; 2, a member of any of the guilds of London who is privileged to wear the distinctive costume of his company: Archaic, a liveried servant.

live-stock (lĭv'stŏk"), n. [2live + stock], living domestic animals, as horses, cows, or pigs, raised for use or profit. (See illus. next page.)

liv-id (lĭv'ĭd), adj. [< Lat. lividus, pale], 1, black and blue; discolored, as by a bruise; as, a livid scar; 2, ashy pale.—n. li-vid'i-ty.

liv-ing (lĭv'ĭng), p.adj. [see 1live], 1, having life; 2, flowing, as a spring; 3, vigorous; active; as, a living hope; 4, producing life, action, or strength; refreshing; as, living waters; 5, of or pertaining to an existing person or thing; as, the living age; also, contemporary; 6, true to life; like; as, he is the living image of his father; 7, existing in its original condition; as, living rock:—n. 1, livelihood; as, to earn a living; 2, mode of life; as, plain living; 3, state of existence; also, one who exists: with the; 4, the ability or competence to live, especially at ease: Archaic, possessions: Eccl., in England, a benefice; a church appointment, as that of a rector.

liv-ing room in the United States, a family sitting room.

li-vre (lē'vĕr; lēvr'), n. [Fr. < Lat. libra, pound], 1, an ancient French monetary unit; 2, a French silver coin, formerly worth about nineteen cents, replaced by the franc; 3, as a weight, 500 grams.

lix-iv-i-ate (lĭk-sĭv'ĭ-āt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -ated, p.pr. -ating], [< Lat. lixivius, made into lye], to wash out with water, as wood ashes, in order to obtain the soluble alkali salts.—n. lix-iv'i-a'tion.

lix-iv-i-um (lĭk-sĭv'ĭ-ŭm), n. a solution resulting from draining water through a substance; especially, a solution of alkaline salts, as lye.

liz-ard (lĭz'ărd), n. [< O.F. lesard < Lat. lacertus, lizard], Zoöl., 1, a reptile having a scaly body, a long tail, and, typically, four well-developed legs, each with five claw-bearing toes; 2, any of an order (Lacertilia) of reptiles, including the preceding and the chameleon, horned toad, etc.

LIZARD (¼)

L. L. abbr. 1, Late Latin; Low Latin (also, LL.); 2, Lord Lieutenant:—l.l., [Lat. loco laudato], in the place cited:—L. L. A., Lady Literate in Art.

lla-ma (lä'mä; lyä'mä), n. [Sp., prob. < Peruv.], 1, any of several South American mammals somewhat like a camel, but smaller and without a hump; especially, a domesticated variety of the guanaco, used as a beast of burden; 2, cloth made of its hair.

lla-no (lä'nō; lyä'nō), n. [pl. -nos (-nōz; -nōs)], [Sp. = plain], a broad, level, grassy plain: used especially of those in South America and Texas.

LL. B. abbr. [Lat. Legum Baccalaureus], Bachelor of Laws:—LL. D., [Lat. Legum Doctor], Doctor of Laws: an honorary degee:—LL.M., [Lat. Legum Magister], Master of Laws.

Lloyd's (loidz), n. an insurance association with central offices in London, having for its main objects the writing of marine insurance and the dissemination of maritime information, but also dealing in other kinds of insurance.

lo (lō), interj. [< A.S. lā, a natural interj.: perh. shortened form of lōca, look thou], behold! see! look!

loach (lōch), n. [< Fr. loche, loach], any of several species of small European fresh-water fish, belonging to the carp family.

load (lōd), n. [< A.S. lād, journey], 1, a burden; 2, the mass or weight usually carried at one time; as, a load of coal; cargo; 3, a customary unit or measure of weight of certain substances; 4, that which is held up or borne; as, the load on an arch; 5, a mental burden; as, a load of care; 6, the powder and bullet, etc., with which a gun is loaded: pl. Colloq., plenty; lots; as, loads of fun: Mech., 1, the work that has to be done by an engine, in addition to its own friction; 2, the downward pressure caused by an overlying mass: load displacement, Naut., the displacement of a fully loaded ship: load line, a mark on the side of a vessel indicating the water line when the vessel is properly loaded:—v.t. 1, to put on or in (an animal, vehicle, ship, etc.) as much as can be carried; 2, to put (the cargo) on or in a vehicle, ship, etc.; 3, to burden; weigh down; embarrass; 4, to give to in great abundance; as, to load one with attentions; 5, to put powder and bullet, etc., into, as a gun; 6, to lend added weight to, by something added or inserted, often in order to defraud; as, to load dice; also, to adulterate, as silk

DRIVING HORSE.—Tall; slender, sinewy legs, long from withers to knee and from hip to hock; narrow but deep chest; graceful neck; large windpipe.

*Typical Judging Values

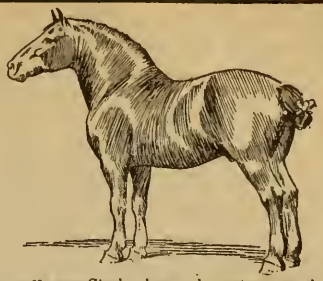
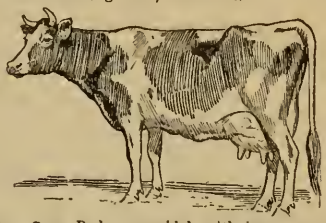
4	Form	6
10	Quality	8
10	Action	4
1	Withers	0
3	Croup	4
1	Buttocks	2
2	Gaskins	3
4	Hocks	6



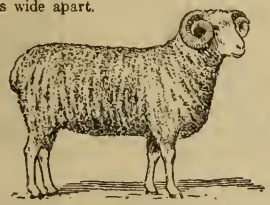
DRAFT HORSE.—Stocky; heavy; low-set; strong shoulders and hips; short, muscular legs; short neck, less erect than in driving horse; wide chest.

BEEF STEER.—Body brick-shaped; bones well covered; flesh firm, smooth, and deep; neck and legs short, and legs wide apart.

10	Weight	0
10	Form	5
12	Flesh	0
2	Neck	0
1	Ears	2
4	Shoulders	3
2	Forelegs	1
4	Chest	6
6	Ribs	3
8	Back	3
0	Udder, etc.	35



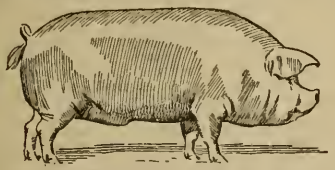
MILK COW.—Body pyramidal, with base at rear; hip bones prominent; tendency to gauntness; udder large; teats large and wide apart; veins on udder large.



MUTTON SHEEP.—Plump; flesh firm; low-built; wide back; well-spaced legs; long, coarse fleece.

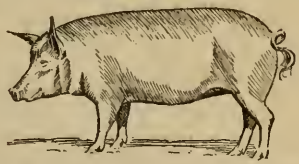
6	Weight	6
10	Form	6
10	Quality	8
10	Condition	0
5	Shoulders	2
4	Chest	5
4	Ribs	3
6	Back	3
6	Loins	3
4	Rump	4
4	Thighs	3
5	Twist	3
12	Wool	40

WOOL SHEEP.—Thinner; wrinkled skin to provide large wool-growing surface; finer fleece.



LARD HOG.—Chunky; fat; short, wide-spaced legs.

10	Form	10
10	Quality	10
10	Flesh	6
8	Shoulders	6
4	Chest	5
8	Sides	8
9	Back	6
9	Loins	6
3	Belly	3
9	Hams	6



BACON HOG.—Rangy; firm, lean flesh; long legs.

*On a score card the point values of all the characters listed usually total 100. Here are listed only the characters that emphasize the differences between the types contrasted.

REPRESENTATIVE TYPES OF LIVESTOCK or wine: loaded, p.adj., weighted, sometimes in a fraudulent way; as, loaded dice: Slang, drunk:—v.i. 1, to put powder and bullet into a gun; 2, to give or take on a load.—n. load'er.

Syn., n. pack, weight, burden. (See encumbrance.)

load-ing coil Rad., a coil connected in circuit to increase its inductance and therefore its period of oscillation.

load-star (lōd'stär"), n. [see lodestar], a guiding star; the polestar. See lode'star", Pfd. S.

load-stone (lōd'stōn"), n. [load+stone], magnetic iron ore, a variety of magnetite which possesses natural magnetic properties: also called natural magnet. Also, lode'stone".

[1]loaf (lōf), n. [pl. loaves (lōvz)], [<A.S. hlāf, loaf <O.Teut. source], 1, a shaped mass of bread or cake; 2, a shaped lump, as of sugar.

[2]loaf (lōf), v.i. [source uncertain], to pass (time) in idleness:—v.i. to waste time.—n. loaf'er.

loam (lōm), n. [<A.S. lām, loam], 1, earth composed of clay and sand, with enough sand to counteract the cohesiveness of clay; 2, popularly, a rich, fertile soil composed of decayed vegetable or other organic matter, clay, and sand: Founding, a mixture of sand, clay, and other materials, used for making molds:—v.t. to cover with loam.—adj. loam'y.

loan (lōn), n [<A.S. lān, a loan], 1, a sum of money lent for a period, repayable with interest; 2, something granted for temporary use; 3, the act of lending:—v.t. and v.i. Com. or Colloq., to lend.

loath (lōth), adj. [<A.S. lāth, hostile; hateful], unwilling; reluctant: Obs., offensive; hateful. Also, loth.—n. loath'ness.

Syn. reluctant, averse, indisposed, disinclined, unwilling, opposed.

loathe (lōth), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. loathed (lōthd), p.pr. loathing], [<A.S. lāthian, to be hateful], to regard with extreme dislike or disgust; detest.

loath-ing (lōth'ĭng), n. intense disgust; nausea; aversion; abhorrence.

loath-some (lōth'sŭm), adj. causing intense disgust or a feeling of sickness; as, a loathsome disease; detestable.—adv. loath'some-ly.—n. loath'some-ness.

Syn. abominable, offensive, abhorrent, detestable, revolting. (See hateful.)

loaves (lōvz), n. plural of loaf; as, five loaves of bread.

lob (lŏb), n. [< obs. lob, fowl's wattle], 1, a soft lump; 2, a worm, when used as bait in fishing: Colloq., a dull person; a lout: Cricket, a slow underhand ball in bowling; Lawn Tennis, a slow stroke by which the ball is sent high into the air to pass over an opponent at the net:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. lobbed (lŏbd), p.pr. lobbing], to send slowly, or high in the air, as a tennis ball.

lo-bate (lō'bāt), adj. [see lobe], Bot. and Zoöl., having, or being divided into, more or less rounded parts, as the margin of certain leaves, or the parts of the liver or lungs. Also, lo'bat-ed.—n. lo-ba'tion.

lob-by (lŏb'ĭ), n. [pl. -bies (-ĭz)], [< L.L. lobia, lodge], 1, a hall, waiting room, or passage opening into an apartment or series of rooms; specifically, 2, that part of the assembly hall of a lawmaking body to which the public has access; 3, in the United States, persons who try to influence the votes of members of a lawmaking body:—v.i. [p.t. and p.p. -bied (-ĭd), p.pr. -bying], in the United States, to try to influence, by personal agency, the votes of members of a legislative or lawmaking body for a particular measure:—v.t. to try to get (a bill) passed, by personal influence exerted on the legislators.—n. lob'by-ist.

lobe (lōb), n. [< Gk. lobos, lobe, pod], any rounded projection or part; as, the lobe of the ear; a lobe of the brain: Bot., one of the divisions of a leaf separated by indentions extending less than halfway to the midrib, as in certain oaks.—adj. lobed (lōbd).

lo-be-li-a (lō-bē'lĭ-ȧ; lō-bēl'yȧ), n. [< M. de Lobel (1538–1616), Fr. botanist], Bot., any of a genus (Lobelia), typical of a family (Lobeliaceæ) of plants, some of which are medicinal, with beautiful red, blue, or white flowers, including the wild cardinal flower of North America, and several cultivated forms.

lob-lol-ly (lŏb'lŏl'ĭ), n. [pl. -lies (-lĭz)], [source uncertain], a pine (Pinus tæda) of the southern United States, having coarse bark and long leaves in groups of three or, sometimes, two: also called loblolly pine: Obs., a bumpkin: Naut., a stiff gruel.

lob-scouse (lŏb'skous"), n. [source uncertain], Naut., a dish composed of meat, vegetables, and ship's biscuit. Also, lob'scourse".

lob-ster (lŏb'stẽr), n. [< A.S. lopustre, corr. of Lat. locusta, locust; lobster], 1, any of various large, edible crustaceans, especially any of a genus (Homarus) having five pairs of legs, the first developed into powerful claws, or pincers; 2, its flesh, used as food: Slang, a cheap, mean, or clumsy fellow.

lob-ule (lŏb'ūl), n. [< L.L. lobulus, dim. of lobus, lobe], a small lobe or a subdivision of a larger lobe.—adj. lob'u-lar.

lo-cal (lō'kăl), adj. [< Lat. locus, place], 1, pertaining to place: 2, relating to, or characteristic of, a particular or prescribed place; hence, 3, narrow; restricted; as, a local custom:—n. U. S. Colloq., 1, a newspaper item of interest only in the place where the paper is issued: 2, a train stopping at all small stations; 3, a branch of a labor union consisting of members residing in or near a given town or city, responsible as a unit of the national union in all matters of national scope, but having rights of self-government in labor matters affecting only the town or city.—adv. lo'cal-ly.

lo-cal ac-tion Elec., chemical action taking place in the interior of a voltaic cell, without contributing to the main current.

lo-cale (lō"kăl'), n. [Fr.], 1, a place or locality; specifically, 2, a place with reference to some characteristic condition. Also, properly, lo"cal'.

lo-cal-ism (lō'kăl-ĭzm), n. [see local], 1, a word, expression, or custom used in, or peculiar to, a particular region or place; 2, the state or condition of being limited to a particular district; hence, 3, attachment to a particular district.

lo-cal-i-ty (lō-kăl'ĭ-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tiz)], 1, a restriction or limitation to a definite place; 2, a general region or position; a vicinity.

Syn. neighborhood, district, vicinage, place, position.

lo-cal-ize (lō'kăl-īz), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -ized (-īzd), p.pr. -izing], to attach or limit to a particular place; as, quarantine attempts to localize contagious diseases.—n. lo"cal-i-za'tion (-ĭ-zā'-; -ĭ-zā'-).

lo-cal op-tion the right or duty delegated by political units to their subdivisions to determine by vote, whether some designated thing, as, formerly, the sale of alcoholic drinks, shall be allowed within that district.

lo-cate (lō kāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. located, p.pr. locating], [< Lat. locare (-atus), to place], 1, to place in a particular spot; establish; settle; 2, to mark out and determine the position of, as a railroad, a mining claim, or the like; 3, to find the position of; 4, to settle definitely the seat of; as, to locate a tumor:—v.i. U. S. Colloq., to settle; take up one's residence.

lo-ca-tion (lō-kā'shŭn), n. 1, the act of determining, settling, or finding; 2, position or place in space; situation; place of residence; 3, that which is marked by boundaries, as a mining claim; 4, a site, outside a studio, on which a photoplay is being filmed.

loc-a-tive (lŏk'ȧ-tĭv), adj. Gram., designating a case which indicates place where; Anat. and Zoöl., serving to place or locate in a series; as, locative names:—n. Gram., the case that denotes place where, as of Latin Romae, at Rome; also, a word in that case.

loc. cit. abbr. [Lat. loco citato], in the place (already) cited (also, l. c.).

loch (lŏkh), n. [Gael. = lake], Sc., a lake; also, a bay or arm of the sea: in Ireland, usually lough.

[1]lock (lŏk), n. [< A.S. loc, a tress], 1, a tuft, or small bunch, of anything, as of hair, wool, hay, or silk; 2, a ringlet of hair; a tress: pl. a head of hair.

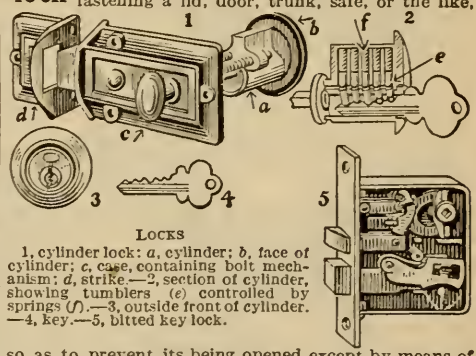
[2]lock (lŏk), n. [< A.S. loc, a latch], 1, a device for fastening a lid, door, trunk, safe, or the like,



LOCKS

1, cylinder lock: a, cylinder; b, face of cylinder; c, case, containing bolt mechanism; d, strike.—2, section of cylinder, showing tumblers (e) controlled by springs (f).—3, outside front of cylinder.—4, key.—5, bitted key lock.

so as to prevent its being opened except by means of a special key or by manipulation of parts according to a secret formula; 2, any device that fastens; as, a window lock; 3, an inclosure between two gates in a canal or stream, used in raising and lowering boats from one water level to another; 4, a mechanism for firing a gun; 5, any of several holds in wrestling:—v.t. 1, to fasten or secure with a lock; 2, to make secure; shut in or out; confine, as things that might escape or be taken away: often with up, in, or out; 3, to make fast by intertwining; 4, to make solid or rigid by the linking or engaging of parts, as the gears of a motor car:—v.i. 1, to become fast by a lock; 2, to entwine; 3, to become firmly engaged, as gears.

lock-age (lŏk'ăj), n. 1, the amount of toll charged to go through a lock in a canal; 2, the amount of rise and fall effected by a lock or a series of locks; 3, the act of passing through a lock.

lock-er (lŏk'ẽr), n. 1, a drawer, cupboard, compartment, or chest secured by a lock; especially, a cupboard for individual use; 2, one who fastens with a lock: Naut., a compartment or chest, as for clothes.

lock-et (lŏk'ĕt; -ĭt), n. [< O.F. locquet, dim. of loc, a lock of a door], an ornament, usually of gold, silver, or platinum, made to inclose a portrait or other small token and to be worn on a necklace or chain.

lock-jaw (lŏk'jô"), n. [[2]lock + jaw], Med., an acute infectious disease, generally fatal, in which the lower jaw is drawn up and becomes fixed or locked; a form of tetanus; trismus.

lock-out (lŏk'out"), n. [[2]lock + out], Econ., the refusal by an employer to allow employees to continue to work for him, unless they accept his terms as to wages or working conditions.

lock-smith (lŏk'smĭth"), n. [[2]lock + smith], a maker or mender of locks.

lock step the step of men walking or marching in very close file, each man keeping step exactly with the man preceding him.

lock stitch a sewing-machine stitch, made by the interlocking of two threads.

lock-up (lŏk'ŭp"), n. [[2]lock + up], 1, the act of fastening; 2, a temporary prison; a jail.

lo-co (lō'kō), n. [Sp. = crazy], 1, any of various poisonous American plants of the pea family (especially genera Astragalus and Aragallus) which cause, in horses, cattle, and sheep which eat them, a peculiar disease, characterized by a slow gait, glassy eyes, delirium, and emaciation: also called loco weed; 2, the disease so caused: also called loco disease:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -coed (-kōd), p.pr. -coing], to poison with loco: Colloq., to make crazy.

lo-co-fo-co (lō'kō-fō'kō), n. [pl. -cos (-kōz)], [early trade name of match, ignorantly copied from name locomotive, as if loco- meant self: hence, locofoco = self-lighting (foco- < Lat. focus, hearth)], Obs., a friction match: Locofoco, U. S. Hist., a member of the radical, or Equal Rights, wing of the Democratic party of 1835; later, any Democrat.

lo-co-mo-bile (lō'kō-mō'bil), adj. [< Lat. locus, place + mobilis, movable], having power to move about: applied especially to certain large types of machinery, such as steam shovels.

lo-co-mo-tion (lō'kō-mō'shŭn), n. [< Lat. locus, place + mōtiō (mōtus), to move], the act of moving, or ability to move, from place to place.

lo-co-mo-tive (lō'kō-mō'tiv), adj. 1, pertaining to, or used in, motion from place to place; 2, moving or able to move from one place to another; 3, pertaining to a machine that moves about under its own power:—n. a steam engine or electric motor for drawing railway cars.

lo-co-mo-tor (lō'kō-mō'tŏr), adj. pertaining to motion from place to place: locomotor ataxia, Med., a disease of the nervous system in which muscular coördination fails, especially in the legs: also called tabes dorsalis.

loc-u-lar (lŏk'ū-lăr), adj. [see loculus], Bot. and Zoöl., formed of, or having, loculi, or small chambers, as the seed cavities in an ovary, or the chambers in sea anemones.—adj. loc'u-late (-lāt).

loc-u-lus (lŏk'ū-lŭs), n. [pl. -li (-lī)], [Lat., dim. of locus, place], a small cavity or chamber.

lo-cum te-nens (lō'kŭm tē'nĕnz), [Lat. = holding place], a substitute; one who, for a time, takes the place of another.

lo-cus (lō'kŭs), n. [pl. loci (-sī)], [Lat. = place], a place; locality; Plane Geom., a line or curve traced by a moving point, or a surface developed by a moving line, under stated conditions.

lo-cust (lō'kŭst), n. [< Lat. locusta, locust], Zoöl., 1, any of a family (Acrididæ) of grasshoppers: used especially of certain species, destructive to vegetation, which migrate in great swarms; 2, the cicada: Bot., 1, any of several large deciduous trees (genus Robinia), with compound leaves, especially the common locust, or false acacia (R. pseudoacacia), having rough bark, yellow-white flowers, and weak thorns; 2, any of various other trees, as the honey locust (Gleditsia triacanthos) or the mesquite (Prosopis glandulosa).

lo-cu-tion (lō-kū'shŭn), n. [< Lat. loqui (locutus), to speak], a particular style of speech; a peculiar phrase; idiom: Rare, speech.

loc-u-to-ry (lŏk'ū-tō-rĭ), n. [pl. -ries (-rĭz)], a room for conversation; parlor; especially, in a monastery, a reception room for visitors.

lode (lōd), n. [< A.S. lād, a course], Mining, 1, any deposit of metallic ore containing gold, silver, or the like, found in a vein or fissure in quartz or other rocks; 2, the fissure that is filled with the ore-bearing rock: Obs., 1, a path; byway; 2, a waterway, as a canal.

lode-star (lōd'stär'), n. [lode (< load) + star], 1, a guiding star; especially, the polestar, or North Star; 2, hence, anything that strongly influences or attracts. Also, load'star'.

lode-stone (lōd'stōn'), n. [see loadstone], magnetic iron oxide. See load'stone'; Pfd. S.

lodge (lŏj), n. [< O.F. loge < L.L. lobia, gallery < O.H.G. louba, arbor], 1, a small house; cottage; hut; 2, the porter's or gamekeeper's cottage on a large estate; 3, the den of a wild animal or group of animals; 4, the hut of an American Indian; 5, a place where members of an association meet, especially members of a secret organization; also, the members collectively:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. lodged (lŏjd), p.pr. lodging], 1, to furnish with a temporary dwelling; entertain or receive as a temporary dweller; 2, to deposit for safety; 3, to settle in some spot; as, to lodge a stone; 4, to place formally before the proper authorities: as, to lodge information; 5, to place at the disposal of someone; as, to lodge power; 6, to lay flat on the ground; as, the storm lodged the standing grain; 7, to force (a deer) to covert:—v.i. 1, to live for a time; 2, to live in a rented room or rooms; 3, to be deposited or to come to rest; 4, to fall down, as grain or trees.

lodg-er (lŏj'ẽr), n. one who lives in a rented room or apartment in a house occupied by others.

lodg-ing (lŏj'ĭng), n. sleeping accommodation; also a temporary place of residence: pl. rooms, or a room rented as living quarters: lodging house, a house, other than a hotel, in which rooms, generally furnished, are let to lodgers.

lodg-ment (lŏj'mĕnt), n. 1, the act of giving shelter, settling, or depositing; 2, the state of being housed, settled, or deposited; 3, a place in which to settle; as, the idea found lodgment in his brain; 4, a collection of material deposited; 5, the occupation of a military position: Rare, a room or rooms hired in the house of another. Also, lodge'ment.

lo-ess (lō'ĕs; lŏs), n. [< Ger. löss, loess], Geol., an unstratified, loamy, yellowish brown earth found in river valleys in the northern hemisphere.

loft (lôft), n. [O.N. = sky; air; upper room], 1, an attic; a room directly beneath a roof; 2, a floor or gallery raised above the main floor; as, an organ loft in a church; a hay*loft* in a barn; 3, in the United States, an upper floor in a warehouse; 4, a pigeon house: Golf, 1, a slope on the face of a club to cause the ball to rise in the air when struck; 2, a stroke made with such a club: also called lofting shot: Obs., elevation; upper air:—v.t. to keep, as pigeons, in a loft: Golf, to strike (a ball) high into the air:—v.i. Golf, to loft the ball.

loft-er (lôf'tẽr), n. Golf, an iron club, having the face sloped so as to give a rising motion to the ball when struck: also called lofting iron.

loft-y (lôf'tĭ), adj. [comp. -ler, superl. -lest], 1, very high; towering; 2, exalted in dignity, rank, etc.; conscious of superiority; proud; 3, elevated in style or sentiment; stately; sublime; as, lofty sentiments.—adv. loft'i-ly.—n. loft'i-ness.

Syn. haughty, insolent, superior, dignified, exalted, tall, high, soaring.—Ant. meek, lowly, low, abject.

log (lŏg), n. [< M.E. logge, log], 1, a bulky piece of felled timber, usually in its natural or unhewn state; 2, hence, a heavy, inert, dull fellow: Naut., 1, a device consisting of a wooden float suspended on a graduated line and reel, used for measuring the rate of progress of a ship; 2, a book in which the record of a ship's daily progress and other items of interest are entered: also called log book: log chip, a wooden triangle which serves as the float in a ship's log: also called log ship: log line, the graduated cord to which the log chip is attached: log reel, a reel upon which a log line is wound:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. logged (lŏgd), p.pr. logging], 1, to fell and trim (a tree); hew or saw (timber) into logs; 2, to fell and take out the timber of (a tract of woodland): Naut., to enter in a log book:—v.i. to cut down and get out trees.

Log reel, log line, and log chip.

Log

log. abbr. logarithm; logarithmic: in practical use, written log (without period); as, log 10 = 1.

lo-gan-ber-ry (lō'găn-bĕr'ĭ), n. [pl. -berries (-ĭz)], [proper name Logan + berry], 1, a hybrid plant obtained by crossing the red raspberry with the California blackberry; 2, the fruit of the plant.

log-a-œ-dic (lŏg'ă-ē'dĭk), adj. [< Gk. logos, speech, prose + aoidē, song: literally, prose-poetic], Pros., composed of dactyls and trochees, or of anapæsts and iambi, combined.

log-a-rithm (lŏg'ă-rĭthm; -rĭthm), n. [< Gk. logos, reckoning + arithmos, number], the exponent, or index, of the power to which a given number, the base, must be raised in order to give a required number; as, since $10^3 = 1{,}000$ the logarithm of 1,000 to the base 10 is 3: common logarithm, a logarithm to the base 10, commonly used in computation: distinguished from Napierian, or natural, logarithm.

log-a-rith-mic (lŏg'ă-rĭth'mĭk; -rĭth'mĭk), adj. pertaining to a logarithm: logarithmic curve, a curve in which one of the rectangular coördinates of any point is the logarithm of the other.

log book a ship's diary, or journal, recording its progress, position, daily occurrences, etc.: also called log. Also, n. log'book'.

loge (lōzh), n. [Fr. = theater box], a booth; specifically, in a theater, a small compartment containing seats for a small number of the audience; a box.

log-ger-head (lŏg'ẽr-hĕd'), n. [< dial. logger, a block of wood for hobbling a horse + head], 1, a blockhead; numskull; 2, a kind of large sea turtle; 3, an iron tool with a ball at the end, used when heated to melt pitch; 4, a post at the stern of a whaling boat for making fast a rope; 5, a common European weed of the composite family, naturalized in the United States and Canada: also called knap- weed; bullweed; buttonweed; hillweed: to be at loggerheads, to dispute or quarrel.

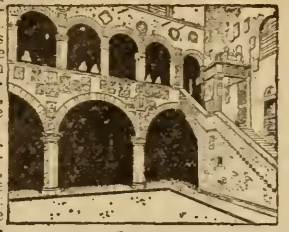
log-gia (lŏj'ä; lô'jĭ-ä; It lôd'jä), n. [pl. loggias (lŏj'äz; lô'jĭ-äz); logge (lôd'jā)], [It. = open gallery], Arch., a covered gallery or portico, having at least one side open to the air.



Loggia
Showing stairway and corner of court of Bargello Palace, Florence.

log-ic (lŏj'ĭk), n. [<Gk. logikē, of reason < logos, reason], 1, the science or art of reasoning; 2, a work or treatise on this science; 3, correct reasoning or inference; 4, the systematic classification of thought in any branch of knowledge.

log-i-cal (lŏj'ĭ-kăl), adj. 1, pertaining to the science of correct reasoning; 2, according to the rules of correct reasoning; 3, reasonable; to be expected according to the laws of correct reasoning; 4, skilled in the art of correct reasoning; as, a logical writer.—adv. log'i-cal-ly.

lo-gi-cian (lō-jĭsh'ăn), n. one skilled in the science of correct reasoning.

[1]lo-gis-tics (lō-jĭs'tĭks), n.pl. used as sing. [< Fr. logistique < loger, to lodge], Mil., the branch of military science dealing with the moving, quartering, and provisioning of armies.

[2]lo-gis-tics (lō-jĭs'tĭks), n.pl. used as sing. [< Gk. logizesthai, to calculate], Math., the use of the four fundamental operations in arithmetic.

log-o-gram (lŏg'ō-grăm), n. [< Gk. logos, word + gramma, a letter], 1, a character, as in shorthand, representing a word; 2, a sign designating a word, as £ for pound; 3, a kind of word puzzle.

log-o-graph (lŏg'ō-grăf), n. [< Gk. logos, word + graphein, to write], 1, a character or combination of characters representing a word; logogram; 2, a piece of type containing a word, or two or more letters; a logotype.—adj. log'o-graph'ic.

lo-gog-ra-phy (lō-gŏg'rä-fĭ), n. the art or practice of longhand reporting, in which each of several reporters in turn writes a few of the words or sentences: Print., the use of a single type containing more than one letter.—n. lo-gog'ra-pher.

lo-gom-a-chy (lō-gŏm'ä-kĭ), n. [pl. -chies (-kĭz)], [< Gk. logos, word + makhē, a fight], 1, a dispute about mere words; 2, any of various games in which words are formed or built up.

log-or-rhe-a (lŏg"ō-rē'ä), n. [< Gk. logos, word + rhein, to flow], a flow of incoherent words in certain mental disorders. Also, log"or-rhœ'a.

Log-os (lŏg'ŏs), n. [Gk. = word, reason], Theol., the Divine Word, especially as expressed in bodily form in the person of Christ; the second person in the Trinity: so called because in the person of Christ the Divine nature expressed itself to men: a term adopted through the influence of Greek philosophy; Gk. Philos., the rational principle of the universe.

log-o-type (lŏg'ō-tīp), n. [< Gk. logos, word + typos, a type], Print., a single type containing two or more letters or syllables, or one or more words: distinguished from ligature.

log-roll-ing (lŏg'rōl'ĭng), n. [log + roll], 1, in clearing land, the act of rolling logs to any required spot: often done coöperatively and made the occasion of merrymaking: 2, hence, in politics, a combining to assist in furthering the schemes of others in the expectation of receiving assistance in return.

log-wood (lŏg'wŏŏd"), n. [log + wood], the heartwood of a Central American tree (Hæmatoxylon campechianum) containing a dark red coloring principle much used in dyeing, calico printing, etc.; also, the tree itself.

lo-gy (lō'gĭ), adj. [comp. logier, superl. logiest], [prob. < Du. log, heavy], U. S. Dial., heavy; lethargic.

Lo-hen-grin (lō'ĕn-grĭn), n. [M.H.G.], 1, in German medieval romance, the hero of various versions of the legend of the knight of the swan; 2, in Wagner's "Lohengrin," the hero, a knight of the Holy Grail, sent to the aid of Elsa, whom he marries and later parts from when compelled to disclose his name.

loin (loin), n. [< O.F. loigne < Lat. lumbus, the loin], 1, Anat., the lower part of the body of an animal or man on either side of the spine, between the lowest rib and the hip bone (see horse, illus.): usually pl.; 2, a special cut of meat from the lumbar region, as of beef or pork (see beef, illus.): pl. Archaic, the hips and lower abdominal region, regarded as the seat of strength and of procreation.

loi-ter (loi'tẽr), v.i. [< M.Du. loteren, to wag about], to spend idly, as time: with away;—v.t. to spend time idly; delay; saunter.—n. loi'ter-er.

Lo-ki (lō'kē), n. [prob. < O.N. loka, to lock], Norse Myth., the Teutonic god of evil, inventor of constant trouble and mischief, cause of the death of Balder, and father of the Midgard serpent, the wolf Fenrir, and the goddess Hel: finally bound by Thor and placed by Skathi beneath a venom-dropping serpent. Also, Lo'ke.

loll (lŏl), v.i. [prob. imit.], 1, to lounge about at ease; 2, to droop; hang out loosely, as the tongue of an animal:—v.t. 1, to permit (the tongue) to hang out; 2, to permit (head, arms, or the like) to rest lazily.

Lol-lard (lŏl'ärd), n. [< M.Du. lollaerd, one who mumbles (prayers)], in England and Scotland in the 14th and 15th centuries, one of a sect of reformers who adhered to the religious and economic opinions of John Wycliffe.

lol-li-pop (lŏl'ĭ-pŏp), n. [source uncertain], 1, a lump of hard candy on a stick; 2, a kind of taffy. Also, lol'ly-pop.

L. O. M. abbr. Loyal Order of Moose, a secret beneficiary order.

Lom-bard (lŏm'bärd; lŭm'-), n. [Fr. < It. Lombardo < L.L. Longobardus < Lat. longus, long + Bardi, name of tribe], a member of a Teutonic tribe that invaded Italy and established, in the sixth century, a kingdom, the present Lombardy; also, a native of that region, or a descendant of the tribe: lombard, Obs., a banker: Lombard Street, in London, a street where, formerly, Lombard bankers did business; hence, finance; financiers collectively.

Lom-bard-y pop-lar a variety of black poplar (Populus nigra italica) remarkable for its slender form and upcurved branches.

lo-ment (lō'mĕnt), n. [< Lat. lomentum, bean-meal; skin lotion], Bot., a plant pod with more or less well-developed constrictions between the seeds (for illus. see fruit).

lon. abbr. longitude (also, long.):—Lon., London (also, Lond.).

lone (lōn), adj. [shortened form of alone], lonesome; solitary; retired: Humorous, unmarried or widowed; Rare, apart from others; not much visited; solitary; hence, lonely: Cards, played without help from one's partner; as, a lone hand.

lo-neal (lō'nēl"), v.t. [lo(ne) + (an)neal], Metal., to heat to a temperature below the critical temperature, as steel, for softening, relieving stains, etc.

lone-li-ness (lōn'lĭ-nĕs), n. [see lonely], 1, the state of being solitary; 2, seclusion; solitude; 3, low spirits due to lack of companionship.

lone-ly (lōn'lĭ), adj. [comp. -lier, superl. -liest], [see lone], 1, deserted; solitary; without a companion; 2, not often visited; 3, depressed because alone.

Syn. solitary, alone, lone, lonesome, desolate, deserted. To be alone is to be all by oneself. Solitary describes the condition of being alone; as, solitary confinement; a solitary stroll. Solitary applied to places means secluded, unfrequented; as, solitary haunts. He who is lonely is solitary and alone and regrets it. A lonely place is remote, hard to reach, or not frequented by human beings. Lone is a poetical word for lonely, though we still speak ordinarily of a lone hand in cards. He is lonesome who feels lonely: that is lonesome which makes us feel lonely; as, the lonesome cry of the whippoorwill. A place is lonesome that is secluded. Desolate describes the state of one forlorn because he is left alone.

lone-some (lōn'sŭm), adj. [comp. lonesomer, superl. lonesomest], 1, secluded; shut off from society; 2, depressed because alone; drearily solitary.—adv. lone'some-ly.—n. lone'some-ness.

Syn. forlorn, alone, deserted, desolate. (See lonely.)

[1]long (lông), adj. [< A.S. lang < O.Teut. source], 1, covering a considerable distance from end to end; not short: distinguished from broad and wide; 2, extended in time; not brief: hence, drawn out; tedious; tiresome; 3, extended (to a specified measure) in space or time; as, a yard long; an hour long; 4, continued to a great extent numerically or serially; as, a long list; 5, far-reaching; 6, designating measure, quantity, weight, etc., in excess of the standard; as, a long mile; a long half hour; 7, well supplied: with on: Colloq., tall: Fin., in the position of having bought stocks or commodities on the exchanges, in expectation of a rise in price, at which time the goods may be resold at a profit; as, long of the market; Phon., 1, of any of the English vowels a, e, i, o, u, sounded like its name; 2, of vowels, and sometimes consonants, in other languages, more prolonged in pronunciation than the corresponding short sound; Pros., in classical languages,

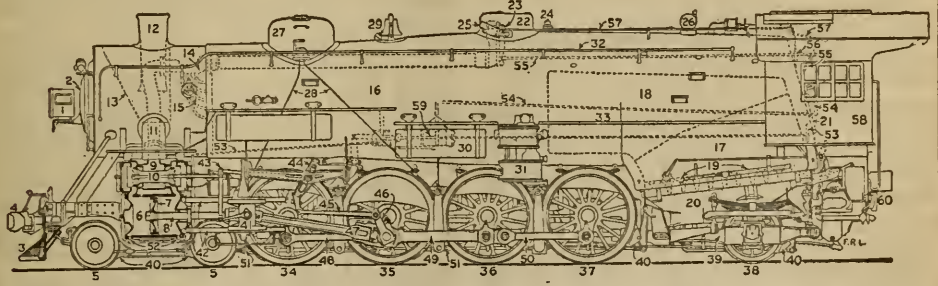
TYPES IN THE EVOLUTION OF THE AMERICAN LOCOMOTIVE

1, 1803: Oliver Evans's combination steam carriage and paddle-wheel boat; 2, 1831: Davis's "York"; 3, 1832: "Old Ironsides"; 4, 1842: locomotive with six drivers, the front four drivers connected in a flexible truck; 5, 1848, passenger locomotive; 6, 1876: consolidation type locomotive; 7, 1895: Atlantic type passenger locomotive; 8, 1893 Santa Fe type freight locomotive; 9, 1914: triplex freight locomotive, with twelve pairs of driving wheels, weight in working order, 850,000 pounds; 10, 1920: electric locomotive; 11, modern steam passenger locomotive; length 100 feet 6 inches; weight 659,000 pounds; tractive power 68,200 pounds.



PARTS OF PASSENGER LOCOMOTIVE, MOUNTAIN TYPE

1, headlight; 2, smoke-box door; 3, pilot; 4, coupler; 5, truck wheels; 6, cylinders; 7, piston; 8, piston rod; 9, live-steam chamber; 10, steam-chest valve; 11, steam pipe; 12, smokestack; 13, smoke box netting; 14, superheater; 15, superheater tubes; 16, boiler tube space; 17, fire box; 18, combustion chamber; 19, grates; 20, ash pit, 21, fire door; 22, dome; 23, throttle valve; 24, safety valve; 25, whistle; 26, dynamo; 27, sand box; 28, sand pipes; 29, bell; 30, air drum; 31, air pump; 32, handrail; 33, running board; 34, front driving wheel; 35, main driving wheel; 36, intermediate driving wheel; 37, rear driving wheel; 38, rear truck wheel; 39, rear truck frame; 40, brake shoes; 41, crosshead; 42, crosshead guide bars; 43, combining lever in valve mechanism; 44, reversing link; 45, eccentric rod; 46; eccentric crank; 47, main connecting rod; 48, front driving rod; 49, main driving rod; 50, rear driving rod; 51, water brake beam; 52, cylinder cocks; 53, cylinder-cock operating rod; 54, power-reverse rod; 55, throttle lever; 56, water gauge; 57, whistle lever; 58, cab; 59, power-reverse cylinder; 60, tender coupling.

designating a syllable containing a long vowel, or a diphthong, or one followed by two or more consonants; in English, sometimes, designating a syllable which bears the stress: long ton, 2240 pounds avoirdupois: the common ton of Great Britain:—adv. 1, to a great length or period; 2, in great degree; as, long before the war; 3, for a length of time; as, to stay long; 4, throughout the entire extent or duration; as, all his life long.

²long (lông), v.i. [<A.S. langian, to seem long to], to desire something eagerly: with for or after, or with an infinitive with to; as, I long to go.

Syn. hanker, crave, yearn, want, desire.

lon-ga-nim-i-ty (lông″gə-nim′i-ti), n. [<Lat. longus, long + animus, spirit], ability to suffer without complaint; forbearance; patience.

long-boat (lông′bōt″), n. [¹long + boat], Naut., the largest and strongest of the small boats carried by a merchant ship.

long bow a bow drawn by hand, and shooting an arrow, formerly used by English archers: distinguished from crossbow. Also, n. long′bow″.

long cloth a superior kind of fine cotton fabric. Also, n. long′cloth″.

long-drawn (lông′=drôn″), adj. prolonged; drawn out in time; hence, tiresome.

lon-gé-ron (lôn″zhā″rôn′; lon′jėr-on), n. [Fr.], one of the chief longitudinal members of the fuselage, or body, of an airplane (see airplane, illus.).

lon-gev-i-ty (lon-jev′i-ti), n. [<Lat. longus, long + aevum, age], great length of life.

lon-ge-vous (lon-jē′vus), adj. Rare, long-lived; living to an old age.

long-hand (lông′hand″), n. [¹long + hand], ordinary script: distinguished from shorthand.

long-head-ed (lông′=hed″ed), adj. having a long head: Colloq., farseeing; shrewd; clever.—n. long″-head′ed-ness.

long-ing (lông′ing), n. [see ²long], an earnest desire; strong craving; aspiration; wish.

Syn. appetite, yearning, inclination. (See desire.)

long-ish (lông′ish), adj. [see ¹long], rather, or moderately, long.

lon-gi-tude (lon′ji-tūd), n. [<Lat. longitudo (-inis), length], Geog., distance east or west measured by the arc between two meridians, one of which passes through any given point and the other through a point chosen as standard of reference, usually Greenwich, England, or Washington, D. C.; Astron., of a celestial body, the arc of the ecliptic measured eastward from the vernal equinox to the point where the ecliptic is intersected by the great circle through the body and the poles of the ecliptic: also called celestial longitude: Obs., length.

lon-gi-tu-di-nal (lon″ji-tū′di-năl), adj. 1, pertaining to longitude or to length; 2, extending lengthwise.—adv. lon″gi-tu′di-nal-ly.

long-lived (lông′=livd″), adj. 1, lasting a long time; 2, living to a great age.

Long Par-lia-ment an English parliament which convened in 1640, was expelled by Cromwell in 1653, reassembled in 1659, and was formally dissolved in 1660.

long prim-er a size of type, approximately equal to 10 point, making 7.2 lines to an inch (for illus. see App. I).

long-shore-man (lông′shōr″măn), n. [pl. -men (-mĕn)], [(a)long + ¹shore + man], one who works about wharves, as in loading boats.

long-sight-ed (lông′=sit″ed), adj. farseeing; hence, sagacious; penetrating.

long-spur (lông′spûr″), n. [¹long + spur], any of several birds of the finch family (chiefly genus Calcarius) with long hind claws, found in the arctic regions and the great central plain of North America.

long-stand-ing (lông′=stăn″ding), adj. having lasted for a considerable time.

long-stop (lông′=stŏp″), n. in cricket, a fielder who stands behind the wicket keeper.

long-suf-fer-ing (lông′=sūf″ėr-ing), adj. very patient under injury or offense: —n. long patience under injury or abuse.

long-tongued (lông′=tŭngd″), adj. having a long tongue; hence, talkative; gossipy.

long-wind-ed (lông′=wind″ed; -id), adj. 1, capable of speaking or writing at great length; 2, hence, tedious; long drawn out.—adv. long″-wind′ed-ly.—n. long″-wind′ed-ness.

long-wise (lông′wīz″), adv. [¹long + ²wise], in the direction from end to end; lengthwise. Also, Colloq., long′ways″ (-wāz″).

loo (lōō), n. [abbr. of obs. lanterloo <Fr. lanturelu, refrain of song], a certain card game; also, the stake played for:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. looed (lōōd, p.ppr. looing], to cause (a player) to forfeit in this game.

look (lŏŏk), v.i. [<A.S. lōcian, to look], 1, to direct the eye toward anything; see: with at, about, to, etc., 2, to direct the vision with a certain manner or feeling; as, to look sadly; 3, to direct the mind or attention; as, to look into a matter; 4, to face or front; as, my windows look on a garden; 5, to keep watch; as, to look after the sheep; 6, to expect; anticipate: with for; as, to look for better business; 7, to appear; have a certain expression or appearance; as, to look sad; to look like rain; 8, to depend or turn: with to; as, to look to the state for protection; 9, to show a tendency; point (in a particular direction); as, the facts look the other way:—v.t. 1, to show by an expression of face; as, he looked his contempt; 2, to turn the eyes upon; regard; as, he looked the boy up and down; 3, to influence by looking; as, to look down criticism; 4, to examine; inspect: now only with over:—n. 1, the act of looking; a glance; a view; 2, appearance; aspect; 3, expression of face:—interj. see!

Syn., v. behold, see, appear, discern, perceive, gaze, regard, inspect, scan, view, stare. (See seem.)

look-er-on (lŏŏk″ėr-ŏn′), n. [pl. lookers-on (-ėrz″)], a bystander; a passive observer.

Syn. spectator, beholder, inspector, eyewitness.

look-ing glass (lŏŏk′ing=glăs″), n. a mirror made of glass coated on the back with a reflecting substance, as silver amalgam or platinum.

look-out (lŏŏk′out″), n. [look + out], 1, the act of watching, as for someone to come or something to happen; 2, a place for watching; 3, a person engaged in watching; 4, a prospect; what may be expected: Colloq., concern; interest.

¹loom (lōōm), n. [earlier meaning tool <A.S. gelōma, tool], 1, a frame or machine for weaving cloth; 2, the shaft of an oar between blade and handle; also, the handle: Sc., an implement; a vessel.

²loom (lōōm), v.i. [perh. akin to East Frisian lōmen, to move slowly], to seem to rise gradually and appear huge:—n. an indistinct outline of an object.

¹loon (lōōn), n. [perh. <O.N. lōmr, a water bird], any of several northern diving birds (genus Gavia).

²loon (lōōn), n. [<earlier lowne: source uncertain], a dull or stupid person; a rascal: Sc., a lad.

¹loop (lōōp), n. [<Gael. lub, a bend], 1, a doubling or folding, as of string, thread, or rope, such as forms a ring or eye through which another cord, or the like, may be run; 2, any ring-shaped or circular figure, road, or the like, as a stitch in needlework, a branch line of a railroad, a curve in a river, lake, or the like: Rad., a form of antenna consisting of one or more turns of wire wound upon an insulating framework: loop line, a railway line running out of, and rejoining, the main line: loop stitch, a stitch composed of a series of loops fastened at the end, as by a short stitch:—v.t. to form into, furnish with, or secure with, loops: often with up:—v.i. to make a loop.

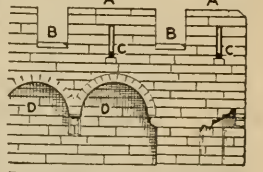
²loop (lōōp), n. [<M.E. loupe, loophole <O.F. loup, narrow window, perh. <M.Du. lupen, to peer], Archaic, a narrow opening, as a window; a loophole.

loop-er (lōōp′ėr), n. [see ¹loop], 1, any of various insect larvæ that move by forming the body into loops; a measuring worm; 2, in some machines, as the sewing machine, a contrivance for making loops.

loop-hole (lōōp′hōl″), n. [²loop + hole], 1, a narrow opening for observation or for shooting through, as in a fort or castle; 2, the means of barely escaping something or of evading a rule.



BATTLEMENT WITH LOOPHOLES

A, A, merlons; B, B, crenels, or embrasures; C, C, loopholes; D, D, arches overhanging machicolation.

loose (lōōs), adj. [comp. looser, superl. loosest], [<O.N. lauss, loose], 1, not held fast; as, a loose tooth; unbound; as, loose hair; loose papers; only lightly or locally secured; as, loose ribbons; 2, not tightly fitted or drawn; as, a loose garment; 3, wanting in accuracy or system; not exact; as, loose logic; 4, vague; unconnected; as, loose ideas; 5, not close or compact in substance or texture, as sand or fabrics; 6, lax in principles; unstable morally; 7, free; unrestrained: of things usually confined; as, a loose criminal:—adv. in such a manner as not to bind:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. loosed (lōōst), p.pr. loosing], 1, to set free; unbind; undo; 2, to disengage; absolve; remit; 3, to relax; render less strict; 4, to free from tightness; 5, to release, as an arrow; cast off or let go, as a boat or sail:—n. Archery, the letting fly of the arrow: Obs., result; conclusion —adv. loose′ly.—n. loose′ness.

Syn., adj. slack, free, indefinite, lewd, dissolute.—Ant., adj. tight, confined, clear, definite, good, pure.

loose cou-pler (lōōs'ᵊkup'lĕr), n. Rad., a form of receiver of radio signals, consisting of two coils of wire, one of which usually slides within the other, one coil being connected with the antenna and the other with a detecting device.

loos-en (lōōs'n), v.t. 1, to free from tightness or restraint; 2, to allow to be less rigid, as discipline; 3, to relax (the bowels):—v.i. to become less tight, compact, or firm.

loose-strife (lōōs'strīf"), n. [wrong rendering of Gk. proper name Lusimakhos, as if from luein, to loose + makhē, battle], Bot., 1, any of a genus (Lythrum) of herbs or shrubs with slender, commonly smooth-edged, leaves and four-sided branches, usually bearing magenta or pink flowers; 2, any of a genus (Lysimachia) of plants of the primrose family: false loosestrife, any of a genus (Ludvigia) of plants belonging to the evening primrose family.

loot (lōōt), v.t. [< Hind. lūt, plunder], 1, to rob or plunder, as a captured city; 2, to carry off as loot:—v.i. to commit robbery:—n. booty thus taken.

Syn., n. plunder, booty, spoil, pillage, gain, rapine.

¹lop (lŏp), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. lopped (lŏpt), p.pr. lopping], [source uncertain], 1, to cut off, as branches from a tree; 2, to cut branches and twigs from; trim:—n. that part of a tree which is cut off; the trimmings. Colloq., to lounge; dawdle:—v.t. to let hang limply:—adj. drooping; loosely hanging; pendent.

lope (lōp), n. [< O.N. hlaupa, to leap], an easy, swinging gait, faster than a walk, as of a horse:—v.i. [p.t. and p.p. loped (lōpt), p.pr. loping], to run with a lope.

lop-eared (lŏp'ērd"), adj. [< ²*lop*], having hanging ears; as, a lop-eared rabbit.

LOP-EARED RABBIT

lop-sid-ed (lŏp'sīd"ĕd, -ĭd), adj. [²*lop* + side], leaning more to one side than to the other; not well balanced; unsymmetrical; disproportionate.

loq. abbr. [Lat. loquitur], he (or she) speaks: used chiefly as a stage direction.

lo-qua-cious (lō-kwā'shŭs), adj. [< Lat. loquax < loqui, to speak], talkative; chatterling.—adv. lo-qua'cious-ly.—n. lo-qua'cious-ness.

Syn. voluble, fluent, glib, chatty. (See garrulous.)

lo-quac-i-ty (lō-kwăs'ĭ-tĭ), n. undue talkativeness; garrulity; volubility.

lo-quat (lō'kwŏt; lō'kwät), n. [< Chin. luh kwat, rush orange], 1, a tree (Eriobotrya japonica) of China and Japan of the rose family, bearing a small fruit used for preserving; also called Japanese quince; 2, the fruit of this tree, resembling a small yellow pear.

lord (lôrd), n. [< A.S. hlāford, bread keeper < hlāf, loaf + weard, guardian], 1, one supreme in authority; master; sovereign; ruler; governor: now chiefly rhetorical; 2, the owner of a house or lands; a proprietor; 3, in Great Britain, a nobleman, whether a peer of the realm or one who by courtesy is entitled to the title Lord as part of his ordinary appellation; 4, humorously, husband: lords of creation, men as opposed to women: Lord, 1, in England, a title of honor given to temporal peers and to archbishops and bishops; 2, a courtesy title given to the sons of dukes and marquises, and to the eldest son of an earl; 3, a title of office; as, Lord Mayor; 4, Jehovah; also, Jesus Christ: usually with the or our: Lord's Prayer, the prayer which Jesus taught his disciples (Matt. 6:9–13): Lord's Supper, Eccl., the sacrament held in memory of the last supper partaken of by Jesus before his crucifixion: term generally used in nonritualistic churches: also called Communion and, in ritualistic churches, Eucharist:—v.i. to rule with absolute power: with over: lord it, to rule or act as if possessed of absolute power:—v.t. 1, to ennoble; confer title on; 2, to address or speak of as Lord.

lord-ling (lôrd'lĭng), n. a little or insignificant person of high rank.

lord-ly (lôrd'lĭ), adj. [comp. -lier, superl. -liest], 1, suited to, or like, one of high rank; noble; 2, proud:—adv. nobly; proudly.—n. lord'li-ness.

Syn., adj. imperious, domineering, haughty, arrogant, dictatorial, despotic, arbitrary, tyrannical, insolent.

lor-do-sis (lôr-dō'sĭs), n. [< Gk. lordos, bent backward], Physiol., abnormal forward curvature of the spine at the waist; hollow back.

lord-ship (lôrd'shĭp), n. [see lord], 1, the territory under the jurisdiction of a lord; 2, authority; control; power; as, to have lordship over a land; 3, in England, the rank of a lord; hence, the title or term of address for noblemen, except dukes and archbishops, and for judges: preceded by his or your.

¹lore (lôr), n. [< A.S. lār, learning], learning; erudition; often, the traditional facts, anecdotes, etc., relating to some particular subject; as, folk*lore*; plant lore: Archaic, 1, the act of teaching; 2, that which is taught; instruction given.

Syn. knowledge, scholarship. (See learning.)

²lore (lôr), n. [< Lat. lorum, strap], the space between the eye and bill of a bird, or between the eye and nostril of a snake.

Lo-re-lei (lō'rĕ-lī"; lōr'ĕ-), n. [Ger.], in German folklore, a siren who, singing from a rock in the Rhine, caused sailors to run their ships on a hidden reef while they listened to her.

lor-gnette (lôr"nyĕt'), n. [Fr. < lorgner, to peep], 1, a long-handled opera glass; 2, a pair of eyeglasses fixed to a handle. Also, lor"gnon' (lôr"nyôn').

LORGNETTE

lo-ri-ca (lō-rī'kə), n. [pl. -cæ (-sē)], [Lat. = cuirass], in ancient armor, a breastplate, or cuirass, of leather or metal: Zoöl., a protective outer covering, as the shell of a lobster, and, especially, the hardened coats of certain minute water animals.—adj. lor'i-cate (lôr'ĭ-kāt).

lor-i-keet (lôr'ĭ-kēt; lōr'ĭ-kēt'), n. [lory + (parra)keet], Zoöl., any of several very small species of lory.

lo-ris (lō'rĭs), n. [Fr., perh. < Du. loer, clown], either of two small, tree-inhabiting lemurs of India, Ceylon, and the East Indies.

lorn (lôrn), adj. [< A.S. loren, p.p. of lēosan, to lose], forsaken; desolate; lone: Archaic, lost; destroyed.

lor-ry (lôr'ĭ; lŭr'ĭ), n. [pl. -ries (-ĭz)], [source uncertain], 1, a long, four-wheeled wagon without sides; 2, a miner's handcart with drop bottom: Mil., a large, low autotruck for carrying heavy supplies.

lo-ry (lō'rĭ), n. [pl. lories (-rĭz)], [< Malay lūrī, nat. name of bird], any of several small, brilliantly colored parrots (subfamily Loriinæ), found in Australia and adjacent Polynesia and characterized by brushlike tongues used for feeding on flowers and soft fruits.

lose (lōōz), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. lost (lôst), p.pr. losing], [< A.S. losian, to be lost], 1, to cease to have or to be deprived of, as by death, separation, accident, negligence, etc.; 2, to fail to keep or sustain, as health, temper, interest, or the like; 3, to mislay or miss; also, to wander from; as, to lose the trail; 4, to waste; let go by; as, to lose an opportunity; 5, to fail to keep in sight or to follow mentally; 6, to fail to win; also, to fail to catch, see, or hear; 7, to cause (a person) the loss of (a thing); as, illness lost him his job; 8, used reflexively, to obscure; submerge; as, the stream lost itself in the marsh; he lost himself in his work; 9, to ruin; destroy: usually in the passive:—v.i. 1, to experience loss; 2, to fail of success.—n. los'er.

Syn. forfeit, squander, ruin, mislay, overlook.

lo-sel (lō'zĕl; lōōz'ĕl), n. [prob. < losen, p.p. of obs. leese, to lose], Archaic, a good-for-nothing fellow:—adj. worthless; idle.

loss (lôs), n. [< A.S. los, destruction], 1, the state or fact of being lost or destroyed; as, the loss of a ship; also, that which is lost, or its value; as, heavy losses; 2, failure to keep (a possession, right, quality, or the like); as, loss of wealth; 3, failure to win or obtain; as, the loss of a contract; 4, waste; as, a loss of gasoline: pl. number of soldiers killed, wounded, or captured in battle: Com., excess of outgo over income in a business transaction; Mech., energy or power wasted, as in friction.

Syn. damage, failure, forfeiture, deprivation, defeat.

lost (lôst), p.adj. [see lose], 1, missing; parted with; 2, not won; as, the race was lost; 3, ruined; destroyed physically or morally; as, hay lost by the storm; a lost soul; 4, perplexed; preoccupied; as, lost in thought; 5, wasted; missed; as, lost efforts; 6, no longer visible; 7, not influenced or affected; insensible: with to; as lost to honor: lost tribes, those members of the tribes of Israel who were carried captives to Assyria and who never returned.

Lot (lŏt), n. [Heb.], Bib., Abraham's nephew, whose wife was turned into a pillar of salt because she looked back in her flight from Sodom (Gen. 19:26).

lot (lŏt), n. [< A.S. hlot, a share], 1, any object, as a pebble, a slip of paper, or the like, used in deciding a question by chance; 2, the method of so deciding; as, to choose by lot; 3, the choice arrived at; 4, fortune; fate; as, the lot of man; 5, a portion or parcel; especially, a plot of land; 6, a number of things collectively; as, this lot of dresses: Colloq., 1, a considerable amount; a great many or a great deal; 2, kind or sort; as, a sorry lot:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. lotted, p.pr. lotting], 1, to divide or separate into lots; 2, to assign; apportion.

Syn., n. doom, fate, portion. (See destiny.)

loth (lōth), adj [see loath], reluctant; unwilling; strongly disinclined. See loath, Pfd. S.

Lo-tha-ri-o (lō-thā′ri-ō), n. [pl. -os (-ōz)], [It.], a gay libertine; a seducer of women: from a character in Rowe's drama, "The Fair Penitent."

lo-tion (lō′shŭn), n. [< Lat. lotio (-onis), a wash], Med., a liquid preparation, often a cosmetic, for bathing the skin or an injured or diseased part.

Lo-toph-a-gi (lō-tŏf′ă-jī), n.pl. [< Gk. lōtos, lotus + phagein, to eat], the lotus-eaters: in Homer's "Odyssey," an indolent, dreamy people visited by Odysseus, probably in northern Africa.

lot-ter-y (lŏt′ĕr-ĭ), n. [pl. -ies (-iz)], [< It. lotteria, lottery], a scheme whereby prizes are distributed by lot, usually among those who have purchased numbered tickets.

lot-to (lŏt′ō), n. [It. < Teut.], a parlor game, played with cards marked in squares, and disks.

lo-tus (lō′tŭs), n. [< Gk. lōtos, lotus], 1, a plant of the water-lily family, especially the sacred lotus of the ancient Nile; 2, any of various trees and shrubs mentioned in ancient legends, the fruit of which was fabled to cause forgetfulness of care and create a state of indolence; 3, any of a genus (Lotus) of plants of the pea family, bearing purple, yellow, or white flowers, including the bird's-foot trefoil. Also, lo'tos.

lo-tus–eat-er (lō′tŭs=ēt″ĕr), n. 1, one of the legendary, indolent people called Lotophagi; 2, one who idles away his time in listless dreaming. Also, lo'tos–eat″er.—adj. and n. lo'tus–eat″ing.

loud (loud), adj. [< A.S. hlūd < O.Teut. source], 1, high or full sounding; not subdued; noisy; 2, striking; emphatic; making a great stir; as, loud protests: Colloq., vulgarly showy in dress or manner; unpleasantly vivid or strong; as, loud colors.—adv. loud'ly.—n. loud'ness.—v.t. and v.t. Rare, loud'en.

Syn. clamorous, thunderous, raucous, shrieking, clanging, boisterous.—Ant. soft, inaudible, subdued, low.

loud–speak-er (loud′=spēk″ĕr), n. Elec. or Rad., a sensitive telephone receiver provided with a horn or other resonant device by which received sounds are increased in loudness: used especially with radio receiving sets.

lough (lŏkh), n. [see loch], Ir., a lake; also, a bay or arm of the sea: equivalent to Scotch loch.

lou-is d'or (lōō″ĭ dōr′), [Fr. = a louis of gold], 1, formerly, in France, a gold coin worth about $4.79; 2, the modern twenty-franc piece of gold, or napoleon.

lounge (lounj), v.i. [p.t. and p.p. lounged (lounjd), p.pr. lounging], [prob. < Fr. longis, idle fellow], 1, to move or act in a lazy manner; 2, to loaf; live lazily:—v.t. to waste in laziness: followed by away:—n. 1, the act of lolling; lazy motion or gait; 2, a low-backed couch; 3, a comfortable and informal parlor or waiting room in a hotel, club, or the like.

loung-er (loun′jĕr), n. an idler; one who stands or strolls about lazily.

loup–ga-rou (lōō′=gȧ″rōō′), n. [pl. loups-garous (lōō′=gȧ″rōō′)], [Fr. = werewolf], a werewolf; a person turning into a wolf at will.

lour (lour), v.i. [see [2]lower], 1, to appear dark or threatening; 2, to look angry:—n. a scowl; frown. See low'er, Pfd. S.—adj. lour'ing.—adv. lour'ing-ly.

louse (lous), n. [pl. lice (līs)], [< A.S. lūs < O.Teut. source], 1, any of several small wingless insects living and feeding on the bodies of men and animals; 2, any of various other insects or crustaceans and arachnids, living on animals and plants.

lous-y (louz′ĭ), adj. [comp. -ier, superl. -iest], 1, infested with lice; 2, mean; foul: Vulgar, overrun; abundantly supplied.—n. lous'i-ness.

lout (lout), n. [source uncertain], an awkward fellow; a clown; a bumpkin.—adj. lout'ish.

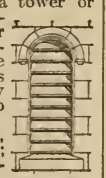
lou-ver (lōō′vĕr), n. [< O.F. lover, upper gallery], Arch., a small window, as in a tower or stairway, closed with louver boards; Automobiles, any one of a series of long slits or openings in the side of the hood, contributing to the ventilation and cooling of the engine: louver boards, sloping slats or boards placed one above the other, as in belfry windows, to admit light and air, but keep out the rain.



LOUVER BOARDS

lov-a-ble (lŭv′ȧ-bl), adj. [see love], arousing love; worthy of love; winning; amiable.—adv. lov'a-bly.—n. lov'a-ble-ness.—n. lov″a-bil′i-ty.

love (lŭv), n. [< A.S. lufu, love < Aryan source], 1, a strong feeling of affection; fond and tender attachment; 2, passionate devotion to one of the opposite sex: the normal basis of marriage; 3, strong liking; as, love of learning; 4, the state of feeling kindly toward others and of desiring the welfare of all; as, in love and charity for all men; 5, a sweetheart: Tennis, in scoring, zero: Love, Cupid, the god of love:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. loved (lŭvd), p.pr. loving], 1, to regard with strong affection; feel devotion toward; 2, to delight in; as, to love dancing:—v.i. to be in love; have strong affection.

Syn., n. fondness, tenderness, friendship, liking, affection. (See attachment.)

love ap-ple the tomato: an old term, suggested by the French pomme d'amour.

love bird any of various small parrots that show especially marked affection for their mates.

love feast 1, originally, among the early Christians, a meal eaten together as a symbol of brotherly love; 2, in modern times, among certain denominations, a similar meal accompanied by a religious service; the agape; 3, any banquet or meeting marked by exceptional good feeling or joyousness.

love–in–i-dle-ness (lŭv″=ĭn=ī′dl-nĕs), n. the heartsease, or wild pansy: a term used by Shakespeare.

love knot a knot, as of ribbon, given or worn as a pledge of love and constancy.

love-less (lŭv′lĕs), adj. 1, lacking in, or having no, affection; 2, unloved: Obs., unattractive.

love–lies–bleed-ing (lŭv″=līz=blēd′ĭng), n. any of several species of amaranth, especially one (Amaranthus caudatus) bearing red to purple flowers.

love-lock (lŭv′lŏk″), n. [love + [1]lock], a conspicuous lock of hair, dressed separately; hence, a lock hanging apart from the rest of the hair.

love-lorn (lŭv′lôrn″), adj. [love + lorn], deserted by, or longing for, one's love.

love-ly (lŭv′lĭ), adj. [comp. -lier, superl. -liest], [< A.S. luflīc, lovely], having physical or mental traits that arouse affection or admiration; beautiful; amiable: Colloq., 1, charming; inviting; 2, delightful:—adv. Obs., in a lovable way.—n. love'li-ness.

Syn., adj. comely, fair, exquisite, attractive, enchanting, captivating. (Cf. beautiful.)

lov-er (lŭv′ĕr), n. [see love], 1, one who has much affection for another of the opposite sex: generally masculine; 2, a paramour; 3, one deeply attached to anything; as, a lover of art: pl. a couple in love with each other.—adj. and adv. lov'er-ly.

love-sick (lŭv′sĭk″), adj. [love + sick], overcome with, or expressive of, passionate affection; languishing.—n. love'sick″ness.

lov-ing (lŭv′ĭng), p.adj. [see love], 1, devoted; affectionate; 2, expressing great affection or love; as, loving acts.—adv. lov'ing-ly.

lov-ing cup a large and often highly decorated drinking cup or bowl, with handles by which it may be passed around a convivial gathering.

lov-ing–kind-ness (lŭv′ĭng=kīnd′nĕs), n. affectionate sympathy; tenderness; mercy; an act of voluntary service.

[1]low (lō), adj. [< O.N. lágr, low], 1, not high; having little elevation; as, a low bridge; 2, below the normal or standard elevation or level; as, a low piece of ground; low tide; 3, of sounds, deep in pitch; subdued; 4, near the horizon, as a heavenly body; 5, relatively small in amount, intensity, value, etc.; as, low heat; low prices; 6, humble; of humble rank or position; as, of low birth; 7, lacking bodily or mental vigor; as, low in body and spirit; 8, disparaging; unfavorable; as, a low opinion of his speech; 9, unrefined; base; vulgar: Ethnol., crude in civilization, organization, or the like; Zoöl., not highly developed; Geog., lying near the equator; Eccl., holding doctrines characteristic of the Low Church:—adv. 1, not on high; as, to fly low; 2, at a deep pitch; 3, softly; quietly; 4, at a small price; 5, in humbleness, poverty, or disgrace; 6, near the horizon or the equator.—n. low'ness.

Syn., adj. deep, soft, inferior, abject, commonplace, vulgar, unrefined.—Ant., adj. lofty, superior, noble, high.

[2]low (lō), v.i. [< A.S. hlōwan, to bellow], to bellow softly or moo like cattle:—v.t. to utter, as when lowing:—n. the moo or soft call of cattle.

low-born (lō′bôrn″), adj. [[1]low + born], of humble parentage: often used derogatorily.

low-boy (lō′boi″), n. [[1]low + boy, perh. < Fr. bois, wood], a chest of drawers usually of table height with two long drawers: distinguished from highboy, which is higher and has more drawers.

low-bred (lō′brĕd″), adj. [[1]low + breed], 1, born of humble or degraded parents; 2, vulgar; as, a lowbred remark.

low-brow (lō′brou″), n. [[1]low + brow], Slang, one of low mentality and coarse tastes; one incapable of, or without pretensions to, culture: opposite of highbrow:—adj. incapable of culture; lacking good taste; as, lowbrow art or magazines.

Low Church Eccl., a party in the Anglican Church which advocates a simple ritual and lays little stress on church authority: Low-Church, adj. designating, or pertaining to, this party, its doctrines, or its members. Cf. High Church.

Low-Church-man (lō″-chûrch′măn), n. [pl. -men (-mĕn)], Eccl., a member of the Anglican Church who opposes elaborate ritual and lays little stress on church authority.

[1]low-er (lō′ĕr), v.t. [see [1]low], 1, to let or bring down; let fall; 2, to reduce in price or value; 3, to weaken; reduce in strength, intensity, etc.; 4, to humble: Mus., to change to a less high pitch:—v.i. to become less high; sink; fall; decrease.

[2]low-er (lou′ĕr), v.i. [<M.E. louren, to frown, related to Du. loeren, to frown], 1, to appear threatening, as the sky; 2, to look angry; frown; scowl:—n. a scowling look. Also, lour.—adj. low′er-y.

low-er case Print., 1, that part of a printer's type case which contains the small letters; 2, letters which are not capitals; small letters.—abbr. l. c.—adj. and v.t. low′er-case″.

low-er-ing (lou′ĕr-ĭng), p.adj. [see [2]lower], overcast with clouds; threatening a storm; gloomy; sullen. Also, lour′ing.—adv. low′er-ing-ly.

low-er-most (lō′ĕr-mōst), adj. [comp. of [1]low + most], lowest.

low-ing (lō′ĭng), n. [see [2]low], the mooing or soft calling of cattle:—adj. mooing.

low-land (lō′lănd), adj. [[1]low + land], pertaining to country lying below the level of the surrounding country:—n. a low, flat country: often pl.

Low-land-er (lō′lăn-dĕr), n. a native or inhabitant of the Lowlands, or less mountainous part of Scotland: opposite of Highlander.

Low Lat-in Latin as spoken during the Middle Ages, from about 600 to 1500.

low-ly (lō′lĭ), adj. [comp. -lier, superl. -liest], [see [1]low], 1, low in rank or size; humble; modest; 2, low in situation, as land:—adv. 1, modestly; meekly; 2, in a simple or rude manner.—n. low′li-ness.

Syn., adj. humble, modest, unpretending. Humble and lowly are interchangeable in the sense of poor, that is, in the condition or of the sort of those who have no money, or very little. To be born in a humble or lowly cottage, of humble or lowly parents, has been the lot of many a great man; Christ himself had a humble woman for his mother, and chose the lowly station of a carpenter. Of late years lowly, not at all derogatory in sense, has been applied more to conditions than to people; and humble often connotes a false meekness or shamefulness of abjectness; a humble dependent may not truly think himself inferior, though he may act as if he did; the humble beggar may be unpleasantly cringing.

Low Mass Eccl., a Mass said without music, and by one priest.

low-necked (lō′-nĕkt″), adj. cut low about the neck, as a dress.

low-pass fil-ter Elec., a selective network that permits the transmission of currents of all frequencies below a given value, and suppresses all above this value.

low-pres-sure (lō′-prĕsh″ûr), adj. Mech., requiring only a small amount of steam pressure: said of a cylinder of an engine, or of an engine.

low-spir-it-ed (lō′-spĭr′ĭt-ĕd), adj. depressed; sad; downhearted.

lox-o-drom-ic (lŏk″sō-drŏm′ĭk), adj. [<Gk. loxos, oblique + dromos, course], Naut., pertaining to sailing along a loxodromic line: loxodromic line or curve, the line or curve followed by a vessel sailing at an oblique angle to the equator, and crossing all the meridians at the same angle: also called rhumb, or rhumb line: loxodromics, n. pl. used as sing. the science of sailing a vessel in this manner.

loy-al (loi′ăl), adj. [Fr. <Lat. legalis, legal], 1, faithful, especially to one's ruler or country; 2, true to friend, promise, or duty; 3, of, pertaining to, or displaying, faithfulness: Obs., lawful.—adv. loy′al-ly.

loy-al-ist (loi′ăl-ĭst), n. 1, one who supports, or is faithful to, the authority of his ruler or country, especially in times of revolt; 2, during the American Revolutionary War, a Tory.

loy-al-ty (loi′ăl-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], faithfulness to country, friend, promise, or duty; constancy.

Syn. allegiance, fidelity, faithfulness, trust, constancy.

loz-enge (lŏz′ĕnj; -ĭnj), n. [<O.F. losenge <O. Prov'l lausa, tombstone <Lat. lapis, stone], 1, a diamond-shaped figure with four equal sides; 2, anything shaped in this way, as a sweetmeat or a cough drop (for illus. see quadrilateral): Her., a diamond-shaped figure on a coat of arms, forming acute angles at top and bottom (see heraldry, illus.); also, a form of escutcheon used to display the arms of a widow or spinster.

l. s. abbr. left side:—L. S., [Lat. locus sigilli], place of the seal:—L. S. D., [Lat. libræ, solidi, denarii], pounds, shillings, pence (also, £. s. d.; l. s. d.):—L. S. S., Life Saving Station:—Lt., Lieutenant (also, Lieut.):—l. t., long ton:—ltd., limited:—Lu, Chem., the symbol [Lu] for the element lutecium.

lub-ber (lŭb′ĕr), n. [prob. <lob, q.v.], an awkward, clumsy fellow: Naut., a raw sailor.—adj. and adv. lub′ber-ly.—n. lub′ber-li-ness.

lu-bri-cant (lū′brĭ-kănt), adj. [see lubricate], making smooth or slippery:—n. a substance for making anything smooth or slippery.

lu-bri-cate (lū′brĭ-kāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -cated, p.pr. -cating], [<Lat. lubricare (-atus), to make smooth <lubricus, slippery], 1, to render smooth or slippery; 2, to supply with a substance for making smooth or slippery to reduce friction; as, to lubricate machinery with oil:—v.i. to act as an oil, in making smooth or slippery.—n. lu″bri-ca′tion.

lu-bri-ca-tor (lū′brĭ-kā″tĕr), n. one who or that which makes slippery or smooth; especially, a device for oiling machinery.

lu-bric-i-ty (lū-brĭs′ĭ-tĭ), n. [pl.-ties (-tĭz)], 1, smoothness; slipperiness; hence, instability; 2, lasciviousness.—adj. lu′bri-cous (lū′brĭ-kŭs).

lu-cent (lū′sĕnt), adj. [<Lat. lucens (-entis), shining <lucēre, to shine], 1, shining; glowing; emitting or reflecting light; 2, translucent; clear; pervious to, or pervaded by, light.—n. lu′cen-cy.

Syn. luminous, shining, radiant. (See transparent.)

lu-cern (lū-sûrn′), n. [<Fr. luzerne: source uncertain], a deep-rooted plant of the pea family, having cloverlike leaves and flowers: also called alfalfa, which see. Also, lu-cerne′.

lu-cid (lū′sĭd), adj. [<Lat. lucidus, clear], 1, clear to the vision; transparent; 2, clear to the mind; readily understood; as, a lucid explanation; 3, pertaining to mental soundness or clarity; as, a lucid interval; 4, shining; transparent; crystalline; as, a lucid stream of water.—adv. lu′cid-ly.—n. lu′cid-ness.

Syn. perspicuous, sound, sane, pellucid, clear, limpid, translucent, luminous. (See transparent.)

lu-ci-da (lū′sĭ-dă), n. [pl. -dæ (-dē)], 1, a star easily seen with the naked eye; 2, the brightest star of a constellation.

lu-cid-i-ty (lū-sĭd′ĭ-tĭ), n. the state of being clear and intelligible; as, lucidity of thought: Psychopathol., clearness of mind alternating with, or following, confused states in certain mental disorders.

Syn. clarity, intelligibility, plainness, clearness, reasonableness, saneness, transparency.

lu-ci-fer (lū′sĭ-fĕr), n. [<Lat. lux, light + ferre, to bear], a friction match: Lucifer, 1, the planet Venus, when it appears in the morning; the day-star; 2, Satan: so called because Isaiah, prophesying the fall of a king of Babylon under the figure of the fallen day-star, was interpreted as referring to the chief of the fallen rebel angels (Isa. 14:12).—adj. lu-cif′er-ous.

luck (lŭk), n. [<L.G. luk, geluk, good fortune], 1, chance; accident; fortune, either good or bad; success; 2, anything that brings good fortune.

luck-less (lŭk′lĕs), adj. unlucky; unfortunate.—adv. luck′less-ly.—n. luck′less-ness.

luck-y (lŭk′ĭ), adj. [comp. -ier, superl. -iest], 1, having good fortune; 2, producing good by chance; 3, of good omen.—adv. luck′i-ly.—n. luck′i-ness.

Syn. fortunate, successful, prosperous, favored, auspicious, well-omened. Lucky and fortunate are applied to those things that happen through favorable or advantageous chance, without the effort of the person whose fortunes or affairs are thus furthered; he who is benefited by such occurrences is also termed fortunate or lucky. Fortunate is used especially of an extremely opportune happening which falls in admirably with one's plans and purposes. Lucky describes that which strikes like a bolt from the blue, without apparent cause, unexpectedly, unaccountably, at exactly the right time. Fortunate is used soberly, gravely, rather of serious affairs; lucky is a more ordinary, everyday word. We say that we had a lucky turn, made a lucky guess, had a lucky day; it was lucky we weren't all killed. We made very fortunate connections in this distant city; what seemed so inauspicious had a fortunate outcome. Successful describes one who has obtained what he started out to get, or a life or career marked by such attainments or achievements. Prosperous is used of a flourishing, thriving condition, attended by continued success, or of a person who is enjoying such a condition. A successful person has striven; a prosperous person may have striven, or may have been fortunate.

lu-cra-tive (lū′krā-tĭv), adj. [<Lat. lucrari (-atus), to gain], profitable; producing wealth; advantageous; gainful; as, he is engaged in a lucrative business.—adv. lu′cra-tive-ly.—n. lu′cra-tive-ness.

lu-cre (lū'kẽr; lōō'-), n. [Fr. < Lat. lucrum, gain], money or profits: used derisively.

lu-cu-brate (lū'kū-brāt), v.i. [p.t. and p.p. -brated, p.pr. -brating], [< Lat. lucubrare (-atus), to work by lamplight], 1, to do mental work by artificial light; 2, to study or write with severe exertion.

lu-cu-bra-tion (lū"kū-brā'shŭn), n. 1, close and earnest study; 2, something, as a literary composition, produced by long, toilsome study.

lu-di-crous (lū'dĭ-krŭs), adj. [< Lat. ludicrum, a stage play < ludere, to play], causing mirth; droll.—adv. lu'di-crous-ly.—n. lu'di-crous-ness.

Syn. funny, laughable, ridiculous, comical, comic, droll. That is laughable which excites laughter or merriment, as a humorous anecdote. Ludicrous describes that which excites scornful laughter, or deserves derisive laughter, usually because of some incongruity, exaggeration, or the like. All manifestations of human vanity and pretentiousness are ludicrous, though the word is applied also to situations and predicaments in which fate has played the trick, rather than the people concerned. Crabbe quotes Pope in this connection: "'Let an ambassador speak the best sense in the world, and deport himself in the most graceful manner before a prince, yet if the tail of his shirt happen ... to hang out behind, more people will laugh at that than attend to the other.' This is the ludicrous." Ridiculous is applied to that which deserves contemptuous, scornful laughter; we make fun of the ridiculous, which we usually find in the unreasonableness, the absurdities, the disadvantages, of another. Ridicule is usually biting and sarcastic. That is funny which makes us laugh in spontaneous enjoyment; as, a funny story; the funny attempts of a baby to imitate grown people. Funny has also acquired the meaning of queer, difficult to understand; as, a funny way to end a story; a funny place to put it. That is comical which provokes a feeling of mirth in us; as, the lifted eyebrow gave him a comical expression. That is comic which makes us laugh or is supposed to make us laugh; comic strips in the daily papers, a comic song, and the like, are purposely funny and facetious. That is droll which makes us smile in amused surprise over some odd quirk or hidden incongruity, brought out, usually, in a rather dry or slyly joking fashion.

luff (lŭf), n. [prob. < Fr. lof, device for altering ship's course], Naut., 1, the forward edge of a fore-and-aft sail (see sail, illus.); 2, the broadest part of a ship's bow; 3, the act of sailing closer to the wind:—v.i. Naut., to steer or sail nearer the wind.

[1]lug (lŭg), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. lugged (lŭgd), p.pr. lugging], [< Sw. lugga, to pull by the hair], 1, to pull, drag, or carry along with effort; 2, hence, to introduce, as a subject of conversation, in a forced manner: followed by in:—v.i. to drag; move heavily; pull with difficulty:—n. the act or effort of pulling or dragging along; pl. Slang, self-importance; affectedness; airs.

[2]lug (lŭg), n. [< Sw. lugg, forelock], 1, Sc. and Eng. Dial., the ear; 2, hence, any projection like an ear, especially a part used for supporting or grasping; as, the lugs of a kettle.

[3]lug (lŭg), n. [source uncertain], Naut., a four-cornered sail on a slanting yard; a lugsail.

lug-gage (lŭg'ăj), n. [see [1]lug], a traveler's personal baggage: used chiefly in England.

lug-ger (lŭg'ẽr), n. [see [3]lug] Naut., a small vessel with two or three masts and four-sided sails fastened to spars hung obliquely to the masts.

lug-sail (lŭg'sāl"), n. [[3]lug+sail], a four-sided sail held out by a long spar, or yard, which is slung obliquely to the mast (see illus. next column).

lu-gu-bri-ous (lū-gū'brĭ-ŭs), adj. [< Lat. lugubris, mournful], expressing sorrow; mournful; dismal; doleful; as, a lugubrious tone of voice.—adv. lu-gu'bri-ous-ly.—n. lu-gu'bri-ous-ness.

lug-worm (lŭg'wûrm"), n. [[1]lug+worm], any of a genus (Arenicola) of worms found in sandy beaches and used for bait: also called lugbait.

Luke (lūk), n. [< Gk. Loukas], Bib., 1, an early Christian disciple, probably a Gentile, a physician, a companion of the apostle Paul and the reputed author of the third Gospel and the Acts of the Apostles; 2, the third book of the New Testament, containing Luke's account of Jesus.

luke-warm (lūk'wôrm"), adj. [< obs. luke, tepid +warm], 1, moderately warm; tepid; as, lukewarm tea; 2, not enthusiastic; as, lukewarm interest.—adv. luke'warm"ly.—n. luke'warm"ness.

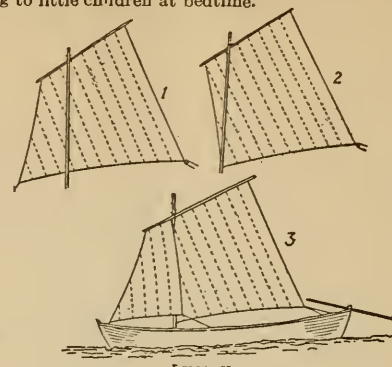
lull (lŭl), v.t. [imit. of lullaby], to soothe to sleep; quiet:—v.i. to become quiet gradually:—n. the state of being less noisy or violent; a calm lasting for a short time; as, a lull in the storm: Poet., that which soothes to sleep; a lullaby.

Syn., v. still, calm, hush, compose, tranquilize, quiet.

lull-a-by (lŭl'ă-bī"), n. [pl. -bies (-bīz")], [imit. as in lull+by < bye-bye], a cradle song; a song sung to little children at bedtime.



LUGSAILS

1, dipping lugsail; 2, standing lugsail; 3, split lugsail.

lum-ba-go (lŭm-bā'gō), n. [< Lat. lumbus, loin], Med., rheumatic pain in the muscles of the lumbar region, or lower part of the back.

lum-bar (lŭm'bẽr), adj. Anat., pertaining to the region of the loins; as, the lumbar vertebræ.

[1]lum-ber (lŭm'bẽr), n. [perh. < lumber room, orig. the Lombard room, where the Lombard banker stored his property; later, a storage room], 1, rubbish; old articles thrown aside; 2, forest timber sawed ready for market:—v.t. 1, to fill with rubbish; as, to lumber a room; 2, to throw together in disorder; 3, to cut timber from (land):—v.i. in North America, to cut down timber and prepare it for market.

[2]lum-ber (lŭm'bẽr), v.i. [perh. akin to Sw. lomra, to resound], 1, to move clumsily; 2, to roll heavily along; rumble.—n. lum'ber-er.

lum-ber-man (lŭm'bẽr-măn), n. [pl. -men (-mĕn)], [[1]lumber+man], one who is engaged in cutting, or dealing in, forest timber.

lu-men (lū'mĕn), n. [Lat. = a light], a unit of luminosity equal to the light emitted per unit of solid angle by a uniform point source of one international candle: used as a standard of measurement: Anat., a passage or canal within a gland.

lu-mi-na-ry (lū'mĭ-nă-rĭ), n. [pl. -ries (-rĭz)], 1, a body giving forth light, especially a heavenly body; 2, an eminent person; a leader.

lu-mi-nes-cence (lū"mĭ-nĕs'ĕns), n. [< Lat. lumen, a light], the emission of light by a body, especially when not directly caused by high temperature.

lu-mi-nif-er-ous (lū"mĭ-nĭf'ẽr-ŭs), adj. [< Lat. lumen, light+ferre, to bear], producing or transmitting light; as, luminiferous ether.

lu-mi-nos-i-ty (lū"mĭ-nŏs'ĭ-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], [< Lat. lumen, a light], the quality of being bright or shining; also, a luminous object.

lu-mi-nous (lū'mĭ-nŭs), adj. 1, giving forth, spreading, or suggesting, light; bright; as, luminous stars; 2, full of light; 3, clear; easily understood; intelligent; enlightening; as, a luminous remark.—adv. lu'mi-nous-ly.—n. lu'mi-nous-ness.

Syn. radiant, glowing, clear, lucid. (See bright.)

lump (lŭmp), n. [< M.E. lompe, lump < Scand.], 1, a small shapeless mass; as, a lump of clay; 2, a swelling; protuberance; 3, a collection of things: Colloq., a stupid, dull-witted person; also, a slow-moving, heavy person:—v.t. 1, to unite in one amount or mass; as, to lump expenses; 2, to treat collectively: Colloq., to take as one may; put up with; as, if you don't like it, you may lump it:—v.i. 1, to form into a mass; 2, to fall or move heavily; 3, to bulk.

lump-fish (lŭmp'fĭsh"), n. [lump+fish], a humped fish (Cyclopterus lumpus) having its ventral fins modified into a sucking disk on its under side.

lump-ish (lŭmp'ĭsh), adj. [see lump], gross; heavy; lethargic; stupid.—adv. lump'ish-ly.—n. lump'ish-ness.

lump-y (lŭm'pĭ), adj. [comp. -ier, superl. -iest], 1, full of lumps; as, lumpy bread; 2, choppy; not smooth; as, a lumpy sea; 3, like a lump: lumpish.

Lu-na (lū'nă), n. [Lat. = moon], Rom. Myth., the goddess of the moon and of the months: corresponding to the Greek Selene.

lu-na-cy (lū'nə-sĭ), n. [pl. -cies (-sĭz)], 1, insanity; unsoundness of mind: formerly supposed to be caused by the moon; 2, extreme foolishness.
Syn. madness, craziness, frenzy. (See insanity.)

Lu-na moth a large, light green moth (Tropæa luna) of North America, with long tails.

LUNA MOTH

lu-nar (lū'nər), adj. 1, of or pertaining to the moon; 2, resembling the moon: round or crescent-shaped: Obs., silver: lunar caustic, Chem., silver nitrate prepared for use as a cauterizing agent: lunar month, the interval from one new moon to the next, approximately 29½ days: lunar year, a year of twelve lunar months, or about 355 days, formerly used in the Mohammedan calendar.

lu-nate (lū'nāt), adj. shaped like the new moon; crescent-shaped; as, a lunate leaf. Also, lu'nat-ed.

lu-na-tic (lū'nə-tĭk), adj. 1, affected with, or characteristic of, insanity; crazy; as, lunatic notions; 2, maintained for the accommodation of insane persons; as, a lunatic asylum:—n. one who is insane.

lu-na-tion (lū-nā'shŭn), n. the period of time from one new moon to the next; a lunar month.

lunch (lŭnch), n. [< lump (of bread, meat, etc.), as hunch, bunch relate to hump, bump], 1, a light repast between meals; a light meal; luncheon; 2, the food for such a meal:—v.i. to eat a light meal:—v.t. to furnish with a light meal.—n. lunch'er.

lunch-eon (lŭn'chŭn), n. [extension of lunch, perh. for lunching], 1, a light meal between breakfast and dinner; lunch; 2, food eaten at other times than regular meal times.

lune (lūn), n. [Fr. < Lat. luna, moon], the moon: Geom., a crescent-shaped figure formed on a plane or spherical surface by two arcs of circles.

lu-nette (lū-nĕt'), n. [Fr., dim. of lune], 1, any of various objects suggesting a crescent, as, in architecture, a semicircular window in a dome, the upper section of a wall at the end of a corridor with an arched or vaulted roof, or a picture painted in such a section; 2, a corner or projecting section, shaped thus: ⌒ jutting out from the main line of a rampart or defensive embankment; 3, a watch crystal flat in the center: Obs., a crescent or half-moon: pl. spectacles.

lung (lŭng), n. [< A.S. lungen, lung], in air-breathing vertebrates, one of two organs (see thorax, illus.) of breathing, in which the blood gives up water and carbon dioxide and receives oxygen.

lunge (lŭnj), n. [< earlier allonge < Fr. allonger, to lengthen], 1, a sudden thrust or pass with a fencing foil or with a sword; 2, an unexpected lurch; a sudden leap forward:—v.i. [p.t. and p.p. lunged (lŭnjd), p.pr. lunging], 1, to make a sudden thrust or pass in, or as in, fencing; 2, to plunge forward.

lung-fish (lŭng'fĭsh'), n. [lung+fish], any of a group (Dipnoi) of fishes having a lung or lungs in addition to gills (see Pisces, illus.).

lung-wort (lŭng'wûrt'), n. [lung+wort], Bot., 1, any of a genus (Mertensia) of plants of the borage family; especially, a spring flowering herb (M. virginica) bearing many pale blue flowers: also called Virginia cowslip and bluebell; 2, any of several European herbs of the same family; 3, a species of lichen: also called tree lungwort.

lu-ni-so-lar (lū"nĭ-sō'lər), adj. [< Lat. luna, moon +sol, sun], caused by the combined attraction of sun and moon; as, the lunisolar tide.

lu-ni-tid-al (lū"nĭ-tīd'ăl), adj. [luni- (< Lat. luna, moon)+tidal], pertaining to tidal phenomena due to the action of the moon: lunitidal interval, the time between the transit of the moon across the meridian and the occurrence of a high or low tide.

lunt (lŭnt; lōōnt), n. [< Du. lont, a match], Sc., smoke, as from a pipe: Obs., a fuse for firing a gun; torch:—v.t. to set fire to:—v.i. to smoke.

lu-nu-la (lū'nū-lə), n. [pl. -læ (-nē)], [Lat., dim. of luna, moon], anything crescent-shaped, as the white part of the finger nail near the base: Geom., a lune. Also, lu'nule (lū'nūl).—adj. lu'nu-lar.

Lu-per-ca-li-a (lū"pər-kā'lĭ-ə), n.pl. [< Lat. Lupercus], Rom. Religion, a festival, observed about February 15, in honor of Lupercus, god of shepherds and of fruitfulness, in which priests ran around the Palatine Hill, striking with a leather thong all the women whom they met, to insure fruitfulness.

[1]lu-pine (lū'pĭn), adj. [< Lat. lupinus < lupus, wolf], like, or having the qualities of, a wolf; savage; eager to devour.

[2]lu-pine (lū'pĭn), n. any of several garden or fodder plants of the pea family (genus Lupinus), with blue, pink, or white flowers: pl. its edible seeds.

lu-pus (lū'pŭs), n. [Lat. = wolf], Pathol., a tuberculous skin disease, appearing in various forms: Lupus, Astron., a southern constellation (see constellation); the Wolf.

[1]lurch (lûrch), n. [source uncertain], a sudden pitch to one side, like that of a drunken man; hence, a staggering motion:—v.i. to roll or stagger suddenly to one side; move with a stumbling, uncertain gait; walk unevenly.

[2]lurch (lûrch), n. [< Fr. lourche, an old game, or a defeat therein], 1, in cribbage, the position of a player who has pegged only 30 holes or less when his opponent has won with 61: 2, a difficult or forlorn position: obsolete except in left in the lurch:—v.t. 1, to beat by a large margin, as in cribbage; 2, to disappoint: Archaic, to swindle; cheat.

[3]lurch (lûrch), v.i. [var. of lurk, q.v.], Archaic, 1, to prowl; move furtively around; 2, to have a monopoly; take more than a fair share; cheat:—v.t. Archaic, 1, to be beforehand in securing (food, commodities, etc.): 2, hence, to rob or cheat (a person).

lurch-er (lûr'chĕr), n. 1, one who lurks around suspiciously; 2, a petty thief or swindler; 3, a kind of mongrel hunting dog, keen both of sight and of scent, used especially by poachers.

lure (lūr). n. [< O.F. leurre, bait], 1, a device, resembling a bird, used by a falconer to recall the hawk; 2, anything used as a means of attracting by promising profit or pleasure; 3, artificial bait:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. lured (lūrd), p.pr. luring], to entice; attract by promises, alluring prospects, or the like.
Syn., v. allure, decoy, tempt, seduce, coax, mislead.

lu-rid (lū'rĭd), adj. [< Lat. luridus, pale yellow], 1, grayish yellow; wan; pale; ghastly; gloomy; 2, resembling flames seen through smoke; 3, sinisterly vivid; shocking; sensational; as, a lurid account of the crime.—adv. lu'rid-ly.—n. lu'rid-ness.

lurk (lûrk), v.i. [< Scand. lurka, to go slowly; sneak], 1, to lie in wait; lie concealed or unnoticed; 2, to move about in a sneaking manner.

lus-cious (lŭsh'ŭs), adj. [source uncertain], 1, excessively sweet· delicious; 2, delightful to the taste or any sense: Obs., voluptuous; also, alluring.—adv. lus'cious-ly.—n. lus'cious-ness.

lush (lŭsh), adj. [source uncertain], 1, filled with juice; succulent; 2, rich in growth or vegetation; as, lush meadows.

lust (lŭst), n. [A.S. = pleasure < O.Teut. source], 1, strong desire to possess and enjoy: usually in a bad sense; as, a lust for gold; 2, sinful and impure desire: Obs., pleasure; longing:—v.i. 1, to desire something strongly; 2, to have impure desires: with after.

[1]lus-ter (lŭs'tĕr), n. [< Fr. lustre < Lat. lustrare, to illumine], 1, the quality of shining with reflected light; gloss; sheen; 2, brightness; splendor; 3, brilliance of fame; renown; 4, a chandelier ornamented with cut-glass pendants; 5, any material or substance used to impart sheen to manufactured articles; 6, a cloth with a brilliant sheen; 7, the quality and brilliancy of light reflected from the surface of minerals: luster ware, a kind of pottery, having a shiny, metallic finish:—v.t. to give a glossy surface to:—v.i. to possess sheen. Also, lus'tre.

[2]lus-ter (lŭs'tĕr), n. [see lustrum], 1, a ceremonial purification, as among the Romans; 2, a period of five years. Also, lus'tre. See lus'trum, Pfd. S.

lust-ful (lŭst'fo͝ol), adj. [see lust], having sinful and impure desires: Obs., strong; robust; lusty.—adv. lust'ful-ly.—n. lust'ful-ness.
Syn. licentious, lascivious, lewd, sensual, unchaste.

lus-tral (lŭs'trăl), adj. [see lustrum], 1, pertaining to, or used in, purification; as, lustral water; 2, pertaining to a lustrum, or period of five years.

lus-trate (lŭs'trāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -trated, p.pr. -trating], [< Lat. lustrare (-atus), to purify], to make pure by some ceremony; clarify; purify.

lus-tra-tion (lŭs-trā'shŭn), n. a ceremony of purification: Humorous, a washing.

lus-tring (lŭs'trĭng), n. [corr. of lustrine, glossy silk fabric: see [1]luster], Obs., a kind of shiny or glossy silk fabric.

lus-trous (lŭs'trŭs), adj. [see [1]luster], 1, having a sheen or brightness; 2, illustrious.—adv. lus'trous-ly.—n. lus'trous-ness.
Syn. radiant, sheeny, glossy, shining. (See bright.)

lus-trum (lŭs'trŭm), n. [pl. -trums (-trŭmz); -tra (-trə)], [Lat. = purification every five years, prob. < luere, to wash], Rom. Antiq., 1, the ceremony of purification observed by the Roman people every five years; 2, a purification; 3, a period of five years; 4, the census taken at the time of the lustrum. Also, lus'ter.

lust-y (lŭs'tĭ), adj. [comp. -ier, superl. -iest], [see lust], robust; vigorous; healthy: Obs., beautiful; cheerful.—adv. lust'i-ly.—n. lust'i-ness.

¹lute (lūt), n. [< Fr. lut < Arab. al'ūd, the lute], Mus., a stringed instrument with a mandolin-shaped body and a neck bent to form a sharp angle, played by twanging the strings with the fingers: used extensively in ancient and medieval times:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. luted, p.pr. luting], to play on the lute:—v.i. to play the lute.

Lute

²lute (lūt), n. [< Lat. lutum, mud], 1, a composition of clay, etc., used for making the joints of vessels, retorts, etc., air-tight, or for protecting them from the action of fire; 2, the rubber ring used to seal glass jars:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. luted, p.pr. luting], to close up the cracks of with a clay composition.

lu-te-ci-um (lū-tē'shĭ-ŭm; -sĭ-ŭm), n. [< Lutetia, ancient name of Paris], Chem., a metallic element [symbol Lu] of the rare earth group, found in rare minerals: discovered in 1907.

lute-string (lūt'string"), n. [corr. of lustring], an old-fashioned, glossy silk fabric.

Lu-ther-an (lū'thẽr-ăn), adj. [< Martin Luther], 1, pertaining to Martin Luther (1483–1546), the German reformer; 2, designating, or pertaining to, a Protestant church, evangelical in doctrine, founded by Martin Luther:—n. a member of the Lutheran Church.—n. Lu'ther-an-ism.

lux (lŭks), n. [pl. lux; luxes (lŭk'sĕz)], [Lat. = light], Optics, a practical unit of illumination, equal to one lumen per square meter, or to the illumination produced by a uniform point source of one international candle at a distance of one meter.

lux-ate (lŭk'sāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -ated, p.pr. -ating], [< Lat. luxare (-atus), to dislocate], to throw out of joint; dislocate.—n. lux-a'tion.

luxe (lŭks), n. [Fr. = luxury], especially fine quality or finish; elegance: usually with de; as, an automobile de luxe: Obs., (lŭks), luxury.

lux-u-ri-ance (lŭks-ū'rĭ-ăns; lŭg-zhōō'-), n. [< Lat. luxuria, luxury], abundant, vigorous growth, as of vegetation.—n. lux-u'ri-an-cy.

lux-u-ri-ant (lŭks-ū'rĭ-ănt; lŭg-zhōō'rĭ-ănt), adj. 1, fer ile; fruitful; 2, abundant, as in growth; as, luxuriant hair; hence, 3, profuse; florid; as, a luxuriant style of writing.—adv. lux-u'ri-ant-ly.

Syn. exuberant, teeming, rank, fertile, luxurious. Luxuriant growth is profuse; luxuriant display tends toward the superfluous. Luxuriant often carries with the idea of abundance that of loveliness, perfection, pleasing excellence; exuberant carries the idea of excess. Exuberant growth is often rank; exuberant joy is overflowing; exuberant spirits are bounding, effusive; exuberant style is lavish, given to copiousness and superabundance. Luxurious as a synonym for luxuriant is now rare; luxurious has come to mean voluptuous, steeped in luxury. We speak of a luxuriant head of hair; the luxuriant imagery of a poem.

lux-u-ri-ate (lŭks-ū'rĭ-āt; lŭg-zhōō'-), v.i. [p.t. and p.p. -ated, p.pr. -ating], 1, to grow abundantly; 2, to live extravagantly; 3, to revel unrestrainedly or without stint; as, to luxuriate in ease and plenty.—n. lux-u'ri-a'tion.

lux-u-ry (lŭk'shōō-rĭ), n. [pl. -ries (-rĭz)], [< O.F. luxurie < Lat. luxuria], 1, extravagant indulgence in pleasure or ease; 2, a dainty; 3, anything pleasurable but not necessary.—adj. lux-u'ri-ous.—adv. lux-u'ri-ous-ly.—n. lux-u'ri-ous-ness.

-ly adj. suffix, [< A.S. -līc, like], 1, like or characteristic of; as, manly; 2, every; as, weekly:—adv. suffix, in a specified manner or degree; as, greatly.

ly-can-thrope (lī'kăn-thrōp; lī-kăn'-), n. [< Gk. lukanthrōpos < lukos, wolf + anthrōpos, man], in folklore, one who has been changed into a wolf, or can so transform himself; a werewolf.

Ly-ca-on (lī-kā'ŏn), n. [< Gk. Lukaōn], Gk. Myth., an impious king of Arcadia, changed into a wolf by Zeus for offering the god human flesh.

ly-cée (lē"sā'), n. [pl. -cées (-sāz'; Fr. -sā'), [Fr. = secondary free school], in France, a governmental secondary school, preparing for a university.

ly-ce-um (lī-sē'ŭm), n. [pl. -ums (-ŭmz); -a (-ă)], [< Gk. Lukeios, epithet of Apollo, near whose temple the Athenian Lyceum was], 1, a literary seminary; an academy; 2, a literary association; also, the rooms or building where such an association meets; 3, in France, an intermediate classical school; a lycée: Lyceum, originally, the grove near Athens where Aristotle and other philosophers taught; hence, the Peripatetic school of philosophy.

lych (lĭch), n. [see lich], Eng. Dial. and Sc., a corpse: Obs., the body; trunk. See lich. Pfd. S.

lych-nis (lĭk'nĭs), n. [pl. lychnides (-nĭ-dēz)], [< Gk. lukhnis, a red flower < lukhnos, a lamp], any of a genus (Lychnis) of plants of the pink family, with showy red or white flowers, some species, as the ragged robin, being cultivated in gardens.

ly-co-pod (lī'kō-pŏd), n. [< Gk. lukos, wolf + pous (podos), foot], Bot., a lycopodium, or, more broadly, any plant of the order (Lycopodiales) including the lycopodiums; a club moss.

ly-co-po-di-um (lī"kō-pō'dĭ-ŭm), n. Bot., any of a genus (Lycopodium) of low, usually trailing, evergreen plants, including the ground pine: lycopodium powder, a fine, inflammable powder contained in the spore cases of some of these plants: used in making fireworks and in surgery as an absorbent.

lydd-ite (lĭd'īt), n. [< Lydd, place in Kent where made], a powerful explosive, chiefly fused picric acid, used as a bursting charge for shells.

Lyd-i-an (lĭd'ĭ-ăn), adj. [< Gk. Ludios], 1, pertaining to Lydia, an ancient province of Asia Minor famed for its culture and wealth; hence, 2, soft; gentle; voluptuous; sensuous; effeminate.

lye (lī), n. [< A.S. lēog, bath], an alkaline solution obtained by leaching, or dripping water through wood ashes; also, any strongly alkaline substance: sold commercially as white crystals or as a white powder, usually caustic soda or caustic potash, and used in solution in washing, making soap, cleaning drain pipes, etc.

¹ly-ing (lī'ĭng), p.adj. [see ²lie], 1, being in a reclining position; 2, resting; 3, being inactive.

²ly-ing (lī'ĭng), p.adj. [see ²lie], telling falsehoods; as, a lying tongue:—n. mendacity.

ly-ing-in (lī'ĭng-ĭn'), n. the period or state of confinement at the time of childbirth.

lymph (lĭmf), n. [< Lat. lympha, water], Poet., a spring of pure water: Anat., a transparent, yellowish fluid found in the lymph vessels of animal bodies, similar to plasma of the blood: inflammatory lymph, Med., the clear liquid that oozes from a wound.—adj. lymph'oid.

lym-phat-ic (lĭm-făt'ĭk), adj. 1, pertaining to, or carrying, lymph; 2, sluggish; phlegmatic: lymphatic gland, Anat., any of the glandlike masses which secrete lymphocytes (which see), and occur in various parts of the body in the course of certain vessels carrying lymph:—n. Anat., a vessel or tube resembling a vein in structure, containing or carrying lymph.

lym-pho-cyte (lĭm'fō-sīt), n. [< Lat. lympha, water + Gk. kutos, a vessel], a small cell derived from a lymphatic gland, which becomes a white corpuscle when it passes into the blood.

lynch (lĭnch), v.t. [perh. < Charles Lynch, 18th-cent. Virginia justice, who took the law into his own hands], to kill or execute without due process of law, especially through the agency of a mob: lynch law, punishment by private individuals without legal formalities, as by a mob.—n. lynch'er.

lynx (lĭngks), n. [< Gk. lugx, a lynx], any of a genus (Lynx) of large, fierce wild cats, with a short tail, tufted ears, and valuable fur, including the bobcat (L. rufus): Lynx, Astron., a small northern constellation.

Lynx ($\frac{1}{20}$)

lynx-eyed (lĭngks'īd") adj. keen-sighted; having sharp vision; also, alert; watchful.

ly-on-naise (lī"ŏ-nāz'; lē"ŏ"nāz'), adj. [Fr. = of Lyons], Cookery, designating potatoes fried in butter with onions.

Ly-ra (lī'rā), n. [< Gk. lura, lyre], a small northern constellation containing the brilliant, bluish white star Vega (see constellation): also called Lyre.

ly-rate (lī'rāt), adj. shaped like a lyre, as some leaves, or the tails of certain birds, especially the lyre bird.—adj. ly'rat-ed.

lyre (līr), n. a kind of harp-like musical instrument used by the ancients to accompany singing or recitation: Lyre, the constellation Lyra.

lyre bird any of three species (genus Menura) of South Australian perching birds: so called because the tail of the male, when spread, as during courtship, resembles a lyre.

Lyre Bird ($\frac{1}{20}$)

lyr-ic (lĭr′ĭk), adj. 1, pertaining to, or adapted to, singing to the lyre; 2, in poetry, having a songlike rhythm and expressive of emotion or sentiment:—n. 1, originally, in ancient Greece, a song or ode accompanied by the lyre; 2, a poem expressing emotion, written in verse with a songlike quality: Mus., a short song, melodious rather than dramatic, and conforming in general characteristics to the qualities of lyric poetry.

lyr-i-cal (lĭr′ĭ-kăl), adj. 1, suitable for singing; 2, directly expressing a poet's sentiments or personal emotion, rather than outward incidents or events; subjectively poetic.—adv. lyr′i-cal-ly.

lyr-ist (lĭr′ĭst; līr′ĭst), n. 1, a player on the harplike musical instrument called a lyre; 2, a composer of poems or songs that express the emotions.

ly-sin (lī′sĭn), n. [< Gk. lusis, a loosening], Physiol., 1, a cell-dissolving or cell-destroying substance present in blood serum; 2, a substance formed by pancreatic digestion of proteids.

ly-sis (lī′sĭs), n. the gradual decline of a disease: distinguished from crisis.

ly-sol (lī′sōl; lī′sŏl), n. [< Gk. lusis, loosening + -ol (< Lat. oleum, oil)], a product of coal tar, used as a disinfectant and germicide.

lyt-ta (lĭt′ä), n. [pl. lyttæ (-ē)], [< Gk. lutta, rage; rabies: so called because this part of a dog's tongue was supposed to produce madness], a vermiform cartilage or fibrous rod in the middle line and under part of the tongue of certain meat-eating animals, forming the hard basis of the tongue.

M

M, m (ĕm), n. [pl. M's; Ms; m's; ms (ĕmz)], the thirteenth letter of the English alphabet, or its sound (for certain uses, see alphabet, Note): also, em: as a Roman numeral, 1,000: Print., an em; a unit of length equal to the height of a capital letter of the designated font; also, a square of this measure, theoretically occupied by the capital M.

M. abbr. 1, Master; 2, [pl. MM.], Monsieur; 3, Monday; 4, Marshal:—M. or m., 1, [Fr.], mille; 2, meridian; 3, minute; 4, meter; 5, married (also, mar.); 6, masculine; male; 7, mile (also, mi.); 8, month (also, mo.); 9, moon; 10, [Ger.], mark; 11, middle; 12, mountain (also, mt.): Mus., 1, manual; 2, [It. mezzo], moderate:—m., Mech., mass.

ma (mä), n. [instinctive cry], mother: now regarded as a childish or vulgar contraction of mamma.

M. A. abbr. 1, [Lat. Magister Artium], Master of Arts: a degree conferred upon students who have done a certain amount of graduate work (also, A. M.); 2, Military Academy.

ma'am (măm; mäm), n. [see madam], Colloq., madam: formerly used in direct address, but now only parenthetically or at the end of a sentence.

Mac- (măk-), prefix, [Gael. = son], in Scotch or Irish names, son: often written Mc or M'. ma-ca-bre (mä-kä′br), adj. [Fr., perh. < O.F. Macabé, Maccabee], pertaining, or relating, to a dance symbolizing the supremacy of death; grim; gruesome. Also, ma-ca'ber.

ma-ca-co (mä-kä′kō), n. [Port. < nat. name], 1, any of various lemurs, as the black lemur (Lemur macaco); 2, any of several Brazilian monkeys.

mac-ad-am (măk-ăd′ăm), n. [< J. L. McAdam (1756–1836), Sc. engineer, inventor of process], 1, a roadway or pavement of crushed stone (see roadbed, illus.); 2, crushed stone for such roadways.

mac-ad-am-ize (măk-ăd′ăm-īz), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -ized (-īzd), p.pr. -izing], to build or finish (a road) by covering (it) with a compact layer of small broken stone, forming a smooth, hard surface. —n. mac-ad″am-i-za′tion (-ĭ-zā′shŭn; -ī-zā′shŭn).

ma-caque (mä-käk′), n. [Fr.: see macaco], any of a genus (Macaca) of short-tailed Asiatic and East Indian monkeys (see primate, illus.).

mac-a-ro-ni (măk″ä-rō′nĭ), n. [pl. -nis (-nĭz); -nies (-nĭz)], [< It. maccaroni: source uncertain], 1, a food, of Italian origin, composed largely of a wheaten paste formed and dried in long, thin tubes; 2, in the 18th century, a dandy.

mac-a-ron-ic (măk″ä-rŏn′ĭk), adj. 1, designating a kind of writing in which words from several languages are used with humorous effect; as, macaronic verses; 2, confused; mixed; jumbled.

mac-a-roon (măk″ä-rōōn′), n. [< Fr. macaron, a cake], a small cake made chiefly of eggs, coconut, ground almonds, etc., and sugar.

ma-caw (mä-kô′), n. [< Port. macao: source uncertain], a large, long-tailed American parrot, remarkable for its gaudy plumage.

Mac-beth (măk-bĕth′), n. [Sc.], a king of Scotland who died 1057: in Shakespeare's "Macbeth," the hero who, incited by prophecies of future greatness and by the ambitious promptings of his wife, assassinates Duncan, the ruling king, and ascends the throne, but is in turn slain by Macduff.

Mac-ca-be-an (măk″ä-bē′ăn), adj. [see Maccabees], of or pertaining to the Maccabees, especially to Judas Maccabeus, a hero in the struggle for Jewish independence in the second century B. C.

Mac-ca-bees (măk′ä-bēz), n.pl. [< Gk. Makkabaioi], 1, a family of Jewish patriots who led a successful religious revolt (175–164 B. C.) against the king of Syria; 2, the books of the Old Testament Apocrypha relating this struggle: in the Douay (Roman Catholic) Version, called Machabees (see Bible).

mac-ca-boy (măk′ä-boi), n. [< Macouba, in Martinique, place of origin], a kind of fine, dark-colored snuff, usually perfumed. Also, mac'ca-baw (-bô); mac'co-boy (-kō-boi).

Mac-duff (măk-dŭf′), n. [Sc.], in Shakespeare's "Macbeth," a thane who slays Macbeth.

[1]mace (mās), n. [O.F., prob. < L.L. mateola, a mallet], 1, a large and heavy staff of metal or topped with metal, often spiked: formerly a war club; 2, a staff carried by or before an official as a symbol of authority; 3, a person who bears such a staff; 4, in billiards, a kind of rod formerly used as a cue.

[2]mace (mās), n. [< Fr. macis, mace], an aromatic spice consisting of the outermost of the two coverings of the nutmeg: usually ground.

ma-cé-doine (mă″sā″dwän′), n. [Fr. = Macedonian], 1, a mixed dish, as of vegetables or whole fruits in jelly; hence, 2, a medley.

Mac-e-do-ni-an (măs″ē-dō′nĭ-ăn), adj. [< Gk. Makedōn], of or pertaining to Macedonia, a district of northern Greece, in ancient times a dominant nation under Alexander the Great:—n. a native or inhabitant of Macedonia.

mac-er (mās′ĕr), n. [see [1]mace], one who carries a mace or official staff; specifically, in Scotland, a court official.

mac-er-ate (măs′ĕr-āt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -ated, p.pr. -ating], [< Lat. macerare (-atus), to soak], 1, to soften or separate the parts of by soaking or digestion; 2, to subdue or modify by fasting; 3, to cause to grow thin and weak: Chem., to steep in a fluid, as bark or roots, for the extraction of medicinal ingredients.—n. mac″er-a′tion.

ma-che-te (mä-chā′tā), n. [Sp. = cutlass], a large, heavy knife used in Cuba and south America for cutting sugar cane, as a weapon, etc.

Mach-i-a-vel-li-an (măk″ĭ-ä-vĕl′ĭ-ăn; măk″ĭ-ä-vĕl′yăn), adj. [< Niccolò Machiavelli (1469–1527), It. writer and statesman], 1, pertaining to Machiavelli, the Florentine statesman, or to his doctrine, that any means, however treacherous and despotic, are justifiable when employed to maintain a strong central government; hence, 2, crafty; double-dealing:—n. a follower of Machiavelli or of his principles.—n. Mach″i-a-vel′li-an-ism (-ĭzm); Mach″i-a-vel′lism (-vĕl′ĭzm).

ma-chic-o-late (mă-chĭk′ō-lāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -lated, p.pr. -lating], [< O.F. maschecoulis, machicolation], to furnish with floor openings, as a parapet, through which missiles can be sent.

ma-chic-o-la-tion (mă-chĭk″ō-lā′shŭn; măch″ĭ-kō-lā′shŭn), n. 1, an opening, as in a gallery floor, through which missiles can be shot or dropped on an enemy; 2, a gallery, parapet, etc., with such openings; 3, the act of showering missiles, or pouring hot substances, upon an enemy through such openings.

Machicolation (A) of Gallery Type mach-i-nate (măk′ĭ-nāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -nated, p.pr. -nating], [< Lat. machinari (-atus), to contrive], to plan; contrive: usually with evil intent:—v.i. to scheme to do harm, form a plot.—n. mach′i-na″tor.

mach-i-na-tion (măk″ĭ-nā′shŭn), n. a hostile plot; a scheming to do evil.

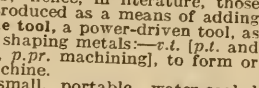
Syn. plot, scheme, design, conspiracy, intrigue, device.

ma-chine (mȧ-shēn′), n. [< Lat. machina < Gk. mēkhanē < mēkhos, contrivance], 1, any contrivance to utilize available energy, or to convert energy from one form to another; an engine, as a military engine; 2, a light carriage or vehicle; 3, an automobile; 4, one who acts mechanically or at the bidding of another; 5, a combination of persons acting together for a common purpose; as, the machine of government, the social machine, etc.; 6, an unofficial political organization which controls the policies and activities of a party; 7, in ancient drama, a contrivance for producing certain theatrical effects; hence, in literature, those parts of a plot, etc., introduced as a means of adding dramatic force: machine tool, a power-driven tool, as a lathe, for cutting and shaping metals:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. machined (-shēnd′), p.pr. machining], to form or effect by the aid of a machine.

ma-chine gun a small, portable, water-cooled gun, capable of firing continuously bullets mechanically fed to it by means of a disk or a belt.



MACHINE GUN

ma-chine-made (mȧ-shēn′mād″), adj. fashioned or made by machinery: opposite of handmade.

ma-chin-er-y (mȧ-shēn′ēr-ĭ), n. 1, engines and other appliances collectively or the parts of them; 2, any means or combination, not mechanical, by which something is kept in action or the result desired is obtained; as, the machinery of church government; 3, the assemblage of agencies, especially the supernatural, such as demons, ghosts, and deities, employed in the plot of an epic poem, a drama, or other imaginative work: machinery steel, steel low in carbon content: so called because easily worked.

ma-chin-ist (mȧ-shēn′ĭst), n. 1, one who makes or repairs machines and other appliances, or is skilled in their design and principles; 2, one who works about, or attends to, machines or other mechanical appliances; 3, one skilled in the use of machine tools.

mack-er-el (măk′ēr-ĕl), n. [pl. mackerel, [< O.F. makerel: source uncertain], an edible, oily fish (Scomber scombrus) from twelve to eighteen inches in length, found in schools in the North Atlantic (see Pisces, illus.); also, any of various other fishes of the same or a related genus: mackerel sky, a sky covered with a mass of small white flecks of cloud of the form called cirro-cumulus (see cloud, illus.).

Mack-i-naw (măk′ĭ-nô), adj. [< Ojibway Michillimackinac, turtle: name of island], pertaining to, or derived from, Mackinac, Michigan: Mackinaw blanket, a heavy blanket, formerly distributed from Fort Mackinac to local Indians: Mackinaw boat, a flat-bottomed, square-sterned, sharp-prowed boat propelled by oars: Mackinaw coat, a short, heavy, frequently plaid, coat made of material resembling that of Mackinaw blankets: also called mackinaw.

mack-in-tosh (măk′ĭn-tŏsh), n. [< Charles Macintosh (1766–1843), inventor of cloth], 1, a kind of waterproof overcoat; 2, a thin, rubber-coated cloth from which such garments are made.

mac-ra-mé (măk′rȧ-mā; mȧ-krȧ′mā), n. [prob. < Turk. magrama, towel], a kind of trimming made of cord knotted in geometrical designs: macramé cord, cord specially prepared for this trimming.

mac-ro-cosm (măk′rō-kŏzm), n. [< Gk. makros, large + kosmos, world], the universe; the world at large, exterior to man: used in contrast to microcosm, or man.—adj. mac′ro-cos′mic.

mac-ro-graph (măk′rō-grăf), n. [< Gk. makros, large + graphē, a writing], a drawing or photograph of an object as seen with but little magnification: opposite of micrograph.

ma-crog-ra-phy (mȧ-krŏg′rȧ-fĭ), n. 1, extremely large handwriting, often a symptom of nervous disorder; 2, examination or study without a microscope: opposite of micrography.

ma-cron (mā′krŏn; măk′rŏn), n. [< Gk. makros, long], a mark [¯] over a vowel, as over the a in cāme, to show that it is long in quantity or quality.

mac-ro-scop-ic (măk″rō-skŏp′ĭk), adj. [< Gk. makros, large + skopein, to see], visible to the naked eye: opposite of microscopic.

mac-u-la (măk′ū-lȧ), n. [pl. -læ (-lē)], [Lat. = spot], 1, a spot, as on the sun; 2, a stain or blemish, as on the skin: macula lutea (lū′tē-ȧ), [Lat. = yellow spot], Anat., the yellow spot on the retina, the retinal area which is most sensitive (see eye, illus.).

mac-u-late (măk′ū-lāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -lated, p.pr. -lating], to spot; blot; defile:—adj. (-lăt), spotted; hence, impure.—n. mac″u-la′tion.

mad (măd), adj. [comp. madder, superl. maddest], [< A.S. gemād < gemǣdan, to make mad], 1, mentally disordered; insane; 2, blindly excited or infatuated; 3, furious or frenzied, as with rage or terror; 4, rabid, as with disease; as, a mad dog; 5, imprudent; foolish; as, a mad undertaking; 6, wild; as, a mad scramble: Colloq., angry:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. madded, p.pr. madding], Rare, to make furious:—v.i. Rare, to act insanely.—adv. mad′ly.—n. mad′ness.

Syn., adj. crazy, delirious, rabid, violent, frantic, rash, infatuated.—Ant., adj. sane, rational, reasonable.

mad-am (măd′ăm), n. [pl. mesdames (mā″dȧm′)], [see madame], a complimentary title for a lady, used also as a form of courteous address: Vulgar, [pl. madams (mād′ȧmz)], the mistress of a house.

ma-dame (mȧ″dȧm′; mȧ-dăm′; often, măd′ăm), n. [pl. mesdames (mā″dȧm′)], [< O.F. ma dame, my lady], the French title for a married woman.—abbr. Mme (without period) [pl. Mmes].

mad-cap (măd′kăp″), n. [mad + cap], a wild, thoughtless, rattle-brained person:—adj. given to wild follies; recklessly adventurous.

mad-den (măd′n), v.t. [see mad], to craze or make furious:—v.i. to become crazed or furious.

mad-der (măd′ēr), n. [< A.S. mædere, madder], 1, any of a genus (Rubia) of herbs allied to the bedstraws; especially, a species (R. tinctorum) from the root of which a red dye is extracted; 2, a pigment originally made from this root: also called turkey red and alizarin, and now made synthetically from coal tar.

mad-ding (măd′ĭng), p.adj. [see mad], acting madly; frenzied:—n. Archaic, frenzied behavior.

made (mād), past tense and past participle of the verb make:—p.adj. contrived; artificially produced; as, a made dish: Colloq., assured of success.

Ma-dei-ra (mȧ-dē′rȧ; mȧ-dā′rȧ), n. [Port. < Lat. materia, timber: island so named in allusion to dense woods], wine made in Madeira, an island in the Atlantic Ocean northwest of Morocco.

ma-de-moi-selle (mȧd″mwȧ-zĕl′; mȧd″ē-mō-zĕl′: colloquially, măm′zĕl′), n. [pl. mesdemoiselles (mād″mwȧ-zĕl′)], [Fr. = my young lady], Miss: a title given in France to an unmarried woman.—abbr. Mlle (without period) [pl. Mlles].

mad-house (măd′hous″), n. [mad + house], an asylum for lunatics.

mad-man (măd′măn), n. [pl. -men (-mĕn)], [mad + man], an insane man; a lunatic.

Ma-don-na (mȧ-dŏn′ȧ), n. [pl. -nas (-ȧz)], [It. ma donna < Lat. mea domina, my lady, mistress], the Virgin Mary, or a picture or statue of her, usually with the infant Christ: madonna, formerly, the Italian equivalent for madam; my lady.

ma-dras (mȧ-drȧs′), n. [Fr. < Madras, India], 1, a large, bright-colored kerchief; 2, a fine, cotton fabric, often of fancy design; also, a curtain material with raised figures, often in color.

ma-dre (mä′drā), n. [Sp.], in the Philippines and other Spanish-speaking countries, a mother.

mad-re-pore (măd′rē-pōr), n. [< It. madre, mother + poro, pore, coral-like substance], any of a genus (Madrepora) of stony, mostly branching, corals that build reefs in tropical seas.

mad-ri-gal (măd′rĭ-gȧl), n. [< It. madrigale, short song], a short love poem: Mus., an unaccompanied chorus, in from four to eight parts, based on a theme elaborated with complex counterpoint: very popular in the 15th and 16th centuries.

ma-du-ro (mȧ-dōō′rō), adj. [Sp. = mature], of full strength and dark color: said of cigars.

Mæ-ce-nas (mē-sē′năs), n. [Lat.: name of the patron (about 68 B.C. - 8 B.C.) of Horace and Vergil], a supporter or patron, especially one who gives largely to the arts.

Mael-strom (māl′strŏm), n. [Du. < malen, to grind + stroom, stream], a whirlpool off the Norwegian coast, described with exaggerated horrors by Edgar Allen Poe: maelstrom, any widespread, destructive influence; as, the maelstrom of war.

mæ-nad (mē′năd), n. [pl. -nads (-nădz)], [< Gk. mainas (-ados), mænad < mainesthai, to rave], 1, Gk. Myth., a nymph or bacchante attendant upon Dionysus, the god of wine; 2, any frenzied woman.

ma-es-to-so (mä″ĕs-tō′sō), adj. or adv. [It. = with majesty], Mus., majestic or majestically: a direction signifying that a composition is to be performed in a majestic style.

ma-es-tro (mä-ĕs′trō), n. [pl. -tri (-trē)], [It. = master], a master in music; a great composer, conductor, or teacher.

ma-fi-a (mä′fē-ȧ), n. [Sicilian], 1, in Sicily, the popular feeling of hostility and opposition to the law; also, a secret organization, originally political, of persons imbued with this feeling; 2, a society composed of Italians and Sicilians, said to exist in foreign countries for the purpose of revenge, blackmail, etc.: also called Black Hand. Also, maf'fi-a.

mag-a-zine (măg'ə-zēn'), n. [<Fr. magasin, a store<Arab. makhzan<khazana, to store up], 1, a warehouse; 2, a place for storing military supplies, as ammunition, etc.; 3, the cartridge chamber of a gun (see rifle, illus.); 4, the room in a fort or war vessel in which the ammunition is stored; 5, a reservoir or supply chamber for any of various machines or implements; 6, a publication, containing various articles, stories, poems, etc., and issued at stated times; 7, a storehouse of information of any kind; 8, a store.

Mag-da-len (măg'də-lēn), n. [<Gk. Magdalēnē, of Magdala, a town by Galilee], Bib., a prostitute who repented and became a devoted disciple of Jesus (Luke 7:36–50): magdalen, a reformed prostitute. Also, Mag'da-lene; mag'da-lene(-lēn).

Mag-da-le-ni-an (măg"də-lē'nĭ-ən), adj. [<caves of La Madeleine, Périgord, France, where relics are found], designating, or pertaining to, a race of men belonging to the later ice age (see geology, chart).

mage (māj), n. [Fr.=a magician<Gk. magos, a magician<Magos, one of the ancient Persian wise men], Poet., a magician; wizard; conjurer.

Mag-el-lan-ic cloud (măj"ə-lăn'ĭk; măg"-), [<Port. Magalhaes, Magellan (1470–1521)], Astron., either of two nebulous appearances, composed partly of star clusters, in the Milky Way near the Southern Cross.

ma-gen-ta (mə-jĕn'tə), n. [<battle of Magenta, fought in 1859, year of discovery], 1, a purplish red dye and pigment derived from coal tar: also called fuchsine; 2, the red color given by this dye.

mag-got (măg'ŏt), n. [prob.<M.E. madhek, larva of fly], 1, the wormlike larva of an insect, especially of the fly; 2, a whim.—adj. mag'got-y.

Ma-gi (mā'jī), n.pl. [sing. Magus (mā'gŭs)], [<Gk. magos, magician: see mage], among the ancient Persians, the priestly and learned class; especially, Bib., the three Wise Men from the East (Matt. 2: 1–12).—n. and adj. Ma'gi-an (-jĭ-ən).

mag-ic (măj'ĭk), n. [<Fr. magique<Gk. magikos<magos, magician], 1, the pretended art of working by power over the hidden forces of nature or by the assistance of supernatural beings; sorcery; witchcraft; enchantment; 2, sleight of hand; 3, any hidden or secret power; as, the magic of beauty:—adj. 1, pertaining to, produced by, or exercising, more than human power; 2, having seemingly supernatural effect; 3, enchanting.—adj. mag'i-cal.—adv. mag'i-cal-ly.

Syn., n. enchantment, necromancy, sorcery, witchery, witchcraft, charm, incantation.

ma-gi-cian (mə-jĭsh'ən), n. one who pretends to have supernatural power; a conjurer.

mag-ic lan-tern an optical instrument for projecting upon a screen, by means of a light and an arrangement of lenses, enlarged images of transparent pictures; a stereopticon.

mag-is-te-ri-al (măj"ĭs-tē'rĭ-əl), adj. [<Lat. magister, master; teacher], 1, of or pertaining to a magistrate or his office; 2, having an air of authority; hence, overbearing; domineering; dictatorial.—adv. mag"is-te'ri-al-ly.—n. mag"is-te'ri-al-ness.

Syn. august, pompous, dignified, stately, commanding.

mag-is-tra-cy (măj'ĭs-trə-sĭ), n. [pl. -cies (-sĭz)], 1, the office or dignity of a civil officer with public authority, or of a justice of the peace; 2, civil officers, such as justices of the peace, collectively; 3, the district of a magistrate.

mag-is-tral (măj'ĭs-trăl), adj. 1, like a magistrate; imperious; 2, chief, principal; guiding; as, the magistral line in laying out a fortification; 3, potent; effective, as a medicine: Pharm., compounded for a particular case, as a prescription: opposite of officinal:—n. the line from which the positions of the various units of a fortification are determined.

mag-is-trate (măj'ĭs-trāt), n. 1, a civil officer who has executive authority; 2, a local justice; justice of the peace.

mag-ma (măg'mə), n. [Gk.=a kneaded mass; salve<massein, to knead; squeeze], a natural mixture of organic or mineral substances in a pasty state; hence, Chem., the residue or grounds after macerating a substance with alcohol or other solvent; Geol., igneous fluid, or molten matter, deep seated in the earth: when ejected from volcanoes called lava.

Mag-na Char-ta (măg'nə kär'tə), [Lat.=Great Charter], 1, the Great Charter, forming the basis of English civil liberty, granted by King John of England to the barons, 1215; 2, any constitution safeguarding personal rights. Also, Mag'na Car'ta.

mag-na-nim-i-ty (măg"nə-nĭm'ĭ-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], [see magnanimous], greatness of soul; nobility; freedom from pettiness.

mag-nan-i-mous (măg-năn'ĭ-məs), adj. [<Lat. magnus, great+animus, the soul], high-minded; elevated in soul or feeling; generous; courageous; heroic.—adv. mag-nan'i-mous-ly.

Syn. unselfish, altruistic, benevolent. (See generous.)

mag-nate (măg'nāt), n. [<L.L. magnas (-atis), <magnus, great], 1, a person of rank, or of prominence or influence, as in a great industry; as, an oil magnate; 2, in Hungary, a noble or high officer.

mag-ne-si-a (măg-nē'zhĭ-ə; -zhə; -shĭ-ə; -shə), n. [<Gk. Magnēsia (lithos), (stone) of Magnesia], Chem., magnesium oxide, a white, tasteless, earthy powder, used as an antacid and as a mild laxative, also as the basis of insulating covers for steam pipes.—adj. mag-ne'sian (-nē'zhən; -shən).

mag-ne-site (măg'nē-sīt), n. Mineral., a compact white mineral, native magnesium carbonate of the calcite group, extensively used as a refractory material for furnace linings and in making wood pulp: one of the sources of metallic magnesium.

mag-ne-si-um (măg-nē'zhĭ-əm; -shĭ-əm), n. Chem., a silver-white metallic element [symbol Mg], remarkable for its lightness, and hence employed in the form of alloys in airplane construction: also used in flash-light photography.

mag-net (măg'nĕt), n. [<Gk. (lithos) Magnēs (-ētos), (stone) of Magnesia, prob. loadstone], 1, loadstone, a variety of ore which has the properties of attracting iron and of taking a definite direction when freely suspended in a magnetic field: also called natural magnet; 2, a body, as a bar of iron or steel, to which these properties have been artificially given; 3, a person or thing that attracts.

BAR MAGNET
Showing lines of force in the magnetic field.

mag-net-ic (măg-nĕt'ĭk), adj. 1, having the properties of, or capable of being given the properties of, a magnet; 2, pertaining to the earth's magnetism; 3, actuated by magnetic attraction, as certain brakes; 4, having personal power to attract; as, a magnetic personality; 5, pertaining to mesmerism: magnetic axis, the straight line joining the poles of a magnet, which, if the magnet is freely suspended, will become parallel to the lines of magnetic force: magnetic field, the region near a magnet or an electric current where magnetic force is exerted and in which a magnetic needle will take a fixed position: magnetic meridian, the circle of the celestial sphere passing through the zenith and the north and south magnetic poles: magnetic needle, a magnetized steel bar mounted so as to turn freely; especially, such a needle in a compass: used to indicate the direction of the lines of force in a magnetic field, which, in the case of the earth, except in very high latitudes, run approximately north and south: magnetic pole, Geog., a point in each polar region where the dipping needle stands vertical: near enough to the geographic pole to give to the compass needle an approximately north-and-south direction over most of the earth's surface.—adv. mag-net'i-cal-ly.

mag-net-ism (măg'nĕt-ĭzm), n. 1, that property possessed by various bodies, as loadstone or steel, of attracting or repelling each other; 2, the force to which this attraction is due; 3, the science that treats of the laws of this force; 4, personal attraction or charm; 5, mesmerism.

mag-net-ite (măg'nĕt-īt), n. Mineral., a black native oxide of iron, one of the most important iron ores: when possessed of magnetic properties, called loadstone.

HIGH-TENSION MAGNETO

mag-net-ize (măg'nĕt-īz), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -ized (-īzd), p.pr. -izing], 1, to give force of attraction to; make a magnet of; 2, to attract; 3, to mesmerize:—v.i. to become magnetic.—adj. mag'net-iz"a-ble.—n. mag'net-iz"er.—n. mag"net-i-za'tion (-ĭ-zā'shŭn; -ĭ-zā'-).

mag-ne-to (măg-nē'tō), n. [pl.-tos (-tōz; -ōz)], [see magnet], Elec., a dynamo in which the magnetic field is produced by one or more permanent magnets; especially, a small dynamo that generates the current for the ignition in certain internal-combustion engines, and that is driven by the engine itself: a contraction of magneto-electric machine.

mag-net-o–e-lec-tric (măg′nēt-ō-ē-lĕk′trĭk; măg-nē′tō-), adj. characterized by, or pertaining to, electricity developed by magnets. Also, mag′net-o–e-lec′tri-cal.

mag-net-o–e-lec-tric-i-ty (măg′nēt-ō-ē-lĕk-trĭs′ĭ-tĭ; măg-nē′tō-), n. 1, electricity generated by the relative movement of electric conductors and magnets; 2, the science of electricity generated by the use of magnets.

mag-net-om-e-ter (măg′nĕt-ŏm′ē-tẽr), n. [< magneto- + -meter], Phys., an apparatus for measuring magnetic forces.

mag-net-o-mo-tive (măg′nēt-ō-mō′tĭv; măg-nē′tō-), adj. [magneto- + motive], Phys., of or pertaining to a force that produces magnetic flux, analogous to electromotive force.

mag-ne-ton (măg′nē-tŏn), n. [< magnet + -on, as in electron], the ultimate elemental unit of magnetism, a magnetic particle smaller than the atom, but possessing a positive and a negative pole.

mag-nif-i-cal (măg-nĭf′ĭ-kăl), adj. [< Fr. magnifique < Lat. magnificus, splendid], 1, magnificent; noble; 2, pompous. Also, mag-nif′ic.

Mag-nif-i-cat (măg-nĭf′ĭ-kăt), n. [Lat. = (my soul) magnifies, or praises], Bib., Mary's song of thanksgiving (Luke 1:46–55); used as a canticle or chant: magnificat, a song of praise.

mag-ni-fi-ca-tion (măg′nĭ-fĭ-kā′shŭn), n. [see magnify], 1, the process of increasing the apparent size of an object, as with a lens; also, the state of being so increased; 2, a glorifying.

mag-nif-i-cence (măg-nĭf′ĭ-sĕns), n. [< Lat. magnus, great + -ficere (< facere, to make)], grandeur of appearance; splendor; pomp. Syn. sumptuousness, beauty, majesty. (See grandeur.)

mag-nif-i-cent (măg-nĭf′ĭ-sĕnt), adj. 1, imposing; brilliant; grand in appearance; splendid; sumptuously adorned; 2, sublime; noble, as applied to ideas.—adv. mag-nif′i-cent-ly.

mag-nif-i-co (măg-nĭf′ĭ-kō), n. [pl. -coes (-kōz)], [It.], 1, a noble of ancient Venice; a title of courtesy; 2, a person of rank or distinction; also, one who affects lordliness.

mag-ni-fy (măg′nĭ-fī), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -fied (-fīd), p.pr. -fying], [< Fr. magnifier < Lat. magnificare, to make large], 1, to cause to appear greater in size, as with a lens; 2, to exaggerate; 3, to cause to be held in greater respect: Archaic, to extol; laud; praise:—v.i. to increase the apparent size of an object by a lens: magnifying glass, a convex lens which enlarges the apparent dimensions of objects viewed through it; also, a simple combination of such lenses. —n. mag′ni-fi′er.

mag-nil-o-quent (măg-nĭl′ō-kwĕnt), adj. [< Lat. magnus, great + loquens (-entis), speaking], pompous in style or speech; boastful.—adv. mag-nil′o-quent-ly.—n. mag-nil′o-quence.

mag-ni-tude (măg′nĭ-tūd), n. [< Lat. magnitudo, size], 1, greatness of size; greatness of importance; grandeur; 2, comparative size or extent, whether great or small: Astron., the apparent brightness of a star, according to a classification ranging from 1 to 6 for visible stars, those most brilliant being of the first magnitude.

Syn. bulk, mass, extent, bigness, largeness, hugeness, vastness, size, greatness, immensity, dimension.

mag-no-li-a (măg-nō′lĭ-ă), n. [< Pierre Magnol (1638–1715), Fr. botanist], any of a genus (Magnolia) of trees having large, fragrant pink or white blossoms, lustrous foliage, and aromatic bark.

mag-num (măg′nŭm), n. [Lat. = great], a two-quart bottle for wine: Anat., one of the wrist bones (see hand, illus.): magnum opus (ō′pŭs), [Lat. = great work], the chief work, as of an author.

mag-pie (măg′pī), n. [abbr. of Margaret + pie], 1, any of several birds (chiefly genus Pica) related to the crows and jays, the American species (P. hudsonica) having black and white or pied plumage and being noted for its incessant chatter; 2, a chatterer.

mag-uey (măg′wā; mä-gā′ē), n. [< Haitian Sp.], any of several species of agave yielding a fiber, especially the century plant or American aloe.

Mag-yar (măg′yär; mŏd′yŏr), n. [nat. name], 1, one of the dominant race in Hungary; 2, the language of that race; Ugrian; Hungarian:—adj. relating to that race or to its language.

ma-ha-ra-ja (mä-hä-rä′jä), n. [Hind. < mahā, great + rājā, ruler], the title of a great prince among the Hindus. Also, ma-ha-ra′jah.

Mah-dist (mä′dĭst), n. [< Arab. mahdīy, he who is guided right], a believer in the coming of the Mahdi, a temporal and spiritual leader of the Mohammedans; also, a follower of one claiming to be the Mahdi.—n. Mah′dism.

mah–jongg (mä″zhŏng′), n. [trade-mark name < Chin.], an American adaptation of a Chinese game of skill and chance, played with small tiles somewhat resembling dominoes.

mahl-stick (mäl′stĭk″; môl′stĭk″), n. [see maul-stick], a stick used as a rest for the hand in painting. For illus. see maul′stick″, Pfd. S.

ma-hog-a-ny (mȧ-hŏg′ȧ-nĭ), n. [pl. -nies (-nĭz)], [W.Ind.: source uncertain], 1, a tree (Swietenia mahagoni) of tropical America, valued for its hard wood with characteristic grain, used by cabinetmakers, etc.; also, any of various other trees producing a similar wood; 2, the brown or reddish wood of any of these trees; 3, furniture made of this wood; 4, a red stain or dye used for imitating mahogany color; 5, a dark, reddish brown color.

Ma-hom-et-an (mȧ-hŏm′ĕt-ăn), n. [see Mohammedan], a follower of the religion that accepts Mohammed as the latest and greatest prophet of God:—adj. pertaining to Mohammed or to the religion founded by him. Also, Ma-hom′ed-an. See Mo-ham′med-an, Pfd. S.

ma-hout (mȧ-hout′), n. [< Hind. mahāwat, mahāut, elephant driver], in the East Indies, an elephant driver or keeper.

Ma-ia (mā′yȧ; mī′ȧ), n. [Gk.], Gk. Myth., eldest and most beautiful of the Pleiades, and, by Zeus, mother of Hermes; Rom. Myth., a goddess of the earth, in whose honor the month of May is named: confused or identified with the Greek Maia.

maid (mād), n. [abbr. of maiden, q.v.], 1, an unmarried woman; a girl; a virgin; 2, a female servant: maid of honor, 1, a noble lady, unmarried, who attends a queen; 2, an unmarried woman who acts as the bride's chief attendant at the wedding ceremony.

maid-en (mād′n), n. [< A.S. mægden, dim. of mægeth, maid], 1, an unmarried girl or woman; a virgin; 2, something untried or unused; especially, a horse that has never won a race:—adj. 1, pertaining to, or like, a virgin; 2, pure; innocent; 3, unused; untried; as, a maiden sword; a maiden knight; 4, earliest or first; as, a maiden voyage: maiden over, in cricket, an over in which neither batsman scores.

maid-en-hair (mād′n-hâr″), n. [maiden + hair], 1, any of a genus (Adiantum) of delicate ferns found in damp woods; 2, a tall tree with fan-shaped leaves, native to Asia: also called ginkgo.

maid-en-head (mād′n-hĕd), n. [< A.S. mægdenhād, virginity], 1, the state of being a maiden or virgin; virginity; hence, purity; 2, the hymen: a membrane partially closing the vagina, the loss or rupture of which is popularly but erroneously considered as physical proof of loss of virginity.

maid-en-hood (mād′n-hood), n. [< M.E. mayden hode], 1, the state of being a young, unmarried girl; 2, virginity.

maid-en-ly (mād′n-lĭ), adj. [see maiden], like, or suitable to, a young girl; modest; gentle:—adv. modestly.—n. maid′en-li-ness.

Maid Mar-i-an (mâr′ĭ-ăn), 1, in the Robin Hood ballads, Robin's sweetheart, who shared his roving life; 2, a frolicsome character in ancient May-day games, etc., often a boy disguised; 3, hence, a mannish woman.

maid-serv-ant (mād′sûr″vănt), n. [maid + servant], a woman servant.

mai-gre (mā′gẽr; mā′gr), adj. [Fr. = lean], not made from flesh or its juices, and so, appropriate to fast days: said of articles of food.

¹mail (māl), n. [< Fr. maille < Lat. macula, spot; mesh], 1, defensive body armor of steel rings, net, or scales; hence, loosely, plate or other armor; 2, the shell-like protective coat of some animals, as the turtle:—v.t. to clothe or cover with, or as with, armor.

²mail (māl), n. [< O.F. male, bag], 1, in the United States, the letters and other matter, collectively, delivered by post; 2, the government system for conveying letters, etc.; 3, the bag or bags for carrying letters, etc., sent by post; 4, something that carries letters, etc., as a vehicle, boat, or person: Obs. or Sc., a bag for use in traveling:—v.t. to post, or send by post.

mail-a-ble (māl′ă-bl), adj. admissible for transmission by post.

mailed (māld), p.adj. [see ¹mail], clad in, or covered by, armor (see arms, illus.); also, covered with a natural defense of scales, as some fishes.

maim (mām), v.t. [see mayhem], to deprive of the use of any necessary part of the body, whether of man or beast; cripple or disfigure:—n. an injury to the body by crippling or mutilation: Law, the offense of so injuring a person, violently and unlawfully, as to impair his fighting powers; formerly, the offense of crippling or mutilating: usually, mayhem.

¹main (mān), n. [source uncertain], 1, a match at cockfighting; 2, in the game of hazard, a number called out by the caster before he casts the dice.

²main (mān), n. [< A.S. mægen, strength < O.Teut. source], 1, strength; power: now used mainly in the expression with might and main; 2, the essential point; 3, a principal conduit or pipe; as, a water main; 4, the ocean; 5, hence, any wide expanse: Rare (except in Spanish Main), the mainland, as opposed to islands or sea: in the main, for the most part:—adj. 1, chief; principal; 2, sheer; as, by main strength; 3, pertaining to, or designating, a wide expanse, as of sea or land: Naut., connected with the mainmast: Obs., powerful; enormous.

Syn., adj. first, principal, leading. (See chief.)

main-land (mān'lănd), n. [²*main*+land], a continent; a broad expanse of land, generally principal land as opposed to island.

main-ly (mān'lī), adv. [see ²main], principally; chiefly; for the most part; as, he is mainly a thinker: Archaic, strongly; powerfully; plentifully.

main-mast (mān'măst), n. [²*main*+¹*mast*], Naut., the principal mast of a vessel, usually the second from the bow (see rigging, illus.).

main-sail (mān'sāl"; Naut. mān'sl), n. [²*main*+sail], Naut., the principal sail on the mainmast of a vessel (see rigging, illus.).

main-sheet (mān'shēt"), n. [²*main*+sheet], Naut., one of the ropes by which the mainsail is extended and fastened.

main-spring (mān'spring"), n. [²*main*+spring], 1, the principal spring, or driving spring, in a mechanism, as a watch; 2, a chief motive or reason; as, duty was the mainspring of his actions.

main-stay (mān'stā"), n. [²*main*+²*stay*], Naut., 1, any of the stays, or ropes, extending from the foot of the foremast to the platform about the head of the mainmast (see rigging, illus.); hence, 2, chief dependence or support; as, the mainstay of the family.

main-tain (mān-tān'; mĕn-tān'), v.t. [< Fr. maintenir < Lat. manu tenēre, to hold in the hand], 1, to support; sustain; keep from declining; as, to maintain a reputation; 2, to support or bear the expense of; 3, to defend by argument; 4, to continue in or with; keep up, as a war; 5, to retain possession of; hold to.—adj. main-tain'a-ble.—n. main-tain'er.

Syn. conserve, support, allege, uphold. (See assert.)

main-te-nance (mān'tē-năns), n. 1, the act of sustaining or defending; support; 2, means of sustenance; supply of necessaries: Civil Law, support which a person is bound by law to give to another; Criminal Law, unlawful assistance to either party to a suit: Obs., carriage; demeanor.

main-top (mān'tŏp"), n. [²*main*+¹*top*], Naut., a platform at the top of the mainmast.

main top-gal-lant (tŏp-găl'ănt; Naut. tō-găl'-), Naut., the mast, sail, or yard above the main topmast: main-topgallant, adj. designating, or pertaining to, such a mast, sail, or yard.

main top-mast Naut., the mast above the mainmast.

main top-sail (tŏp'sāl"; Naut. -sl), Naut., the sail carried on the main topmast.

main yard the yard on which the mainsail is extended.

maî-tre d'hô-tel (mâtr' dō'tĕl'), [Fr. = master of the hotel], 1, a steward; butler; majordomo; 2, a hotel landlord.

maize (māz), n. [< Sp. maiz < W.Ind. name of corn], Indian corn (Zea mays); field corn; also, its grain.

MAIZE (1/10)
a, tassel; b, stalk; c, ear of corn; d, prop roots; e, main roots.

ma-jes-tic (mă-jĕs'tĭk), adj. [see majesty], having great dignity of person or appearance.—adj. ma-jes'ti-cal.—adv. ma-jes'ti-cal-ly.

Syn. royal, regal, sublime, splendid, stately, elevated, lofty, magnificent.

maj-es-ty (măj'ĕs-tī), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], [< Fr. majesté < Lat. majestas, grandeur], sovereignty; grandeur; nobility; sublimity: Majesty, a title given to a sovereign ruler; as, Your Majesty; His Majesty.

ma-jol-i-ca (mă-jŏl'ĭ-kă; mă-yŏl'ĭ-kă), n. [It., prob. < Majolica, Majorca, name of town of origin], a kind of decorative pottery having an opaque glaze and a richly adorned enameled surface. Also, ma-iol'i-ca.

ma-jor (mā'jẽr), adj. [Lat. = greater], greater in number, extent, dignity, or quality; as, the major part of a man's day must be used for work: Logic, designating the first term of a syllogism, or the premise which embraces that term (for example see syllogism); Mus., 1, designating, or pertaining to, the most commonly used scale, consisting of eight tones arranged at intervals of a step or a half step, such that their vibration frequencies are in the ratio 1, $\frac{8}{9}$, $\frac{4}{5}$, $\frac{3}{4}$, $\frac{2}{3}$, $\frac{3}{5}$, $\frac{8}{15}$, 2 (see ³*scale*, illus.; minor, NOTE); 2, designating an interval which is equivalent to that between the keynote of such a scale and any given one of its tones, usually the second, third, sixth, or seventh, and which is greater by a half step than the corresponding minor interval; as, C–E is a major third; 3, designating a tone a major interval distant from a given tone; as, a chord consisting of the tonic and major third; 4, of chords, melodies, modes, etc., characterized by the use of major scales, intervals, and tones:—n. 1, one having a superior standing in a group; 2, in the United States, a subject in a college curriculum to which a student devotes a relatively large amount of time: Law, one who is of age; Logic, the first or most important premise; Mil., an army officer next in rank above a captain, commanding a battalion: major general, Mil., an army officer next in rank below a lieutenant general:—v.i. Am. Education, to devote a relatively large amount of time to a single subject in a college curriculum: with in; as, she majored in economics.

ma-jor-do-mo (mā"jẽr-dō'mō), n. [pl. -mos (-mōz)], [< Sp. < L.L. major domus, house steward < Lat. major, elder + domūs, of the house], the chief steward in charge of a great household.

ma-jor-i-ty (mă-jŏr'ĭ-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], [< Fr. < Lat. major, greater], 1, the greater of two numbers looked upon as parts of a whole; more than half: distinguished from plurality: opposite of minority; 2, the difference between this greater number and the smaller; as, the Republicans had a majority of two; 3, the full legal age, 21 years: Mil., the rank or office of a major.

Syn. plurality. Majority, though having considerable common ground with plurality, must not be used for it indiscriminately. A majority must be a portion greater than one half of the total number (of votes cast, or the entire electorate). In computing votes, it is usually reckoned according to the excess of votes which the candidate or measure receiving it has over the combined number of votes cast for all other candidates or alternative measures. A plurality is the margin which one candidate (or, less frequently, measure) has over another; unless otherwise specified, the term is always used with respect to the leader and the nearest rival. Majority may be qualified for parliamentary purposes; as, a two-thirds majority.

make (māk), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. made (mād), p.pr. making], [< A.S. macian, to make < O.Teut. source], 1, to create; fashion; compose; frame; produce; bring about; 2, to prepare for use; as, to make a garden, bread, a bed; 3, to obtain for oneself, as friends; 4, to form, as plans; 5, to compute to be; as, I make the amount fifty dollars; 6, to amount to; as, three feet make a yard; 7, to get; as, to make a fortune; also, to gain or clear; net; as, to make five dollars on the transaction; 8, to raise to rank or dignity; as, his venture will make or break him; 9, to score; as, we made ten points in the game; 10, to arrive at, near, or in sight of; as, to make port; 11, to become; as, a good son makes a good husband; 12, to cause to be or become; as, to make him president; 13, to cause to act in a certain manner; as, to make a child obey; 14, to believe to be; as, he is not so clever as you make him; 15, in card playing, to shuffle; also, to take (a trick), name (the trump), or announce (a bid); 16, to constitute; as, one man does not make a team; 17, to understand as; take to be; as, I make it a threat; 18, to perform; as, to make a gesture; carry on, as war: make believe, to pretend; sham; feign; as children make believe that they are fairies: make out, 1, to discern; perceive; 2, to decipher; comprehend; 3, to prove or represent; 4, to fill out: make up, 1, to constitute; comprise; 2, to choose or appoint; 3, to gather, from beginning to end; achieve; as, the village has made up its quota; 4, to complete; 5, to invent; fabricate; also, to extemporize; 6, to fulfil (an obligation or assignment; 7, to atone for; 8, to reconcile; as, they made up their difference; 9, to prepare the appearance, especially the features, of (a person) for a stage rôle, or the like; 10, to ascend; 11, in printing, to arrange (type) into columns or pages for printing: make up one's mind, to decide; determine:—v.i. 1, to tend or move; as, he made toward the goal; 2, to have effect; as, the power that makes for righteousness; 3, to put something into a specified condition; as, to make ready for a journey; 4, to act in a specified manner; as, to make merry; 5, to appear; increase, as ice; accumulate, as snow: make up, 1, to atone: with for; as, he tried to make up for his incivility; 2, to become reconciled; resume friendly relations; 3, to prepare or disguise one's appearance, as for stage impersonation; 4, to approach; move forward:—n. 1, shape; style; construction; build; 2, amount of output; 3, brand; method or act of manufacture; as, this car is of a different make: Elec., the closing of a circuit: make-and-break, adj. Elec., designating a spark made by breaking a circuit (see jump spark).

make-bate (māk′bāt″), n. [make+obs. bate, strife], Archaic, one who stirs up strife.

make-be-lieve (māk′sbē-lēv″), n. a pretense, as a child's game of pretending that something fancied is real:—adj. pretended; fictitious.

mak-er (māk′ĕr), n. one that fashions, composes, or produces: Com., one who signs a promissory note: Maker, God, the Creator.

make-shift (māk′shift″), n. [make+shift], that which can be used for a time for lack of something better:—adj. 1, capable of being used for a time; 2, serving as a temporary tool, convenience, etc.

make-up (māk′sŭp″), n. 1, the way in which the parts of anything are put together; also, the elements put together; as, the make-up of a team; 2, the dress, paint, powder, etc., which an actor puts on for a part on the stage; 3, the personality or character of a person: Print., arrangement of type, articles, illustrations, headlines, etc., as in pages or columns, preparatory to being locked up in a chase.

make-weight (māk′wāt″), n. [make+weight], 1, a thing placed in a scale to give additional weight; 2, hence, a person or thing of slight importance added to make up a deficiency.

mal- prefix. [Fr. < Lat. male, badly, ill], meaning ill, evil, wrongly; as, *mal*treat.

Mal-a-chi (măl′ă-kī), n. [< Heb. Malākī, my messenger], Bib., 1, an ancient Hebrew prophet; 2, an Old Testament book attributed to him. Also, in the Douay Bible, Mal′a-chi′as (-kī′ăs).—abbr. Mal.

mal-a-chite (măl′ă-kīt), n. [< O.F. melochite < Gk. malakhē, mallow], Mineral., a brilliant green mineral, native, basic, copper carbonate, a valuable ore of copper, capable, when massive, of taking a high polish, and used in making ornaments.

mal-ad-just-ment (măl″ă-jŭst′mĕnt), n. [mal-+adjustment], bad regulation or settlement; failure to adapt.

mal-ad-min-is-ter (măl″ăd-mĭn′ĭs-tĕr), v.t. [mal-+administer], to conduct badly or improperly.—n. mal″ad-min″is-tra′tion.

mal-a-droit (măl″ă-droit′), adj. [mal-+adroit], lacking skill; awkward; clumsy.—adv. mal″a-droit′ly.—n. mal″a-droit′ness.

mal-a-dy (măl′ă-dĭ), n. [pl. -dies (-dĭz)], [< Fr. maladie < malade, sick < L.L. male habitus, ill kept], any disease or illness; especially, a deep-seated or lingering disorder, mental or physical.

Syn. sickness, infirmity, complaint. (See disease.)

Mal-a-ga (măl′ă-gă), n. [< Malaga, district in Spain, source of grape and wine], 1, a variety of white wine; 2, a sweet, white, firm-fleshed grape.

Mal-a-gas-y (măl″ă-găs′ĭ), n. sing. and pl. [< earlier Madegassy < Fr. Malgache < nat. name of island], 1, a native of Madagascar; 2, the language of Madagascar:—adj. pertaining to the natives or to the language of Madagascar.

ma-laise (mă″lāz′; măl′āz), n. [Fr. = discomfort < mal, bad+aise, ease], a vague feeling of uneasiness, often coming before an attack of illness.

mal-a-pert (măl′ă-pûrt), adj. [< O.F. mal, ill +appert, espert, expert], pert; saucy; impertinent; impudent:—n. a bold, saucy person.

Mal-a-prop, Mrs. (măl′ă-prŏp), [see malapropos], in Sheridan's "The Rivals," an elderly lady addicted to the ridiculous misuse and mispronunciation of words.

mal-a-prop-ism (măl′ă-prŏp-ĭzm), n. a ridiculous misuse of words: from Mrs. Malaprop, in Sheridan's "The Rivals."

mal-ap-ro-pos (măl-ăp″rō-pō′), adj. [< Fr. mal à propos, ill suited to the purpose], inopportune; not appropriate:—adv. inappropriately.

ma-lar (mā′lĕr), adj. [< Lat. mala, jaw], Anat., pertaining to the cheek or cheek bone:—n. the cheek bone (see cranium, illus.).

ma-la-ri-a (mă-lā′rĭ-ă), n. [< It. mal' aria, bad air], harmful vapors from marshy land, formerly thought to produce fevers: Pathol., a febrile disease, caused by a protozoan parasite deposited in the blood by the bite of a mosquito of the genus Anopheles.—adj. ma-la′ri-al.—adj. ma-la′ri-ous.

Ma-lay (mă-lā′; mā′lā), n. [< nat. malayu], 1, one of the race of brown men dominant in the Malay Peninsula and the numerous islands off its coast; 2, the language of these people:—adj. of or pertaining to the Malay race or archipelago.—adj. Ma-lay′an.

Mal-a-ya-lam (măl″ă-yā′lăm), n. [nat. name of language], one of the Dravidian languages, spoken in Malabar, in southeastern India.

Ma-lay-sian (mă-lā′shăn), adj. [< Malaysia, name given to archipelago: see Malay], of or pertaining to the Malay Archipelago:—n. a Malay native.

mal-con-tent (măl′kŏn-tĕnt″), adj. [mal-+content], discontented, especially with established authority:—n. one who is habitually discontented with the established order of things.

mal de mer (măl″ dĕ mâr′), [Fr.], literally, sickness of the sea; seasickness.

male (māl), adj. [O.F. < Lat. masculus, dim. of mas, male], 1, pertaining to the sex that begets young, or fertilizes the ovum produced by the opposite sex; 2, consisting of men and boys; as, a male choir: Bot., having organs, as stamens, capable of fertilizing, but not of bearing fruit; also, pertaining to such organs; Mech., designating that piece in a joint which is inserted into a corresponding piece, shaped to fit it, as a threaded pipe which screws into a coupling or collar:—n. a person, animal, or plant of the sex that begets young or performs the fertilizing process.—n. male′ness.

mal-e-dic-tion (măl″ĕ-dĭk′shŭn), n. [< Lat. male, ill+dicere (dictus), to say], 1, a proclaiming of evil against any one; curse; 2, the act of slandering; also, the state of being slandered.

Syn. anathema, oath, blasphemy, imprecation, curse, execration, profanity. A malediction is a calling down or declaration of evil against someone; it is a general word for strong denunciation; as, in his rage he cast maledictions on friends and foes alike. Malediction is the opposite of benediction. A curse, as spoken by man, is a solemn prayer to God to punish with vengeance, destruction, or other evil; or, conceived as pronounced by God, a decree of such evil. An imprecation is also a prayer that calamity or evil may fall on one; it is uttered only by man, and is vindictive. An execration is an evil-wishing expression colored by horror and detestation; it is bitter and full of hatred. Curses and imprecations are sometimes merely coarse or profane expressions.

mal-e-fac-tion (măl″ĕ-făk′shŭn), n. [< Lat. male, ill+facere (factus), to do], an evil deed; sin; crime; also, a bane or a curse.

mal-e-fac-tor (măl′ĕ-făk′tĕr), n. an evildoer; a criminal.—n. fem. mal′e-fac′tress.

Syn. criminal, culprit, felon, convict.

ma-lef-i-cent (mă-lĕf′ĭ-sĕnt), adj. [< Lat. male-ficus, wicked < male, ill+facere, to do], causing or doing evil or harm; hurtful.—n. ma-lef′i-cence.—adj. ma-lef′ic.

ma-lev-o-lent (mă-lĕv′ō-lĕnt), adj. [< Lat. male, ill+volens (-entis), wishing], malicious; spiteful; wishing evil; bent upon injuring others.—adv. ma-lev′o-lent-ly.—n. ma-lev′o-lence.

mal-fea-sance (măl-fē′zăns), n. [< O.F. malfaisant < mal-, ill+faire (< Lat. facere), to do], 1, evildoing; wrongful conduct; 2, especially, the performance by a public official of a positively illegal or wrongful act: distinguished from misfeasance and nonfeasance.

mal-for-ma-tion (măl″fôr-mā′shŭn), n. [< mal-+formation], faulty or abnormal structure of any body or part of the body.

ma-lic ac-id (mā′lĭk; măl′ĭk), [< Fr. malique < Lat. malum, apple], Chem., a crystallizable, organic acid containing oxygen, hydrogen, and carbon, occurring in two modifications with different optical properties, and found in the juices of various plants and fruits, as the apple, grape, rhubarb, gooseberry, currant, and mountain ash.

mal-ice (măl′ĭs), n. [Fr. < Lat. malitia, evil], evil intention to injure others; deliberate mischief; spite: Law, a state of mind or purpose which characterizes the doing of a wrongful act intentionally, without lawful cause: malice aforethought, Law, a state of mind in which a person intentionally and with the purpose of inflicting an injury, commits an illegal act without any reason which in law would justify it.

Syn. rancor, grudge, spite, resentment, hostility, ill will, revenge, animosity, pique. Malice loves to injure because of its very nature, needing no special provocation. Spite is a mean desire to thwart or hurt others in petty ways; one may be spiteful by nature, or be goaded to spite by some external irritation. Grudge and resentment are born of anger over personal injury; a grudge is ill will nursed in a bitter heart, and ready to act on opportunity; as, I have long held a grudge against him. Resentment is a sullen anger continued by brooding over its cause. Rancor is a deep-seated bitterness made of spite and malice; as, an unholy rancor soured their hearts.—Ant. benignity, kindness, good will.

ma-li-cious (mȧ-lĭsh'ŭs), adj. 1, bearing ill will or enmity; influenced by hatred or spite; 2, indulging in deliberate mischief; as, a malicious person; 3, arising from ill will; as, a malicious act.—adv. ma-li'cious-ly.—n. ma-li'cious-ness.

Syn. spiteful, resentful, rancorous, malevolent, malign, malignant, virulent, evil-minded, ill-disposed.—Ant. benevolent, humane, kind, merciful, well-disposed, loving.

ma-lign (mȧ-līn'), adj. [<O.F. maligne < Lat. malignus, malicious], 1, possessed of an evil disposition; malicious; 2, hurtful; tending to injure; baleful; evil; as, malign influences:—v.t. to speak evil of with spite or ill will; slander.—n. malign'er.—adv. ma-lign'ly.

Syn., v. revile, vilify, abuse, asperse. (See calumniate.)—Ant., v. compliment, praise, laud, eulogize.

ma-lig-nan-cy (mȧ-lĭg'năn-sĭ), n. the state of being disposed to do harm: Pathol., of a disease, a tendency to increase in virulence.

ma-lig-nant (mȧ-lĭg'nănt), adj. 1, malicious; having strong and active enmity toward anyone; 2, intending or bringing about evil: Hist., discontented with established authority: applied especially by early Church Fathers to opponents of Christianity, by early Protestants to Roman Catholics, and, in the 17th century, in England, by the Parliamentary party to the Royalists or vice versa; Pathol., so severe as to endanger life; virulent; tending to go from bad to worse: opposite of benign.—adv. ma-lig'nant-ly.

ma-lig-ni-ty (mȧ-lĭg'nĭ-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], 1, the disposition to do evil to others; malice; 2, deadly quality, as of a disease; 3, an evil act or event.

ma-lin-ger (mȧ-lĭng'gẽr), v.i. [<Fr. malingre, sickly], to pretend or protract illness to escape a duty; feign inability.—n. ma-lin'ger-er.

mal-i-son (măl'ĭ-zn; -sn), n. [<O.F. maleison < Lat. maledictio (-onis), curse: a doublet of malediction], a curse; imprecation; malediction.

mal-kin (mô'kĭn), n. [<M.E. malkyn, dim. of Matilda, Maud], originally, a woman of the lower classes: Obs., 1, a careless, slovenly woman; 2, a cat; 3, a scarecrow. Also, maw'kin.

mall (môl), n. [see maul], 1, a large, heavy wooden mallet, used in the game of pall-mall; 2, a kind of alley or lane in which this game was played; 3, hence, a public walk shaded by trees: The Mall (mĕl), formerly, a promenade in St. James's Park, London, now an avenue leading to Buckingham Palace.

mal-lard (măl'ȧrd), n. [<O.F. malart, wild duck], 1, the common wild duck (Anas boschas) of the Northern Hemisphere, the male having a green or a blue-black head and brownish back (see bird, colored illus.); 2, the drake of this species.

mal-le-a-ble (măl'ē-ȧ-bl), adj. [<Lat. malleare, to hammer < malleus, a hammer], capable of being extended or shaped by hammering or rolling: distinguished from ductile: malleable iron, cast iron which has been made tough and malleable by a special heat treatment.—n. mal'le-a-bil'i-ty.

mal-le-a-ble-ize (măl'ē-ȧ-bl-īz), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -ized (-īzd), p.pr. -izing], Metal., to render malleable, as cast iron or other metals, by special heat treatment.

mal-le-o-lus (mȧ-lē'ō-lŭs), n. [pl. -li (-lī)], [Lat., dim. of malleus, hammer], Anat., either of the two rounded projections at each ankle joint (see tibia, illus.).

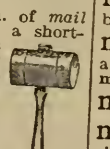
mal-let (măl'ĕt), n. [<Fr. maillet, dim. of mail <Lat. malleus, a hammer], 1, a short-handled hammer, of which the head is usually made of wood, used especially for striking a tool; 2, the long-handled implement used to drive the balls in croquet or polo.



MALLET

mal-le-us (măl'ē-ŭs), n. [pl. -lei (-ē-ī)], [Lat. = a hammer], Anat., one of the three small bones in the middle ear: also called hammer (see ear, illus.).

mal-low (măl'ō), n. [<A.S. mealuwe <Lat. malva, mallow], Bot., any of a large family (Malvaceæ) of temperate and tropical herbs, shrubs, and trees, including the marsh mallow, hollyhock, and cotton; especially, any of a genus (Malva) of plants of this family.

malm-sey (mäm'zĭ), n. [<L.L. malmasia, corr. of Gk. Monembasia, seaport in southern Greece], 1, a rich variety of grape; 2, a strong, full-flavored, sweet wine. Also, mal'voi-sie (măl'vwȧ-zē; -vȧ-).

mal-nu-tri-tion (măl'nū-trĭsh'ŭn), n. [mal- + nutrition], undernourishment from lack of food, an ill-balanced diet, or poor digestion.

mal-o-dor-ous (măl-ō'dẽr-ŭs), adj. [mal- + odorous], having a disagreeable smell; objectionable.—adv. mal-o'dor-ous-ly.

mal-prac-tice (măl-prăk'tĭs), n. [mal- + practice], 1, the wrong or neglectful treatment of a patient by a surgeon or physician; 2, the conduct of any profession in an illegal or wrong way.

malt (môlt), n. [<A.S. mealt, malt < O.Teut. source], barley or other grain partially germinated and dried for brewing: Colloq., malt liquor; ale:—v.i. to germinate grain artificially, or change it into malt, for the purpose of converting the starch into grape sugar: —v.t. to make into, or with, malt:—adj. made with such grain; as, ale is a malt liquor.—n. malt'ster (-stẽr).

Mal-tese (môl-tēz'; môl-; -tēs'), adj. [<Malta], relating to Malta, an island in the Mediterranean, or to its inhabitants: Maltese cat, a domestic cat, with slate-gray fur: Maltese cross, a cross the four arms of which are equal and have wide, notched ends (for illus. see cross):—n. [pl. Maltese], 1, a native of Malta; 2, the language of Malta.

Mal-thu-sian (măl-thū'zhăn; măl-thū'zĭ-ăn), adj. [<proper name Malthus], of or pertaining to the theories of the English economist, Thomas R. Malthus (1766–1834), who taught that population tends to increase faster than the means of subsistence, and that poverty is inevitable unless late marriage or prudent restraint lower the birth rate, and so check population:—n. a follower of his principles.

malt-ose (môl'tōs), n. [see malt], a white sugary substance, similar to glucose, resulting from the action of diastase on starch; grape sugar.

mal-treat (măl-trēt'), v.t. [mal- + treat], to treat roughly or unkindly.—n. mal-treat'ment.

mal-va-ceous (măl-vā'shŭs), adj. [<Lat. malva, mallow], Bot., of or pertaining to the family (Malvaceæ) of plants typified by the mallow.

mal-ver-sa-tion (măl'vẽr-sā'shŭn), n. [<Fr. < malverser < Lat. male, badly + versari (-atus), to turn; behave], wicked behavior; especially, corruption or misconduct in public office.

mal-voi-sie (măl'vwȧ-zē; măl'vȧ-zē), n. [earlier form of malmsey, q.v.], 1, a variety of grape; 2, a strong, sweet wine. See malm'sey, Pfd. S.

Mal-vo-li-o (măl-vō'lĭ-ō), n. [It.], in Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night," an absurdly conceited steward: a comedy character.

Mam-e-luke (măm'ē-lūk), n. [<Arab. mamlūk, slave < malaka, to possess], one of a corps of mounted soldiers, originally slaves, which dominated Egypt in the thirteenth century: mameluke, a Turkish slave.

[1]mam-ma (mȧ-mä'; mä'mȧ), n. [instinctive], mother: a familiar or childish name, of the status of papa. Also, ma-ma'.

[2]mam-ma (măm'ȧ), n. [pl. -mæ (-ē)], [Lat. = breast], Anat., a gland secreting milk, found in the mammals, or animals that suckle their young: rudimentary and functionless in the male.

mam-mal (măm'ăl), n. a member of the highest class of vertebrate animals, including man, which nourish their young with milk from the mammæ, or milk glands. (See illus. page 595.)

Mam-ma-li-a (mȧ-mā'lĭ-ȧ), n.pl. Zoöl., the highest class of animals, which nourish their young with milk from the mammæ, or milk glands. (See illus. page 595.)—adj. mam-ma'li-an.

mam-ma-ry (măm'ȧ-rĭ), adj. of or pertaining to the breasts, or mammæ.

mam-mif-er-ous (mȧ-mĭf'ẽr-ŭs), adj. [<Lat. mamma, breast + ferre, to bear], having breasts, or mammæ.

mam-mil-la (mȧ-mĭl'ȧ), n. [pl. -læ (-ē)], [Lat. = nipple: dim. of mamma, breast], a nipple, or something resembling a nipple.—adj. mam'mil-la-ry.—adj. mam'mil-late.

mam-mock (măm'ŭk), v.t. [source uncertain], to pull apart; tear to shreds; break.

mam-mon (măm'ŭn), n. [<Aram. mamon, riches], 1, wealth; worldly gain; 2, greed for riches; cupidity: Mammon, cupidity personified or conceived as a god.—n. mam'mon-ism.

mam-mon-ite (măm'ŭn-īt), n. one who devotes himself to acquiring wealth.

mam-moth (măm'ŭth), n. [<Russ. mammot, name of animal: source uncertain], Zoöl., a huge, extinct, hairy-skinned elephant of prehistoric time, ten feet high or more, with long tusks curving upward, the fossil remains of which are found in North America and Siberia:—adj. gigantic; immense.

SKELETON OF MAMMOTH (1/50)

mam-my (măm'ĭ), n. [pl. -mies (-ĭz)], [dial. form of mamma], 1, mother: a child's term; 2, in the southern United States, a negress who is an old family servant or nurse for white children.

man (măn), n. [pl. men (mĕn)], [A.S. < O.Teut. source], 1, a human being; also, the human race; 2, an adult male of the human species (see skeleton, illus.); 3, anyone: with a: 4, a male servant; valet; 5, one possessed of manly qualities in a high degree; 6, a husband: used in man and wife and, vulgarly, in her man, my man, etc.; 7, one of the pieces in chess, checkers, or similar games: also, a player in a game, whether male or female; 8, manly quality; manliness: to a man, none being excepted: man in the street, an average or ordinary man:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. manned (măndˊ), p.pr. manning], 1, to furnish with men; 2, to fortify; supply with strength.

man-a-cle (măn'ə-kl), n. [< O.F. manicle, handcuff < Lat. manicula, dim. of manus, hand], a handcuff; a fetter or shackle for the hands: usually pl.:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -cled (-kld), p.pr. -cling], to place handcuffs upon; restrain.

man-age (măn'ăj), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -aged (-ăjd), p.pr. -aging], [< It. maneggiare, to manage (horses)], 1, to administer; handle; conduct; carry on; 2, to make obedient; control; guide; as, to manage a frisky horse; 3, to bring around artfully to one's plans, as by flattery; 4, to contrive; as, to manage to escape; 5, to cope with; use properly; as, to manage tools:—v.i. 1, to conduct or direct affairs; 2, to make use of one's means or resources in a thrifty fashion.

Syn. direct, regulate, govern, superintend, engineer, control, supervise. (See couduct, govern.)

man-age-a-ble (măn'ăj-ə-bl), adj. easily conducted or controlled; obedient; subject to guidance; tractable.—adv. man'age-a-bly.—n. man'age-a-ble-ness.—n. man"age-a-bil'i-ty.

man-age-ment (măn'ăj-mĕnt), n. 1, the act or art of conducting or controlling; administration; control; 2, prudent dealing; skilful direction; 3, those collectively who are responsible for the direction of an enterprise or business.

Syn. superintendence, direction, economy, conduct, guidance, control, care, charge, regulation.

man-ag-er (măn'ə-jĕr), n. 1, one who directs or conducts anything; 2, one who conducts business or household affairs with skill or economy.—adj. man"a-ge'ri-al (-jē'rĭ-ăl).

man-a-kin (măn'ə-kĭn), n. [see manikin], 1, any of several species of small tropical bird found in South America, some of which are brilliantly colored; 2, a dwarf; 3, a model of the human body for the study of the organs; 4, (usually, manncquin), an artist's or dressmaker's model. Also, for senses 2, 3, and 4, man'ni-kin: Pfd. S. for 2 and 3, man'i-kin.

ma-ña-na (mä-nyä'nä), n. [Sp. = tomorrow], tomorrow:—adv. tomorrow; soon.

Ma-nas-seh (mə-năs'ē), n. [Heb. = one who causes forgetfulness], Bib., 1, the son of Joseph for whom the tribe of Manasseh was named (Gen. 41:51); 2, a son of Hezekiah and king of Judah, who restored idolatrous worship among the Jews (2 Kings 21).

MANATEE

man-a-tee (măn"ə-tē'), n. [< Sp. manati < Carib. manattoui, nat. name of animal], any of several aquatic, herbivorous mammals allied to the dugong, with a broad, rounded tail: also called cowfish; sea cow.

man-chet (măn'chĕt), n. [source uncertain], Obs., a small roll of fine wheat bread; a muffin.

Man-chu (măn-chōō'), adj. [Chin. = pure], pertaining to Manchuria, in China, its language or inhabitants:—n. 1, a member of the native Mongolian race of Manchuria which conquered China in 1644; 2, the language of this people.—adj. and n. Man-chu'ri-an (-rĭ-ăn).

man-ci-ple (măn'sĭ-pl), n. [O.F. < Lat. mancipium, office of manceps, buyer < manus, hand + capere, to take], a steward or caterer, as for a college.

man-da-mus (măn-dā'mŭs), n. [Lat. = we command], Law, a writ or document given out by a superior court directing the person, corporation, or inferior court addressed, to perform some public duty or act.

man-da-rin (măn"dă-rĭn; măn"dă-rēn'), n. [< Port. mandarim < Malay < Hind. mantri < Sans. mantrin, counselor], 1, a Chinese public official of one of the nine higher classes entitled to wear a button on the hat; 2, a Chinese variety of small orange with easily detachable rind and sweet pulp; 3, any of various reddish orange dye colors: Mandarin, the Chinese dialect in use by the official classes and the court; loosely, the chief Chinese dialect.

man-date (măn'dāt), n. [< Lat. mandare (-atus), to command < manus, hand + dare, to give], an order; command; an official charge or injunction: Pol. Sci., the will of a constituency with regard to a specified policy, expressed to its elected representative; Law, 1, a direction or request; a command to an inferior court or officer, directing the enforcement of a judgment or decree; 2, in recent international law, control and supervision of a small, weak country by a great power, equivalent to a protectorate:—v.t. (-dāt), [p.t. and p.p. -dated, p.pr. -dating], to have supervisory control of (a territory): mandated territory, a country under the control and supervision of a great power.

Syn., n. law, decree, edict, ordinance, statute.

man-da-to-ry (măn'dă-tō-rĭ), adj. 1, containing, or pertaining to, an official command; expressing a command; carrying obligation; 2, authoritatively required; obligatory; 3, in recent international law, having control and supervision over a small nation, for the protection of the latter: mandatory power, a nation having such control:—n. [pl. -ries (-rĭz)], 1, one to whom an official charge or injunction is given; 2, in recent international law, a nation having supervision and control of protected territory; a mandatory power. Also, n. man'da-ta-ry (-tă-rĭ).

man-di-ble (măn'dĭ-bl), n. [< L.L. mandibula < Lat. mandere, to chew], Anat., the bone of the lower jaw; Zoöl., 1, in crustaceans, the third pair of head appendages, the biting mouth parts; 2, in insects, the first, or anterior, pair of mouth parts, variously modified in different insects as biting, crushing, or chewing jaws, and with other parts forming sucking or piercing organs; 3, either part of a bird's beak.—adj. and n. man-dib'u-lar.

man-do-lin (măn'dō-lĭn), n. [< It. mandolino, a kind of lute], a musical instrument of the lute variety, with a pear-shaped sound box, a neck with frets, and metal strings in pairs: played with a plectrum (for range see music). Also, man'do-line.

man-drag-o-ra (măn-drăg'ō-rä), n. [< Gk. mandragoras, mandrake], any of a small genus (Mandragora) of herbs of the nightshade family, found in Europe and Asia; especially, the mandrake (M. officinarum) of the Old World.

man-drake (măn'drāk), n. [< M.E. mandrage, abbr. of mandragora, q.v.], 1, a narcotic plant of the nightshade family, native of the Himalayan and Mediterranean regions, with a very large forked root and a white or purple flower; the mandragora; 2, in America, the May apple (Podophyllum peltatum), a low-growing herb with a peltate leaf, a white, waxy blossom, an oval fruit about 1½ inches long, and rootstock which yields the medicine podophyllin (for illus. see May apple).

man-drel (măn'drĕl), n. [source uncertain], 1, a snug-fitting cylindrical or conical piece of metal on which a piece of work may be held and by which it may be driven, as in a lathe; 2, a similar piece that serves as a forming core in forging, wire winding, etc. Also, man'dril.

man-drill (măn'drĭl), n. [man + ²*drill*], one of the largest and most ferocious West African baboons, with long canine teeth.

mane (mān), n. [< A.S. manu, mane < O.Teut. source], the long hair on the upper side or about the neck of certain animals, as the horse (for illus. see horse).—adj. maned (mānd).—adj. mane'less.

ma-nège (mă"năzh'), n. [Fr. < It. maneggiare, to manage (horses)], 1, a riding academy; a school where horsemanship is taught; 2, the art of training, riding, or driving, horses; 3, the paces of a trained horse. Also, ma-nege' (mă-nĕzh').

ma-nes (mā'nēz), n.pl. [Lat. = spirits of the dead], 1, Rom. Myth., the spirits of the dead, especially when regarded as tutelary divinities; hence, 2, spirits of ancestors worshiped as gods.

ma-neu-ver (mə-nōō'vĕr; mə-nū'vĕr), n. [< Fr. manœuvre < L.L. manoperare < Lat. manu operari, to work by hand], 1, swift and skilful management or operation in military or naval affairs; 2, an artful proceeding or course of action; a stratagem:—v.i. 1, to perform certain movements with troops or war vessels; 2, to scheme; manage with art and skill:—v.t. 1, to cause to make certain movements, as troops or vessels; 2, to handle skilfully; manipulate; manage with dexterity; 3, to make, move, or place, by skilful management. Also, ma-neu'vre; ma-nœu'ver; ma-nœu'vre.

Syn., n. artifice, stratagem. (See subterfuge.)

man-ful (măn'fo͝ol), adj. [see man], courageous; resolute; bravely determined; valiant; intrepid.—adv. man'ful-ly.—n. man'ful-ness.
Syn. noble, brave, manly, manlike, mannish. Manly connotes the possession of such qualities as befit a man, as courage, stamina, boldness, hardiness. Manlike describes the appearance and the qualities, good or bad, that distinguish a man; it usually stresses his finer qualities, however: as, manlike determination. Manful emphasizes the fighting qualities, the bravery and resolution characteristic of men; as, a manful spirit. Mannish describes those who ape the fashions or manners of men; as, a mannish girl.

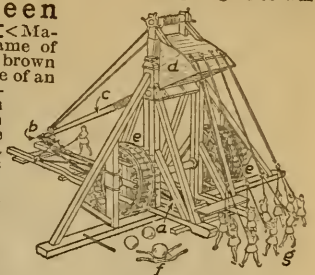
man-ga-nese (măng'gȧ-nēs'; măng'gȧ-nēz), n. [Fr., corr. of magnesia], Chem., a hard, somewhat brittle, nonmagnetic, metallic element [symbol Mn], similar in some properties to iron: used largely in steel manufacture, in alloys, as a deoxidizer, and in the arts, as in the making of paint and glass: manganese bronze, a yellow to greenish alloy of copper and tin, with a small proportion of manganese added to increase the strength: manganese steel, steel with a high percentage of manganese, notable for toughness and durability: used in safes, ore crushers, etc.

man-ga-nin (măng'gȧ-nĭn), n. [see manganese], an alloy of copper, nickel, and manganese, used generally for making electrical resistance wires because of its very small change of resistance with change of temperature.

mange (mānj), n. [<M.E. manjewe<O.F. manjue, itch<manjuer, to eat], any of various persistent contagious diseases affecting the skin of dogs itself; 3, a pickled muskmelon, pepper, or the like, stuffed with chowchow.

man-go-nel (măng'gō-nĕl), n. [see ¹mangle], an obsolete stone-hurling engine of war.

man-go-steen (măng'gō-stēn), n. [<Malay mangustan, name of fruit], a reddish brown fruit about the size of an orange, with a delicious, juicy pulp in segments as in an orange; also, the tree of East India and the Philippines bearing this fruit.



MANGONEL
a, missile in place; b, trigger rope; c, hurling shaft; d, box containing weight; e, e, wheels and axle by which shaft isset in place; f, missile for next shot; g, soldiers pulling to add to effect of weight.

man-grove (măng'grōv), n. [source uncertain], any of a genus (Rhizophora) of tropical shore trees or shrubs with spreading branches that send down roots, called prop roots, which ultimately cause the tree to spread over large areas: the source of a bark used in tanning.

man-gy (mān'jĭ), adj. [comp. -gier, superl. -giest], [see mange], 1, suffering with the mange, a contagious skin disease of dogs and cattle; 2, shabby; neglected: Colloq., mean; low.—n. man'gi-ness.

MAMMALIA.—1, Australian anteater; 2, ornithorhynchus, or duckbill; 3, Virginia opossum; 4, banded anteater; 5, rock wallaby; 6, tree shrew; 7, bat; 8, lynx; 9, lion; 10, hyena; 11, timber wolf; 12, walrus; 13, beaver; 14, hare; 15, porcupine; 16, armadillo; 17, spider monkey; 18, man; 19, two-humped, or Bactrian, camel; 20, elk; 21, giraffe; 22, zebra; 23, rhinoceros; 24, African elephant; 25, cony; 26, right whale.

and other hairy or woolly animals: usually caused by parasitic mites, and occasionally transferred to man.

man-gel–wur-zel (măng'gl-wûr"zl), n. [Ger. <mangold, beet+wurzel, root], a large, coarse variety of beet, extensively cultivated as a cattle fodder.

man-ger (mān'jẽr), n. [<Fr. mangeoire<Lat. manducare, to chew], a box or trough, as in a stall, from which horses or cattle eat.

¹man-gle (măng'gl), n. [<Du. mangel<M.Du. mange, a mangle; mangonel<L.L. mango<Gk. magganon, a mangonel], a machine for ironing cloth, especially damp linen, between rollers:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -gled (-gld), p.pr. -gling], to iron (cloth) in a mangle.—n. man'gler.

²man-gle (măng'gl), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -gled (-gld), p.pr. -gling], [<A.F. mahangler, prob. <mahaignier, to maim], 1, to cut to pieces; maim; mutilate by cutting or hacking; 2, to spoil in the performing or making; make a botch of.—n. man'gler.

man-go (măng'gō), n. [pl. -goes; -gos (-gōz)], [<Port. <Tamil mankay<man, mango tree+kay, fruit], 1, a tropical, evergreen tree of the cashew family, bearing fruit of oblong shape, greenish, reddish, or yellowish color, thick rind, and juicy pulp; 2, the fruit man-han-dle (măn-hăn'dl), v.t. [man+handle], Naut., to accomplish by man power without mechanical aid: Slang, to treat roughly.

man-hole (măn'hōl"), n. [man+hole], an opening to admit a man, as into a tank or sewer.

man-hood (măn'ho͝od), n. [man+-hood], 1, the state of being a man; 2, the qualities belonging to a man; courage; 3, men collectively.

ma-ni-a (mā'nĭ-ȧ), n. [Gk.=madness], 1, violent insanity; raging madness; 2, excessive or unreasonable desire or enthusiasm; a craze; as, a mania for collecting: Psychopathol., mental disorder characterized by emotional exaltation, high excitability, and a tendency to violent reactions, accompanied by impulses to a special type of behavior; as, a suicidal mania: also used in compounds; as, kleptomania.
Syn. frenzy, madness, lunacy. (See insanity.)

ma-ni-ac (mā'nĭ-ăk), adj. affected with insanity; raving; frantic:—n. a person violently insane; a madman.—adj. ma-ni'a-cal (mȧ-nī'ȧ-kăl).—adv. ma-ni'a-cal-ly.

ma-nic (mā'nĭk), adj. [<Gk. manikos, inclined to madness], Psychopathol., exhibiting or growing out of mental disorder characterized by high excitability or a tendency to violent reactions.

man-i-cure (măn'ĭ-kūr), n. [< Lat. manus, hand + cura, care], 1, the care of the hands, nails, etc.; 2, one whose vocation is the care of the hands and nails of others:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -cured (-kūrd), p.pr. -curing], to care for (the hands and nails); treat and care for the hands and nails of (a person):—v.i. to care for the hands and nails.—n. man'i-cur"ist.

man-i-fest (măn'ĭ-fĕst), n. [< Fr. manifeste < Lat. manifestare, to reveal], the list of a cargo to be shown to the customhouse officials; an invoice:—adj. obvious; clear; plain; apparent to the sight or understanding:—v.t. 1, to make clear; place beyond possibility of misunderstanding; prove; 2, to show the list of, as a cargo:—v.i. to appear to the senses; give evidence of being present, as a spirit.—adv. man'i-fest-ly.

Syn., adj. visible, overt, unmistakable, evident; v. demonstrate, prove, reveal, display.

man-i-fes-ta-tion (măn"ĭ-fĕs-tā'shŭn), n. 1, the demonstration or revelation of the existence, nature, or qualities of some person or thing; 2, a public display, as a procession or the wearing of badges, for showing feeling or gaining attention.

Syn. exhibition, indication, display, disclosure.

man-i-fes-to (măn"ĭ-fĕs'tō), n. [pl. -toes (-tōz)], [It.], a proclamation on the part of a state, body of individuals, or officials, declaring political measures or intentions; a declaration.

man-i-fold (măn'ĭ-fōld), adj. [< A.S. manigfeald, multiplied], 1, various in kind or quality; numerous; 2, comprehensive; as, manifold wisdom; 3, many-sided; as, a manifold sage; 4, consisting of a series of identical units: used of a machine or the like:—v.t. to make many copies of (a manuscript) at once, as on a duplicating machine:—n. 1, a copy made by a duplicating machine; 2, a pipe having two or more lateral outlets, used for connecting one pipe with others.—adv. man'i-fold"ly.—n. man'i-fold"ness.

MANIFOLD
As in an automobile exhaust.

Syn., adj. sundry, divers, various, multifarious.

man-i-hot (măn'ĭ-hŏt), n. [Mod. Lat. < nat. name], any of a genus (Manihot) of tropical American plants, some of which yield a kind of rubber and others, as the manioc, or cassava, valuable starch products, tapioca, etc.

man-i-kin (măn'ĭ-kĭn), n. [< Du. mannekin, puppet, dim. of man, man], 1, a dwarf; little man; 2, a model of the human body, frequently composed of detachable parts, for study of the organs; 3, (usually written mannequin), an artist's or dressmaker's lay figure, or model:—adj. dwarf; diminutive. Also, man'a-kin; man'ni-kin.

Ma-nil-a (mȧ-nĭl'ȧ), n. [nat. name], 1, a kind of cigar manufactured at Manila in the Philippine Islands; 2, a hemplike fiber, used for ropes, textiles, paper, etc., obtained from a Philippine tree related to the banana; 3, a strong paper made from this fiber. Also, ma-nil'a; Ma-nil'la; ma-nil'la.

ma-nil-la (mȧ-nĭl'ȧ), n. [< Sp. malilla, dim. of mala, prob. < malo, bad], Cards, in certain games as quadrille and omber, the highest trump but one. Also, ma-nille' (mȧ-nĭl').

man-i-oc (măn'ĭ-ŏk; mȧ'nĭ-ŏk), n. [< Tupi mandioca, nat. name], any of several tropical plants (genus Manihot) whose roots yield a nutritious starch; also, the starch: also called cassava.

man-i-ple (măn'ĭ-pl), n. [< O.F. < Lat. manipulus, handful < manus, hand + -ple, root of plēre, to fill], Rom. Antiq., 1, a subdivision of the Roman legion, consisting of 60 or 120 men; 2, a fringed and embroidered strip of fabric worn hanging from the left arm of a Roman Catholic or Anglican priest while administering the Eucharist.

ma-nip-u-lar (mȧ-nĭp'ū-lȧr), adj. 1, [see maniple], pertaining to the ancient Roman military company, or maniple; [see manipulate], pertaining to manipulation; as, manipular operations.

ma-nip-u-late (mȧ-nĭp'ū-lāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -lated, p.pr. -lating], [< Fr. manipuler: see maniple], 1, to operate, work, or manage skilfully by means of the hands; as, to manipulate tools; 2, to influence artfully; control the action of, by skilful management; 3, to falsify, as books in bookkeeping:—v.i. to use the hands, especially in scientific operations or mechanical processes.

ma-nip-u-la-tion (mȧ-nĭp"ū-lā'shŭn), n. 1, the act or process of operating or working skilfully with the hands; 2, skilful management by means of the intellect: sometimes, falsification, as of accounts, etc.—n. ma-nip'u-la"tor.

ma-nip-u-la-tive (mȧ-nĭp'ū-lā-tĭv), adj. pertaining to, or performed by, skilful use of the hands.—adj. ma-nip'u-la-to-ry (-lȧ-tō-rĭ).

man-i-to (măn'ĭ-tō), n. [Amer. Ind. = great spirit], among certain North American Indians, a spirit of good or evil regarded with reverence and awe; also, a fetish or charm thought to have supernatural power. Also, man'i-tou (-tōō); man'i-tu (-tōō).

man-kind (măn"kīnd'), n. [man + kind], 1, humanity; human beings collectively; 2, (măn'-kīnd"), the male members of any group; the male sex.

man-like (măn'līk"), adj. [man + like], having the qualities of, or suitable to, a man; manly.

Syn. masculine, mannish. (See manful.)

man-li-ness (măn'lĭ-nĕs), n. [see man], virility; the state or quality of possessing manly virtues, as force, directness, and courage.

man-ly (măn'lĭ), adj. [comp. -lier, superl. -liest], having the qualities befitting a man; masculine; courageous; noble; dignified; resolute:—adv. like a man.

Syn., adj. intrepid, determined, frank. (See manful.)

man-na (măn'ȧ), n. [< Heb. mān hu, what is it? or < Aram. mannā, a gift], 1, the food sent to the Israelites during their 40 years' wandering in the wilderness (Ex. 16:15); hence; 2, spiritual nourishment; 3, figuratively, any necessities apparently miraculously supplied; 4, the sweetish, dried sap of certain Old World ash trees (chiefly Fraxinus ornus), used in medicine as a mild laxative.

man-ne-quin (măn'ē-kĭn), n. [Fr. = puppet], a form, or lay figure, used as an artist's or dressmaker's model; also, a person on whom fashions in clothing are displayed. Also, man'i-kin, q.v.

man-ner (măn'ẽr), n. [< O.F. manière, manner < Lat. manus, hand], 1, method; way of acting or happening; 2, habit; bearing; mien; 3, sort; kind; species; 4, aspect; style, as in literature or art; as, the Phidian manner: pl. 1, morals; behavior; politeness; 2, practices of society; as, manners and customs of the Middle Ages.—adj. man'nered.

Syn. behavior, demeanor, address, mode, system.

man-ner-ism (măn'ẽr-ĭzm), n. a peculiarity of style, action, or bearing, especially if affected or carried to excess.

Syn. affectation, air. A mannerism is an excessive adherence to some distinctive trait or singularity, particularly some trick or oddity of style in literature or art. An affectation is a trick of behavior or style consciously assumed. Affectations are hence usually artificial, unnatural, and without sincerity; a mannerism, though peculiar, may be a perfectly natural trait of its possessor. An affectation so consistently assumed that it is displayed unconsciously becomes a mannerism, and a mannerism put on for display is an affectation.

man-ner-ist (măn'ẽr-ĭst), n. a person, generally an artist, whose work follows too servilely and persistently an adopted or originated technique.

man-ner-less (măn'ẽr-lĕs), adj. lacking in politeness and respect; uncivil; rude.

man-ner-ly (măn'ẽr-lĭ), adj. polite; courteous; well-bred; well-behaved:—adv. politely; respectfully.—n. man'ner-li-ness (-lĭ-nĕs).

man-nish (măn'ĭsh), adj. [see man], masculine; characteristic of a man; as, a mannish stride.—adv. man'nish-ly.—n. man'nish-ness.

Syn. (see manful).—Ant. effeminate, womanish.

ma-nœu-ver (mȧ-nōō'vẽr; mȧ-nū'vẽr), n. [see maneuver], 1, swift, skilful management in war; 2, an artful proceeding; a stratagem:—v.i. 1, to execute movements with troops or vessels; 2, to scheme and manage with skill:—v.t. 1, to put (troops or vessels) through movements; 2, to handle skilfully; 3, to put into a desired position by skilful management. Also, ma-nœu'vre. See ma-neu'ver, Pfd. S.

Syn., n. trick, artifice, intrigue. (See subterfuge.)

man–of–war (măn"ȧv-wôr'), n. [pl. men-of-war (mĕn"z)], a large, armed vessel belonging to the navy of a country.

man–of–war bird 1, either of two species (genus Frigata) of large, rapacious, strong-winged sea birds; a frigate bird (which see for illus.); 2, incorrectly, any of certain birds of similar habits or appearance, as the albatross.

ma-nom-e-ter (mȧ-nŏm'ē-tẽr), n. [< Gk. manos, thin + metron, a measure], an instrument for measuring pressure of gases or vapors.—adj. man"o-met'ric (măn"ō-mĕt'rĭk).

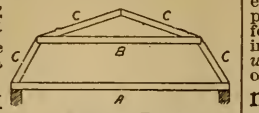
man-or (măn'ẽr), n. [< O.F. manoir < Lat. manēre, to stay], 1, in England, the landed estate, originally with feudal restrictions, of a nobleman or gentleman; 2, in America, a tract of land held by tenants in fee simple in consideration of a definite, perpetual rent; usually in historical references: manor house, the dwelling house of the owner of the manor.

ma-no-ri-al (mȧ-nō'rĭ-ȧl), adj. belonging or pertaining to a manor, or district, over which a lord or owner exercises authority.

man-sard (măn'särd), n. [<François Mansard (1598–1666), Fr. architect], 1, a roof which has a double slope, the lower being steeper than the upper: usually called mansard roof; 2, the story formed by such a roof; an attic; a garret.



MANSARD ROOF
A, tiebeam; B, collar beam; C, C, C, C, rafters.

manse (măns), n. [<L.L. mansus, house<manēre, to stay], the home of a Presbyterian minister: a term especially used in Scotland; in general, a parsonage: Obs., the house of a landowner, especially if large and pretentious.

man-serv-ant (măn'sûr'vânt), n. [pl. menservants (-vănts)], [man+servant], a male employee in household service, as a butler or valet.

man-sion (măn'shŭn), n. [O.F.<L.mansio(-onis), <manēre, to stay], a stately residence.

man-slaugh-ter (măn'slô'tĕr), n. [man+slaughter], Law, the unlawful killing, voluntarily or involuntarily, of a human being by another or others, but without malice aforethought.

man-teau (măn'tō; măn"tō'), n. [pl. -teaus (-tōz); -teaux (-tō')], [Fr.=cloak], 1, a cloak or mantle, worn by women; 2, formerly, a loose gown opening in front: often called mantua.

man-tel (măn'tl), n. [see mantle], the facing of wood, marble, etc., around and above a fireplace, including the projecting shelf above; also, the shelf: also called mantelpiece or, Archaic, manteltree.

man-tel-et (măn'tl-ĕt), n. [O.F., dim. of mantel: see mantle], 1, a short cloak or cape; 2, a movable shelter for hunters: Mil. (often, mantlet), a bullet-proof shelter, formerly movable, to protect besiegers, gunners, observers, etc.

man-til-la (măn-tĭl'ä), n. [Sp., dim. of manta, cloak], 1, a woman's light cloak or hood; 2, a lace veil worn over the head, especially by Spanish and Italian women.

man-tis (măn'tĭs), n. [pl. mantes (-tēz)], [Gk. = prophet], any of various insects (family Mantidæ) which prey on other insects and are noted for taking a position with the front legs folded as if praying: also called praying mantis, or soothsayer: mantis shrimp, a squilla.

MANTIS

man-tis-sa (măn-tĭs'ä), n. [Lat.=an addition], the decimal or fractional part of a logarithm: so named because added to the integral part, called the characteristic.

man-tle (măn'tl), n. [<earlier mantel<A.S. mentel or O.F. mantel, both<Lat. mantellum, cloak], 1, a loose cloak or cape, usually sleeveless; hence, 2, anything that covers or envelops; 3, a cone-shaped network of material that will not burn, which fits like a cap over a flame and gives light by glowing at a high temperature; 4, the outer covering of a wall: Zoöl., the outer fold of skin covering the body of the clam and other mollusks:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -tled (-tld), p.pr. -tling], to cover with, or as with, a cloak; disguise; conceal:—v.i. 1, to be overspread, as with a covering; as, her face mantled with blushes; 2, to take on a coating; as, the pool mantles with scum; 3, to spread out; 4, to stretch the wings: said of a hawk.

man-tling (măn'tlĭng), n. Her., ornamentation suggesting drapery above and on either side of an escutcheon (see color plate of heraldry).

man-tu-a (măn'tū-ä), n. [corr. of manteau], in the 17th and 18th centuries, a woman's gown or cloak: mantuamaker, Obs., a dressmaker.

Man-tu-an (măn'tū-ăn), adj. [<Mantua], pertaining to the Italian city, Mantua:—n. a native or resident of Mantua, the birthplace of Vergil.

man-u-al (măn'ū-ăl), adj. [<Lat. manus, hand], pertaining to, or done by, the hands: sign manual, a signature written by the individual's own hand:—n. a handbook; a small book of directions: Mil., a systematic exercise in the use of some weapon; as, a manual of arms; Mus., the keyboard of an organ; as, an organ of two manuals.

man-u-fac-to-ry (măn"ū-făk'tō-rĭ), n. [pl. -ries (-rĭz)], [<Lat. manu, by hand +facere (factus), to make], a place where goods are made by physical labor or by machinery, especially on a large scale; a factory.

man-u-fac-ture (măn"ū-făk'tûr; măn"ū-făk'chŏor), n. 1, the making, usually on a large scale, of articles by hand, by machinery, or a combination of processes; 2, anything made from raw material by industrial processes; such articles taken collectively:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -tured (-tûrd; -chŏord), p.pr. -turing], 1, to make, as shoes, paper, etc., from raw materials, by hand, machinery, or other processes; 2, to work, as raw materials, into useful forms; as, to manufacture wool into fabrics; 3, to invent or fabricate with intent to deceive; as, to manufacture excuses:—v.i. to be occupied in the making of goods from raw materials.—n. man"u-fac'tur-er.

man-u-mis-sion (măn"ū-mĭsh'ŭn), n. [<Lat. manu, from the hand+mittere (missus), to send], 1, the act of freeing from slavery; 2, the state of being freed from slavery.

man-u-mit (măn"ū-mĭt'), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -mitted, p.pr. -mitting], to free from slavery.

ma-nure (mä-nūr'), n. [<Fr. manœuvrer<L.L. manoperare<Lat. manu, by hand+operari, to work], the excreta of animals or birds, decayed vegetable matter, or certain minerals, used as fertilizers:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -nured (-nūrd'), p.pr. -nuring], to enrich, as a field, with fertilizing substances.

man-u-script (măn'ū-skrĭpt), adj. [<Lat. manu, by hand+scribere (scriptus), to write], written by hand:—n. 1, a book or paper written by hand; 2, a copy, in handwriting or typewriting, of an author's work, especially as submitted for printing or editorial consideration; 3, writing, as opposed to printing.—abbr. MS.; ms. [pl. MSS.; mss.].

Manx (măngks), adj. [<Scand.<Celt. name of island], relating to the Isle of Man, to its people, or to their native language, a dialect of Celtic: Manx cat, a breed of almost tailless domestic cats: —n. the Manx language: sing. and pl. a native, or natives, of the Isle of Man; also, the Manx people.

Manx-man (măngks'măn), n. [pl. -men (-mĕn)], [Manx+man], a man of Manx birth.

man-y (mĕn'ĭ), adj. [comp. more, superl. most], [<A.S. manig<O.Teut. source], numerous; great in number:—n. a great number; multitude.

man-y-plies (mĕn'ĭ-plīz"), n. [many+²ply], Zoöl., the third stomach of cud-chewing animals; the omasum (see ruminant, illus.).

man-za-ni-ta (măn"zä-nē'tä), n. [Sp., dim. of manzana, apple], any of several evergreen shrubs, or small trees, of the heath family (genus Arctostaphylos), bearing red berries and found chiefly in the western United States.

Ma-o-ri (mä'ō-rĭ; Colloq. mou'rĭ), n. [pl. -ris (-rĭz)], [nat. name], 1, a member of the aboriginal race of New Zealand; 2, the language of this race:—adj. pertaining to the Maoris or their language.

map (măp), n. [<L.L. mappa mundi, map of the world<Lat. mappa, napkin; because map was painted on a cloth], 1, a representation, usually on a flat surface, of the physical or political features of the earth or some portion of it; 2, a chart of the heavens; 3, any exact chart or delineation:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. mapped (măpt), p.pr. mapping], 1, to picture or lay down in a chart; 2, to plan in detail: usually with out; as, to map out a journey.

Syn. (see chart).

ma-ple (mā'pl), n. [<A.S. mapeltrēow, maple tree], any of a large genus (Acer) of trees, of many species and varieties, valued for their shade, for their wood, and, in some species, for the sap, which when boiled down becomes maple sirup and sugar.

ma-qui (mä'kē), n. [Sp.<nat. name in Chile], a shrub found in Chile from the bark of which are made strings for native musical instruments and from the berries of which a medicinal wine is prepared.

mar (mär), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. marred (märd), p.pr. marring], [<A.S. merran, to hinder], to spoil; disfigure; injure:—n. Rare, an injury; disfigurement.

Syn., v. injure, blemish, impair, deface, hurt, scratch.

Mar. abbr. March:—mar., 1, maritime; marine; 2, married (also, m.).

mar-a-bou (măr'ä-bōō), n. [Fr., prob.<Arab. murabit, hermit], 1, any of several species of Old World storks (especially Leptoptilus crumenifer), of which the soft under tail and under wing coverts, or feathers, are used for dress trimming: also called argala; 2, a plume from the marabou; 3, a delicate, exceptionally white, raw silk; 4, in Louisiana, a dark, reddish brown mulatto.

mar-a-nath-a (măr'ä-năth'ä), n. [<Aram. māran athā, our Lord has come, or<Aram. maranā 'thā, our Lord, come thou], among the early Christians, an invocation, "O Lord! come": often erroneously considered as forming a curse with anathema, which stands before it in 1 Cor. 16:22.

mar-a-schi-no (măr"ä-skē'nō), n. [It.<marasca, small, black cherry<amarasca<Lat. amarus, bitter], a delicate, alcoholic cordial made from cherries, especially from the marasca, a European variety, and flavored with the bruised kernels.

ma-ras-mus (mȧ-răz'mŭs), n. [< Gk. marainein, to wither], Med., emaciation; a gradual wasting away of the body.—adj. ma-ras'mic.

Mar-a-thon (măr'ȧ-thŏn), n. [Gk.], 1, the scene, in Greece, of a decisive battle (490 B. C.) in which the Athenians and Platæans defeated the Persians and saved Greece; 2, a long-distance foot race of 26 miles 385 yards: so called from the run of Pheidippides, who carried from Marathon to Athens the news of the Greek victory.

ma-raud (mȧ-rôd'), v.i. [< Fr. marauder, to play the rogue < maraud, a rogue], to rove or range in search of plunder:—v.t. to make an expedition against for plunder.—n. ma-raud'er.

mar-a-ve-di (măr"ȧ-vā'dĭ), n. [Sp. < Arab. Murābitūn, hermits: name of Moorish dynasty at Cordoba], 1, a gold coin of Moorish minting, current in Spain in the 11th and 12th centuries; 2, a later Spanish copper coin worth about a third of a cent.

mar-ble (măr'bl), n. [< Fr. marbre < Lat. marmor, marble], 1, a hard, metamorphic, crystalline limestone, found in various colors, due to impurities, but white when pure, and capable of taking a fine polish; 2, any substance like such stone in hardness, smoothness, or coldness; 3, a sculptured piece of such stone; 4, a small clay, wood, or glass ball used as a child's plaything: pl. 1, a collection of sculptures in marble; 2, a game played with small balls of clay, wood, or glass:—adj. 1, made of, covered with, or resembling, marble; 2, specifically, cold; hard; unfeeling:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -bled (-bld), p.pr. -bling], to stain in imitation of marble.—p.adj. mar'bled (-bld).—adj. mar'bly.

mar-ca-site (mär'kȧ-sīt), n. [< Fr. < L.L. marcasita], Mineral., 1, a pale yellow, crystalline mineral, native iron disulphide, used for making sulphuric acid: sometimes called white iron pyrites; 2, a piece of this mineral used as an ornament.

Mar-cel (mär-sĕl'), adj. [< name of originator], designating a style of waving the hair in parallel waves, or the waves so made:—n. a Marcel wave:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -celled (-sĕld'), p.pr. -celling], to wave (the hair) in this style. Also, mar-cel'.

[1]march (märch), n. [< Fr. marcher, to march], 1, a regular, measured step or walk, especially of soldiers; 2, a movement, as of troops, from one stopping place to another; also, the distance passed over in walking in such movement; 3, steady onward movement: Mus., a composition to accompany marching:—v.t. to cause to march, as troops:—v.i. to move with regular steps, or in military form.

March (märch), n. [O.F. < Lat. Martius (mensis), (month) of Mars, Roman god of war], the third month of the year, having 31 days.

mar-chion-ess (mär'shŭn-ĕs), n. [< L.L. marchionissa, fem. of marchio (-onis), captain of a march, a border county], the wife or widow of a marquis; a lady of the rank of a marquis: used in England instead of marquise.

march-pane (märch'pān"), n. [< Fr. massepain, a confection: source uncertain], a sweetmeat made of pounded almonds and sugar.

mar-co-ni-gram (mär-kō'nĭ-grăm), n. [< G. Marconi (1874–), It. inventor + Gk. gramma, letter], a message sent or received by Marconi's system of wireless telegraphy.

Mar-di gras (mär'dē grä'), [Fr. = fat Tuesday], Shrove Tuesday; the last day before Lent, celebrated in Rome, Paris, New Orleans, etc.

[1]mare (mâr), n. [< A.S. mere, mare], the female of the horse, and other equine animals: to ride Shanks's mare, to go afoot.

[2]mare (mâr), n. [A.S. = nightmare], 1, Obs., a hobgoblin supposed to bother sleepers; also, the nightmare; 2, a witch; specter.

ma-re (mā'rē; mä'rā), n. [pl. -ria (-rĭ-ȧ)], [Lat. = sea], Astron., a sea: used of certain dark areas of the moon's surface, formerly supposed to be seas.

ma-rem-ma (mȧ-rĕm'ȧ), n. [pl. -me (-ā)], [It. = seaside country], low, marshy, malarial land bordering the sea, especially in Italy.

mare's-nest (mârz'-nĕst"), n. something absurd that nevertheless is given credence at first; a spectacular hoax.

mare's-tail (mârz'-tāl"), n. 1, long, narrow, cirrus clouds spreading out in wisps; 2, an aquatic plant (Hippuris vulgaris) of the water milfoil family; 3, the horsetail (genus Equisetum).

Mar-fo-ri-o (mär-fō'rĭ-ō), n. [It.: perh. a family name], an ancient statue in Rome, on which, after the end of the 15th century, were pasted answers to the attacks contained in the slips pasted on the Pasquin, a statue at the other end of the city.

mar-gar-ic (mär-găr'ĭk), adj. [< Gk. margaritēs, pearl], Chem., designating, or pertaining to, a crystalline acid, probably a mixture of palmitic and stearic acids, found in certain lichens.

mar-ga-rin (mär'gȧ-rĭn), n. a white, waxy substance extracted from hog's lard; also, the fatty matter of certain vegetable oils, a mixture of stearin and palmitin, the purest being derived from olive oil: Chem., the glyceryl ester of margaric acid.

mar-ga-rine (mär'jĕr-ēn; -gȧ-rēn), n. a butter substitute prepared from certain animal and vegetable fats; oleomargarine.

marge (märj), n. [Fr. < Lat. margo (-inis), edge], Poet., the border, as of a river; margin.

mar-gent (mär'jĕnt), n. [var. of margin, q.v.], a margin; also, marginal comments: Archaic, brink; edge, as of the sea:—adj. marginal.

mar-gin (mär'jĭn), n. [< Lat. margo (marginis), edge], 1, a border; rim; edge; brink; 2, a limit; 3, an amount in reserve, as of money, time, or space: Print., the unprinted edge or border of a page; Com., 1, the difference between the cost and the selling price of an article; 2, money or other property deposited with a broker by a client to insure the broker against loss, as from a drop in the price of stocks, on transactions for the client's account: to buy (stock) on margin, to buy (a specified stock) through a broker, the client depositing a margin and assuming profits and losses, the broker paying the balance and reserving the right to sell in case the fall in the market price approaches the amount of the margin deposited:—v.t. 1, to furnish with a margin; 2, to enter, as notes, summaries, etc., upon the edge of a page; 3, to secure by a surplus.

Syn., n. reservation, provision, verge. (See border.)

mar-gin-al (mär'jĭ-nȧl), adj. pertaining to, or placed on, the edge or border.

mar-gi-na-li-a (mär"jĭ-nā'lĭ-ȧ), n.pl. notes written on the margins of pages.

mar-grave (mär'grāv), n. [< M.Du. markgraaf < mark, border province + graaf, a count], 1, in Germany until the early part of the 19th century, a prince with a rank equivalent to that of marquis; 2, originally, a lord of the marches, or border provinces.—n. fem. mar'gra-vine (mär'grȧ-vēn).

mar-gra-vi-ate (mär-grā'vĭ-āt), n. the district presided over by a margrave, or German marquis. Also, mar'gra-vate.

mar-gue-rite (mär"gē-rēt'; mär"gē-rēt'), n. [Fr. < Gk. margaritēs < margaron, pearl], the wild oxeye daisy, or the white garden and greenhouse daisy, of the composite family, bearing heads of white ray flowers and yellow central flowers.

mar-i-gold (măr'ĭ-gōld), n. [Mary (prob. the Virgin) + gold], any of several herbs of the composite family, with strongly scented leaves and showy yellow or orange flowers.

ma-ri-jua-na (mä"rē-hwä'nȧ), n. [< Mex. Sp. mariguana, marihuana, marijuana], the hemp plant (Cannabis sativa); also, its dried leaves and flowers, which are made into cigarettes containing a dangerous, habit-forming drug. Also, ma"ri-hua'na.

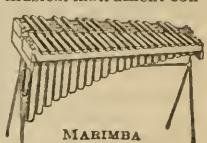
ma-rim-ba (mȧ-rĭm'bȧ), n. [< name of nat. Congo instrument], a musical instrument consisting of a series of bars of hard wood, graduated in length, and each provided with resonator, or sounding box, which are played upon with small wooden mallets.



MARIMBA

mar-i-nade (măr"ĭ-nād'), n. [Fr.], a pickle containing spices and wine.

mar-i-nate (măr'ĭ-nāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -nated, p.pr. -nating], [see marine], to pickle and preserve, as fish or meat; prepare by the use of marinade.

ma-rine (mȧ-rēn'), adj. [< Fr. marin < Lat. marinus < mare, sea], 1, pertaining to, living in, or formed by, the sea; as, marine plants; 2, having to do with navigation of the sea; as, marine charts; nautical; serving at sea; naval; 3, relating to commerce at sea; as, marine law:—n. 1, a soldier stationed on a warship; 2, on the continent, the executive department dealing with naval matters; 3, the collective shipping of a country; 4, a picture of a sea scene.

Syn., adj. nautical, naval. (See maritime.)

mar-i-ner (măr'ĭ-nĕr), n. one who aids in the navigation of a ship; one of the crew.

Ma-ri-ol-a-try (mā"rĭ-ŏl'ȧ-trĭ), n. [< Gk. Maria, Mary + latreia, service], worship of the Virgin Mary considered as being carried to the point of idolatry: often used opprobriously.—adj. Ma"ri-ol'a-trous.—n. Ma"ri-ol'a-ter.

mar-i-o-nette (măr"ĭ-ō-nĕt'), n. [< Fr. dim. of Marion < Marie, Mary: because name was first given to little figures of the Virgin Mary], a small figure in human form moved by strings or by the hand, as in a puppet show.

Mar-i-po-sa lil-y (măr"ĭ-pō'sə), [Sp. mariposa = butterfly], any of a genus (Calochortus) of western American plants of the lily family, bearing white, yellow, red, or light purple flowers suggestive of the tulip: also called Mariposa tulip (for colored illus. see flower).

mar-ish (măr'ĭsh), n. [< O.F. mareis < L.L. mariscus, marsh], Poet., a marsh or fen; a bog:—adj. Obs., Sc., or Dial., boggy; swampy.

mar-i-tal (măr'ĭ-tăl), adj. [< Lat. maritus, husband], concerning, or belonging to, a husband; pertaining to marriage or to the married state.

mar-i-time (măr'ĭ-tīm; -tĭm), adj. [< Lat. maritimus, of the sea < mare, sea], 1, living, or situated, near the sea; 2, connected with the sea in respect to navigation or trade.

Syn. marine, nautical, naval. Marine describes that found in, belonging to, or produced by, the sea; as, marine animals or plants. It is sometimes used in connection with naval affairs; as, marine stores; but it usually has to do with the shipping of goods at sea as distinguished from shipping on land; as, a marine engineer; marine insurance; or with things for use at sea, as a marine compass. Maritime is applied to places bordering on or near the sea; as, maritime states; or things connected with the sea; as, maritime law. Occasionally marine and maritime overlap; we say marine or maritime insurance, but more often marine; we say marine or maritime law, but more frequently maritime. Naval pertains sometimes to ships as used in commerce, but usually to a navy or that branch of government which directs a navy. Nautical pertains to sailors or the art of navigation; as, a nautical chart or almanac. The naval force of a nation is the complement of the military.

mar-jo-ram (măr'jō-răm), n. [< O.F. majorane < L.L. marjorana, marjoram], any of a genus (Origanum) of plants of the mint family, especially an aromatic species (O. majorana), usually called sweet marjoram: used as flavoring in cookery.

[1]mark (märk), n. [< A.S. mearc < mearcian, to mark < O.Teut. source], 1, the target at which one aims, as in shooting; an aim or goal; 2, a visible imprint, as a line, stain, scratch, written word, or the like; as, an ink mark; 3, a sign by which anything is known; a brand, label, stamp, trade-mark, or the like; 4, an indication; trait; symptom; distinguishing feature; as, a mark of intelligence; 5, a character made by one who cannot write his name; 6, a written or printed symbol; as, an exclamation mark; 7, a figure or letter indicating a student's grade; 8, high position; distinction; as, men of mark; 9, a boundary or limit: a set standard; as, to fall below the mark; 10, a line, object, or the like, serving to indicate position: Hist., in medieval England and Germany, the tract of land about a village; a political district: Naut., any of certain bits of leather, bunting, or the like, attached to a line, to indicate various depths in fathoms (see sounding line, illus.): Slang, one easily deceived or misled; usually, easy mark:—v.t. 1, to make a line, scratch, or character on; furnish with an identifying sign; 2, to characterize; identify or indicate, as by a sign; as, faith and courage mark the leader; 3, to single out or select, as by a sign; destine; 4, to notice; observe; 5, to rank or grade, as examination papers; 6, to set apart, as by a boundary; form by drawing lines; usually with off or out; as, to mark out a tennis court; 7, to register or keep account of, as the points in a game: Com., to put a price upon; supply with a tag or sign indicating price:—v.i. 1, to notice; observe critically; 2, to make a mark; 3, to keep score, as in a game.

[2]mark (märk), n. [< L.L. or O.Teut.], 1, a former unit of weight for gold and silver, generally equal to eight ounces; 2, a former silver coin of Scotland; 3, a German coin normally worth 23.8 cents; also, the gold monetary unit of Germany; 4, a markka.

Mark (märk), n. [< Lat. Marcus], 1, Bib., the writer of the second Gospel, John Mark, a nephew of Peter; also, the Gospel by him; 2, in Arthurian romance, a king of Cornwall, husband of Iseult.

marked (märkt), p.adj. [see [1]mark], distinct; noticeable; conspicuous.—adv. mark'ed-ly.

mark-er (mär'kĕr), n. 1, one who keeps the score or tally in a game; also, a counter used in card playing and other games; 2, an instrument for making a line, crease, scratch, or symbol; 3, an object serving as a guide, sign, or memorial; also, something used to keep a place in a book.

mar-ket (mär'kĕt; -kĭt), n. [O.N.F. < Lat. mercatus < mercari, to trade], 1, a public or private place for the sale or purchase of merchandise, especially of meat, fresh vegetables and fruits, etc; 2, a region or country where anything can be sold; opportunity for the sale of anything having money value: Com., 1, state of demand as shown by rate or price; 2, the place in which buyers and sellers transact business; as, the stock market; 3, the economic organization which deals with buying and selling: market price, the price commodities or property will bring when offered for public sale:—v.i. to deal in a public place where provisions are exposed for sale; buy or sell goods or provisions:—v.t. to offer for sale, or to sell, in a public place; find a purchaser for.—n. mar'ket-er.

mar-ket-a-ble (mär'kĕt-ə-bl), adj. 1, salable because fit or suitable to be offered for sale, or because of demand; 2, pertaining to, or current in, markets.—n. mar"ket-a-bil'i-ty.

Mark-graf (märk'gräf"), n. [pl. -grafen (-grä'fĕn)], [Ger.: see margrave], a margrave; a German nobleman equal in rank to a marquis.

mark-ka (märk'kä), n. [Finnish < Sw. mark, mark], the monetary unit of Finland, formerly equivalent to about 20 cents, since 1926 to about 2½ cents; also, a coin of Finland, worth a markka, formerly of silver, now of nickeled bronze. Also, mark.

marks-man (märks'măn), n. [pl. -men (-mĕn)], [mark + man], one skilled in target shooting; one who shoots well.—n. marks'man-ship.

[1]marl (märl), v.t. [< marline, q.v.], Naut., to bind or fasten, as the end of a rope, with a marline.

[2]marl (märl), n. [< O.F. marle < L.L. margila, dim. of marga, marl], an earthy deposit of clay or sand, containing much lime, used as a fertilizer, and sometimes for making bricks:—v.t. to fertilize (a field) with this substance.—adj. marl'y.

MARLINE
1, marline; 2, marline on marled rope end; 3, marling hitch.

mar-line (mär'lĭn), n. [< Du. marlijn < marren, to bind + lijn, line], Naut., a loosely twisted, two-strand cord used to bind the end of a rope or cable, such a binder being called a seizing.

mar-line-spike (mär'lĭn-spīk"), n. [marline + spike], Naut., a piece of iron tapering to a point, used as a lever in marling, for opening or separating the strands of a rope in splicing, etc. Also, mar'lin-spike".

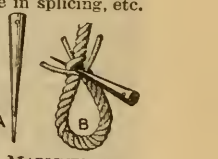
mar-ma-lade (mär'mə-lād), n. [< Fr. marmelade < Port. marmelada < marmelo, quince < Gk. melimēlon < meli, honey + mēlon, apple], a thick preserve of the consistency of jam, made from the pulp and, often, the rind of fruit, boiled together with sugar.



MARLINESPIKE
A, marlinespike; B, marlinespike forcing open strands of rope.

Mar-mi-on (mär'mĭ-ŏn), n. [source uncertain], an English knight, hero of Sir Walter Scott's poem of the same name.

mar-mo-re-al (mär-mō'rē-ăl), adj. [< Lat. marmor, marble], pertaining to, resembling, made of, or having the properties of, marble.—adj. mar-mo're-an.

mar-mo-set (mär'mō-zĕt"), n. [O.F. = grotesque image], Zoöl., any of various small Central and South American monkeys, with soft fur and long, hairy, nonprehensile tails (see Primates, illus.)

mar-mot (mär'mŏt), n. [< Fr. marmotte, perh. < Romansh murmont < Lat. mus (muris), mouse + montis, of the mountain], Zoöl., any of a genus of coarse-furred, stout-bodied, hibernating, burrowing rodents, of which the American species is known as woodchuck or ground hog (see woodchuck, illus.).

Mar-o-nite (măr'ō-nīt), n. [< Maron, founder of sect], Eccl. Hist., a member of a group of Syrian Christians who live near Mount Lebanon.

[1]ma-roon (mə-rōōn'), n. [< Fr. marron: perh. corr. of Sp. cimarrón, wild], 1, formerly, a runaway slave in the West Indies, or the descendant of such a person, living in the open; 2, one who is left alone or abandoned on an island or lonely coast:—v.t. to place and leave alone on a desert island:—v.i. 1, in the southern United States, to go on a long picnic or camping trip; 2, to live as a fugitive slave.

[2]ma-roon (mə-rōōn'), n. [< Fr. marron < Vt. marrone, chestnut], 1, a dark brownish red; 2, (also, marron), a kind of explosive firework; 3, (also, marron), a large, sweet chestnut:—adj. of a brownish red color.

mar-plot (mär′plŏt″), n. [mar+plot], one who by meddling interference spoils some plan.

marque (märk), n. [Fr. < Prov'l marca < marcar, to seize as a pledge], Obs., seizure in reprisal, by either of two nations at war, of the ships of the other: letters of marque (and reprisal), a license given by a government permitting seizure of foreign ships or goods in reprisal; later, a license to a private individual to fit out an armed vessel for privateering.

mar-quee (mär-kē′), n. [< marquees, Eng. spelling of Fr. marquise, erroneously regarded as pl. of marquee: so called because it was to shelter a noble lady or marquise], 1, a large field tent: often used for outdoor entertainments; 2, a window awning; 3, an awning raised as a temporary shelter from the curb to the door of a dwelling or public building.

mar-quet-ry (mär′kĕt-rĭ), n. [< Fr. marquetrie < marqueter, to variegate], woodwork, as furniture or floors, inlaid with various colored woods, ivory, metal, mother-of-pearl, etc.

mar-quis (märʹkwĭs), n. [< O.F. marchis, ruler of a march, or border county], in certain European countries, a nobleman ranking next below a duke and next above an earl or count. Also, mar′quess.

mar-quis-ate (märʹkwĭs-āt), n. the office or territory of a marquis.

mar-quise (mär-kēz′), n. 1, the wife or widow of a French marquis, a woman of similar position in the British peerage being called marchioness; 2, a hood or awning, usually of iron and glass, over a house door; 3, a marquee; 4, in jewelry, a gem cut, or a ring having gems set, in a double-pointed oval form.

mar-qui-sette (mär″kē-zĕt′; -kwĭ-zĕt′), n. [Fr.], a sheer, cotton or silk material, similar to scrim, with an open, square mesh.

mar-riage (märʹĭj), n. [see 1marry], 1, the act of legally uniting a man and woman in wedlock; the wedding ceremony; 2, the state of being wedded; the relation existing between husband and wife; 3, figuratively, any close union; 4, in some card games, as pinochle, the combination of the king and queen of the same suit.—adj. mar′riage-a-ble.

Syn. matrimony, wedlock, wedding, espousal, nuptials. Matrimony names the state of those united in the relationship of husband and wife. Marriage, also used to name this state, is used chiefly of the act or ceremony of joining two persons. Wedlock denotes the married state. Wedding may name the marriage ceremony only, or the marriage together with the festivities that accompany it. Nuptials is a more formal and less familiar word for wedding.

mar-ron (mă″rôńʹ), n. [Fr. < It. marrone, chestnut], 1, a large, sweet European chestnut used extensively in French sweetmeats; 2, a kind of explosive firework. Also, ma-roon′.

mar-ron gla-cé (mă″rôńʹ glă″sā′), [pl. marrons glacés (mă″rôńʹ glă″sā′)], [Fr. = frosted chestnut], a candied chestnut.

mar-row (märʹō), n. [< A.S. mearg, marrow < O.Teut. source], 1, the fatty tissue that fills the cavities and canals of the bones; 2, hence, the real meaning or significance of anything; the pith: vegetable marrow, a kind of squash.—adj. mar′row-y.

mar-row-bone (märʹō-bōn″), n. [marrow+bone], 1, a bone containing marrow, especially in sufficient quantity to be used in cookery; 2, usually pl., the knees: used humorously.

mar-row-fat (märʹō-făt″), n. [marrow+fat], a late, large variety of cultivated pea: also called marrowfat pea.

1mar-ry (märʹĭ), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -ried (-ĭd), p.pr. -rying], [< Fr. marier < Lat. maritare < maritus, husband], 1, to perform the ceremony of uniting as husband and wife; 2, to espouse; take in marriage; 3, to dispose of in wedlock: often with off; 4, to bring together in close union; as, to marry the deed to the word: Naut., 1, to join (ropes) end to end without increasing the diameter at the joining; 2, to place (ropes) alongside of each other so that both may be hauled on at once:—v.i. to enter into matrimony.

2mar-ry (märʹĭ), interj. [< Mary, the Virgin], Archaic, indeed! forsooth! a mild oath expressing surprise or affirmation.

Mars (märz), n. [Lat.], Rom. Myth., the god of war: identified with Greek Ares; Astron., the planet whose orbit lies next outside the earth's in the solar system: notable for its apparent size when nearest the earth and for the redness of its light (see planet): Mars' Hill, the Areopagus, a hill near Athens.

Mar-seil-laise (mär″sĕ-lāzʹ; märʺsâ″yāz′), n. [fem. of Fr. adj. marseillais, pertaining to Marseilles, a city of France < Fr. Marseille < Lat. Massilia, early name of city], the French national anthem, composed by Rouget de l' Isle, an officer at Strasbourg, in 1792: so called because first sung during the march of the Revolutionists from Marseilles to Paris.

mar-seilles (mär-sālzʹ), n. any of certain ribbed or striped double cotton fabrics.

marsh (märsh), n. [< A.S. mersc < O.Teut. source], a swampy tract of land; a fen; morass.

mar-shal (märʹshăl), n. [< O.F. mareschal < Frankish Lat. mariscalcus < O.H.G. marahscalh, horse servant < O.Teut. source], 1, an official authorized to superintend ceremonies, direct the order of procession, regulate order and rank, etc.: in medieval times, an official of high rank in the king's household; 2, in the French and the German armies, the highest officer: called in full field marshal; 3, locally in the United States, any of various police officials, especially an officer having duties resembling those of a sheriff:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -shaled or -shalled (-shăld), p.pr. -shaling or -shalling]; 1, to arrange or dispose in order, as military forces, facts, etc.; 2, to lead; manage: Her., to combine (two or more coats of arms) upon a single shield; also, to arrange (charges and accessories) on an escutcheon:—v.i. to assemble.—n. mar′shal-ship.—n. mar′shal-cy.

marsh gas Chem., a gaseous hydrocarbon, the principal constituent of the gases which form in marshes and swamps from decomposing vegetable matter; methane.

marsh hawk a large hawk (Circus hudsonius) living in open, swampy places and feeding chiefly on mice, snakes, frogs, etc.

marsh hen any of various rail-like birds, as the gallinule, rail, or coot; a mud hen.

marsh mal-low 1, a perennial wild herb (Althæa officinalis) of the mallow family, about two to three feet high, having a thick, fleshy root, the mucilaginous extract of which is used in medicine and confections; 2, (often, marshmallow), a confection made from the root of this herb, or from substitutes for it.

marsh mar-i-gold a marsh plant (Caltha palustris) of the crowfoot family, with round or kidney-shaped leaves, bearing yellow flowers similar to the buttercup: in the United States, sometimes incorrectly called cowslip.

marsh-y (märʹshĭ), adj. [comp. -ier, superl. -iest], [see marsh], 1, swampy; 2, pertaining to, or growing in, swamps.—n. marsh′i-ness.

mar-su-pi-al (mär-sūʹpĭ-ăl), adj. [see marsupium], 1, pertaining to a marsupium, or pouch; 2, having a pouch: used of the members of a low order (Marsupialia) of mammals, including the opossum, kangaroo, wombat, wallaby, etc., that carry their immature young in a marsupium, or external pouch:—n. a marsupial animal.

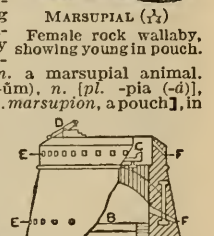
MARSUPIAL (1/8)
Female rock wallaby, showing young in pouch.

mar-su-pi-um (mär-sūʹpĭ-ŭm), n. [pl. -pia (-ă)], [Lat. < Gk. marsupion, a pouch], in female marsupials, such as the kangaroo or wallaby, an external abdominal pouch for carrying the immature young.

Mar-sy-as (märʹsĭ-ăs), n. [< Gk.], Gk. Myth., a Phrygian satyr and flute player who, challenging Apollo to a musical contest, was defeated, and punished for his presumption by being flayed alive.



MARTELLO TOWER
With section cut away: A, steps to intermediate landing, B; C, circular track on upper landing, on which cannon, D, can be turned; E, E, E, outer ends of rows of loopholes through the walls, shown in section at F, F, F.

mart (märt), n. [< Du. markt < Lat. mercatus < mercari, to trade], Poet., a market; a place for trade.

Mar-tel-lo tow-er (mär-tĕlʹō), [corr. of Cape Mortella, Corsica, site of such tower, through association with It. martello, hammer, with which alarm was struck at the approach of an enemy], a small circular tower or fort, with guns so placed that they can be trained in any direction.

mar-ten (mär'tĕn), n. [<O.F. (peau) martrine, marten's (fur) <martre, a marten <O.Teut. source], 1, any of several small carnivorous, arboreal mammals (genus Mustela) like, but larger than, a weasel, and akin to the sable; 2, the valuable fur of the animal.

MARTEN (2/9)

mar-tens-ite (mär'tĕnz-īt), n. [<A. Martens, Ger. metallurgist], Metal., a constituent of hardened steels, to which their hardness is due.

Mar-tha (mär'thä), n. [<Heb.], 1, Bib., sister of Lazarus and Mary (Luke 10:40), who, while Mary talked with Jesus, went about the household tasks; 2, hence, a woman who, in a group of enthusiasts, attends to the homely, practical work.

mar-tial (mär'shăl), adj. [<Lat. martialis, of Mars; warlike], 1, of or pertaining to war; 2, military; as, courts-martial; 3, brave; warlike: martial law, law enforced by the military power in time of emergency, such as war or riot.—adv. mar'tial-ly.

Mar-tian (mär'shăn), adj. [<Lat. Martius, of Mars], 1, of or pertaining to Mars, god of war; 2, pertaining to the planet Mars:—n. a hypothetical inhabitant of the planet Mars.

mar-tin (mär'tĭn), n. [Fr.<Lat. Martinus, personal name: perh. because bird crosses France about St. Martin's day], Ornith., any of various swallows, the most common species in the United States, often called purple martin, having bluish black plumage.

mar-ti-net (mär"tĭ-nĕt'; mär'tĭ-nĕt"), n. [<Martinet, Fr. drillmaster under Louis XIV], one who requires and enforces strict obedience in all details of discipline: usually derogatory.

mar-tin-gale (mär'tĭn-gāl; -tĭng-), n. [Fr.: source uncertain], 1, a strap in a horse's harness, connecting the bridle or reins to the breast strap or girth, to keep the horse's head down (see harness, illus.); 2, any system of trying to recover betting losses by progressively increasing the stakes: Naut., 1, a rope or small chain for staying the end of the jib boom or the flying jib boom to the dolphin striker; 2, sometimes, a dolphin striker (see bowsprit, illus.). Also, mar'tin-gal.

Mar-tin-mas (mär'tĭn-măs), n. [<St. Martin +Mass], Eccl., a feast day held in honor of Saint Martin, November 11.

mar-tyr (mär'tẽr), n. [<Gk. martus (-uros), a witness], 1, one who accepts death in preference to renunciation of a faith, cause, or principle; 2, one who suffers keenly or constantly, especially for a cause or principle: Colloq., a constant sufferer, as from disease or the like:—v.t. 1, to put to death for adherence to some faith or cause; 2, to persecute; torture.

mar-tyr-dom (mär'tẽr-dŭm), n. voluntary death or suffering for the sake of a faith.

mar-tyr-ize (mär'tẽr-īz), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -ized (-īzd), p.pr. -izing], to make a martyr of:—v.i. to become a martyr.—n. mar"tyr-i-za'tion.

mar-tyr-ol-o-gy (mär"tẽr-ŏl'ō-jĭ), n. [pl. -gies (-jĭz)], [<Gk. martus (-uros), witness+-logia, a study], 1, a register or official catalog of martyrs; 2, the history of religious martyrs.

mar-vel (mär'vĕl), n. [<O.F. merveille <Lat. mirabilia, wonderful things], an object of surprise or astonishment; a prodigy:—v.i. [p.t. and p.p. -veled or -velled (-vĕld), p.pr. -veling or -velling], to feel astonishment; wonder.

mar-vel-ous (mär'vĕl-ŭs), adj. causing wonder; extraordinary; incredible. Also, mar'vel-lous.—adv. mar'vel-ous-ly.—n. mar'vel-ous-ness.

Marx-i-an (märk'sĭ-ăn), adj. [<proper name], of or pertaining to Karl Marx (1818–83), a German socialist, or his theories.

Ma-ry (mā'rĭ; mâr'ĭ), n. [<Heb. Miryām, name of sister of Moses], Bib., 1, the mother of Jesus: also called the Virgin Mary; 2, Mary of Bethany, the sister of Lazarus and Martha (Luke 10:39; John 11); 3, Mary Magdalen (Luke 8:2; John 20).

mas-car-a (măs-kăr'ä), n. [perh.<Sp. máscara, mask], a preparation for darkening the eyelashes and eyebrows:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -caraed (-kăr'ädd), p.pr., -caraing)], to darken with mascara.

mas-cle (măs'kl), n. [source uncertain], Her., a bearing in the form of a hollow lozenge (see heraldry, illus.).

mas-cot (măs'kŏt), n. [<Fr. mascotte, perh. <Prov'l masco, witch], a person, animal, or object supposed to bring good luck. Also, mas'cotte.

mas-cu-line (măs'kū-lĭn), adj. [<Lat. masculinus <masculus<mas, the male], 1, of or pertaining to a man; manly; strong; virile; mannish; 2, in versification, ending with a stressed syllable: said of a line: Gram., designating the gender of words that denote males, and of other words classed with them.

mas-cu-lin-i-ty (măs"kū-lĭn'ĭ-tĭ), n. the quality or state of being manlike.

mash (măsh), n. [<A.S. māsc-, mixture], 1, in brewing and distilling, a mixture of ground grain, malted or otherwise prepared, with water; 2, a warm mixture of bran and water fed to horses or other animals; 3, any soft, pulpy mass:—v.t. 1, to mix with hot water, as malt, in brewing; 2, to crush into a soft, pulpy state: Slang [perh. a different word], to stir to sentimental affection for oneself.

mash-er (măsh'ẽr), n. one who or that which mashes: Slang, a man who tries to strike up an acquaintance with women unknown to him.

mash-ie (măsh'ĭ), n. [pl. -ies (-ĭz)], [perh. corr. of Fr. massue, club], an iron-headed golf club with a deep, short, considerably inclined face: used generally for approach strokes. Also, mash'y.

mas-jid (mŭs'jĭd), n. [see mosque], a Mohammedan place of worship; a mosque. Also, mus'jid.

mask (măsk), n. [<Fr. masque<Sp. máscara, a mask; masquerader], 1, a full or partial cover for the face in order to disguise or protect it; as, a gas mask; 2, a cast or model of the face done in plaster or wax, as after death; also, a representation of a face, worn by actors; 3, anything that conceals identity; a pretense; 4, (also, masque), a masquerade; revel; 5, a kind of drama, popular in the 16th and 17th centuries: usually spelled masque (which see); 6, one who wears a mask; a masquerader; a masker:—v.t. 1, to cover, as the face, with a mask; 2, to conceal; disguise; as, to mask a purpose: Mil., 1, to conceal, as batteries; 2, to employ troops in such manner as to conceal (a main operation).—n. mask'er.

mas-ka-longe (măs'kä-lŏnj; măs"kä-lŏnj'), n. [see muskellunge], a large North American fish; a pike. See mus'kel-lunge, Pfd. S.

masked (măskt), p.adj. [see mask], 1, wearing a cover over the face; 2, concealed; hidden; disguised: masked ball, a ball at which masks are worn.

mas-och-ism (măz'ŏk-ĭzm; mä'sō-kĭzm), n. [<L. von Sacher-Masoch (1835–95), Austrian writer], a sex perversion in which one derives pleasure from suffering or humiliation at the hands of another: cf. sadism.—adj. mas"o-chis'tic.

ma-son (mā'sn), n. [<O.F. maçon, mason], a builder or worker in stone, brick, or the like; a layer of stone or brick in construction work: Mason, a member of the society of Freemasons:—v.t. to build or strengthen with stone, brick, or the like.

Ma-son and Dix-on's line (dĭk'snz), the southern boundary of Pennsylvania: so called from two Englishmen who surveyed it (1763–67), and notable as part of the boundary line between the free and the slave States.

Ma-son-ic (mä-sŏn'ĭk), adj. relating to the Freemasons, or their society or rites.

ma-son-ry (mā'sn-rĭ), n. [pl. -ries (-rĭz)], 1, the occupation of a builder in stone, brick, etc.; 2, that which is built of such material: Masonry, the institutions, work, and practices of the Freemasons.

Ma-so-ra (mä-sō'rä), n. [<Heb. māsōreth, prob. =bond], 1, the body of early Hebrew tradition as to the correct text of the Old Testament; 2, the critical notes compiled by Jewish scholars before the tenth century in which this tradition is preserved. Also, Ma-so'rah.—adj. Mas"o-ret'ic (măs'ō-rĕt'ĭk).

masque (măsk), n. [Fr.: see mask], 1, a masquerade: 2, a form of dramatic spectacle, popular in the 16th and 17th centuries, usually on a mythological or allegorical theme, and embodying pageantry, music, and dancing; 3, the text, usually poetic, of such a presentation. Also, mask.

mas-quer-ade (măs"kẽr-ād'), n. [<Sp. mascarada<máscara, mask], 1, a revel; a ball or festive gathering where masks are worn; 2, an acting or living under false pretenses; 3, a disguise:—v.i. [p.t. and p.p. -aded, p.pr. -ading], to cover with a mask or disguise:—v.i. 1, to take part in a ball where the persons present are disguised; 2, to take the part of another for amusement or deceit; 3, to make a false appearance.—n. mas"quer-ad'er.

Mass (măs), n. [<A.S. mæsse<vulgar Lat. messa <eccl. Lat. missa<mittere, to send], 1, in liturgical churches, the celebration of the Holy Communion, or Eucharist; 2, the form of service for this; 3, the sacrament itself; 4, a feast of the church: obsolete except in compounds; as, Michael*mas*; Christ*mas*: Mus., the musical setting for the words of the eucharistic service: High Mass, celebration of the Eucharist at the high altar, with music and incense, and with a deacon and subdeacon to assist the priest: Low Mass, celebration of the Eucharist by one priest without music or incense.

mass (mȧs), n. [< Fr. masse < Lat. massa, prob. < Gk. maza, barley cake < massein, to knead], 1, a quantity of matter or aggregation of things united into one body; 2, a large quantity or number; as, a mass of corrections; 3, bulk; size; 4, the main part: Phys., the quantity of matter in a body measured by its resistance to change of motion, or, practically, by comparing its weight with that of a standard body; inertia: the masses, the common people:—v.t. to collect into a lump or body; arrange in close relation; as, to mass shrubbery:—v.i. to make or form into a lump or whole; gather into a compact group.

Syn., n. amount, bulk, total, agglomeration, body.

Mass. abbr. official abbreviation for the state of Massachusetts.

mas-sa-cre (mȧs′ȧ-kẽr), n. [< O.F. maçacre, slaughter; shambles], the killing of many people with violence and cruelty; indiscriminate slaughter:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -cred (-kẽrd), p.pr. -cring], to slaughter in great numbers.—n. mas′sa-crer (-krẽr).

Syn., n. butchery, slaughter, murder. (See carnage.)

mas-sage (mȧ-säzh′), n. [< Fr. masser, to massage, perh. < Port. amassar, to knead], Med., a method of remedial treatment consisting of rubbing or kneading the body:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -saged (-säzhd′), p.pr. -saging], to treat by this method.

mas-se-ter (mȧ-sē′tẽr), n. [< Gk. masētēr, chewer < masasthai, to chew], Anat., one of the large paired muscles which raise the lower jaw.

mas-seur (mȧ′sûr′), n. [pl. -seurs (-sûrz′; -sûr′)], [Fr.: see massage], a man who massages, —n.fem. mas″seuse′ (mȧ″söz′), [pl. masseuses (-söz′)].

mas-si-cot (mȧs′ĭ-kŏt), n. [Fr.], lead monoxide: a reddish yellow mineral used in paints as a pigment and drier.

mas-sif (mȧs′ĭf; mȧ″sēf′), n. [Fr. = massive], a thickly wooded hill or the like, shutting out a view beyond: Geol., 1, the principal mass of a mountain or relatively distinct group of mountains; 2, a single unit or block of the earth's surface which has slid or otherwise moved as a whole; a fault block.

mas-sive (mȧs′ĭv), adj. [< Fr. massif < masse: see mass], 1, weighty; bulky; substantial; hence, 2, imposing; impressive; 3, having to do with the whole mass; Mineral., irregular in form, though sometimes of crystalline structure: distinguished from amorphous,—adv. mas′sive-ly.—n. mas′sive-ness.

Syn. bulky, ponderous, solid, substantial, large, unwieldy.—Ant. flimsy, unsubstantial, light, frail.

mass meet-ing a general assembly of people, as for a public discussion.

mass-y (mȧs′ĭ), adj. [comp. -ier, superl. -iest], [see mass], consisting of a mass; heavy; bulky; ponderous.—n. mass′i-ness.

[1]mast (mȧst), n. [< A.S. mæst, mast < O.Teut. source], 1, a spar; a long, round iron tube or piece of timber raised upright on the keel, through the decks, of a vessel to support the sails; 2, any upright pole, as the main post of a derrick: before the mast, as a common sailor: from the fact that living quarters on shipboard, except for the officers, were formerly forward.

[2]mast (mȧst), n. [< A.S. mæst, mast (of beech) < W.G.], nuts, as of the oak, beech, chestnut, etc., especially when used as fodder for swine, etc.

mas-ter (mȧs′tẽr; Br. mäs′tẽr), n. [< A.S. mægester and O.F. maistre < Lat. magister, master], 1, a male person who rules or commands others; an employer; director; owner of a slave or of a beast; 2, a head of a household, college, school, or the like; 3, a person to whom an apprentice is bound; hence, one able to train others in skilled work; a skilled workman; expert; also, a craftsman, as a plumber, carpenter, or the like, who is in business for himself and employs others; 4, a winner in a contest; one who gets the upper hand; 5, a great artist: Naut., the commander (of a merchant vessel); Law, an officer of court appointed to assist the judge in various ways; as, a master in chancery: Master, 1, one who holds a university degree ranking above bachelor and below doctor; 2, a title used before the names of boys; 3, an official or legal title; as, Master of the Hounds:—v.t. 1, to overcome; conquer; tame; 2, to rule; direct; 3, to understand thoroughly; excel in, as a language:—adj. principal; controlling; characteristic of the authority, power, skill, etc., of a master: Mech., designating a mechanism controlling other mechanisms.

mas-ter-at-arms (mȧs′tẽr-ăt′ẽrmz′), n. [pl. masters-at-arms (-tẽrz′)], Nav., on a warship, a petty officer responsible for discipline.

mas-ter build-er 1, a contractor; 2, one who directs building operations.

mas-ter-ful (mȧs′tẽr-fo͝ol), adj. 1, showing power or ability to control; inclined to be domineering; 2, indicating adeptness, or mastery, as in art, science, or the like.—adv. mas′ter-ful-ly.

Syn. domineering, imperious, lordly, dictatorial.

mas-ter key a key that will open several locks, or all the locks in a given building.

mas-ter-ly (mȧs′tẽr-lĭ), adj. characteristic of a chief or expert:—adv. in the manner of, or with the skill of, an expert.—n. mas′ter-li-ness.

mas-ter-piece (mȧs′tẽr-pēs″), n. [master+piece], 1, a thing which surpasses in excellence everything else done by the maker; 2, anything made with extraordinary skill.

mas-ter-ship (mȧs′tẽr-shĭp), n. [master+-ship], 1, dignity or office of a chief; 2, control; dominion; 3, expert skill.

mas-ter-sing-er (mȧs′tẽr-sĭng″ẽr), n. [transl. of Meistersinger, q.v.], a member of a guild of musicians, originally founded in the 14th century, which flourished in Germany, particularly in the 16th century. See Meis′ter-sing″er, Pfd. S.

mas-ter-y (mȧs′tẽr-ĭ), n. [pl. -ies (-iz)], [see master], 1, dominion; mastership; 2, superiority or triumph in war or competition; 3, state of having acquired skill; intellectual command.

Syn. ascendancy, supremacy, victory, rule, sway.

mast-head (mȧst′hĕd″), n. [[1]mast+head], Naut., the top of a lower mast; hence, the topmost point of a mast to which a flag is raised:—v.t. 1, to punish by sending to the top of the mast; 2, to raise to the top of the mast, as a flag.

mas-tic (mȧs′tĭk), n. [Fr. < L.L. mastichum < Gk. mastikhē, gum resin], 1, a small evergreen tree (Pistacia lentiscus) of the cashew family; also, 2, a yellowish brown resin obtained from this tree: used in making varnish, chewing gum, incense, etc., and as an astringent; 3, a quick-setting, pasty cement.

mas-ti-cate (mȧs′tĭ-kāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -cated, p.pr. -cating], [< L.L. masticare (-atus), to chew], 1, to grind with the teeth; chew; 2, to reduce to a paste or pulp by grinding.—n. mas′ti-ca″tor.—n. mas″ti-ca′tion.—adj. mas′ti-ca-to-ry.

mas-tiff (mȧs′tĭf), n. [< O.F. mastin < Lat. mansuetus, tame < manus, hand + suetus, accustomed], one of a breed of large, courageous, and powerful dogs, valued chiefly as watchdogs.

mas-to-don (mȧs′tō-dŏn), n. [< Gk. mastos, breast +odous (odontos), tooth], Zoöl., any of several species of large, extinct elephants (chiefly genus Mammut).

MASTODON
A, mastodon, restored; B, a molar tooth; C, side view of skull.

mas-toid (mȧs′toid), adj. [< Gk. mastos, breast+eidos, shape], Anat., 1, nipple-shaped; specifically, 2, designating a projection of the temporal bone of the skull behind the ear, often called mastoid bone:—n. the mastoid bone (see cranium, illus.).—adj. mas-toi′dal (-toi′dăl).

mas-toid-i-tis (mȧs″toid-ī′tĭs), n. Pathol., inflammation in the temporal mastoid process.

mas-tur-ba-tion (mȧs″tûr-bā′shŭn), n. [< Lat. masturbation], sexual self-abuse; onanism.—v.i. and v.t. mas′tur-bate.—n. mas′tur-ba″tor.

ma-su-ri-um (mȧ-zū′rĭ-ŭm), n. [< Masuria, East Prussia, where Russians were defeated], Chem., a rare metallic element [symbol Ma].

[1]mat (măt), n. [< A.S. matt < L.L. matta, mat], 1, a flat piece of coarse woven fabric, made of straw, grass, or the like, and used for a covering; specifically, such a fabric placed before a door for wiping the feet, or an ornamental article on which to place things at table; 2, anything thickly overgrown or entangled, as weeds:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. matted, p.pr. matting], to mass, knot, or twist together:—v.i. to become tangled.

[2]mat (măt), adj. [Fr. = dull: exhausted], dull, lusterless, but uniform: said of a surface and of colors:—n. 1, a border of unburnished gold or of white pasteboard, or the like, for a picture; 2, a dull finish on a gilded or painted surface: in painting, a dull surface of paint spread evenly: also, matte; 3, the tool used in producing this effect:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. matted, p.pr. matting], to produce a dull surface upon; frost (glass).

mat-a-dor (măt′ȧ-dōr; -dôr), n. [Sp. < Lat. mactator < mactare, to kill], 1, the man chosen to kill the bull in a bullfight; 2, one of the three principal cards in the games of omber and quadrille; 3, a special game played with dominoes. Also, mat'a-dore.

[1]match (măch), n. [< A.S. gemæcca, a companion], 1, anything which agrees with, or is exactly like, another thing; 2, an equal; one able to cope with another; 3, a game or contest; 4, marriage; 5, one to be gained in marriage: match play, Golf, a form of competition in which the result is decided by the number of holes won: distinguished from medal play:—v.t. 1, to marry; 2, to compete with successfully; 3, to bring an equal against; as, none matched his good fortune; 4, to suit; 5, to get a counterpart of, or the equal of:—v.i. 1, to mate; 2, to agree with, or be like, each other.

[2]match (măch), n. [< O.F. mesche, wick], 1, a slender piece of wood tipped with material that is easily ignited by friction: now almost universally used for starting fires; 2, a fuse.

match-less (măch'lĕs), adj. [see [1]match], not capable of being equaled; peerless; unparalleled: Obs., unlike.

match-lock (măch'lŏk"), n. [[2]match + [2]lock], an old kind of musket, fired by applying a lighted match or fuse to the powder in the pan.

[1]match-mak-er (măch'māk"ĕr), n. [[1]match + make], one who seeks to arrange marriages for others, especially by scheming.—adj. and n. match'mak"ing.

[2]match-mak-er (măch'māk"ĕr), n. [[2]match + make], one who manufactures matches.—n. match'mak"ing.

[1]mate (māt), n. [< checkmate < O.F. eschec et mat, checkmate < Pers. shāh māt, the king is dead], in chess, the act of checkmating an opponent's king, or putting it into such position that it cannot escape; also, the condition of the king thus checkmated:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. mated, p.pr. mating], to checkmate: Obs., to defeat; baffle.

[2]mate (māt), n. [prob. < M.L.G. mate < gemate < O.Teut. source], 1, a companion or associate; fellow worker; helper: often in compounds; as, class*mate;* 2, a peer; an equal; 3, spouse; also, the male or female of a pair of animals for breeding: Naut., a ship's officer ranking below the captain; Nav., a petty officer:—v.t. and v.i. [p.t. and p.p. mated, p.pr. mating], 1, to match; 2, to marry; of animals, to pair.

ma-té (mä'tā; măt'ā), n. [< Sp. mate < nat. mati, tea], a South American plant (Ilex paraguayensis), the dried leaves of which are used, especially in Paraguay, in making an aromatic, stimulating drink; also, the drink. Also called Paraguay tea. Also, ma'te.

mat-e-lote (măt'ē-lōt), n. [Fr. < matelot, sailor], 1, a stew made of fish, served with a sauce of wine flavored with onions, etc.; 2, a quick dance of sailors. Also, mat'e-lotte (-lŏt).

ma-ter (mā'tĕr; mä'tĕr), n. [Lat. = mother], mother, as in alma mater, which see: Anat., either of two membranes called dura mater and pia mater, which, together with a third, the arachnoid, cover the brain and spinal cord.

ma-te-ri-al (mȧ-tē'rĭ-ăl), adj. [< Lat. materia, timber; matter], 1, consisting of, or pertaining to, substance; physical; not spiritual; 2, pertaining to bodily wants; 3, important; of consequence: Law, of sufficient importance or bearing in the case to affect its outcome; entitled to consideration; Philos., pertaining to the substance as opposed to the form of a thing:—n. 1, the substance of which anything is made; 2, data, as notes and sketches, for further elaboration; as, material for a speech; that which may be worked up into other forms or for other purposes.

Syn., adj. bodily, physical, temporal; momentous, significant.—Ant., adj. spiritual; unsubstantial.

ma-te-ri-al-ism (mȧ-tē'rĭ-ăl-ĭzm), n. 1, the doctrine that all the facts of existence are the result of the nature, actions, modifications, etc., of substance or matter; 2, the tendency to give too much importance to body or matter, and too little to spiritual and intellectual interests.

ma-te-ri-al-ist (mȧ-tē'rĭ-ăl-ĭst), n. 1, one who holds the doctrine that the universe consists of substance without spirit; 2, one who is absorbed in bodily things to the exclusion of spiritual interests.—adj. ma-te"ri-al-is'tic.

ma-te-ri-al-i-ty (mȧ-tē"rĭ-ăl'ĭ-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], 1, substantiality; the quality of having body or matter; also, something made of matter; 2, the quality of being important or essential.

ma-te-ri-al-ize (mȧ-tē'rĭ-ăl-īz), v.t. [pt. and p.p. -ized (-īzd), p.pr. -izing], 1, to make capable of being seen, heard, or felt; 2, to regard as matter; as, a certain philosophy materializes the will; 3, to realize; as, she could not materialize her ambitions; 4, to render worldly, coarse, or vulgar:—v.i. to become a fact; actually to appear.—n. ma-te"ri-al-i-za'tion.

ma-te-ri-al-ly (mȧ-tē'rĭ-ăl-ĭ), adv. 1, with respect to body or substance; 2, essentially; considerably; actually; to a great degree.

ma-te-ri-a med-i-ca (mȧ-tē'rĭ-ȧ mĕd'ĭ-kȧ), [L.L. = medical material], the various substances used as remedies in the practice of medicine: Med., the science which treats of drugs, their virtue, source, preparation, use, etc.

ma-ter-nal (mȧ-tûr'năl), adj. [< Lat. mater, mother], 1, motherly; characteristic of a mother; peculiar to motherhood; 2, coming through the relationship of one's mother; derived from a mother; as, a maternal uncle.—adv. ma-ter'nal-ly.

ma-ter-ni-ty (mȧ-tûr'nĭ-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], [< Fr. maternité < Lat. maternitas, motherhood], the state of being a mother; motherhood; the character or relationship of a mother: maternity hospital or ward, a hospital or ward in a hospital for women at the time of childbirth.

math (măth), n. [< A.S. mæth, math], a mowing: obsolete except in aftermath.

math-e-mat-i-cal (măth"ē-măt'ĭ-kăl), adj. [see mathematics], 1, of or pertaining to mathematics, or the science of quantities; hence, 2, exact; precise.—adv. math"e-mat'i-cal-ly.

math-e-ma-ti-cian (măth"ē-mȧ-tĭsh'ăn), n. one skilled in mathematics.

math-e-mat-ics (măth"ē-măt'ĭks), n.pl. used as sing. [< Gk. mathēmatikos < mathēma, science < manthanein, to learn], the science that treats of quantities and magnitudes, by the use of symbols; the science that treats of the measuring, relations, and properties of quantities and magnitudes.

mat-in (măt'ĭn), n. [Fr. = morning < Lat. Matuta, goddess of morning], Poet., a morning song: pl. Angl. Ch., the service of morning prayer: in English usage, sometimes mattins; R. C. Ch., one of the daily offices, properly recited at midnight:—adj. of or pertaining to the morning.—adj. mat'in-al.

mat-i-née (măt"ĭ-nā"), n. [Fr. = what occupies a morning], a reception, musicale, or dramatic performance held in the daytime.

mat-ing (māt'ĭng), n. [see [2]mate], a matching; a pairing:—p.adj. suitable for pairing.

mat-rass (măt'rȧs), n. [< Fr. matras, a matrass: source uncertain], a long-necked, round-bottomed glass vessel formerly used in distilling, evaporating, etc. (for illus. see alembic).

ma-tri-arch (mā'trĭ-ärk), n. [< Lat. mater, mother + Gk. -arkhēs, ruler: on analogy of patriarch], a woman who is the ruler of her family, usually by virtue of the dignity of her age or position.

ma-tri-arch-y (mā'trĭ-är"kĭ), n. [pl. -archies (-kĭz)], a state of social organization in which kinship and descent are reckoned through the mother; hence, sometimes, a society in which women exercise the main political power.

mat-ri-ces (măt'rĭ-sēz; mȧ-trī'sēz), n. plural of matrix, which see.

mat-ri-cide (măt'rĭ-sīd; mā'trĭ-sīd), n. [< Lat. mater, mother + caedere, to kill], 1, the murder of a woman by her son or daughter; 2, one who murders his mother.—adj. mat'ri-cid"al.

ma-tric-u-late (mȧ-trĭk'ū-lāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -lated, p.pr. -lating], [< L.L. matricula, a register: see matrix], to enroll; admit to the membership of, as a college or society, by entering one's name in a register:—v.i. to gain admittance as a member or student of a college or similar institution:—n. (-lāt), one who is so enrolled.—n. ma-tric"u-la'tion.

mat-ri-mo-ny (măt'rĭ-mō-nĭ), n. [pl. -nies (-nĭz)], [< O.F. matremoine < Lat. matrimonium, marriage], the rite or state of marriage.—adj. mat"ri-mo'ni-al.—adv. mat"ri-mo'ni-al-ly.

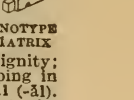
Syn. (see marriage).

ma-trix (mā'trĭks), n. [pl. matrices (măt'rĭ-sēz; mȧ-trī'sēz)], [Lat. = womb; parent source < mater, mother], 1, something holding, or capable of holding, embedded within it, another object to which it gives shape or form; 2, a die or mold, as for the face of type; 3, the rock in which a fossil, mineral, or gem is embedded: Anat., Archaic, the uterus, or womb; Biol., the substance between the cells of a tissue; also, the formative cells from which a structure grows, as the part of the cutis beneath a nail.



LINOTYPE MATRIX

ma-tron (mā'trŭn), n. [< Lat. matrona, married woman], 1, a married woman; mother; a middle-aged woman of dignity; 2, the woman who superintends the housekeeping in a hospital or other institution.—adj. ma'tron-al (-ăl).

ma-tron-age (mā'trŭn-ăj; măt'rŭn-ăj), n. 1, the state of being a matron; also, matronly supervision; 2, a body of matrons.

ma-tron-ize (mā′trŭn-īz; măt′rŭn-īz), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -ized (-īzd), p.pr. -izing], 1, to render matronly; 2, to chaperon; superintend.

ma-tron-ly (mā′trŭn-lĭ), adj. of or like a married woman; elderly; sedate.

mat-ro-nym-ic (măt″rō-nĭm′ĭk), n. [see metronymic], a name taken from that of the mother:—adj. pertaining to such a name. See me″tro-nym′ic, Pfd. S.

Matt. abbr. Matthew, the first of the four Gospels and the first book in the New Testament.

matte (măt), n. [see ²mat], 1, an impure mixture of metallic sulphides obtained when smelting sulphide ores, containing copper, tin, nickel, iron, and sulphur; 2, a dull finish, or mat.

mat-ted (măt′ĕd), p.adj. [see ¹mat], 1, having a covering of matting; 2, roughly tangled.

mat-ter (măt′ĕr), n. [< O.F. matere < Lat. materia, timber; stuff], 1, that which occupies space and of which any material body is composed; substance: opposite of spirit, mind, etc.; 2, the material of which a thing is composed; constituent parts; 3, an indefinite amount; as, a matter of $1,000; 4, a subject for discussion or action; 5, affair; business; loosely, a thing; 6, a cause of difficulty; 7, mail: Pathol., pus; Phys., the substance of the physical universe that is characterized by inertia, extension, etc.; Print., 1, material set up in type; 2, material which has been printed from type:—v.i. 1, to be of importance; 2, to form pus; maturate.

mat-ter-of-fact (măt′ĕr-ŏv-făkt′), adj. sticking close to facts; literal; practical; not imaginative, inspirational, or temperamental.

Mat-thew (măth′ū), n. [< Gk. < Heb.], Bib., 1, a tax gatherer called to be one of the twelve apostles (Matt. 9 : 9); 2, the first book of the New Testament, containing the Gospel ascribed to Matthew (see Bible, NOTE).—abbr. Matt.

¹mat-ting (măt′ĭng), n. [see ¹mat], 1, a kind of floor covering made of closely woven grass or fiber; 2, an ornamental border made of pasteboard, paper, etc., as around a picture.

²mat-ting (măt′ĭng), n. [see ²mat], a dull surface in gilding, glassmaking, and the like.

mat-tins (măt′ĭnz), n.pl. [see matin], Obs. except Angl. Ch., the service of morning prayer: distinguished from evensong. See mat′in, Pfd. S.

mat-tock (măt′ŭk), n. [< A.S. mattuc, pickax], a tool for digging and grubbing, having one end flat like an adz, and the other sharp like a pickax or edged like a narrow ax (see grubbing hoe, illus.).

mat-tress (măt′rĕs), n. [< O.F. materas < It. materasso, prob. < Arab. almatrah, cushion], a tufted sack of ticking or other cloth, stuffed with hair, felt, straw, or the like: used as a soft pad for a bed: Engin., a mat or covering made of interwoven trees, poles, or shrubs, used to protect embankments, jetties, etc., from erosion by rain, current, or tides.

mat-u-rate (măt′ū-rāt), v.i. [p.t. and p.p. -rated, p.pr. -rating], [< Lat. maturare (-atus), to make ripe], 1, to ripen; 2, to form pus:—v.t. to cause to generate pus; bring (an abscess) to a head.—n. mat″u-ra′tion.—adj. ma-tur′a-tive.

ma-ture (mȧ-tūr′), adj. [comp. maturer, superl. maturest], [< Lat. maturus, ripe], 1, ripe; full-grown; completely developed; 2, perfected; ready for use: Com., due; payable: said of notes, obligations, etc.:—v.i. [p.t. and p.p. -tured (-tūrd′), p.pr. -turing], to become ripe; attain full growth: Com., to become due, as a note:—v.t. to bring or hasten to full growth or completeness.—adv. ma-ture′ly.

Syn., adj. grown, developed, ripe, perfect, prime. (See mellow.)—Ant., adj. immature, green, undeveloped.

ma-tu-ri-ty (mȧ-tū′rĭ-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], the state or quality of being fully developed; ripeness; completeness: Law, the time when a bill or note becomes due.

ma-tu-ti-nal (mȧ-tū′tĭ-năl; măt″ū-tī′năl), adj. [see matin], pertaining to the morning; occurring early in the day.

matz-oth (mȧt′sōth), n.pl. [< Heb. matsṣōth, unleavened], unleavened bread eaten by orthodox Jews during the Passover.

maud-lin (môd′lĭn), adj. [orig. sense, shedding tears of penitence < O.F. Maudelaine < Gk. Magdalēnē, Magdalene], 1, easily moved to tears; mawkishly sentimental; 2, fuddled; drunkenly silly.

mau-ger (mô′gĕr), prep. [< O.F. maugré < mal (< Lat. malus, bad) + gré (< Lat. gratua, pleasing)], Archaic, in spite of. Also, mau′gre.

maul (môl), n. [< Fr. mail < Lat. malleus, hammer], any of various large hammers or mallets used for driving wedges, piles, stakes, or the like; a beetle:—v.t. 1, to bruise; handle roughly or abusively; 2, to split, as a rail, with a mallet and wedge; 3, to injure seriously, as by harsh treatment or criticism. Also, mall.—n. maul′er.—n. maul′ing.

maul-stick (môl′stĭk″), n. [< Du. maalstok < malen, to paint + stok, stick], a light stick, usually of wood, used by painters as a rest to steady the hand while painting. Also, mahl′stick″ (mäl′-; môl′-).

MAULSTICK

maun (mŏn; môn), v.i. [occurring only in this form, in the present tense], [Sc. < Scand. source], Sc. Dial., must.

maun-der (môn′dĕr; män′dĕr), v.t. [source uncertain], to mumble; utter incoherently:—v.i. 1, to talk foolishly or indistinctly; 2, to wander aimlessly: Obs., to grumble; mutter; speak incoherently.

Maun-dy Thurs-day (môn′dĭ), [< Lat. mandatum, order], Eccl., the day before Good Friday; Thursday before Easter, so called in memory of the new command given at the time of the washing of the disciples' feet by Christ (John 13 : 5, 14, 34); Holy Thursday.

mau-ser (mou′zĕr), n. [< Paul Mauser (1838–1914), Ger. inventor], a repeating rifle of high power and very long range.

mau-so-le-um (mô″sō-lē′ŭm), n. [pl. -leums (-ŭmz); -lea (-ȧ)], [< Gk. Mausōleian, of Mausolus], a magnificent and stately tomb or monument: named from that of Mausolus, King of Caria, erected by his widow, Artemisia, about 350 B. C.

mauve (mōv), n. [Fr. < Lat. malva, mallow], a soft lilac or delicate reddish purple color or dye, the first of the aniline dyes, made from coal tar by Sir William Perkin in 1856:—adj. having a delicate purple or lilac color.

mav-er-ick (măv′ĕr-ĭk), n. [< Samuel Maverick (about 1840), a Texas rancher, whose unbranded cattle ran at large, so that later all unbranded cattle in his locality became known as Maverick's], in western United States usage, an unbranded animal running at large; especially, a homeless, motherless calf, formerly claimed by the one first branding it:—v.t. to take and brand as one's own.

ma-vis (mā′vĭs), n. [< Fr. mauris, thrush], a thrush with a song vying with that of the nightingale, found extensively in Europe: also called song thrush and throstle.

ma-vour-nin (mȧ-vōōr′nĕn), n. [Ir.], my darling: a term of endearment for a girl or woman. Also, ma-vour′neen.

maw (mô), n. [< A.S. maga, stomach < O.Teut. source], the craw or crop of a bird; also, the stomach of an animal: Rare, the throat, gullet, or jaws.

maw-kin (mô′kĭn), n. [see malkin], 1, Obs., a slovenly, untidy woman of low class; slattern; 2, a cat or hare. See mal′kin, Pfd. S.

mawk-ish (môk′ĭsh), adj. [< obs. mawk, maggot < O.N. madkr, maggot], 1, causing disgust or loathing; 2, insipid; foolishly sentimental: Obs., sickly.—adv. mawk′ish-ly.—n. mawk′ish-ness.

max-il-la (măk-sĭl′ȧ), n. [pl. -læ (-ē)], [Lat. = jawbone], Anat., in vertebrates, one of the jawbones; especially, the upper jawbone; Zoöl., 1, one of the paired mouth parts below or behind the mandibles of certain insects; 2, in crustaceans, one of the two pairs of similar structures posterior to the mandibles.

max-il-la-ry (măk′sĭ-lā-rĭ), adj. Anat. and Zoöl., pertaining to the jaw, especially to the upper jawbone:—n. [pl. -ries (-rĭz)], a bone of the jaw; especially, of the upper jaw (see cranium, illus.).

max-im (măk′sĭm), n. [< Lat. maxima, fem. of maximus, greatest], an established principle or truth, as of manners or morals, expressed in concise form; an adage.

Syn. proverb, aphorism, precept, saw. (See truism.)

max-i-mal (măk′sĭ-măl), adj. largest; highest; pertaining to a maximum.

Max-i-mal-ist (măk′sĭ-măl-ĭst), n. formerly, a member of an extremely radical group within the Socialist party in Russia.

Max-im gun (măk′sĭm), [< H. S. Maxim (1840–1916), Am. inventor], a kind of automatic rifle: one of the earliest successful machine guns.

max-im-ite (măk′sĭm-ĭt), n. [< Hudson Maxim (1853–), Am. inventor], a high explosive consisting chiefly of picric acid, used as a bursting charge for armor-piercing projectiles.

max-i-mum (măk′sĭ-mŭm), n. [pl. -ma (-mȧ); -mums (-mŭmz)], [Lat. neut. of maximus, greatest], the greatest number, quantity, or degree possible; greatest value or quantity attained or attainable by a variable quantity: opposite of mini- mum:—adj. 1, greatest in quantity or highest in degree; 2, highest permitted by law or other authority.

ma-xi-xe (mȧ-shē′shȧ; mȧk″sēks′), n. [Port.], a Brazilian round dance like the two-step, but introducing various special steps and figures.

may (mā), v.aux. followed by infinitive without to [p.t. might (mīt)], [< A.S. mæg, may, p.t. meahte, might], 1, to be allowed; be free; be permitted; 2, to be possible; be likely, but not certain; 3, expressing the earnest desire, or wish, of the speaker; as, may the report prove untrue; 4, to be able; have power: more precisely expressed by can.

Syn. can. Can expresses the ability to do; may expresses permission; as, man can walk or think; you may not go. The use of can to ask permission is incorrect; we should never say, Can I go? To grant the permission by saying, You can go, has a colloquial standing, but is to be avoided.

May (mā), n. [< Fr. mai < Lat. Maius], 1, the fifth month of the year, containing 31 days; 2, youth, or the springtime of existence: may, the hawthorn or a similar spring-blooming plant:—May, v.i. to celebrate the first day of May, as by gathering flowers.

Ma-ya (mä′yä), n. [nat. name], 1, a member of the most important Indian group living in Yucatan, Mexico; 2, the language spoken by these people.—adj. and n. Ma′yan.

May ap-ple 1, a low-growing American herb (Podophyllum peltatum) of the barberry family, having a white, waxy blossom, a small, oval fruit, and a long, branching rootstock of cathartic properties; the American mandrake; 2, the yellowish, pulpy, edible fruit of this plant.

MAY APPLE
A, stem, flower, and leaf, one leaf cut away at a; B, fruit.

may-be (mā′bē), adv. [may + be], perhaps; possibly:—adj. Rare, possible; probable; uncertain.

May Day the first day of May, often celebrated by outdoor festivities, such as dancing around a May-pole, the hanging of garlands, and the crowning of a May queen: now often marked by parades or other demonstrations by labor or socialistic groups.—adj. May′-day″.

May-fair (mā′fâr″), n. [May + [2]fair], 1, a fashionable section of London, east of Hyde Park: so called from a bazaar formerly held there annually in May; hence, 2, fashionable London society.

May-flow-er (mā′flou″ėr), n. [May + flower], 1, any of several plants flowering in May or early spring; 2, the vessel that brought the Pilgrims from England to the New World in 1620.

May fly 1, any of various delicate, short-lived insects (for colored illus. see insect); 2, an imitation of a May fly, used in fishing.

may-hap (mā″hăp′; mā′hăp), adv. [may + happen], Archaic or Dial., perchance; perhaps; peradventure. Also, may″hap′pen.

may-hem (mā′hĕm), n. [< A.F. mahaym < O.F. mahaignier, to injure], Law, the offense of injuring a person, violently and unlawfully, so as to impair his fighting powers, or cause mutilation or loss, as of a limb or organ: also called maim.

May-ing (mā′ĭng), n. [see May], the celebraiton of May Day by gathering flowers or by other appropriate festivities. Also, may′ing.

may-on-naise (mā″ō-nāz′; mȧ′yō″nāz′), n. [Fr.], a rich salad dressing made of the raw yolks of eggs, olive oil, vinegar, and seasoning.

may-or (mā′ėr; mâr), n. [< Fr. maire < Lat. major, greater], the chief administrative magistrate of a municipal corporation, as of a city or borough.—n. fem. may′or-ess.

may-or-al-ty (mā′ôr-ăl-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], the office, or term of office, of a mayor.

May-pole (mā′pōl″), n. [May + [2]pole], a pole, generally erected on an open green, and decorated with flowers and streamers, around which May-day celebrations are held.

may-pop (mā′pŏp″), n. [May + pop], 1, the edible fruit of a flowering plant (Passiflora incarnata) found in the southern United States; 2, the plant on which it grows: also called passion flower.

May queen a young girl, generally chosen for her beauty, who presides over May-day festivities, and who is crowned and decked with flowers.

May-tide (mā′tīd″), n. [May + tide], the period of the month of May.

May-time (mā′tīm″), n. [May + time], the period of the month of May.

may-weed (mā′wēd″), n. [May + [1]weed], a pungent plant (Anthemis cotula) of the composite family, with white and yellow, daisylike flowers.

maz-ard (măz′ėrd), n. [perh. < O.F. masere, a kind of wood; bowl], Archaic, a cup or bowl made of some hard wood such as maple; Obs., 1, wood suitable for making such a vessel; 2, the head; also, a helmet. Also, maz′zard; Obs., ma′zer (mā′zėr).

maze (māz), n. [source uncertain], 1, state of bewilderment; confusion of mind; perplexity; 2, a confusing tangle; a network, as of passages; a labyrinth:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. mazed (māzd), p.pr. mazing], Archaic or Dial., to bewilder; confuse; baffle:—v.i. to become confused; wander.

ma-zur-ka (mȧ-zûr′kȧ; mȧ-zo͞or′kȧ), n. [Pol. = woman of province Mazovia], 1, a lively Polish national dance resembling a polka; 2, music for such a dance. Also, ma-zour′ka.

ma-zy (mā′zĭ), adj. [comp. -zier, superl. -ziest], [see maze], hard to unravel or to trace out; bewildering; winding.—adv. ma′zi-ly.—n. ma′zi-ness.

M. C. abbr. 1, Member of Congress; 2, Master of Ceremonies:—Mch., March (also, Mar.):—Md., Maryland (official abbreviation):—m. d., months after date:—M. D., [Lat. Medicinae Doctor], Doctor of Medicine:—mdse., merchandise:—Me., official abbreviation for the state of Maine:—M. E., 1, Mining, Military, or Mechanical Engineer; 2, Methodist Episcopal; 3, Middle English; 4, Most Excellent.

me (mē), pron. the objective case of I, the personal pronoun of the first person.

[1]mead (mēd), n. [< A.S. meodu, mead], 1, an alcoholic liquor of the Middle Ages, made of honey, water, and spices, and fermented by yeast; 2, a beverage made of sirup of sarsaparilla and carbonated water.

[2]mead (mēd), n. [see meadow], Poet., a grassy field; meadow; lea.

mead-ow (mĕd′ō), n. [< A.S. mædwe, meadow < O.Teut. source], 1, a field used for pasture; 2, low land near a body of water, often swampy or covered with coarse grass: often pl.; 3, land from which hay is obtained: meadow lark, any of several American song birds (genus Sturnella) allied to the blackbird, having a yellow breast marked with black: meadow rue, any of a genus (Thalictrum) of plants of the crowfoot family, especially a delicate, tall herb with white flowers: meadow saffron, any of a genus (Colchicum) of plants (especially C. autumnale) with crocuslike flowers, resembling the saffron.—adj. mead′ow-y.

MEADOW LARK

mead-ow-sweet (mĕd′ō-swēt″), n. [meadow + sweet], any species of spiræa; especially, a small European and American shrub (Spiræa salicifolia) bearing dense clusters of white, fragrant flowers.

mea-ger (mē′gėr), adj. [< O.F. maigre < Lat. macer, lean], 1, lacking in flesh; emaciated; lean; 2, lacking in fertility, richness, or strength; poor; scanty. Also, mea′gre.—adv. mea′ger-ly.—n. mea′ger-ness.

Syn. gaunt, poor, barren. (See[2] lean.)

[1]meal (mēl), n. [< A.S. melo, ground grain < O.Teut. source], 1, the edible part of grain coarsely ground; 2, unsifted flour made from corn or wheat.

[2]meal (mēl), n. [< A.S. mæl, fixed time], a repast; an occasion of taking food; the food so taken.

meal-ies (mēl′ĭz), n.pl. [sing. -ie (-ē)], [< S.Afr.Du. milje < Port. milho, millet], in South Africa, Indian corn in the ear; maize.

meal-time (mēl′tīm″), n. [meal + time], the hour fixed for serving or eating a meal.

meal-y (mēl′ĭ), adj. [comp. -ier, superl. -iest], [see [1]meal], 1, having the qualities of coarsely ground grain; friable; as, mealy soil; 2, containing, or covered with, coarse meal; floury; 3, having the appearance of being covered with flour; pale.—n. meal′i-ness.

meal-y-mouthed (mēl′ĭ-mouthd″; -moutht″), adj. affectedly vague in speech; afraid or unwilling to use plain language.

[1]mean (mēn), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. meant (mĕnt), p.pr. meaning], [< A.S. mænan, to intend < W.G. source], 1, to intend or determine upon; as, he means mischief; to design; purpose; as, he meant it as a jest; he was meant for a leader; 2, to convey, or be intended to convey, the significance of; signify; denote; as, charity means love; have in mind as the significance of an expression; as, to mean what one says; designate; as, she means me; imply; as, health means vigor; —v.i. to be disposed; as, to mean well or ill.

²mean (mēn), adj. [< A.S. gemǣne, common], 1, lacking in distinction; humble; plebeian; 2, lacking in intelligence; inefficient; ordinary; 3, lacking in dignity; ignoble; insignificant; 4, lacking in generosity; stingy; niggardly; sordid; 5, contemptible; lacking in honor; base; as, a mean motive: Colloq., petty and malicious; disobliging; disagreeable.

Syn. niggardly, abject, vile, base, ignoble, degraded, contemptible, sordid, pitiful.—Ant. generous, noble.

³mean (mēn), adj. [< O.F. men, moien < L.L. medianus < Lat. medius, middle], 1, in an intermediate position; between two extremes; 2, average; medium as to quality, degree, or bulk:—n. 1, a condition, quality, course of action, or the like, which is near the middle point between two extremes; hence, 2, absence of excess; moderation: pl. 1, instrumentality; agency: used as sing.; as, a means to an end; 2, resources; wealth; property: Math., 1, a quantity intermediate between the extremes of a set of quantities; 2, one of the two middle terms in a proportion; 3, an average; a sum computed by dividing the sum of a number of quantities by their number: known as the arithmetic mean; 4, the square root of the product of two quantities: known as the geometric mean, or mean proportional; Logic, the middle term of a syllogism (see example under syllogism).

Syn., adj. average. As here compared, mean describes a condition intermediate between two opposite extremes, as in size or quality; as, of mean height or ability. Average expresses a usual, prevalent standard, or the common or ordinary type or kind.

me-an-der (mē-ăn'dẽr), v.i. [< Gk. Maiandros, a winding river in Phrygia], 1, to follow a winding or intricate course; 2, to ramble without obvious destination or purpose:—v.t. Rare, to make sinuous:—n. 1, a winding course; laoyrinth; also, rambling movement: usually pl.; 2, an ornamental pattern of winding lines.—adj. me-an'drous.

mean-ing (mēn'ĭng), p.adj. [see ¹mean], expressive; suggestive; full of significance:—n. 1, that which is intended; purpose; object; 2, that which is indicated; significance; as, the meaning of a word; the meaning of a dream:—adv. mean'ĭng-ly.

Syn., n. purport, import, sense, acceptation, signification. (See signification.)

mean-ing-less (mēn'ĭng-lĕs), adj. without significance or sense; trivial.

mean-ly (mēn'lĭ), adv. [see ²mean], 1, in a lowly manner; without rank; as, meanly born; 2, basely; contemptibly; 3, shabbily; 4, in a manner or spirit of depreciation; 5, with a spirit of petty and selfish malice; disagreeably.

mean-ness (mēn'nĕs), n. 1, smallness or baseness of character; 2, a base or contemptible deed; 3, the state of being without qualities that gain respect; sordidness; 4, lowliness.

meant (mĕnt), past tense and past participle of the irregular verb mean.

mean-time (mēn'tīm'), adv. [³mean+time], 1, during the time between two occasions; 2, at the same time:—n. the intervening time.

mean-while (mēn'hwīl'), adv. [³mean+while], during an interval; between times:—n. the intervening time.

mea-sles (mē'zlz), n.pl. used as sing. [< M.E. maseles, measles], 1, Pathol., a contagious disease, especially of children, marked by fever and catarrhal symptoms, and, on the fourth day, by a rash of small, red spots which tend to unite and cover the body; 2, a disease of swine and cattle caused by the presence of tapeworm larvæ in the flesh; also (used as pl.), the larvæ themselves.

mea-sly (mē'zlĭ), adj. 1, infected with the disease called measles; 2, infected with tapeworm larvæ: said of meat: Slang, slight; contemptible.

meas-ur-a-ble (mĕzh'ûr-ā-bl), adj. [see measure], 1, capable of being estimated or computed; 2, of limited amount; moderate.—adv. meas'ur-a-bly.

meas-ure (mĕzh'ûr), n. [< Fr. mesure < Lat. mensura, a measure], 1, the quantity, dimensions, or capacity of a thing, as found by a rule or standard; 2, a standard for determining quantity, dimensions, or capacity, as a pint, yard, bushel, or the like; a unit of measurement; hence, 3, any standard of comparison, judgment, or estimation; a gauge; 4, an article, as a rod or vessel, used for measuring dimensions or capacity; 5, the act of determining or computing quantity, dimensions, or volume; 6, a system of measurements, usually consisting of several related units; as, liquid measure; dry measure; 7, an amount, or a degree; as, to merit a measure of praise; 8, a stated amount; an allotment; a reasonable limit; as, the measure of one's years; 9, an enactment of legislature; proposed bill or act; as, a measure to abolish a tax; 10, a course of action; step; as, a precautionary measure, party measure; 11, a dignified dance, as the quadrille: Mus., 1, the series of tones in regular rhythm from one primary accent to the next: in printed music, the notes between two bars on the staff; 2, the time of a piece of music; tempo; Pros., 1, rhythm or meter produced by combining syllables into similar groups accented and unaccented; 2, a single metrical unit; Print., the width of a column or page: generally given in pica ems: pl. Geol., a series of related beds or strata:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -ured (-ûrd), p.pr. -uring], 1, to compute as to quantity or extent by a fixed standard; 2, to estimate by comparison; appraise; 3, to serve as a standard or measure for; 4, to allot; set apart: often with out or off; 5, to traverse; as, to measure twenty miles a day; 6, to adjust:—v.i. 1, to ascertain dimensions, volume, or the like; 2, to be of (a specified) size, length, breadth, or thickness; 3, to compare favorably.—abbr. meas.

meas-ured (mĕzh'ûrd), p.adj. 1, determined or ascertained by a fixed standard; 2, uniform; regular; also, rhythmical; 3, carefully considered; calculated.—adv. meas'ured-ly.

meas-ure-less (mĕzh'ûr-lĕs), adj. unlimited; vast; too great to be computed.

meas-ure-ment (mĕzh'ûr-mĕnt), n. 1, the act of ascertaining size, quantity, amount, etc., by comparison with some standard; 2, the size or quantity so determined; length; area; volume; 3, a system of standards or units for comparison.

meas-ur-er (mĕzh'ûr-ẽr), n. 1, one whose business it is to compute or estimate values and quantities by comparison with certain standards; 2, a vessel, gauge, or instrument for measuring; 3, a kind of worm: also called measuring worm and looper.

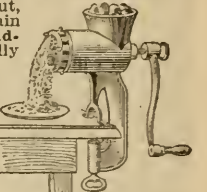
meas-ur-ing worm any of many caterpillars, the larvæ of the geometrid moths, which progress by humping the body into a loop and then reaching out with the anterior end: also called measurer; looper (for illus. see geometrid).

meat (mēt), n. [< A.S. mete, food], 1, animal flesh used as food; 2, food in general; victuals; 3, that part of a thing, as a nut, that is edible: Colloq., the main idea; gist; substance: meat grinder, a kitchen utensil for rapidly mincing meat and vegetables.



MEAT GRINDER

me-a-tus (mē-ā'tŭs), n. [pl. -tuses (-ĕz); -tus (-tūs)], [Lat. = a going < meare, to flow], Anat., a natural passage or opening of a duct.

meat-y (mēt'ĭ), adj. [comp. -ier, superl. -iest], [see meat], 1, like meat; full of nourishment; 2, full of substance; pithy; forcible.

me-chan-ic (mē-kăn'ĭk), adj. [< Gk. mēkhanikos, inventive < mēkhos, contrivance], 1, of or pertaining to handicraft, especially with machinery or tools, or to manual labor; 2, pertaining to machinery; like a machine: Obs., vulgar; lowborn:—n. 1, a skilled artisan, especially one versed in the functioning and construction of machinery or in the use of tools; 2, one who works mechanically: applied especially to uninspired artists or writers.

Syn., n. workman. (See artisan.)

me-chan-i-cal (mē-kăn'ĭ-kăl), adj. 1, pertaining to the laws of matter and motion; 2, pertaining to, or produced by, machines or machinery; 3, operated by machinery; 4, done without thought, as if from force of habit, as actions; acting in a machinelike way, as a person; 5, characterized by a talent for the use of machinery; inventive; constructive; as, a mechanical turn of mind; 6, pertaining to the artisan class: Philos., recognizing only physical forces as the causes of natural phenomena: Obs., vulgar: mechanical advantage, the ratio between the force exerted by a machine and the force which actuates it; as, a lever with a long power arm has a large mechanical advantage: mechanical drawing, a drawing, as a plan or design of machinery, made with compasses, rules, etc.; also, the art of making such drawings: mechanical mixture, a mixture or mingling together of two substances which are not combined chemically into one substance: distinguished from chemical compound: mechanical power, any of various devices, called the simple machines, used to convert a smaller force acting through a greater space into a greater force acting through a lesser space, or the converse, as the lever, including its derivatives, the wheel and axle, and pulley, and the inclined plane, including its derivatives, the screw and the wedge.—adv. me·chan'i-cal-ly.—n. me·chan'i-cal-ness.

mech-a-ni-cian (mĕk″ă-nĭsh′ăn), n. one who is skilled in the theory or construction of machinery; a machinist.

me-chan-ics (mē-kăn′ĭks), n. pl. used as sing. 1, that branch of physics or applied mathematics which treats of forces and their effects in producing and changing motion: also called dynamics; 2, the science of the construction and operation of machinery: celestial mechanics, that branch of astronomy which treats of the laws of the motions of celestial bodies.

me-chan-ic's li-en Law, a right to compensation for labor or material supplied in improving real property, enforceable as the prior legal claim against that property.

mech-a-nism (mĕk′ă-nĭzm), n. 1, the structure and arrangement of the parts of a machine of any kind; 2, a system of interdependent parts working in, or as in, a machine; 3, technique, as in art: Biol. and Philos., the belief that organic growth results from the same agencies as inorganic growth, the productive forces differing merely in degree: opposite of vitalism.

mech-a-nist (mĕk′ă-nĭst), n. Philos., one who believes that all events are explainable as results of mechanical forces only: Rare, a machinist.—adj. mech″a-nis′tic (-nĭs′tĭk).

mech-a-nize (mĕk′ă-nīz), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -nized (-nīzd), p.pr. -nizing], to give the character of a machine to; make mechanical.

Mech-lin (mĕk′lĭn), n. [<city of Mechlin], a beautiful and very delicate kind of lace, made in Mechlin, a city in Belgium.

med-al (mĕd′ăl), n. [< Fr. médaille < It. medaglia, coin < Lat. metallum, metal], a metal disk marked with a design or with words intended to commemorate some event, act, occasion, etc., or to serve as a reward or decoration for merit: medal play, Golf, a form of competition in which the result is determined by the total number of strokes required to complete the course: distinguished from match play.

med-al-ist (mĕd′ăl-ĭst), n. 1, one who designs, makes, or collects medals; 2, the winner of a medal. Also, med′al-list.

me-dal-lion (mē-dăl′yŭn), n. [< Fr. médaillon <médaille: see medal], 1, a large medal; 2, a framed, decorative tablet or panel bearing a figure or design drawn, sculptured, or engraved; 3, anything resembling such a tablet, as a wall-paper design or ornament of lace inserted in needlework.

MEDALLION

med-dle (mĕd′l), v.i. [p.t. and p.p. meddled (-ld), p.pr. meddling], [< O.F. medler, mesler < Lat. miscēre, to mix], to busy oneself impertinently; interfere: Archaic, 1, to mingle; mix; 2, to engage in conflict; fight; contend.—n. med′dler.

med-dle-some (mĕd′l-sŭm), adj. apt to interfere in the affairs of others; officious. —adv. med′dle-some-ly.—n. med′dle-some-ness.

Syn. officious, interfering, obtrusive, impertinent.

Mede (mēd), n. [< Gk. Mēdos, a Mede], a native of ancient Media, situated in what is now northwestern Persia.—adj. and n. Me′di-an.

Me-de-a (mē-dē′ă), n. [< Gk.], Gk. Myth., a sorceress of Colchis, who helped Jason win the Golden Fleece and who, deserted by him, destroyed her rival and her own children: the heroine of tragedies by Euripides, Seneca, Grillparzer, and Corneille, and of an opera by Cherubini.—adj. Me·de′an.

1me-di-a (mē′dĭ-ă), n. [pl. -diæ (-ē)], [Lat., fem. of medius, middle], Anat., the middle coat of the wall of an artery; Zoöl., a median structure, as the middle vein of an insect's wing.

2me-di-a (mē′dĭ-ă), n. [Lat., neut. pl. of medius, middle], plural of medium: Biol., substances upon which bacteria and other cells grow.

me-di-a-cy (mē′dĭ-ă-sĭ), n. [see mediate], 1, the state or quality of being between, or acting as an intermediate; 2, intervention; mediation.

me-di-æ-val (mē″dĭ-ē′văl; mĕd′ĭ-ē′văl), adj. [see medieval], characteristic of, or pertaining to, the Middle Ages; popularly, not modern. See me′di-e′val, Pfd. S.—adv. me″di-æ′val-ly.

me-di-æ-val-ism (mē″dĭ-ē′văl-ĭzm; mĕd′ĭ-), n. 1, that which belonged to, imitates, or has survived from, the Middle Ages; 2, a medieval spirit or method; devotion to the Middle Ages. See me″di-e′val-ism, Pfd. S.—n. me″di-æ′val-ist.

me-di-al (mē′dĭ-ăl), adj. [< L.L. medialis < Lat. medius, middle], 1, pertaining to the middle; 2, pertaining to the average; ordinary: Phon., of letters and sounds, neither beginning nor ending a word: distinguished from initial and final.—adv. me′di-al-ly.

me-di-an (mē′dĭ-ăn), adj. [< Lat. medianus < medius, middle], 1, being intermediate; middle; central; 2, in statistics, designating a number in a series arranged in order of size, such that the numbers which are greater than the specified number are as many as the numbers which are less; as, in the series 2, 2, 5, 20, 67, the median number is 5: distinguished from average: Anat., pertaining to, or lying in, the central plane that divides an animal into right and left sides; situated in the middle line; Geom., designating a straight line drawn from a vertex of a triangle to the middle of the opposite side:— n. a median number, point, or line.

MEDIANS
a, b, c, central points of sides; Aa, Bb, Cc, medians.

me-di-ant (mē′dĭ-ănt), n. [< It. < L.L. medians (-antis), intervening], Mus., 1, the third tone of a diatonic scale; 2, the third tone in importance in medieval ecclesiastical modes, the dominant, or reciting, tone and the final tone being more prominent.

me-di-ate (mē′dĭ-āt), adj. [< L.L. mediare (-atus), to intervene], 1, connected through some other person or thing; not direct; acting through an agency; 2, effected by a medium; 3, situated between extremes; intervening:—v.i. (mē′dĭ-āt), [p.t. and p.p. -ated, p.pr. -ating], 1, to act as a harmonizing agent between opponents; 2, to be in an intermediate or intervening position; form a connecting link:—v.t. to bring about, as a peace, by acting as an intermediary; settle by friendly intervention.—adv. me′di-ate-ly.

me-di-a-tion (mē″dĭ-ā′shŭn), n. 1, the action of trying to bring about friendly relations; 2, intervention between two parties, usually with their consent; intercession.

me-di-a-tor (mē′dĭ-ā″tẽr), n. one who tries to bring about friendly relations between those who are openly disagreeing; an intercessor: International Law, a nation or its representative that acts to settle differences among other nations or powers.

me-di-a-to-ry (mē′dĭ-ă-tō-rĭ), adj. pertaining to, or having the nature of, peacemaking or a peacemaker.—adj. me″di-a-to′ri-al.

med-ic (mĕd′ĭk), n. [< Gk. Mēdikē (poa), Median (grass)], Bot., any of various cloverlike plants (genus Medicago) of the pea family, as alfalfa: black medic, nonesuch (see shamrock, illus.).

Me-dic (mē′dĭk), n. [see Mede], the language of the ancient Medes.

med-i-ca-ble (mĕd′ĭ-kă-bl), adj. [see medicate] curable; admitting of medical treatment, with reasonable expectation of a cure.

med-i-cal (mĕd′ĭ-kăl), adj. [< Lat. medicus, physician], pertaining to medicine, or to the treatment of disease: medical corps, the branch of an army in charge of the disabled.—adv. med′i-cal-ly.

me-dic-a-ment (mē-dĭk′ă-mĕnt; mĕd′ĭ-kă-), n. [see medicate], 1, anything used for curative treatment; 2, anything that heals.

med-i-cate (mĕd′ĭ-kāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -cated, p.pr. -cating], [< Lat. medicari (-atus) < medicus, physician], 1, to treat with any curative or healing substance; 2, to saturate or impregnate with any such substance; 3, to cure.—n. med′i-ca′tion.

Med-i-ce-an (mĕd″ĭ-sē′ăn), adj. [< L.L. Mediceus], of or pertaining to the Medici, a wealthy and powerful Florentine family of the 14th, 15th, and 16th centuries, liberal patrons of the arts.

me-dic-i-nal (mē-dĭs′ĭ-năl), adj. [see medicine], curative; alleviative; used for the healing or mitigating of disease.—adv. me-dic′i-nal-ly.

med-i-cine (mĕd′ĭ-sĭn; Br., usually, mĕd′sn), n. [< O.F. medecine < Lat. medicina < medicus, physician], 1, the art or science of treating disease, especially by the application of internal remedies; 2, any drug or remedy for the treatment and cure of disease; 3, among North American Indians, any object thought to have magical powers of healing, protection, or the like; also, magical power.

med-i-cine man among primitive peoples, one who professes to drive away evil spirits, disease, etc., by supernatural powers.

me-di-e-val (mē″dĭ-ē′văl; mĕd′ĭ-), adj. [< Lat. medius, middle + ævum, age], pertaining to, or characteristic of, the Middle Ages, a period extending approximately from the fifth to the sixteenth century; popularly, not modern; out of date. Also, me″di-æ′val.—adv. me″di-e′val-ly.

me-di-e-val-ism (mē″dĭ-ē′văl-ĭzm; mĕd″ĭ-), n. 1, a custom or belief practiced in the Middle Ages; 2, the spirit or atmosphere of that period; 3, interest in, or imitation of, the customs and institutions of the Middle Ages; 4, a custom or practice that has lasted from that time. Also, me″di-æ′val-ism.—n. me″di-e′val-ist.

me-di-o-cre (mē″dĭ-ō″kĕr), adj. [<Lat. mediocris, of middle degree], of medium quality; having only a moderate degree of worth; commonplace.

me-di-oc-ri-ty (mē″dĭ-ŏk′rĭ-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tiz)], 1, the state or quality of being ordinary or commonplace; 2, a person of average ability.

med-i-tate (mĕd′ĭ-tāt), v.i. [p.t. and p.p. -tated, p.pr. -tating], [<Lat. meditari (-atus), to think], 1, to contemplate; fix one's attention upon; muse upon; 2, to design; continue; intend:—v.t. to ponder; cogitate; engage in contemplation; muse.

Syn. ponder, reflect, contemplate. (See muse.)

med-i-ta-tion (mĕd″ĭ-tā′shŭn), n. 1, the act of continuous thinking; absorbed contemplation; 2, a devotional exercise consisting of dwelling in thought upon a religious or ethical subject.

med-i-ta-tive (mĕd′ĭ-tā-tĭv), adj. given to long and serious thought or contemplation.—adv. med′i-ta-tive-ly.—n. med′i-ta-tive-ness.

Syn. pensive, reflective, contemplative, thoughtful.

Med-i-ter-ra-ne-an (mĕd″ĭ-tĕr-ā″nē-ăn), adj. [<Lat. medius, middle +terra, land], designating, or pertaining to, an arm of the Atlantic Ocean which separates Europe from Africa: mediterranean, landlocked; inclosed by land.

me-di-um (mē′dĭ-ŭm), n. [pl. -ums (-ŭmz); -a (-ă)], [Lat., neut. of medius, middle], 1, that which lies between extremes; a mean; a middle or intervening state, quality, person, or the like; 2, an intervening substance, as air, through which some physical action takes place; hence, 3, environment; conditions of life; 4, agency; means; instrumentality; 5, a person supposed to be able to receive communication from those deceased; 6, a sterilized, nutritive substance, as gelatin, used for the experimental cultivation of bacteria; 7, the material, as oil paints, water colors, or the like, used in creating a work of art; 8, oil, water, or other liquid, with which a pigment is mixed to make paint:—adj. occupying a middle position; moderate.

Syn., n. organ, instrument, means, channel, agency.

me-di-um-is-tic (mē″dĭ-ŭm-ĭs′tĭk), adj. of, pertaining to, or like, one claiming to receive communication from the dead.

med-lar (mĕd′lăr), n. [<O.F. medler <meslier <Lat. mespilum <Gk. mespilon, medlar], a small tree (Mespilus germanica) of the rose family found in Europe and Asia Minor; also, its edible fruit.

med-ley (mĕd′lĭ), n. [pl. -leys (-lĭz)], [<O.F. medlee <mesler <Lat. miscēre, to mix], a confused mass of heterogeneous ingredients or elements; miscellany: Archaic, a conflict; mêlée: Mus., parts of different selections, especially vocal, combined serially to form one continuous composition:—adj. confused; motley; heterogeneous.

Syn., n. variety, diversity, jumble miscellany.

me-dul-la (mē-dŭl′ă), n. [Lat. = pith; marrow], Anat., marrow, or marrowlike substance, as the pith of a hair, the spinal cord, etc.; Bot., the pith of plants: medulla oblongata (ŏb″lŏng-gā′tă), Anat., that part of the brain which is the continuation of the spinal cord (see brain, illus.): also called medulla.

med-ul-la-ry (mĕd′ŭ-lă-rĭ; mē-dŭl′ă-rĭ), adj. 1, pertaining to marrow; 2, pertaining to any medulla: medullary ray, one of the plates of tissue separating the vascular bundles in certain stems, and extending radially from the pith to the bark: the cause of the silver grain in quartered oak (see exogen, illus.).

Me-du-sa (mē-dū′să), n. [<Gk.], Gk. Myth., one of the three Gorgons, whose hair consisted of snakes and whose glance changed all who looked at her into stone: medusa, [pl. -sæ (-sē)], Zoöl., a jellyfish (see Cœlenterata).—adj. and n. Zoöl., me-du′soid.

MEDUSA
Perseus holding the head of Medusa: statue by Cellini, in Florence, Italy.

meed (mēd), n. [<A.S. mēd, reward], reward; recompense; that which is bestowed in recognition of merit: Rare, a bribe; Obs., merit; desert.

meek (mēk), adj. [<M.E. meoc <O.N. miukr, gentle], 1, gentle; mild of temper; patient; 2, easily imposed upon; unresenting; spiritless; 3, modest; piously humble.—adv. meek′ly.—n. meek′ness.

Syn. unassuming, submissive, mild, long-suffering, spiritless.

meer-schaum (mēr′shŏm; mēr′shŭm), n. [Ger. =seafoam], 1, a very light, porous, white mineral, hydrated magnesium silicate mined extensively in Spain and Asia Minor: called in mineralogy sepiolite; 2, a tobacco pipe having a bowl of this material: also called meerschaum pipe.

[1]meet (mēt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. met (mĕt), p.pr. meeting], [<A.S. mētan, to meet <O.Teut. source], 1, to come up to or approach from a different direction; 2, to come face to face with; 3, to come into contact with; intersect; as, a line meets a circumference; 4, to oppose in a battle, contest, duel, or the like; 5, to be introduced to; 6, to experience; encounter; 7, to be perceived by; as, to meet the eye; sounds met his ear; 8, to satisfy or pay, as one's obligations; conform to, as a requirement; 9, to refute:—v.i. 1, to come together in one place; assemble; 2, to come in contact with another; 3, to unite; 4, to contend; conflict:—n. 1, a gathering or assemblage for some definite purpose; especially, 2, a meeting of hounds and men for a hunt, of teams of athletes for an athletic contest, etc.; as, a track meet; 3, the location of such a gathering.

[2]meet (mēt), adj. [<A.S. gemǣte, of suitable dimensions, akin to metan, to measure], suitable; fitting; proper; appropriate.

meet-ing (mēt′ĭng), n. 1, a coming together of persons or things; 2, an assembly for a specific purpose; 3, a junction or union; 4, a duel.

meet-ing-house (mēt′ĭng-hous″), n. [meeting +house], a building for public worship, especially one used by Friends.

meet-ly (mēt′lĭ), adv. [see [2]meet], properly; appropriately; suitably: Obs., moderately.

meg-a-lith (mĕg′ă-lĭth), n. [<Gk. megas, great +lithos, stone], Archæol., a huge stone or boulder used in making certain prehistoric monuments, as the menhirs and dolmens.—adj. meg″a-lith′ic.

meg-a-lo-ma-ni-a (mĕg″ă-lō-mā′nĭ-ă), n. [<Gk. megalo- (<megas, great) +mania, madness], 1, a craze or mania for personal greatness or for doing great things; 2, a tendency toward exaggeration: Pathol., a form of insanity in which the patient has grandiose delusions concerning himself.

meg-a-lo-sau-rus megalo- (<megas, great) +sauros, lizard], Zoöl., any of an extinct genus (Megalosaurus) of carnivorous reptiles. Also, meg′a-lo-saur″.—adj. and n. meg″a-lo-sau′ri-an.

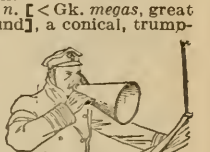
meg-a-phone (mĕg′ă-fōn), n. [<Gk. megas, great +phōnē, sound], a conical, trumpetlike device, intended to project sounds in a given direction in greater volume, the speaker speaking into the small end.



MEGAPHONE

meg-a-scope (mĕg′ă-skōp), n. [<Gk. megas, great+skopein, to look], a device for projecting enlarged images on a screen: Photog., a camera for enlarging photographs.

meg-a-spo-ran-gi-um (mĕg″ă-spō-răn′jĭ-ŭm), n. [pl. -gia (-ă)], [<Gk. megas, great+spora, seed+aggeion, vessel], Bot., a sac, or spore case, containing only megaspores, as in certain ferns and flower ovaries.

meg-a-spore (mĕg′ă-spōr″), n. [<Gk. megas, great +spora, seed], Bot., in ferns and seed plants, a one-celled reproductive body producing only the female gametophyte.

meg-a-the-ri-um (mĕg″ă-thē′rĭ-ŭm), n. [<Gk. megas, great+thērion, wild beast], any of a genus (Megatherium) of huge, slothlike, herbivorous, extinct mammals, allied to the sloths, whose remains have been found in South America: also called megathere.

me-grim (mē′grĭm), n. [<Fr. migraine, q.v.], Pathol. (usually, migraine), a nervous headache usually affecting one side of the head and accompanied by nausea and vomiting: pl. 1, depression or low spirits; 2, (often called blind staggers and staggers) a vertigo affecting horses.

Meis-ter-sing-er (mīs′tĕr-sĭng″ĕr; -zĭng″ĕr), n. sing. and pl. [Ger. = master singer], a member of a guild of musicians, chiefly workingmen, which originated in Germany in the 14th century and flourished particularly in the 16th century, maintained for the cultivation of poetry and music: the successors of the minnesingers. Also, mas′ter-sing″er.

mel-an-cho-li-a (mĕl″ăn-kō′lĭ-ă), n. [Lat.<Gk. melagkholia <melas, black +kholē, bile], Pathol., a form of mental disorder marked by depression of spirits, delusions, and brooding.

mel-an-chol-ic (mĕl″ăn-kŏl′ĭk; mĕl′ăn-kŏl′ĭk), adj. 1, downcast; sad; dejected; low-spirited; depressed; 2, pertaining to, or affected with, melancholia.—adv. mel″an-chol′i-cal-ly.

mel-an-chol-y (mĕl′ăn-kŏl-ĭ), n. [pl. -ies (-ĭz)], [< O.F. melancholie; see melancholia], 1, despondence; dejection; depression of spirits; 2, pensive sadness: Obs., in old physiology, black bile, one of the four so-called humors (see humor); hence, irritability, supposed to be due to an excess of black bile in the body:—adj. 1, dejected; 2, causing sadness and gloom; as, a melancholy tale; 3, pensive.

Syn., adj. dispirited, sad; n. (see grief, dejection).

Mel-a-ne-sian (mĕl″ă-nē′shăn), adj. [< Gk. melas, black + nēsos, an island], pertaining to Melanesia, a chain of volcanic islands lying about 1,000 miles east of Australia, or to the language spoken there:—n. a native of Melanesia.

mê-lange (mā″länzh′), n. [pl. mêlanges (mā″-länzh′)], [Fr. = mixture], a confused mixture; medley; jumble.

mel-a-nite (mĕl′ă-nīt), n. [< Gk. melas, black], a kind of garnet of a velvety black color.

Mel-chiz-e-dek (mĕl-kĭz′ē-dĕk), n. [Heb. = king of righteousness], Bib., a king and priest of Salem: regarded in early theology as a type of Christ (Gen. 14:18–20; Ps. 110:4; Heb. 5:6).

meld (mĕld), v.t. [< Ger. melden, to announce], in pinochle, to declare, as four aces, for a score:—v.i. to display certain scoring cards:—n. a combination of cards which when placed by a player face upward counts for a score.

mel-der (mĕl′dĕr), n. [< O.N. meldr, flour < mala, to grind], Eng. Dial. and Sc., 1, the quantity of grain that can be ground at one time; 2, fresh-ground meal; 3, a large amount or quantity.

Mel-e-a-ger (mĕl″ē-ā′jĕr) n. [< Gk. Meleagros], Gk. Myth., the son of Althæa, queen of Calydon, lover of Atalanta, and one of the Argonauts: destined to die at the expiring of a burning brand, which was at first extinguished by his mother in order to prolong his life, but was later rekindled by her and allowed to burn out, in revenge for his slaying of her brothers in a quarrel over the Calydonian boar.

mê-lée (mā″lā′), n. [Fr. < O.F. meslée, mixture], 1, a hand-to-hand conflict; a scrimmage; 2, hence, a lively debate.

mel-i-lot (mĕl′ĭ-lŏt), n. [< Gk. meli, honey + lōtos, lotus], Bot., sweet clover; any of several plants (genus Melilotus) of the clover family.

mel-i-nite (mĕl′ĭ-nīt), n. [< Fr. mélinite < Gk. mēlon, apple: from its color], a powerful explosive made of picric acid and guncotton dissolved in ether, used for charging shells, etc.

mel-io-rate (mēl′yō-rāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -rated, p.pr. -rating], [< L.L. meliorare (-atus), to make better < Lat. melior, better], to improve; make more bearable:—v.i. to grow better; improve.—adj. mel′io-ra-tive.—n. mel″io-ra′tion.

mell (mĕl), v.i. [< O.F. mesler, to mix: see meddle], Sc. Dial., to interfere; meddle; join, as in combat:—v.t. to mix; mingle.

mel-lif-er-ous (mĕ-lĭf′ĕr-ŭs), adj. [< Lat. mel (mellis), honey < ferre, to bear], capable of producing or yielding honey; honey-bearing.

mel-lif-lu-ent (mĕ-lĭf′lōō-ĕnt), adj. [< Lat. mel (mellis), honey + fluere, to flow], flowing as with honey or sweetness; smooth; soothing.—adv. mel-lif′lu-ent-ly.—n. mel-lif′lu-ence.

mel-lif-lu-ous (mĕ-lĭf′lōō-ŭs), adj. flowing with, or as with, honey; smooth and sweet; honeyed.—adv. mel-lif′lu-ous-ly.

mel-low (mĕl′ō), adj. [< M.E. melwe, perh. < A.S. melo, meal], 1, soft, tender, and juicy by reason of ripeness; 2, of a delicate, rich flavor; well matured, as wine; 3, soft, rich, loamy, as soil; 4, full; pure; not harsh or coarse: said of color, sound, etc.; 5, softened by age or maturity: Colloq., genial; somewhat tipsy:—v.t. to make ripe or soft; mature:—v.i. to become ripe, gentle, or sweet.—n. mel′low-ness.

Syn., adj. mature, ripe, soft, softened, delicate. Literally, that is mature which is fully developed; that is ripe which is ready to be harvested, gathered, or used; that is mellow which is soft, juicy, and sweet in its ripeness. Figuratively, plans completely thought out may be termed mature; the product of a mature mind is mature judgment. Ripe carries the idea of full readiness into its figurative sense; ripe for mischief; ripe scholarship; ripe beauty is that of a grown woman, usually in her prime, as contrasted with that of a girl. Mellow character is the product of experience; mellow judgment is wise, temperate, and understanding; mellow wine is old; mellow light is soft and soothing.—Ant., adj. immature, green, hard, unripe, bitter.

me-lo-de-on (mē-lō′dē-ŭn), n. [see melody], a small reed organ, supplied with air by a bellows worked by treadles.

me-lod-ic (mē-lŏd′ĭk), adj. Mus., 1, pertaining to, containing, or made up of, a pleasing succession of tones; melodious; 2, designating one form of the minor scale, called melodic minor (see scale, illus.): melodies, n. pl. used as sing., Mus., the branch of musical science which treats of tones and melody.

me-lo-di-ous (mē-lō′dĭ-ŭs), adj. containing, or producing, a pleasing succession of sounds; musical; agreeable to the ear.—adv. me-lo′-di-ous-ly.—n. me-lo′di-ous-ness.

Syn. tuneful, harmonious, dulcet, sweet, pleasing, musical.—Ant. discordant, jarring, dissonant.

mel-o-dist (mĕl′ō-dĭst), n. a composer or singer of tuneful music; one versed in melody.

mel-o-dize (mĕl′ō-dīz), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -dized (-dīzd), p.pr. -dizing], 1, to render tuneful or pleasing in sound; 2, to set to melody:—v.i. to compose or sing melodies.

mel-o-dra-ma (mĕl′ō-drä′mȧ; mĕl′ō-drä″mȧ), n. [< Gk. melos, music + Fr. drame, drama], 1, a highly sensational or romantic play, with a happy conclusion; 2, behavior which makes a violent appeal to the emotions: Mus., 1, in the first half of the 17th century, opera; 2, a drama, or a form of drama, usually sensational and highly romantic, interspersed with songs and accompanied by instrumental music.

mel-o-dra-mat-ic (mĕl″ō-drȧ-măt′ĭk), adj. 1, of or pertaining to romantic or sensational plays; 2, violently emotional; highly sensational.—adv. mel″o-dra-mat′i-cal-ly.

mel-o-dy (mĕl′ō-dĭ), n. [pl. -dies (-dĭz)], [< O.F. melodie < Gk. melōidia, a singing < melos, song + aeidein, to sing], Mus., 1, a succession of single tones rendered pleasing by observation of the principles of rhythm, tone, and composition; 2, the air, or principal part, in harmonized music; 3, a song or tune.

Syn. harmony. Melody is an arrangement of single notes in succession, serving to express a musical idea; melody also names the principal part or air thus musically formed. Harmony names a combination of notes of different pitch produced simultaneously to form chords, or the "concord of sweet sounds" thus created.

mel-on (mĕl′ŭn), n. [Fr. < L.L. melo (-onis), apple-like gourd < Gk. mēlopepōn < mēlon, apple + pepōn, gourd], 1, the fruit of a trailing plant (Cucumis melo) of the gourd family, or the plant itself: also called muskmelon; also, any of various similar fruits; 2, the watermelon: to cut a melon, to divide the surplus profits among the stockholders of a corporation, as by issuing extra dividends.

Mel-pom-e-ne (mĕl-pŏm′ē-nē), n. [< Gk. melpesthai, to sing], Gk. Myth., that one of the nine Muses who presided over tragedy.

melt (mĕlt), v.t. [p.t. melted, p.p. melted or, Archaic, molten (mōl′tn), p.pr. melting], [< A.S. meltan, mieltan, to melt], 1, to change (a solid) to a liquid, as by the application of heat; fuse; 2, to dissolve; make a solution of; blend; 3, to soften, as the heart or feelings:—v.i. 1, to be changed from a solid to a liquid state, as by heat; 2, to dissolve; 3, to be weakened or softened; 4, to dwindle away; disappear:—n. 1, something changed from (a solid) to a liquid state; 2, the operation of fusing; 3, the amount melted at one operation; 4, a charge placed in a furnace or crucible for melting.—n. melt′er.—adj. melt′a-ble.

melt-ing point the temperature at which a solid body melts, or fuses.

melt-ing pot 1, a crucible; 2, a country or city likened to a crucible, because of its capacity for assimilating a resident population drawn from many nations and races.

mel-ton (mĕl′tŭn), n. [< Melton Mowbray, a hunting center in England], a thick woolen fabric having a short nap: used for outer garments.

Mel-u-si-na (mĕl″ū-sē′nȧ), n. [< Fr. Mélusine], in medieval French lore, a beautiful maiden changed from the waist down into a serpent every Saturday, but living happily with her husband until he broke his promise not to visit her on Saturday.

mem (mĕm), n. [Heb. = water], the 13th letter of the Hebrew alphabet [מ] (see App. I), approximately equivalent to the English m: as a numerical symbol, 40.

mem-ber (mĕm′bĕr), n. [< Lat. membrum, limb], 1, one of the individuals composing an association or community; as, a member of a club or political organization; 2, an individual unit or a constituent part of any whole; as, a phrase is a member of the sentence: Anat., a limb or organ of the body.

mem-ber-ship (mĕm′bĕr-shĭp), n. 1, the state of belonging to an association, organization, community, or the like; 2, the members of an organization collectively.

mem-brane (mĕm'brān), n. [< Lat. membrana, parchment; membrane], any pliable sheet of animal or vegetable tissue, generally quite thin.

mem-bra-nous (mĕm'brā-nŭs), adj. like, or pertaining to, a membrane.

me-men-to (mē-mĕn'tō), n. [pl. -tos; -toes (-tōz)], [Lat., imperative of meminisse, to remember], a thing to arouse memory; a reminder: R. C. Ch., either of two prayers beginning with memento.

Mem-non (mĕm'nŏn), n. [< Gk.], Gk. Myth., the son of Tithonus and Eos, king of the Ethiopians, slain by Achilles in the Trojan War: Singing Memnon, Egypt. Antiq., one of two colossal statues of Amenophis III, later taken to be statues of Memnon, fabled to emit music at sunrise.

SINGING MEMNON (A) Near Karnak, Upper Egypt

mem-oir (mĕm'wŏr; -wär; mēm'-), n. [< Fr. mémoire, a note; memory], 1, a record of something considered noteworthy, as an essay addressed to, or a record of the transactions of, a scientific society; 2, a memorial or biography of an individual: pl. reminiscences; a history written from personal experience.

mem-o-ra-bil-i-a (mĕm"ō-rā-bĭl'ĭ-ȧ), n. pl. [sing., Rare, -rabile (-rā'bĭ-lē)], [Lat. = memorable things], 1, things worthy of remembrance or record; 2, the record of such things.

mem-o-ra-ble (mĕm'ō-rȧ-bl), adj. [< Lat. memorare, to bring to mind], worthy of remembrance; notable; signal.—adv. mem'o-ra-bly.

Syn. signal, marked, noteworthy, outstanding.

mem-o-ran-dum (mĕm"ō-răn'dŭm), n. [pl. -dums (-dŭmz); -da (-dȧ)], [Lat. = a thing to be remembered], 1, an informal note to assist one to remember; brief record for future use; 2, in diplomacy, an informal statement or summary regarding some subject of discussion between two governments: Com., 1, an informal written record of some fact or agreement; 2, a statement, by the shipper, of terms of a sale with the privilege of return; Law, 1, an informal document stating the terms of a contract or transaction; 2, an introduction or title, meaning "this is to be remembered," placed at the head of a note.—abbr. memo.

me-mo-ri-al (mē-mō'rĭ-ăl), adj. [< Lat. memorialis, pertaining to memory], in remembrance; commemorative of a deceased person, or of some event:—n. 1, a thing intended to keep in mind a certain person or event; 2, an informal diplomatic paper; 3, a written statement of facts addressed to a government, a public body, etc., usually as the basis of a request: Memorial Day, in the United States, a holiday, May 30, appointed by law in most States for observing the memory of those who died for the Union in the Civil War: also called Decoration Day: Confederate Memorial Day, a corresponding day observed in the southern States on various dates (April 26, May 10, or June 3).—n. me-mo'ri-al-ist.

me-mo-ri-al-ize (mē-mō'rĭ-ăl-īz), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -ized (-īzd), p.pr. -izing], 1, to address a petition or remonstrance to, with a statement of supporting facts; 2, to commemorate.

me-mo-ri-ter (mē-mō'rĭ-tĕr), adv. and adj. [Lat. = from memory], by heart; to be learned by heart, or committed to memory.

mem-o-rize (mĕm'ō-rīz), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -rized (-rīzd), p.pr. -rizing], [see memory], 1, to commit to memory; 2, to hold in remembrance.

mem-o-ry (mĕm'ō-rĭ), n. [pl. -ries (-rĭz)], [< Lat. memoria, memory], 1, the mental function which makes it possible for an individual's past experiences to be retained and recalled to consciousness; 2, a particular period or event kept in the mind; the subject of recollection or reminiscence; 3, the period of time covered by recollection; as, within the memory of the oldest inhabitant; 4, the state of being recalled.

Syn. remembrance, recollection, retrospect, reminiscence. Memory is the faculty of retaining or reproducing past images, impressions, or thoughts. Remembrance is the act of recalling past images or impressions, the state of their being recalled, or the act of keeping them before the mind. Both memory and remembrance can be involuntary, as from association; as, his face brings childhood scenes to remembrance; or they can function deliberately; as, the events of that day came at the call of memory. Recollection is remembering by act of will, or the conscious dwelling on the recalled occurrence. Reminiscence is the recollection, or, especially, the narrative, of one's memories. Recollections and reminiscences are sometimes collections of incidents grouped about an individual or an experience. Memory, remembrance, and recollection are all used to name the period within which memory operates.—Ant. forgetfulness, oblivion.

mem-sa-hib (mĕm'-sä'hĭb), n. [< Eng. ma'am, madam + Arab. çāhib, friend], lady: a title, in India, of a European married woman.

men (mĕn), n. plural of man; as, "all men are created free and equal."

men-ace (mĕn'ăs), n. [< Fr. menacer < Lat. minax (-acis), threatening], 1, an impending danger or evil; 2, a threat:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -aced (-ăst), p.pr. -acing], to express the intention of inflicting evil upon; threaten:—v.i. to threaten; indicate harm or danger; as, the thunder menaced.—adv. men'ac-ing-ly.

Syn., v. (see threaten).

mé-nage (mā"näzh'), n. [Fr. < O.F. manaige, a household < Lat. mansio, a sojourn], 1, a household; domestic establishment; 2, household management. Also, me-nage' (mē-näzh').

me-nag-er-ie (mē-năj'ēr-ĭ; mē-năzh'ēr-ĭ), n. [< Fr. ménagerie < ménage, q.v.], 1, a place where wild or strange animals are kept; 2, a collection of wild or trained animals kept for exhibition.

mend (mĕnd), v.t. [see amend], 1, to repair; restore to a whole or serviceable condition; 2, to make better; correct; rectify; improve; reform: Naut., to readjust, as sail; Obs., to atone for:—v.i. 1, to grow better; be changed for the better; improve; 2, to rise; increase, as prices:—n. 1, a growing better; as, on the mend; 2, the operation of repairing; also, a repaired portion of an object.—n. mend'er.

men-da-cious (mĕn-dā'shŭs), adj. [< Lat. mendax (-acis), untruthful], 1, given to falsehood; lying; 2, false; untruthful, as a statement.

men-dac-i-ty (mĕn-dăs'ĭ-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], 1, falsehood; untruthfulness; 2, habitual lying; a disposition to deceive; 3, a lie.

Syn. deceit, lying, untruth. (See lie.)

Men-de-lé-eff's law (mĕn"dĕ-lā'yĕfs), [< proper name], Chem., the statement of an observed relationship between certain properties of the elements and their atomic weights, published by D. I. Mendeléeff (also written Mendelêer, Mendelejeff, etc.), a Russian chemist (1834–1907) about 1870: generally called periodic law (see App. I).

Men-de-li-an (mĕn-dē'lĭ-ăn), adj. [< G. J. Mendel (1822–84), Austrian botanist], of or pertaining to the law of heredity discovered by Mendel, stating, first, that in hybridization, characters segregate independently; and, second, that of contrasting characters, one is lost in the first generation of offspring, but reappears in one out of three individuals (called the Mendelian ratio) of the second generation.

men-di-cant (mĕn'dĭ-kănt), adj. [< Lat. mendicus, beggar], practicing begging for a livelihood; reduced to beggary; living on alms:—n. a beggar; also, a begging friar.—n. men'di-can-cy.

men-dic-i-ty (mĕn-dĭs'ĭ-tĭ), n. 1, the habit of begging; state of being a beggar; mendicancy; 2, begging; solicitation of alms.

Men-e-la-us (mĕn"ē-lā'ŭs), n. [< Gk.], Gk. Myth., brother of Agamemnon, and husband of Helen: one of the leaders in the siege of Troy.

men-ha-den (mĕn-hā'dn), n. [< Amer.Ind. munnawhatteaug, name of fish], a fish of the herring family, caught in large numbers off the Atlantic coast: used for bait, fertilizer, etc.

men-hir (mĕn'hēr), n. [< Breton men hir, long stone], a tall, upright stone formerly used in the Old World as a monument; a megalith.

MENHIRS near Carnac, France me-ni-al (mē'nĭ-ăl; mēn'yăl), adj. [< O.F. mesnie, household], 1, pertaining to, or suitable for, servants, especially household servants; 2, hence, servile; sordid; slavish:—n. 1, a domestic servant, especially of low rank; 2, one who performs servile or degrading tasks.—adv. me'ni-al-ly.

me-nin-ges (mē-nĭn'jēz), n.pl. [sing. meninx (mē'ningks)], [< Gk. mēnigx, membrane], Anat., the three membranes that envelop the brain and the spinal cord (see mater).—adj. me-nin'ge-al.

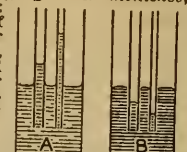
men-in-gi-tis (mĕn″ĭn-jī′tĭs), n. Pathol., an inflammation of the meninges, or membranes inclosing the brain and the spinal cord: occurring in either of three forms, cerebral, spinal, or cerebrospinal.

me-nis-cus (mē-nĭs′kŭs), n. [pl. -nisci (-nĭs′ī); -cuses (-kŭs-ĕz)], [< Gk. mēniskos, crescent], a crescent-shaped body: Optics, a lens one surface of which is concave and the other convex (see lens, illus.); Phys., the surface of a column of liquid that is made either concave or convex by surface tension: especially noticeable in vessels or tubes of small diameter.



MENISCUS
A, vessel of water, showing concave meniscus; B, vessel of mercury, showing convex meniscus.

Men-non-ite (mĕn′ŏn-īt), n. [< name of principal leader, Menno Simons (1492–1559)], a member of an evangelical Protestant sect, established in Friesland in the 16th century and still active in Europe and the United States, of which the leading features are the use of baptism, plainness of life and dress, and refusal to take oaths, resist violence, or hold any political offices except those connected with the management of education.

me-nol-o-gy (mē-nŏl′ō-jĭ), n. [pl. -gies (-jĭz)], [< Gk. mēn, month + -logia, study], a calendar; especially, in the Greek Church, a calendar of the festivals commemorating the saints, with brief biographies of each saint.

men-o-pause (mĕn′ō-pôz), n. [< Gk. mēn, month + pausis, cessation], Physiol., the final cessation of menstruation in women, occurring usually between the ages of forty-five and fifty; change of life; climacteric.

[1]men-sal (mĕn′săl), adj. [< Lat. mensis, month], occurring once a month; monthly.

[2]men-sal (mĕn′săl), adj. [< Lat. mensa, table], pertaining to, or used at, the table.

men-ses (mĕn′sēz), n.pl. [Lat., pl. of mensis, month], Physiol., the periodic flow of blood from the female genital tract, occurring normally in women about every four weeks.

Men-she-vi-ki (mĕn″shĕ-vē-kē′; -vē′kĭ), n.pl. [sing. Menshevik (-vĭk′)], [Russ. = the smaller (in numbers)], Pol. Sci., a Russian political party representing the moderate wing of the Social Democratic party: opposite of Bolsheviki, or radical wing.—n. Men′she-vism.—adj. Men′she-vist.

men-stru-al (mĕn′strōō-ăl), adj. [< Fr. menstruel < Lat. menstruatis, monthly], happening once a month: Physiol., pertaining to the menses; Bot., enduring for a month, as a flower.

men-stru-ate (mĕn′strōō-āt), v.i. [p.t. and p.p. -ated, p.pr. -ating], [< Lat. menstruare (-atus), to menstruate], to discharge the menses, or menstrual flow.—n. men″stru-a′tion.

men-stru-ous (mĕn′strōō-ŭs), adj. [< Lat. menstruus, monthly], 1, monthly; 2, relating to the menses.

men-stru-um (mĕn′strōō-ŭm), n. [pl. -ums (-ŭmz); -strua (-ă)], [Lat. = monthly], Chem., a fluid substance used as a solvent; especially, a solvent used in extracting drugs.

men-su-ra-ble (mĕn′shōō-ră-bl), adj. [< Lat. mensura, measure], capable of being measured; having fixed limits: Mus., designating, or pertaining to, a certain style of music, evolved about 1100, characterized by a complicated notation of time values, the forerunner of the modern system of music writing.—n. men″su-ra-bil′i-ty.

men-su-ra-tion (mĕn″shōō-rā′shŭn), n. the act or process of measuring: Math., that division of mathematics dealing with the measurement of lengths, areas, and volumes.

-ment n. suffix, [O.F. < Lat. suffix -mentum], signifying: 1, the act or fact of doing something; as, enforce*ment*; infringe*ment*; 2, the condition or state resulting from an act; as, excite*ment*; retire*ment*; 3, means or instrument; as adorn*ment*; tegu*ment*; 4, a concrete result or outcome of an action; as, attach*ment*; entertain*ment*; pave*ment*.

[1]men-tal (mĕn′tăl), adj. [< Lat. mentum, chin], Anat., of or pertaining to the chin.

[2]men-tal (mĕn′tăl), adj. [< Lat. mens (mentis), mind], pertaining to the mind; intellectual; existing in the mind: mental age, Psych., a measure of intelligence, being the score in terms of years made by a subject, regardless of his actual, or chronological, age, in an intelligence test or scale standardized in year units.—adv. men′tal-ly.

Syn. (see intellectual).

men-tal-i-ty (mĕn-tăl′ĭ-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], 1, the quality or amount of mental power; intellectual ability: mental capacity; 2, mind, or mental activity, considered as a characteristic or attribute.

men-tha-ceous (mĕn-thā′shŭs), adj. [< Lat. mentha, mint], Bot., pertaining, or belonging, to the mint family of plants.

men-thol (mĕn′thōl; -thŏl), n. [< Lat. mentha, mint + oleum, oil], Chem., a solid, white, volatile, crystalline compound, obtained from oil of peppermint: used in medicines, toilet preparations, etc.

men-tion (mĕn′shŭn), n. [< Lat. mentio (-onis), a speaking of < mens, mind], a brief notice; a specifying; naming; incidental introduction into speech or writing: honorable mention, recognition of the meritorious work of a contestant not winning a prize:—v.t. to speak briefly of; notice lightly or by chance; refer to by name.—n. men′tion-er.

Syn., v. tell, communicate, impart, name.

men-tion-a-ble (mĕn′shŭn-ă-bl), adj. fit to be spoken of.

Men-tor (mĕn′tôr), n. [< Gk.], Gk. Myth., the tutor of Telemachus, son of Odysseus: mentor, a wise and faithful adviser, friend, or teacher.

men-u (mĕn′ū; mā′nū; mē-nū′), n. [Fr. = detailed list], 1, a bill of fare; a list of the various dishes served at a meal; 2, the food served.

men-u-et-to (mĕn″ū-ĕt′ō), n. [It. = minuet], Mus., 1, music in triple measure for a slow, stately dance of French origin; a minuet; 2, an independent movement in the old-fashioned dance suites and later in the sonata and its adaptations, the symphony, string quartet, and concerto.

Meph-is-toph-e-les (mĕf″ĭs-tŏf′ē-lēz), n. [Ger.: source uncertain], 1, in medieval legend, a demon or familiar spirit, to whom Faust sold his soul: an important character in Marlowe's "Dr. Faustus," in Goethe's "Faust," and in Gounod's opera "Faust"; 2, hence, a fiendish, crafty person.—adj. Meph″is-to-phe′le-an (-tō-fē′lē-ăn; -tŏf″-ē-lē′ăn); Meph″is-to-phe′li-an (-tō-fē′lĭ-ăn; -fēl′yăn).

me-phi-tis (mē-fī′tĭs), n. [Lat. = poisonous exhalation], 1, a foul and poisonous emanation from the earth, as from a mine or cave; 2, any noxious odor.—adj. me-phit′ic (mē-fĭt′ĭk).

mer-can-tile (mûr′kăn-tĭl; -tīl), adj. [< It. mercantil < Lat. mercari, to trade], having to do with, or engaged in, trade; pertaining to merchants: mercantile paper, negotiable paper, as bills of exchange, drafts, etc., given in course of business.

mer-cap-tan (mĕr-kăp′tăn), n. [< Lat. Mer(curium), mercury + captans, taking], Chem., one of a class of compounds analogous to alcohol, but containing sulphur instead of oxygen, and characterized by an offensive garlicky odor.

Mer-ca-tor's chart (mĕr-kā′tĕrz; mĕr-kă′tôrz), [< Gerhard Mercator (1512–94), Flem. geographer], a chart in which meridians and parallels of latitude are drawn according to the principles of Mercator's projection (which see).

Mer-ca-tor's pro-jec-tion a method of projection used in map making, in which the meridians and parallels of latitude are drawn as straight lines cutting each other at right angles, the distance between the parallels of latitude increasing with their distance from the equator: especially useful to navigators (see projection, illus.).

mer-ce-na-ry (mûr′sĕ-nā-rĭ), adj. [< Lat. mercenarius < merces (-edis), a reward], 1, acting only for reward or money; influenced by considerations of selfish advantage; 2, hired: said of soldiers; 3, resulting from greed or sordidness; as, a mercenary crime:—n. [pl. -naries (-rĭz)], a soldier hired by a foreign power: Rare, one who serves merely for pay.—adv. mer′ce-na-ri-ly.—n. mer′ce-na-ri-ness.

mer-cer (mûr′sĕr), n. [< Fr. mercier < Lat. merz (mercis), merchandise], a dealer in woven fabrics, as silks or woolens: Obs., a dealer in small wares.

mer-cer-ize (mûr′sĕr-īz), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -ized (-īzd), p.pr. -izing], [< J. Mercer (1791–1866), inventor of process], to treat (cotton fabrics) with caustic alkali so that they are strengthened, made more receptive of dyes, and given a silken sheen.

mer-chan-dise (mûr′chăn-dīz), n. [< Fr. marchandise: see merchant], goods, wares, or articles, bought and sold; commodities of trade: Obs., mercantile traffic; hence, profit from trade.

mer-chant (mûr′chănt), n. [< O.F. marchand < Lat. mercari, to trade], 1, one who carries on trade on a large scale, especially with foreign countries; 2, a retailer; a shopkeeper:—adj. pertaining to, or employed in, trade; mercantile.

mer-chant-a-ble (mûr′chăn-tă-bl), adj. Com., salable; marketable.

Mer-chant Ad-ven-tur-ers Hist., any of various chartered companies engaged in trade, exploration, or colonization; specifically, the Hamburg Company, chartered by the English early in the 14th century, which had an enormous trade in the Netherlands; also, a company, headed by Sebastian Cabot, for the colonization and discovery of unknown lands. Also, Mer'chants Ad-ven'tur-ers.

mer-chant-man (mûr'chănt-măn), n. [pl. -men (-mĕn), [merchant + man], a vessel used for carrying goods or passengers, as distinguished from a war vessel, yacht, or the like.

mer-chant ma-rine that part of a country's shipping engaged in trade.

Mer-ci-an (mûr'shĭ-ăn; mûr'shĭ-ăn), adj. [< A.S. Mierce, border people < mearc, border], pertaining to the kingdom or language of Mercia, a combination of Anglo-Saxon states holding great power in central England in the eighth century:—n. 1, a native of Mercia; 2, the language or dialect of Mercia.

mer-ci-ful (mûr'sĭ-fo͝ol), adj. [see mercy], full of, or exercising, leniency or compassion, especially toward one having no claim to forbearance; full of pity.—adv. mer'ci-ful-ly.—n. mer'ci-ful-ness.

Syn. lenient, tender, compassionate, gracious, benignant, mild, charitable.—Ant. merciless, cruel, inexorable, hard-hearted, unyielding.

mer-ci-less (mûr'sĭ-lĕs), adj. without pity; unfeeling; cruel; unsparing.—adv. mer'ci-less-ly.—n. mer'ci-less-ness.

Syn. hard-hearted, pitiless, relentless, remorseless, unrelenting, implacable.—Ant. merciful, kind, humane.

mer-cu-ri-al (mĕr-kū'rĭ-ăl), adj. [see Mercury], 1, having the qualities attributed to the god Mercury; hence, volatile; fickle; clever; facile; ready-witted; 2, of, pertaining to, containing, or caused by, mercury, or quicksilver:—n. a preparation of mercury used as a drug.—adv. mer-cu'ri-al-ly.

mer-cu-ric (mĕr-kū'rĭk), adj. Chem., 1, pertaining to, or containing, mercury; 2, designating a salt of mercury in which that element has a valence of two: mercuric chloride, a heavy, white crystalline compound, a violent irritant poison, used as an antiseptic and germicide: also called corrosive sublimate, bichloride of mercury, or mercuric bichloride.

mer-cu-rous (mûr'kū-rŭs; mĕr-kū'rŭs), adj. Chem., 1, pertaining to, or containing, mercury; 2, designating a salt of mercury in which that element has a valence of one.

Mer-cu-ry (mûr'kū-rĭ), n. [pl. -ries (-rĭz)], [< Lat. Mercurius, god of traffic < merx (mercis, merchandise], Rom. Myth., son of Jupiter, and messenger of the gods; god of commerce and eloquence, and patron of thieves, messengers, and travelers: in many respects identified with the Greek Hermes; Astron., the innermost known planet of the solar system, revolving around the sun in 88 days, at a distance of 36,000,000 miles: mercury, 1, a heavy, silvery metallic element (symbol Hg, < Lat. hydrargyrum), liquid at ordinary temperatures, extensively used in thermometers and scientific instruments, and in medicinal drugs: also called quicksilver; 2, the column of mercury in a thermometer or barometer: mercury arc, an electric arc sent through mercury vapor in a vacuum tube.

Mercury
Bronze statue by Giovanni di Bologna.

Mer-cu-ti-o (mĕr-kū'shĭ-ō), n. [It.], in Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet," the witty, reckless friend of Romeo, slain by Tybalt.

mer-cy (mûr'sĭ), n. [pl. -cies (-sĭz)], [< Fr. merci < L.L. merces, pity < Lat. merces, reward], 1, willingness to forgive, or to treat an offender with leniency; clemency; forbearance; 2, the disposition to relieve distress; also, an act of kindness; 3, a blessing or favor, as of God; 4, unrestricted control or power of disposal; as, the boat was at the mercy of the waves.

Syn. benevolence, clemency, forgiveness, pardon, lenity, leniency, forbearance, pity, gentleness. Mercy is compassion and gentle treatment shown to an offender who expects no kindness and is wholly in one's power; mercy is also compassion toward those who, through no fault of their own, are in trouble, and in one's power. Clemency is a tendency to mildness toward offenders, usually shown by superiors; clemency may be exercised through kindness, or it may be dictated by self-interest, worldly wisdom, or the like. Judges, royalty, political bosses, show clemency. Pardon remits the penalty, usually for a serious offense; pardon has a specific legal usage, naming that official release which frees an offender from the legal consequences of his act. Forgiveness connotes a change of heart in the offended person, whereby he wipes out displeasure and resentment toward the offender. Lenity and leniency designate a sympathetic mildness of temper; teachers, parents, show leniency; a mistress shows lenity toward servants.—Ant. cruelty, severity.

mer-cy seat a place where merciful judgments are dispensed; the throne of God: Jewish Antiq., the golden lid of the Ark of the Covenant, on which once a year the blood of atonement was sprinkled: believed to be the abiding place of God.

[1]mere (mēr), n. [A.S. = lake < Aryan source], 1, a shallow lake or pool; 2, a marsh: Archaic, the sea or an arm of it.

[2]mere (mēr), n. [< A.S. mære, gemære, a boundary], in England, a boundary; also, a boundary line, as a strip of grass between fields.

[3]mere (mēr), adj. [superl. merest], [< Lat. merus, unmixed], nothing but; no more than; this only; as, a mere child could do it: Obs., unmixed.

mere-ly (mēr'lĭ), adv. only; singly; including nothing else; barely.

mer-e-tri-cious (mĕr'ĕ-trĭsh'ŭs), adj. [< Lat. meretrix (-icis), harlot], 1, originally, pertaining to, or like, a harlot; 2, attracting by false show; tawdry; deceitfully alluring.—adv. mer'e-tri'cious-ly.—n. mer'e-tri'cious-ness.

mer-gan-ser (mĕr-găn'sĕr), n. [< Lat. mergus, diver + anser, goose], any of several fish-eating ducks (subfamily Merginæ), having a long hooked bill bearing toothlike serrations.

merge (mûrj), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. merged (mûrjd), p.pr. merging], [< Lat. mergere, to dip], to cause, as an estate or company, to be absorbed into something else; swallow up:—v.i. 1, to be absorbed; lose individuality or identity; 2, to unite.

Syn. unite, blend, coalesce, join, amalgamate. (See mix.)

merg-er (mûr'jĕr), n. 1, in law, the wiping out of a small estate by a large one through a process of absorption; 2, in industry, the absorption by a large concern of one or more smaller concerns, which lose their identity by becoming a part of the large enterprise; 3, a combining; also, one who combines.

me-rid-i-an (mĕ-rĭd'ĭ-ăn), n. [< O.F. meridien < Lat. meridianus, pertaining to noon < meridies, midday < medius, middle + dies, day], 1, Astron., a great circle of the celestial sphere, passing through its poles and the zenith of any given point on the earth; 2, the highest point reached by a heavenly body, where it crosses this great circle; 3, noon; 4, the acme; zenith, as of success; prime; 5, Geog., a great circle of the earth, passing through the poles; also, half of such a circle, extending from pole to pole and passing through a given place; also, a line on a map representing a meridian: prime meridian, a meridian from which longitude is reckoned, as that of Greenwich, England, or of Washington:—adj. 1, pertaining to a meridian; 2, pertaining to midday; 3, pertaining to the point of greatest success, vigor, etc.: meridian circle, an astronomical instrument consisting of a telescope provided with a graduated circle and so mounted as to swing in the plane of the meridian: used for determining time and the positions of the stars.

me-rid-i-o-nal (mĕ-rĭd'ĭ-ō-năl), adj. 1, of or pertaining to, or situated in, the south; southern.

me-ringue (mĕ-răng', -răng'), n. [Fr.], Cookery, an icing or garnish, also a small cake, made of beaten white of egg and sugar.

me-ri-no (mĕ-rē'nō), adj. [Sp., prob. < Lat. majorinus, of a larger kind], 1, designating, or pertaining to, a breed of sheep, originally found in Spain, bearing a fine, soft, silky wool: 2, made of this wool:—n. [pl. -nos (-nōz)], 1, a sheep of this superior breed; 2, a fabric made of the fine, soft wool of these sheep; also, cloth of wool and cotton resembling it.

mer-it (mĕr'ĭt), n. [< O.F. merite < Lat. merĕri (meritus, to earn], 1, due reward or punishment; usually, reward; also, a mark or token received as recompense; 2, the state or fact of deserving approbation or the opposite; desert; 3, worth; excellence; that which deserves commendation; 4, essential right or wrong, to be used as a basis of judgment: usually pl.:—v.t. to earn; be entitled to; deserve.

mer-i-to-ri-ous (mĕr'ĭ-tō'rĭ-ŭs), adj. worthy of praise or reward.—adv. mer'i-to'ri-ous-ly.—n. mer'i-to'ri-ous-ness.

merl (mûrl), n. [< Fr. merle < Lat. merulus, blackbird], the European blackbird (Merula merula), a kind of thrush with pleasing song. Also, merle.

mer-lin (mûr'lĭn), n. [< A.F. merilun < O.F. esmerillon < L.L. smerillus: prob. < O.Teut. source], 1, a small falcon (Falco æsalon) of Europe; 2, the American pigeon hawk (F. columbarius).

Mer-lin (mûr'lĭn), n. [< Celt. Myrddin], in medieval romances, a famous bard, magician, and seer at the court of King Arthur.

mer-lon (mûr'lŏn), n. [< It. merlone < merlo, battlement], in a battlemented parapet, one of the solid intervals between two openings called embrasures or crenels (see loophole, illus.).

mer-maid (mûr'mād), n. [¹*mere* + maid], any sea nymph, having the body of a woman and the tail of a fish.—n. masc. mer'man (pl. -men (-mĕn')).

Mer-o-pe (mĕr'ō-pē), n. [< Gk.], Gk. Myth., one of the Pleiades (which see), who concealed herself out of shame at loving a mortal.

Mer-o-vin-gi-an (mĕr'ō-vĭn'jĭ-ăn), adj. [< L.L. Merovingi, descendants of Merovaeus, Lat. name of grandfather of Clovis], pertaining to, or designating, the first Frankish dynasty in Gaul or France, founded by Clovis I in A. D. 481 and lasting until 752:—n. a member of this line.

mer-ri-ment (mĕr'ĭ-mĕnt), n. [see merry], mirth; fun; frolic; gaiety; hilarious enjoyment: Obs., amusement.

mer-ry (mĕr'ĭ), adj. [comp. -rier, superl. -riest], [< A.S. myrige, pleasant], 1, mirthful; bright; jolly; 2, amusing.—adv. mer'ri-ly.—n. mer'ri-ness.

Syn. mirthful, cheerful, blithe, sportive, jocular, hilarious, gay, vivacious.—Ant. sad, dispirited, cheerless.

mer-ry-an-drew (mĕr'ĭ-ăn'drōō), n. a buffoon; one who plays the clown.

mer-ry-go-round (mĕr'ĭ-gō-round"), n. 1, a large, revolving, circular frame fitted with wooden animals or seats, on which persons ride for amusement; a carrousel; 2, figuratively, a whirl of gaiety: a swift round.

mer-ry-mak-ing (mĕr'ĭ-māk'ĭng), adj. [merry + make], festive; gay; joyous:—n. a festivity; a frolic.—n. mer'ry-mak'er.

mer-ry-thought (mĕr'ĭ-thôt"), n. [merry + thought], a forked bone between the neck and breast of a fowl; the wishbone.

me-sa (mā'sä), n. [Sp. < Lat. mensa, table], a remnant of a flat table-land or plateau usually with cliff-like sides, often capped by a layer of rock.

mé-sal-liance (mā"zăl"yäns'), n. [Fr. = misalliance], an undesirable marriage, especially with one of lower social status; a misalliance.

mes-cal (mĕs-kăl'), n. [< Sp. mezcal < Mex. mexcalli, name of plant], 1, either of two kinds of cactus from which the Indians prepare an intoxicant; 2, an intoxicating drink made from agave leaves; 3, any plant that yields the juice for making this liquor.

mes-dames (mā"dăm'), n. [Fr. = my ladies], plural of madam and madame.

mes-de-moi-selles (mād"mwà"zĕl'), n. [Fr. = my young ladies], plural of mademoiselle.—abbr. Mlles.: Mdlles.

me-seems (mē-sēmz'), v. impersonal, [me, an old dat. + seems], Archaic, it seems to me.

mes-en-ter-y (mĕs'ĕn-tĕr-ĭ), n. [pl. -teries (-ĭz)], [< Gk. mesos, middle + enteron, intestine], Anat. and Zoöl., a membrane that attaches the intestine to the body wall.—adj. mes"en-ter'ic.

mesh (mĕsh), n. [perh. < A.S. max, net], 1, one of the openings between the threads of a net: pl. the interlaced threads collectively; 2, a network, or something that entangles: Mech., the engagement of gear teeth; as, the wheels are in mesh:—v.t. 1, to entangle in, or as in, a net; 2, to make into a net or network: Mech., to engage: said of gear teeth:—v.i. 1, to become entangled; 2, to be engaged, as gear teeth.

Me-shach (mē'shăk), n. [< Heb.], Bib., a Jewish captive in Babylon who, with Shadrach and Abednego, survived the fiery furnace (Dan. 3).

me-si-al (mē'zĭ-ăl; mĕs'ĭ-ăl), adj. [< Gk. mesos, middle], Zoöl., of or pertaining to the middle line of the body; median; especially, designating the vertical plane that divides an animal's body into right and left halves.—adv. me'si-al-ly.

mes-mer-ic (mĕz-mĕr'ĭk), adj. [see mesmerism], 1, pertaining to, or produced by, mesmerism; hypnotic; 2, strongly attractive; fascinating.

mes-mer-ism (mĕz'mĕr-ĭzm), n. [< F. A. Mesmer (1733–1815), Ger. physician], 1, the producing of an unnatural nervous state, resembling a trance or sleep, in which the subject's behavior and sensations are easily influenced by suggestion; animal magnetism: more correctly called hypnotism; 2, the doctrines of Mesmer in regard to the influence of one person's mind and will over another's; 3, loosely, personal magnetism.—n. mes'mer-ist.

mes-mer-ize (mĕz'mĕr-īz), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -ized (-īzd), p.pr. -izing], 1, to produce a hypnotic trance or sleep in; hypnotize; hence, 2, to charm; fascinate.—n. mes'mer-i"zer.

mesne (mēn), adj. [Fr. < O.F. men, middle], Law, intermediate; intervening; as, a mesne lord is the tenant of his feudal superior and lord of him to whom he sublets his land.

mes-o-carp (mĕs'ō-kärp), n. [< Gk. mesos, middle + karpos, fruit], Bot., the middle layer of a pericarp, or wall of a fruit.

mes-o-derm (mĕs'ō-dûrm), n. [< Gk. mesos, middle + derma, skin], Zoöl., the middle germinal layer of the embryo, from which the muscular, vascular, and connective, including bony, tissues develop.—adj. mes"o-der'mal.—adj. mes"o-der'mic.

mes-o-phyll (mĕs'ō-fĭl), n. [< Gk. mesos, middle + phullon, leaf], Bot., the middle part of a blade of a leaf lying between the two epidermises, consisting of veins and food-forming cells.

mes-o-phyte (mĕs'ō-fīt), n. [< Gk. mesos, middle + phuton, plant], Bot., any plant adapted to a medium water supply: distinguished from hydrophyte and xerophyte.—adj. mes"o-phyt'ic (-fĭt'ĭk).

mes-o-tho-ri-um (mĕs"ō-thō'rĭ-ŭm), n. [meso- (< Gk. mesos, middle) + thorium], Chem., a radioactive substance, a decomposition product of thorium and the parent of radiothorium, having a duration of 5.5 years.

Mes-o-zo-ic (mĕs"ō-zō'ĭk), adj. [< Gk. mesos, middle + zōē, life], Geol., designating, or pertaining to, the geological era between the Paleozoic and the Cenozoic: sometimes called the Age of Reptiles (see geology, chart):—n. Geol., the Mesozoic era.

mes-quite (mĕs-kēt'; mĕs'kēt), n. [< Mex. Sp. mezquite, name of plant], a small tree or shrub (Prosopis glandulosa) found in southwestern North America, having fragrant flowers, feathery leaves, and sugary pods used as food or cattle fodder.

mess (mĕs), n. [< O.F. mes, dish; course at table < L.L. missum, that which is placed (on the table) < mittere, to place < Lat. mittere, to send], 1, a portion of soft or pulpy food; 2, a number of persons who take their meals together, especially soldiers and sailors; also, the meal itself; 3, a disagreeable concoction; medley; hence, a state of dirt or confusion; a muddle; botch: Colloq., enough for a dish or a meal: mess kit, a compact set of utensils for use in the army:—v.t. to provide food for: Colloq., 1, to befoul; soil; 2, to cast into confusion; 3, to muddle; botch: often with up:—v.i. 1, to eat together; 2, to potter; trifle; 3, to muddle.

mes-sage (mĕs'ăj), n. [Fr. < Lat. mittere, to send], 1, a communication, written, spoken, or otherwise delivered, from one person to another; specifically, 2, a formal communication of a chief executive to a legislative body.

mes-sen-ger (mĕs'ĕn-jĕr), n. [< Fr. messager: see message], 1, the bearer of a communication; also, one whose duty it is to run errands; 2, a herald or bringer of news; forerunner.

Mes-si-ah (mĕ-sī'ä), n. [< Gk. Messias < Heb. māshīakh, anointed one < māshakh, to anoint], 1, the awaited king and savior of the Hebrews; the Christ; 2, in the Christian church, Jesus, called Christ, regarded as this deliverer; 3, figuratively, any great national savior. Also, Mes-si'as.—n. Mes-si'ah-ship.—adj. Mes"si-an'ic (mĕs"ĭ-ăn'ĭk).

Mes-si-dor (mĕ"sĕ"dôr'), n. [Fr. < Lat. messis, harvest + Gk. dōron, gift], in the calendar adopted by the First Republic in France, 1793, the tenth month, from June 19 to July 18.

mes-sieurs (mĕs'yĕrz; mä"syö'), n. [pl. of monsieur], [Fr. = gentlemen], 1, sirs; gentlemen; 2, sometimes used as plural of Mister: generally abbreviated to Messrs. (mĕs'rz).

mess-mate (mĕs'māt"), n. [mess + ²*mate*], an associate at meals, especially on board ship; often, a close friend or companion.

mes-suage (mĕs'wĕj), n. [< A.F. mesuage, prob. corr. of mesnage, menage], Law, a dwelling house, with its outbuildings and lands.

mess-y (mĕs'ĭ), adj. [comp. -ier, superl. -iest], [see mess], untidy; soiled.—n. mess'i-ness.

mes-tee (mĕs-tē'), n. [W. Ind.], the child of a white person and a quadroon; an octoroon.

mes-ti-zo (mĕs-tē'zō), n. [pl. -zos (-zōz)], [Sp. < Lat. miscēre, to mix], anyone of mixed blood; especially, in Mexico and the western United States, the offspring of a Spaniard and an Indian.

met (mĕt), past tense and past participle of the irregular verb meet.

me-tab-o-lism (mē-tăb'ō-lĭzm), n. [< Gk. metabolē, change], Biol., the energy-yielding process essential to life, by which a living cell of plant or animal transforms food materials into its own protoplasm, by a process called anabolism, and by which food material and cell protoplasm are broken down by oxidation, by a process called katabolism, into waste matters.—adj. met"a-boi'ic (mĕt"ă-bŏl'ĭk).

met-a-car-pus (mĕt"ă-kär'pŭs), n. [< Gk. meta, beyond + karpos, wrist], Anat., that part of the hand or the forefoot between the carpus and the digits (see hand, illus.).—adj. met"a-car'pal.

met-a-cen-ter (mĕt"ă-sĕn'tĕr; mĕt'ă-sĕn"tĕr), n. [< Gk. meta, between + kentron, a point], Hydrostatics, the point of intersection marked by a vertical line drawn through the center of buoyancy of a floating body in equilibrium, and the vertical line drawn through the center of buoyancy when the body is slightly inclined from the position of equilibrium. Also, met"a-cen'tre.—adj. met"a-cen'tric.

met-a-gen-e-sis (mĕt"ă-jĕn'ĕ-sĭs), n. [< Gk. meta, after + genesis, production], Biol., the production of sexual and asexual forms in alternate generations of a complete life history of certain animals and plants; heterogenesis.

met-al (mĕt'ăl), n. [< Gk. metallon, a mine; mineral], 1, any of a class of elements, hard, heavy, opaque, characterized by luster of a peculiar kind called metallic, and capable of being drawn into a fine wire or hammered into thin plates, melted by heat, and of conducting electricity and heat; also, a mixture of such elements, as brass; 2, an object made of, or resembling, one or more of such substances; 3, material used for making something; as, road metal (that is, broken stone); 4, hence, spirit; temper; quality of a person; mettle; 5, in glassmaking, molten glass: Chem., any element that can replace the hydrogen of an acid; Her., either of the tinctures argent (silver) and or (gold); Print., type metal: hence, type set up: base metal, one which loses its luster when heated in air, as zinc, copper, iron, lead, etc.: noble metal, one which does not oxidize when heated in air, as gold, platinum, silver, etc.: fusible metal, any of a number of alloys which melt at a very low temperature: white metal, any of a number of white alloys, especially britannia metal, used for tableware:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -aled or -alled (-ăld), p.pr. -aling or -alling], to plate, cover, or furnish with metal.

me-tal-lic (mĕ-tăl'ĭk), adj. 1, pertaining to, consisting of, or like, a metal; 2, having the qualities of a metal; as, a metallic sound.

met-al-lif-er-ous (mĕt"ăl-ĭf'ĕr-ŭs), adj. [< Lat. metallum, metal + ferre, to bear], yielding metal or metallic ores.

met-al-line (mĕt'ăl-ĭn; -ĭn), adj. [see metal], Chem., 1, of the nature of metals; 2, impregnated with metallic salts.

met-al-log-ra-phy (mĕt"ăl-ŏg'ră-fĭ), n. [< Gk. metallon, metal + graphein, to write], 1, the study or science of the internal structure of metals; also, a treatise on the subject; 2, a method of engraving; 3, a method of decorating metals in imitation of wood.—n. met"al-log'ra-phist.

met-al-loid (mĕt'ăl-oid), n. [< Gk. metallon, metal + -eidēs, like], Chem., 1, any of several elements which have some but not all of the properties of a metal, as arsenic, antimony, tellurium, selenium, etc.; 2, a nonmetal:—adj. 1, resembling a metal; 2, pertaining to a metalloid.—adj. met"al-loi'dal.

met-al-lur-gy (mĕt'ăl-ûr"jĭ), n. [< Gk. metallourgos, metal worker < metallon, metal + -ergos, worker], 1, originally, the art or science of separating metals from their ores; 2, now, the art or science covering the manufacture and treatment of metals and alloys: ferrous metallurgy, the science of the manufacture and use of iron and steel.—adj. met"al-lur'gic; met"al-lur'gi-cal.—n. met'al-lur"gist.

met-a-mer (mĕt'ă-mĕr), n. [< Gk. meta, between + meros, a part], Chem., a compound that contains the same elements as another, combined in the same proportions and with the same molecular weight, but differing from it in chemical properties.

met-a-mere (mĕt'ă-mĕr), n. Zoöl., one of several similar segments of a longitudinal series of parts of a body, as in a worm (see Annelida, illus.).

met-a-mer-ic (mĕt"ă-mĕr'ĭk), adj. Chem., designating a compound which is a metamer of one or more others; Zoöl., pertaining to a metamere, or to an animal possessing metameres.—adv. met"a-mer'i-cal-ly.—n. me-tam'er-ism.

met-a-mor-phism (mĕt"ă-môr'fĭzm), n. [see metamorpho-is], change of form, shape, or structure: Zoöl., metamorphosis (which see); Geol., any of several processes by which minerals or rocks are changed from their original constitution.—adj. met"a-mor'phic.

met-a-mor-phose (mĕt"ă-môr'fōz; -fōs), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -phosed (-fōzd; -fōst), p.pr. -phosing], 1, to change to a different form; 2, to change the nature of:—v.i. Geol., to undergo change in constitution by natural forces; Zoöl., to undergo change of form, as in metamorphosis (which see).

met-a-mor-pho-sis (mĕt"ă-môr'fō-sĭs), n. [pl. -ses (-sēz)], [Lat. < Gk. meta- (implying change) + morphē, form], 1, a change of form, shape, or structure with or without a change in nature; a complete transformation; 2, the person or thing so changed: Zoöl., a striking change in the form and habits of an organism as it progresses from the egg to maturity, as when an insect's egg becomes successively a larva, a pupa, and an adult insect, or a tadpole becomes a frog; Bot., the development of plant organs, originally the same, into differentiated forms, as of stamens into petals; Physiol., metabolism.

METAMORPHOSIS

1, mosquito: a, egg; b, larva (wriggler); c, pupa; d, adult.—2, silkworm: a, pupa; b, larva (caterpillar); c, silk cocoon inclosing the pupa; d, adult female moth.

met-a-phor (mĕt'ă-fôr), n. [< Gk. metapherein, to transfer], Rhet., a figure of speech in which a name, action, or descriptive term characteristic of one object is applied to another to suggest a likeness between them, a in seething emotions: distinguished from simile by not having like or as to introduce it.—adj. met"a-phor'ic; met"a-phor'i-cal.—adv. met"a-phor'i-cal-ly.—n. met"a-phor'i-cal-ness.

met-a-phrase (mĕt'ă-frāz), n. [< Gk. metaphrazein, to translate], a close version; a word-for-word translation: distinguished from paraphrase:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -phrased (-frāzd), p.pr. -phrasing], 1, to translate literally; 2, to put into other words.—adj. met"a-phras'tic (mĕt"ă-frăs'tĭk).

met-a-phys-i-cal (mĕt"ă-fĭz'ĭ-kăl), adj. [< Gk. ta meta ta phusika, the works (of Aristotle) placed after the physics, or natural science], 1, of, pertaining to, or of the nature of, abstract philosophy; abstruse; speculative; 2, pertaining to, or based on, abstract qualities; reasoning from theories or abstractions; 3, above or beyond the material world; 4, designating a group of 17th-century poets, who employed fantastic or oversubtle imagery.

met-a-phy-si-cian (mĕt"ă-fĭ-zĭsh'ăn), n. one who is versed in abstract philosophy; a speculative philosopher.

met-a-phys-ics (mĕt"ă-fĭz'ĭks), n. pl. used as sing. 1, that branch of philosophy which deals with the nature, character, and causes of being and knowing, the existence of God, etc.: erroneously, the science dealing with the supernatural or magical; 2, the higher or theoretical principles underlying any particular science; 3, speculative philosophy in general; 4, popularly, abstruse or bewildering reasoning.

met-a-plasm (mĕt'ă-plăzm), n. [< Gk. meta, after + plasma, something molded], Biol., lifeless parts of cells, some consisting of formative material, as starch, fat, or the like.—adj. met"a-plas'mic.

met-a-sta-ble (mĕt'ă-stā'bl), adj. [< Gk. meta, beyond + Lat. stabilis, firm], Chem., designating, or pertaining to, a condition of comparative stability in a chemical substance or system which, though possessing some degree of permanence, under given conditions of pressure, temperature, etc., tends eventually to pass over into a more stable form.

me-tas-ta-sis (mē-tăs′tə-sĭs), n. [pl. -ses (-sēz)], [Gk. = change < meta, across + histanai, to place], Rhet., a sudden change of subject: Pathol., the transfer of disease from one part or organ to another not directly connected with it; Biol., metabolism.—adj. met′a-stat′ic.—adv. met′a-stat′i-cal-ly.

met-a-tar-sus (mĕt′ə-tär′sŭs), n. [pl. -si (-sī)], [L.L. < Gk. meta, beyond + tarsos, a flat surface], Anat., that part of the lower or hinder limb between the ankle and toes, consisting, in man, of five long bones in the foot (see foot, leg, illus.).—adj. and n. met′a-tar′sal.

me-tath-e-sis (mē-tăth′ē-sĭs), n. [pl. -ses (-sēz)], [< Gk. meta, across + tithenai, to place], Gram., the transposition of letters or sounds in a word, as bird for older brid; Med., the artificial change of position of a diseased substance in the body; Chem., an interchange of atoms between two molecules.

mete (mēt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. meted, p.pr. meting], [< A.S. metan, to measure < O.Teut. source], 1, to measure; 2, to apportion; give out by measure.

me-temp-sy-cho-sis (mĕ-tĕmp′sĭ-kō′sĭs), n. [pl. -choses (-kō′sēz)], [< Gk. meta- (implying change) + empsukhoun, to put a soul into (< en, into + psukhē, soul)], the passage of the soul of man or animal from one body to another; transmigration of souls: a doctrine taught in ancient Greece and Egypt, and still held to in East Indian belief.

me-te-or (mē′tē-ər), n. [< Gk. meteōros, raised; lofty], 1, a mass of matter from celestial space, which, because of its rapid motion, becomes luminous by friction with the atmosphere of the earth; a falling or shooting star: called a meteorite or aërolite if it reaches the earth; 2, technically, any atmospheric phenomenon, as hail, lightning, rainbows, etc.

me-te-or-ic (mē′tē-ôr′ĭk), adj. 1, of or pertaining to a meteor; 2, of or pertaining to other atmospheric phenomena; meteorological; 3, swift, dazzling; rousing a passing wonder.

me-te-or-ite (mē′tē-ər-īt″), n. a body, usually composed of iron, which has fallen upon the earth from outer space; an aërolite; loosely, a meteor.—adj. me′te-or-it′ic (-ĭt′ĭk).

me-te-or-o-graph (mē′tē-ôr′ə-grăf″; mē′tē-ər′-), n. [< Gk. meteōron, a meteor + graphein, to write], an instrument for automatically recording such weather conditions as temperature, barometric pressure, wind velocity, etc.—adj. me′te-or-o-graph′ic.—n. me′te-or-og′ra-phy.

me-te-or-oid (mē′tē-ôr-oid″), n. [< Gk. meteōron, a meteor + -eidēs, like], Astron., a small solid body of matter in space that becomes a meteor when it encounters the earth's atmosphere.

me-te-or-ol-o-gy (mē′tē-ôr-ŏl′ə-jĭ), n. [< Gk. meteōron, a meteor + -logia, a study], the science that treats of atmospheric phenomena, as variations in temperature, moisture, etc.: applied to weather forecasting.—adj. me′te-or-o-log′ic.—adj. me′te-or-o-log′i-cal.—n. me′te-or-ol′o-gist.

[1]me-ter (mē′tĕr), n. [< Gk. metron, a measure], Pros., rhythm; the measured arrangement, in a line of verse, of groups of syllables having a time unit and a regular beat; also, a specific arrangement of metrical groups; as, iambic meter (see prosody, NOTE); Mus., that part of musical composition or structure which depends on time values:—v.t. to arrange in metrical form, as a narrative. Also, me′tre.

[2]me-ter (mē′tĕr), n. [see mete], 1, a person who measures: usually an official; 2, an instrument, generally automatic, for measuring and recording the consumption or passage of liquids, gases, or electric current:—v.t. to measure with such an instrument.

[3]me-ter (mē′tĕr), n. [< Fr. mètre < Gk. metron, a measure], the standard unit of length in the metric system, equal to 39.37 + inches (see App. II); about one ten-millionth of the distance on a meridian from equator to pole. Also, me′tre.—abbr. m.

meth-ane (mĕth′ān), n. [< methyl, q.v.], Chem., a light, colorless, odorless, highly inflammable hydrocarbon gas found in nature as natural gas and as marsh gas; in coal mines called fire damp.

meth-an-ol (mĕth′ăn-ōl; -ŏl), n. [methan(e) + (alcoh)ol], Chem., wood, or methyl, alcohol: the official chemical designation.

me-theg-lin (mē-thĕg′lĭn), n. [< W. meddyglyn, mead < meddyg, healing (< Lat. medicus, physician) + llyn, liquor], a fermented beverage made of honey and water; mead.

me-thinks (mē-thĭngks′), v. impersonal, [p.t. methought (-thôt′)], [< A.S. mē, to me + thyncan, to seem], Archaic or Poet., it seems to me.

meth-od (mĕth′ŭd), n. [< Gk. methodos, system < meta, after + hodos, way], 1, the use of a defined or regular plan; also, a special or established form of systematic procedure; as, a method of teaching; 2, any way of doing anything; 3, orderly arrangement, classification, or the like; also, orderliness as a habit, 4, in natural history, a scheme of classification, based on the common characteristics of the forms classified: Mus., mode of instruction or of performance; technique.

Syn. way, system, manner, plan, design.

me-thod-i-cal (mē-thŏd′ĭ-kăl), adj. 1, pertaining to system or orderliness; arranged with regard to order; 2, devoted to order; systematic.—adv. me-thod′i-cal-ly.

Meth-od-ist (mĕth′ŭd-ĭst), n. a member of an evangelical denomination founded by John and Charles Wesley and others at Oxford, England, in 1729: so called because of the methodical habits of study and religious observance of the founders:—adj. pertaining to this denomination.—adj. Meth″od-is′tic.—adj. Meth″od-is′ti-cal.—n. Meth′od-ism.

meth-od-ize (mĕth′ŭd-īz), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -ized (-īzd), p.pr. -izing], to arrange in an orderly manner; make systematic.

meth-od-ol-o-gy (mĕth″ŭd-ŏl′ə-jĭ), n. [< Gk. methodos, method + -logia, a study], the science dealing with the theory of method: Logic, the division of logic dealing with the manner in which the abstract principles of reasoning can be applied to produce knowledge.

me-thought (mē-thôt′), past tense of the verb methinks: it seemed to me.

Me-thu-se-lah (mē-thū′sē-lə), n. [Heb. = man of the dart], Bib., a son of Enoch, who is recorded as having lived 969 years (Gen. 5:27).

meth-yl (mĕth′ĭl), n. [< Fr. méthyle < Gk. methu, wine + hulē, wood], Chem., a hypothetical radical, a compound of hydrogen and carbon, which exists only in combination, present in wood alcohol and other compounds: methyl alcohol, a light, mobile, volatile, inflammable, and poisonous liquid, obtained synthetically and also by the distillation of wood: used as a solvent and as fuel: also called wood alcohol; wood naphtha; methanol; wood spirit; methyl benzene, toluene, a colorless liquid derivative of benzene.

meth-yl-ate (mĕth′ĭ-lāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -ated, p.pr. -ating], 1, to mix or dilute, as ordinary, or ethyl, alcohol, with wood alcohol; denature, or render poisonous, as liquor, by adding wood alcohol; 2, to add a methyl group to (a compound): methylated spirit, ordinary, or ethyl, alcohol which has been made unfit for drinking by the addition of ten per cent of wood, or methyl, alcohol; denatured alcohol:—n. any compound of wood alcohol.

me-tic-u-lous (mē-tĭk′ū-lŭs), adj. [< Lat. meticulosus < metus, fear + -osus, full of], too careful of unimportant details; overscrupulous in trifles.—adv. me-tic′u-lous-ly.—n. me-tic′u-lous-ness.

mé-tier (mā′tyā′), n. [Fr. = profession], profession; trade; business; line of work.

me-tol (mē′tŏl; -tōl), n. [prob. a trade name], Chem., a fine, white, crystalline compound obtained from coal tar: used as a developer in photography.

Me-ton-ic cy-cle (mē-tŏn′ĭk), [< Gk. astronomer Metōn], Astron., a period of 235 synodic months, or approximately nineteen years, at the end of which the new moon recurs on the same day of the year at nearly the same time of day.

me-ton-y-my (mē-tŏn′ĭ-mĭ), n. [< Gk. meta- (implying change) + onoma, name], Rhet., a figure of speech in which not the literal word but one associated with it is used; as, the sword for war; the kettle boils. Cf. synecdoche.

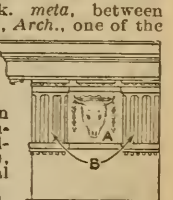
met-o-pe (mĕt′ō-pē), n. [< Gk. meta, between + opē, hole for beam], Arch., one of the square tablets, plain or sculptured, between two triglyphs in a Doric frieze.



METOPE (A), decorated with bull's head, between triglyphs (B).

[1]me-tre (mē′tĕr), n. [Fr.: see [1]meter], Pros., a measured arrangement of syllables in verse; Mus., that part of musical composition which depends on time values:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -tred (-tĕrd), p.pr. -tring], to arrange in metrical form. See [1]me′ter, Pfd. S.

[2]me-tre (mē′tĕr), n. [see [3]meter], the metric unit of length, about 39.37 inches. See [3]me′ter, Pfd. S.

met-ric (mĕt′rĭk), adj. 1, pertaining to, or involving, measurement; 2, of or pertaining to the meter or to the metric system; 3, relating to rhythm: metric system, a decimal system of weights and measures, having the meter (39.37 + inches) as the basic unit of length, the are (a square of ten meters on each side) as the unit of surface, the liter (a cube nearly one tenth of a meter on each edge) as the unit of capacity, and the gram (approximately equivalent to the weight of a cubic centimeter of water) as the unit of weight. (See tables in App. II.)—adj. met'ri-cal.—adv. met'ri-cal-ly.

met-ro-graph (mĕt'rō-grăf), n. [< Gk. metron, a measure + graphein, to draw], an apparatus attached to a locomotive to record its speed, and the number and duration of its stops.

me-trol-o-gy (mē-trŏl'ō-jĭ), n. [pl. -gies (-jĭz)], [< Gk. metron, a measure + -logia, a study], the science which deals with weights and measures.—adj. met"ro-log'i-cal.—n. me-trol'o-gist.

met-ro-nome (mĕt'rō-nōm), n. [< Gk. metron, a measure + nomos, law], an instrument for marking off exact intervals of time; especially, an inverted pendulum, moved by clockwork, with a weight adjustable to the various rates of speed, in a pyramid-shaped case.—adj. met"ro-nom'ic (-nŏm'ĭk).

METRONOME

me-tro-nym-ic (mē"trō-nĭm'ĭk; mĕt"rō-), adj. [< Gk. mētēr, mother + onoma, name], designating, or pertaining to, a name derived from that of the mother or other female ancestor: opposite of patronymic:—n. a metronymic, or maternal, name.

me-trop-o-lis (mē-trŏp'ō-lĭs), n. [pl. -lises (-ēz; -ĭz)], [< Gk. mētēr, mother + polis, city], 1, the capital of a country or state; 2, a principal center of population and civilization, as New York or London: Gk. Hist., the parent city or state of a colony; Eccl., the seat, or see, of a metropolitan bishop.

met-ro-pol-i-tan (mĕt"rō-pŏl'ĭ-tăn), adj. pertaining to the chief city or capital of a kingdom, country, or state:—n. a resident of a large city: Eccl., a bishop who has authority over the bishops of a province; an archbishop.

met-tle (mĕt'l), n. [var. of metal, q.v.], ardor, spirit, courage, etc.; the quality of disposition: usually in a favorable sense.—adj. met'tled (-ld).

met-tle-some (mĕt'l-sŭm), adj. high-spirited; fiery.—n. met'tle-some-ness.

[1]mew (mū), n. [< A.S. mæw, sea gull], a gull; especially, the common European gull (Larus canus): also called mew gull.

[2]mew (mū), n. [< Fr. muer, to shed feathers < Lat. mutare, to change], 1, a cage for confining hawks while molting, for fattening fowls, or the like; 2, imprisonment; concealment; also, a hiding place; den: pl. 1, originally, the royal stables in London, on the site of the old hawks' mews; 2, a stable, or group of stables, around a court:—v.t. to confine in, or as in, a cage; immure: Archaic, 1, to shed (feathers): said especially of hawks; 2, to cast (the horns): said of a stag:—v.i. to molt; hence, to change the appearance.

[3]mew (mū), n. [imit.], the cry of a cat:—v.i. to utter a sound or cry resembling mew.

mewl (mūl), v.i. [imit.], to whimper like a young child; cry weakly:—n. the cry of a baby.

Mex. abbr. abbreviation for the republic of Mexico; also, Mexican.

Mex-i-can (mĕk'sĭ-kăn), adj. [< Sp. Mexicano, Mejicano], pertaining to Mexico, a republic adjacent to the United States on the south, or to its language, customs, people, etc.:—n. 1, a native of Mexico; 2, the language of Mexico.

mez-za-nine (mĕz'ă-nĭn; -nēn), n. [< It. mezzanino, dim. of mezzano < Lat. medianus, in the middle], in a building, an extra floor between two others, usually the first and second, often in the form of a gallery; also called mezzanine floor.

mez-zo (mĕd'zō), adj. [It. = middle < Lat. medius, middle], Mus., moderate; half: mezzo forte, moderately loud: mezzo piano, moderately soft.

mez-zo-re-lie-vo (mĕd"zō-rĕ-lē'vō), n. [pl. -vos (-vōz)], [< It. mezzo, middle + rilievo, relief], in sculpture, a moderate projection of a figure or ornament from the background: intermediate between high and low relief. Also, mez"zo-ri-lie'vo (-lyā'vō), [pl. mezzi-rilievi (mĕd"zē-rē-lyā'vē)].

mez-zo-so-pra-no (mĕd'zō-sō-prä'nō), n. [It.], Mus., 1, a voice between high soprano and alto (for range, see music); 2, a person with such a voice.

mez-zo-tint (mĕd'zō-tĭnt; mĕz'ō-), n. [< It. mezzotinto < mezzo, half + tinto, tint < Lat. tinctus, painted], 1, a method of engraving on copper by which a velvety, soft-toned effect is produced in the print; 2, a picture engraved by this process:—v.t. to reproduce by mezzotint. Also, mez"zo-tin'to.

Mf. abbr. Mus., [It. mezzo forte], moderately loud (also, mf.; M.f.; m.f.):—mfd., manufactured:—mfg., manufacturing:—M. F. H., Master of Foxhounds:—mfr., [pl. mfrs.], manufacturer:—Mg, Chem., the symbol [Mg] for the element magnesium:—mg., milligram; milligrams:—M. G., Machine Gun; Machine Gun Unit:—mgr., manager:—Mgr., Monseigneur; Monsignor:—M. H. G., Middle High German.

mho (mō), n. [reversed spelling of ohm], a unit of electrical conductance, being that of a conductor whose resistance is one ohm.

M. Hon. abbr. Most Honorable:—M. H. R., Member of the House of Representatives:—mi., 1, mile; miles (also, m.); 2, mill; mills.

mi (mē), n. [see [2]do], Mus., a syllable used to designate the third degree of any diatonic scale, as e in the scale of c major: when flatted, called me (mā).

mi-aow (mĭ-ou'), n. [imit.], the cry of a cat:—v.i. to make or imitate a miaow:—interj. an imitation of a cat's cry: used in derision. Also, mi-aou'.

mi-as-ma (mī-ăz'mă), n. [pl. -mata (-mă-tă); -mas (-măz)], [Gk. < miainein, to pollute], a noxious vapor: formerly applied to malaria, which was supposed to originate in mists arising from swampy ground.—adj. mi-as'mal.—adj. mi"as-mat'ic.

mi-ca (mī'kă), n. [Lat. = crumb], Mineral., any of a large group of minerals, complex silicates of aluminum, possessing a characteristic cleavage, and readily separated into extremely thin, transparent or translucent plates or leaves: much used in the arts because of its physical structure and resistance to heat, electricity, and chemical action: often incorrectly called isinglass.—adj. mi-ca'ce-ous (mī-kā'shē-ŭs).

Mi-cah (mī'kă), n. [< Heb. Mīkāh, who is like Jehovah?], Bib., 1, a Hebrew prophet who lived about 757–700 B. C.; 2, a book of the Old Testament containing his prophecies (see Bible, NOTE). Also, in the Douay Bible, Mi-che'as (mī-kē'ăs).

Mi-caw-ber (mī-kô'bĕr), n. in Dickens's "David Copperfield," an optimistic, highly improvident character who was always expecting that "something would turn up."

mice (mīs), n. the irregular plural of the noun mouse, which see.

Mich. abbr. 1, official abbreviation for the state of Michigan; 2, Michaelmas.

Mi-chael (mī'kĕl), n. [< Heb. Mīkhāēl, who is like God?], Bib., one of the archangels, represented as leader of a host of angels and warring against Satan and his hosts in the heavenly regions (Rev. 12:7–9): prominent in Milton's "Paradise Lost."

Mich-ael-mas (mĭk'ĕl-măs), n. [Michael + Mass, feast], Eccl., a feast day in honor of St. Michael, celebrated September 29.

mick-le (mĭk'l), adj. [< A.S. micel, much < O.Teut. and Aryan source], Archaic, Dial. or Sc., 1, much; 2, large:—n. a large quantity. Also, muck'le.

mi-crobe (mī'krōb), n. [< Gk. mikros, small + bios, life], a microörganism; especially, a bacterium instrumental in producing disease.—adj. mi-cro'bic.—adj. mi-cro'bi-al.

mi-cro-ceph-a-ly (mī"krō-sĕf'ă-lĭ), n. [< Gk. mikros, small + kephalē, head], Med., abnormal smallness of the cranium.—adj. mi"cro-ceph'a-lous.—adj. mi"cro-ce-phal'ic (-sē-făl'ĭk).

mi-cro-chem-is-try (mī"krō-kĕm'ĭs-trĭ), n. [micro- + chemistry], chemical research involving the use of the microscope and dealing with microscopic particles.

mi-cro-coc-cus (mī"krō-kŏk'ŭs), n. [pl. -cocci (-kŏk'sī)], [< Gk. mikros, small + kokkos, berry], Biol., any of a genus (Micrococcus) of spherical-shaped bacteria which reproduce by division in two planes, including some which produce disease.

mi-cro-cosm (mī'krō-kŏzm), n. [< Gk. mikros, small + kosmos, world], 1, a world in miniature; a petty world; 2, hence, man, regarded as combining in himself the elements of the universe: opposite of macrocosm.—adj. mi"cro-cos'mic.

mi-cro-cos-mic salt (mī"krō-kŏz'mĭk), Chem., a compound phosphate of sodium, hydrogen, and ammonium, much used as a flux in experiments with the blowpipe.

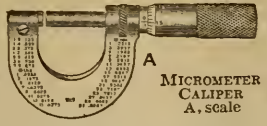
mi-cro-far-ad (mī"krō-făr'ăd), n. [micro- (< Gk. mikros, small) + farad], Elec., a unit of electrical capacity, equal to one millionth of a farad.

mi-cro-graph (mī'krō-grăf), n. [< Gk. mikros, small + graphein, to write], 1, an instrument for producing very minute engraving or writing; 2, a photomicrograph, or photograph of an object made by means of the microscope.

mi-crog-ra-phy (mī-krŏg'ră-fĭ), n. 1, the description or study of microscopic objects; 2, the practice of writing very minutely.

mi-crohm (mī′krōm; mī-krōm′), n. [< micro- (< Gk. mikros, small) + ohm]. Elec., a unit of resistance, equal to one millionth of an ohm.

mi-crom-e-ter (mī-krōm′ē-tĕr), n. [< Gk. mikros, small + metron, a measure], an instrument for measuring minute distances: often used in connection with a microscope or telescope: micrometer caliper, a gauge, having a fine screw, for making very accurate measurements, as of thickness.



MICROMETER CALIPER
A, scale

mi-cro-mo-tion (mī″krō-mō′shŭn), n. [micro- (< Gk. mikros, small) + motion], small or microscopic movement; movement of microscopic bodies:—adj. pertaining to such movement.

mi-cron (mī′krŏn; mīk′rŏn), n. [< Gk. mikros, small], the thousandth part of one millimeter, or the millionth of a meter.

mi-cro-ör-gan-ism (mī″krō-ôr′găn-ĭzm), n. [micro- (< Gk. mikros, small) + organism], a minute organism; a bacterium; microbe.

mi-cro-phone (mī′krō-fōn), n. [< Gk. mikros, small + phōnē, sound], Phys., an electrical device by which sound waves produce corresponding variations in an electric current by modifying the resistance of the circuit: used in the detection of weak sounds and in telephonic and radio transmission.

mi-cro-pho-to-graph (mī″krō-fō′tō-grăf), n. [micro- (< Gk. mikros, small) + photograph], 1, an exceedingly small, or microscopically minute, photograph of an object, picture, document, etc., discernible only by microscope; 2, a photograph of an exceedingly minute object, made by the aid of a microscope; a photomicrograph.—n. mi″cro-pho-tog′ra-phy (mī″krō-fō-tŏg′rə-fĭ).

mi-cro-phys-ics (mī″krō-fĭz′ĭks), n. pl. used as sing. [micro- (< Gk. mikros, small) + physics], a branch of physics dealing with the ultimate particles of matter.—adj. mi″cro-phys′i-cal.

mi-cro-scope (mī′krō-skōp), n. [< Gk. mikros, small + skopein, to look], an optical instrument for magnifying minute objects, so that they may be seen and studied.

mi-cro-scop-ic (mī″krō-skŏp′ĭk), adj. 1, pertaining to, seen by, or adapted to the purposes of, a microscope; 2, made, or as if made, by the aid of a microscope; hence, petty; insignificant; 3, very minute; very small; so small as to be invisible to the unaided eye.—adj. mi″cro-scop′i-cal.—adv. mi″cro-scop′i-cal-ly.

MICROSCOPE
D, drawtube; T, body tube; R, rack; PH, pinion head; MH, micrometer head; HA, handle arm; RN, revolving nose piece; O, objective; S, stage; SS, substage; P, inclination pillar; I, inclination joint; M, mirror; B, base.

mi-cros-co-pist (mī-krŏs′kō-pĭst; mī″krō-skō″pĭst), n. one who uses, or is skilled in using, a microscope.

mi-cros-co-py (mī-krŏs′kō-pĭ; mī″krō-skō″pĭ), n. the act or art of using the microscope; also, study by means of a microscope.

mi-cro-spo-ran-gi-um (mī″krō-spō-răn′jĭ-ŭm), n. [pl. -gia (-ə)], [< Gk. mikros, small + spora, seed + aggeion, vessel], Bot., a sac containing or producing numerous microspores, as in certain ferns and in the pollen sac of the anthers of flowers.

mi-cro-spore (mī′krō-spōr), n. [< Gk. mikros, small + spora, seed], Bot., 1, a small, asexually produced spore or cell, which upon germination produces the male gametophyte, or prothallium; 2, in seed-producing plants, a pollen grain.

mi-cro-tome (mī′krō-tōm), n. [< Gk. mikros, small + -tomos, that which cuts], an instrument for cutting objects into very thin sections or slices for examination under the microscope.

mid (mĭd), adj. [superl. midmost], [< A.S. midde, middle < O.Teut. source], middle: usually in combination; as, in mid-ocean, or in mid ocean:—prep. [< amid, q.v.], Poet., among; in the middle of.

mid. abbr. 1, midshipman: also, without period, used jocularly for sailor; 2, middle.

Mi-das (mī′dăs), n. [Gk.], Gk. Myth., a Phrygian king to whom was granted the power to change everything he touched into gold, but who begged release when his food and his daughter turned golden.

mid-day (mĭd′dā″), n. [mid + day], the middle hours of the day; noon:—adj. pertaining to the middle hours of the day.

mid-den (mĭd′n), n. [< O.N.: cf. Da. møgdynge, a dunghill], Archæol., a refuse heap containing bones, implements, etc., usually marking the dwelling place of primitive people: also called kitchen midden.

mid-dle (mĭd′l), adj. [< A.S. middel, middle < O.Teut. source], 1, equally distant from the extremes; halfway between two given points; mean; medial; 2, intermediate; intervening: Gram., designating a voice of the Greek verb, passive in form but not in meaning, employed when the subject acts upon, or intensifies, itself:—n. 1, a point or part equidistant from two extremes; 2, that which is intermediate.

mid-dle-aged (mĭd′l-ājd″), adj. neither young nor old: said of a person between the ages of about 40 and 60 years.

Mid-dle Ages the period between ancient and modern times, about A. D. 500–1400.—adj. Mid′dle-Age″.

mid-dle class the social class between the aristocracy and the laboring class: used especially of English society.—adj. mid′dle-class″.

Mid-dle Eng-lish that period in the development of the English language, approximately from 1150 to 1500, characterized by the dropping of many inflections, the addition of French words, and the partial fixation of spelling.

mid-dle-man (mĭd′l-măn), n. [pl. -men (-mĕn)], [middle + man], 1, one acting as intermediary, especially between producer and consumer; a broker; one who buys at wholesale and sells at retail; 2, in a minstrel troupe, the interlocutor.

mid-dle-most (mĭd′l-mōst), adj. [middle + most], midmost; in or nearest the middle.

mid-dle-weight (mĭd′l-wāt″), n. [middle + weight], 1, one who is of average weight; 2, in boxing, one who weighs 147, but less than 160, pounds.

mid-dling (mĭd′lĭng), adj. [see middle], of moderate rank, size, or quality; second-rate; mediocre: Colloq., fairly well in health:—adv. moderately:—n.pl. 1, commodities of medium quality, size, or the like; 2, a mixture of coarse-ground wheat and fine bran.

mid-dy (mĭd′ĭ), n. [pl. -dies (-ĭz)], [abbr. and dim. of midshipman], Colloq., 1, a midshipman, or naval cadet; 2, a middy blouse.

mid-dy blouse a kind of shirt or waist having a sailor collar, and reaching unconfined to the hips: worn by children, and by women for sports: also called middy.

Mid-gard (mĭd′gärd), n. [< O.N. midhgardhr, middle yard < midh, middle + gardhr, inclosure], Teut. Myth., one of the nine worlds composing the universe; the earth, midway between heaven and hell; the dwelling place of men. Also, Mid′garth.

midge (mĭj), n. [< A.S. mycg, gnat], 1, any very small fly or gnat: 2, a dwarf; midget.

midg-et (mĭj′ĕt), n. [dim. of midge], 1, a dwarf; also, a little child; 2, a biting midge.

Mi-di (mē″dē′), n. [Fr. = midday, noon], the south; especially, the southern part of France.

Mid-i-an-ite (mĭd′ĭ-ăn-īt), n. [< Heb. Midyan, strife], Bib., a member of a nomadic tribe formerly living in the desert south and east of Palestine, hostile to the Israelites (Num. 31:1–12; Judg. 6–7).—adj. Mid′i-an-it″ish.

mid–i-ron (mĭd″ī″ûrn), n. Golf, a club having an iron head on which the face is so inclined as to give the ball a moderately high path.

mid-land (mĭd′lănd), adj. [mid + land], inland; in the central part of a country:—n. the interior of a country: Midlands, the central counties of England, as Lincolnshire, Derbyshire, Warwickshire, etc. mid-most (mĭd′mōst), adj. [mid + most], superlative of mid; situated in the very middle; being the middle; hence, innermost; intimate.

mid-night (mĭd′nīt″), n. [mid + night], 1, the middle of the night; twelve o'clock at night; 2, intense darkness or gloom:—adj. like, pertaining to, or characteristic of, the middle of the night: midnight sun, the sun as seen from within the arctic or antarctic circle, where in summer it is visible for months continuously.

mid-rib (mĭd′rĭb″), n. [mid + rib], Bot., the vein along the center of a leaf.

mid-riff (mĭd′rĭf), n. [< A.S. midd, middle + hrif, belly], Anat., the muscular partition separating the cavity of the chest from that of the abdomen; the diaphragm.

mid-ship (mĭd′shĭp″), adj. [mid+ship], pertaining to, or in, the middle part of a ship.

mid-ship-man (mĭd′shĭp″măn), n. [pl. -men (-mĕn)], [mid+ship+man], 1, in the United States navy, one in training, usually at the Naval Academy, for a naval officer's commission; one who ranks next below an ensign; 2, in the British navy, a subordinate officer in training for promotion.

midst (mĭdst), n. [see mid], the middle; the central place:—prep. amidst.

mid-stream (mĭd′strēm′; mĭd′strĕm″), n. [mid+stream], the middle of a stream.

mid-sum-mer (mĭd′sŭm′ĕr; mĭd′sŭm′ĕr), n. [mid+summer], the period about June 21, or the longest day of summer; the middle of summer.

mid-way (mĭd′wā″; mĭd′wā′), adj. [mid+way], in the middle of the way or distance:—adv. (mĭd′wā′; mĭd′wā″), halfway:—n. (mĭd′wā″), the amusement section of an exposition or fair.

mid-week (mĭd′wēk″), n. [mid+week], the middle of the week: Midweek, Wednesday.

mid-wife (mĭd′wīf″), n. [pl. -wives (-wīvz″)], [< A.S. mid, with+wif, woman], a woman who assists women in childbirth.

mid-wife-ry (mĭd′wīf″rĭ; mĭd′wĭf-rĭ), n. the art or practice of assisting at childbirth.

mid-win-ter (mĭd′wĭn″tĕr; mĭd″wĭn′tĕr), n. [mid+winter], the middle of winter; the period about December 21, or the shortest day of winter:—adj. in the middle of winter.—adj. mid″win′try.

mien (mēn), n. [prob. abbr. of demean, influenced by Fr. mine, expression], appearance; demeanor.

miff (mĭf), Colloq., n. [imit., suggesting temper], a slight vexation; a trivial quarrel:—v.t. to provoke to ill humor; vex:—v.i. to become angry.—adj. miff′y.

¹might (mīt), past tense of the irregular verb may, which see.

²might (mīt), n. [< A.S. miht, power < O.Teut.], 1, force or power of body or mind; intensity of action; 2, power of compulsion; superior strength.

might-y (mīt′ĭ), adj. [comp. -ier, superl. -iest], 1, powerful; strong; having influence or authority; 2, wonderful; of extraordinary size, consequence, amount, etc.; as, a mighty wave:—adv. Colloq., very or exceedingly.—adv. might′i-ly.—n. might′i-ness.

mi-gnon (mĭn′yŏn; mē″nyôn′), adj. [Fr. = delicate], small; dainty.—adj. fem. mi′gnonne.

mi-gnon-ette (mĭn″yŭn-ĕt′), n. [Fr., dim. of mignon], any of a genus (Reseda) of plants, especially a fragrant, cultivated species (R. odorata) with greenish white flowers.

mi-graine (mī-grān′; mĭ′grān), n. [Fr. = headache < Gk. hemi, half+kranion, skull], a headache, usually affecting one side of the head only, and usually accompanied by nausea. Also, me′grim.

mi-grant (mī′grānt), adj. [see migrate], moving from place to place; roving; migratory:—n. a wanderer; also, a migratory bird or animal.

mi-grate (mī′grāt), v.i. [p.t. and p.p. migrated, p.pr. migrating], [< Lat. migrare (-atus), to wander], 1, to move from one country or locality to another for residence; also, to wander; 2, to move periodically from one climate or feeding ground to another, as various birds and animals.

mi-gra-tion (mī-grā′shŭn), n. 1, the act of migrating, or of moving from one region to another; 2, collectively, a group of migrating individuals.

mi-gra-to-ry (mī′grȧ-tō-rĭ), adj. 1, pertaining to migration; 2, wandering; roving; nomadic; 3, moving periodically from one climate or region to another with the change of season, as many birds.

mi-ka-do (mĭ-kä′dō), n. [Jap. < mi, august+kado, door], the emperor of Japan.

mil (mĭl), n. [< Lat. mille, a thousand], a unit of length equal to $\frac{1}{1000}$ of an inch.

mil. abbr. 1, military (also, milit.); 2, militia; 3, mileage; 4, million.

mi-la-dy (mĭ-lā′dĭ), n. [< my lady], literally, my lady; on the Continent, an English noblewoman or a woman of gentle birth.

Mi-lan-i-on (mĭ-lăn′ĭ-ŏn), n. [< Gk. Meilaniōn], Gk. Myth., in Arcadian legend, the husband of Atalanta, the famous huntress and fleet runner who took part in the Calydonian boar hunt.

milch (mĭlch), adj. [see milk], yielding milk; fresh: opposite of dry; as, a milch cow.

mild (mīld), adj. [< A.S. milde < O.Teut. source], 1, gentle in temper and disposition; kind; tranquil; temperate; calm; 2, moderate in quality or degree; not harsh, severe, or bitter: mild steel, Metal., steel low in carbon content: so called because relatively soft and easily worked.—adv. mild′ly.—n. mild′ness.

Syn. tender, merciful, soft, lenient, meek, serene.—Ant. harsh, rough, severe, perturbed, excited.

mil-dew (mĭl′dū), n. [< A.S. meledēaw, honeydew], 1, any of various minute parasitic fungi found on plants or decaying substances; 2, any of numerous diseases of plants produced by such parasites; 3, a spot or discoloration caused by various fungi on cloth, leather, paper, etc., usually when exposed to dampness:—v.t. to affect with mildew:—v.i. to become mildewed.—adj. mil′dew-y.

mile (mīl), n. [< A.S. mīl < Lat. milia (passuum), a thousand (paces)], a unit of linear measure containing 5,280 feet: geographical mile, in the United States, 6,080.27 feet; in England, 6,080 feet: also called nautical mile or knot: square mile, a measure of surface containing 640 acres: statute mile, in England and the United States, 320 rods, or 5,280 feet.

mile-age (mīl′ĭj), n. 1, an allowance of so much a mile for traveling expenses, paid to certain officials, as members of Congress; 2, aggregate distance in miles, as of travel, miles of track, etc.; 3, charge a mile for use of freight cars; 4, a mileage book: mileage book, a book of coupons issued by a railroad, entitling one to transportation for a specified number of miles.

mile post (mīl′pōst″), n. [mile+¹*post*], a signpost stating a distance in miles; a milestone.

mile-stone (mīl′stōn″), n. [mile+stone], a stone marker indicating the distance in miles from one point to another; also, one of a series of posts set up at intervals of a mile, as along a highway.

mil-foil (mĭl′foil), n. [< Lat. mille, thousand+folium, leaf], Bot., the common yarrow (Achillea millefolium), a field weed of the composite family, bearing many heads of small white blossoms and aromatic leaves resembling ferns: water milfoil, any of a genus (Myriophyllum) of plants with finely dissected leaves growing under water.

mil-i-a-ry (mĭl′ĭ-ȧ-rĭ; mĭl′yȧ-rĭ), adj. [< Lat. milium, millet], like a millet seed in size or form: Pathol., characterized by the formation in various organs of tiny bodies resembling millet seeds or by a fine skin eruption; as, miliary tuberculosis.

mi-lieu (mē″lyö′), n. [Fr. = center], environment; setting; medium.

mil-i-tan-cy (mĭl′ĭ-tăn-sĭ), n. [see militant], 1, warfare; 2, fighting spirit or policy.

mil-i-tant (mĭl′ĭ-tănt), adj. [< Lat. militans, serving as a soldier < miles, soldier], 1, warlike; combative; 2, pertaining to a conflict of opposing forces or influences:—n. 1, one who fights; 2, one who uses warlike or violent methods.

mil-i-ta-rism (mĭl′ĭ-tȧ-rĭzm), n. [see military], 1, a disposition to maintain national power by means of strong military forces; 2, a warlike policy; the policy of readiness to fight on slight provocation; 3, the exaltation of military ideals.

mil-i-ta-rist (mĭl′ĭ-tȧ-rĭst), n. 1, one who believes in war and a warlike policy; 2, an expert in military affairs.—adj. mil″i-ta-rĭs′tic.

mil-i-ta-ry (mĭl′ĭ-tā-rĭ), adj. [< Fr. militaire < Lat. militaris < miles, soldier], 1, pertaining to soldiers, arms, or warfare; martial; also, soldierly; 2, performed or supported by soldiers: opposite of civil; as, a military election: military police, in an army, a detail whose duty it is to preserve order, protect the inhabitants of an occupied or invaded district, care for prisoners of war, and arrest soldiers guilty of misconduct:—n. soldiers collectively; army; troops.

mil-i-tate (mĭl′ĭ-tāt), v.i. [p.t. and p.p. -tated, p.pr. -tating], [< Lat. militare (-atus), to be a soldier < miles (-itis), soldier], 1, to contend; wage war; usually with against or with; 2, to have force or weight; tell, as in an argument: said of things: usually with against; as, the evidence militates against acquittal.

mi-li-tia (mĭ-lĭsh′ȧ), n. [Lat. = soldiery < miles, soldier], 1, a body of citizens enrolled and trained for military service in organizations other than the regular military forces, but not called except in time of emergency: distinguished from the forces in active service; 2, in the United States, a body of persons between the ages of 18 and 45, consisting, subject to a few exceptions, of all able-bodied male citizens, and all foreign-born males who have declared their intention of becoming citizens; popularly, the organized militia, or National Guard.—n. mi-li′tia-man.

milk (mĭlk), n. [< A.S. meolc < O.Mercian milc < O. Teut. source], 1, a white fluid produced by the mammary glands of female mammals for the nourishment of their young; 2, the white juice of certain plants, as the milkweed; 3, any whitish fluid resembling milk; as, the milk of a coconut: milk of lime, slaked lime suspended in water: milk of magnesia, magnesium hydroxide suspended in water: used as a mild laxative and antacid: a trade name: milk of almonds, an emulsion prepared by rubbing blanched almonds with gum arabic, sugar, and water: used as a toilet lotion: condensed milk, milk from which a considerable amount of water has been removed by evaporation: ordinarily called evaporated milk if no sugar is added as a preservative: sugar of milk, a white, sweetish, crystalline powder, prepared from whey, used in pharmacy and in infant foods: also called milk sugar or lactose:—v.t. 1, to draw milk from; as, to milk a cow; 2, to draw out, as milk, sap, poison, etc.: Collog., 1, to steal messages from (telegraph or telephone wires); 2, to exploit; plunder; as, the stockbrokers milked the public:—v.i. to draw, or yield, milk.—n. milk'er.

milk leg Pathol., an affection, usually of the leg, attended by painful congestion, and whiteness of the skin: chiefly occurring after childbirth.

milk–liv-ered (milk'=liv"ĕrd), adj. white-livered; hence, timid; faint-hearted.

milk-maid (milk'mād"), n. [milk+maid], a woman who works in a dairy or milks cows.

milk-man (milk'măn), n. [pl. -men (-mĕn)], [milk+man], one who deals in milk or delivers it; a dairyman: Rare, a man who milks cows.

milk-sop (milk'sŏp"), n. [milk+sop], an effeminate, weak man.

milk sug-ar Chem., a white, sweetish powder, prepared from whey, used in pharmaceutical preparations and in infant foods: also called lactose and sugar of milk.

milk tooth one of the temporary set of teeth in the young of mammals; a baby tooth (see dentition, illus.).

milk-weed (milk'wēd"), n. [milk+weed], any of a large and widely spread family (Asclepiadaceæ), especially any of a genus (Asclepias), of plants with entire leaves and milklike sap, or latex.

milk-y (mil'kĭ), adj. [comp. -ier, superl. -iest], [see milk], 1, containing, or like, milk; 2, very mild; timorous; lacking in spirit; 3, giving milk.

Milk-y Way Astron., a broad, luminous band encircling the heavens, consisting of countless stars, not separately visible to the naked eye: also called Galaxy.

1mill (mil), n. [abbr. < Lat. millesimum, thousandth], the thousandth part of a dollar; $\frac{1}{10}$ of one cent.

2mill (mil), n. [< A.S. mylen < L.L. mulina, mill < Lat. molere, to grind], 1, a building equipped with machinery to grind grain; 2, any machine for grinding solid substances, as coffee, pepper, etc., or for extracting juice or sap; as, a cider mill; 3, a manufacturing plant, as a steel mill, paper mill, etc.: Slang, 1, a pugilistic encounter; 2, any wearing or exhausting experience: —v.t. 1, to subject to any operation like that performed by a mill; grind very fine, as grain; cut or saw (timber); roll or press (steel); crush (ore), etc.; 2, to make a raised border around the edges of (a coin); 3, to make frothy (cocoa or chocolate), as by churning or whipping; 4, in the United States, to cause to move in circles: said of cattle: Slang, to beat with the fists:—v.i. 1, to move in circles, as cattle; 2, to dive and swim in a new direction: said of whales; 3, to fight with the fists.

mill-board (mil'bōrd"), n. [²*mill*+board], a strong, flexible pasteboard used in bookcovers.

mill-dam (mil'dăm"), n. [²*mill*+¹*dam*], a barrier across a stream, forming a mill pond.

mil-le-na-ri-an (mil"ĕ-nā'rĭ-ăn), adj. [< Lat. millenarius, consisting of a thousand < millent, a thousand each < mille, thousand], 1, pertaining to, or consisting of, a thousand; 2, pertaining to the millennium, or to believers in it:—n. a believer in the coming of the millennium.

mil-le-na-ry (mil'ĕ-nā-rĭ), adj. pertaining to a thousand; especially, to a thousand years:—n. [pl. -ries (-rĭz)], 1, a period of a thousand years; 2, a thousandth anniversary; 3, a millenarian.

mil-len-ni-um (mĭ-lĕn'ĭ-ŭm), n. [pl. -ums (-ŭmz); -lennia (-ă)], [< Lat. mille, thousand+annus, year], 1, a period of a thousand years; specifically, 2, Theol., the thousand years when Christ will reign on earth (Rev. 20:1–5); hence, 3, a period of joy, prosperity, and righteousness.—adj. mil-len'ni-al.

mil-le-pede (mil'ĕ-pēd), n. [< Lat. mille, thousand+pes (pedis), foot], Zoöl., 1, in popular usage, any of an order (Diplopoda) of myriapods having cylindrical bodies of from 25 to 100 segments, most of which have two pairs of legs; 2, a kind of wood louse with many legs. Also, mil'le-ped (-pĕd); mil'li-pede (-pēd); mil'li-ped (-pĕd).

MILLEPEDE (½)

mil-le-pore (mil'ĕ-pōr), n. [< Lat. mille, thousand+porus, passage], Zoöl., any of a genus (Millepora) of coral-forming hydrozoans having a skeleton with smooth surface marked by numerous small perforations and cavities.

mill-er (mil'ĕr), n. [see ²mill], 1, one who owns or operates a mill, especially a flour mill; 2, a milling machine; 3, any of various moths whose wings appear as if covered with flour.

mill-er-ite (mil'ĕr-īt), n. [< W. H. Miller (1801–1880), Eng. mineralogist], Mineral., a bronze-colored mineral, sometimes of tufted or hairy structure; native nickel sulphide: an ore of nickel.

Mill-er-ite (mil'ĕr-īt), n. [< Wm. Miller (1782–1849)], a follower of William Miller, an American religious enthusiast, who predicted the second coming of Christ in 1843.

mill-er's–thumb (mil'ĕrz=thŭm"), n. any of various small, spiny-finned fishes (genera Coltus and Uranidea), having broad, flat heads and living in fresh, running water.

mil-les-i-mal (mĭ-lĕs'ĭ-măl), adj. [< Lat. millesimus, a thousandth], thousandth; composed of thousandth parts:—n. a thousandth.—adv. mil-les'i-mal-ly.

mil-let (mil'ĕt), n. [Fr., dim. of mil < Lat. milium, millet], 1, a cereal grass (Panicum miliaceum), native to India but widely cultivated elsewhere, bearing loose heads of minute seeds used for human food and for feeding birds: in the United States also cut for hay; 2, any of various grasses resembling millet in plant or seed: usually designated by a descriptive adjective; 3, the seed or grain of any of these grasses.

mil-li-am-me-ter (mil"ĭ-ăm'ē-tĕr), n. [< Lat. mille, thousand+Fr. am (père)+Gk. metron, a measure], Elec., an instrument for measuring current in milliamperes.

mil-li-am-pere (mil"ĭ-ăm-pār'), n. [milli- (< Lat. mille, thousand)+ampere], Elec., a unit equal to the thousandth part of an ampere.

mil-li-ard (mil'ĭ-ärd; -yärd), n. [Fr. < Lat. mille, thousand], in French usage, a thousand millions: in American usage generally called billion.

mil-li-are (mil'ĭ-ār; mĭl"ĭ-ār'), n. [< Lat. mille, thousand+Fr. are (< Lat. area, area; a space)], in the metric system, a measure of area; the tenth part of a square meter, or 1.076 square feet.

mil-lier (mē"lyā'), n. [Fr.], a metric ton; 1,000 kilograms, or 2,204.6 pounds, avoirdupois.

mil-li-gram (mil'ĭ-grăm), n. [< Lat. mille, thousand+Gk. gramma, a weight], the thousandth part of a gram. Also, mil'li-gramme.

Mil-li-kan rays (mil'ĭ-kăn), [< R. A. Millikan (1868–), Am. physicist], radiations similar to X rays, but having much greater penetrating power: penetrating rays (which see).

mil-li-li-te. (mil'ĭ-lē"tĕr), n. [< Lat. mille, thousand+Fr. litre < Gk. litra, a pound], the thousandth part of a liter, equal to one cubic centimeter or 0.06102 cubic inch. Also, mil'li-li're.

mil-li-me-ter (mil'ĭ-mē"tĕr), n. [< Lat. mille, thousand+Gk. metron, a measure], a lineal measure equal to the thousandth part of a meter or .03937 of an inch. Also mil'li-me're.

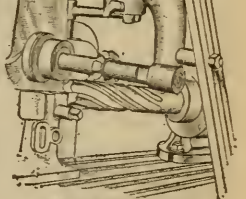
mil-line (mil'lin"), n. [mil(lion)+¹*line*], Advertising, a unit of measurement, used in determining advertising cost, the equivalent of one agate line in one million copies.

mil-li-ner (mil'ĭ-nĕr), n. [< Milan: because orig. a seller of Milan goods], a maker or trimmer of, or a dealer in, women's hats, headdresses, etc.: Obs., a dealer in fancy wares, ribbons, etc.

mil-li-ner-y (mil'ĭ-nĕr-ĭ), n. [pl. -neries (-ĭz)], 1, articles such as women's hats, bonnets, etc., made or sold by milliners; 2, the business of making and selling hats.

mill-ing (mil'ĭng), n. [see ²mill], 1, the act of subjecting something to the operation of a mill, or of anything that grinds, cuts, presses, finishes, manufactures, etc., like a mill; especially, 2, the manufacture of flour and other cereal foods from grain; 3, on an unfinished coin blank, a thickened edge or raised border; 4, on a finished coin, the vertical fluting or reeding, producing a roughened outer rim (see engrailment, illus.); also, the roughened outside surface of a screw or nut that is to be turned by hand: milling machine, a machine tool, driven by power, provided with revolving cutters, used for cutting gear teeth.



MILLING MACHINE
Cutting a spiral channel in a twist drill.

mil-lion (mĭl'yŭn), n. [< It. millione < Lat. mille, a thousand], 1, ten hundred thousand: written 1,000,000; 2, an indefinitely large number: the million, the mass of common people.

mil-lion-aire (mĭl"yŭn-ãr'), n. 1, one who has a million, or more, dollars, pounds, or the like; 2, a very rich person. Also, mil'lion-naire'.

mil-lionth (mĭl'yŭnth), adj. 1, coming last in order in a series of a million: the ordinal of million; 2, designating one of a million equal parts of anything:—n. 1, the quotient of one divided by a million; 2, one of a million equal parts of anything.

mil-li-pede (mĭl'ĭ-pēd), n. [< Lat. mille, thousand + pes (pedis), foot], 1, any of an order (Diplopoda) of myriapods; 2, a kind of wood louse. Also, mil'li-ped (-pĕd). See mil'le-pede, Pfd. S.

mil-li-volt (mĭl'ĭ-vōlt), n. [milli- (< Lat. mille, thousand) + volt], Elec., a measure of electromotive force; the thousandth part of a volt.

mil-li-volt-me-ter (mĭl'ĭ-vōlt-mē"tẽr), n. [milli-volt + meter], an instrument for measuring voltage in terms of millivolts.

mil-li-watt (mĭl'ĭ-wŏt), n. [milli- (< Lat. mille, thousand) + watt], Elec., a measure of power; the thousandth part of a watt.

mill pond a small lake, or pond, where water is stored to provide power for a mill.

mill race a channel or watercourse through which water is conducted to a mill wheel; also, the current driving the wheel.

mill-stone (mĭl'stōn"), n. [²*mill* + stone], 1, one of two, flat, circular stones used for grinding grain; 2, a heavy burden: in allusion to Matt. 18:6.

mill wheel a large wheel, turned by a current of water, which drives a mill.

mill-wright (mĭl'rīt"), n. [²*mill* + wright], one who builds mills or installs their machinery.—n. mill'wright"ing.

mi-lord (mē-lôr'; mĭ-lôrd'), n. [< my lord], literally, my lord: a French term for an English nobleman or a man of wealth.

mil-reis (mĭl'rās; -rēs), n. sing. and pl. [< Port. mil, thousand + reis, Port. pl. of ²*real*], 1,000 reis; a monetary unit of Brazil, equivalent to 54.6 cents.

milt (mĭlt), n. [< A.S. milte, spleen, perh. < meltan, to melt], 1, the male reproductive glands of a fish when filled with seminal fluid; also, the fluid itself; 2, locally, the spleen in mammals:—adj. designating a male fish in which the milt, or reproductive glands, are active:—v.t. to impregnate (spawn) with milt.—n. milt'er.

mim (mēm), n. [Arab.], the 24th letter of the Arabic alphabet (see App. I), approximately equivalent to the English m: as a numerical symbol, 40.

mime (mīm), n. [< Gk. mimos, actor], 1, among the Greeks and Romans, a kind of drama in which real persons and events were more or less travestied; 2, an actor in such a drama; 3, a clown; a mimic:—v.i. [p.t. and p.p. mimed (mīmd), p.pr. miming], to act or play a part, usually without words:—v.t. 1, to imitate; 2, to mimic.—n. mim'er.

mim-e-o-graph (mĭm'ē-ō-grăf"), n. [< Gk. mimeisthai, to imitate + graphein, to write], an apparatus invented by T. A. Edison for making copies of written or typewritten matter by means of a stencil and an ink roller:—v.t. to copy by means of such an apparatus.

mi-met-ic (mĭ-mĕt'ĭk; mī-), adj. [< Gk. mimētēs, imitator], 1, inclined to imitate; gifted as a mimic; 2, pertaining to, or marked by, imitation.

mim-ic (mĭm'ĭk), adj. [< Gk. adj. mimikos, mimic < mimos, imitator; actor], 1, pertaining to mimicry; of the nature of mimicry; 2, imitative; 3, mock; simulating the real; as, mimic warfare:—n. an imitator; especially, one practiced in ludicrous or servile imitation:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -icked (-ĭkt), p.pr. -icking], 1, to ridicule by copying (a person's manners, characteristics, etc.); 2, to copy closely; usually suggesting servile or ridiculous imitation; ape: Zoöl., to resemble (some animal or object) in form, color, etc., as in the case of certain insects.—adj. mim'i-cal.—n. mim'ick-er.

Syn., v. mock, ape, copy. (See imitate.)

mim-ic-ry (mĭm'ĭk-rĭ), n. [pl. -ries (-rĭz)], the practice or art of one who imitates or mimics, in sport or otherwise: Zoöl., the outward likeness of an animal to parts of plants or to another unrelated animal, as the resemblance of certain flies to bees.

Syn. imitation. (See parody.)

Mi-mir (mē'mẽr), n. [O.N.], Norse Myth., the giant guardian of the spring of wisdom beneath Yggdrasill, for a draft from which spring Odin gave one of his eyes.

mi-mo-sa (mĭ-mō'sȧ; mī-mō'sȧ; -zȧ), n. [< Gk. mimos, imitator], any of a genus (Mimosa) of plants of the pea family, growing in warm regions, represented by herbs, shrubs, and trees, and including the sensitive plant (M. pudica).

min. abbr. 1, minim; 2, minimum; 3, mining; 4, minor; 5, minute; 6, mineralogy; 7, mineral.

mi-na (mī'nȧ), n. [pl. -næ (-nē); -nas (-nȧz)], [< Gk. mna, money unit], in ancient Greece and Egypt, a varying unit of weight; also, a monetary unit equal to about $\frac{1}{60}$ of a talent.

mi-na-cious (mĭ-nā'shŭs), adj. [< Lat. minax (-acis), threatening], threatening; menacing; minatory.—adv. mi-na'cious-ly.

min-a-ret (mĭn'ȧ-rĕt), n. [< Arab. manārat, lighthouse; turret < nār, to shine], a tall, slender tower connected with a Mohammedan place of worship, constructed with encircling balconies at various heights, from which the call to prayer is made by a public crier, called a muezzin.

min-a-to-ry (mĭn'ȧ-tō-rĭ), adj. [< O.F. minatoire < Lat. minari, to threaten], threatening; especially, threatening with a penalty; menacing.

mince (mĭns), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. minced (mĭnst), p.pr. mincing], [< O.F. mincier < L.L. minutia, a small piece < Lat. minutus, small], 1, to cut or chop into minute bits; hash; 2, to tell in part or by degrees; lessen the harshness of; palliate; weaken: mainly in the expressions, to mince matters; to mince words; 3, to utter with unnatural and assumed elegance:—v.i. 1, to talk with assumed elegance; 2, to display affectation in walking or demeanor; walk precisely or primly.

mince-meat (mĭns'mēt"), n. [mince + meat], 1, a finely chopped mixture of raisins, apples, spices, etc., and sometimes meat, used as a filling for pie; hence, 2, anything chopped very fine.

minc-ing (mĭn'sĭng), p.adj. [see mince], 1, with assumed elegance; affected; 2, walking primly.—adv. minc'ing-ly.

mind (mīnd), n. [< A.S. gemynd, memory < munan, to think], 1, the power or act of remembering; recollection; 2, the seat of consciousness, contemplation, thought, opinion, and feeling; 3, the understanding or intellect, especially when normal; sanity; 4, intention; purpose; 5, inclination; choice; 6, a person, especially with regard to his mental attributes: Psych., the entirety of mental experience; the aggregate of processes connected with the functioning of the brain and the nervous system; Philos., consciousness; the conscious element in the universe: opposite of matter:—v.t. 1, to pay attention to; 2, to regard with attention; note; 3, to object to; dislike; feel annoyance at; 4, to obey; 5, to watch; tend: Colloq., to remember; Obs., to remind:—v.i. 1, to obey; be obedient; 2, to be troubled; as, never mind if you do fall; 3, to be careful or wary.

Syn., n. understanding, brain. (See intellect.)

mind cure psychotherapy: a system of treating disease by means of mental suggestion.

mind-ed (mīn'dĕd), p.adj. 1, having a mind; 2, disposed or inclined; having the wish or purpose (to do something).

mind-ful (mīnd'fo͝ol), adj. keeping in one's thought; attentive; heedful; considerate: used with of.—adv. mind'ful-ly.—n. mind'ful-ness.

mind-less (mīnd'lĕs), adj. 1, forgetful; disregarding: with of; 2, without mind.

mind read-er one who has the ability to perceive another's thought or purpose without apparent means of communication.

¹mine (mīn), n. [< Fr. miner, to mine; prob. < Celt.], 1, in mining, an excavation from which minerals, precious stones, etc., are dug out; also, a deposit of ore or coal: generally distinguished from a quarry; 2, figuratively, an inexhaustible supply of anything, or a source of great wealth; 3, a firework in which a glowing light culminates in an explosion and discharge of balls of fire into the air: Mil., 1, a cavity, at the end of a tunnel run under an enemy's trench or fortification, in which is fired a charge of high explosive; 2, a device, as a case containing a high explosive, on or near the surface of the water, fired by contact with a passing vessel, or by electricity, as from a fort: open pit mine, a mine open like a quarry, as the iron mines of Minnesota:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. mined (mīnd), p.pr. mining], 1, to make or get by digging underground; as, to mine coal; 2, to dig into, as for ore or metals; 3, to destroy slowly or secretly; undermine; sap: Mil., to place explosives under (an enemy's work); moor submerged explosives in (a harbor, river, ocean lane, or the like); undermine; lay a mine under:—v.i. 1, to carry on the work of digging for metals, etc.; 2, to burrow; 3, to practice secret or underhand methods: Mil., to lay explosives, as under an enemy's work or in a harbor.

COAL MINE: A, shaft mining: vertical section, showing shaft, strata, and, in one stratum, tunnels and rooms, with roof props; a, culm pile; b, shaft elevator; c, breaker.—B, stripping, or mining with an excavator where a stratum crops out at the surface.

²mine (mīn), poss. pron. [A.S. mīn, of me, mine < O. Teut. source], a person or thing belonging to me; as, a joy to me and mine; your hat is red, mine is blue: often after of; as, a friend of mine:—poss. adj. belonging to me: used as a predicate adjective: as, whose hat is this? it is mine; also used archaically before a vowel or h: as, mine eyes; mine host.

min-er (mīn'ẽr), n. [see ¹mine], one who works in a mine; one engaged in digging for metals or minerals: Mil., a soldier who digs a tunnel beneath the enemy's works; a soldier who lays mines.

min-er-al (min'ẽr-ăl), adj. [< Fr. minéral < miner, to mine], 1, pertaining to, consisting of, or like, a substance or substances not animal or vegetable; inorganic; as, the mineral kingdom; 2, pertaining to ore, coal, precious stones, or the like; 3, impregnated with a mineral or minerals; as, mineral water: mineral jelly, a jellylike, unctuous substance obtained from petroleum; petrolatum; vaseline: mineral oil, 1, petroleum; 2, kerosene; 3, liquid paraffin, a colorless, tasteless, viscid, inert derivative of petroleum, used as an intestinal lubricant: mineral wool, fibrous material produced by injecting a jet of air or steam through a stream of blast-furnace slag: used as a nonconductor for covering steam pipes, as a sound deadener for the floors of buildings, etc.:—n. 1, any substance not animal or vegetable in origin; anything inorganic; 2, any of a large group of natural inorganic substances, having a homogeneous structure, a specific chemical composition, uniform physical characteristics, and usually a definite form of crystal; also, any substance exhibiting similar properties as the result of inorganic processes, even though organic in origin, as coal: Mining, ore; sometimes, the smelted or refined content of ore; sometimes, ore as excavated with accompanying foreign material.

min-er-al-ize (min'ẽr-ăl-īz), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -ized (-īzd), p.pr. -izing], 1, to transform (a metal) into a mineral, as into ore; as, to mineralize iron by exposing it to the air; 2, to petrify; 3, to impregnate with minerals, as water:—v.i. to study minerals. Also, min'er-al-ise.—n. min'er-al-i-za'tion.

min-er-al-iz-er (min'ẽr-ăl-īz''ẽr), n. an element, as sulphur, which in combination with a metal forms an ore: Mineral., a volatile or readily evaporating substance that aids in the crystallization of minerals or in the formation of artificial mineral species. Also, min'er-al-is''er.

min-er-al-o-gist (min''ẽr-ăl'ŏ-jĭst), n. [see mineralogy], one skilled, or well informed, in the science of minerals.

min-er-al-o-gy (min''ẽr-ăl'ŏ-jĭ), n. [pl. -gies (-jĭz)], [< Fr. minéral + Gk. -logia, a study], 1, the science of minerals; 2, a work or treatise on minerals.—adj. min''er-al-og'i-cal.

Mi-ner-va (mĭ-nûr'vă), n. [Lat.], Class. Myth., the goddess of wisdom and handicraft or invention: identified with the Greek Athena.

mi-ne-stro-ne (mē''nă-strō'nā), n. [It.], a kind of rich, thick vegetable soup.

mine sweep-er Nav., a vessel used in destroying submarine or floating mines.

min-e-ver (min'ẽ-vẽr), n. [see miniver], a kind of white fur; ermine. See min'i-ver, Pfd. S.

min-gle (ming'gl), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -gled (-gld), p.pr. -gling], [< M.E. mengel < A.S. mengan, to mix], 1, to combine by mixing; blend; 2, to associate; 3, to make or prepare by mixing various things together; concoct:—v.i. to enter into intimate relation; mix; blend.

Syn. unite, intermingle, join, merge. (See mix.)

min-i-a-ture (min'ĭ-ă-tūr), n. [< It. miniatura < Lat. miniare (-atus), to paint with vermillon < minium, vermillon; red lead], 1, an illumination, as on medieval manuscripts; 2, a very small painting, especially a portrait on ivory:—adj. done on a very small scale; minute.

Min-i-é ball (mĭn'ĭ-ā; popularly, mĭn'ĭ), [< C.E. Minié (1814–79), Fr. inventor], a conical rifle bullet with a hollow base, into which is fitted an iron cup containing powder, which, when the shot is fired, expands the lead into the rifling.

min-i-kin (mĭn'ĭ-kĭn), n. [< Du. minneken, dim. of minne, love], something very small and delicate: Obs., a darling:—adj. 1, diminutive; delicate; 2, affected; mincing.

min-im (mĭn'ĭm), n. [< Lat. minimus, smallest], 1, the smallest liquid measure, equivalent to $\frac{1}{60}$ of a fluid dram, about one drop; 2, in penmanship, the down stroke of a pen: Mus., a half note:—adj. smallest; most minute.—adj. min'i-mal.

min-i-mize (mĭn'ĭ-mīz), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -mized (-mīzd), p.pr. -mizing], to reduce to, or estimate at, the smallest degree, part, or proportion; underestimate: used often in a depreciatory sense.

min-i-mum (mĭn'ĭ-mŭm), n. [pl. -ma (-mă); -mums (-mŭmz)], 1, the least quantity: opposite of maximum; 2, the lowest point reached or recorded, as of temperature; 3, the least quantity admissible:—adj. lowest; least possible or allowable: minimum wage, a wage fixed by law as the lowest wage that may be paid in a specified class of employment.

min-ing (mīn'ĭng), p.adj. [see ¹mine], pertaining to the excavating of metals, ores, precious stones, or the like, or to the laying of explosives:—n. 1, the act of making or working mines for ores or minerals; 2, the act or practice of laying military mines.

min-ion (mĭn'yŭn), n. [< Fr. mignon, darling: used contemptuously of certain favorites at the French court, with resulting modern meaning], 1, an obsequious favorite, attendant, or dependent; 2, a slave: Obs., a mistress: Print., a size of type, about equivalent to 7 point (for illus. see App. I).

min-ish (mĭn'ĭsh), v.t. [< O.F. menusier < Lat. minuere, to lessen], Archaic. 1, to decrease; 2, to reduce in power:—v.i. Archaic, to become less.

min-is-ter (mĭn'ĭs-tẽr), n. [< O.F. < Lat. ministrare (-atus), to serve], 1, an executive official intrusted by the head of a government with the direction of a governmental department; 2, a diplomatic agent, of lower rank than an ambassador, sent to a foreign government; 3, a clergyman or pastor of a church, authorized to preach and administer the sacraments: Archaic, one who holds a subordinate position; a servant:—v.i. 1, to serve; act as an attendant or servant; 2, to give aid: with to; 3, to serve as pastor of a church:—v.t., Archaic, to supply; furnish with what is required; Obs., to administer; dispense.—adj. min''is-te'ri-al(mĭn''ĭs-tē'rĭ-ăl).—adv. min''is-te'ri-al-ly.

min-is-te-ri-al-ist (mĭn''ĭs-tē'rĭ-ăl-ĭst), n. a supporter of the officials of a government, and hence of the party in power.

min-is-trant (mĭn'ĭs-trănt), adj. serving; rendering aid:—n. one who serves or aids.

min-is-tra-tion (mĭn''ĭs-trā'shŭn), n. 1, the act of serving as a pastor, of helping, aiding, attending, or the like; 2, service; aid.

min-is-try (mĭn'ĭs-trĭ), n. [pl. -tries (-trĭz)], 1, the act of serving; service; 2, the service of one who preaches a religion; 3, the office or duties of an officer of state; 4, clergy or officers of state collectively; 5, the term of service, as of an officer of state.

min-i-um (mĭn'ĭ-ŭm), n. [Lat. = red lead], a bright red color; vermilion: Mineral., red oxide of lead in the form of a heavy granular powder.

min-i-ver (mĭn'ĭ-vẽr), n. [< Fr. menu vair, dainty fur], 1, an ermine in its white winter fur; 2, any soft white fur used during the Middle Ages for trimming ceremonial robes. Also, min'e-ver.

mink (mĭngk), n. [< L.G. mink, menke, otter], 1, a semiaquatic, fish-eating mammal (Putorius vison), with brown fur, shaped like a weasel; 2, its fur.

Minn. abbr. official abbreviation for the State of Minnesota.

min-ne-sing-er (mĭn'ẽ-sĭng''ẽr), n. [< Ger. minne, love + singer, a singer: because the theme of their songs was usually love], from the 12th to the 14th century, a German troubadour of noble birth, a poet as well as a musician and composer, who accompanied his own songs, usually with a lute: used of the class which preceded the Meistersinger (which see). Also, Min'ne-sing''er.

min-now (mĭn'ō), n. [< A.S. myne < O.H.G. munewa, minnow], 1, any of several small fresh-water fishes of the carp family, common both in Europe and America; 2, locally, any of various other small fishes or the young of larger fishes.

mi-nor (mī′nĕr), adj. [Lat. = less], 1, less in quantity, number, or extent; smaller; 2, inferior; of less importance; 3, not yet having reached the age of majority: Mus., 1, of a scale, made up of intervals some of which differ in certain ways from those in the major scale (see NOTE, below): used of either of two scales: (a), the tonic minor scale, which begins on the same tone as the corresponding major; as, C minor is the tonic minor of C major; (b) the relative minor scale, with the same key signature as its major, but beginning a step and a half below: as, A minor is the relative minor of C major (see ³*scale*, illus.); 2, of an interval, less by a half step than the related major interval; as, a minor third has a whole and a half step; 3, of chords, melodies, or modes, characterized by the use of tones and intervals in a minor scale; Logic, designating that term of a syllogism, or the premise embracing the term, which brings a specific case under a general rule (for sample see syllogism): minor planets, Astron., the small planets which revolve chiefly between the orbits of Mars and Jupiter: also called planetoids; asteroids:—n. 1, one who is under the age of majority; 2, in American school and college usage, a subject next in importance to a student's major subject: Logic, in a syllogism, the minor premise; also, the minor term.

NOTE.—In modern music there are three recognized minor scales, distinguished by the position of the half steps. In the following, the asterisks denote tones of a scale; the symbols ∪, –, – ∪, denote intervals of a half step, step, and step and a half respectively; a and d denote ascending and descending (see also ³*scale*, illus.).

[Major (a or d) * – * – * ∪ * – * – * – * ∪ *]

Normal minor, or original minor (a or d)
* – * * – * – * ∪ * – * – *

Harmonic minor (a or d) * – * ∪ * – * – * ∪ * – ∪ * ∪ *

Melodic minor (a) * – * ∪ * – * – * – * *

Melodic minor (d) * – * ∪ * – * – * ∪ * – * – *

mi-nor-i-ty (mī-nŏr′ĭ-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], 1, the smaller, numerically, of two parts or parties into which a group is divided; any party numerically smaller than the largest within a group: opposite of majority; 2, the state of being under age.

Mi-nos (mī′nŏs), n. [< Gk.], Gk. Myth., 1, a king of Crete, son of Zeus and Europa, who after death became one of the judges in Hades; 2, a grandson of the preceding, also king of Crete, owner of the Labyrinth and the Minotaur (which see).

Min-o-taur (mĭn′ō-tôr), n. [< Gk. Minōs, Minos + tauros, a bull], Gk. Myth., a monster with a bull's head and a human body, which was kept by King Minos in the Cretan Labyrinth and which periodically devoured seven youths and seven maidens sent as tribute from Athens, until slain by Theseus.

MINOTAUR

min-ster (mĭn′stẽr), n. [< A.S. mynster, monastery church: see monastery], 1, the church of a monastery; 2, in England, a cathedral: often found in the names of towns: as, Ax*minster*; Ux*minster*; West*minster*.

min-strel (mĭn′strĕl), n. [< O. F. menestral < Lat. minister, servant], 1, in the Middle Ages, a traveling poet and musician who accompanied his poems with the harp or lute; 2, in the modern theater, any of a company, with blackened faces, who entertain with songs, jokes, buffoonery, etc.: originally, a singer of negro melodies: Poet., any poet.

min-strel-sy (mĭn′strĕl-sĭ), n. [pl.-sies (-sĭz)], 1, the art of singing and playing as practiced by the minstrels of the Middle Ages; 2, a company of medieval minstrels; 3, a collection of minstrels' ballads or lyrics.

¹mint (mĭnt), n. [< A.S. minte < Lat. mentha < Gk. minthē, mint], 1, any of a large family (Labiatæ) of generally square-stemmed, aromatic-leaved herbs, especially any of a genus (Mentha) extensively used in condiments or as the source of flavoring extracts; 2, a confection flavored with such an extract.

²mint (mĭnt), n. [< A.S. mynet, a coin < Lat. moneta, money], 1, a place where money is coined under government authority and supervision; 2, an abundant supply; a vast amount, as of money; 3, figuratively, the source or place of manufacture:—v.t. 1, to coin or stamp (money); 2, to invent; make.

mint-age (mĭn′tăj), n. 1, the act of coining money; also, coinage; 2, the cost of coining; 3, the act of fabricating; 4, the imprint upon a coin.

min-u-end (mĭn′ū-ĕnd), n. [< Lat. minuendus, to be diminished < minuere, to lessen], Math., that number from which another number is to be subtracted, as 6 in 6 – 3: opposite of subtrahend.

min-u-et (mĭn″ū-ĕt′; mĭn′ū-ĕt), n. [< Fr. menuet, dim. of menu, small < Lat. minutus, small: so called from the small steps used], a graceful and stately dance in triple measure: originated in France, and in vogue in France and England from the 17th to the 19th century: Mus., the music for such a dance, often used as a movement in a suite, etc.; a menuetto.

mi-nus (mī′nŭs), adj. [Lat., neut. of minor, less], Math., 1, less; decreased by: 2, negative: Colloq., lacking; deprived of:—n. the sign [–] indicating subtraction: also called minus sign.

¹min-ute (mĭn′ĭt), n. [Fr. < Lat. minuta, fem. of minutus, small, p.p. of minuere, to lessen], 1, the sixtieth part of an hour, composed of sixty seconds; 2, the sixtieth part of a degree of arc; 3, a short time; a moment; 4, a note or memorandum: pl. the proceedings of a meeting as officially recorded: minute gun, a cannon discharged at one-minute intervals, as a signal of distress or of mourning; also, the discharge of such a cannon: minute hand, the longer hand of a timepiece which makes a complete circuit of the dial once an hour and marks the minutes.

²mi-nute (mī-nūt′; mī-nūt′), adj. [< Lat. minutus, small < minuere, to lessen], 1, very small; 2, of trifling importance; 3, exact; precise.—adv. mi-nute′ly.—n. mi-nute′ness.

min-ute-man (mĭn′ĭt-măn), n. [pl. -men (-mĕn)], [¹*minute* + man], in the American Revolution, a citizen ready to take up arms against the British at a minute's notice.

mi-nu-ti-a (mī-nū′shĭ-ă), n. [pl. -tiæ (-shĭ-ē)], [Lat. = a small thing; smallness], a small, precise, or trivial detail: usually pl.

minx (mĭngks), n. [source uncertain], a bold or saucy girl: often used playfully.

Mi-o-cene (mī′ō-sēn), adj. [< Gk. meiōn, less + kainos, recent], Geol., designating, or pertaining to, that period of the Tertiary division of the Cenozoic era preceding the Pliocene; also, the strata of that epoch (see geology, chart):—n. Geol., the Miocene period, characterized by the presence of many animals similar to those now existing; also, its strata.

mir (mēr), n. [< Russ. miru, union], a village community or civil community of Russian peasants.

mir-a-cle (mĭr′ă-kl), n. [< Lat. miraculum, a wonder < mirari, to wonder], an act or happening in the material or physical sphere that apparently departs from the laws of nature or goes beyond what is known concerning these laws; a supernatural occurrence: Miracle play, a medieval dramatic representation of events related in the Bible.

mi-rac-u-lous (mĭ-răk′ū-lŭs), adj. 1, wonderful; 2, supernatural; contrary to the laws of nature; 3, performing great wonders.—adv. mi-rac′u-lous-ly.—n. mi-rac′u-lous-ness.

mi-rage (mē-räzh′), n. [Fr. < (se) mirer, to look at oneself in a mirror; be reflected < Lat. mirari, to wonder at], an optical illusion occurring on oceans, deserts, or plains, by which distant objects appear inverted, misplaced, or distorted: caused by refractive conditions due to the difference in temperature between the upper and lower strata of air near the earth's surface.

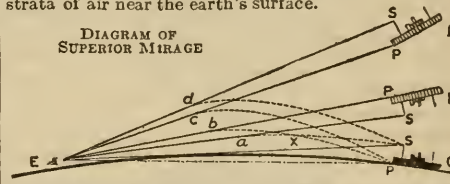

DIAGRAM OF SUPERIOR MIRAGE

O, object, below observer's horizon except for top of mast; E, eye of observer; *M*¹, inverted mirage: rays PbE and SaE from O being differently deflected and crossing at X; *M*², a second mirage, right side up, made by rays PcE and SdE from O, which do not cross.—In nature, the elevation is very much less, so that mirage does not appear tilted. An inferior mirage may sometimes be seen below location of object.

mir-bane (mûr′bān), n. [Fr.: source uncertain]: used only in oil of mirbane, nitrobenzene.

mire (mīr), n. [< O.N. mýrr, a bog], deep mud; wet earth; slush; dirt:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. mired (mīrd), p.pr. miring], 1, to soil; 2, to cause to be stuck in mud:—v.i. 1, to spatter; 2, to sink into mud.

Mir-i-am (mĭr′ĭ-ăm), n. [Heb. = bitterness], Bib., a prophetess, sister of Moses and Aaron.

mirk (mûrk), n. [see murk], gloom; obscurity; dimness. Also, murk. Pfd. S.

mir-ror (mir'ẽr), n. [<O.F. mirour <L.L. mirare, to look at <Lat. mirari, to wonder at], 1, any smooth surface that reflects light, sound, etc., especially one which forms images of reflected objects; a looking-glass; 2, anything which presents a true likeness; 3, hence, a model; pattern:—v.t. to reflect.

mir-ror-scope (mir'ẽr-skōp), n. [mirror + -scope (<Gk. skopein, to look)], a device for viewing objects by means of a mirror: used by artists for rapid sketching.

mirth (mûrth), n. [<A.S. myrgith, mirth <myrge, pleasant], hilarity; gaiety; merriment: Obs., joy.—adj. mirth'less.—adv. mirth'less-ly.

Syn. hilarity, glee, joyousness, jollity, gladness.

mirth-ful (mûrth'fo͝ol), adj. merry; gay; festive. —adv. mirth'ful-ly.—n. mirth'ful-ness.

Syn. gleeful, festive, joyous, merry. (See cheerful.)

mir-y (mīr'ī), adj. [comp. -ier, superl. -iest], [see mire], 1, muddy; boggy; 2, dirty.—n. mir'i-ness.

mir-za (mẽr'zä), n. [Pers. = prince], a Persian title meaning prince when placed after a name, and scholar when placed before it.

mis- prefix, 1, [A.S. mis-, amiss <O.Teut. source], used with nouns to mean bad or wrong; as, *mis*conduct; and with verbs and participles to mean wrongly, ill, amiss, etc.; as, *mis*direct; 2, [<O.F. mes- <Lat. minus, less], used in nouns and verbs of French derivation, with the same force.

mis-ad-ven-ture (mis"ăd-vĕn'tûr), n. [mis- + adventure], an unlucky accident; a piece of bad luck; misfortune; calamity; disaster.

mis-al-li-ance (mis"ă-lī'ăns), n. [mis- + alliance], an improper or undesirable union by marriage. Also, mé'sal'liance' (mā'zà'lyäns').

mis-an-thrope (mis'ăn-thrōp), n. [<Gk. misein, to hate + anthrōpos, man], one who hates or distrusts mankind. Also, mis-an'thropist.—adj. mis"an-throp'ic; mis"an-throp'i-cal.—adv. mis"an-throp'i-cal-ly.—n. mis-an'thro-py.

mis-ap-ply (mis"ă-plī'), v.t. [mis- + apply], to use or dispose of wrongly or illegally; as, to misapply funds; to direct or apply wrongly, as one's energies, or a word.—n. mis-ap"pli-ca'tion.

mis-ap-pre-hend (mis-ăp"rē-hĕnd'), v.t. [mis- + apprehend], to fail to understand; have a wrong conception of; mistake.—n. mis-ap"pre-hen'sion.—adj. mis-ap"pre-hen'sive.

mis-ap-pro-pri-ate (mis"ă-prō'pri-āt), v.t. [mis- + appropriate], to apply to a wrong use or purpose, as money: Colloq., to steal.—n. mis"ap-pro"pri-a'tion.

mis-be-got-ten (mis"bē-gŏt'n), adj. [mis- + begot], wrongly or irregularly produced; illegitimate; bastard.

mis-be-have (mis"bē-hāv'), v.i. [mis- + behave], to act in a wrong or improper fashion.—n. mis"be-hav'ior; mis"be-hav'iour (-yẽr).

mis-be-lief (mis"bē-lēf'), n. [mis- + belief], wrong or false opinion or conviction.

misc. abbr. miscellaneous; miscellany, miscellanies; miscellanea.

mis-cal-cu-late (mis-kăl'kū-lāt), v.t. [mis- + calculate], to make a mistake in; misjudge:—v.i. to make an error in judgment or foresight.—n. mis-cal"cu-la'tion.

mis-call (mis-kôl'), v.t. [mis- + call], to name erroneously: Dial., to heap abuse upon; revile.

mis-car-riage (mis-kăr'ij), n. [mis- + carry], 1, failure; mismanagement; 2, an abortion; the premature expulsion of the fetus; untimely delivery of a child.

mis-car-ry (mis-kăr'ī), v.i. 1, to go wrong; go astray; 2, to be unsuccessful; 3, of a woman, to be delivered prematurely of a child.

mis-ce-ge-na-tion (mis"ē-jē-nā'shûn), n. [<Lat. miscēre, to mix + genus, race], 1, marriage between persons of different races; specifically, 2, interbreeding of whites and negroes.—adj. mis"ce-ge-net'ic.

mis-cel-la-ne-a (mis"ē-lā'nē-ä), n.pl. [Lat. = mixed things: see miscellaneous], an assortment; collection, as of writings.

mis-cel-la-ne-ous (mis"ē-lā'nē-ûs), adj. [<Lat. miscellaneus <miscellus, mixed <miscēre, to mix], 1, consisting of several kinds; 2, many-sided; consisting of various qualities.—adv. mis"cel-la'ne-ous-ly.—n. mis"cel-la'ne-ous-ness.

mis-cel-la-ny (mis'ē-lā-nī), n. [pl. -nies (-nīz)], 1, a collection of various things of different kinds; 2, a book, periodical, or the like, containing a variety of literary compositions: often pl.

mis-chance (mis-chăns'), n. [mis- + chance], a piece of bad luck; adversity; mishap.

Syn. accident, calamity, misadventure, hardship.

mis-chief (mis'chĭf), n. [<O.F. meschief <mes-, ill + chief, end], 1, harm; injury; damage; 2, source of vexation or annoyance; 3, tendency to vex or annoy; 4, a vexatious or annoying action; 5, a frolicsome person.

Syn. detriment, damage, prank. (See injury.)

mis-chie-vous (mis'chĭ-vŭs), adj. 1, producing injury or damage; hurtful; destructive; 2, full of pranks; causing annoyance to others.—adv. mis'chie-vous-ly.—n. mis'chie-vous-ness.

mis-ci-ble (mis'ĭ-bl), adj. [<Lat. miscēre, to mix], capable of being readily mixed; mixable.—n. mis"ci-bil'i-ty (mis"ĭ-bil'ĭ-tĭ).

mis-con-ceive (mis"kŏn-sēv'), v.t. [mis- + conceive], to have a wrong understanding of; judge wrongly:—v.i. to misunderstand.

mis-con-cep-tion (mis"kŏn-sĕp'shûn), n. a false opinion; wrong understanding.

Syn. delusion, misapprehension, mistake.

mis-con-duct (mis-kŏn'dŭkt), n. [mis- + conduct], improper or wrong behavior: Rare, bad management:—v.t. (mis"kŏn-dŭkt'), to manage badly: misconduct oneself, to behave improperly.

Syn., n. misdemeanor, misdeed, misbehavior, impropriety, delinquency, mismanagement.

mis-con-strue (mis-kŏn'strōō; mis"kŏn-strōō'), v.t. [mis- + construe], 1, to get the wrong meaning from; 2, to put a false interpretation upon.—n. mis"con-struc'tion.

mis-cre-ant (mis'krē-ănt), n. [<O.F. mescreant <mes- wrongly + creant, believing <Lat. credere, to believe], a villain; ruffian: Archaic, a heretic; an infidel:—adj. unscrupulous; villainous: Archaic, heretical; infidel.—n. Archaic, mis'cre-ance.

Syn., n. evildoer, rascal, caitiff, ruffian, scoundrel.

mis-cue (mis-kū'), n. [mis- + [1]cue], in certain games, as billiards, a stroke marred by the slipping of the cue:—v.i. to make a miscue.

mis-date (mis-dāt'), v.t. [mis- + [1]date], to affix the wrong day, month, or year to.

mis-deal (mis-dēl'), v.t. and v.i. [mis- + [1]deal], to apportion (cards) wrongly—n. a wrong distribution of cards.

mis-deed (mis-dēd'), n. [mis- + deed], a wrong or improper act; a crime; transgression.

Syn. misconduct, offense, misdemeanor, trespass.

mis-de-mean (mis"dē-mēn'), v.t. [mis- + demean], Archaic, to conduct (oneself) improperly:—v.i. to behave improperly.

mis-de-mean-ant (mis"dē-mēn'ănt), n. Law, demeanor, or an offense less serious than a felony; 2, one who is guilty of improper behavior.

mis-de-mean-or (mis"dē-mēn'ẽr), n. ill conduct: Law, any indictable offense of less seriousness than a felony, classified as a misdemeanor by common or statute law, and varying from petty offenses against local or municipal ordinances to offenses such as perjury, assault, forcible entry, riot and sedition, bribery, conspiracy to defraud, libel, etc. Also, mis'de-mean'our.

Syn. misconduct, offense, misbehavior, misdeed, transgression, fault, trespass.

mis-di-rect (mis"dĭ-rĕkt'), v.t. [mis- + direct], 1, to give false or incorrect instructions to; 2, to place a wrong address on, as a letter; 3, to apply wrongly, as one's talents.—n. mis"di-rec'tion.

mis-do (mis-dōō'), v.t. [mis- + [1]do], to do wrongly: —v.i. to do wrong.—n. mis-do'ing.

mis-doubt (mis-dout'), v.t. [mis- + doubt], 1, to suspect; distrust; have misgivings about; 2, to fear, as an evil:—v.i. to be in doubt; suspect:—n. suspicion; distrust: misgiving.

mise (mēz; mīz), n. [Fr. = a putting <mettre, to put <Lat. mittere, to send], Hist., an agreement; Law, in an action for determining title to real estate, a process by which both parties rest the issue upon the sole question of which has the better right.

mi-ser (mī'zẽr), n. [Lat. = wretched], one who accumulates money for its own sake; a hoarder; covetous person: Obs., a miserable person.

mis-er-a-ble (mĭz'ẽr-ä-bl), adj. 1, wretched; unhappy; pitiable; 2, causing misery; as, a miserable day; 3, worthless; mean in quality. —adv. mis'er-a-bly.—n. mis'er-a-ble-ness.

Syn. distressed, afflicted, lamentable, worthless, paltry, forlorn, wretched, abject.—Ant. happy, worthy.

Mis-e-re-re (mĭz"ẽ-rē'rē), n. [Lat. = have mercy], 1, Eccl., the 51st Psalm, or in the Douay version, the 50th; 2, a musical setting of this Psalm: miserere, a prayer or cry for mercy.

mi-ser-ly (mī'zẽr-lĭ), adj. [see miser], like a miser; stingy; grasping.—n. mi'ser-li-ness.

Syn. close, penurious, near. (See avaricious.)

mis-er-y (mĭz'ĕr-ĭ), n. [pl. -ies (-ĭz)], [< O.F. misserie < Lat. miseria, wretchedness], 1, extreme pain, distress, or misfortune; great unhappiness; wretchedness; 2, a cause of great unhappiness or distress; as, the misery of remorse.

Syn. wretchedness, despondency, suffering, anguish, privation, destitution.—Ant. happiness, health, comfort.

mis-fea-sance (mĭs-fē'zăns), n. [< O.F. mesfaisance < mesfaire, to misdo < mes-, wrongly + faire (< Lat. facere, to do)], Law, 1, the doing of a lawful act in an illegal manner; also, a wrongful and injurious exercise of lawful authority: distinguished from malfeasance and nonfeasance; 2, a wrong.

mis-fire (mĭs-fīr'), v.i. [mis- + fire], to fail to explode or be discharged: said of a gun, an internal-combustion engine, or the like: also used figuratively:—n. a failure to explode or be discharged.

mis-fit (mĭs-fĭt'), n. [mis- + ²*fit*], 1, clothing which is too large or too small; 2, the act or condition of being too large or too small: Colloq., a person in a position for which he is unfitted:—v.t. to make too large or too small, as a garment: also used figuratively.

mis-for-tune (mĭs-fôr'tūn), n. [mis- + fortune], adversity; trouble; calamity.

Syn. hardship, calamity, mishap. (See trouble.)

mis-give (mĭs-gĭv'), v.t. [mis- + give], to cause to fail in confidence or courage; make fearful: usually said of the heart or conscience and generally followed by the objective personal pronoun; as, my heart misgives me:—v.i. to be fearful or anxious.

mis-giv-ing (mĭs-gĭv'ĭng), n. a feeling of doubt or anxiety; apprehension.

Syn. presentiment, doubt, anxiety, premonition, presage. (See foreboding.)

mis-gov-ern (mĭs-gŭv'ẽrn), v.t. [mis- + govern], to rule inefficiently or badly; mismanage; direct ill, as a career.—n. mis-gov'ern-ment.

mis-guide (mĭs-gīd'), v.t. [mis- + guide], to mislead; guide wrongly.—n. mis-guid'ance.

mis-guid-ed (mĭs-gīd'ĕd), p.adj. 1, in error; wrong in opinion or act; 2, under a wrong influence; as, a misguided youth.

mis-hap (mĭs-hăp'), n. [mis- + ¹*hap*], an unlucky accident or occurrence; misadventure.

Syn. mischance, misfortune, calamity. (See trouble.)

mish-mash (mĭsh'măsh'), n. [reduplication of mash, q.v.], Eng. Dial., a confused mixture; a hodgepodge; medley; jumble.

Mish-na (mĭsh'nä), n. [pl. Mishnayoth (mĭsh''nä-yōth')], [< Heb. = repetition < shānāh, to repeat], a collection of precepts forming the basis of the Talmud, or body of Jewish law not contained in the Pentateuch; also, any of these precepts. Also, Mish'nah.

mis-in-form (mĭs''ĭn-fôrm'), v.t. [mis- + inform], to tell news or facts wrongly to; make untrue statements to:—v.i. to make false statements.—n. mis-in''for-ma'tion.—n. mis''in-form'er.

mis-in-ter-pret (mĭs''ĭn-tûr'prĕt), v.t. [mis- + interpret], to misunderstand; give a wrong explanation of.—n. mis''in-ter''pre-ta'tion.

mis-judge (mĭs-jŭj'), v.t. [mis- + judge], to form a wrong or unjust opinion of:—v.i. to judge wrongly.—n. mis-judg'ment; mis-judge'ment.

mis-lay (mĭs-lā'), v.t. [mis- + ³*lay*], to lose temporarily; put in a wrong or forgotten place.

mis-lead (mĭs-lēd'), v.t. [mis- + ²*lead*], 1, to deceive; delude; misguide; 2, to conduct in the wrong way.—p.adj. mis-lead'ing.—n. mis-lead'er.

mis-like (mĭs-līk'), v.t. [mis- + ²*like*], 1, to displease; 2, to have an aversion to.

mis-man-age (mĭs-măn'ăj), v.t. [mis- + manage], to direct or administer badly; bungle:—v.i. to manage or administer without skill.—n. mis-man'age-ment.—n. mis-man'ag-er.

mis-no-mer (mĭs-nō'mẽr), n. [< O.F. mesnommer < mes-, amiss + nommer, to name < Lat. nominare, to name], 1, a wrong naming of a person in a legal document; the application of the wrong name to a person or thing; 2, a wrong name.

mi-sog-a-my (mĭ-sŏg'ă-mĭ; mī-), n. [< Gk. misein, to hate + gamos, marriage], hatred of, or aversion to, marriage.—adj. mis''o-gam'ic.—n. mi-sog'a-mist.

mi-sog-y-ny (mĭ-sŏj'ĭ-nĭ; mī-), n. [< Gk. misein, to hate + gunē, woman], hatred of women.—adj. mi-sog'y-nous.—n. mi-sog'y-nist.

mis-place (mĭs-plās'), v.t. [mis- + place], 1, to put in a wrong place; 2, to confer on an improper or undeserving object.—n. mis-place'ment.

mis-print (mĭs-prĭnt'), v.t. [mis- + print], to print incorrectly:—n. a typographical error.

mis-pri-sion (mĭs-prĭzh'ŭn), n. [< O.F. mesprison, mistake < mes-, amiss + prison, a taking < Lat. prensio (-onis), a taking < prehendere (-hensus), to take], Law, 1, high misdemeanor; misconduct; especially, embezzlement in the administration of a public trust; 2, concealment of a crime, especially of the crime of treason: misprision of felony, Law, the hiding of a crime by one who knows of it but has had nothing to do with the commission of it, directly or indirectly.

mis-pro-nounce (mĭs''prō-nouns'), v.t. [mis- + pronounce], to utter, as a word, with a wrong sound or accent:—v.i. to speak a word or letter with a wrong sound.—n. mis''pro-nun''ci-a'tion (-nŭn''sĭ-ā'shŭn; -shĭ-).

mis-quote (mĭs-kwōt'), v.t. [mis- + quote], to repeat the words of (another person, a book, or the like) incorrectly:—r.i. to repeat the words of another incorrectly.—n. mis''quo-ta'tion.

mis-read (mĭs-rēd'), v.t. [mis- + read], to misinterpret; read incorrectly.

mis-rep-re-sent (mĭs-rĕp''rē-zĕnt'), v.t. [mis- + represent], to give a wrong impression of; report incorrectly, either wilfully or through carelessness:—v.i. to act unfaithfully as agent; give a wrong impression or an incorrect or false report.—n. mis-rep''re-sen-ta'tion.

Syn. equivocate, lie, deceive. (See prevaricate.)

mis-rule (mĭs-rōōl'), r.t. [mis- + rule], to govern badly or unjustly:—n. 1, unjust control; bad government; 2, hence, confusion; tumult.

¹miss (mĭs), r.t. [< A.S. missan, to miss], 1, to fail to hit, find, attain, catch, or the like; 2, to feel the need of; feel the loss or absence of; 3, to omit or pass by; fail to observe, keep, etc.; as, he never misses church; 4, to avoid or escape by good luck; as, he just missed being seriously injured:—r.i. 1, to fail to make a hit; fly wide of the mark; 2, to fail; 3, to fail to secure, attain, do, etc.: with of or in:—n. failure to hit, reach, see, or obtain: Obs., loss.

Syn., v. overlook, lose, omit, escape, fail, skip.—Ant., v. notice, keep, succeed, get, obtain, achieve.

²miss (mĭs), n. [pl. misses], [abbr. of mistress, q.v.], a young girl: Miss, [pl. Misses, preceded by the, with following name in sing.; as, the Misses Smith], title used before the name of a girl or an unmarried woman.

Miss. abbr. official abbreviation for the State of Mississippi.

mis-sal (mĭs'ăl), n. [< L.L. missa, the mass], R. C. Ch., 1, a book containing the order of service for the Mass; 2, hence, any book of devotions.

mis-sel thrush (mĭs'ĕl), [< A. S. mistel, mistletoe], a European thrush (Turdus viscivorus) which feeds on mistletoe berries: also called missel; mistletoe thrush. Also, mis'tle thrush.

mis-shap-en (mĭs-shāp'n), adj. [mis- + shape], deformed; ill-favored; distorted.

mis-sile (mĭs'ĭl), adj. [< Lat. missilis, something thrown < mittere (missus), to send], suitable for being hurled from the hand or an engine:—n. a projectile; a weapon or other object suitable for hurling from the hand or an engine of war.

miss-ing (mĭs'ĭng), p.adj. [see ¹miss], lost; wanting; absent.

mis-sion (mĭsh'ŭn), n. [< Lat. missio, a sending < mittere (missus), to send], 1, the act of sending or state of being sent, with certain powers, to do some special service; 2, a business or duty on which one is sent; 3, a calling, especially to preach and spread a religion; 4, a series of special religious services; 5, an organization for doing religious and charitable work, especially one dependent on one or more churches; 6, a body of people sent to perform a special work, as envoys or delegates; 7, a body of persons engaged in spreading a religion in a foreign land; also, their organization and residence: pl. the organized work of spreading a religion: mission furniture, furniture constructed of square, massive pieces of wood, simply fitted together in imitation of a style said to have been used in Spanish religious missions in California.

mis-sion-a-ry (mĭsh'ŭn-ă-rĭ), n. [pl. -ries (-rĭz)], 1, a person who is sent to spread the knowledge of a religion and convert people to it, especially in foreign lands; 2, an emissary or ambassador:—adj. pertaining to organizations for doing religious work, or to those who do it.

mis-sion-er (mĭsh'ŭn-ẽr), n. 1, a missionary; especially, one in charge of a parochial mission; 2, an ambassador; envoy.

Mis-sis-sip-pi-an (mĭs''ĭ-sĭp'ĭ-ăn), adj. [< Amer. Ind. missi, great + sepe, water], pertaining to the State of Mississippi or to the Mississippi River: Geol., designating, or pertaining to, a period of the Paleozoic era between the Devonian and the Pennsylvanian (see geology, chart): formerly called Subcarboniferous:—n. a native or resident of Mississippi: Geol., the Mississippi period.

mis-sive (mĭs'ĭv), n. [Fr.<L.L. missivus<Lat. mittere (missus), to send], a letter or message: Obs., a messenger:—adj. sent specially.

mis-spell (mĭs-spĕl'), v.t. [mis-+spell], to spell incorrectly.

mis-spend (mĭs-spĕnd'), v.t. [mis-+spend], to spend for wrong uses; waste; squander.

mis-state (mĭs-stāt'), v.t. [mis-+state], to state falsely or incorrectly; declare inaccurately; misrepresent.—n. mis-state'ment.

mis-step (mĭs-stĕp'), n. [mis-+step], 1, a false step; stumble; 2, an error in conduct.

mist (mĭst), n. [A.S.=gloom], 1, visible watery vapor in the atmosphere, at or near the earth's surface; fog; also, an accumulation of water in the atmosphere, either floating or falling in fine drops; 2, anything that dims the sight, physical or mental; dimness:—v.i. to rain in light, fine drops:—v.t. to cover with, or as with, a fog; obscure; dim.

mis-tak-a-ble (mĭs-tāk'ə-bl), adj. [see mistake], capable of being misunderstood.

mis-take (mĭs-tāk'), v.t. [p.t. -took (-tōōk'), p.p. -taken, or, Obs., -took, p.pr. -taking], [<O.N. mistaka<mis-, amiss+taka, to take], 1, to misunderstand; 2, to put wrongly in place of another person or thing: be mistaken, to err in opinion, judgment, or statement:—v.i. to err in judgment or opinion:—n. an error in judgment; fault; misunderstanding. Syn., n. oversight, misapprehension. (See blunder.)

mis-tak-en (mĭs-tāk'n), p.adj. 1, incorrect; wrong; as, a mistaken idea; 2, wrong in judgment; as, he is mistaken; 3, misunderstood; misinterpreted; as, a mistaken meaning.—adv. mis-tak'en-ly.

Mis-ter (mĭs'tẽr), n. [pl. Messrs. (mĕs'rz)], [weak form of master, q.v.], Master: a title used before a man's name: usually written Mr.

mis-tle thrush (mĭs'l), a species of thrush. See mis'sel thrush, Pfd. S.

mis-tle-toe (mĭs'l-tō; mĭz'l-tō), n. [<A.S. mistil-tān<mistel, mistletoe+tān, twig], Bot., album) that grows in clusters on trees, and bears waxy, white berries; 2, a similar plant (Phoradendron flavescens) found in the United States.

mis-took (mĭs-tōōk'), past tense and obsolete past participle of the irregular verb mistake.

mis-tral (mĭs'trăl; mĭs-trăl'), n. [Fr. and Prov'l =the master wind<Lat. magister, master], a dry, violent northwest wind in the Mediterranean provinces of France.

mis-trans-late (mĭs"trănz-lāt'), v.t. [mis-+translate], to translate incorrectly.—n. mis"trans-la'tion (-lā'shŭn).

mis-tress (mĭs'trĕs), n. [<O.F. maistresse, mistress <maistre<Lat. magister, master], 1, a woman who has authority or who governs; the female head of a family, school, or the like; 2, a woman thoroughly skilled; a woman who has the mastery of anything, or who is in control of a situation; 3, a female paramour: Rare or Poet., a sweetheart; a woman courted and beloved: Mistress, a title formerly used before the name of a woman, married or unmarried: now superseded by Mrs. (mĭs'ĭs; mĭs'ĭz) for married women, and Miss for unmarried women.

mis-tri-al (mĭs-trī'ăl), n. [mis-+trial], Law, a court trial which is void because of some error or irregularity of procedure in the course of it.

mis-trust (mĭs-trŭst'), n. [mis-+trust], lack of confidence:—v.t. 1, to doubt; suspect; distrust; 2, to surmise; have an anxious presentiment of:—v.i. to lack confidence.—adj. mis-trust'ful. Syn., n. doubt, suspicion, misgiving, question.

mist-y (mĭs'tĭ), adj. [comp. mistier, superl. mistiest], [see mist], 1, characterized by, or hidden by, watery vapor; 2, dim; obscure; mentally clouded.—adv. mist'i-ly.—n. mist'i-ness.

mis-un-der-stand (mĭs"ŭn-dẽr-stănd'; mĭs-ŭn"-), v.t. [mis-+understand], to take in a wrong sense:—v.i. to fail to comprehend.

mis-un-der-stand-ing (mĭs"ŭn-dẽr-stănd'ĭng), n. 1, disagreement; a quarrel; 2, a mistake as to meaning or motive.

mis-us-age (mĭs-ūz'ăj; mĭs-ūs'ăj), n. [mis-+use], 1, ill treatment; abuse; 2, wrong or improper application or use, as of words.

mis-use (mĭs-ūs'), n. 1, wrong or improper use; 2, ill treatment; abuse:—v.t. (mĭs-ūz'), to use wrongly; misapply.

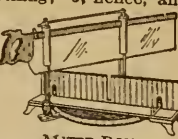
[1]mite (mīt), n. [<A.S. mīte, biter<O.Teut. source], Zoöl., any of a large variety of arachnids infesting plants, animals, stored foods, etc.

[2]mite (mīt), n. [O.F.<M.Du. mijt, a small coin <O.Teut. source], 1, in ancient Palestine, a small coin of the value of half a farthing: as, the widow's mite (Mark 12:42); 2, formerly, in England, a coin worth one sixth of a farthing; 3, hence, any small financial assistance: Colloq., a very small object or quantity; a very small child.



MITER BOX

mi-ter (mī'tẽr), n. [<Fr. mitre<Gk. mitra, girdle; fillet; turban], 1, a kind of headdress, in two sections, worn by the Pope, archbishops, bishops, and sometimes by abbots, on special occasions (see vestment, illus.); 2, the dignity or office of a bishop; 3, a covering over a chimney, designed to let out the smoke and prevent rain from entering; a chimney cowl; 4, in dressmaking, a gusset; in needlework, a slanted joining made at a corner: Carpentry, 1, a surface, generally beveled at an angle of 45 degrees, in contact with a similar surface on another piece, the contact forming a right-angled joint between the two pieces; 2, any of various things closely connected with a miter, as a miter box, miter joint, miter square, which see: miter box, a device for guiding a handsaw in making cuts at various angles, especially for cutting miters at an angle of 45 degrees: miter joint, a right-angled joint between two pieces, consisting of a plane contact surface at an angle of 45 degrees to each of the pieces: miter square, an instrument having two arms or blades at an angle of 45 degrees, used for marking pieces that are to be cut at this angle to make a miter:—v.t. 1, to place a bishop's crown on; 2, to raise to the office of a bishop; 3, to adorn with such a crown; 4, to join (moldings, laces, etc.) on a beveled surface or line at a corner. Also, n. and v.t. mi'tre [p.t. and p.p. -tred (-tẽrd), p.pr. -tring (-trĭng)].

MITER JOINT (aa)

MITER SQUARE

Mith-ras (mĭth'răs; mī'thrăs), n. [Gk.<O.Pers. Mithra], the Persian god of light, upholder of the truth and foe of evil, whose cult, called Mithraism, included a belief in the immortality of the soul and was for about two centuries a serious rival of Christianity as a world religion. Also, Mith'ra.

mit-i-gant (mĭt'ĭ-gănt), adj. [see mitigate], softening; lenitive; rendering less painful.

mit-i-gate (mĭt'ĭ-gāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -gated, p.pr. -gating], [<Lat. mitigare (-atus) to soften<mitis, mild], to assuage; render less severe or painful; soften; meliorate; lessen.—adj. mit'i-ga-tive.—n. mit'i-ga"tor.—n. mit"i-ga'tion.

Syn. assuage, alleviate, relieve, abate, allay. These words have in common the idea of giving relief. We alleviate suffering, distress, want, by doing as much as possible to remove the cause. We assuage by comforting, as grief; by quieting, as passion; by calming or appeasing, as appetite. We allay suffering, passion, excitement, by soothing and quieting. To mitigate is to make pain, grief, punishment, or the like, milder.

mi-to-sis (mī-tō'sĭs), n. [<Gk. mitos, a thread], Biol., the series of changes that take place in the nucleus and cytoplasm of a cell in the usual, and more complex, process of division; indirect cell division: opposite of amitosis.—adj. mi-tot'ic (-tŏt'ĭk).

mi-tra-illeur (mē"trà"yûr'), n. [Fr.<mitrailler <mitraille, small missiles], Mil., 1, an artilleryman who operates, or is in charge of, a machine gun; 2, a machine gun.

mi-tra-illeuse (mē"trà"yöz'), n. [Fr.], Mil., a machine gun; formerly, a breech-loading machine gun having several barrels.

mi-tral (mī'trăl), adj. [see miter], pertaining to, or like, a miter: Anat., designating, or pertaining to, the mitral valve: mitral valve, a valve of the heart that controls the flow of blood between the left auricle and left ventricle.

mitt (mĭt), n. [abbr. of mitten, q.v.], 1, a kind of glove, often of lace or net, without fingers or with half fingers; 2, a glove with a thick, protective pad over the palm, used in baseball: Slang, a hand.

mit-ten (mĭt'ĕn), n. [<Fr. mitaine, mitten], a winter glove covering the four fingers together and the thumb separately: Colloq., rejection or refusal, as by one beloved; Slang, a boxing glove.

mit-ti-mus (mĭt'ĭ-mŭs), n. [Lat.=we send], Law, a warrant that commits to prison: Colloq., dismissal, as from office.

mix (miks), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. mixed or mixt (mĭkst), p.pr. mixing], [<mixed<earlier mixt<Fr. mixte<Lat. miscēre (mixtus), to mix], 1, to blend or merge into one mass or compound; 2, to join; associate; 3, to make by mixing, as mortar; compound; 4, to confuse (one thing with another): with up:—v.i. to become united in a compound; mingle:—n. 1, the act of mixing; 2, a confused mass of several elements: Colloq., a muddle.

Syn., v. compound, amalgamate, fuse, incorporate, mingle, blend, merge, coalesce, unite. To unite is to bring together or make one; as, to unite broken fragments with cement or a torn page with glue, to unite common interests in a common company, to unite by a bridge cities separated by a river. To mix is to unite, as two or more substances, so that the one substance is thoroughly permeated with the other in a promiscuous body; as, to mix the dry ingredients of a cake. The States in this Union are united; the population is a mixed group from all other nations. To mingle is to join, as one substance or color with another, so that the two elements joined are distinguishable; as, a complexion of mingled white and pink; people received the news with mingled joy and pain. To blend is to mix elements or parts into a whole in which they are inseparable and indistinguishable; as, to blend coffees, colors; to blend type characteristics by intermarriage. To merge is to lose utterly, or to cause an utter loss of, identity in the whole; several companies merge, or are merged to form one. Coalesce stresses the act or process of forming one; as, the opposing parties coalesced to gain strength.—Ant., v. separate, divide, part, scatter.

mixed (mikst), p.adj. 1, blended; mingled; 2, composed of unlike parts or elements; 3, not select or exclusive; 4, made up of, or designed for, persons of both sexes; 5, muddled; confused: mixed number, a number consisting of a whole number and a fraction.

mix-er (mik'sẽr), n. 1, one who unites or blends; 2, a machine for combining the ingredients of a compound or mass; 3, in an internal-combustion engine, the carburetor, or apparatus that charges air with gasoline vapor: Colloq., In the United States, one who is able to adapt himself socially.

mix-ture (miks'tūr), n. 1, the state of being blended or mingled; 2, a medley; 3, something obtained by putting two or more things together: Chem., an aggregate of different substances which, however thoroughly mingled, retain their identities as separate substances: distinguished from compound; also called mechanical mixture.

Miz-pah (miz'pä), n. [< Heb. = watchtower], any of several towns in ancient Palestine: used as a parting salutation (see Gen. 31:49). Also, Miz'peh.

miz-zen (miz'n), n. [< Fr. misaine, prob. < It. mezzana, middle], Naut., 1, the aftermost mast of a two- or a three-masted vessel: also called mizzen-mast; 2, a fore-and-aft sail on the mizzenmast; a spanker.

miz-zen-mast (miz'n-mȧst), n. [mizzen + mast], Naut., the aftermost mast of a two- or a three-masted vessel: also called mizzen.

miz-zle (miz'l), v.i. [p.t. and p.p. mizzled (-ld), p.pr. mizzling], [source uncertain], Obs. or Dial., to drizzle; rain in very tiny drops:—n. fine rain; mist.

M. L. A. abbr. 1, Member of the Legislative Assembly; 2, Modern Language Association:—M. L. C., 1, Member of the Legislative Council; 2, Modern Language Conference:—M. L. G., Middle Low German (also, MLG):—Mlle, [pl. Mlles], Mademoiselle:—MM, 1, Messieurs (commonly, in Eng., Messrs.):—MM., Their Majesties:—mm., millimeter:—M.M., Master Mason:—Mme, [pl. Mmes], Madame:—Mn, Chem., the symbol [Mn] for the element manganese.

mne-mon-ic (nē-mŏn'ik), adj. [< Gk. mnēmonikos, mindful < mnasthai, to remember], 1, aiding or improving the memory; 2, pertaining to the memory: mnemonics, n. pl. used as sing. the art or science of aiding or improving the memory.

Mne-mos-y-ne (nē-mŏs'i-nē), n. [< Gk. mnēmosunē, memory < mnasthai, to remember], Gk. Myth., the goddess of memory and, by Zeus, the mother of the Muses.

mo. abbr. [pl. mos.], month:—Mo., official abbreviation for Missouri:—Mo, Chem., the symbol [Mo] for the element molybdenum:—M. O., money order.

mo-a (mō'ȧ), n. [nat. name in New Zealand], any of several extinct species of flightless bird, somewhat resembling an ostrich, but varying in height from two to twelve feet: formerly found in New Zealand.

Mo-ab-ite (mō'ȧb-īt), n. [< Heb. Mō'ābh, sons of a father], Bib., one of an ancient race of Semitic people, enemies of the Hebrews, who were descended from Moab, a son of Lot, and who dwelt to the southeast of Canaan (Gen. 19:37):—adj. of or pertaining to this race or its customs.—adj. Mo'ab-it"ish (-īt"ish).—n.fem. Mo'ab-it"ess (-īt"ĕs).

moan (mōn), v.i. [related to A.S. mānan, to lament], to utter a low sound from, or as from, pain or sorrow:—v.t. to utter in a low wail:—n. 1, a long, low sound expressing sorrow or pain; a lament; 2, a sound, as the sighing of the wind, suggestive of this.

moat (mōt), n. [< O.F. mote, mound, prob. < O.Teut. source], Fortif., a defensive ditch or canal around a fortress or castle, usually containing water (see bastion, postern, illus.):—v.t. to surround with a moat.

[1]mob (mŏb), n. [< Du. mopmuts, woman's nightcap], Obs., a cap or hood; a mobcap.

[2]mob (mŏb), n. [abbr. < Lat. mobile vulgus, excitable crowd], 1, the common people; 2, a rude, disorderly crowd; rabble:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. mobbed (mŏbd), p.pr. mobbing], to attack in a disorderly crowd; crowd about and annoy.—adj. mob'bish.

Syn., n. crowd, multitude, rabble. (See throng.)

mob-cap (mŏb'kăp"), n. [[1]mob + cap], a kind of full cap or headdress worn indoors by women in the 18th and early 19th centuries.

mo-bile (mō'bīl; mō'bēl), adj. [< Lat. mobilis, movable], 1, easily moved; 2, flowing freely, as some liquids; 3, easily changing in expression, or in condition of mind; changeable.—n. mo-bil'i-ty.

mo-bi-lize (mō'bi-līz; mŏb'i-līz), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -lized (-līzd), p.pr. -lizing], [< Fr. mobiliser, to make ready to move < Lat. mobilis, movable], to call (troops) into service:—v.i. to come together, as troops, for active service.—n. mo"bi-li-za'tion.

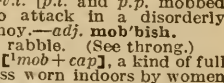
mo-ble (mŏb'l), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. mobled (-ld), p.pr. mobling], [< obs. [1]mob, q.v.], Obs., to cover or muffle with a hood or cap, as the head.

mob-oc-ra-cy (mŏb-ŏk'rȧ-si), n. [pl. -racies (-siz)], [[2]mob + -cracy (< Gk. -kratia, rule)], 1, government by the rabble; 2, the rabble in power.



DEERSKIN MOCCASIN

moc-ca-sin (mŏk'ȧ-sin), n. [< Amer. Ind.], 1, a sandal of soft leather, formerly worn by the North American Indians and now much used in hunting and camping; 2, any of several poisonous snakes (genus Agkistrodon); especially, the water moccasin (A. piscivorus) found in coast states from Virginia to eastern Texas; also, a dark variety of copperhead: moccasin flower, in the United States, a wild orchid (genus Cypripedium), with flowers shaped like a moccasin (see flower, colored illus.); the lady's-slipper.

WATER MOCCASIN ($\frac{1}{12}$)

Mo-cha (mō'kȧ), n. [< Mocha, port of shipment], 1, a superior kind of coffee from Mocha, in Arabia; 2, an imitation of this coffee.

mock (mŏk), v.t. [< O.F. mocquer, to mock], 1, to ridicule; imitate in sport or contempt; 2, to tantalize; disappoint the hopes of; 3, to mimic; counterfeit; 4, to defy: Obs., to pretend; feign:—v.i. to jeer; scoff:—n. 1, a jeer or jibe; 2, ridicule; 3, an object of ridicule; 4, an imitation or counterfeit:—adj. false: mock orange, the syringa; also, any of various American shrubs resembling it: mock turtle soup, a soup made of any of various meats and condiments, prepared in imitation of green turtle soup.—n. mock'er.

Syn., v. ridicule, ape, mimic. (See taunt, imitate.)

mock-er-y (mŏk'ẽr-i), n. [pl. -eries (-iz)], 1, the act of making fun of a person or thing; 2, derision; ridicule; 3, impertinent mimicry; 4, sham.

Syn. derision, mimicry. (See ridicule.)

mock-he-ro-ic (mŏk"hē-rō'ik), adj. imitating or burlesquing the heroic style or character:—n. a mock-heroic work or speech.

mock-ing (mŏk'ing), p.adj. scornful; derisive; mimicking: mocking bird, a grayish song bird (Mimus polyglottos) about the size of the robin, common in the southern United States, noted for its ability to imitate the songs of other birds (see illus. facing page 92).—adv. mock'ing-ly.

mod-al (mōd'ȧl), adj. [see mode], pertaining to a manner or form: Philos., relating to form or manner without reference to substance; Gram., pertaining to, or expressing, mode; as, the verbs should and would may be used in a modal sense; Mus., pertaining to the system of counterpoint based on the medieval ecclesiastical modes, or scales: modal proposition, Logic, a proposition in which the second term, or predicate, is asserted to be true of the first term, or subject, in a qualified or conditioned manner, the qualification usually being that the truth of the statement is possible, contingent, impossible, or necessary.

mo-dal-i-ty (mō-dăl'i-ti), n. [pl. -ties (-tiz)], the characteristic or fact of consisting of manner or form only: Logic, the quality of a proposition as expressing a sequence which is possible, contingent, impossible, or necessary.

mode (mōd), n. [< Lat. modus, manner], 1, method; form; 2, custom; fashion, as in clothes; manner: Gram., in the inflection of a verb, any one of the forms used to indicate the manner of action or being of the verb; as, in English, the indicative mode expresses certain fact; the subjunctive mode expresses possibility, probability, necessity, or the like; the imperative mode expresses command or request: also called mood; Mus., 1, literally, a scale; 2, the ancient Greek scale, of which there were six variations; 3, later, one of the eight scales upon which medieval music was based; 4, in modern times, a scale, designated as either major or minor; as, the composition is written in the major mode; Logic, the form or manner in which the predicate and subject of a proposition are connected, with reference to the possibility, necessity, likelihood, etc., of the connection; Philos., qualities, attributes, or relations, collectively, thought of apart from the substance or subject to which they pertain; condition.

Syn. fashion, style, vogue, way, method. Fashion is the prevailing custom according to the current conventional usage of polite society, especially in dress; as, short sleeves are in fashion; bright colors are the fashion. Mode names the general fashion, especially of a particular time; as, her sleeves were in the mode of yesterday. Style is fashion so distinctively followed that there is a superiority and lack of commonplaceness in the result; as, her clothes had a touch of Parisian style. Vogue is the latest, generally current style; it is usually expressive of the temporary gusts of fashion.

mod-el (mŏd′ĕl), n. [< O.F. modelle < It. modello, dim. of modo < Lat. modus, manner], 1, a pattern of something to be made, copied, or imitated; a standard copy; 2, a small-sized representation of something to be made, as of an engine, building, etc.; 3, a style, type, or design, as of an automobile; 4, a person who poses for a painter or sculptor; 5, a woman who tries on costumes so that customers may view them; 6, a lay figure:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -eled or -elled (-ĕld), p.pr. -eling or -elling], to form after a pattern, especially in clay:—v.i. to practice shaping objects out of clay; make designs:—adj. 1, serving as a pattern; 2, worthy of being imitated.—n. mod′el-er; mod′el-ler.

mod-el-ing (mŏd′ĕl-ing), n. 1, the act or art of making a pattern, especially of a work of art in clay or like material; 2, in painting, the art of depicting figures as if in solid form. Also, mod′el-ling.

MODELING TOOLS

Some of the forms used for clay or plaster modeling.

mod-er-ate (mŏd′ĕr-āt), adj. [< Lat. moderari (-atus), to regulate], 1, kept or staying within reasonable bounds; not extreme or excessive, calm; reasonable; frugal; mild; 2, limited; medium; mediocre: Moderate, a member of a political party of conservative tendencies:—v.t. (mŏd′ĕr-āt), [p.t. and p.p. -ated, p.pr. -ating], 1, to lessen; make less violent, intense, or extreme; 2, to preside over:—v.i. 1, to grow less intense, as heat; 2, to act as presiding officer; preside over a meeting.—adv. mod′er-ate-ly.—n. mod′er-ate-ness.

Syn., adj. temperate, abstemious, sober, gentle, reasonable.—Ant., adj. intemperate, unrestrained.

mod-er-a-tion (mŏd″ĕr-ā′shŭn), n. 1, the act of keeping within bounds; 2, freedom from excess; calmness of mind, speech, or action.

mod-e-ra-to (mŏd″ĕ-rä′tō), adj. [It. = moderate], Mus., medium or moderate in tempo:—adv., Mus., at a moderately fast tempo.

mod-er-a-tor (mŏd′ĕr-ā″tĕr), n. [see moderate], 1, one who or that which regulates or restrains; 2, in the Presbyterian Church, a presiding official, as of a session, presbytery, synod, or General Assembly; 3, in the United States, the presiding officer at a town meeting or a meeting for debate.

mod-ern (mŏd′ĕrn), adj. [< L.L. modernus, modern < Lat. modo, just now], pertaining to the present time; recent: Obs., ordinary; commonplace: modern history, the history of events since about the year 1500:—n. a person of present or recent times; also, one who is up-to-date in his views or manners.

Syn., adj. recent, new, novel, late, fresh. That is new which has not existed before or long; as, a new periodical; a new recipe. New also describes that which is for the first time made, known of, brought into use, discovered, or experienced: as, a new discovery, fashion, sensation; or that which is unfamiliar, or appearing for the first time in season; as, a new face; new peas. That is fresh which has just been made or received; as, fresh butter; a fresh copy; or is young, vigorous, tonic, or active; as, fresh faces; fresh air; fresh energy. Recent is applied to things that have happened in the near past, or are in a comparatively new state; as, a recent discovery. Late is like recent in applying to that just past; as, of late years; but it is especially used in the sense of formerly but not now; as, the late president; and also in the sense of lately deceased; as, her late husband. Modern describes the present period in contrast with times quite remote. A modern invention is a thing of today; a book on modern warfare would go back to the beginning of what is now prevalent. A novel idea is strange, not before conceived; a novel experiment has been hitherto unknown.

mod-ern-ism (mŏd′ĕr-nizm), n. a thing of recent date, especially a usage, a method, or a characteristic of present times: Modernism, 1, R. C. Ch., a theological method based on modern scholarship which attempts to reconcile the church dogmas with modern science and philosophy, and with modern Biblical criticism: condemned by Pope Pius X in 1907 as subversive of ecclesiastical authority; 2, in Protestant churches, a modern movement, especially of the 20th century, seeking truth and freedom, tending to encourage individual interpretation of the Bible and to harmonize modern scientific knowledge and Biblical criticism with the spirit of Christianity, and regarding creeds as expressions of progressive faith and enlightenment rather than as fixed tenets.—n. mod′ern-ist.

mo-der-ni-ty (mō-dûr′nĭ-tĭ), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], 1, a thing that is only of the present or of recent date; 2, the quality of being modern.

mod-ern-ize (mŏd′ĕr-nīz), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -ized (-nīzd), p.pr. -izing], to cause to conform to present usage, taste, or speech. Also, mod′ern-ise.—n. mod″ern-i-za′tion (-nĭ-zā′shŭn; -nī-).

mod-est (mŏd′ĕst), adj. [< Fr. modeste < Lat. modestus, moderate], 1, held back by a sense of what is fit and proper; 2, chaste; marked by purity and propriety; 3, not pretentious; retiring; 4, not excessive or extreme; moderate.—adv. mod′est-ly.

Syn. unassuming, decent. (See diffident.)

mod-es-ty (mŏd′ĕs-tĭ), n. 1, regard for what is decent and proper, as in behavior; 2, reserve concerning one's own powers; lack of conceit; 3, freedom from what is extreme; moderation.

Syn. virtuousness, bashfulness, humility, decorum, shyness.—Ant. forwardness, aggressiveness, boldness.

mod-i-cum (mŏd′ĭ-kŭm), n. [Lat. = something in moderation], a small amount.

mod-i-fi-ca-tion (mŏd″ĭ-fĭ-kā′shŭn), n. [see modify], 1, a slight change in form; especially, 2, a slight reduction; abatement; 3, limitation; qualification, as of a statement.

mod-i-fy (mŏd′ĭ-fī), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -fied (-fīd), p.pr. -fying], [< Fr. modifier < Lat. modificare < modus, measure + facere, to make], 1, to change slightly in form; vary; 2, to limit; reduce: Gram., to qualify or limit the meaning of, as a noun by an adjective, a verb by an adverb; Philol., to change (a vowel, especially in German) by umlaut.—adj. mod′ĭ-fĭ″a-ble.

Syn. alter, temper, soften, change. (See qualify.)

mo-dil-lion (mō-dĭl′yŭn), n. [< It. modiglione, modillion], Arch., in certain orders, especially the Corinthian, an ornamental bracket beneath the corona of the cornice (for illus. see dentil).

mod-ish (mōd′ĭsh), adj. [see mode], fashionable; according to the latest manner; full of style.—adv. mod′ish-ly.—n. mod′ish-ness.

mo-diste (mō″dēst′), n. [Fr. = a milliner < mode, fashion < Lat. modus, manner], a fashionable dressmaker; a dealer in women's apparel.

mod-u-late (mŏd′ū-lāt), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -lated, p.pr. -lating], [< Lat. modulari (-atus), to measure; adjust], 1, to vary the sound of, as the voice; 2, to tone down; regulate: Elec., to vary the amplitude of (an alternating current) periodically or intermittently; especially, in radiotelegraphy and radiotelephony, to modify (a radio-frequency current) by superposing upon it a variation of amplitude of audible frequency: Mus., to cause to pass to a new, related key:—v.i. Mus., to pass from one key to a related key, by tones or chords common to both.

mod-u-la-tion (mŏd″ū-lā′shŭn), n. the act of changing or the state of being changed in sound; a toning down: Elec., the process of periodically or intermittently varying the amplitude of an alternating current, especially one of radio-frequency; Mus., a passing from one key to a related key by means of tones or chords common to both.

mod-u-la-tor (mŏd′ū-lā″tĕr), n. Elec., a device for periodically or intermittently varying the amplitude of an alternating current.

mod-ule (mŏd′ūl), n. [Fr. < Lat. modulus, measure], a unit of measurement; specifically, a unit of flowing water, equal to 100 liters per second: Arch., a variable unit of length for expressing the proportions of the parts of a building, usually half the diameter of a column at the base of the shaft.

mod-u-lus (mŏd'ū-lŭs), n. [Lat., dim. of modus, measure], Math., 1, an absolute positive number serving to measure a function, effect, or complex quantity; 2, a constaot number expressing the ratio between the logarithms of any system and the corresponding natural, or Napierian, log.rithms mo-dus o-pe-ran-di (mō'dŭs ŏp"ĕ-răn'dī), [Lat. = way of working], the manner in which a person or thing works.

mo-dus vi-ven-di (mō'dŭs vī-vĕn'dī), [Lat. = way of living], 1, manner of living; especially, a practical method of getting along, sometimes in the face of difficulty; 2, a temporary arrangement pending a settlement.

Mœ-ra (mē'rȧ), n. [pl. -ræ (-rē)], [Lat. < Gk. Moira, Gk. Myth., the goddess, or one of the goddesses, of fate; one of the Fates.

Mo-gul (mō-gŭl'), n. [< Pers. mugul < Mongol, q.v.], 1, a member of the Mongolian race; a Mongol; especially, one of the Mongols who established an empire in Hindustan in the 16th century; 2, any imposing personage; an autocrat: the Great or Grand Mogul, the sovereign of the former Mongol empire in Hindustan:—adj. pertaining to the Mongols.

mo-hair (mo'hâr"), n. [< Arab. mukhayyar, choice < khayyara, to choose], 1, the silky hair of the Angora goat; 2, hence, a material woven from this hair; 3, a garment of this material; 4, an imitation of such a material, now usually of wool and cotton mixed.

Mo-ham-med-an (mō-hăm'ĕd-ăn), n. [< Arab. Muhammad < hamada, praise], a follower of Mohammed (about A. D. 570–632) or of the religion, Mohammedanism, founded by him:—adj. pertaining to Mohammed, or to Mohammedanism. Also, Ma-hom'et-an; Ma-hom'ed-an.

Mo-ham-med-an-ism (mō-hăm'ĕd-ăn-ĭzm), n. the religion founded about A. D. 622 by Mohammed in Arabia, which embodies many Biblical teachings, but claims that Mohammed was the greatest prophet of God, taking precedence over Moses and Christ, and that the teachings of the Koran supersede those of the Bible; the Moslem religion; Islam.—abbr. Moham.

Mo-ha-ve (mō-hä'vā), n. [Amer.Ind. = three mountains], one of a tribe of American Indians formerly living in Arizona and California near the Colorado River. Also, Mo-ja've (mō-hä'vā).

Mo-hawk (mō'hôk), n. [< Algonquian maqua, bears], 1, one of a tribe of American Indians, formerly the leading tribe of the Iroquois Confederacy, occupying the valley of the Mohawk River in New York; 2, one of a band of ruffians who, during the 17th and 18th centuries, annoyed persons in the streets of London, especially at night. Also, Obs. Mo'hock.

Mo-hi-can (mō-hē'kăn), n. [Amer. Ind. = wolf, or seaside people], one of an Algonquian tribe of American Indians formerly living in Connecticut and along the upper Hudson. Also, Mo-he'gan.

Mohs' scale (mōz), [< name of the deviser, Friedrich Mohs (1773–1839), Ger. mineralogist], a scale of hardness of minerals, according to which talc, the softest, has a hardness of one, while the diamond, the hardest, has a hardness of ten.

moi-e-ty (moi'ĕ-tī), n. [pl. -ties (-tĭz)], [< O.F. moitié < Lat. medietas, middle point], 1, a half; 2, a small portion.

moil (moil), v.t. [< O.F. moillier, to paddle in mud < Lat. mollis, soft], to soil: Obs., to tire:—v.i. to be wearied; toil; drudge: Obs., to become soiled:—n. 1, drudgery; 2, confusion; vexation; 3, defilement.

moire (mwär; mōr), n. [Fr. < Eng. mohair], a watered silk or mohair fabric.

moi-ré (mwä"rā'; mō'rā), adj. [Fr., p.p. of moirer, to give a watered appearance to], 1, watered, as silk; 2, having a clouded finish like watered silk, as a metal:—n. 1, a clouded or watered appearance, as of silk or metals; 2, erroneously, watered silk:—v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -rĕed (-rād'; -răd), p.pr. -rĕing], to cause to look watered, as silk or metal.

moist (moist), adj. [< O.F. moiste, damp], 1, slightly wet; containing water or other liquid; damp; 2, tearful; as, moist eyes.—n. moist'ness.

mois-ten (mois'n), v.t. to make damp or slightly wet:—v.i. to become slightly wet, as eyes.

mois-ture (mois'tûr), n. [< O.F. moistour, dampness], 1, a slight degree of dampness; 2, water or other liquid in small quantity.

Syn. dankness, humidity, wetness, moistness.

moke (mōk), n. [source uncertain], Slang, 1, a donkey; hence, a dolt; stupid person; 2, a horse: Southern U. S. Slang, a negro.

mol (mōl), n. [abbr. of molecule], Chem., a gram molecule. See 1mole, Pfd. S.

1mo-lar (mō'lär), n. [< Lat. mola, millstone], Anat., a double tooth or grinder of which, in the human mouth, there are three on each side in each jaw (see dentition, illus.):—adj. pertaining to grinding: Anat., designating the teeth used for grinding food.

2mo-lar (mo'lär), adj. [< Lat. moles, mass], Mech., pertaining to a mass of matter as a whole, as distinguished from the molecules or atoms composing it: opposite of molecular; Chem., of or pertaining to a mole, or gram molecule: also called molal: molar solution, Chem., a solution containing one mole of a substance per liter: also called n.olal solution.

mo-las-ses (mō-lăs'ĕz), n. [pl. molasses], [< Port. melaço, molasses < L.L. melloceum, honeylike < mel (mellis), honey], the dark, sticky sirup left after refining cane sugar: used in cookery.

1mold (mōld), n. [< A.S. molde, dust < O.Teut. source], 1, fine, soft soil, rich in decayed matter; 2, matter; material: Obs., the earth; hence, a grave:—v.t. to cover with soft, rich earth. Also, mould.

2mold (mōld), n. [< M.E. molde, prob. < O.F. modle < Lat. modulus, a measure], 1, a form, as of sand or metal, in which anything is cast or shaped; 2, the shape in which a thing is cast; form; 3, that after which a thing is patterned; 4, kind; character; 5, bodily form:—v.t. 1, to fashion in, or as in, a form, matrix, or the like; 2, to decorate with an ornamental strip; 3, to shape into a mass of the desired consistency; knead, as dough: Founding, 1, to cast or form according to a particular pattern; 2, to provide (an object which is to be cast) with a mold, as of sand or loam. Also, mould.—n. mold'er.—adj. mold'a-ble.

Syn., v. frame, shape, model, ornament, knead.

3mold (mōld), n. [< M.E. mould, p.p. of moulen, to grow moldy: prob. confused with 1mold*], any of many fungi (especially class Phycomycetes) which grow chiefly on dead organic matter, spreading by means of tiny spores and forming dense feltlike mats, gray, black, blue, or green in color (see Thallophyta, illus.):—v.t. to cover with mold; cause to become moldy:—v.i. to become covered with mold. Also, mould.

mold-er (mōl'dĕr), v.i. [see 1mold], to cause to crumble away:—v.i. to crumble to dust by natural decay; waste away. Also, mould'er.

mold-ing (mōl'dĭng), n. [see 2mold], 1, the act of shaping in a form; 2, anything made in or by a mold or form; 3, a narrow, decorative surface on a cornice, door jamb, or the like; also, a strip of material used for such ornamentation. Also, mould'ing.

MOLDINGS

1, fillet and fascia; 2, quarter round, or ovolo; 3, bead, or astragal; 4, ovolo; 5, cavetto; 6, congé; 7 and 8, ogee (7, cyma recta; 8, cyma reversa); 9, scotia; 10, splay; 11, square billet; 12, round billet; 13, lozenge billet; 14, cable.

mold-y (mōl'dĭ), adj. [comp. -ier, superl. -iest], [see 3mold], covered with, or containing, mold. Also, mould'y.—n. mold'i-ness.

1mole (mōl), n. [< Lat. moles, mass], Chem., a gram molecule; the weight of a substance in grams equal numerically to its molecular weight: also called gram-molecular weight. Also, mol.

2mole (mōl), n. [< A.S. māl, a spot], a dark-colored spot or growth on the skin; a nevus.

3mole (mōl), n. [< M.E. mulle, mole], any of several grayish brown mammals with soft fur, rudimentary eyes, and broad feet with which they dig long underground burrows.

4mole (mōl), n. [< Fr. môle < Lat. moles, mass], a massive breakwater, as at the mouth of a harbor: Obs., Rom. Antiq., a massive tomb or mausoleum.

Mo-lech (mō'lĕk), n. [see Moloch], the fire god of the ancient Phœnicians and Ammonites, worshiped by human sacrifice. See Mo'loch, Pfd. S.

mo-lec-u-lar (mō-lĕk'ū-lär), adj. [see molecule], of, pertaining to, or caused by, molecules: molecular weight, the weight of the atoms in a molecule of any substance referred to an atomic standard, usually the weight of the hydrogen atom.

mol-e-cule (mŏl'ē-kūl; mō'lē-kūl), n. [< Fr. molécule < L.L. molecula, dim. < Lat. moles, mass], any tiny particle: Chem., the smallest quantity of any substance which can exist separately: a group of atoms bound together by chemical forces and acting as a physical unit; the smallest particle which retains the identity of the substance.

mole-hill (mōl'hĭl″), n. [³mole+hill], 1, a little ridge or mound made by the burrowing of a mole; 2, hence, a trifling hindrance or difficulty.

mole-skin (mōl'skĭn″), n. [³mole+skin], 1, the fur of the mole; 2, a soft cloth supposed to resemble a mole's fur: pl. a garment of this cloth, especially trousers.

mo-lest (mō-lĕst′), v.t. [< Lat. molestare (-atus) < molestus, troublesome], to interfere with; annoy; disturb maliciously.—n. mo-lest'er.

Syn. incommode, plague, vex, trouble, pester, disturb.

mo-les-ta-tion (mō″lĕs-tā'shŭn; mōl″ĕs-), n. 1, the act of annoying or interfering with; 2, the state of being vexatiously disturbed.

mol-lah (mōl'ȧ), n. [see mullah], among the Mohammedans, a scholar or teacher of religion. Also, moo'lah; Pfd. S., mul'lah.

mol-li-fy (mŏl'ĭ-fī), v.t. [p.t. and p.p. -fied (-fīd), p.pr. -fying], [< Fr. mollifier < Lat. mollificare < mollis, soft+facere, to make], 1, to soothe; soften; 2, to make less severe or violent.—adj. mol'li-fi″a-ble.—n. mol'li-fi″er.—n. mol″li-fi-ca'tion.

Mol-lus-ca (mŏ-lŭs'kȧ), n.pl. [< Lat. molluscus < mollis, soft], Zoöl., a phylum, or primary division, of the animal kingdom which includes Mo], chiefly used as an alloying element in the manufacture of steel used for automobile parts.

mo-ment (mō'mĕnt), n. [< Lat. momentum, movement], 1, a portion of time; an instant; 2, the present; 3, momentousness; importance, as affecting action or decision; as, news of great moment: Mech., tendency, as of a force or velocity, to cause motion around a central point.

Syn. importance, weight, consequence, significance.

mo-men-ta-ry (mō'mĕn-tā-rĭ), adj. lasting only for, or done in, an instant; transitory.—adv. mo'men-ta-ri-ly.—n. mo'men-ta-ri-ness.

Syn. transitory, passing, transient, fugitive.

mo-ment-ly (mō'mĕnt-lĭ), adv. 1, every moment; from moment to moment; 2, instantly; 3, for the moment.

mo-men-tous (mō-mĕn'tŭs), adj. very important; of great consequence; weighty.—adv. mo-men'tous-ly.—n. mo-men'tous-ness.

mo-men-tum (mō-mĕn'tŭm), n. [pl. -ta (-tȧ); -tums (-tŭmz)], [Lat.], 1, Mech., the quantity of motion in a moving body as measured by the product of its mass and velocity; 2, popularly, impetus due to motion.

Mo-mus (mō'mŭs), n. [Lat. < Gk. Mōmos], Gk. Myth., the god of ridicule, mockery, and censure, who was finally expelled from Olympus.

Mon. abbr. Monday, the second day of the week: —mon., monetary.

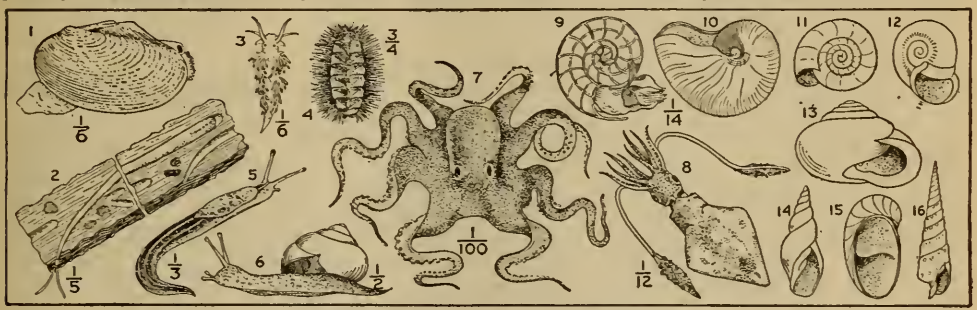
mon-a-chal (mŏn'ȧ-kȧl), adj. [< Gk. monakhos, solitary], pertaining to monks, nuns, or the life in a monastery or convent; monastic.



REPRESENTATIVE MOLLUSCA AND TYPES OF THEIR SHELLS

1, fresh-water mussel (Anodonta); 2, shipworm (Teredo), and section of wood showing its burrows; 3, shell-less marine slug; 4, chiton (Chiton spinosus); 5, garden slug; 6, wood snail (Helix nemoralis); 7, octopus (Octopus vulgaris); 8, squid; 9, 10, nautilus (9, section showing animal and internal structure of shell); 10, external view of shell); 11-16, various forms of snail shells.

limpets, snails, oysters, clams, cuttlefish, etc., the members of which have soft bodies covered with hard shells. —adj. and n. mol-lus'can.—adj. and n. mol-lus'coid. —adj. mol-lus'cous.

mol-lusk (mŏl'ŭsk), n. [< Lat. molluscus: see Mollusca], a member of the Mollusca, as a snail, oyster or cuttlefish. Also, Br., mol'lusc.

mol-ly-cod-dle (mŏl'ĭ-kŏd″l), n. [Molly (< Mary) +coddle], Slang, one who is overcareful of himself; a milksop; an effeminate man or boy.

Mo-loch (mō'lŏk), n. [Heb. = king], Bib., the fire god of the ancient Phœnicians and Ammonites, to whom human sacrifices were offered: also, Molech: moloch, Zoöl., a spiny lizard, resembling a horned toad, but somewhat larger, found in Australia.

molt (mōlt), v.i. [< M.E. mouten < Lat. mutare, to change], to shed the feathers, hair, skin, or the like:—v.t. to shed, as the hair, feathers, skin, horns, or the like:—n. the shedding of hair, feathers, or the like, or the season when it occurs. Also, moult.

mol-ten (mōl'tn), p.adj. [see melt], 1, fused by heat; melted; 2, cast of melted metal.

mol. wt. abbr. molecular weight, sometimes called molar weight.

mo-ly (mō'lĭ), n. [pl. -lies (-lĭz)], [< Gk. mōlu, moly], 1, a fabled magic herb having white flowers and black roots, given, according to Homer, by Hermes to Odysseus to enable him to resist the charms of Circe; 2, a kind of wild garlic having yellow flowers.

mo-lyb-de-nite (mō-lĭb'dē-nīt; mōl″ĭb-dē″nīt), n. [see molybdenum], Chem., native molybdenum sulphide, a lead-colored mineral resembling graphite, occurring in scales and plates.

mo-lyb-de-num (mō-lĭb'dē-nŭm; mōl″ĭb-dē″-), n. [L.L. < Gk. molubdas, lead], Chem., a hard, silvery white, metallic element [symbol mon-a-chism (mŏn'ȧ-kĭzm), n. monastic method or rule of life; monasticism.

